1523 The bishop lifts the cup in silence or while saying these or similar words:

1525 The cup over which we give thanks
1526 is a sharing in the blood of Christ.

1528 GIVING THE BREAD AND CUP

PRAYER AFTER RECEIVING

1543

The bishop says:

1544

Let us pray.

1546

All pray together:

1547

We thank you, gracious God, for this holy mystery

1549

in which you have given yourself to us, and united us in the communion of your Holy Spirit.

1550

1551

We bless you for raising up among us faithful servants.

1552

Clothe them and us with your righteousness

1553 and grant that we, with them,

1554 may glorify you by giving ourselves to others,

1555 through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SENDING FORTH

[PRAYER

We thank you, gracious God,

for raising up among us faithful servants.

1582 and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all always.

HYMN *

If the closing hymn is a recessional, it should follow the bishop's blessing and precede the deacon's dismissal. Otherwise it should precede the bishop's blessing and the deacon's dismissal should follow immediately upon the bishop's blessing. Closing hymns are listed on pages 557-558.

1587

1595

We are sent in Christ's name.

THE GENERAL EXAMINATION

The bishop and candidates stand facing one another. The bishop examines the candidates for commissioning, ordination, and recognition:

1774

1776

My sisters and brothers in Christ,

As commissioned or ordained ministers and associate members, you are to be coworkers with bishops, elders, deacons, local pastors,

1779

1780 provisional members, diaconal ministers,

1781 deaconesses, home missionaries, supply pastors, and all the people of God.

You are called

to serve rather than to be served,

1785 to proclaim the faith of the church and no other,

1786 to look after the concerns of God's kingdom above all.

So we may know that you believe yourselves

1789 to be called by God

1790 and that you profess the Christian faith, 1791

we ask you:

1792

Do you believe that God has called you to the life and work of set-apart ministry?

1794

1795

I do so believe.

Do you believe in the Triune God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit

1799 and confess Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior?

I do so believe and confess.

1802

Are you persuaded

1804 that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments

1805 contain all things necessary for salvation

1806 through faith in Jesus Christ

1807 and are the unique and authoritative standard for the church's faith and life?

I am so persuaded, by God's grace.

1811
 1812 Will you be faithful in prayer,
 1813 in the study of the Holy Scriptures,
 1814 and with the help of the Holy Spirit
 1815 continually rekindle the gift of God that is in you?

 1817 I will, with the help of God.

1818
 1819 Will you do your best to pattern your life
 1820 in accordance with the teachings of Christ?

 1822 I will, with the help of God.

1823
 1824 Will you, in the exercise of your ministry, 1825 lead the people of God to faith in Jesus Christ, 1826 participate in the life and work of the community, and 1827 seek peace, justice, and freedom for all people?

 1829 I will, with the help of God.

1830
 1831 Will you be faithful to The United Methodist Church, 1832 accepting and upholding its order, liturgy, doctrine, and discipline, 1833 defending them against all doctrines contrary to God's Holy Word, 1834 and committing yourself to be accountable with those serving with you, 1835 and to the bishop and those who are appointed to supervise your ministry?

 1837 I will, with the help of God.

1838
 1839 Will you, for the sake of the church's life and mission, 1840 covenant to participate in the life of the order, [fellowship or membership]
 1841 into which you are ordained, commissioned, received, or recognized?
 1842 Will you give yourself to God through the order or fellowship, 1843 in order to sustain and build each other up
 1844 in prayer, study, worship, and service
 1845 under the rule of life set forth in the vows you take this day?

 1847 I will, with the help of God.

 1849 May God,
 1850 who has given you the will to do these things,
 1851 give you grace to perform them,
 1852 that the work begun in you by the Holy Spirit 1853 may be brought to perfection.

 1855 All: Amen.

1983 appointed and supervised by the bishop,

1984

and guided by ordained and lay colleagues

1985 in the Board of Ordained Ministry, as deacon or elder.

I do so believe.

A full member, associate member,

2005 has made a full commitment of life and service

2062

Bishop: Come upon Full Name . . .

The bishop proceeds to each candidate in order.

2066

Bishop: Come upon them each and all, Holy Spirit.

2067

People: Come upon them each and all, Holy Spirit.

2068

Bishop: Fill them with every good and perfect gift for the office and work of an elder.

2069

2070

Bishop: In the name of God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, 2071 People: All glory and praise are yours, now and forever!

2073 The newly ordained stand upright, extending their hands, palms up, toward the bishop.
2074
2075 Bishop: As you have placed yourselves into the hands of God
2076 People: And as we have prayed for the Holy Spirit to empower you for your ministry
2077 among us,
2078 Bishop: Take now authority as elders in Christ's holy church
2079 to proclaim the word of God, administer the sacraments,

THE GREAT THANKSGIVING *

All stand. The bishop lifts hands.

2305

Christ is with us.

2306

Yes, he is! Hallelujah!

2307

The Holy Spirit is in this place!

2308

Ignite our hearts!

2309

Raise your hands! Lift your voices!

2310

Father, we are yours!

2311

We are yours, all yours, blessed Triune God,

2312

all our lives, all our thanks, all our praise,

2313

all our hesitations, all our grumbling, all our fears,

2314

we give it all to you, with all our bodies, and minds, and voices.

2315

2316

Yours the blessing, yours the praise,

2317

from the unimaginable silence before the big bang,

2318

beyond the farthest reaches of time and space our instruments may ever find, from infinity to infinity, everlasting to everlasting, you are God, boundless in love and power.

2319

2320

2321

We stand in awe, trembling in the light of your glory!

2322

What are we that you should notice us?

2323

What are we that you should love us?

2324 What are we what you should call us into covenant with you, 2325 a covenant we continually broke,
 2326 and you continuously sustained.

2327 Mercy! How full of mercy!

2328 How can we but praise you,
 2329 joining our voices with the song of angels and saints, 2330 with seraphim and martyrs,
 2331 with the living creatures in heaven
 2332 and all creatures of the earth,
 2333 on land or in rivers, oceans, streams, and skies,
 2334 with strangers and family in every generation, singing:

 2336 (Sing refrain of "God of Wonders," Worship & Song, 3034, measures 9-19, followed by 2337 these words to the same refrain.)

2338 Jesus Christ who comes in our God's name, you are worthy, worthy!
 2339 Lamb of God for all creation slain, you are worthy, worthy!
 2340 Hosanna to our King! Hosanna to our King!

2341 You are holy, O God!
 2342 Holy!

2343 You are worthy, O Christ!
 2344 Worthy!

2345 Worthy in your birth! Worthy in your living!
 2346 Worthy in your loving! Worthy in your serving!

2347 Worthy when you preached good news
 2348 that God's kingdom has drawn near 2349 and gathered disciples, then and now,
 2350 equipping and sending us, one and all,
 2351 to learn and show the world
 2352 what life in God's reign means:
 2353 healing for the sick.
 2354 new life for the dead,
 2355 cleansing for the lepers,
 2356 freedom for the possessed,
 2357 justice for the oppressed,
 2358 beauty for the lilies,
 2359 care for the sparrows,
 2360 new birth, new life, new creation breaking in for all.

 2362 Worthy! Worthy! Worthy above all!

2363 The bishop may lift the bread, or extend hands toward the bread.

2364 Worthy, too, the night we betrayed you,
 2365 when you took the bread, blessed it, and broke it, 2366 and gave it to your disciples.
 2367 Worthy when you told them,

- 2368 “This is my body broken for you. Remember me.”
- 2369 We remember.
- 2370 The bishop may lift the cup or extend hands toward the cup.
- 2371
- 2372 Worthy when you took the cup,
2373 praised God and shared it,
2374 and worthy when you said,
2375 “This is my blood of the new covenant for you.
2376 Remember me.”
- 2377 We remember.
- 2378
- 2379 The bishop lifts hands.
- 2380 We remember, and we praise you with our lives
2381 and these gifts of bread and wine, 2382 proclaiming with one voice the mystery of faith:
- 2383 Christ has died. Christ is risen. Christ will come again.
- 2384 Come upon us, Holy Spirit.
2385 Come upon us, Holy Spirit.
- 2386 Come upon these gifts.
2387 Come upon these gifts.
- 2388 Make them be for us Christ’s body, Christ’s blood.
2389 Make us one body in Christ enlivened by his blood.
- 2390 One in heart, one in mind, one in you, Holy Spirit, 2391 as you move us to pray for the church and the world:
2392
- 2393 Newly ordained deacons may lead these intercessions:
2394
- 2395 That we may proclaim the gospel boldly: Hear us, Lord.
2396 That we may offer your healing for all who are sick, and people who are torn and weary:
2397 Hear us, Lord.
2398 That we may be channels of your mercy over all your works, in earth, and sky, and sea:
2399 Hear us, Lord.
- 2400 That all who this hour have been set apart for specialized ministries may lead, learn, and 2401 teach among us with wisdom and compassion: Hear us, Lord.
2402 That many dead and left for dead may be raised, and death itself vanquished: Hear us, 2403 Lord.
2404 That all who are unclean may receive your cleansing grace: Hear us, Lord.
2405 That all who are possessed, oppressed, distressed, depressed, and downcast may be 2406 set free at last. Hear us, Lord.
- 2407 The bishop resumes leading the prayer:
- 2408 Even so, come and fill this feast, Holy Spirit,

2409 this day, and every day until that day
 2410 when we eat it new at the marriage supper of the Lamb!

2411 All blessing and glory,
 2412 thanksgiving and power,
 2413 wisdom and honor and might,
 2414 be yours, Holy Triune God,
 2415 now and forever.
 2416 Amen!

2417 The Lord's Prayer may be said or sung.

 2419 The presider breaks the bread and lifts the cup. The bishop serves the deacons first, who 2420 then serve the bishop and the other servers.

 2422 Hymns or anthems may be sung during the distribution.

2423 When all have received, the deacons put the Lord's Table in order.

 2425 THANKSGIVING AFTER COMMUNION:

2426
 2427 The bishop or a newly ordained deacon leads the people to pray:

2428
 2429 Thank you, God, for uniting us with Jesus in this holy mystery.
 2430 We are no longer our own, but yours.
 2431 So send us all, and put us
 2432 to leading and serving in your mission
 2433 wherever we go. Amen.

 2436 SENDING FORTH

2437
 2438 Here the bishop may make an invitation to those present to respond to God's call to 2439 ordained ministry in Christ's church. Appropriate direction for how they are to respond 2440 should be given.

2443
 2444 If the Lord's Supper was not celebrated, the bishop says:

2445
 2446 Let us pray.

2447
 2448 We thank you, gracious God,
 2449 for raising up among us faithful servants.
 2450 Clothe them with your righteousness,
 2451 and grant that we, with them,
 2452 may glorify you by giving ourselves to others. Amen.]

 2455 DISMISSAL WITH BLESSING ***

2456
 2457 The bishop blesses the people:

The grace of Jesus Christ,

2460 and the love of God,

2461

and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all always.

HYMN *

If the closing hymn is a recessional, it should follow the bishop's blessing and 2466 precede the deacon's dismissal. Otherwise it should precede the bishop's blessing and the deacon's dismissal should follow immediately upon the bishop's blessing.

2467

2468

Closing hymns are listed on pages 557-558.

2470

A newly ordained deacon dismisses the people, using these or similar words:

2475

We are sent in Christ's name.

2485

Introduction to the Consecration of Bishops

2486 The task of superintending in The United Methodist Church resides in the office of 2487 bishop. . . . From apostolic times, certain ordained persons have been entrusted with the 2488 particular tasks of superintending. . . . Those who superintend carry primary responsibility 2489 for ordering the life of the Church. It is their task to enable the gathered Church to 2490 worship and to evangelize faithfully.

2491 It is also their task to facilitate the initiation of structures and strategies for the equipping 2492 of Christian people for service in the Church and in the world in the name of Jesus Christ 2493 and to help extend the service in mission.

The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 401

2495 The office . . . of bishop . . . exist[s] in The United Methodist Church as a particular 2496 ministry. . . . Bishops are elected . . . from the group of elders who are ordained to be 2497 ministers of Service, Word, Sacrament, and Order and thereby participate in the ministry 2498 of Christ, in sharing a royal priesthood that has apostolic roots (1 Peter 2:9; John 21:15-2499 17; Acts 20:28; 1 Peter 5:2-3; 1 Timothy 3:1-7).

The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 402

2501 Consecration of bishops may take place at the session of the conference at which 2502 election occurs or at a place and time designated by the conference. The consecration 2503 service may include bishops from other jurisdictional and central conferences. It is 2504 strongly urged that the consecration service also include representatives from other 2505 Christian communions (see ¶¶ 125, 422.2, 433-434, 442).

The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 405.2.c

2507 The laying on of hands by other bishops originated in the practice of the early church as a 2508 sign of episcopal unity and collegiality. The imposition of the hands of all the bishops
 2509 present and prayer at the consecration of a new bishop signify the bishop-elect's 2510 empowerment by the Holy Spirit and commitment to the way of life and work of episcopal 2511 ministry by those who share the same responsibility. The laying on of hands also signifies 2512 the bishop-elect's reception into the episcopal college. Only bishops or persons of similar 2513 authority from other Christian denominations participate in the laying on of hands at the 2514 consecration of other bishops.

2516 The senior bishop should be responsible for the service of consecration and should plan 2517 it in consultation with the jurisdictional or central conference Episcopal Committee.

2519 A bishop presides at the consecration service. Other bishops, laypeople, and clergy may 2520 also assist or lead specified elements of the service. The historic and ecumenical practice 2521 of consecration or ordination of bishops involves at least three bishops in the laying on of 2522 hands.

2524 Spouses and other family members of candidates for consecration should not participate 2525 in the laying on of hands.

2527 Because consecrations are acts of the whole church, the text and rubrics of The Order for 2528 the Consecration of Bishops shall be used in the form approved by the General
 2529 Conference (¶ 415.6)

 2597 We do. Thanks be to God!

 2604 SALUTATION AND PRAYER

 2606 The presiding bishop then says:

2607
 2608 The Scriptures tell us
 2609 that our Savior Jesus Christ spent the whole night in prayer 2610 before he chose and sent forth the twelve apostles.
 2611 The apostles also prayed before they appointed Matthias 2612 to be one of their number.
 2613 Let us offer our prayers to almighty God

2623
 2624 All pray in silence for the candidate(s).

2625
 2626 The presiding bishop prays:

2627
 2628 Almighty God, giver of all good things,
 2629 by your Holy Spirit you have appointed 2630 a diversity of ministries in your church.
 2631 Look in mercy upon these your servants,
 2632 now to be set apart for the ministry of a bishop.
 2633 So replenish them with holiness of life,
 2634 and fill them with the power of your Holy Spirit, 2635 that both by word and by deed,

2636 they may serve you faithfully and joyously,
2637 to the glory of your name and the building up of your church;
2638 through Jesus Christ our Lord.

2665 EXAMINATION

2667

The people are seated. The bishop(s)-elect stand facing the presiding bishop. The bishop examines the bishop(s)-elect:

2670

My brothers and sisters,

2672

you are to be consecrated bishops in the church of God.

2674

All baptized Christians are called to share this ministry of service in the world, to the glory of God

and for the redemption of the human family.

From among the baptized

some have been called by God and set apart by the church to serve God's people

as bishops, elders, deacons, provisional members, diaconal ministers, deaconesses, and home missionaries.

You have been ordained to the ministry of Service, Word, Sacrament, and Order;

2684

you are now called, as bishops in the church, to reaffirm the vows made at your ordination as elders,

and to exercise Christ's servanthood in a particular ministry of oversight.

2689 You are called to guard the faith, to seek the unity, 2690 and to exercise the discipline of the whole church;
2691 and to supervise and support the church's life, work, 2692 and mission throughout the world.

2694 As servants of the whole church,
2695 you are called to preach and teach
2696 the truth of the gospel to all God's people;
2697 to lead the people in worship,
2698 in the celebration of the Sacraments,
2699 and in their mission of witness and service in the world,
2700 and so participate in the commission of our Lord
2701 to make disciples of all nations.

2703 As bishops and pastors,
2704 you are to lead and guide
2705 all persons entrusted to your oversight;
2706 to join in the consecration of bishops,
2707 to ordain elders and deacons,
2708 to commission, license, and recognize other ministers 2709 for service to the church and to the world;
2710 and to provide for the ministry of Word and Sacrament 2711 in the congregations and other ministries committed to your care.

2713 Your joy will be to follow Jesus Christ
2714 who came not to be served but to serve.

2716 Will you accept the call to this ministry as bishop 2717 and fulfill this trust in obedience to Christ?

2719 I will, by the grace of God.

2720
2721 Will you guard the faith, order, liturgy, doctrine, 2722 and discipline of the Church
2723 against all that is contrary to God's Word?

2725 I will, for the love of God.

2726
2727 As bishops and pastors, will you,
2728 in cooperation with diaconal ministers, commissioned ministers, 2729 deaconesses, home missionaries, elders, deacons, local pastors, 2730 and licensed preachers,
2731 encourage and support all baptized people
2732 in their gifts and ministries,
2733 pray for them without ceasing,
2734 proclaim and interpret to them the gospel of Christ, 2735 and celebrate with them the Sacraments of our redemption?

2737 I will, in the name of Christ,
2738 the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls.

2740 Will you share with other bishops

2741 in the supervision of the whole church;
 2742 support the elders and take counsel with them;
 2743 guide and strengthen the commissioned ministers,
 2744 diaconal ministers, deacons, deaconesses, home missionaries, 2745 local pastors, and all others who minister in the church;
 2746 and ordain, consecrate, commission, license, and send others to minister 2747 in Christ's name?

 2749 All this I will do, by the grace given me.

2750
 2751 May the God
 2752 who has given you the will to do these things
 2753 give you grace to perform them,
 2754 that the work begun in you may be brought to perfection.

 2756 All audibly affirm the action, saying, Amen.

 2758

PRAYER WITH LAYING ON OF HANDS

The presiding bishop calls the people to prayer:

2762

As Name of each bishop-elect

2764

is/are consecrated bishop(s) in the church, let us invoke the Holy Spirit on their behalf and pray for them

 2767 in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.

2768

The bishop(s)-elect kneel.

2770

The people pray for them/her/him in silence.

The ancient ordination hymn "O Holy Spirit" (UMBOW 223) or "Come, Holy Ghost, Our Souls Inspire" (UMH 651) may be sung.

The other bishops participating join the presiding bishop. The presiding bishop now extends hands over the kneeling bishop(s)-elect and begins the prayer of consecration:

God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, giver of mercies and source of all comfort, dwelling on high but having regard for the lowly, knowing all things before they come to pass:
 we give you thanks that from the beginning you have gathered and prepared a people to be heirs of the covenant of Abraham and Sarah, and have raised up prophets, rulers, and priests, never leaving your temple without a ministry.

 2786

We praise you also that from the creation you have graciously accepted the service of those whom you have chosen.

2792 Bishops and persons with similar authority from other communions may be invited to join 2793 the presiding bishop in the laying on of hands. The historic and ecumenical pattern is for 2794 at least three bishops to participate in laying hands on the head of the candidate.

 2796 Family members and friends may be invited to stand where they are for silent prayer

 2799 The presiding bishop, with other bishops as invited, now lays both hands on the head of 2800 each bishop-elect. The presiding bishop alone says over each bishop-elect:

 2802 Father Almighty (Almighty God),
 2803 pour upon Name the Holy Spirit,
 2804 for the ministry of a bishop in Christ's holy church.

2806 All audibly affirm the action, saying, Amen.

2807
 2808 When hands have been laid upon all bishops-elect, the presiding bishop, with both hands 2809 extended over them, continues to pray:

 2811 Almighty God,
 2812 fill the hearts of these your servants whom you have chosen to be bishops
 2813 with such love of you and of all the people
 2814 that they may feed and tend the flock of Christ, 2815 serve in the ministry of reconciliation,
 2816 and supervise and support the life and work of the church.
 2817 In all things may they present before you 2818 the acceptable offering of a pure, gentle, and holy life;
 2819 through Jesus Christ your servant,
 2820 to whom, with you and the Holy Spirit,
 2821 be honor and power and glory,
 2822 now and for ever.

 2824 All audibly affirm the action, saying, Amen.

 2826 Immediately each new bishop places hands on a Bible as the presiding bishop places 2827 both hands on the hands of each new bishop and says:

 2829 Name, receive the Holy Scriptures.
 2830 Feed the flock of Christ,
 2831 defend them in Christ's truth,
 2832 and be a faithful steward of Christ's Word and Sacraments.

 2834 After all being consecrated as bishop receive a Bible, the presiding bishop says to 2835 them/her/him:

 2837 Reflect upon the contents of this Book.
 2838 Give attention to reading, exhortation, and teaching.
 2839 Be to the people of God
 2840 a prophetic voice and a courageous leader.
 2841 Be to the flock of Christ a shepherd;
 2842 support the weak, heal the sick,
 2843 bind up the broken, restore the outcast,
 2844 seek the lost, relieve the oppressed.

2845 Faithfully administer discipline,
2846 but do not forget mercy,
2847 that when the Chief Shepherd shall appear 2848 you may receive the never-fading crown of glory.

2850 *All audibly affirm the action, saying, Amen.

2851
2852 [OFFERING]

2854 An offering for the work of God may be received, and the financial gifts are brought 2855 forward with the gifts of bread and cup.

2857 A hymn or anthem may be sung during the offering. Hymns are listed beginning on page

2860 When Holy Communion is celebrated, the new bishop(s) remain(s) to assist, especially in 2861 servicing the people.

2866

2867 THANKSGIVING AND COMMUNION

2868

2869 INVITATION TO THE TABLE

2871 Christ our Lord invites to his table all who love him, 2872 and all who seek to be at peace with God and with one another.

2874 The peace of our Lord Jesus Christ be always with you!
2875 And also with you!

2877 Signs of reconciliation and love may be exchanged.

2879 TAKING THE BREAD AND CUP

The bread and wine are brought by representatives of the people to the Lord's Table or uncovered if already in place. Deacons prepare the table for the Lord's Supper.

2884 A hymn, doxology, or other response may be sung as the gifts are presented.

2889
2890

The presiding bishop, standing behind the Lord's Table facing the people from this time through Breaking the Bread, begins the prayer:

2891 The Lord be with you.
2892 And also with you.

Lift up your hearts.

2895

The bishop may lift hands and keep them raised.

2897 We lift them up to the Lord.

2899 Let us give thanks to the Lord our God.

2900 It is right to give our thanks and praise.

2902 It is right, and a good and joyful thing,

2903 always and everywhere to give thanks to you,

2904 Father Almighty (Almighty God), Creator of heaven and earth.

2906 You built your church

2907 on the foundation of the apostles and prophets,

2908 and instituted a holy ministry

2909 so that your prophetic and apostolic Word

2910 might be heard in the church and in the world until the end of time.

2912 And so,

2913 with your people on earth

2914 and all the company of heaven

2915 we praise your name and join their unending hymn:

2917 The bishop may lower hands.

2918 The following may be said or sung by all, or a choral arrangement of the Sanctus and 2919 Benedictus may be offered.

2921 Holy, holy, holy Lord, God of power and might,

2922 heaven and earth are full of your glory.

2923 Hosanna in the highest.

2924 Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.

2925 Hosanna in the highest.

2927 The bishop may raise hands.

2928

2929 Holy are you, and blessed is your Son Jesus Christ.

2930 Your Spirit anointed him

2931 to preach good news to the poor,

2932 to proclaim release to the captives

2933 and recovering of sight to the blind,

2934 to set at liberty those who are oppressed,

2935 and to announce that the time had come

2936 when you would save your people.

2937 He healed the sick, fed the hungry, and ate with sinners.

2938 By the baptism of his suffering, death, and resurrection

2939 you gave birth to your church,

2940 delivered us from slavery to sin and death,

2941 and made with us a new covenant by water and the Spirit.

2943 the great Shepherd of your flock, ascended,

2944 he sent forth the apostles

2945 to preach the gospel and make disciples of all nations.

2946 He promised to be with them always,

2947 and sent the Holy Spirit to lead them.

2949 The bishop may hold hands, palms down, over the bread, or touch the bread, or lift the 2950 bread.

2952 On the night in which he gave himself up for us, 2953 he took bread, gave thanks to you, broke the bread, 2954 gave it to his disciples, and said:
2955 “Take, eat; this is my body which is given for you.
2956 Do this in remembrance of me.”

2958 The bishop may hold hands, palms down, over the cup, or touch the cup, or lift the cup.

2960 When the supper was over, he took the cup, 2961 gave thanks to you, gave it to his disciples, and said:
2962 “Drink from this, all of you;
2963 this is my blood of the new covenant, 2964 poured out for you and for many 2965 for the forgiveness of sins.
2966 Do this, as often as you drink it,
2967 in remembrance of me.”

2969 The bishop may raise hands.

2970
2971 And so,
2972 in remembrance of these your mighty acts in Jesus Christ, 2973 we offer ourselves in praise and thanksgiving
2974 as a holy and living sacrifice,
2975 in union with Christ’s offering for us,
2976 as we proclaim the mystery of faith.

2978 Christ has died; Christ is risen; Christ will come again.

2979
2980 The bishop may hold hands, palms down, over the bread and cup.

2982 Pour out your Holy Spirit on us gathered here, 2983 and on these gifts of bread and wine.
2984 Make them be for us the body and blood of Christ, 2985 that we may be for the world the body of Christ,
2986 redeemed by his blood.

2988 The bishop may raise hands.

2989
2990 By your Spirit make us one with Christ, 2991 one with each other,
2992 and one in ministry to all the world,
2993 until Christ comes in final victory
2994 and we feast at his heavenly banquet.

2996 Through your Son Jesus Christ,
2997 with the Holy Spirit in your holy church,
2998 all honor and glory is yours, almighty Father (God),
2999 now and for ever.

3013 The bread which we break is a sharing in the body of Christ.

3015 The bishop lifts the cup in silence, or while saying:

3026

3027 The blood of Christ, given for you. Amen.

3028

3029 The congregation sings hymns while the bread and cup are given. It is particularly 3032 When all have received, the Lord's Table is put in order by the deacons.

8. A certified lay servant is a volunteer but an honorarium for pulpit supply is appropriate.

The proposed change updates language as well as clarifies the process for certification as a lay servant, aligning processes with other categories under Lay Servant Ministries. Lay speaker is moved to a different paragraph as its own category to demonstrate its distinct ministry, reduce confusion and provide better alignment.

Rationale:

¶¶ 266-269 once described lay speakers, a 250-year-old tradition. ¶ 266.6 saluted the tradition, but redefined lay speaker as a better trained lay servant. Lay speakers and lay servants should be equal. Formerly, local church lay speakers needed just one course. Today's rule is stricter than pastors' continuing education rules.

~~2. The local church lay servant with appropriate training (see ¶ 266.3) shall serve the local church in which membership is held through ministries of leading, caring, and communicating.~~

~~3. To maintain status, a report and reapplication with recommendations must be submitted annually and a refresher course approved by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries must be completed once in every three years (see ¶ 247.11).~~

¶ 267. Certified Lay Speaker—1. A certified lay speaker is a certified lay servant (or equivalent as defined by his or her central conference) whose call has been affirmed by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries or equivalent structure to serve the church in pulpit supply in accordance and compliance with ¶ 341.1.

2. The certified lay speaker serves by preaching the Word when requested by the pastor, district superintendent, or committee on Lay Servant Ministries, in accordance and compliance with ¶ 341.1.

3. One may be certified as a lay speaker after he or she has:

a) Been certified as a lay servant (or equivalent as defined by his or her central conference).

b) Obtained recommendation from the pastor and the church council or charge conference of the local church in which he or she holds membership.

c) Completed a track of study including courses on leading worship, leading prayer, discovering spiritual gifts, preaching, United Methodist heritage and polity, and/or other courses as determined by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries or equivalent structure.

d) Interviewed with and obtained recommendation from the district committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, to be submitted to the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, for approval and certification.

4. Recognition as a certified lay speaker may be renewed annually by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, after the certified lay speaker has:

a) Submitted an annual report and renewal application to the charge conference or church council and to the district committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, giving evidence of satisfactory performance as a certified lay speaker.

b) Obtained recommendation for continued recognition as a certified lay speaker from the pastor and the church council or charge conference of the local church or other United Methodist ministry in which he or she holds membership.

c) Completed a Lay Servant Ministries advanced course in the last three years.

d) In the last three years, interviewed with and obtained recommendation for renewal as a certified lay speaker from the district committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, and the approval of the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure for re-certification.

5. A certified lay speaker may transfer certification to another district or conference upon receipt of a letter from the previous district's committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, confirming current certification and the completion date of the most recent advanced course taken. Further renewal is in accordance with ¶ 267.4.

6. A certified lay speaker is a volunteer but an honorarium is appropriate.

Rationale:

Removes the category of "local church lay servant," substituting it with a separate category for "certified lay speaker," recognizing this specific call to ministry. Removing it from ¶ 266 reduces the number of categories under lay servant ministries and lessens the confusion around the roles of lay speaker and lay servant.

Certified Lay Minister

Delete current ¶ 268 and substitute the following:

~~¶ 268. Certified Lay Servant—1. A candidate may be recognized as a certified lay servant by the district or conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries after the candidate has:~~

~~a) Made application in writing to the appropriate committee and has been recommended by the pastor and the church council or the charge conference of the local church in which he or she holds membership;~~

In addition, the certified lay servant may serve in the district and conference and in local churches other than the local church in which membership is held.~~

~~3. Recognition as a certified lay servant shall be renewed annually by the district or conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries after the certified lay servant has:~~

~~c) Been recommended for renewal by the pastor and the church council or charge conference;~~

~~d) Completed at least once in every three years an advanced course for lay servants.~~

¶ 268. Certified Lay Minister—1. A certified lay minister is a certified lay servant, certified lay missionary, or equivalent as defined by his or her central conference, who is called and equipped to conduct public worship, care for the congregation, develop new and existing faith communities, preach the Word, lead small groups, or establish community outreach ministries as part of a ministry team with the supervision and support of a clergy person. A certified lay minister is assigned by a district superintendent in accordance with ¶ 419.2.

2. The certified lay minister serves to enhance the quality of ministry much like a class leader did in early Methodism through service in the local church, circuit or cooperative parish, or by expanding team ministry in other churches and charges. As with lay ministry in early Methodism, the certified lay minister uses his or her spiritual gifts as evidence of God's grace.

3. One may be recognized by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, as a certified lay minister after he or she has:

a) Been certified as a lay servant, lay missionary, or equivalent as defined by his or her central conference.

b) Obtained written recommendation from the pastor and the church council or charge conference of the local church in which he or she holds membership.

c) Completed a track of study for certified lay ministers relevant to the candidate's assignment as defined by the General Board of Discipleship, or the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry in collaboration with the General Board of Discipleship, and the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries or equivalent structure.

e) Had all requirements for certification, including appropriate screening and assessment as defined by the annual conference, reviewed by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, for referral to the district committee on ordained ministry for examination of persons who have applied in writing to be certified lay ministers and to make recommendation for certification (see ¶ 666.10). After the district committee on ordained ministry interviews the candidate, the district committee on ordained ministry will make a recommendation to the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries for final certification by that committee.

4. Recognition as a certified lay minister may be renewed every two years by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, after the certified lay minister has:

a) Submitted an annual report to the charge conference or church council where membership is held and to the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, giving evidence of satisfactory performance as a certified lay minister.

b) Obtained a ministry review by the committee on pastor-parish relations, church council, or charge conference from the congregation of which he or she is a member, or when under assignment, from the committee on pastor-parish relations, charge conference, or supervisory board of the ministry setting in which he or she is assigned.

c) Completed a Lay Servant Ministries advanced course or approved continuing education event, as defined by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries or equivalent structure in the last two years.

d) Obtained recommendation for recertification from the district superintendent.

e) Had all requirements for recertification reviewed by the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, for referral to the district committee on ordained ministry for examination of persons who have applied in writing to be renewed as certified lay ministers and to make recommendation for recertification (see ¶ 666.10). After the district committee on ordained ministry interviews the certified lay minister, the district committee on ordained ministry will make a recommendation to the conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries for final recertification by that committee.

5. A certified lay minister may transfer certification to another district or conference upon receipt of a letter from the previous conference committee on Lay Servant Ministries, or equivalent structure, confirming current certification and the completion date of the most recent advanced course taken. Further renewal is in accordance with 268.4.

6. A certified lay minister is not eligible for support by equitable compensation funds or pension funds that are provided for clergy. If a certified lay minister is a lay staff member of a church, circuit or cooperative parish, the local congregation is encouraged to provide compensation and withhold taxes appropriate to a layperson.

Rationale:

The proposed change updates language and, assumes the deleted paragraph is moved into the ¶ 266 for streamlining and better alignment of processes.

Clarification of Lay Servant Ministries

Further renewal of certification is in accordance with ¶ 268.~~

Rationale:

The “transfer of certification by Certified Lay Servants” fits better within the paragraph dealing with certified lay servants. The proposed change provides for better alignment with other paragraphs for lay servant ministries.

Lay Missioner

Delete current ¶ 270 and substitute the following:

~~¶ 270. Provisions for Lay Missioners—Lay missioners are committed laypersons, mostly volunteers, who are willing to be trained and work in a team with the pastor-mentor to develop faith communities, establish community ministries, develop church school extension programs, and engage in congregational development. All lay missioners must follow the guidelines established by the National Committee on Hispanic Ministries of the National Plan for Hispanic Ministries and may be certified by their annual conference. If annual conferences choose to certify lay missioners, they must do so according to the guidelines. They are accountable to their pastor-mentor as members of the ministry team. The ministry team is accountable to the local congregation or sponsoring body that established the goals for the ministry and assigned the ministry team. The lay missioner is accountable to the policies and procedures of the annual conference where assigned. The concept of lay missioners is theologically based in the ministry of the laity. While lay missioners are engaged in a variety of ministries, their purpose is to complement, not replace, pastors.~~

Lay Missioner—Lay missioners are committed laypersons, mostly volunteers, who are willing to be trained and to work together as a ministry team with their pastor-mentor, in order to develop and lead faith communities, establish community ministries, develop church school extension programs, and engage in congregational development with and into the local community. Lay missioners are formed according to, and follow the guidelines established by, the National Committee of the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministries Ministry, working in conjunction with the annual conference. They are certified jointly by their annual conference and the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry. The ministry team is supported by and accountable to the local congregation, district or annual conference entity that assigns it to its mission. The concept of the lay missioner is based theologically on the ministry of the laity, in order to complement the work of the pastor.

A certified lay missioner shall be equivalent to a certified lay servant in the processes of certification as a lay minister (¶ 271, §§ 3-6); and the Module I-Module II formational sequence and Module IIIs for continuing education of the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry shall be equivalent to the track of study for certified lay ministers relevant to the candidate's assignment, and the advance course or approved continuing education events described therein.

Rationale:

To bring the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministries' lay missioners into the certified lay ministry processes, provide consistency between the related paragraphs, make Certified Lay Minister more clearly a lay ministry and more clearly separated from the role of licensed local pastor.

The expenses of the jurisdictional youth ministry organization convocation shall be borne by the participating annual conferences.

Jurisdictions are encouraged to organize their Young People's Ministries in creative ways that work best for their context. The jurisdictional young people's ministries coordinator shall help design, maintain and revise any processes to accomplish this work.

In any process or coordinating group for Jurisdictional Young People's Ministries, the following representation is encouraged:

- participants from each conference in the jurisdiction
- racial/ethnic representation that reflects the demographic make-up of the jurisdiction
- participants who bring a variety of theological and cultural perspectives
- youth and young adults who may or may not also be serving on Conference Councils of Youth/Young Adult Ministry
- adult workers who may or may not also be conference youth/young adult staff or similar designee

~~• The nominations process followed by the conference councils on youth ministry shall include the solicitation of nominations from local churches, subdistricts, and districts. As far as possible, members of the Division on Ministries With Young People from each jurisdiction shall be from two different annual conferences in that jurisdiction.~~

Responsibility to choose representatives to attend the Global Young People's Convocation—In the year prior to the Global Young People's Convocation, the jurisdictional Youth Ministry convocation Jurisdictional Young People's Ministries shall also elect choose five youth and one adult to serve as voting delegates to the Global Young People's Convocation.

~~In addition to enabling the election of its two division members and the election of the delegates to the Global Young People's Convocation, the following are Other suggested responsibilities for the jurisdictional youth ministry organization Jurisdictional Young People's Ministries:~~

- ~~1. To initiate and support jurisdictional events (camps, conferences, workshops, and so forth).~~
 - ~~2. To recommend priorities, concerns, and/or policies to the Division on Ministries With Young People.~~
 - ~~3. To promote the establishment and awareness of the needs, concerns, issues, and so forth, of racial and ethnic persons through caucuses, camps, consultations, and so forth.~~
 - ~~4. To promote the spiritual growth of participants in the jurisdictional youth young people's ministry organization convocation events and activities.~~
 - ~~5. To promote an evangelistic outreach with youth young people and through youth young people by providing educational opportunities and resources that increase their awareness, exposure, and engagement in the areas of mission, social justice, discipleship, leadership development and spiritual formation as they relate back to their Annual Conference and local church.~~
 - ~~6. To provide training and supportive experiences for conference youth young people's ministries personnel.~~
 - ~~7. To enable communication between general and conference levels of youth ministry young people's ministries.~~
- ~~An additional responsibility of the jurisdictional youth ministry organization convocation will be to elect a steering committee or executive body to carry out the functions and suggested responsibilities of the convocation during the interval between convocations. The convocation shall determine the representation of such body, the manner of election, any funding thereof, and the relationship of the body to the annual conferences and to the jurisdictional council on ministries or equivalent.~~

Rationale:

The nature of young people's ministries changed significantly in the past 8 years and processes established then are no longer feasible now. Many jurisdictions need more flexible ways to organize, select representation, and gather and are creating avenues that allow them this flexibility already. These changes give permission for creativity.

Rationale:

Young People’s Ministries

Amend ¶ 1119.2 as follows:

2. Comprehensive ~~Youth Ministry~~ Young People’s Ministries—There shall be a comprehensive approach to development and implementation of youth ministry youth and young adult ministry at all levels of the Church. The comprehensive approach is based on the understanding of the primary task of youth young people’s ministry: to love youth young people where they are, to encourage them in developing their relationship to God, to provide them with opportunities for nurture and growth, and to challenge them to respond to God’s call to serve in their communities. Four component parts undergird this comprehensive ministry:

a) Curriculum—Through the Curriculum Resources Committee (¶ 1121), the General Board of Discipleship shall ensure the availability of curriculum and leaders’ guides for use in a variety of settings suitable for the specific needs of all young people, age specific depending on the U.S. or central conference definitions persons in the twelve- to eighteen-year-old age group;

b) Program Resources—Additional and supplemental guidebooks and other program aids shall be developed and promoted for effective youth ministry young people’s ministries programs in the local church and at the district, conference, jurisdictional, and general Church levels;

c) Leadership Training and Networking—Leadership training shall be provided to encourage and support adult workers with youth and youth leaders young people in their roles as teachers, counselors, advisers, and enablers at all levels of the Church. Networking shall be developed to maintain ongoing communication through ongoing communication to include workshops, special mailings, social media, online platforms and publications between leaders in youth young people’s ministries across the denomination for the enhancement of skills and the sharing of effective models and resources;

d) Structures—Active and effective structures for youth young people’s ministry ministries programming shall be promoted and maintained at the local church, ~~district, conference, jurisdictional, and general Church all levels of the United Methodist connection, as identified in the U.S. and central conferences. These structures will encourage for the full involvement of youth young people in leadership and membership and for the advocacy of youth young people's concerns in all areas of Church life, planning, and administration.~~

Rationale:

This ¶ 1119.2 revision more accurately reflects the comprehensive nature of the work of Young People's Ministries division of Discipleship Ministries, which addresses the concerns of both youth and young adults, and those who work with them. It encompasses the focus on the needs of a global United Methodist Church.

¶ 1207.2. . . . These representatives shall attend at the expense of the sending agency and shall relate the priorities of the division to their agency and serve as resource people to the division:

- a) General Board of Church and Society
- b) General Board of Discipleship
- c) General Board of Global Ministries
- d) General Board of Higher Education and Ministry
- ~~e) General Commission on Religion and Race~~
- ~~f) General Commission on the Status and Role of Women~~

- i) Connectional Table
- j) United Methodist Communications
- k) United Methodist Publishing House
- l) United Methodist Women

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

These adults shall be ~~elected at~~ chosen by the process outlined by each Jurisdictional Young People's Ministry jurisdictional youth and young-adult convocations (when appropriate) or and by central conference youth organizations in the year preceding the Global Young People's Convocation.

b) Nonvoting members...

(1) Youth and young adult...

4. Expenses—The expenses for the Global Young People's Convocation are to be borne by participants wherever possible. An adequate funding plan shall be devised by the Division on Ministries with Young People to ensure the full participation of elected delegates to Global Young People's Convocation ~~and Legislative Assembly~~. It is strongly recommended...

Rationale:

Changing language regarding Global Young People's Convocation and Legislative Assembly allows for new ways to create, engage, and support legislation. It also makes the Convocation primarily about a time of sharing from youth and young people all around the world and less about legislative arguing using procedural rules.

Global Young People's Convocation

Amend ¶ 1210.3 as follows:

¶ 1210. Global Young People's Convocation—There shall be a Global Young People's Convocation.

3. Membership—The membership of the United Methodist Young People's Legislative Assembly shall be inclusive in nature and selected as follows:

a) Voting members

(1) ~~5~~-youth (ages 12-18) from each jurisdiction and ~~5~~-youth from each central conference according to the age definition of each central conference; a total of sixty (60) allocated between the jurisdictions and central conferences to proportionally reflect each region's combined clergy and lay Church membership, provided that each jurisdiction and central conference shall be entitled to a minimum of three (3) youth voting members. These youth shall be elected at jurisdictional youth convocations or by central conference youth organizations in the year preceding the Global Young People's Convocation. The Division on Ministries With Young People is responsible for notifying appropriate persons in a timely manner of the number of youth that should be elected from each jurisdiction and central conference.

(2) ~~5~~-young adults (ages 19-30) from each jurisdiction and ~~5~~-from each central conference according to the age definition of each central conference; a total of sixty (60) allocated between the jurisdictions and central conferences to proportionally reflect each region's combined clergy and lay Church membership, provided that each jurisdiction and central conference shall be entitled to a minimum of three (3) young-adult voting members. These young adults shall be elected by jurisdictional and central conference young-adult organizations. The Division on Ministries With Young People is responsible for notifying appropriate persons in a timely manner of the number of young adults that should be elected from each jurisdiction and central conference.

(3) 2 adult workers with young people . . .

Rationale:

Protects generous minimal representation for each region and maintains same total numbers while making allocation more just. The current lack of proportional representation means that if a young person from a larger region wants to be a voting member, s/he will unfairly have less chances of getting this opportunity.

SUGGESTED GUIDELINES FOR LANGUAGE FOR HYMNS, SONGS AND WORSHIP RESOURCES

All hymns, songs, and worship resources shall be compatible with the doctrinal standards of The United Methodist Church and our social commitments as expressed in the Book of Discipline, The Social Principles and the Book of Resolutions. Texts should also, where appropriate, seek to be faithful to our ecumenical commitments. In addition, the following are expected norms:

Inclusive language for God's people

- Where the intended references of nouns and pronouns in the texts are to all persons, gender-neutral terms should be used or, where needed, substituted.

- It is appropriate to retain gender specific nouns and pronouns when the intended reference is to a specific gender or sex and when referencing Jesus, Mary, or other historical persons of known gender or sex.

- Language that stereotypes persons according to categories such as gender, race, ethnicity, socioeconomic class, sexual orientation, age, or disability is to be avoided.

- The “generic masculine” (“man,” “mankind” or use of masculine singular pronouns to refer to both females and males) is no longer universally understood to include persons of all genders and should generally be avoided.

Expansive language for God

- The Bible contains a wide range of images for God and God's gracious acts. Language for worship and singing should draw upon the full diversity of story, metaphor and images of God found in scripture, tradition, and human experience. These include references to female and male human characteristics, as well as elements of God's creation. a

- The whole of the collection of core and commended resources for The United Methodist Hymnal (2020) should reflect the diversity and breadth of the biblical, traditional and poetic language for God from across Christian and human experience. Where existing texts, whether traditional or new, may present God only within one set of metaphors, the committee should consider whether and how to recommend altering the texts, as appropriate, to reflect a more expansive vision of God and God's gracious acts.

Rationale:

The hymnal has been a vital tool in carrying the theology of The United Methodist Church for generations. That function remains important for a new, relevant, and widely used version of The United Methodist Hymnal for primary use in the United States.

A revised United Methodist hymnal will include two . . .

Native American Comprehensive Plan

The Native American Comprehensive Plan shall continue to be directed, guided and provided administrative oversight by the Native American Comprehensive Plan Task Force, which shall act as its Board of Directors.

The Native American Comprehensive Plan shall continue to be structurally within the General Board of Discipleship, which shall provide administrative and information technology support; advocacy, coordination and connection through Discipleship Ministries leadership and staff.

Within the ministries offered by the Native American Comprehensive Plan are the following goals and objectives:

1. Leadership Development

Goal: NACP will engage in leadership development with Native American persons of all ages, both clergy and lay, in order to nurture, cultivate and prepare indigenous persons to lead within The United Methodist Church.

Objectives: The following will be offered: (a) a Native American Leadership Conference for clergy and lay pastoral leadership from Native American churches, fellowships and ministries; (b) consultation and support services to annual conferences and persons in leadership with Native American churches, fellowships, ministries and faith communities; (c) a Native American Lay Servant School; (d) a training event for adult workers with Native American children and youth; (f) co-sponsorship of the Native American Clergywomen's Association and a retreat for Native American women clergy; and (g) an event/activities in cooperation and consultation with the General Commission of United Methodist Men to focus on Native American men (specifics yet to be determined).

2. Church Growth

Goal: NACP will provide congregational development with Native Americans in The United Methodist Church. Included will be revitalization of existing Native American churches and the planting of new Native American churches, fellowships, ministries, and faith communities.

Objectives: The following will be offered: (a) A Native American Writer's Gathering will be held each year and Native American writers will be empowered and nurtured to produce written resources for new and existing churches that are culturally appropriate for the Native American community; (b) a 10-week small group study resource will be published and distributed to Native American local churches; (c) a School of Discipleship and Evangelism for Native American clergy and lay leadership; (d) a gathering/consultation for clergy and lay leadership from new church fellowships, new church starts, and new ministries in the Native American community and those desiring to begin new churches in the Native American community; and (e) consultation and support services for annual conferences, local churches and persons directly engaged with new and prospective church plants, new fellowships, and new ministries; and for existing churches in the process of revitalization.

3. Ministry with the Poor

Ministry with the poor is a cornerstone of the work done by NACP. The demographics for Native Americans reflect that the majority live at or below the poverty line. NACP believes that the majority of ministry done through the Native American Comprehensives Plan serves the poor.

4. Global Health

Goal: NACP will call attention to, provide education around, and make opportunity to positively impact the matter of the health crisis related to Native Americans. This crisis not only encompasses the impact on individuals, but also on families, communities, and whole nations. This crisis includes diseases like diabetes, accidental death, infant mortality, suicide, mental health, and addictions. The crisis also encompasses the lack of adequate funding and facilities to meet the needs of Native peoples.

Objectives: The following will be offered:

This will be done by means of a Native American Health Summit which shall include local churches, UM conferences, tribal entities and individuals and rural and urban Native American entities and individuals. This Health Summit will focus on educating and empowering the local church to make a difference within their communities through activities which support prevention and rehabilitation.

5. Disciplinary Mandates

Goal: NACP will work toward fulfillment of Disciplinary mandates, particularly where the mandates pertain specifically to Native Americans. In particular, ¶ 654 which addresses the annual conference Committee on Native American Ministries (CONAM), a structure within each U.S. annual conference, designated to be in the midst of ministry with Native Americans.

Objectives: The following will be offered: (a) a CONAM Training Conference for those both new and experienced with CONAM ministry and (b) consultation and support services will be provided to annual conferences and CONAM members, and that Additional objectives may be developed and acted upon by the Native American Comprehensive Plan during the 2017-2020 quadrennium in keeping with the mission of making Native American disciples of Jesus Christ.

Rationale:

It is the vision of The United Methodist Church that all people be invited into discipleship of Jesus Christ. For this purpose The Native American Comprehensive Plan (NACP) is designed to reach Native American nations, tribes, peoples and communities of the United States that are diverse and culturally unique.

The General Board of Discipleship petitions the General Conference to adopt the “Services for the Ordering of Ministry in The United Methodist Church, 2017-2020” as the ordinal of The United Methodist Church, effective January 1, 2017. [Text of ordinal is available in Volume 2, Section 1 of the Advance Daily Christian Advocate.]

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church should reflect in the services of ordination the implementation of the ordering of ministry as reflected in The Book of Discipline. Strengthening the Black Church for the 21st Century

Adopt the following plan:

Strengthening the Black Church for the 21st Century

The 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist church approves the continuation of Strengthening the Black Church for the 21st Century through the 2017-2020 quadrennial. Approval for the continuance of SBC-21 will strengthen existing programs and enable new program development around the four General Church Foci:

- Combating the diseases of poverty by improving health globally
- Engaging in ministry with the poor
- Creating new places for new people and revitalizing existing congregations
- Developing principled Christian leaders for the church and the world

Within these four foci, we propose including goals for the expansion of models for strengthening youth and young adult ministries, and the expansion of building stronger relationships with the Central Conference of Africa and African Congregations of African Descent in North America.

The following Plan of Action shall be adopted as a basis to continue

Strengthening the Black Church for the 21st Century 2017-2020 Quadrennial:

The Plan of Action for Strengthening the Black Church for the 21st Century

Vision: To partner strategically with Congregation Resource Centers, the Council of Bishops, The Connectional Table, Annual Conference Cabinets and Connectional Ministries, General Agencies, Councils and Commissions to succeed in undergirding Partner Congregations with the Wesleyan Spirit including biblical and theological application; and to equip the church with practical tools and skills needed for vibrant worship, evangelism, discipleship, stewardship, mission, outreach, and effective administration.

Mission: To transform and sustain vital Black congregations and Black Pastors in cross racial appointments for making disciples of Jesus Christ who are sent to serve in a hurting world.

Purpose: To offer The United Methodist church the gift of transformational learning models that enable annual conferences or local congregations to partner and share its gifts of vitality with other congregations and other annual conferences that are seeking church growth.

To offer The United Methodist Church effective models to: increase our gifts in mission and ministry; to develop our lay and clergy leaders with new skills; to engage in ministry with the poor; to decrease mass incarceration; to effectively identify, support and mentor young adult Black clergy; and to ultimately transform and strengthen the United Methodist church.

Goals for SBC21:

Goal #1 Leadership Development

- Academy of Interns (AOI) The goal of this program is to expand and provide an infrastructure designed to identify, deploy, grow (8) eight potential rising clergy by exposing them to a full complement of experiences that will provide him/her with the skills and competencies needed to transform, establish or maintain a vital congregation. The program will also outline a new paradigm of training for SBC21's two year, Academy of Interns, that will prepare rising ministers for assignment to a church within the Path 1 initiative or to other churches in need.

Program Deliverables:

1. Five (5) annual conference bishops/cabinets, Boards of Ordained Ministries to confirm the selection of five (5) interns to be deployed to five (5) of the most effective senior pastors and their respective staff and congregations for a two-year internship deployment.

2. Five (5) of the most effective senior pastors and their respective staff and congregations accept responsibility for nurturing, mentoring and coaching five (5) deployed interns in support and in partnership with launching a sustainable SBC21 two year internship program.

3. Five (5) matches of innovative African American pastors of demonstrated effectiveness with passionate seminary student/graduate trainees who are called to ordained ministry shall produce the next generation of Black clergy leadership in The United Methodist church.

4. These interns will gain on-site hands-on practical experience in congregational ministry, especially through assignments of interest to them or matched with their gifts.

5. Support and development will be given as interns are rewarded for their effort and have the opportunity to use their gifts.

6. This model intentionally prepares clergy leadership for new church starts.

Outcomes:

In collaboration with Gammon School of Theology, Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, the Center for Leadership Development at Perkins School of Theology, and Wesley Theological Seminary will provide a Certificate in African American Church Leadership for students participating in the Academy of Interns and will assist SBC21 in achieving its program goals by:

1. Providing a common ground for Academy clergy to meet for six two-day sessions over the two year mentorship, to offer group and individualized training in leadership issues relating to the African American Church, and theological supervision to those in peer mentor groups.

2. Offering courses to build and sharpen skills in organizational management and strategic planning for effective church leadership;

3. Offering courses that provide opportunities for critical reflection in practical areas such as stewardship, personnel management, evangelism, new church development, cross cultural appointments, volunteer management, and conflict resolution;

4. Implementing training and support in spiritual/emotional/fiscal/physical self-care as ministry;

5. Securing a sacred place and space for Academy clergy to bring concerns, professional review and discussion;

6. Providing an environment for establishing healthy mutual peer-support networks;

7. Providing guidance for integrating current internship experiences with and in the contexts of their appointed ministry.

Goal #2: Church Growth/Starts

- To co-host twelve (12) Congregation Resource Centers and Annual Conference PC Training Events to enroll and train up to one hundred (100) PC's.

The primary task of the CRC's and Annual Conference Resource Centers is to train and equip partner congregations via covenant relationships. They host training events, expose partner congregations to new ministries, provide support and follow-up.

Partner congregations are local churches who are committed to becoming transformed, vital and strengthened. They will submit written reports and be evaluated by coaches, CRS's and the National Director of SBC21.

Program Deliverables:

1. Sustain up to ten (10) Congregation Resource Centers by annual training and evaluation of their program.

2. Assist with and/or co-sponsor twelve (12) annual Conference PC training events.

3. Cultivate four (4) PC's into CRC's.

Measures to Support Goal #2

1. Implement an ongoing training the trainers (CRCs) program initiative.

2. Engage in ongoing nurturing of relationships with twelve (12) annual conferences including its bishop, cabinet, Connectional Ministries, and Boards of Ordained Ministry where deeper partnership commitments toward co-sponsoring of training events are solidified

3. Establish liaison and linkages between SBC21 and annual conference constituencies and provide counsel and feedback about programs and projects to the national office.

4. Develop more effective new program paradigms and structures for implementing SBC21 training events within jurisdictions, annual conferences and districts.

Outcomes:

1. Enroll and enable 100 PC's to achieve Specific, Measurable, Attainable, Realistic and Timely (S.M.A.R.T.) goals.

2. PC's 1st training event, 70 percent cost covered.

3. PC's 2nd training event, 50 percent cost covered.

4. PC's 3rd training event, 25 percent cost covered.

5. Sponsor no less than five (5) PC teams per training event and not more than ten (10) PC teams per training event.

Goal #3: Engaging in Ministry with the Poor and Imprisoned

- To appropriate the passionate and transformative ideals of the John Wesley's prison ministry and reform programs fundamentally influenced by the words of Jesus Christ in the gospel of Matthew 25:35-40 "I was in prison and you visited me" (CEB).

- To access personnel and resources for developing structures and ministries that will lead to a decline in the recidivism of black men, women, and youth, and to facilitate the smooth re-entry of black people from prisons and correctional facilities into the community as productive citizens in ways that ensures public safety and promotes well-being in families and congregations.

- To promote and address the needs of children and youth at risk of entering the criminal justice system and to deter or prevent this path, by gathering them into the fold of the church.

There is a direct correlation to poverty, miseducation and mass incarceration of black people. The high rate of detained and incarcerated black people, especially black men in the prison system in America is a serious social justice problem for the Church in the 21st century.

According to the Congressional Research Service, the rate of incarceration in the United States federal prison system alone has become an epidemic. There was an astonishing increase by nearly 790 percent between 1982 with 25,000 persons incarcerated to a leaping 219,000 persons incarcerated by 2012.

The United States leads the world in prison populations. In 2008, the International Centre for Prison Studies reported that 756 people out of every 100,000 in America were in prison. As a result of injustices in our social systems, American prison overcrowding is like nowhere else in the world. There are too many people, mostly poor; locked up, too long at a great expense to the public.

This severe problem has political, judicial, social, mental, physical, economical, generational, emotional and spiritual consequences for us all. Faith communities are now partnering to learn more about this social justice problem and all its complexities. How can the church make a difference?

The Pew Report shows that more than 1 in 28 poor children have a parent behind bars. In 2007, slightly more than 1.7 million children under the age 18 had a parent in state or federal prison, representing 2.3 percent of the total US child population. Most of these children (one in 15) are poor black children.

Poor children lag behind their peers in many ways beyond income. In many studies, they are found to be less healthy or have less access to health care than their more economically stable peers. They trail in emotional development, lag behind in literacy and academic achievement, suffer from hunger, and face more crime against them than other children.

Every year we keep children in poverty, it costs our nation more than half a trillion dollars in lost productivity, poor health and increased crime.

Educational research reports that poor children who read below grade level by third grade are at risk to catch up academically; and therefore are counted as "most likely to be poor or at risk socially". These failing academic tests scores are the indicating numbers that profiting prisons use to decide how many future prison beds to build.

Meanwhile, not many poor children are embraced within our United Methodist churches, and many ministries are not embracing the communities in which poor children live. Many churches are missing the opportunity to partner with schools that educate poor children. These children too often seem to be invisible or hidden, or we are too blind to see. Yes, we send school supplies and book bags, but rarely do we build genuine deep relationships with schools and community leaders who serve poor students to discover the potential for ministry.

Poor children and incarcerated persons are mission fields we must tend.

These goals are simply a beginning, but a very radical and bold beginning; to unravel the complexities of this correlation between poverty, justice and mass incarceration. SBC21 will explore ways to bring professional experts, victims, social scientists, lay and clergy, and community leaders together at the problem solving/learning/praying table.

Can we begin to identify what are the specific behaviors and values that are needed to end mass incarceration and recidivism? What can we do together to build a healthier, safer community, one neighborhood at a time? Together, how can we decrease poverty and prison recidivism in the neighborhoods where United Methodist churches exist?

Program Deliverables:

1. Networking: This process connects The United Methodist church to families affected by incarceration, social services providers, inmates, volunteers, social scientists, professional experts, victims of crime, and the legal community, to explore the complexities of mass incarceration.

2. Educating: This focus will provide information to churches on this dilemma and offer different innovative ways churches can build effective prison ministries. This may include ministry inside the prison walls, ministries that assist in the transitional process of families whose love one is soon to re-enter society after incarceration to make a more successful entry back into the home, the workforce and the community. This may include ministries with poor children with incarcerated parents to offer support, love and encouragement. This may include the exploration of prison chaplaincy in The United Methodist Church.

3. Advocating: This focus addresses the criminal justice piece; legislation, and the rights of those incarcerated and the rights of victims of crime.

4. Consolidating: This focus unites and connects ongoing ministries with employers, social service agencies, affordable housing, and family support ministries needed to build systems of help and support.

Outcomes:

1. Church based reintegration programs for juvenile offenders.
2. Church based initiatives for job training, literacy and job placement for those coming out of prison or jail
3. Church based initiatives to disseminate information needed to address this problem through community forums and think tanks.
4. Church leadership empowerment for sustainable and long term participation in strategic initiatives for the decline of incarceration of black men, women and youth.
5. Church leadership engaged in helping to facilitate systemic change initiatives to reduce poverty that directly affects children in the communities, cities and rural areas where United Methodists churches are located.

Goal #4: Improving Global Health (General Church Focus)

Building Relations to Improve the Health Disparity within the Africa/Diaspora

The goal of SBC21 is to build global relationships with the Central Conferences in Africa as well as with congregations of African Descent (Latin, Caribbean) in the United States to specifically improve global health in local communities; so that The UMC can be more informed, unified and strategically organized to address health disparities and become more intentional in local churches and communities working together to prevent disease.

Rationale: Since the evil African slave trade moved across the world, it created an African Diaspora population displaced from Africa to the Western Hemisphere. Research has indicated there is a direct correlation between African Americans being more susceptible to a series of diseases and conditions including poor nutrition, low birth rate, infant mortality, HIV-AIDS, obesity, diabetes, cardiovascular disease, hypertension stroke, renal failure, breast cancer, prostate cancer and lead poisoning. There is also a social justice issue correlation that current medical industry does not always understand or take into consideration the unique differences in ethnic cultures in their research, funding, diagnosis and treatment of diseases in direct health care and insurance availability among Black people.

Africa/Diaspora (New Partner Congregations)

- The expansion of SBC21 to be more global in its relationship with the Central conferences in Africa as well as with congregations of African Descent (Latin Caribbean) in the United States.

Program Deliverables:

1. Consult/collaborate with African College of Bishops for planning and prioritizing programs.
2. Research demographics in the United States to determine the location, needs and ministries of congregations of African descent (Latin Caribbean) in the United States.
3. Host at least two meetings with the College of Bishops of the Central Conference in Africa (one during the Council of Bishops meeting and one during their College of Bishops meeting on the campus of Africa University).
4. Ascertain perceptions, stereotypes etc. that might be distinct cultural differences and obstacles which hinders the development and nurturing of strong and sustained relationships within the African Diaspora family. They may lead us into ending the “us and them” syndrome.
5. Identify/Research what is needed, but not offered, that specifically speak to the unique health needs of African Americans to close the disparities in current health systems. Suggest the most appropriate UMC enterprise that should sponsor/champion such a ministry.
6. Identify the most prominent UMC clergy and lay African leaders (including college and seminary students) to be invited to subsequent strategy meetings to forward this initiative. Identify practices and conditions which compromise the justice and integrity of the United Methodist congregations, general agency staff, etc. so to establish a stronger advocacy for equity in health care for all.
7. Sponsor a Africa/Diaspora Convocation

Measures to Support Goal:

1. Identify research programs and initiatives (past or present) that general agencies and national caucus have been or are involved in and what special features of their programs and services deserve recognition. Might there be opportunities for inter-intra agency cross functional and collaborative efforts?

2. Identify /research what programs are needed, but not offered.

3. Suggest the most appropriate UMC enterprise that should sponsor/champion such a ministry.

4. Identify geographical areas with the highest density of populated constituents as well as active worshipping congregations.

5. Determine who are the most prominent UMC clergy and lay African leaders (including college and seminary students) to be invited to subsequent strategy meetings, conversations and planning.

6. Describe the relationship between US UMC African constituents with SBC21 and BMCR. What argument can our strategy team make regarding this endeavor? Are there any recent incidences where actions of any UMC entity may cause problems for the integrity of the ministry we are proposing? If so, are the circumstances or practices which, if left unattended may eventually undermine the integrity of our efforts?

Goal #5: Proven Hospitality Extended to Youth/Young Adults

Youth and young adults who attend these trainings will be encouraged to be members of the Field Guide Network, an online database of people who are committed to training and being trained in the area of youth ministry. Young People's Ministries manages this database. In addition, participants will be strongly encouraged to serve on the committees and boards of annual conferences, jurisdictional conferences and general agencies.

In addition, SBC21 will seek partnership with Young People's Ministries to provide staff support and resources through serving on planning teams for historic Black training events focused on leadership development of youth and young adults as well as emerging groups through other UMC organizations that have a long-term history with leadership, justice, and civil rights.

The goal is to assist annual conferences, local churches and other faith communities of The United Methodist church to become more effective in reaching, connecting, inviting and engaging young adults into the fold of active church life. SBC21 will offer a new and radical 4 step approach (Proven Hospitality) to lay and clergy leaders in various diverse congregations and faith communities.

This process will guide the UMC in discovering the barriers that may estrange the church from youth and young adults and coach its leadership in specific ways to break these barriers and replace them with bridges that build relationships that identify, invite, engage and empower young adults to become active in the local church or new faith communities by offering radical hospitality. Young adults will be trained to help facilitate this process aside SBC21 coaches and clergy leaders.

The goal is to help congregations assess their readiness and willingness to create learning environments within their church culture that help young adults recognize and live out their call from God. The outcome is to be genuinely inviting to young adults using new strategies of radical hospitality, replacing those strategies that are clearly not working now.

Bridging age gaps requires understanding how the world constantly changes. We also change as God's people. The good news is that God is constant in our lives! God calls us to follow Jesus to make disciples of all ages in our changing world.

This program, SBC21 Proven Hospitality offers four steps to help congregations move gently through the changes necessary to engage young adult leadership in the mission of the church.

Deliverables—SBC21 Proven Hospitality - 4 STEP PROCESS

1. A two-year pilot, Proven Hospitality - 4 Step Process will be launched in two (2) annual conferences and within four (4) local congregations and faith communities with the involvement and leadership of several Wesley Foundation campus ministries to increase the participation of young adults in the life of The United Methodist Church; particularly in traditional Black and multi-cultural churches, and in new United Methodist faith communities. Upon completion of the pilot, the program will use its findings/learnings to strengthen the effectiveness of the program and its potential to move to a broader base of audiences.

2. SBC21 will offer specific training events, forums, and coaching processes to demonstrate practical ways to create welcoming spaces for dialogue and inclusion between young adults and older adults in the United Methodist church.

3. Through this initiative, Proven Hospitality will build bridges offering radical and innovative ways of hospitality that identify the needs of young adults from the voices of young adults and to create space that will pinpoint what specific changes can be made to offer radical hospitality to young adults.

4. SBC21 Young Adult Leadership Teams within conferences, Wesley Foundation campus ministries, and within local churches will be identified, trained and deployed to facilitate, train, encourage, and assist clergy and lay leaders in understanding pop culture and ways to communicate radical hospitality more effectively with young adult populations; especially targeting young adults in our communities who do not have a history of growing up in the church.

Outcomes:

1. An increase of involvement of young adults in the life of the churches who participate in the SBC21 Proven Hospitality program for one year.

2. Young Adult teams will be groomed for leadership in this evangelistic effort and for other leadership opportunities within the United Methodist church.

3. United Methodist churches and faith communities will become equipped to offer intentional radical hospitality to young adults who will strengthen our churches now and in the future.

Recommendations of Structure for SBC-21

10. Offering training events for Congregation Resource Centers and Partner Congregations.

Staffing

A national director shall be named to guide, direct and implement the Plan of Action, under the governance of the Coordinating Committee. The national director will supervise other staff needed for the initiative which includes clerical support staff (1.0 full-time equivalent) and non-staff volunteers recruited to serve as partner congregation coaches to assist congregations in implementing their follow-up ministry plans. The volunteer coaches will be trained and deployed as necessary. A function of the national director includes working with the General Board of Discipleship and the Coordinating Committee in providing leadership for the SBC 21 initiatives.

Summary

Through vision, mission, purpose and prayerfully set goals, SBC21 is energized, dedicated determined and organized to address the four General Church Foci:

- Combating the diseases of poverty by improving health globally

- Engaging in ministry with the poor

- Creating new places for new people and revitalizing existing congregations

- Developing principled Christian leaders for the church and the world

We sense an urgency to serve with perseverance. We believe in the power of Jesus Christ to ultimately transform and strengthen The United Methodist church.

Rationale:

Strengthening the Black Church for the 21st Century (SBC21) is established to provide partnership, leadership, and support for Black congregations as existing congregations are strengthened and new faith communities are formed for fulfilling the mission of The UMC to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

Global Study of Marriage

The 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church will establish a “Task Force to Study Marriage in The United Methodist Church,” and assign to the Committee on Faith and Order the task of appointing fair representation of the deep and rich diversity, geographical span, and theological balance of The United Methodist Church, with no more than 17 members, including clergy, laity, and scholars of various related disciplines such as theology, biblical studies, Wesleyan studies, church history, liturgy, and pastoral care.

The Task Force will consider:

- The history and development of our Christian and United Methodist theology of marriage, and the relationship between Christian marriage and civil forms of union.
- The biblical teachings that inform our theology of marriage and human relationships, and the tradition, reason and experience that further shape our theology.
- Theological and pastoral issues raised by changing laws, norms, and practices regarding marriage and human relationships
 - The understanding and positions of United Methodists on the nature and practice of marriage as lived out across the connection.
 - Pastoral care issues involved in caring for diverse communities with varying understandings of these matters;
 - Other topics deemed relevant and necessary;

The Task Force will work with the Committee on Faith and Order and other appropriate church agencies to develop tools for engaging the global church in study and conversation on this matter.

The Task Force will be formed no later than November of 2016, complete its initial study and share its findings with the Committee on Faith and Order and the Council of Bishops in the fall of 2017, to be followed by the wide distribution of its initial findings, to allow for broad consultation and conversation in congregations, annual conferences, and regions, providing insight and feedback to the Task Force, which will then discern and formulate a final report, including a statement on the theology and practice of marriage in The United Methodist Church, to be submitted for adoption by the 2020 General Conference.

The General Conference recommends to the General Council on Finance and Administration an appropriation of up to $200,000 for the implementation of this task.

Rationale:

Laws, customs, and practices of marriage are changing and vary widely across the global church. United Methodist bishops, conferences, pastors, and congregations are seeking to be faithful and relevant as they navigate this changing and culturally diverse landscape, and would greatly benefit from an informed, clearly articulated theology of marriage.

Resources

The General Conference instructs The General Board of Discipleship to develop and share on its website a list of books and other recommended resources that clearly affirm our Church’s moral standards for sexual behavior, as found in the Social Principles and other relevant sections of the Book of Discipline. These resources should offer helpful Christian guidance to pastors, congregations, campus ministries, and laypeople so they can effectively and compassionately minister to self-identified members of the LGBTQ community, persons who seek help for dealing with their unwanted same-sex attraction, individuals who do not understand or who do not personally follow our church’s moral standards for sexual behavior, and teens at risk for suicide for any reason, including (but not limited to) reasons related to their sexuality. These recommended resources shall not promote approval of extra-marital sex, homosexual practice, or pornography. Rather, these recommended resources shall offer guidance for how to be in ministry with and for all people, within the boundaries of our church’s theological, biblical, and moral commitments.

Rationale:

Our church has affirmed biblical standards for sexual behavior while also saying we want to be in ministry with our neighbors who are same-sex-attracted or who neither agree with nor follow our moral standards for sexual behavior. Guidance on how to balance these effectively, without sacrificing either, is urgently needed.

Use of “Disciple” in the Baptismal Covenant

Change our baptismal and Membership covenants in The United Methodist Hymnal to identify those in union with The United Methodist Church as “disciples,” the biblical identification title.

Add two questions to the next revision of The United Methodist Hymnal and an addendum created for online access:

a. In the Baptismal Covenant 1 on page 34, following the question: “Do you confess Jesus Christ as your Savior, put your whole trust in his grace, and promised to serve him as your Lord, union with the church which Christ has opened to people of all ages, nations, and races?”

“I do.”

Add the following two questions:

“Do you accept Jesus’ call to you to be his disciple and follow him?”

“I do.”

“Do you commit yourself to practice those spiritual disciplines that encourage growth toward becoming a mature disciple?”

“I do.”

b. Add the two questions above to Baptismal Covenant II on page 40, section 4, following the same question in Covenant I.

c. Add the two questions above to Baptismal Covenant III on page 46 following the question “Do you receive and profess the Christian faith as contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments?” “I do.”

d. Add the two questions above to Baptismal Covenant IV on page 50 following the same questions found in Baptismal Covenants I and II.

Rationale:

The biblical impetus in Matthew 28:19 is “Therefore go make disciples.” If the Church is about doing that, it should be reflected in the vows taken by those desiring to becoming members. How else can we separate the Church from membership in any secular organization?

Alternative Hymnal

Call for an Alternative Hymnal

WHEREAS, the 2008 General Conference, responding to a petition from The United Methodist Publishing House and the General Board of Discipleship, instructed the Publishing House to begin work on a new United Methodist Hymnal to replace the current 1989 Hymnal and issued guidelines concerning its content;

WHEREAS, the Publishing House, after several months of preparation, abandoned the project as financially impracticable;

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church and its Methodist and Evangelical United Brethren (EUB) ancestor denominations have a long history of publishing multiple official and semiofficial hymnals (Examples: the English, Spanish, and Korean official hymnals; the 1969 hymnal compiled by the German conferences; the 1938 Cokesbury Hymnal published alongside the 1935 and 1966 Methodist hymnals; the 1921 Evangelical Hymnal and 1935 Church Hymnal of the United Brethren which continued in extensive use among EUBs from 1946 to 1957; the 1957 EUB Hymnal and 1966 Methodist Hymnal, both of which were designated official at the 1968 Uniting Conference);

WHEREAS, this practice of publishing multiple hymnals is approved by both Article XXII of the Articles of Religion (which says, “It is not necessary that rites and ceremonies should in all places be the same . . .”) and Article XIII of the Confession of Faith (which concurs, saying, “We believe the order of public worship need not be the same in all places, but may be modified by the church according to circumstances and the needs of men.”);

WHEREAS, the 1972 General Conference repudiated the Plan of Union, violated the letter and spirit of the above articles, and suppressed a 200-year-old EUB hymn tradition by canceling the EUB Hymnal’s official status.

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Publishing House colluded in this suppression by hiding the Otterbein Press remainders of the EUB Hymnal and offering them for sale as a Cokesbury “unadvertised special,” available only to those who happened to see the entry in Books in Print.

WHEREAS, the 1984 General Conference instructed the Hymnal Committee, the committee organized to compile the 1989 United Methodist Hymnal, to include hymns from the EUB tradition;

WHEREAS, the committee included exactly two, “Who Is He in Yonder Stall?” by Benjamin Hanby (#190), and “What a Fellowship, What a Joy Divine” by Elisha Albright Hoffman (#133), half the number that appears in Songs of Zion (1981).

WHEREAS, Carlton Young, editor of the 1980 Hymnal, called the committee’s action “tokenism” (Companion to “The United Methodist Hymnal,” p. 131), while some would say that two hymns out of more than six hundred doesn’t rise to the level of tokenism;

WHEREAS, Carlton Young sought to mitigate the committee’s action by adding “O the Lamb” (#300), a forgotten campmeeting song whose main EUB connection is that generations after its popularity had passed EUB hymnologist Ellen Jane Lorenz Porter transcribed the music;

WHEREAS, if at the time of union EUBs had outnumbered Methodists 14 to 1 and an EUB-dominated hymnal committee had acted in a similar manner, the 1989 Hymnal would have contained one hymn by Charles Wesley, “Hark! The Herald Angels Sing,” one hymn by Fanny Crosby, “To God Be the Glory, Great Things He Hath Done,” and, in guilt, hymnal editor Ellen Jane Lorenz Porter would have added a piece of service music by Carlton Young.

WHEREAS, the 1984 General Conference asked the Hymnal Committee to be respectful of gender-neutral language sensitivities, but the committee acted inconsistently, satisfying neither traditionalist United Methodists nor the foremost supporters of gender-neutral language.

WHEREAS, many traditional hymns were included unchanged, while others (along with other hymnal features) were changed—for the worse, many would claim (Examples: (1) the neutering of references to “Father,” “fathers,” “sons,” and similar words in several hymns; (2) a bowdlerized reworking of “The Church’s One Foundation,” #546, which robs the hymn of its biblical imagery of the Church as the “Bride of Christ,”—a “sensitive adaptation” according to the Companion to The United Methodist Hymnal, p. 629; (3) the changing of F. Bland Tucker’s great Trinitarian hymn, “Our Father, By Whose Name All Fatherhood is Known,” Lutheran Worship, 1982, #465, to “Our Parent By Whose Name All Parenthood is Known,” #447; (4) alterations made to “Let There Be Peace on Earth,” #431; and (5) the Psalter, a modified Revised Standard Version, which arbitrarily changed the titles “Lord” and “King” to “God”);

WHEREAS, many traditional United Methodists reject such renderings as a bow to the forces of patriphobia (the irrational and unscriptural aversion to calling God “Father”), and consider them to be offensive, possibly blasphemous, a hindrance to their worship, and an insult to the original writers;

WHEREAS, these same traditional United Methodists also reject the newer hymns that purposely avoid the title “Father” (Examples: “God of Many Names,” #105; “How Can We Name a Love,” #111, “Source and Sovereign, Rock and Cloud,” #113);

WHEREAS, these same United Methodists find equally disturbing the reworking of William Draper’s translation of Francis of Assisi’s “Canticle of the Sun,” better known as “All Creatures of Our God and King,” #62, which, seemingly, transforms it from a Christian hymn (with two problematic verses, 4 and 6) into a neo-pagan chant (Draper’s verses 4 and 6 refer to “Dear mother earth” and “kind and gentle death.” “Mother earth,” once a harmless metaphor, now carries anti-Christian connotations with the rise of neo-paganism. Verse 6, about death, given its historical context, might be appropriate at funerals, but not for general worship. But the new version calls death “our sister,” contradicting 1 Cor. 15:26, where death is an enemy. Moreover the new references to “brother wind” and “sister water” in verses 2 and 3 reinforce the neo-pagan appearances.);

WHEREAS, traditional United Methodists represent an organized constituency with recognized leadership organizations including Good News, the Confessing Movement, and the Center for the Evangelical United Brethren Heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Publishing House has had more than a decade’s experience with print-on-demand technology and prepaid subscription publication arrangements;

Therefore, be it resolved, the General Conference instructs the Publishing House to move forward, in consultation with representatives from Good News, the Confessing Movement, the Center for the Evangelical United Brethren Heritage, and other traditionalists, to compile and issue a new alternative United Methodist Hymnal, based on the 1989 Hymnal (with alterations), published using conventional or print-on-demand technology (whichever works better), and financed by advance subscriptions solicited within the constituencies of traditional United Methodists. The new hymnal shall differ from the 1989 Hymnal in that:

1. The problematic hymns, including “God of Many Names,” “How Can We Name a Love,” and “Source and Sovereign, Rock and Cloud,” shall be deleted.

2. At least 7 percent of the hymns (approximately 50 hymns) shall be from the EUB tradition. That percentage represents the percentage of former EUBs in The United Methodist Church in 1968. Those hymns can include older hymns by Evangelical and United Brethren hymn writers, hymns common to the wider hymn traditions that have added verses unique to EUB hymnals (e.g., “I Would Be True,” #315 in The Church Hymnal—United Brethren, 1935), and hymns by contemporary hymn writers of EUB background. The Publishing House should consult with the Center for the Evangelical United Brethren Heritage, the Lorenz Publishing Company, and the Estate of Ellen Jane Lorenz Porter for guidance in selecting appropriate hymns.

3. The hymns from the 1989 Hymnal that had their wordings altered in support of gender-neutral preferences shall have their traditional words restored.

4. Draper’s original words to “All Creatures of Our God and King” should be restored, except that verse 6 should be marked, “For funeral use only,” and verse 4 should begin, “O bounteous earth which . . .” or with a similar phrase.

5. The Psalter should be reworked to incorporate a recognized translation or translations.

Teen Sexual Identity and Suicide Risk

Readopt Resolution 2121 with the following additions and deletions:

~~In the year 2003 at least 700,000 high school students will attempt suicide one in every 13 high school students in the United States. According to the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, suicide rates among adults have steadied or even declined over the past few decades but teenage suicide rates have tripled.~~

Suicide is the second leading cause of death among people ages 10 to 24.¹ One out of six students nationwide (grades 9-12) seriously considered suicide in the past year.² LGB youth are four times more likely, and questioning youth are three times more likely, to attempt suicide as their straight peers.³ A nationally representative study of adolescents in grades 7-12 found that lesbian, gay, and bisexual youth were more than twice as likely to have attempted suicide as their heterosexual peers.⁴ LGB youth who come from highly rejecting families are 8.4 times as likely to have attempted suicide as LGB peers who reported no or low levels of family rejection.⁵ Each episode of LGBT victimization, such as physical or verbal harassment or abuse, increases the likelihood of self-harming behavior by 2.5 times on average.⁶ Nearly half of transgender people have seriously thought about taking their lives, and one quarter report having made a serious attempt.⁷

~~A 2011-1989~~ U.S. Department of Health and Human Services study found that teens dealing with issues of sexual identity are ~~three two~~ to ~~four three~~ times more likely to attempt suicide than are other youth.

Mission and Aging of Global Population

Amend Resolution 3024 as follows:

3024. Mission and Aging of the Global Population Throughout the world...

Through the centuries... that is their right as senior members of the human community" (¶ 162E).

~~In 2002, the United Nations' World Assembly on Ageing stated clearly the demographic facts that confront this century: "The world is experiencing an unprecedented demographic transformation. By 2050, the number of persons aged 60 years and over will increase from 600 million to almost 2 billion; the proportion of persons aged 60 years and over is expected to double from 10 percent to 21 percent. The increase will be greatest and most rapid in developing countries where the older population is expected to quadruple during the next fifty years. This demographic transformation challenges all societies to promote increased opportunities, in particular, for older persons to realize their potential to participate fully in all aspects of life."~~

Advances in public health...

In some developing countries...and other developed societies can learn much from other societies.

~~Responding to these challenges, the United Nations, in its 2002 International Plan of Action on Ageing, recommends action in three directions: assuring older persons' right to social and economic development; advancing health and well-being into old age; and ensuring enabling and supportive environments.~~

~~In the United States, the great majority of older persons have access to public social insurance through Social Security and Medicare. Those in The United Methodist~~ Church celebrate the inclusion of older persons in decision-making structures throughout the church. Appreciation for these advances does not blind us to misguided efforts to depict older persons as benefiting, at the expense of the young, to the low quality of care in many nursing homes and to outright abuse in families, institutions, and organizations that employ older persons. We must remain vigilant to keep government programs publicly available to all, free of privatized substitutes that sharply limit many older persons' access to income support and health care.

The United Methodist Church therefore calls...

Childcare and the Church

Amend Resolution 3081 as follows:

Our Call

As people of faith...

Scripture tells us...

John Wesley set the example for us as Methodists as he began health clinics and schools for the children to learn, ~~to read~~ and encouraged the pastors to meet with the children regularly. His call to meet the needs of people where they were stands as a marker for us today. Using our buildings that otherwise might sit empty six days a week to meet the physical, mental, and emotional needs of children and their families clearly meets Mr. Wesley's expectations.

Our Social Principles (§ 162C) state...

~~In our Our~~ service of infant baptism in The United Methodist Church, ~~recognizes the sacredness of each person from birth and our responsibility to nurture each child in the faith. In proclaiming that sacredness and recognizing each child as a child of God, we in the church carry a commitment to help enable people to live life in the fullness that Jesus proclaimed.~~

~~We we~~ promise to ~~"We will~~ surround these persons with a community of love and forgiveness, that they may grow in their service to others . . ." (The United Methodist Hymnal, page 40). In recognition of this promise and in response to the sacredness of all children as set forth in scripture, through the teachings of John Wesley, and in our Social Principles, our vision for childcare ~~child care~~ must include a vision of services available to all families on an equitable basis. Through the particular ministry of childcare ~~child care~~, we extend the nurturing ministry of the church and proclaim justice to children, families, and communities.

The church has important responsibilities in initiating, encouraging, and participating in the highest quality of childcare ~~child care~~ for children and families, ~~not only in the local community but also nationwide, and beyond.~~

Therefore, we recommend the following:

1. See childcare ~~child care~~ as planned ministry.

Each congregation of The United Methodist Church that ~~houses or supports~~ maintains any childcare ministry program must intentionally assess its understanding of discipleship as it relates to weekday ministry: ~~Child care is a valid expression of the Christian faith. However, programs in local churches too often exist without much thought to through intentional ministry. Concerns often focus on budgeting and facility use instead of the ministry of the programs. When this happens, misunderstandings arise between the child care program and the congregation, and missed opportunities occur for witnessing and mirroring the Christian faith. Each childcare ministry program may encompass one or all of the following expressions of ministry: nurture, outreach, and/or witness by asking three questions. A particular congregation may choose any avenue of ministry, but it is important that each congregation be intentional, involving thought and prayer. What are the congregation's gifts for ministry with children? What is the mission of childcare~~ child care?

Congregations must determine how the child-care program embraces the church's mission.

a. Nurture includes Christian education, stewardship, and worship. In a program that focuses on nurture, spiritual development through Christian education is central. When children are cared for, they learn to care for others and for their world. An intentional part of the curriculum and resources should be the selection of stories (biblical and secular) and methods, and the integration of "God talk" and Christian values into daily conversations, worship opportunities, and interactions. ~~When celebrations follow the church year, and when themes are based on Christian concepts, our faith traditions are an intentional part of the curriculum. Also included is stewardship.~~ In our child-care ministry programs, we reflect our commitment to being God's stewards in the ways we use and allocate our physical and ecological resources. ~~We also reflect an understanding of the precarious balance of the world in an ecological sense. When children are cared for, they learn to care for others and for their world.~~

b. Outreach includes the areas of advocacy, safety, health, welfare, and equity, and how well they are addressed in our communities. Embracing outreach as a part of a weekday ministry program follows our traditional roots of caring for the needs of the community. As a congregation responds to the needs of people in the community through weekday ministry, the community and the congregation discover many blessings. ~~Such a program addresses safety issues, social justice issues, equity issues, and health issues. Specialty child care that addresses community issues might include care for infants, ill children, children of families at risk, children with special needs, children who are survivors of abuse, children with language barriers, migrant or refugee children, school-age children, and young adolescents.~~ Each congregation should determine the unmet needs of their surrounding community by providing specialty childcare for children and families with special needs, striving to meet needs specific to the community, and advocating for the needs of children and families. ~~When possible, congregations~~ Congregations should make every effort to work collaboratively with other community agencies and groups to assure that needs are being met without duplication of efforts and in support of each other. ~~When unable to meet the needs of a community, congregations must be outspoken advocates for needs of children in their community.~~

c. Witness includes the areas of evangelism, membership care, and spiritual formation. In embracing witness as our particular expression of ministry, we proclaim

God active in our lives. As Jesus told us to proclaim the good news, so we must through our child-care ministries. Through these ministries, we can minister to the spiritual needs of children and their families. A witness to our faith speaks clearly through the actions of weekday ministry boards, through the caring love of the staff, through the use of developmentally appropriate practices, through gentle and caring words, through the curriculum and resources, through the environment of the facilities, and through the attitude of the congregation.

Every congregation of The United Methodist Church needs to define its ministry through childcare ~~child care~~ and include a statement of this ministry through weekday ministry programs as part of employee handbooks, parent handbooks, community statements, and church reports.

2. Uphold the quality of childcare ~~child care~~ in the Church.

Any time a child enters a childcare ministry program housed in a church, expectations are raised regarding quality of the program, behavior of the childcare staff and church staff, and adherence to the Christian doctrines of love and justice. ~~Whether a congregation sees itself as actually sponsoring the program or as merely a landlord, since~~ Since the program is in the church, families have different expectations than if they are taking their child to a commercial childcare facility, so a church cannot divorce itself, either morally or legally, from what takes place in its building through childcare ministry programs. The childcare ministry program shall include developmentally appropriate curriculum and resources, the involvement of the congregation with the program, pastoral availability to families and staff involved in childcare, safe and clean buildings and equipment, and the highest quality in staff and staff support in each of the following areas:

a. Program Reviews: ~~For this reason, An~~ annual review of the childcare ministry program should take place: with joint participation of childcare staff, church personnel, and informed, interested laity. Concern should be given to the curriculum, the involvement of the congregation with the program, pastoral availability to families and staff involved in child care, safe and clean buildings and equipment, and the highest quality in staff and staff support. The process for the program review must be jointly determined by the child-care staff, church personnel, and informed, interested laity. A plan must be in place.

b. Licensing: The purpose of licensing standards is to protect children. Safety, health, space, and staff requirements provide a foundation for establishing and maintaining good programs for children. ~~The regulations of basic health and safety conditions in a building/program that serves children are the appropriate responsibility of the~~ ~~state and do not interfere with the free exercise of religion. United Methodists have been meeting such standards for years in other areas of the life of the church, such as camping. A congregation is responsible to provide the best care for children when they gather in a church building. Regarding licensing procedures, congregations should seek to at least meet, if not surpass, the standards set in their community. Even if a program is license-exempt by the state, an effort should be made to meet licensing requirements for safety and for integrity. Congregations should strive to meet and surpass licensing standards in their state, also~~ The regulations of basic health and safety conditions in a building/program that serves children are the appropriate responsibility of the state and do not interfere with the free exercise of religion. Congregations should seek to be actively informed about such licensing procedures and requirements and should work to reform such regulations when they do not mandate standards that serve the best interests of children.

c. Self-Study: Through a self-study process, every childcare facility can look for ways to evaluate and assess the effectiveness of the care provided. Churches should follow a ~~some~~ process of self-study for their childcare ministry programs on a regular basis. ~~Such studies involve both the child-care providers and the congregation and allow them to continuously assess the effectiveness of the ministry they are providing.~~ These self-studies are available through some annual conferences, the National Association for the Education of Young Children, and the United Methodist Association of Preschools—Florida.

d. Personnel: As congregations seek to support childcare ministry programs, competitive salaries, salary, benefits, and support of the staff of these programs should be of concern and subject to review and discussion to insure the best for the children and families involved. ~~Congregations must assure that children are served through the best caregivers.~~ Congregations have a responsibility to advocate for higher pay and benefits for child-care workers. These professional caregivers should maintain excellence and integrity in the important job they do, and they should be appropriately compensated for it. ~~With increased concern around issues of child abuse, congregations need to assure that all child-care providers have been adequately screened for child abuse and neglect in accordance with laws of local jurisdiction, especially in the area of sexual misconduct. Appropriate screening protects the children, the childcare providers, and the congregation. It is important to meet any government regulations and the Safe Sanctuaries® policies of your local church regarding the screening of childcare workers as appropriate. The~~ personnel issue also includes a concern for the education and training of child-care workers. A yearly plan for comprehensive continuing education should be part of the congregation's support for child-care providers. Many child-care providers have extensive training and education in the field. They are good sources for training of those who work with children in other areas of the church, including child-care workers for Sunday services, Sunday school teachers, and vacation Bible school teachers. For those who are hired without proper training and education, the congregations should sponsor and encourage attendance at continuing education events.

3. Be advocates for quality childcare ~~child care~~.

Going beyond the congregation, United Methodists should be diligent advocates for childcare ~~child care~~ nationwide. The following suggestions are for individuals and groups within congregations who seek to better the place of children in American society:

a. Stay ~~Become~~ informed about childcare conditions existing today and the issues involved in the design of an adequate public policy for childcare ~~child care~~. Address the issues through eliciting a response of commitment from the policy makers.

b. Use the appropriate councils and agencies of the church to monitor public policy at federal, state, and local levels of government.

c. Become involved not only in church conferences and meetings, and but in the larger arena of childcare ~~child care~~ through such organizations as the Children's Defense Fund, and the National Association for the Education of Young Children, and other research based advocates of quality childcare.

d. Call upon staff at the General Board of Church and Society in Washington, DC, and within each annual conference. They are charged with particular responsibility for the church's involvement in public policy processes in order to monitor, serve as an advocate for, raise issues concerning, and bring the voice of the church to bear on child-care policy development.

e. Call upon the staff of the General Board of Discipleship and The United Methodist Publishing House to express arising needs as they relate to program support, needed curriculum and resources, and policies regarding church and child-care center relationships.

f. Call upon the General Board of Global Ministries to assist churches in responding to childcare needs in their communities with appropriate programs and resources.

g. Call upon the General Board of Discipleship...

Amend Resolution 3082 as follows:

WHEREAS, children are the most precious resource of our societies, but also the most vulnerable. Children need loving adult support to flourish. In turn, the adult caregivers of children need parenting support systems as well. Our churches, schools, societal groups, and governments help provide the support system children and their caregivers need; and

WHEREAS, children are being raised in a variety of household structures headed by various caregivers; and WHEREAS, children of these various families are in many of our churches and schools. To flourish, they need a family support system that embraces their household's structure; and

WHEREAS, some church programs assume a traditional mother/ father two parent family. Consider the name of programs in a local church, such as "Mothers of Preschool Children," "Mother's Day Out";

We believe that children are the most vulnerable and precious resource of our societies, and they need loving adult support to flourish. Adult caregivers of children need parenting support systems as well. Today, children are being raised in a variety of household structures headed by various caregivers; and children in these families are in our communities, schools, and congregations. To flourish, families need a support system that embraces their household's structure, and church ministry programs should reflect that changing dynamic.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that we We call upon each local United Methodist Church to:

Reducing the Risk of Child Abuse in the Church

Amend Resolution 3084 as follows:

Jesus said, "Whoever welcomes one such child . . . welcomes me" (Matthew 18:5). ~~Children are our present and our future, our hope, our teachers, our inspiration.~~ Children They are full participants in the life of the church and in the realm of God.

Jesus also said...

Tragically, churches ~~are~~ have not always been safe places for children. Child sexual abuse, online exploitation, and ritual abuse occur in congregations of all sizes and geographical locations. ~~churches, both large and small, urban and rural.~~ The problem cuts across all economic, cultural, and racial lines. ~~It is real, and it appears to be increasing.~~ Most annual conferences can cite specific incidents of child sexual abuse and exploitation within churches. Virtually every congregation has among its members adult survivors of early sexual trauma.

Such incidents are devastating to all who are involved: the child, the family, the local church, and its leaders. ~~In~~ creasingly, churches are Churches are torn apart by the legal, emotional, and monetary consequences of litigation following allegations of abuse.

Native People and The UMC

New resolution replaces seventeen resolutions from the 2012 Book of Resolutions bringing main issues about Native People together and providing continuity as a teaching document for the church.

Historical Overview and Theological Foundations

We believe that Native American/American Indian (American Indian: The U.S. government and many tribal governments use the term “American Indian.” We understand the words “Native American,” “Indigenous people,” and “First Nations people” to be interchangeable terms.) traditions affirm the presence of Creator God, the need for right relationship with our Creator and the world around us, and a call for holy living. Through corporate and personal conviction, our people individually and tribally are led by the Spirit of God to a greater awareness of God. Traditional beliefs, consistent with the gospel and the historic witness of the Church should not be understood as contrary to our beliefs as Native Christians. The testimony of historic and contemporary Native Christians should be counted in the historic witness of the Church.

Many Native traditions were erroneously feared, rather than understood as vehicles for the grace and the knowledge of God. Such fears have resulted in persecution of traditional Native peoples (The term “Native People” in this context refers collectively to American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians) and Native Christians; and,

Many Native traditions have been misinterpreted as sin, rather than varying cultural expressions leading to a deeper understanding of our Creator and the Creator’s divine presence and action in our world.

God’s creating presence speaks to us through our cultures, rituals, and languages. This contextual incarnational testimony is vital to the ongoing work of the Church among Native people. For hundreds of years, Native Americans, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians, compelled by the gospel have chosen to become disciples of Jesus Christ. In doing so, we have affirmed that relationship with God and our brothers and sisters is contained in the gospel of Jesus Christ. We bear witness to the mercy of God through our faith, continuing in discipleship and ministry.

As Native Christians, we affirm for the Church and ourselves that many elements of our traditions and cultures are consistent with the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the teachings of the Church. We affirm that the Holy Spirit is faithful in guiding us in holy living within our Native cultures and the broader culture. We recognize that just as in the broader culture, not all expressions of traditional cultures are appropriate for all believers; God is faithful in leading us to acceptable worship and continued growth in grace, as tribal people. We further affirm that our identity as Native or tribal persons is pleasing to our Creator and vital to the body of Christ. We affirm for each other that our languages, cultures, identities, and many traditions are pleasing to God and have the potential to renew and enrich the Church and offer hope to the world. God created us as Native People; to flout how God created us is to reject the authenticity of who and whose we are.

The General Conference of The United Methodist Church affirms the sacredness of American Indian people, their languages, cultures, and gifts to the church and the world.

We call upon the world, and the people of The United Methodist Church to receive the gifts of Native Americans, including American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians, as people of God. We allow for the work of the Great Spirit/God among our communities and tribes without prejudice.

In 1452, the Papal Bull Romanus Pontifex declared war against all non-Christians throughout the world, sanctioned and promoted the conquest, colonization, and exploitation of non-Christian nations and their territories. In 1453, Spain was given rights of conquest and dominion over one half of the world and Portugal the other half.

In 1823, the Christian Doctrine of Discovery was adopted into law by the U.S. Supreme Court (Johnson v. McIntosh). Chief Justice Marshall observed that Christian European nations had assumed dominion over the lands of America, and upon discovery, Native American Indians had lost their rights to complete sovereignty as independent nations and retained a mere right of occupancy in their lands.

Indigenous people were once sole occupants of this continent. Scholars vary greatly in their estimates of how many people were living in the Americas when Columbus arrived in 1492; however, estimates range from 40 million to 90 million for all of the Americas. American Indian tribal populations were decimated after the arrival of the Europeans. This decimation was rationalized according to:

(a) the European belief in their “discovery” of the new world;

(b) the arrogance of Manifest Destiny;

(c) the cavalier destruction of the Native concept of tribal communal land; and

(d) lack of immunity to diseases carried by Europeans to the Americas.

During the American Revolution, American Indian tribes and confederations of tribes were recognized as sovereign indigenous nations in nation-to-nation relationships with the major European powers. Later, these relationships were maintained with the newly formed U.S. government, which formed 371 treaties with Indian nations between 1778 and 1871.

More than five million people identify as either American Indian or Alaska Native, according to the 2010 Census;

Prior to European contact, the indigenous nations of this continent were sovereign, autonomous, and self-regulating.

The establishment, enactment, and progression of the Doctrine of Discovery influenced law and behavior, perpetuated a climate of violence against Native people through colonization, forced removals, enactment of treaties that were then regularly violated, killings and the “Indian Wars” continuing today in a subtler but in a no less violent and invasive manner.

Government and religious institutions intentionally destroyed many of our traditional cultures and belief systems. To assimilate our peoples into mainstream cultures, many of our ancestors as children were forcibly removed to boarding schools, often operated by religious institutions, including historical Methodism. The Doctrine of Discovery facilitated a climate of hostility and genocide. Native peoples were targets by those seeking land and other natural resources.

Genocide became a tool of greed and a response to fear. While attempting to erase Native people from existence, traditional cultures, rituals, and languages also fell prey to acts of genocide.

A key historical fact for United Methodists to consider, acknowledge, and address is the 1864 Sand Creek Massacre, a violent act influenced by the Doctrine of Discovery that resulted in the genocide of almost 200 persons, mostly women and children, at a U.S. peace camp. The Sand Creek attack was led by a Methodist preacher, Colonel John Chivington.

In 2007, the United Nations adopted a “Declaration of Indigenous Peoples” that called into question the validity of the Christian Doctrine of Discovery, which for cenjuries served as “legal” rationale for stealing land and dehumanizing aboriginal peoples, as well as justification for the establishment of boarding schools throughout North America to “civilize” Indian children.

In 2009, President Obama pledged to Native people the United States’ support of the “Declaration of Indigenous Peoples.” The Declaration seeks to right historical wrongs through use of the Papal Bulls of the Roman Catholic Church that are official decrees by the Pope sanctioning the seizing of indigenous lands worldwide.

Treaties are regarded as binding, sacred, and enduring texts by American Indians and Alaska Natives, comparable to the U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights. Therefore, it is disturbing that the U.S. government ignored its trust responsibilities by violating treaties and other promises.

Tribal sovereignty is an inherent international right of Native nations. It encompasses various matters, such as jurisdiction over Indians and non-Indians on tribal lands, education and language, child welfare and religious freedom. Land is both the physical and spiritual foundation of tribal identity, as stated by Kidwell, Noley, and Tinker (2001) in their book, A Native American Theology: “Land is today the basis upon which tribal sovereignty rests, the rights of Indian people to live upon, use and to govern in a political sense the members of the tribe who live on the land and those whose tribal membership gives them an association with it” (p. 15). Early U.S. Supreme Court decisions support and affirm tribal sovereignty, most notably the Marshall trilogy of cases in the nineteenth century, and Winter v. S. (1908).

Recent Supreme Court decisions, however, have ignored previous precedent and contradicted earlier rulings, undermining tribal sovereignty.

The effects of practicing the concept of a Comity Agreement by The United Methodist Church has resulted in the failure of the Church to follow through with the biblical mandate of propagating the gospel to all nations and, further, has caused the failure of the Church to create a climate for leadership development of Native Americans. A Comity Agreement would be discriminatory that violates the right of Native Americans to associate with the denomination of their choice.

Native American Contemporary Issues

A gap in knowledge exists in The United Methodist Church, in congregations and other United Methodist entities, relative to comprehending concepts of Native American life, cultures, languages, spirit, values, contemporary issues, and such. This knowledge gap has been a consistent problem over history, with minimal effort from non-Indian entities to change their attitudes toward Native Americans until more recently. Lack of knowledge, racism and prejudice, and the absence of Native American representation at decision-making levels of the Church contribute to misunderstanding contemporary issues that affect Native people, and a history of missteps and violations of Native protocol. Contemporary issues affecting Native people need further exploration, understanding and action.

Furthermore, the American Indian population continues to shift between rural to urban population centers. The human condition of many American Indians reflects a legacy of poverty and socioeconomic factors. A serious shortage exists of American Indian pastors and trained professionals to respond to these conditions. Native American Ministry Sunday provides an opportunity for The United Methodist Church to support American Indian ministries and communities.

Health

American Indians are the most socioeconomically deprived minority group in the United States. The poverty level for children on reservations is more than twice the national average, and unemployment rates are three times that of other Americans. American Indians continue to lead national statistics in infant mortality, suicide, alcoholism, diabetes, HIV/AIDS, and tuberculosis.

The U.S. government is bound by treaty to provide health care for all American Indians. The U.S. government provides medical services through Indian Health Services, United States Public Health Service, and the Department of Health and Human Services to American Indians who belong to the federally recognized tribes.

The federal government’s legislative and executive branches frequently threaten to reduce funding for the Indian Health Services Program. Any funding cuts could severely curtail or cancel health care for a large number of eligible American Indians.

Leadership Development

Native American Ministries Sunday, a key United Methodist Special Sunday offering has enabled a route for Native American leadership development. Before its inception, there were fewer than five ordained elders and diaconal ministers in The United Methodist Church. As a result of the ongoing support for Native American Ministry Sunday, well over 100 Native people have been seminary trained and ordained as elders and deacons. They are serving in local churches, annual conferences, and general agency leadership positions. This program, along with laity leadership development that is culturally appropriate and carefully constructed, are key considerations in continuing to expand leadership development among Native People and in Native tribes, churches, and communities.

Education

The concept of illiteracy is unacceptable in a time when society projects a formal demeanor of progress and opportunity for all members. Dispelling myths that Native People receive unlimited funds from the government for all their needs is a key action to understanding the educational obstacles for Native individuals seeking higher education. Past support from The United Methodist Church for the participation of American Indians in higher education has been appreciated, yet it has been inconsistent and the threat to eliminate it is omnipresent. A trend of decreasing American Indian participation in higher education is beginning to appear at the national and regional levels; and the consistently rising costs of higher education contribute considerably to the decrease of American Indian participation in higher education. Recent statistics suggest an upward trend of academic success for American Indians currently participating in higher education.

Economic Development for Native American People

For more than 500 years, Native Americans have lived and survived in the context of colonialism and capitalism, and have been impacted by the economics of greed. Many have been forced to live in poverty; a small segment of the Native American population is surviving, however, through tribal economic development based on gambling. Unfortunately, tribal gambling casinos have had negative social consequences beyond and even within tribes.

The need for economic development and growth is critically acute in most Native American communities across the United States. Economic conditions are appalling, with some reservations facing exceptionally high rates (some as high as 80-90 percent) of unemployment, well above the national average.

In fact, many reservations have very high poverty rates in the United States and rank very low in health and education indicators. There is little or no tax base on many reservations. Equity for investment is practically nonexistent or equity comes from questionable sources and at an exorbitant rate. As a result, some tribes have resorted to gambling endeavors in an effort to improve their economies. The vast majority of tribes remain in desperate need of meaningful, diversified economic development, however.

Economic development encompasses everything from job creation to reform in tax codes, from the creation of banking institutions to the expansion of tribal autonomy, development of basic physical infrastructure, such as roads and sewers; telecommunications to bridge the digital divide; fiscal literacy development for Native American people. Collectively, these basic essentials are requirements for effective economic development.

The U.S. Department of the Interior has grossly mismanaged tribal lands. It has lost track of billions of dollars in mining, logging, and other royalties that should have gone to benefit Native American tribes. Fiscal accountability and ethical management of trust funds is an absolute necessity in the quest for tribal economic self-sufficiency.

Economic realities, such as “one world economies” and “mega-mergers,” can have a negative impact on both the rich and poor of this world. Native American spirituality speaks to and challenges inequities with its understanding of how to care for the whole family of God. Native American United Methodists believe their cultural understanding of stewardship is God-given and has been distorted from its intended purpose; God’s creation has been used with greed rather than care.

Journey of Repentance, Reconciliation, and Healing

The United Methodist Church desires to move forward on a journey of repentance, reconciliation, and healing with Native People. To move on this journey we commit to the following action steps and covenant together with Native People to work toward healing of their historic grief and trauma.

Confession to American Indians

The United Methodist Church (and its predecessor bodies) has sinned and continues to sin against its American Indian brothers and sisters. The denomination apologizes for its participation, intended and unintended. For the listening to begin, we must respect the traditional ways of Native People. Therefore, The United Methodist Church pledges its support and assistance in upholding the American Indian Religious Freedom Act (P.L. 95-134, 1978).

The General Conference recommends that local churches develop statements of confession as a way of fostering a deep sense of community with American Indians. The General Conference encourages the members of our Church to stand in solidarity on these important religious issues, and to provide mediation when appropriate for ongoing negotiations with state and federal agencies regarding these matters.

Action Steps and Covenant

The United Methodist Church affirms and commits to upholding these beliefs, principles, and actions:

1. We acknowledge that the intentions and politicization of Christianity distorted the gospel/good news for the purpose of colonization and must be decolonized.

2. We affirm that American Indian sovereignty: is a historical fact, is significant, and cannot be disregarded in favor of political expediency;

American Indians have a right to self-govern; preserves culture, land, religious expression, and sacred spaces; and ensures survival of Native People.

3. We need to demythologize and increase our understanding of American Indians and Indian country.

4. We affirm the sacredness of humankind; affirming all persons are equal in God's sight; Natural resources are sacred and we deplore practices of exploitation.

5. We reject stereotypes and frames that depict American Indians in harmful or distorted ways.

6. We observe that the belief systems of Native American Indians and non-natives may not have commonality.

Healing Relationships with Indigenous Persons

The United Methodist Church will build bridges of respect and understanding with indigenous persons. Our churches must listen and become educated about the history of the relationship between indigenous persons and Christian colonizers in their own geographic location. Through prayer and relationship building, they will celebrate the gifts that indigenous people bring to the body of Jesus in the world.

Acts of Repentance and Healing

At the 2012 General Conference, The United Methodist Church held an Act of Repentance with Native Peoples. The Act challenged every conference and local congregation to implement actions demonstrating a genuine attitude of repentance including:

1. Encouragement and resourcing the education and training of laity and pastors by providing culturally sensitive learning environments.

2. Primacy be given to learning and prioritizing Native American United Methodists in leadership, programming, education, strategizing, and establishment of Native ministry.

3. Wherever the Church holds land and/or property in trust, give due priority and consideration to transferring a portion of the land and/or property back to the tribe(s) that are/were indigenous to the area.

Comity Agreements Affecting Development of American Indian Ministries

For the Church to consider and work in partnership with Native People to explore unique and culturally appropriate ways to be in ministry with Native People, The United Methodist Church will not be a party to any interdenominational agreement that limits the ability of any annual conference in any jurisdiction to develop and resource programs of ministry of any kind among American Indians.

Doctrine of Discovery

The United Methodist Church condemns the Doctrine of Discovery as a legal document used for the seizing of lands and abusing the human rights of indigenous peoples. The United Methodist Church will work toward eliminating the use of the Doctrine of Discovery.

American Indian Sacred and Religious Life, Practice and Location

A. Sacredness and Solidarity

The General Conference of The United Methodist Church affirms the sacredness of American Indian people, their languages, cultures, and gifts to the church and the world.

We call upon the world and The United Methodist Church to receive the gifts of American Indians as people of God. We allow for the work of the Spirit of God among our communities and American Indian people without prejudice.

The United Methodist Church pledges its support and assistance in upholding American Indian practices including:

Traditional ceremonies and rituals.

Access to and protection of sacred sites and public lands for ceremonial purposes.

Use of religious objects (feathers, tobacco, sweet grass, bones, shells, drums, etc.) in traditional ceremonies and rituals.

United Methodists are encouraged to stand in solidarity with American Indians on these important religious issues and to provide mediation when appropriate for ongoing negotiations with state and federal agencies regarding these matters.

B. Religious Freedom

The General Board of Church and Society will make available information on the American Indian Religious Freedom Act. The General Board of Church and Society will support legislation that provides for a legal cause of action when sacred sites may be affected by governmental action; proposed legislation should also provide for more extensive notice to and consultation with American Indian tribes and affected parties.

The General Board of Church and Society may enter and support court cases relating to the American Indian Religious Freedom Act.

The General Board of Church and Society will communicate with the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, declaring that the position of The United Methodist Church is to strengthen the American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978 for American Indians and preserve the God-given and constitutional rights of their religious freedom.

C. Sacred Sites

The General Board of Church and Society shall continue to support legislation that will provide for a legal course of action when sacred sites may be affected by governmental action. Proposed legislation should also provide for more extensive notice to and consultation with tribes. On behalf of the whole United Methodist Church, the General Board of Church and Society may enter and support court cases relating to the American Indian Religious Freedom Act.

The General Board of Church and Society shall communicate with the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, declaring that the position of The United Methodist Church is to strengthen the American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978 and preserve the God-given and constitutional rights of religious freedom for American Indians, including the preservation of traditional American Indian sacred sites.

D. Repatriation of Ancestors and Religious/Sacred Ritual Objects

The 1990 National Native American Graves and Repatriation Act mandated the return of human remains and ritual objects to American Indian tribes and nations. Giving Our Hearts Away: Native American Survival by Thomas White Wolf Fassett, On This Spirit Walk: The Voices of Native American and Indigenous Peoples by Henrietta Mann and Anita Phillips, and the "Return to the Earth" project of the Mennonite Central Committee are study guides to culturally relevant American Indian traditions that provide an opportunity for The United Methodist Church to engage in its commitment for Restorative Justice.

The United Methodist Church pledges its support in the following ways:

1. Use the study guides as an educational resource;
2. Engage in dialogue with American Indians in their local area;
3. Advocate when appropriate; and
4. Annual conferences and local churches consider identification of land and setting aside of land for the repatriation of American Indian remains.

American Indian History and Contemporary Culture as Related to Effective Church Participation

The General Board of Discipleship in cooperation with the Native American Comprehensive Plan, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, and the General Commission on Religion and Race will develop curriculum for the training of United Methodist pastors on the history of American Indians in the United States, their relationships with The United Methodist Church and its missiology.

The annual conference Boards of Ordained Ministry and the Council of Bishops will ensure the implementation of the training within the next quadrennium. The Native American International Caucus will develop a list of leadership/resource persons that can be used as trainers for these sessions. United Methodist seminaries should include American Indian history and theology in their curriculum.

General Conference will advocate for the development and implementation of a training policy whereby American Indian history, culture, and contemporary affairs are an integral part of ministry and administrative training for all aspects of The United Methodist Church.

The General Conference supports a policy that the concept of "American Indian preference" be used in the selection of instructors and speakers for the proposed training components. The Native American International Caucus will provide a list of qualified American Indian leaders.

Leadership Development

It is recommended that The United Methodist Church will include Native American leadership development as a component of its overall effort to develop new leaders for the present and future of the Church. Included in these efforts will be mentoring programs, peer support systems, and restoring traditional and historic ways that bring forth new leaders for Native American communities.

Native American Ministries Sunday

All annual conferences should promote the observance of Native American Ministries Sunday, and encourage local churches to support American Indian Sunday with programming and offerings.

American Indian Representation in The United Methodist Church

The United Methodist Church will develop a policy that will ensure American Indians representative of every jurisdiction will be identified, selected, and placed on pertinent boards and/or committees of general agencies. All entities of The United Methodist Church will develop a policy by which Native Americans from within all the jurisdictions will be identified to be considered to be placed on their boards and agencies.

American Indian Tribal Sovereignty

The United Methodist Church reaffirms its support for tribal sovereignty and commends the following guidance that acknowledges and affirms American Indian sovereignty as a significant fact that cannot be ignored or disregarded. American Indians have a right to self-governance.

The General Board of Church and Society will identify legislation impacting American Indians, and develop communications advocating for the obligation of the United States on its treaties with American Indians.

Missions with American Indians

The General Board of Global Ministries will identify and promote innovative and culturally appropriate mission opportunities with American Indian tribes and communities.

Economic Development

The United Methodist Church supports the efforts of American Indian tribes, communities, and economic ventures compatible with the Social Principles of The United Methodist Church to create means and methods of economic development.

The General Board of Church and Society, General Commission on Religion and Race, and the General Board of Global Ministries in collaboration with American Indians will develop educational tools for local churches and individuals as a study on contemporary American Indian economic issues.

The General Board of Church and Society will work with the National Congress of American Indians and other American Indian organizations in advocating for federal economic development programs and initiatives.

The General Board of Church and Society will facilitate participation of United Methodist American Indians in the work of the United Nations Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues on economic development.

Education

The General Conference endorses and supports the funding, development, implementation, and assessment of a higher education recruitment/retention forum, sponsored by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry for Native Americans throughout the denomination's regions. The forum will be organized and managed by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry in cooperation with Native American leadership.

Be it further resolved, that the General Conference encourages The United Methodist Church to use the information and materials generated as a result of the forum for sensitizing and familiarizing non-Indian membership about Native Americans in their respective communities.

Health and Wholeness

The United Methodist Church supports access to adequate medical services to ensure a balance of physical, mental, and spiritual well-being and asks that the U.S. Congress increase rather than decrease federal funds to operate American Indian health facilities.

The General Board of Global Ministries will support funding of economic development projects of American Indian tribes.

The General Board of Pension and Health Benefits will invest funds in American Indian financial institutions and communities.

Rationale:

This resolution replaces seventeen resolutions from the 2012 Book of Resolutions (Resolutions 3321-3345, and 4081 found on pages 417-438 and pages 585-588) into a single central resolution. This replacement resolution lodges main issues about Native People together for connection and continuity and to provide a teaching document for the church

Support for the Indian Child Welfare Act

New resolution to Support the Indian Child Welfare Act

Historically, a high percentage of Indian families in comparison to the general population have been broken up by the often unwarranted removal of their children by non-tribal public and private agencies. A disturbingly high percentage of such children have been placed in non-Indian foster and adoptive homes and institutions.

Indian children have a unique political status as members of sovereign tribal governments. Congress, through the U.S. Constitution, statutes, treaties, and the general course of dealing with Indian tribes, is charged with the responsibility for the protection and preservation of Indian tribes and their resources, including Indian children.

The special political status of Indian tribes, as well as the history of biased treatment of Indian children and families under public and non-Indian private child-welfare systems, is the basis for the enactment of the Indian Child Welfare Act (25 U.S.C. § 1901).

Recent high-profile cases underscore the importance of enforcement of the Indian Child Welfare Act and assurance that children are not illegally separated from their tribal connections.

Therefore, The United Methodist Church strongly supports the Indian Child Welfare Act and the critical connection between children and their respective tribes and tribal cultures and traditional practices.

Names Demeaning to Native Americans

New resolution concerning demeaning names to Native Americans.

Debate is ongoing in the United States about the appropriateness of using Native American names as mascots for sports teams, both at the professional and amateur levels. The publication Words that Hurt, Words That Heal, produced by The United Methodist Church, emphasizes that the use of names and language is a powerful instrument for good as well as for destructive purposes. It is demeaning to depict Native Americans as violent and aggressive by naming a sports team the “Braves” or the “Warriors.” This implies that all Native Americans are aggressive and violent. The use of such names is not conducive to development of a society committed to the common good of its citizenry nor to the self-esteem of Native children.

The United Methodist Book of Resolutions has contained statements as far back as 1992 that urged the denomination to repent for its role in the dehumanization and colonization of our Native American brothers and sisters. Accordingly, a Repentance Service was held during the 2012 General Conference. All United Methodist boards and agencies worked before and after that Repentance Service to ensure that their work respects the culture and values of Native people.

In light of this position on repentance, we strongly believe continued use of Native American names as mascots for sports teams is demeaning and racist. We urge all United Methodist-related universities, colleges, and schools to replace any mascots that demean and offend our Native American sisters and brothers. We also support efforts throughout our society to replace such mascots and symbols.

United Methodists have not been the sole voice on this issue. Many other communities, religious groups, and secular organizations have addressed this concern through statements, articles, protests, and resolutions. In spite of these efforts, however, sports teams still employ Native American names and symbols.

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church is committed to the elimination of racism within the Church and within society, and

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church is equally committed to participate actively in the continued struggle of building the true community of God where reconciliation comes together with justice and peace, and

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church rejects the use of Native American names and symbols for sports teams and considers the practice a blatant expression of racism, Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Conference calls upon all general agencies, annual conferences, and United Methodist-related organizations and institutions not to select locations for their meetings and events where sports teams use Native American names and symbols, and furthermore, The United Methodist Church should publically declare this position.

Rationale:

This new resolution replaces two found in the 2008 Book of Resolutions (3327 and 3330). This addresses racial sports mascots and other entities using demeaning and racially charged names for Native Americans.

Therefore Go: The 2017-2020 Denominational Financial Spending Plan and Its Focus on the Ministry of Making Disciples of Jesus Christ for the Transformation of the World

Ephesians 4:16—From him the whole body, joined and held together by every supporting ligament, grows and builds itself up in love, as each part does its work. (NIV)

As United Methodists we are called to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. Each of us, as working members of one body, enabled by God, go about transforming the world for God's glory and in God's name. At the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA), our work in that body, our ministry, is to provide the support needed to enable others to go make disciples for Jesus Christ.

The United Methodist Church is the embodiment of working in connection. Together we go into the world to be the Church. Because of our connection, we are able to do more together than we can do alone. When we work together in ministry with the poor, we provide resources and encouragement around the world. When we work together to train principled Christian leaders, we provide spiritual guidance to a hurting world. When we create new, and revitalize existing, places of worship, we bring the presence of God and can touch communities in need. When we work together in ministry to eradicate the occurrence of malaria, we improve the health of all God's children around the world.

GCFA is working for you in our connectional Church. We celebrate with you that in 2014, 25 jurisdictional conferences paid 100 percent of the general Church apportioned funds. Overall, the apportioned funds were collected at a record high rate of 90.8 percent. In the past quadrennium, conversations were held with central conference leadership to develop opportunities for central conferences to expand their participation in the general Church apportionment structure. In 2014, meetings were convened by the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters (StCCCM) that engaged the people who would be involved in the processes. We thank the StCCCM for its hard work throughout the quadrennium to bring together and make collaborative decisions about central conference apportionments. Because of this open dialogue, the Church is giving faithful witness to the support of our connection.

GCFA is called to be in ministry with local churches, annual conferences, and general boards and commissions of the United Methodist connection. In this quadrennium, we implemented a shared services model to our ministry of administration.

GCFA is charged "to perform defined responsibilities of review and oversight on behalf of the General Conference in relation to the other general agencies and to perform other assigned functions." We are accountable in all matters relating to the receiving, disbursing, and reporting of the general funds of the Church. Annual reviews are conducted of proposed spending plans of all treasuries receiving general Church funds to confirm that they are fiscally responsible. Policies are established governing the functions of banking, payroll, accounting, budget control, and internal auditing. GCFA provides some or all of these functions for many of the general agencies receiving general Church funds, the Connectional Table, the Council of Bishops, and several other related entities. The Book of Discipline paragraphs outline, but do not limit, the areas in which the agency works in the ministry of administration.

The implementation of shared services involved most of our internal departments. Since the last General Conference, we expanded shared services offerings to include more than 40 areas in which we work throughout the United Methodist connection.

Because of our commitment to serving the Church, we highlight some of the programs and processes at work throughout the connection that help it "go" through its respective ministries:

- The Travel and Meeting Planning Department assisted annual conferences with meeting planning and online registration for 100 meetings, including 15 annual conference sessions in 2014 alone.
- Combining resources of the Church, the Travel and Meeting Planning Department researched travel agencies to locate one source for travel planning. Several general Church agencies are participating in the program, which has generated cost savings for business travel.

- The Staples® Advantage program allows churches to make purchases at discounted prices. Additional support for ministries is provided through this program, as a percentage of each purchase is donated to the United Methodist Committee on Relief.
 - The Sponsorship Department has worked tirelessly to connect the Church with Cost Stewardship. Working with local churches and annual conferences, Cost Stewardship initiated a program to identify refunds from health care costs, utilities, and other expenditures, which generated an average refund of $2,000 for nearly 500 local United Methodist churches.
 - United Methodist Insurance (“UMI”) provides property and liability insurance coverage to protect the people and properties of local churches and other United Methodist church buildings. Because UMI only insures United Methodist properties, the fair valuation of properties is made based on each individual church. The true savings is in being insured properly. UMI is uniquely suited to provide quotes, fair-market pricing, and sufficient coverage for local churches.
 - The Information Technology (“IT”) Department has developed, and continues to refine, the Ezra program to provide easy entry of conference statistics for the collection of essential data for annual conferences. As the Church’s official database on leadership and churches, Ezra fuels information for the Data Sync process by providing one-time/real-time access to statistics. Working together with Data Services, the IT Department has developed a portal for access to United Methodist data that is available to all through an online data search and reporting system. Ezra streamlines the data collection process for savings in staff time and cost of programs.
 - With Data Sync, information is uploaded between the conferences and GCFA and is then synced out to five general agencies that in the past made separate requests for the same information. As of July, 2015, GCFA is working with more than 20 annual conferences to sync data updates on a nightly basis. Additional annual conferences and general agencies are in conversation with GCFA on data sync requirements and are preparing to start projects in the coming year. The benefit is a cost savings on inputting and receiving data that had previously been accomplished by phone or e-mail. This allows more staff time to be directed to the core ministries of the organization.
 - The United Methodist Church Development Center, another shared service, works throughout the connection with United Methodist general agencies, caucuses, and other entities as a fundraising partner within The United Methodist Church.
 - The GCFA Financial Services Department fulfills GCFA’s Disciplinary responsibility to serve as the treasury for agencies receiving general Church funding. In addition, the department performs accounting duties, and works, through improved software applications and procedures, to develop ways to minimize the work of general agencies and others with whom we interact in matters of Church finance. The development of the Great Plains accounting system is one way the department has automated processes and improved function and reporting of Church finances.
 - Working in connection with United Methodist Communications, GCFA enveloped its web presence into the denomination’s official website. Also working collaboratively with other agencies, during this quadrennium the GCFA board adopted a new logo to be consistent with the Church-wide brand.
- Working together to make disciples takes many forms. Because of our commitment to serving the Church through the ministry of administration and our commitment to be part of the body of Christ through our work, we will continue to develop processes that enable all of us to be in ministry together.
- We are grateful to the members of the connectional United Methodist Church for the opportunity to be in ministry with you as, together, we “go” and make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. When United Methodists work together, it has a major impact on the world.
- Thank you!

WORLD SERVICE FUND

Introduction

When United Methodist congregations give their share of apportioned funds, they participate in God's work. The World Service Fund is the heart of our collective Church ministry. Through this fund individuals partner with church agencies to be in mission and ministry at home and around the world. World Service ministry truly makes a difference across the globe.

World Service is God's people reaching out in love and compassion in the name of Christ. It represents a call and a challenge to each United Methodist. As The Book of Discipline, 2012, states, the full payment of the World Service Fund is each congregation's "first benevolent responsibility" (§ 812).

Overview

For the 2017-2020 quadrennium the program agencies will continue their programmatic emphasis centered around four areas of focus: (1) leadership development, (2) church growth, (3) ministry with the poor, and (4) global health.

The proposed budget of $311,818,512 represents a nominal dollar increase of $4,031,696, or 1.3 percent, compared to the previous quadrennium. In terms of real dollars (accounting for the impact of general inflation), the proposed budget for 2017-2020 reflects a 5.6 percent decrease from the budgeted amount for 2013-2016. Furthermore, it represents a $15,698,488 decrease, or 4.8 percent, from the 2009-2012 quadrennium.

World Service Fixed Charges

General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA). GCFA is accountable to The United Methodist Church through the General Conference for receiving, disbursing, and reporting all general funds (§ 806). This line item is an estimate of the World Service Fund's share of GCFA's expenses for the quadrennium.

The Connectional Table (CT). As part of the total mission of the Church, CT facilitates the Church's program life as determined by the General Conference. Its task is to discern and articulate the vision for the church and the stewardship of the mission, ministries, and resources of The United Methodist Church (§ 904).

Interpretation Resources. Along with producing materials to interpret United Methodism's connectional funds, the Marketing Team of United Methodist Communications (UMCom) uses money from this section of the budget for "Promotion of Giving," a joint effort of UMCom, GCFA, and the General Board of Discipleship (GBOD). The "Promotion of Giving" goal is to develop comprehensive financial stewardship tools, leading to improved financial support of ministry at all levels of the connection. "Promotion of Giving" resources are financed through the World Service Fund.

Program Agencies

The World Service Fund provides basic financial support to program-related general agencies, which are especially important to the common vision, mission, and ministry of The United Methodist Church. Through World Service funding, agencies support annual conferences and local congregations in living out God's mission for the worldwide Church. General agencies also provide essential services and ministries beyond the scope of individual local congregations and annual conferences through services and ministries that are highly focused, flexible, and capable of rapid response.

2020 VISION for The United Methodist Church: STRATEGIC DIRECTIONS FOR 2017-2020

Whenever United Methodism has had a clear sense of mission, God has used our Church to save persons, heal relationships, transform social structures, and spread scriptural holiness, thereby changing the world (§ 121). For 2017-2020, The United Methodist Church has a clear sense of mission discerned by the Council of Bishops and CT.

Our vision is clear for 2017-2020—to double the number of highly vital congregations worldwide to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. United Methodist disciples will engage in mission and ministry throughout the connection to live out God's vision for a world where poverty is reduced and poor people and communities flourish; a world where children live to their full potential; a world where Christian leaders heed God's call to discipleship; and a world where new faith communities offer God's love and grace worldwide. The following collaborative Christ-centered strategies will anchor our connectional ministries so that they are specific, measurable, achievable, relevant, and time-bound for the transformation of the world.

Our UMC Mission: VITAL CONGREGATIONS.

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church that doubles the number of highly vital congregations worldwide.

A vital congregation is the body of Christ making and engaging disciples for the transformation of the world. Rooted in our understanding that local congregations provide the primary arena through which Christian disciples are called, formed, and nurtured, our goal is to double the number of highly vital congregations worldwide by 2020. Five markers of vitality—disciples in worship, new disciples (professions of faith), disciples in small groups, disciples in mission, and giving to mission—help us gauge our progress together through a shared approach.

The real measure of our missional impact will not be in membership increases or improved giving but in the lives that will be touched and drawn to Christ as disciples because these vital congregations were able to reach people with the gospel of Christ who might otherwise not be reached.

Our Missional Strategies: THE FOUR AREAS OF FOCUS. Vital congregations are shaped by and witnessed through four focus areas: calling and shaping principled Christian leaders; creating and sustaining new places for new people; ministries with poor people and communities; and abundant health for all.

1. Calling and Shaping Principled Christian Leaders:

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church equipping 3 million people across the connection to be “difference makers,” called out to serve as principled Christian leaders in our world today.

Our United Methodist Church believes that Jesus is “calling you out” for something greater than any one person. The question for every United Methodist today and into our future is: “What difference will you make?”

We define principled Christian leadership as making a difference wherever you are: at the local church, in the mission field, across a denomination, in each community and society across our world. As “grace-filled followers of Jesus Christ” our discipleship leads to our decision to make a difference in the world. We believe we can equip every United Methodist across our connection to be “difference makers” for Jesus.

2. Creating and Sustaining New Places for New People: Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church with 1,000,000 new disciples who profess their faith through renewed and new faith communities around the world.

Creating new, vital, faith communities is critical to the task of making new disciples and transforming the world. A faith community is a group that gathers under the lordship of Jesus Christ to worship, engage, and send. It is within faith communities that we receive new disciples through professions of faith and increase professions of faith. This multilayered strategy focuses on increasing the number of new faith communities in annual conferences across the world.

3. Ministry with Poor People and Communities: *Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church with 400 vibrant, flourishing, and transforming communities addressing issues of poverty and ministry with the poor, particularly with children.

Vital congregations reflect God’s transforming love into their communities and around the world. As faithful disciples, we are called to love our neighbors—to walk, worship, and witness so that all may enjoy God’s vision of abundant life. As United Methodists, we will challenge and transform broken systems and structures that create and perpetuate poverty. Leveraging connections and partnerships within and beyond The United Methodist Church, we can transform communities and open doors for children to a more promising future. We envision the people called Methodists engaging in at least four hundred partnerships that focus on ministry with poor people and communities.

4. Abundant Health for All: *Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church that can reach 2 million children with life-saving interventions.

Every child is a life filled with promise and potential, yet, every five seconds a child dies from preventable causes. The United Methodist Church has a sacred calling to ensure abundant health for all children, engaging disciples to be agents of God’s healing transformation in the world. Jesus said, “I came that they may have life and have it abundantly” (John 10:10 NRSV).

There is a global movement to significantly improve health for all people by 2035, with a specific goal of saving the lives of 15 million children by 2020. The United Methodist Church will join this movement and commit to a goal of reaching 2 million children. It will do this through education, direct health services to those in need, and increased access to medical care.

2012 General Conference Action

The 2012 General Conference approved the following two new initiatives, which are funded through the World Service Fund:

Commission on Central Conference Theological Education. Paragraph 817 provides for a Commission on Central Conference Theological Education, elected by the Council of Bishops, to determine policies and procedures for the fund established to further this initiative. It has the authority to approve disbursements from this fund. The commission includes one person from each central conference, members of the Council of Bishops and Boards of Ordained Ministry, and representatives of theological schools, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM), the General Board of Global Ministry, and the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters.

Proceeds from this fund are to be used in central conferences at the discretion of the commission to: (1) develop theological schools; (2) develop courses of study; (3) develop libraries and contextually developed resources; (4) provide scholarships and faculty development; (5) support associations and networks of faculty and schools; and (6) support new and innovative approaches to theological education. GBHEM administers this designated fund.

Young Clergy Initiative Fund. This fund provides support to increase the number of young clergy among the jurisdictional conferences. This is a three quadrennium effort, which began in 2013, to enable The United Methodist Church to focus efforts on encouraging young adults responding to the call to ordained ministry by providing a strong theological education in the United Methodist tradition. This initiative is in addition to the funds that the church already has budgeted for discernment, recruitment, nurturing, education, and support of young clergy leaders.

The boards and commissions, in collaboration with annual conference boards of ordained ministry, seminaries, bishops, and cabinets, will continue to determine the most effective use of the Young Clergy Initiative Fund in response to the needs of young clergy leaders. GBHEM administers this designated fund.

Other Ministries

Contingency Fund. The Contingency Fund for World Service provides funding for emerging needs in the World Service Fund areas that occur during a quadrennium. These funds are allocated to program agencies for new programs to address unanticipated needs. Contingency fund allocations must first be approved by both CT and GCFA.

Report No. 2

MINISTERIAL EDUCATION FUND

Background

The Ministerial Education Fund was established by action of the 1968 General Conference. Its mission is to engage the membership of the Church in an effort to equip annual conferences, theological schools, and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) to meet the need for increased resources for the recruitment and education of persons for ordained ministry. Since 1976, programs related to both diaconal and ordained ministry have been eligible for funding. Since 1996, programs related to recruitment and education of both deacons and elders have received support.

Every clergyperson who has served in The United Methodist Church over the past forty-eight years has been shaped in part by the ministries and institutions supported by the Ministerial Education Fund. Support is provided for the thirteen United Methodist seminaries in the United States and global initiatives through GBHEM, as well as local pastor courses of study, continuing education, and other programs that strengthen the ministry of every local church. The 25 percent retained by each annual conference directly supports ministerial education in that conference.

Recommendations

The Ministerial Education Fund was first apportioned in 1970 to the annual conferences as one of the Church's general funds. During the forty-year period through 2014, more than $75.8 million has been raised to support this important work. The council recommends that the General Conference approve that the amounts apportioned for the 2017-2020 quadrennium as follows:

Report No. 3

THE BLACK COLLEGE FUND

Background

The 1972 General Conference established the Black College Fund as one of the apportioned General Church funds. The objective of the fund is to provide financial support for institutions of higher education that have historically served the educational needs of black students. This support helps the institutions maintain academic quality and financial stability while limiting individual student tuition costs. More than $285 million has been raised to assist the programs and ministries of these schools since the fund was established.

Recommendations

The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) recommends:

1. That the 2017-2020 apportionments be set as follows:

2. That GCFA remit monthly receipts for this fund to the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) for distribution to the colleges using the formula described in The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 815. Promotion of the Black College Fund shall be by the Division of Higher Education and in consultation with the Council of Presidents of the Black Colleges, in cooperation with and with the assistance of the General Commission on Communication (UMCom).

3. That an annual conference may make direct and/or designated gifts for current expense or capital funds purposes to one or more of these colleges, but only after it has met its full Black College Fund apportionment. There may be reasonable exceptions to this restriction, but such exceptions will be negotiated with GBHEM prior to implementation.

Report No. 4

AFRICA UNIVERSITY FUND

Background

The 1988 General Conference approved a report of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) providing for the establishment of a United Methodist university on the continent of Africa. By the time the 1992 General Conference convened, the site selection process was complete, the Zimbabwe Annual Conference had gifted the university with a large tract of land on which to establish the main campus, and the university had been granted a charter by the government of Zimbabwe. On March 23, 1992, the College of Theology and the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources opened on a site near Old Mutare to forty students from six African countries.

Subsequent General Conferences have heard and affirmed reports on the continuing development of this university for all of Africa. The vitality of the university was evidenced by the creation of additional colleges (now six, plus an Institute of Peace, Leadership, and Governance), increases in the number of faculty members and students, and the growth of the physical plant.

Current Realities

The student body has reached an enrollment level of around fifteen hundred full-time students from twenty-five African countries, with an additional one thousand students studying part-time. All fourteen Africa central conferences, where The United Methodist Church is experiencing rapid growth, are well-represented in the student body. The contributions of the Institute of Peace, Leadership, and Governance include mediating a conflict within the church in Burundi (East Africa Conference) and equipping mediators and peace-builders who are bringing greater stability to conflict zones across Africa. This is true ly a university for all of Africa, focused on the Church's priorities and underpinning its mission needs.

Africa University's more than 6,200 alumni have solidified the university's status as a leadership preparation institution. They are college and seminary presidents, faculty members, district superintendents, communicators, hospital and clinic managers, farmers and agricultural extension workers, and leaders in every walk of life.

Africa University's fourth vice chancellor (president) has prioritized fiscal accountability, resulting in the eradication of an $800,000 budget deficit incurred in 2013 and moving the university to positive numbers in the 2014 audit.

The Africa University Fund supports the ministry's core needs and amounts to 17 percent of the institution's $12 million annual budget. Africa University is deeply thankful to the local churches for their ever faithful and generous contributions, leading to a record number of annual conferences paying 100 percent or more of their asking in 2014. With 91.5 percent in overall giving in 2014, the Africa University Fund continues to be actively supported within the church. We urge local churches and annual conferences to continue their faithful giving to the fund.

World Service Special Gifts have also been sought since 1988. These gifts have been held and invested by the GBHEM and the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) as permanent endowment funds for the university. As of 2015, contributions and investment earnings have resulted in an endowment fund of $65 million, with the proceeds going primarily to pay for student scholarships.

The Africa University Board of Directors, Development Office, GBHEM, and GCFA are working to expand the basic infrastructure of the main campus and increase the permanent endowment fund to $100 million to provide greater support to the institution. To that end, a $50 million Africa University Endowment Campaign is currently in the silent phase. More than $16 million in cash and pledges has already been committed to the campaign. The campaign targets increased income to fund scholarships, academic support, and infrastructure.

A recent challenge grant allowed the institution's primary stakeholders—alumni and local and regional constituents—to invest in the stability of the university. By engaging African donors, Africa University exceeded the challenge amount of $500,000, and generated more than $1 million. A fully staffed alumni office was established in order to engage alumni, as well as to launch and charter associations in countries where the graduates are located.

Recommendations

GCFA has deep appreciation and respect for all who have worked diligently and successfully to bring the university to this point in its development: members and staff of GCFA, GBHEM, and the General Board of Global Ministries (GBGM); the Africa University Board of Directors; administration, faculty, alumni, and students of the university; and all of the persons, churches, conferences, and other organizations who have supported the university with their time, energy, talent, and gifts. GCFA believes the university will continue to enjoy enthusiastic support. GCFA recommends the following:

1. That the 2017-2020 yearly apportionments be set as follows:

AFRICA UNIVERSITY FUND

	2009-2012	2013-2016	2017-2020	$ Change	% Change

Total	$ 2,389,141	$ 2,389,141	$ 2,389,141	$ 2,389,140

2. That GBHEM shall be authorized to disburse funds for the development and operation of Africa University and to release such funds to the Africa University Board of Directors or such other structural units as may be created for that purpose, provided that GBHEM shall be accountable for such funds to GCFA under a written agreement developed in consultation with and approved by GCFA and the Africa University Board of Directors, and, provided further, that no such funds shall be released to any structural unit whose charter, bylaws, or other governing documents have not been approved by GBHEM.

3. That permanent endowment funds for the university be held and invested by GCFA, GBHEM, and other investment managers as identified by GBHEM. Permanent endowment funds include the World Service Gift receipts and any other funds that may be raised by the university and designated by the donor for this purpose. GCFA and GBHEM are authorized to disburse income earned from the permanent endowment funds under the same conditions as set forth above. The provisions of this report shall not limit the authority of the Africa University Board of Directors to raise and administer permanent endowment funds and/or funds for the development and operation of the university from sources other than those from which contributions to the Africa University Fund or the World Service Special Gifts fund would normally be sought.

4. That an annual conference may make direct and/or designated gifts for current expense or capital funds purposes to Africa University, but only after it has met its full Africa University Fund apportionment. There may be reasonable exceptions to this restriction, but such exceptions shall be negotiated with GBHEM prior to implementation

5. That adjustment in the provisions of this report, except for the amount of apportionments to the Africa University Fund, may be made by GCFA on the recommendation of GBHEM after consultation with the Council of Bishops.

Report No. 5

THE EPISCOPAL FUND

The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) has projected a budget for support of the bishops of The United Methodist Church that reflects current economic conditions. While healthcare costs are budgeted to rise annually by 6 percent and overall inflation is anticipated to be approximately 2.5 percent per year in the 2017-2020 quadrennium, apportionment funding from the jurisdictional conferences is increasing by only 1.3 percent. Support from the central conferences is being proposed in a formulaic manner in Report No. 8. However, this support is not solely directed to the Episcopal Fund. Rather, it is also being allocated to the General Administration Fund. The result is an increase of episcopal funding globally of only 0.3 percent. With costs increasing faster than funding, this projection requires use of $9.3 million of accumulated reserves.

This level of reserve utilization is not sustainable for the long term. We are cognizant of the struggles of our annual conferences and local churches to meet financial commitments. As a result, GCFA will sponsor a thorough review during the next quadrennium of alternative ways to reduce this operating deficit. Potential areas of study include, but are not limited to, the impacts associated with:

apportionment levels for the Episcopal Fund; number of bishops; salary levels for bishops; office and equipment allowances; healthcare costs; and expenses relating to other benefits. Salary, healthcare, and office allowances are the areas with the largest projected cost increase. In total, these costs are expected to increase by $7.1 million (salary—$4.0 million; healthcare—$1.8 million; office allowance—$1.3 million), or 10 percent over the current quadrennium.

In addition to reviewing ways to reduce future expenditure levels, GCFA has taken steps that have already resulted in significant cost savings. For example, in 2014 a move was made to Medicare Advantage for retiree healthcare. This plan reduced total costs for retired bishops' healthcare by $400,000 annually ($1.6 million for a quadrennium). GCFA implemented monthly communication with the Council of Bishops regarding the financial status of the Episcopal Fund compared to prior years and budget in detail for all areas of spending. This allows GCFA to work closely with the Council of Bishops to ensure cost overruns are mitigated or eliminated. GCFA implemented Concur, an expense reimbursement system, in 2014 to enable better auditing and tracking of travel expense requests to ensure they fall within the travel policies and procedures and to reduce overall costs for episcopal offices by allowing electronic submission of expense requests.

The Episcopal Fund, raised in accordance with ¶ 818.3, will provide for the salary and expenses of active bishops from the date of their consecration and for the support of retired bishops and surviving spouses and minor children of deceased bishops. The average total cost of each active jurisdictional bishop for the upcoming quadrennium is projected to be $1,319,000, while the average cost of a central conference bishop for the upcoming quadrennium is projected to be $930,000. Subject to the approval of GCFA, the treasurer will have authority to borrow for the benefit of the Episcopal Fund such amounts as may be necessary for the proper execution of the orders of the General Conference.

GCFA presents the following recommendations concerning items in the Episcopal Fund for the 2017-2020 quadrennium, to become effective at the adjournment of the 2016 General Conference. The items will be reviewed and set annually by GCFA.

I. Bishops Elected by the Jurisdictional and Central Conferences

A proposed annual spending plan of estimated receipts on apportionment of the Episcopal Fund and expenses for each episcopal office will be submitted to GCFA on forms furnished by it. The proposed spending plan will include funding for salary, housing allowance, and office expense as recommended by the respective episcopal area, jurisdictional or central conference, or its committee on episcopacy.

A. Salaries

1. Active Bishops. All salaries are set annually by GCFA. The salary of a bishop newly elected in 2016 or 2017 will begin on the date of his or her consecration at the annual rate established for 2016 or 2017 by GCFA.

a. Jurisdictional Conferences. In 2015, the salary for jurisdictional bishops is $145,655. Any salary adjustments for 2016 through 2020 will be set by GCFA annually. While the current projections are for a 3 percent annual increase, considerations for determining salary adjustments each year will include the percentage adjustment for workers in state and local government as published by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the review of other relevant compensation studies as determined by GCFA, and the overall economic status of the Episcopal Fund and its reserves.

GCFA will notify each newly elected bishop's current salary-paying unit of the date on which payment of salary from the Episcopal Fund will begin.

b. Central Conferences. The salary of each bishop will be recommended by the respective central conference or its committee on episcopacy as included in the area spending plan. For 2015 the salary for central conference bishops are as follows:

Episcopal Area / Region	2015 Salary
Africa	$ 71,585
Philippines	$ 71,585
Central and Southern Europe	$ 127,960
Russia	$ 64,688
Germany	$ 84,108
Nordic and Baltic	$ 100,073

Any salary adjustments for 2016 through 2020 will be set by GCFA annually after reviewing the recommendations. While the current projections are for a 3 percent annual increase, GCFA will determine the salary adjustments each year with consideration to the requests individually and in total. Additional considerations will include the review of cost of living changes in each episcopal area, relevant compensation studies as determined by GCFA, and the overall economic status of the Episcopal Fund and its reserves.

2. Interim Retired Bishop. If a retired bishop is asked to serve in an interim position and assigned to assume presidential responsibilities as described in ¶ 409.3, the Episcopal Fund will be responsible, upon request, for the difference between the remuneration of an active bishop's current salary in the jurisdictional or central conference area from which the bishop retires, and the pension payment. The annual conference(s) will be responsible for providing housing for the interim retired bishop. If the interim retired bishop is living outside of the episcopal area, the cost to commute to and from the episcopal area is the responsibility of the annual conference. The status of a retired bishop on interim assignment shall, for purpose of housing and other benefits, be that of a retired bishop.

3. Special Assignment.

a. Retired bishops who accept a special assignment from the Council of Bishops to a United Methodist agency or institution of higher learning following mandatory retirement will receive remuneration not to exceed a maximum of 20 percent of an active bishop's salary in the episcopal area from which the bishop retired. The Episcopal Fund's share will not exceed 50 percent of the established compensation. The agency or institution of higher learning will assume all responsibility for the bishop's operational and travel expenses related to the assignment.

b. Retired bishops who accept a special assignment from the Council of Bishops with a direct relationship and accountability to the Council of Bishops following mandatory retirement (for example, as COB Executive Secretary or Ecumenical Officer) will receive remuneration of 20 percent of an active bishop's current salary in the episcopal area from which the bishop retired.

c. The status of a retired bishop on special assignment will, for purpose of housing and other benefits, be that of a retired bishop.

d. Compensation for any special assignment will cease after the bishop completes the assignment or has reached the mandatory age of retirement for ordained ministers governing the episcopal area from which the bishop retired, whichever comes first.

4. Salary Payment. Due to the variation in time of election, consecration, and assignment, there may be up to seven weeks of salary and benefits provided from the Episcopal Fund prior to the date of assignment for any newly elected bishop.

B. Episcopal Residence/Housing

The annual conference or conferences constituting the episcopal area to which the bishop is assigned will be responsible for providing an episcopal residence or housing allowance for the bishop.

1. Housing allowance (Jurisdictional Conferences).

a. The Episcopal Fund will provide a grant of $10,000 annually to the annual conference to assist in the cost of providing an episcopal residence or allowance.

2. Episcopal Housing Funds (Central Conferences). The Episcopal Fund will provide a grant annually to the annual conference to assist in the cost of providing an episcopal residence or allowance. The amount for each episcopal area will be set annually by GCFA.

3. Guidelines will be developed by the respective jurisdictional or central conference committees on episcopacy for transition in episcopal residences.

4. If a bishop dies while in active service and the episcopal residence is provided by the annual conference, the surviving spouse may continue to occupy the episcopal residence for up to 120 days following the date of death of the bishop.

C. Office Expense

1. Each active bishop will receive an annual grant as set each year by GCFA to be applied toward the operation of the episcopal office, including telephone, fax, and Internet service. Such grant will be paid quarterly to jurisdictional bishops and monthly to bishops in central conferences.

2. The Episcopal Fund will reimburse purchases of office equipment and furnishings at the discretion of each bishop in an amount not to exceed $10,000 in any one quadrennium for any one episcopal area. All purchases remain the property of the episcopal office with the exception of electronic equipment such as computer, cell phone, and iPad/Kindle/Nook in the bishop's office. Each bishop must comply with and sign the electronic equipment protocol and transfer of files agreement developed by the Council of Bishops stating his or her intent to take or leave electronic equipment. If the bishop takes the electronic equipment, he or she will reimburse the episcopal office the current value of the electronic equipment.

3. Maintenance of office equipment will be an office spending plan item paid from the office allowance.

4. Capital expenditures are not reimbursable from the Episcopal Fund.

D. Audits

1. Jurisdictional Conferences. A full audit of episcopal office and housing funds will be conducted based on generally accepted auditing standards (GAAS). Financial statements accompanying the audit will be prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP). A full audit will be conducted annually for each calendar year, and a written report will be provided to GCFA by July 31 of the following year.

When the episcopal office and housing funds are administered through the annual conference treasury, a separate audit is not required if the conference audit includes separate schedules for episcopal office and housing funds. GCFA strongly encourages the appropriate segregation of duties in the handling of episcopal funds.

2. Central Conferences. A full audit of episcopal office and housing funds will be conducted based on approved International Standards on Auditing. Financial statements accompanying the audit will be prepared in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards. A full audit will be conducted annually for each calendar year, and a written report shall be provided to GCFA by July 31 of the following year.

An audit conducted by the staff auditors of the General Board of Global Ministries (GBGM) will be an acceptable alternative to a separate audit by a chartered public accountant.

3. A status report on audits will be made by GCFA's Committee on Audit and Review Committee to GCFA's Committee on General Agency and Episcopal Matters and to the full GCFA Board. If the audit is not received on time, GCFA's Committee on General Agency and Episcopal Matters will have the right to suspend office and housing allowance funding to the episcopal area.

4. The cost of the annual audit will be an office spending plan item paid from the office allowance.

E. Moving Expense

1. Absent prior approval by GCFA, the Episcopal Fund will be responsible for paying for only one move of a bishop during 2017-2020. In order for a move to be paid by the Episcopal Fund, it must (a) be made within the first twelve months of an assignment/reassignment of an active bishop or (b) within three years of retirement for a move by a retired bishop. Only moves within the continent of the bishop's episcopal service will be paid for by the Episcopal Fund.

2. The Episcopal Fund will pay for the relocation of a surviving spouse of an active bishop, within the continent of the bishop's episcopal service, if the move occurs within 120 days of the death of the active bishop.

3. Pre-approved moving storage expense is reimbursable for a thirty-day period.

4. If a bishop, upon retirement, accepts an assignment of Church-wide responsibility with direct relationship and accountability to the Council of Bishops (§ 408.1d(1)), and if the assignment is such as to require residence at a specific location, the Episcopal Fund will be responsible for the payment of moving expenses to that location. In such case, a bishop remains eligible for payment of moving expenses by the Episcopal Fund to a retirement residence within the continent of the bishop's episcopal service if that move occurs within three years of the time the assignment of Church-wide responsibility with direct relationship and accountability to the Council of Bishops ends.

5. If a bishop, upon retirement, accepts an assignment of Church-wide responsibility with a general agency or United Methodist Church-related institution of higher education (§ 408.1d(2)), moving expenses related to such an assignment are the responsibility of the agency or institution, unless the location of the assignment is also the bishop's permanent retirement residence, in which case the Episcopal Fund will be responsible for the cost and this shall be considered the one covered moving expense. If the moving expenses to such an assignment are paid by the agency or institution, the bishop will remain eligible for payment of moving expenses from the Episcopal Fund to a permanent retirement residence within the continent of the bishop's episcopal service if that move occurs within three years of the time the assignment ends.

6. Jurisdictional conferences moving company. GCFA contracts with a national moving company for the relocation of household goods for bishops. If the bishop chooses not to use the moving company contracted by GCFA, three estimates are required from moving companies of the bishop's choice. Following approval, an otherwise qualifying move will be reimbursed upon receipt of the invoice.

7. Central conferences moving company. Three estimates are required from moving companies of the bishop's choice. Following approval, the move will be reimbursed upon receipt of the invoice.

F. Pension

1. Jurisdictional conference bishops. For service years beginning before January 1, 1982, pensions for the support of bishops elected by jurisdictional conferences and those of their surviving spouses will include the benefits provided by the Global Episcopal Pension Program.

For service years beginning January 1, 1982, and thereafter, pensions for the support of bishops elected by jurisdictional conferences and those of their surviving spouses and dependent children will include the benefits provided by the Ministerial Pension Plan, amended and restated effective January 1, 2007, as the Clergy Retirement Security Program (CRSP), and the Comprehensive Protection Plan of the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits.

2. Central conference bishops. Pensions for the support of bishops elected by central conferences and those of their surviving spouses shall include the benefits provided by the Global Episcopal Pension Program.

G. Other Benefits

1. All bishops are eligible to be covered under a group health plan. GCFA will be reviewing the bishops' health-care plan to ensure that the plan is both providing adequate coverage and is cost effective. Bishops are covered for health benefits from the date of consecration as a bishop. All bishops will have the opportunity to participate in a cost-sharing plan for health insurance.

2. In the central conferences, if the participant is in a national mandatory health plan and there is an employer share, the Episcopal Fund will pay up to the amount paid for other bishops.

3. Retirees will have the opportunity to participate in a cost-sharing plan for supplemental health insurance coverage, as well as the cost-sharing dental and vision plans. Cost sharing will be as determined annually by GCFA.

4. Other insurance coverage and cost sharing for same will be as determined annually by GCFA.

5. The surviving spouse or one family member of a deceased bishop, invited by the Council of Bishops, will be entitled to the payment of expenses to attend the bishop's memorial service held at the Council of Bishops' meeting.

6. One family member of a deceased surviving spouse of a bishop, invited by the Council of Bishops, will be entitled to the payment of expenses to attend the surviving spouse's memorial service held at the Council of Bishops' meeting.

7. Bishops will be entitled to reimbursement to attend the funeral of a bishop or bishop's spouse within their respective college. Bishops designated as representatives of the Council of Bishops or other colleges, or those participating in the leadership at the funeral, will be entitled to reimbursement from the Episcopal Fund.

H. Renewal Leave, Continuing Education, and Sabbatical Leave

1. Renewal Leave. Paragraph 410.2 provides that every bishop in the active relationship shall take up to three months' leave from the normal responsibilities of the episcopacy for purposes of reflection, study, and self-renewal during each quadrennium.

a. A bishop's renewal leave request will first be approved by the college of bishops and reported to the Council of Bishops. The secretary of the Council of Bishops will certify to GCFA the approved list of bishops to be on renewal leave.

b. During the period of a renewal leave, the following financial arrangements will be in effect:

(1) Cash salary will continue, subject to the provisions of (6), below.

(2) Reimbursement will be made, subject to the provisions of (6), below, within the usual guidelines for episcopal expense from the Episcopal Fund, supported by necessary documentation, will be:

i. Transportation to and from the site of renewal leave by the most direct route and the most economical coach air fare; mileage to and from the site of renewal leave reimbursed under established policies for mileage reimbursement.

ii. Expenses up to $2,000 for the quadrennium for actual expenses of tuition and housing.

(3) Expenses incurred in providing temporary episcopal supervision by a bishop from a nearby episcopal area necessitated by the absence of a bishop on renewal leave shall be reimbursed.

(4) Meals during renewal leave are not reimbursable.

(5) Reimbursable episcopal travel expenses will not be paid during renewal leave unless authorized by the Council of Bishops.

(6) Compensation or honoraria received for any activity during renewal leave will be deducted from b. (1) or (2) above.

2. Continuing Education. The Episcopal Fund will reimburse up to $2,500 of the cost of a class, seminar, workshop, or other continuing educational experiences annually. The continuing education fund request, established by the Council of Bishops, must be completed and submitted to GCFA's Episcopal Services Manager no less than thirty days prior to the event to be considered.

3. Sabbatical Leave. As provided in ¶ 410.3, a bishop may be provided sabbatical leave. No travel expenses will be provided during that time.

I. Travel Expense

The Episcopal Fund will pay the travel expenses of all members of the Council of Bishops in accordance with the Episcopal Fund Travel Expense Guidelines and Policies then in effect. These travel expense policies are in accordance with the General Agency Expense and Reimbursement Policies for all general funds of The United Methodist Church as approved by GCFA.

J. Emergency Fund (Central Conferences)

When the safety of a bishop is threatened, evacuation expenses of the bishop, spouse, and minor children of the bishop may be reimbursed. The Episcopal Fund has limited resources to provide assistance for the replacement or repair of episcopal residences and offices destroyed or damaged by conditions of war or civil unrest in the central conferences. In consultation with staff of GBGM and the officers of the Executive Committee of the Council of Bishops, priorities will be determined to respond to needs when conditions of peace have been restored.

When GCFA has been notified that a bishop in a central conference is being evacuated due to unsafe conditions in the episcopal area, payment of housing and office allowance amounts will normally be suspended. Evacuation costs for the bishop and immediate family will be paid from the Bishops in Exile account of the Episcopal Fund upon authorization of the Council of Bishops and GCFA's General Secretary. Costs for temporary housing and/or office expenses for the interim shall be provided in the same amount until peace is restored to the area. When the bishop returns to the episcopal residence and office, payments of established amounts for housing and office support will resume.

II. Miscellaneous Other Matters

A. Office of the Executive Secretary of the Council of Bishops

The Council of Bishops will submit an annual spending plan to GCFA providing for the expenses related to the position of the Executive Secretary and the office located in Washington, D.C. The administrative assistance and other expenses incurred by the Executive Secretary of the Council of Bishops in the performance of the duties of this office will also be included in the spending plan. The spending plan will be subject to the approval of GCFA.

B. Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops

The Council of Bishops will submit an annual spending plan to GCFA to provide for expenses incurred, including but not limited to travel, by the Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops in the performance of the duties of this office. The spending plan is subject to the approval of GCFA.

C. Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relations (OCUIR)

The Council of Bishops will submit an annual spending plan to GCFA providing for the expenses of OCUIR. The spending plan is subject to the approval of GCFA.

III. Funding

A. Changes During Quadrennium

If, in the judgment of GCFA, economic conditions require increasing or decreasing the amounts authorized in this report, GCFA is authorized to make such adjustments.

B. Apportionment for the Episcopal Fund

Both the jurisdictional and central conferences will be apportioned based upon the formulas recommended by GCFA in Report No. 8. GCFA recommends the apportionment for the Episcopal Fund during the 2017-2020 quadrennium be:

EPISCOPAL FUND

	2009-2012	2013-2016	2017-2020	$ Change	% Change
Fixed Charges
Interpretation Resources	$ 44,000	$ -	$ -	$ -	0.0%

Total Fixed Charges	$ 2,214,000	$ 3,000,000	$ 3,039,000	$ 39,000	1.3%
Jurisdictional On-Ratio
Episcopal Fund (1)	$ 92,186,000	$ 84,436,000	$ 85,542,306	$ 1,106,306	1.3%
Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships	$ 5,839,000	$ 5,213,184	$ 5,281,489	$ 68,305	1.3%
Total Jurisdictional On-Ratio	$ 98,025,000	$ 89,649,184	$ 90,823,795	$ 1,174,611	1.3%

(1) These figures exclude support from the Central Conferences. In 2013-2016 a minimum of 10% of salary, housing and office allowances were contributed by the central conferences. A new formulaic approach based upon membership is included in Report 8.

(2) Subsequent to the 2012 General Conference, the General Council on Finance and Administration approved a change in fixed charges for 2013-2026 to $750,000 per year to better reflect the cost of support to the Episcopal Fund. The 2017-2020 apportionment represents a 1.3% increase from the current situation.

Report No. 6

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION FUND

The General Administration Fund (2012 Discipline, ¶ 813) finances general Church activities that are specifically administrative in nature, as contrasted with programmatic, missional, or ecumenical in scope and purpose.

In the 2017-2020 quadrennium, the required apportionments for these General Administration Fund activities will increase by approximately 1.3 percent from the 2013-2016 quadrennium.

Discussion of Specific Budget Items

General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) (¶ 805.6). GCFA reports to and is amenable to the General Conference and is responsible for receiving and distributing general Church funds. In addition, GCFA provides certain administrative services to the general agencies, including general ledger processing and maintenance, cash management, and group insurance plan administration. A more detailed description of GCFA's activities is found in Report No.14.

General Conference (¶¶ 501-511). The apportionments for General Conference fund delegate expenses, meeting operation costs (convention center and equipment rental, publishing, petition tracking software, worship, labor), language services (printed translation of advance materials and spoken interpretation on-site), expenses of the offices of the secretary, business manager, and treasurer of the General Conference, and expenses of the several commissions and committees in support of the event.

The changing global nature of the Church is due in part to the rapidly growing membership in central conferences. The percentage of delegates from central conferences has increased significantly since the start of this millennium. Central conference growth was 16 percent in 2000 and will be 42 percent in 2016. This change in representation has resulted in significant increases to two of the four major General Conference cost drivers:

1. The cost of language services (written translation and interpretation at General Conference) has increased from $380,000 in 2000 to an estimated $1.7 million in 2020.
2. In 2012, the average travel costs for delegates from within the United States was approximately $493 for each delegate, while the average travel cost for delegates from central conferences was approximately $3,000 each. As representation from central conferences grows, so likewise does the total cost of travel for delegates.

The Commission on the General Conference launched a sponsorship program for the 2012 General Conference with the intent of creating an income stream that may permit the repayment of some of the accumulated deficit. This program will continue for the 2016 General Conference. Sponsorship gross income provided in 2012 was approximately $210,000, while the projected gross income for 2016 is $600,000.

General Commission on Archives and History (GCAH) (¶¶ 1701-1712). The purpose of GCAH is to promote and preserve the historical interests of The United Methodist Church and its antecedents. GCAH accomplishes this uniquely administrative and programmatic mission by gathering, preserving, holding title to, and disseminating materials representing the ethos of the denomination.

GCAH's "Ministry of Memory" serves these functions for all levels of the connection. In addition, it serves United Methodist seminary students and professors worldwide in basic preparatory and more highly academic Wesleyan-Methodist studies. It also plays a key role in the continuing development of the African American Methodist Heritage Center and The Latino Oral History Project. It also anticipates increased support for central conference historians and leaders, many beginning basic archival collections of their own.

GCAH also manages a Historic Sites and Heritage Landmarks (¶ 1712) program supervising more than five hundred denominational historic sites and nearly fifty heritage landmarks across the global connection.

The Judicial Council (¶¶ 2601-2612). The Judicial Council is the highest judicial body in The United Methodist Church. It determines the legality and/or constitutionality of actions by agencies, boards, conferences, and officials of the Church. Paragraph 813.3 provides that the expenses of the Judicial Council will be paid from the General Administration Fund, within a budget submitted annually to GCFA for its approval.

Pension and Salary Aid. Funding for salary and pension assistance programs is included in this item. In the 2013-2016 quadrennium, funding for salary aid to the Rio Grande Annual Conference was included. In this quadrennium that funding was not specifically identified due to the merger with the Southwest Texas Annual Conference. The funding that was utilized for Rio Grande salary aid was moved to Contingency Funds for the 2017-2020 qua-drennium. The priority for the funds previously attributed to Rio Grande will be to assist missionary conferences.

The proposed budget for 2017-2020 for these purposes is:

	2009-2012	2013-2016	2017-2020	$ Change	% Change
Oklahoma Indian Missionary Conference	2,844,000
Pension Aid		138,000	139,808	1,808	1.3%
Salary Aid		1,556,000	1,576,382	20,382	1.3%
Rio Grande Annual Conference
Salary Aid	2,844,000	805,000	-	(805,000)	-100.0%
Total		$ 2,499,000	$ 1,716,190	$ (782,810)	-31.3%

Contingency Reserve. This allocation provides funding for unforeseen or emergency situations that fall within the scope of general administration. This reserve has been increased by the amount previously used for the Rio Grande Annual Conference salary aid as well as any receipts to the General Administration Fund from central conference apportionments. Priority of the funds previously used for Rio Grande salary aid will be given to missionary aid. The new funds coming from central conference apportionments will give priority to the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters in its work to develop the Global Book of Discipline for presentation to the 2020 General Conference, including a third meeting during the quadrennium, the new membership composition of the Standing Committee, and the implementation of the comprehensive plan for Africa.

Report No. 7

INTERDENOMINATIONAL COOPERATION FUND

“As part of the church universal, The United Methodist Church believes that the Lord of the church is calling Christians everywhere to strive toward unity; and therefore it will pray, seek, and work for, unity at all levels of church life: through world relationships with other Methodist churches . . . through councils of churches, and through plans of union and covenantal relationships with churches of Methodist or other denominational traditions” (The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 6, amended).

The Interdenominational Cooperation Fund allows The United Methodist Church to partner with Christian sisters and brothers throughout the world to fulfill a shared ecumenical mission. Our relationships with ecumenical partners enable us to witness together while respecting our unique traditions and distinctions and to engage in ministries that foster justice, mercy, and peace in God’s world.

In partnership with other Christian communions, the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund provides operating and associated support for organizations that relate to the ecumenical responsibility of the Council of Bishops. The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) recommends the annual budgeted amounts to the General Conference from recommendations developed in consultation with the Council of Bishops (¶ 814.2).

GCFA, working collaboratively with the Connectional Table (CT), determined that the funding for the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund should remain in the same proportion of total jurisdictional apportionments as approved for the 2013-2016 quadrennium. Therefore, the quadrennial recommendation for 2017-2020 reflects a 1.3 percent increase in funding when compared to the 2013-2016 quadrennium.

Explanation of Items in the Budget

General Council on Finance and Administration. GCFA reports to and is amenable to the General Conference and is responsible for receiving and distributing general Church funds. A portion of the Council’s expenses is charged to the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund as provided in ¶ 805.6a and Report No. 14.

National Councils of Churches/Regional Ecumenical Organizations. This line includes funds to support the work of councils or organizations whose membership is limited to a specific country or geographic region. Among the specific organizations currently receiving support is the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. This council comprises thirty-seven member denominations and communions in the United States, representing 45 million Christians and more than one hundred thousand local congregations.

World Council of Churches/International Ecumenical Organizations. This category includes funds to support the work of councils or organizations whose membership is not limited to a specific country or geographic region. The Interdenominational Cooperation Fund supports the World Council of Churches, founded in 1948. The council includes 345 member communions throughout the world, representing more than 500 million Christians. Funds in this category provide for United Methodist participation in the work and life of the World Council of Churches, with a focus on justice and peace. Funds are also provided for the United Methodist commitment for costs of the World Council of Churches Assembly, including travel and related expenses for Christians from developing nations. The World Council of Churches Assembly meets every six to eight years, with the last meeting held in South Korea in 2013.

Christian World Communions/Methodist Unity. This category includes funds to support the work of ecumenical organizations whose members trace their origins to religious traditions started by John Wesley. One such conciliar partner, dedicated to nurturing unity in the Methodist family, is the World Methodist Council. Established in 1881, the World Methodist Council is a worldwide association of eighty Methodist, Wesleyan, and related Uniting and United Churches, representing more than 80.5 million people in 133 countries. The Interdenominational Cooperation Fund allocation provides for United Methodist participation in the work and life of the Council.

Pan-Methodist Commission. This allocation of funding relates to ongoing ministry on matters of mutual interest between representatives of The United Methodist Church, The African Methodist Episcopal Church, The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, The African Union Methodist Protestant Church, The Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, and The Union American Methodist Episcopal Church. The commission is currently engaged in fulfilling the vision of full communion among its member churches.

Ecumenical/Multilateral Conversations. This line item provides funding for ongoing and proposed meetings with representatives of other denominations for dialogue, including with the Episcopal Church and the Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces).

Ecumenical Representative Travel. To ensure a United Methodist voice and presence in worldwide deliberations and meetings of funded ecumenical bodies, travel expenses for United Methodist representatives named by the Council of Bishops are paid from the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund (§ 814.4). Costs and expenses are paid in accordance with guidelines adopted by GCFA, with appropriate and approved limitations. Covered meetings include those of: the governing board, convening tables, and other units of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.; the central and executive committees of the World Council of Churches, including other structural units and periodic assembly; the executive committee members and at-large delegates of the World Methodist Council; and Churches Uniting in Christ, Christian Churches Together, and the Pan-Methodist Commission. United Methodist participation in concordat relationships and other ecumenical activities of recognized bodies are also covered expenses.

Interreligious Relations. This budget line provides resources for United Methodists to engage more directly with neighbors of other faith communities. The funds will be used to provide information, materials, and support for dialogues locally and regionally, and to support ecumenical programs involving interfaith partners, such as Religions for Peace, USA.

Contingency Reserve. This allocation for the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund provides for unforeseen or emerging issues that fall within the scope of the fund. It is distributed by GCFA in concurrence with recommendations received from the Council of Bishops.

Report No. 8

APPORTIONMENT FORMULAS

The Book of Discipline, 2012, provides that the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) will recommend the formulas by which all apportionments to the annual conferences shall be determined, subject to the approval of the General Conference (§ 806.1c). This report is therefore concerned with how the provisions of the reports dealing with apportioned financial support for the following funds: World Service, Ministerial Education, Black College, Africa University, Episcopal, Interdenominational Cooperation, and General Administration.

Recommendations:

1. GCFA recommends adoption of the following jurisdictional conference apportionment formula:

The recommended formula is:

$$A = E * (P + i)$$

Where:

A represents an annual conference's general Church apportionment

E represents the annual conference's "Net Expenditures"

P represents the "Base Percentage"

i represents the annual conference's "Percentage Adjustment" for economic factors

a. Net Expenditures (E) consists of the total local church expenditures in the annual conference, less (1) current capital expenditures, (2) expenditures on capital debt service, (3) payments toward general Church apportionments, and (4) all other benevolence giving. The net expenditures will be calculated with the most recent year for which complete data is available. All the components are currently reported through local church statistical reports. The actual and estimated net expenditures for the 2017-2020 quadrennium are:

Year of Data	Year of Apportionment	Net Expenditures
2014	2017	$ 4,607,965,184	(Actual)
2015	2018	$ 4,698,288,854	(Estimated)
2016	2019	$ 4,828,304,873	(Estimated)
2017	2020	$ 4,923,016,493	(Estimated)

b. "Base Percentage" (P) consists of a simple percentage set by the General Conference on recommendation of GCFA. When applied to the "Net Expenditures" for all conferences, it will yield the total to be apportioned for all general Church funds. After determining the amount it recommends to the General Conference as the annual total of all apportioned general funds, GCFA recommends the "Base Percentage" for each year of the quadrennium as follows:

Year	Projected Apportionments	Base Percentage
2017	$ 152,749,997	3.3149121%
2018	$ 152,749,997	3.2511836%
2019	$ 152,749,997	3.1636361%
2020	$ 152,750,009	3.1027726%

c. “Percentage Adjustment” (i) is unique to each annual conference. The exact value of the “Percentage Adjustment” for an annual conference will vary during the quadrennium as new economic and statistical reports become available. It consists of the following two factors, which are combined to determine the net “Percentage Adjustment” up or down from the “Base Percentage:”

i. Economic Strength Factor is measured on the basis of per capita income for the counties that comprise the conference’s geographic area. Publicly available data from the United States Department of Commerce is used. In calculating the average per capita income for an annual conference, county-level per capita income will be weighted by the average worship attendance in the United Methodist churches in that county as reported in the Local Church Report to the Annual Conference. Each annual conference’s average per capita income is expressed as a ratio of the United States average. A proportional factor or “slope” is set that limits the size of the adjustment from the first factor to a ± 0.4 percent.

ii. Local Church Costs Factor, which measures the impact of certain local church costs that are at least partly outside of its control, is calculated by adding: (1) local church clergy expenses; (2) local church current operating expenses; and (3) payments toward budgeted annual conference costs (excluding General Conference apportionments). The total of these three cost areas is divided by average attendance at morning worship services to arrive at a cost per attendee. This total cost per attendee is expressed as an index by dividing by the average among all annual conferences. A proportional factor or “slope” is set that limits the size of the adjustment for this factor to a ± 0.5 percent. All figures used in the calculation of this factor are derived from the Local Church Report to the Annual Conference.

2. For the past two quadrennia, contributions to the Episcopal Fund from annual conferences in central conferences have reduced Episcopal Fund distributions for bishops’ compensation, housing, and office allowances. The central conference contributions are shown below:

Year	Episcopal Fund
2009	$ 904,453	(Actual)
2010	$ 902,520	(Actual)
2011	$ 986,568	(Actual)
2012	$ 968,028	(Actual)
2013	$ 923,653	(Actual)
2014	$ 955,826	(Actual)
2015	$ 975,000	(Estimated)
2016	$ 975,000	(Estimated)

Since the 2012 General Conference, GCFA has worked with the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters to establish an equitable approach and formula for central conference apportionments.

GCFA recommends that the apportionment formula for 2017-2020 apply to both the Episcopal Fund and the General Administration Fund, since both of these funds directly support the central conferences.

GCFA recommends adoption of the following central conference apportionment formula for the Episcopal and General Administration Funds:

The recommended formula is:

$$A = (J * M) * i$$

Where:

A represents a central conference annual conference’s General Church Apportionment

J represents the Jurisdictional Apportionments per Professing Member for each of the Episcopal and General Administration Funds

M represents the number of Professing Members in the Central Conference Annual Conference

i represents the central conference’s “Economic Adjustment Factor”

a. “Jurisdictional Apportionments per Professing Member” (J). This factor will be calculated each year based upon the actual apportionments for that year divided by the number of professing members three years prior. For example, 2017 apportionments per professing member would use the actual apportionments for 2017 and the professing members at the end of 2014. The current estimate for this factor in 2017-2020 is shown below:

Episcopal Fund	General Administration Fund	Total

b. “Professing Members” (M) consists of the professing members of each annual conference within the central conferences as reported in the annual statistics sent to GCFA. These statistics should also agree with the data published in the annual conference journals. Membership was chosen as a basis for the apportionment formula because the availability and reliability of the data was better than revenue- or expenditure-based options. The membership used in this calculation will be the membership of the annual conference three years prior to the apportionment year. This is consistent with the membership used in the calculation of “J” above.

c. “Economic Adjustment Factor” (i) is unique to each annual conference within the central conferences. The exact value of the “Economic Adjustment” for a conference will vary during the quadrennium as new economic and statistical reports become available. The factor to be used for the economic adjustment in the annual conferences is each country’s or annual conference’s GDP (Gross Domestic Product) per capita in relation to the U.S., expressed as a percentage. The source used for this data for the current quadrennium will be a credible source as chosen by GCFA, and the most recent data point available at the time of apportionment calculations will be used. In calculating the average GDP for annual conferences in multiple countries, the country GDP data will be weighted by the number of professing members as reported in each country.

Based upon the recommended formula and the assumptions outlined above, the projected apportionments for the 2017-2020 quadrennium are:

Year	Episcopal Fund	General Administration Fund	Total Apportionments
2017	$ 722,929	$ 298,782	$ 1,021,711
2018	$ 722,929	$ 298,782	$ 1,021,711
2019	$ 722,929	$ 298,782	$ 1,021,711
2020	$ 722,929	$ 298,782	$ 1,021,711
Total	$ 2,891,716	$ 1,195,128	$ 4,086,844

3. Using this formula, GCFA will first calculate the total amount to be apportioned to each annual conference for the applicable apportioned general funds. The apportionment for each fund will then be calculated in direct proportion to that fund's approved amount. Each annual conference will therefore continue to receive from GCFA an annual statement showing its apportionments for each applicable general fund. Each annual conference will continue to have the authority to apportion those amounts to its charges or churches by whatever formula or method it determines (§ 613.3).

4. If an annual conference decides to combine general Church apportionments with each other or with conference apportioned funds for apportioning to local churches, the receipts on such combined funds will be allocated in direct proportion to the budgeted amounts for each fund or cause included in the combined fund budget, and amounts so allocated to general Church funds will be remitted to GCFA on a monthly basis.

5. If more than 100 percent of the amount voted by General Conference for jurisdictional apportionments for a general fund is received in any given year, the excess funds will be held in trust by GCFA in an apportionment stabilization fund. All monies placed in such a fund will be considered as fund balances restricted by the General Conference to the fund or line item in which the surplus occurred. They will be held by GCFA until such time as shortfalls in such receipts occur during the same quadrennium, at which time they may be distributed to compensate for the shortfalls. If undistributed funds remain at the end of the quadrennium, due to excess receipts beyond the amounts needed to compensate for shortfalls, GCFA will recommend for action by the next General Conference how any remaining fund balances should be distributed, provided that those recommendations will be consistent with the purposes for which the funds were raised.

6. In adopting this report, the General Conference authorizes GCFA to make such changes in the language and definitions of this report as other General Conference actions or changed circumstances may require, while preserving as much as possible the substance and content of this report.

7. Additional information concerning local church expenditures and economic growth will be collected between the time of this publication and the meeting of the 2016 General Conference. The projected total apportioned funds presented herein represent only a current recommendation to General Conference, and the final total apportioned funds are subject to being determined by General Conference. This additional information and possible changes adopted by General Conference could alter both the projections of net expenditures and the total apportioned funds used to calculate the base percentage for the 2017-2020 quadrennium.

SUNDAYS WITH GENERAL CHURCH OFFERINGS

The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA), in consultation with the Connec-tional Table (CT) and the Council of Bishops, makes recom-mendations to the General Conference regarding any offerings to be received in connection with special days observed on a Church-wide basis. All such recommendations are subject to the approval of the General Conference.

Sundays with General Church Offerings. The Book of Discipline, 2012, designates six special Sundays during which offerings for general Church purposes are to be re-ceived (§§ 824, 262, 263).

1. The following table indicates the total offerings remitted to GCFA from the special Sundays during 2009-2014:

offering shall be a charge against receipts in an amount determined in the manner described in Report No. 11.

2. Receipts from all authorized general Church Spe-cial Sunday offerings will promptly be remitted in full by the local church treasurer to the annual conference treas-urer, who will, within thirty days of receipt, remit the funds in full to the treasurer of GCFA, except where noted differently below. Local churches will report the amount of the offerings in the manner indicated on the Local Church Report to the Annual Conference. In the case of Native American Ministries and Peace with Justice Sun-day offerings, the annual conference treasurer will divide the receipts as specified in the relevant Disciplinary para-graphs.

3. The following table indicates the amounts of the respective offerings that are to be remitted to, and the amounts that are to be retained for use in, the annual con-ference:

Special Sunday Offering	Authorizing Paragraph(s)	% to Remit to GCFA	% to Retain in Annual Conference
Human Relations Day	824.1, 263.1	100 %	0 %
One Great Hour of Sharing	824.2, 263.2	100 %	0 %
United Methodist Student Day	824.3, 263.4	100 %	0 %
World Communion Sunday	824.4, 263.3	100 %	0 %
Peace With Justice Sunday	824.5, 263.5	50 %	50 %
Native American Ministries Sunday	824.6, 263.6	50 %	50 %*

* Should there be no Native American ministries within the annual conference, the annual conference treasurer shall remit this 50 percent to GCFA.

Sundays with Offerings Authorized for Use Within the Annual Conference. The Book of Discipline, 2012, authorizes offerings in connection with four special Sundays for which the offering receipts are to be retained for use within the annual conference. These offerings may be received in accordance with the provisions of the 2012 Discipline:

- Christian Education Sunday (§ 265.1)
- Golden Cross Sunday (§ 265.2)
- Rural Life Sunday (§ 265.3)
- Disability Awareness Sunday (§ 265.4)

Report No. 10

COMMITTEE ON AUDIT AND REVIEW

The Committee on Audit and Review (Committee) of the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) has the principal function of assessing the fiscal stewardship of those agencies and missions being wholly or partly funded by The United Methodist Church. This function is a small part of the general Church's fiduciary duty to effectively and transparently utilize funds entrusted to it by donors, and by the blessings of our God.

The Committee has two primary methods for accomplishing its function.

The first is to evaluate the qualifications, independence, experience, and expertise of an outside auditing firm and engage the very best one available to examine the records, financial statements, and procedures of each Church agency. This audit firm reports all findings resulting from its examination of each agency directly to the Committee every year. The Committee's task is to evaluate the auditor's findings and reports to determine whether there are any opportunities to improve on appropriate fiscal transparency or accountability of each agency.

The second is to employ an internal audit firm to examine areas of particular concern in agency or mission operations, in partnership with the external auditor. While the outside auditor can evaluate an agency's fiscal processes and procedures on an overall scale once a year, the internal audit function is to identify specific areas within an agency for additional focused examination throughout the year and to report opportunities for improvement of the areas examined to the agency and to the Committee.

Awareness of the fiduciary obligations to the general Church and its donors must be continually reinforced by the Committee, as must the importance of the perception and the reality of financial and operational transparency. Identifying opportunities for improving methods of achieving these goals, followed by prompt, effective action, is central to this effort.

Internal Audit

In January 2012, the internal audit function was transitioned from staff employed by GCFA to an external contract service provided by an accounting firm. The firm of Lattimore Black Morgan & Cain, PC (LBMC), was recommended by the Committee and approved by GCFA for a three-year contract covering fiscal years 2012 through 2014. The Internal Audit firm reports to the Committee. This reporting relationship ensures that the Internal Audit function can remain objective and independent while performing audits.

The Internal Audit function is responsible for auditing the general agencies (except for The United Methodist Publishing House and the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits) and other affiliated entities that receive general Church funds. A cornerstone of strong governance, internal auditing bridges the gap between management and the board, assesses the ethical climate and the effectiveness and efficiency of operations, and serves as an organization's safety net for compliance with rules, regulations, and overall best business practices.

The general agency staff involved in internal audit workings during 2012 through 2014 expressed appreciation for the work done by LBMC, for a high degree of professionalism in work being done and for helpful and relevant feedback given to improve fiscal operations at the agencies. At the end of the initial contract, the Committee recommended, and GCFA approved, a new four-year contract to continue with LBMC as the internal audit firm. The new contract will cover fiscal years 2015 through 2018.

External Audit Firm

The certified public accounting firm of Crosslin & Associates performed external audit services for the general agencies for eight years from 2006 through 2013. The treasurers and chief financial officers of the general agencies have expressed gratitude for the quality of work, timeliness of the audits, and the professionalism of the Crosslin staff. The Committee completed a Request for Proposal and received proposals for external audit services beginning with the 2014 fiscal year. The Committee recommended, and GCFA approved, a plan to rotate audit firms and to begin a new contract with the external audit firm Cherry Bekaert. The new contract starts with fiscal year 2014 and ends with fiscal year 2017.

Audit and Review Observations

The overall level of control at the general agencies continues to improve. The Committee would like to point out three areas that continue to need focused attention during internal and external audits by the Committee as well as agency staff.

- Incomplete Operational Documentation—The lack of documented operational procedures continues to weaken the overall level of control at the agencies. This is especially true for those agencies that have lost key employees, either due to retirement or for other reasons. A great deal of institutional and operational knowledge has been lost because a number of key operational processes are not documented. While time is critical and limited for all agency personnel, time is saved overall with effective succession planning and procedure documentation when staff transition does occur.
- Incomplete Financial Documentation—Issues were noted in the external audit work for some agencies regarding adequate documentation for financial asset classification, including endowment, permanently restricted, and board-designated funding. Documentation of asset classification and fund reconciliations will strengthen internal controls and provide more information for board and management decisions in the future. Recommendations were made to help ensure adequate documentation is available moving forward.
- Unsecured Network and Internet Applications—Unsecured network and Internet applications continue to present a significant risk to the general agencies and other business entities. As more and more companies rely on these applications to conduct critical business functions, the risk associated with unsecured applications increases. Both internal and external audit work has been performed to identify key areas of vulnerability and corrective actions have been recommended. This work will continue as new technologies emerge and relevant feedback will be given to increase security in this area.

Episcopal Area Audits

Coordination of the receipt of the episcopal area offices' external audit is being handled by GCFA's Committee on General Agency and Episcopal Matters (GAEM). The Committee's Internal Audit firm works with GAEM by providing reviews of the audits. Any findings/observations noted are reported to both committees.

All offices are now required to have audited financial statements. The option of separate audits or the inclusion of a supplemental schedule in the related annual conference office is acceptable. The Committee is pleased to report that all episcopal office audits were received and reviewed for fiscal year 2013. These include reports from forty-six jurisdictional conference episcopal offices and twenty central conference episcopal offices. Some deficiencies were noted in both internal controls for offices and consistency in information provided in the audit reports. Feedback was provided to the episcopal office staff where deficiencies were noted in order to assist in complete and accurate reporting for fiscal year 2014.

Future Activities

As The United Methodist Church continues to grow both spiritually and globally, the Committee remains committed to leading the church in fiscal accountability and transparency. Several issues have transpired over the last quadrennium that have shown areas where more attention is needed regarding some episcopal office internal controls as well as timing and consistency in financial reporting. The Committee is working with its internal audit firm to review episcopal office audits more thoroughly and to provide relevant and useful feedback on implementing appropriate corrective action plans based on audit findings. The Committee plans to increase work in this area over the next quadrennium and to develop plans for a more proactive stance in assisting in providing accountability and transparency.

Report No. 11

DIRECTIVES FOR THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE GENERAL FUNDS

1. Fixed Charges. Fixed charges in any of the general funds will be paid as expended within the limits of the approved budgets. However, the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) is authorized to adjust the fixed charges amounts in general fund budgets as emergencies, changing conditions, or the responsibilities placed upon the general agencies by the General Conference may require.

2. On-Ratio Allocations. All allocations from the general funds of The United Methodist Church shall be paid on ratio of net receipts after payment of fixed charges.

3. Validity of Claims. GCFA will be authorized to determine the validity of claims in all matters involving the World Service Fund, the Episcopal Fund, the General Administration Fund, the Black College Fund, the Ministerial Education Fund, the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund, the Africa University Fund, World Service Special gifts, the Advance, the Special Sundays offerings, or any other general fund, where these are not specifically set forth or determined by the General Conference.

4. Conformity with Other General Conference Actions. GCFA is granted authority to make such editorial changes in its reports as may be needed to bring them into conformity with the approved general fund budget amounts and totals, and any other applicable actions of the 2016 General Conference.

5. GCFA Expenses. General fund allocations to GCFA fall into two categories, as provided in ¶ 805.6 of the 2012 Discipline: 1) an on-ratio line item in the General Administration Fund budget; and 2) fixed charges in certain other funds for which GCFA incurs significant administrative costs, proportionate to their estimated receipts. The budget of GCFA is presented in its Report No. 14.

6. Travel Expense and Meeting Policy for Special Committees Funded by the General Funds. Any special committee, study group, special commission, or any other special group created by the General Conference and funded by the general funds of The United Methodist Church will be subject to the travel and expense reporting and reimbursement requirements established by GCFA. If the special committee, study group, special commission, or other special group is not directly responsible to a general agency, it will make all meeting and travel arrangements through GCFA.

7. Application of Apportionment Formula. As the apportionment formula is applied during the quadrennium to actual events, the outcome of the calculation may result in a different amount being apportioned than those amounts contained in the published reports. When each annual apportionment is determined, GCFA will calculate the total amount to be apportioned for each of the general funds and to each fund line item, including fixed charges, in direct proportion to the amounts approved in its Reports numbered 1 through 7.

8. Consultants. As part of its oversight function, GCFA will prepare and make available an annual listing of all consulting contracts entered into by agencies and organizations amenable to the Connectional Table. This shall also include the Council of Bishops. This listing will be prepared by March 1 of each year and will include contracts in place during the preceding calendar year. The list will include the name of the individual or corporate entity, address, length and purpose of the contract, and the amount of money paid for the contractor.

9. General Agency Audits. All treasuries receiving general Church funds are required to have an annual audit as provided in ¶ 806.5.

10. Internal Audit Functions. GCFA has the responsibility to establish and conduct the internal auditing functions for all agencies receiving general Church funds (¶ 806.6). All agencies receiving general Church funds are required to comply with fiscal accountability policies and practices established by GCFA. The Committee on Audit and Review will monitor compliance with such policies and practices. If the Committee determines there are any violations it shall proceed in a manner as outlined in ¶ 806.13 and within established policies of the Committee at that time.

11. General Agency Budget Review. As outlined in ¶¶ 806.3, 806.4, 806.7, 806.11, and 806.12, GCFA will review the proposed spending plan and the financial operations for each agency receiving general Church funds. If GCFA determines that an agency is not in compliance with the provisions of these paragraphs, it will proceed within its established policies at that time.

12. Approving Emerging Ministry Opportunities Between Sessions of General Conference. In the interim between quadrennial sessions of the General Conference, potential programs and initiatives of Church-wide consequence may arise in response to unforeseen opportunities for mission and ministry. When these opportunities involve the expenditure of general Church funds, the proposed programs or initiatives shall require the joint approval of GCFA, the Council of Bishops, and CT. When timeliness of action warrants, the executive committees or equivalent of these bodies may act in such matters for the body itself, but only by a three-fourths vote. Such programs and initiatives shall be governed by established policies of the General Conference. A report on any such programs and initiatives will be made by CT to the General Conference at its next quadrennial meeting.

13. General Commission on Communication. The General Commission on Communication (UMCom) serves as the central agency for promoting general Church funds throughout the Church, as provided in ¶ 1806.12.

Promotion is aimed at individual United Methodists and seeks to foster an understanding of how giving of one's financial resources is an integral part of the Christian life. The focus is on shared ministries that change lives. Print, video, and computer-delivered resources help United Methodists see their mission outreach, understand how their diverse ministries make a difference in human lives, and learn how the local church benefits from shared outreach.

Interpretation is aimed at the leadership of annual conferences, districts, and local congregations. It provides specific information about Church funds and encourages leaders to be faithful in remitting funds to conference and general Church benevolent causes. UMCom provides resources in a variety of media to be used by conference leadership, pastors and local church leadership, and staff of other general agencies.

The cost of promotional resources related to a particular fund or group of funds is covered by a fixed-charge line item in the budget of the respective funds. UMCom, following consultation with the general agency responsible for administering the fund, recommends the annual budget of fixed-charge amounts, subject to approval by GCFA. For 2017-2020, the fixed charges line items total $3,105,889, which is a 0.6 percent increase compared to the 2013-2016 quadrennium. In 2017-2020, as in the past, one resource item may interpret or promote several funds. UMCom will be promoting all of the general apportioned funds using the monies provided by the fixed charges for the World Service Fund, as well as with other monies from its share of the World Service Fund. In such cases, UMCom is authorized to allocate costs for such items among the funds included in particular resources.

No promotional funds will be taken from general Advance Special gifts or World Service Special gifts. The cost of promoting these funds is borne entirely by the administering agencies or from other funds approved by the General Conference.

The schedule of amounts authorized for program and benevolence interpretation resources for the 2017-2020 quadrennium are shown in the following tables:

Report No. 12

PAY EQUITY IN THE GENERAL AGENCIES OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Executive Summary

The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 807.12.a, requires the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) to “gather from all general agencies, at such intervals and in such format as it may determine, information regarding salary remuneration and pay equity and the number of agency employees and staff.” Annually, GCFA’s Committee on Personnel Policies and Practices (CPPP), per ¶ 807.12.b, presents recommendations to GCFA on an appropriate salary schedule, based upon the responsibilities of covered personnel. Pay equity is at the core of these recommendations, as a means of ensuring there is no discrimination in the wage-setting system.

Current Situation

Equality in pay is a significant affirmation of our faith and is taken seriously. All agencies of the general Church support the belief of a united pay structure that is fair to all. Today, we follow the structure provided to us from the pay equity study performed in the early 2000s. As a result of that study, great emphasis was placed on supporting racial and ethnic equality.

CPPP has maintained its commitment to an annual review and evaluation process of internal wage structures and practices. During these annual reviews, small incremental adjustments have been made to the salary scale; however, salary levels are significantly lower than comparable job positions in the secular world. An in-depth review of our compensation structure will be conducted during the 2017-2020 quadrennium. Such evaluation will consider both salary and benefit packages.

tion philosophy for general agencies and will recommend a compensation structure based on this philosophy. The compensation philosophy will be established first, in order to provide a guideline for the performance evaluation process to include best practices for all human resources personnel. These practices will reduce opportunities for biases and provide uniformity in job descriptions across agencies. It will also take into consideration the cost of the benefits package as part of the total compensation offering. The compensation philosophy and evaluation processes established will cover all staff at all general agencies receiving general Church funds.

Adopting this recommendation for an overall compensation philosophy statement and evaluation process, and thereafter implementing it, will validate our beliefs of human value and equal worth for all those employed by the agencies of the general Church.

Recommendations

1. That the General Conference reaffirm the Church’s commitment to pay equity.
2. That the General Conference direct each general agency receiving general Church funds to continue to work collaboratively in efforts to gather, analyze, and report on pay equity issues within and across the general Church.
3. That GCFA be directed to obtain from its Committee on Personnel Policies and Practices recommendations relating to overall compensation philosophy and structure that will reach pay equity goals.

REFERENCES FROM PREVIOUS GENERAL CONFERENCES

The 2012 General Conference adopted Petition Number 20371, which caused ¶ 1114.7 of the 2012 Discipline to read as follows:

To call together regularly United Methodist general agency leaders whose programs include the subject matter of stewardship to work toward common language, consistent stewardship theology, and cooperative efforts, in cooperation with the General Council on Finance and Administration.

In fulfillment of this joint responsibility, the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) and the General Board of Discipleship (GBOD) worked jointly to organize a Stewardship Summit in 2013 built around the question: “Where do we concentrate the resources of the denomination to grow the culture of generosity in The United Methodist Church?” It brought together persons across a broad spectrum of the Church—including annual conference treasurers, representatives from United Methodist foundations, individuals from unique ministries across the U.S., an active and a retired bishop, and representatives from five general agencies (including the general secretaries from the hosting agencies)—to share and interact around this question. The group was divided into four diverse work teams, which were asked to brainstorm two questions: (1) “What is working well?” and (2) “What are our ‘growing edges’ that need attention to move the needle in generosity?” They were asked to keep their focus broad enough to cover three large areas of generosity: funding local church ministry; funding connectional ministries; and asset giving, designated gifts, and planned gifts.

The results of these sessions were summarized into four areas of concern:

RESEARCH: Why are funds going to non-UMC causes? How might we learn to adapt and enhance UM funding streams to better adapt to emerging funding patterns of individuals and local churches?

EDUCATE: Support, train, and equip clergy leadership to fully embrace their call as courageous witness to, and examples of, Christian generosity.

EQUIP: Build local church leadership capacity around generosity in the local church to meet the challenge of giving in the twenty-first century, including electronic giving, storytelling, basic fundraising techniques, and support of our United Methodist connection.

WITNESS: Unapologetically embrace financial giving as an essential mark of United Methodist discipleship, including issues that impact personal and social holiness such as generosity, personal financial discipline, economic justice, and the teachings of scripture around money.

The following ideas were proposed as responses to these concerns:

- Presenting apportionments in a way that more resembles an annual fund campaign for the church and less a franchise fee for local United Methodist churches.
- Creating Annual Conference Stewardship Academies that would train clergy and lay leaders in multiple tracks around stewardship and a culture of generosity.
- Adopt language and resources that will move the understanding of stewardship from a “once a year event” to a spiritual discipline of giving for people of faith.
- Develop a pilot program for personal financial management that would help United Methodists move to better management of resources and to higher levels of generosity.

The 2012 General Conference adopted GCFA Report 8 that stated: “GCFA commits to study the implications of implementing an apportionment formula for the support of the general Church funds based upon current income received by the local churches and report its findings and any recommendations to the 2016 General Conference.”

In fulfillment of this responsibility, GCFA formed a special committee comprised of an annual conference treasurer from each jurisdiction in addition to the GCFA members who comprise the GCFA Board’s Connectional Outreach Committee. To assist the special committee with its efforts, GCFA staff prepared analyses and data around formula options and the financial impact on jurisdictions and annual conferences. The information provided included:

- Two income-based formula options:
 - o Option 1 included Line 62 in Table III of the local church report to the annual conference less the amount received from the sale of church assets (line 62e, Table III).
 - o Option 2 included amounts received through pledges and dividends (lines 62a–62d, Table III).
- The impact of each option on the jurisdictions as well as each on each annual conference compared to the current expenditure based formula for 2009-2012 as well as 2013-2016. Both models increased apportionments in the Southeastern and South Central Jurisdictions, and decreased apportionments to the North Central, North Eastern, and Western Conferences.
- Explanations regarding the cause of the shift in apportionments. The main reason for the shift is that deductions allowed in the current expenditures-based model are not taken into consideration in the income-based model.

The special committee agreed that if a change is made to an income-based formula, Option 1 would be the preferred method, since it is very simple and transparent. The members of the special committee also agreed that the current “i” factor used for geographic economic differences should be discontinued with any shift to an income-based formula. However, the committee determined that further analysis and information is necessary before any implementation. It was agreed that during the 2017-2020 quadrennium, GCFA would provide comparative and more in-depth analysis to:

- Evaluate if the income-based model is more equitable
- Evaluate the impact on annual conference apportionments
- Estimate the impact on apportionment collections
- Determine how the base percentage would be set and change over time
- Develop an implementation strategy

It was agreed that this additional time would allow for sufficient conversations and input at annual conferences as well as with the Connectional Table with any potential change not occurring until the 2021-2024 quadrennium.

GENERAL CHURCH SOURCES OF FUNDING TO THE GENERAL COUNCIL ON FINANCE AND ADMINISTRATION

The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) fulfills a wide variety of oversight responsibilities within The United Methodist Church. Spending by GCFA is in support of various processes and activities mandated by The Book of Discipline, 2012, and are entirely administrative in nature. The income for GCFA from general Church funds for the 2017-2020 quadrennium is $26,562,491, representing an increase of $193,491, or 0.7 percent compared to the 2013-2016 quadrennium. The funding comes primarily from the General Administration Fund, the World Service Fund, and the Episcopal Fund, collectively representing 96 percent of the total budget. GCFA's administrative ministries mandated by the 2012 Discipline include:

- 1) Coordinating preparation of the quadrennial budget for the denomination's boards and agencies (§ 806.1);

In addition to the 2012 Discipline mandates, GCFA, in the form of shared services, also performs other administrative functions in support of general agencies and the denomination as a whole. Examples of shared services include:

- 1) Travel and meeting planning services that include online event registration, meeting planning, and travel arrangements;
- 2) Information technology services that include financial accounting software, database creation and maintenance for the denomination, and an online system to track those who are entering the ministry;
- 3) Legal services related to The United Methodist Church trademark and insignia, tax exemption status, and other areas of legal consultation.
- 4) Data services, including a system to eliminate duplicate requests for data from annual conferences, programs allowing electronic submission of data to GCFA from annual conferences, and an online tool providing the general public certain information and statistics about the United Methodist connection.

Report No. 15

INCOME FROM THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES AND THE PERMANENT FUND

The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA), by action of the 1972 General Conference, serves as the Board of Trustees of The United Methodist Church, as the successor to its predecessor bodies. In this capacity, GCFA provides for the management of assets that have been given to The United Methodist Church as part of the Permanent Fund (The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 807.3) or are under the purview of the Board of Trustees for the benefit of specified ministries.

GCFA maintains records of all distributable income received in the name of both the Board of Trustees and the Permanent Fund. The Permanent Fund provides funding for the World Service Fund from its distributable income as affirmed by successive General Conferences. In the four-year period of 2012 to 2015, the Permanent Fund has provided a total of $1,685,378 to the World Service Fund. Thus, the Permanent Fund has continued to help underwrite the mission and outreach of The United Methodist Church.

GCFA recommends that the Permanent Fund distributable income be made a part of the World Service Fund receipts annually for distribution during the 2017-2020 quadrennium.

Report No. 16

REPORT ON GENERAL AGENCIES HEADQUARTERS/STAFF LOCATION

Background and Mandate

Via ¶ 807.6 of the 2012 Discipline, the General Conference has assigned the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) the following responsibility:

To establish general policy governing the ownership, sale, rental, renovation, or purchase of property by a general agency in the United States. [GCFA] shall consider the plans of any general agency proposing to acquire or sell real estate or erect a building or enter into a lease in the continental United States and determine whether the proposed action is in the best interest of The United Methodist Church. On the basis of that determination it shall approve or disapprove all such proposed actions. In the case of such proposed action by a general program agency, it shall solicit and consider the recommendation of the Connectional Table.

Procedure

Paragraph 807.7 requires GCFA “[t]o establish a procedure for making a quadrennial review, initiating proposals and/or responding to proposals by the general agencies regarding the location of headquarters and staff and reporting the same to the General Conference.”

GCFA’s Committee on Fiduciary, Foundation, and Property Matters reviews any proposal and other relevant information, including input from the Connectional Table, then makes a recommendation to GCFA’s Board for its action.

Activity Concerning Headquarters/Staff Relocation

During the 2013-2016 quadrennium, GCFA received two proposals relating to headquarters of general agencies.

The first was a proposal from the General Commission on United Methodist Men to construct a 1,022 sq. ft. addition to its building. The addition added needed storage space for the agency and addressed the safety hazard of an external doorway that opened directly onto an alley. The maximum projected cost of the project was $150,000, with the agency proposing to use a portion of its reserves to cover that cost. GCFA approved the proposal.

The second proposal came from the General Board of Global Ministries (GBGM), which sought approval of a plan to relocate its headquarters from New York City to Atlanta, Georgia. A local church in Atlanta with a large facility had offered its property in exchange for GBGM’s assumption of the remaining $1,900,000 in debt, which was substantially less than the appraised value of the property (approximately $7,000,000) and only slightly more than GBGM's annual rental cost for its current location ($1,650,000). GBGM's proposal made clear that GBGM would honor its current lease, which extends through the end of 2016. In addition to substantial long-term savings on property costs, the proposal outlined how the different cost of living realities between New York City and Atlanta would allow GBGM to be a more attractive employer. GCFA approved the proposal.

Headquarters Property Report

The Headquarters Property Report is summarized in another GCFA Report to General Conference in volume 3 of the Advance Daily Christian Advocate. That report will detail the resources and methodologies used to compile the information contained in the report. Findings relevant to the location, condition, and status of agency properties are presented in that report.

Recommendations

Aside from the relocation of GBGM discussed above, it is GCFA's recommendation that the location of the headquarters buildings and staff of the general agencies of The United Methodist Church connection remain at their current locations for the 2017-2020 quadrennium. This recommendation is contingent upon any actions of the General Conference that may affect agency headquarters locations.

Report No. 17 THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH FOUNDATION

“Taking a new direction to grow the Church”

The United Methodist Church Foundation (Foundation) celebrated its fifteenth year of growth as a ministry of the Church during the past quadrennium. The mission of the Foundation is to create opportunities for growth and vitality throughout the Church. The Foundation asked critical questions to discern how it might engage strategies and tactics being tried in the connection. The Foundation's founding board set direction and policy to continue ongoing ministries to accomplish this mandate through 1) a multifaceted investment program offering common investment funds and specialized portfolios to all general agencies, organizations, and conference foundations (but not to local churches) with a progressive rollout of avoidance screens and shareholder advocacy consistent with the United Methodist Social Principles and 2) a general agency endowment program collaborating with United Methodist agencies and organizations that has now established twenty-two endowment efforts to date for future financial efficacy of ministries of the agencies and organizations benefited.

Trending toward growth through strategic conversations: The United Methodist Church Foundation, being a foundation of and for the general agencies, had the additional challenge of how it can approach seeking a trend of growth in local churches when our voice, ministry, and relationships are at the denominational level. Through strategic conversation, it was determined that the Foundation occupies a relatively unique position with close ties to the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA), all program agencies, bishops, conference foundations, and other organizations throughout the connection. At the same time, other strategies came to the Foundation's attention, such as the Benchmark Strategy Project and Healthy Church Initiative, to name just two very different approaches.

Early conversations have shown great promise as to how these and other strategies or tactics can work in tandem for increased impact in the pews of the U.S. Church. Hosting conversations for strategists has been a priority for the Foundation in the early years of this new ministry. This new area of mission has energized the Foundation, along with its board and staff, as never before.

Endowments: The Foundation has initiated and is growing the twenty-two endowment efforts for the ministries currently served by almost all of the agencies receiving general Church apportioned funds, as well as the Council of Bishops. During the past quadrennium the Foundation has started endowment funds to benefit the United Methodist Committee on Relief, the Society of St. Andrew, DISCIPLE Bible Outreach Ministries, Strength for Service, and the United Methodist Camping and 2012 Retreat Ministry. Endowment efforts that come to the Foundation for its services and administration give testimony to the trust and confidence earned in a short time. Annual distributions are available to fund ministry once a fund has grown to a prescribed amount as agreed by the ministry benefited. More than $1.5 million is in place today to fund future ministry through the endowments that would not have been given without this vital ministry.

Funds Management: The funds management program of the Foundation provides superior investment performance as well as environmental, social, and governance witness. The investment strategy of the Foundation is to emphasize total return from capital appreciation, dividend, and interest income. The primary objective in the investment management for the Foundation's assets is to achieve current income consistent with the preservation of the purchasing power of the investment principal. Over the long-term investment horizon (ten years or more), the goal for investment return is to meet or exceed the return required to fund the strategic programs as defined in the Foundation's mission and vision statements.

The downside capture strategy of the Foundation's funds management program is designed to minimize loss and to maintain value during down market periods. Market conditions during 2013 to the present have served to vindicate the decisions of the Foundation's Funds Management Committee in this regard. The Foundation's board of directors continues to enjoy the collective wisdom and expertise of some of the best minds and resources in the field within our denomination.

Since its beginning, the Foundation has included social screens in its investment policies and applies those screens to further the principles and policies in the United Methodist Social Principles. The Foundation continues to expand its socially responsible investment ministry through portfolio screening and shareholder advocacy. The Foundation has filed or co-filed resolutions with corporations to achieve corporate behavioral change in the areas of board diversity, EEO reporting, reduction of violence in video gaming, greenhouse gas emission reduction and reporting, and the fight against human trafficking. The Foundation has been a primary participant in dialogue sessions with senior management at many major corporations on climate change measures and has negotiated improved commitments to diversity in board policies relating to persons of color and women with many others.

The Foundation continues to give thanks for the opportunity to be a growing participant in a ministry of administration to support vital congregations. Always keeping a primary focus on growth and stewardship in the pews of our local churches, the Foundation seeks to build a strong financial base for future denominational ministries that seek to eradicate poverty, train leaders, vitalize congregations, and pursue health and wholeness of all people worldwide. The Foundation's leadership and board members are poised to increase the dimensions of general Church caretaking and giving in exponential ways.

Report No. 18

UNITED METHODIST INSURANCE CO., INC.

(A non-profit, captive insurance company owned by the General Council on Finance and Administration)

Introduction

Since 1976, the General Conference has required the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) to make available a “churchwide [property and liability] insurance program.” The General Conference revisited the issue of property and liability insurance in 1992, and local church boards of trustees were required to do the following:

[R]eview annually the adequacy of property, liability and crime insurance coverage on church-owned property. . . . The board shall include in its report to the Charge Conference . . . the results of its review and any recommendations it deems necessary. (See ¶ 2533.2, 1992 Book of Discipline.)

Without affordable, widely and consistently available comprehensive property and liability insurance, the assets with which the Church wins disciples to Christ and the gifts of generations of United Methodists given for that purpose are at risk. The journey toward fulfilling the potential of the connection for protecting its own ministries and ministry resources remains important to us today.

After much study, it was determined that a single member captive insurance company could deliver additional savings and flexibility to benefit local churches, annual conferences, and general agencies. This, in turn, would provide new opportunities for growth, making it possible to fulfill the 1976 General Conference vision over time. As a result, GCFA formed United Methodist Insurance Company, Inc. (UMI) in April 2011. The process for seeking regulatory approval to operate UMI as a captive insurance company was complete by August 2011. The company began issuing policies in its own name on October 1, 2012, with the support of top-rated reinsurance companies. In December 2013, UMI merged with its predecessor (UMPACT), bringing together the capital invested in both companies. On January 1, 2014, UMI began retaining some risk, and on January 1, 2015, began retaining significant risk in the program.

UMI, as of the writing of this report, insures approximately 1,800 local churches in forty-two annual conferences in thirty-six different states. With significant sales growth and very high customer retention, UMI has achieved in 2015 the scale required for sustainability. As capital grows, UMI will continue to expand its risk retention and cost-saving programs, providing exceptional coverage at an increasingly competitive price.

Mission

UMI’s sole mission is to protect the property and ministries of The United Methodist Church.

The “business” of UMI is to provide comprehensive insurance coverage with limits sufficient to cover property losses and liability claims in the current litigious environment, and to stabilize (and ultimately reduce) the cost of insurance by growth in church participation and good loss experience over time. As UMI grows, the company’s ability to drive down costs, customize and expand coverage, and insure more difficult exposures increases.

Our ministry includes using surplus generated by the business of providing insurance for the benefit of local churches, annual conferences and general agencies. In addition, our focus is on helping local churches protect resources and the people they seek to serve. For example, UMI actively helps the entire connection by providing access for local churches, conferences and agencies to obtain background checks for clergy and volunteers.

As stewards of the denomination’s financial resources, local church and conference trustees have a duty to focus on the cost of coverage because the purchase of insurance is a “business transaction.” However, as stewards we are also obliged to ensure our churches have coverage limits sufficient to respond in the event of loss and to recognize the importance of denomination-specific resources and training in preventing losses.

Moving Forward

The availability of GCFA-sponsored insurance programs has laid the foundation for a new understanding of insurance as a tool for living out “trust-related stewardship.” We have, in turn, set a new standard for the commercial insurance market. Following are a few examples:

- UMI offers limits and coverages previously unavailable, forcing the commercial insurance market to improve their offerings to match ours.
- UMI has involved several annual conferences and GCFA in establishing minimum levels of insurance required for local church boards of trustees to use in evaluating whether a church had adequate insurance.

- UMI's presence in the property and liability insurance market benefits the entire denomination.

As the number of annual conferences, churches, and agencies choosing UMI for property and liability insurance increases, so will our ability to address the needs identified by General Conference almost forty years ago.

General Board of Pension and Health Benefits Summary of Report One: Overview

Caring for Those Who Serve

The General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) cares for those who serve The United Methodist Church by providing benefits and investment services that honor its mission and principles. The retirement, health and welfare plans and programs we administer and the investments we make help support clergy and church workers during life's transitions, providing benefits when and for as long as they are expected.

Sustainable Investment and Our Fiduciary Role

We use the term “sustainable investment” because it underscores our expectations for the performance of our investment funds, as well as the positive impact that we intend our global investments will have on the environment and on society. GBPHB recognizes the responsibility and the opportunity to protect and promote human rights and the environment because they are affected by many of the companies in which we invest.

We are foremost a “fiduciary.” This means we have a duty to act solely in the best interests of participants and beneficiaries—the active and retired clergy and lay employees of The UMC and its affiliates. The Book of Discipline reflects this responsibility in ¶ 1504, directing GBPHB “to discharge its fiduciary duties . . . solely in the interest of participants and beneficiaries and for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries. . . .”

By providing benefits and investment services in alignment with the principles of The UMC, we continue our stewardship role—a mission that began in 1908—of caring for the servants of the Church in the United States and around the world through Central Conference Pensions.

Among the many accomplishments of the agency during the 2012-2016 quadrennium are 16 listed in this report. We also describe our joint leadership role in the Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force and our subsequent, ongoing work with the General Boards of Global Ministries, Church and Society, and United Methodist Women. In this quadrennium, GBPHB achieved its fundraising goal of $25 million to establish pension payments for the central conferences that need them. As of June 30, 2015, $5.6 million from investment earnings has been disbursed, providing a financial foundation that gives central conferences time to build their own contribution base for future retirees. The program serves more than 2,882 retired ministers and surviving spouses in Africa, Asia, and Europe.

Largest U.S. Denominational Investor

GBPHB manages the country's largest reporting faith-based pension fund—with approximately $21 billion in assets under management—and is among the top 100 pension fund managers in the U.S. Recognition by our peers and those who track and monitor major investors helps confirm we are a leader in the sustainable investment world, taking the right actions to exceed the current obligations we have, as well as taking a long-term perspective to assure those who rely on us will have future support when it is expected.

Wespath Benefits and Investments

July 2016 will bring a change in the name of GBPHB to Wespath Benefits and Investments to better reflect our Wesleyan heritage and the scope of our benefits and investment services, as we look to the future, continuing to care for those who serve The UMC in the U.S. and around the world.

Report One: Overview

Caring for Those Who Serve

The mission of the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) is to care for those who serve by providing benefits and investment services that honor the mission and principles of The United Methodist Church. The retirement, health and welfare plans and programs we administer and the investments we make help support clergy and church workers during life's transitions, providing benefits when and for as long as they are expected.

We are the primary financial institution for long-term savings and retirement support for 92,000 UMC clergy and lay employees: 42,000 active participants; 34,000 clergy, lay employees, surviving spouses, and dependents receiving retirement plan benefits; and 16,000 former participants with account balances.

We administer retirement, health, disability, and death benefit plans and services for clergy and lay employees of general agencies, local churches, and UMC-affiliated institutions. These plans and services help make a difference in the lives of tens of thousands of participants and their families—designed to help serve and support their personal and financial well-being, and aligned with UMC values.

Sustainable Investment and Our Fiduciary Role

We use the term “sustainable investment” to underscore our expectations for the performance of our investment funds, as well as the positive impact that we intend our global investments will have on society. GBPHB recognizes the responsibility and the opportunity to protect and promote human rights and the environment because they are affected by many of the companies in which we invest. The Book of Discipline ¶ 717 directs us to “make a conscious effort to invest in institutions, companies, corporations, or funds whose practices are consistent with the goals outlined in the Social Principles.”

GBPHB is first and foremost a “fiduciary.” This means we have a legal duty to act solely in the best interests of participants and beneficiaries: the active and retired clergy and lay employees of The UMC and its affiliates. The Book of Discipline reflects this responsibility in ¶ 1504, directing GBPHB “to discharge its fiduciary duties . . . solely in the interest of participants and beneficiaries and for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries. . . .” For this reason, we oppose any investment directive that would require us to take imprudent risks that could adversely affect participants and institutional investors.

By providing benefits and investment services in alignment with the principles of The UMC, we continue our stewardship role—a mission that began in 1908—of caring for the servants of the Church in the United States and, today, around the world through Central Conference Pensions.

Largest U.S. Denominational Investor

GBPHB manages the country's largest reporting faith-based pension fund and is among the top 100 pension fund managers in the U.S., with approximately $21 billion in assets under management.

Year (as of December 31)	Assets Under Management (in billions)
2011	$16.8
2012	$18.5
2013	$20.4
2014	$20.9

Investment Performance

GBPHB's funds have consistently produced competitive investment results compared to similar retail and institutional funds offered by the mutual fund industry. Participants and institutional investors benefit from our funds' low expense ratios, services provided by high-quality investment management firms, and access to a broad variety of asset classes. Additional information regarding historical fund performance and rankings compared to the mutual fund universe is available at www.gbophb.org.

In 2011, the agency rebranded its investments division as Wespath Investment Management and began actively offering its funds to United Methodist foundations, agencies, children's homes, senior care facilities, and various other United Methodist-affiliated organizations. During the four years since the launch of Wespath, UM-affiliated organizations have entrusted over $1 billion of investment assets to GBPHB.

Cost of Operations

In accordance with the Book of Discipline, GBPHB does not receive general church funds to support its operating expenses. As a result, our operations are funded solely from investment income and the pass-through to our funds of investment management, bank custody and fund administration expenses related to the various plans.

With commitment to our stewardship responsibility and our obligation as plan fiduciary, we constantly strive to improve operating efficiencies.

Year	Operating Cost ($000,000)	Percent of Assets*
2011	50.6	.61
2012	50.9	.61
2013	52.2	.56
2014	53.3	.59

*Note: Includes investment management and bank custodial fees.

The annual cost from the three components, as a ratio to our average portfolio value, was 58.9 basis points (bps) (0.589%) in 2014; 56.3 bps (0.563%) in 2013; 60.7 bps (0.607%) in 2012; and 60.8 bps (0.608%) in 2011.

2012-2016 Quadrennium Highlights

During the 2012-16 quadrennium, GBPHB introduced new services, implemented changes in others, and began offering additional investment opportunities. Program and services highlights from this quadrennium include the following:

- Achieved $25 million fundraising goal for Central Conference Pension Initiative—now known as Central Conference Pensions.
- Implemented changes to the Clergy Retirement Security Program (CRSP) and the Ministerial Pension Plan (MPP), as mandated by General Conference 2012 legislation. Changes impacted clergy eligibility, contributions, and annuitizations.

- Celebrated the 25th anniversary of the Positive Social Purpose Lending Program—with $1.8 billion in loans for affordable housing, community development, and microfinance made since inception in 1990.

- Prepared to implement agency name change to Wespath, July 2016.

Additional highlights follow.

Central Conference Pensions

Central Conference Pensions (CCP) is the new name for the program administering the original Central Conference Pension Initiative since its $25 million fundraising goal was achieved in the fall of 2013. Donations from individuals, local churches, conferences, and five general agencies were collected in support of this effort, making it possible to transition from fundraising to full-time pension administration, support, and investment.

Through June 30, 2015, 95.3 percent of pledges were realized, and pledges and contributions continue to be received. Over time, the central conferences will grow their separate pension plans with self-sustaining contributions from their churches and active pastors. As of June 30, 2015, $5.6 million from investment earnings has been disbursed, providing a financial foundation that gives central conferences time to build their own contribution base for future retirees. The program serves more than 2,882 retired ministers and surviving spouses in the central conferences in Africa, Asia, and Europe.

Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force

The 2012 General Conference called on GBPHB to explore positive economic and financial investment in Palestine. In response, a delegation from GBPHB and Global Ministries traveled to Israel and Palestine in October 2012 to better understand the dynamics of the region and the impact on Palestinian human rights. A second visit to the region is scheduled for October 2015.

Following their fact-finding mission, the Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force (HRIE TF) was convened by GBPHB, Global Ministries, and other Church and secular organizations “to identify resources, principles and procedures that express our commitment to human rights, taking into account fiduciary responsibility and ministry priorities, consistent with the global mission and ethical standards of The United Methodist Church.”

Over the course of five meetings, the Task Force gathered information about human rights protocols; studied United Methodist teachings and policies related to human rights and investments; discussed case studies on Israel and Palestine, the Democratic Republic of Congo, and Tibet; shared strategies for socially responsible investment; and engaged theologians in conversation and readings related to theology and human rights.

The HRIE TF’s report was shared across The UMC in 2014. Since then, the general secretaries of GBPHB, Global Ministries, UM Women, and Church and Society continue to meet, exploring ways to bring their shared voices together to effect broader change while fulfilling their specific agency missions.

Virgin Pulse Activity Program

Interest and participation in the Virgin Pulse activity program continues to grow across The UMC. As of July 2015, 43 annual conferences participated. Several UMC employer groups, including staff of UMC general agencies and The UMC missionaries through Global Ministries, also participated. Overall, more than 40,000 UMC clergy and lay workers are eligible for this program, which has demonstrated higher activity levels associated with lower health care costs and cost trends in the HealthFlex population. Since the program was adopted in 2009, nearly 16,000 participants have logged 35.7 billion steps—a total of 17.8 million miles—enough to circle the world 718 times or make 37 trips to the moon and back.

Voluntary Transition Program (VTP)

Approved by General Conference 2012, this program (implemented January 1, 2013; sunsets December 31, 2020) provides eligible clergy with a financially supported method for a grace-filled exit from ministry. Since its inception, 22 individuals have benefited from VTP financial and career/outplacement supports.

Responsible Investor International News Service (UK)

GBPHB’s 2014 Sustainable Investment Report was among 16 international investors nominated for transparent and quality investment reporting of 1,200 organizations researched. GBPHB received the 2015 “Committed” recognition as one of the top three organizations recognized.

2015 International Asset Owner Disclosure Project (AODP)

AODP ranked GBPHB and its Wespath Investment Management division #10 of 500 international pension funds. AODP is the world's only independent examination of pension and superannuation funds' management of climate risks and opportunities.

Wespath—a new name for GBPHB

Over the past 108 years, there have been a number of milestones that made this agency what it is . . . and we have reached another. As the scope of our mission evolved, our name evolved with it, expressing the nature of our work—describing our service role and responsibility, as an administrative agency of the Church—and becoming increasingly longer.

Our name has changed five times since 1908 to reflect the changing nature of the agency's responsibilities. Today, we have a very long name, and yet it still does not describe everything we do in service to the Church.

At approximately $21 billion in assets under management, we are the largest denominational investor—and among the top 100 of all U.S. pension funds—but our name does not reflect this important aspect of our work. For that reason, in July 2016 we are changing the name of the agency to Wespath Benefits and Investments.

The new name honors John Wesley, the founder of Methodism and a strong advocate for social justice; it also implies other Wesleyan philosophical tenets: the importance of physical health, stewardship, and caring for God's creation. We have been using the Wespath brand for our Investment Management division since 2011 and now will elevate it as the agency name.

In our new name, Wespath . . .

Wes—recognizes and honors John Wesley.

Path—refers to our goal of providing participants and institutional clients with a path to follow in achieving retirement, health, and investment objectives.

Report Two: Changes in Response to Local Law Changes

Judicial Council Decision 481 states “[o]nly the General Conference has authority to create, establish, revise, amend, terminate or continue . . . the various pension plans of The United Methodist Church.” This decision and Judicial Council Decision 1008 further state that changes in federal or state law may make some changes in plan provisions necessary between sessions of the General Conference. Accordingly, the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) may amend the plans to conform to requirements of secular law. GBPHB has not needed to make any such plan changes during this quadrennium.

Summary of Report Three: Referrals from General Conference 2012

Petition No. 20412, Retiree Health and Connectional Service was referred to the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) for further study of implementation costs and processes, in consultation with annual conference pension boards, to be reported to General Conference 2016.

The primary purpose of this referral was for GBPHB to further study potential financial, administrative, and implementation-related consequences impacting annual conferences, specifically addressing the need for determination/clarity regarding: actuarial/financial consequences to annual conferences (and ultimately the local churches); applicability of the petition to existing and future retirees; implementation/administrative considerations and other unintended/unanticipated consequences.

The results of this research clearly indicate a diminished need for a denominational solution compared with four years ago when the petition was submitted to General Conference 2012. The continuing trend among conferences is to eliminate or greatly reduce retiree health benefits, with significant variability in conference retiree health strategies—ranging from offering no coverage, to offering access to coverage outside the conference but with a stipend (e.g., individual public Medicare supplement market), to offering full coverage (Medicare companion plans through conference). See full response in Report Three.

Petition No. 21071, Aligning UMC Investments with Resolutions on Israel-Palestine requires GBPHB to explore serious peacemaking strategies in Israel and Palestine, including positive economic and financial investment in Palestine.

GBPHB activities in response to this petition included exploration of serious peacemaking strategies in Israel and the Palestinian territories, including positive economic and financial investment in the Palestinian territories. GBPHB responses during the quadrennium include:

- Sending a delegation from GBPHB (General Secretary Barbara Boigegrain and Chief Investment Officer Dave Zellner) and Global Ministries to Israel and the Palestinian territories in October 2012 to better understand the dynamics of the region and the impact on Palestinian human rights;
- Engaging the companies in which we invest to formally recognize and adopt the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (“Ruggie Principles”);
- Implementing a leading-edge investment guideline to help identify companies operating in high-risk areas where human rights violations are prevalent and where exclusion from investment may be merited and prudent;
- Providing details on our website regarding the process of our corporate engagement and/or exclusion of companies that support certain activities in the Palestinian territories;
- Offering a fund with enhanced human-rights criteria;
- Exploring positive economic and financial investment in Palestine; and
- Working with fellow United Methodists in seeking a just and lasting peace in the Middle East through the newly formed Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force (HRIE TF).

See full response in Report Three.

¶ 1506.6 of The Book of Discipline 2012 directs GBPHB to “present a quadrennial report to General Conference concerning the long-term benefit liabilities of the denomination.” Additionally, General Conference 2008 established several annual conference health plan reporting requirements, including retiree medical valuations and funding plans.

Plan liabilities for the Clergy Retirement Security Program (CRSP) and its predecessor plan (Pre-82 Plan) are obligations of the U.S. conferences that sponsor the plans. Subject to certain restrictions, the Pre-82 Plan also makes each conference responsible for setting its own benefit levels for Pre-1982 service. Accordingly, Pre-82 benefit rates and funding levels vary significantly from conference to conference.

Key findings from the 2015 funding plans include:

- To date, there are not sufficient assets to relieve conferences of the ongoing financial responsibilities associated with the Pre-82 Plan.
- The disparity in conferences’ Pre-82 benefit levels is beginning to decline.
- The disparity in conferences’ Pre-82 funding levels is significant.

As of this report, all conferences have contributed the minimum amount required to achieve full funding by December 31, 2021, but several have contributed no more than that minimum. Roughly 60 percent of the conferences (32) had achieved 100 percent funding or more by January 1, 2013. However, most of the remaining 24 conferences with funding below 100 percent continue to increase their benefit levels, which increases their liabilities. Note that even after “full funding” of accrued benefit liabilities is achieved, contributions will likely be required due to market fluctuations and any benefit increases.

Funded status can be volatile because actuarial calculations depend on many assumptions about future events.

All conferences provided the necessary post-retirement medical (PRM) information during the quadrennium, including actuarial assumptions and demographic data, through a comprehensive benefit funding plan (CBFP) tool created by GBPHB. Combined with other related survey instruments facilitated by GBPHB in recent years, conference PRM information serves as the basis for this report/summary on the denomination’s long-term benefit liabilities. The study shows that continued increase in the retiree population has not resulted in a corresponding growth in retiree medical liabilities or benefit obligations (liabilities) paid by the conference. Although the net plan sponsor cost trend appears to be significantly favorable, conferences remain challenged with the overall funding of these liabilities.

Regardless of the financial pressures on the conferences and retirees, at least 75 percent of conferences plan to continue offering some form of retiree medical coverage indefinitely, yet are looking to do so in ways that control and sustain costs for both the conference and the retiree. As conferences shift increased financial responsibility for PRM to the retirees, conferences also are implementing benefit changes and funding methods that give retirees/spouses more plan choices and therefore greater flexibility to control their own costs and align plan coverage with their needs on an ongoing basis.

See full response in Report Three.

Report Three: Referrals from General Conference 2012

Petition No. 20412, Retiree Health and Connectional Service was referred to the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) for further study of implementation costs and processes, in consultation with annual conference pension boards, to be reported to General Conference 2016.

Retiree Health and Connectional Service ("retiree health portability")

The primary purpose of the referral was for the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) to further study this petition's potential financial, administrative, and implementation-related consequences impacting annual conferences. General Conference 2012 saw the need for determination/clarity regarding: actuarial/financial consequences to annual conferences (and ultimately the local churches); applicability of the petition to existing and future retirees; implementation/administrative considerations and other unintended/unanticipated consequences.

In developing a response to this referral, GBPHB undertook various research steps, including identifying an administrative and funding solution. Our research and study also focused on determining the continuing need for such a "retiree health portability" solution as described in the petition. This research included a historical assessment of numbers of clergy with service in multiple conferences and a survey of conferences about their current practices and anticipated future strategies regarding retiree health plan eligibility, coverage, and funding.

The results of this research clearly indicated a diminished need for a denominational solution compared with four years ago when the original petition was submitted to General Conference 2012. The continuing trend among conferences is to eliminate or greatly reduce retiree health benefits, with significant variability in conference retiree health strategies—ranging from offering no coverage, to offering access to coverage outside the conference but with a stipend (e.g., individual public Medicare supplement market), to offering full coverage [Medicare companion plans through the conference; see PRM Benefit Obligations (Liabilities) chart in this Report]. The access to coverage or full coverage options contain even further variations, including sliding scales of cost-sharing, grandfathering provisions, vesting schedules, decreasing coverage, etc.

These trends led to not only a diminished need for a retiree health portability solution, but also the diminished feasibility of being able to introduce a centralized administrative and funding platform for the coordination and "portability" of retiree health eligibility and coverage for clergy who have service in multiple conferences. It is possible that by the time a platform for retiree health portability could be developed, communicated, and implemented, retiree health benefits may be further stratified and reduced to the point that the complexities of the solution and costs to the Connection would outweigh the benefits to the clergy.

In summary, due to the increasing conference-to-conference variation and ongoing reduction in retiree health benefits, GBPHB recommends the 2012 petition on Retiree Health and Connectional Service not be resubmitted. In the absence of such legislation, however, GBPHB does recommend that conferences be intentional in educating clergy considering transfers out of or into the conference about the potential retiree health benefits impact of such transfers, and that conferences be diligent in documentation and communication of retiree health portability policies, in accordance with ¶ 1506.20 of the Book of Discipline.

Petition No. 21071, Aligning UMC Investments with Resolutions on Israel-Palestine requires the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits to explore serious peacemaking strategies in Israel and Palestine, including positive economic and financial investment in Palestine.

Aligning UMC Investments with Resolutions on Israel-Palestine

GBPHB has taken action in response to resolutions on Israel-Palestine adopted by General Conference 2012. Our activities have included engagement with companies on the business risks related to human rights violations and exploration of investments in the Palestinian territories.

In response to the specific steps identified by General Conference 2012, GBPHB is:

1) Engaging the companies in which we invest to formally recognize and adopt the United Nations

Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (also known as the Ruggie Principles).

- The UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights provide the foundation for our human rights engagement activities across the investments we manage:
 - We are actively encouraging the companies that represent our largest holdings to amend or create robust human rights policies to incorporate the UN Guiding Principles.
 - We joined a group of international investors, representing close to $4 trillion in assets under management, in issuing a statement supporting the UN Guiding Principles Reporting Framework. The Framework was released in February 2015 to help corporations report on human rights in line with the UN Guiding Principles.
 - In summer 2015, we joined a new collaborative investor initiative, organized by the Principles for Responsible Investment (PRI). The project focuses on engaging companies in the international extractive industry regarding their implementation of the UN Guiding Principles—which we hope will define best practice and encourage companies in other sectors to do the same.
- We are engaging major companies specifically regarding their operations in Israel and the Palestinian territories, including Caterpillar, Hewlett-Packard (HP), Motorola, Microsoft, and Intel. We continue to probe their human rights policies and inquire how these policies influence business operations and decisions related to marketing and selling products. For companies employing staff in Israel, the Palestinian territories, or both, we seek information on adherence to fair employment practices and ask for verifiable data to support the responses we receive. While our engagement actions support continual improvement, we have seen meaningful progress, including HP's human rights policy referencing the UN Guiding Principles, and Caterpillar elevating "Sustainability" as one of its five corporate core values.

2) Implementing a leading-edge investment guideline to help identify companies operating in high-risk areas where human rights violations are prevalent and where exclusion from investment may be merited.

- We introduced a new human rights guideline that provides direction for our corporate engagement actions and highlights human rights-related risks that could potentially affect the long-term value of investment assets. We are implementing the human rights guideline to help determine, in accordance with GBPHB's fiduciary duty, whether the financial risk of holding identified securities is significant enough to merit exclusion from GBPHB funds. A company's refusal to recognize or adopt the UN Guiding Principles constitutes an important element in determining human-rights related risks.

- Our human rights guideline examines high-risk areas across the globe, including conflict zones and areas where breaches of international law occur. As a result, the guideline could affect certain companies because of their significant involvement in the Palestinian territories. Our analysis of high-risk areas includes research from an independent and objective third-party expert in evaluating human rights risks across a company's entire operations.

3) Providing details on our website regarding the process of our corporate engagement and/or exclusion of companies due to significant human rights-related risks.

- We have a dedicated Human Rights page on the GBPHB website that we update regularly. The page explains how our activities align with the UN Guiding Principles; provides examples of our engagement process and activities; and details the implementation of our human rights investment guideline. www.gbophb.org/humanrights/
- We have additional web pages with links to our Management of Excessive Sustainability Risk Policy and Questions and Answers regarding our human rights investment guideline. This information explains our process for excluding companies due to human rights-related risks.

4) Offering a fund with enhanced human rights criteria.

- We launched the Equity Social Values Plus Fund (ESVPF) in December 2014. The fund was created to provide an investment option with enhanced human rights and environmental criteria primarily based on an index of companies determined by MSCI, a third-party expert.

5) Exploring positive investment in the Palestinian territories.

- We are actively seeking investment opportunities that have a positive impact in the Palestinian territories. Our investments team is consulting with a number of investment firms and evaluating a wide range of possible investment opportunities. In late 2014, two team members traveled to the Palestinian territories to conduct due diligence on investment projects under consideration, and in 2015 team members met with representatives promoting another investment opportunity.

6) Working with fellow United Methodists in seeking a just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

General Conference 2012 called on GBPHB to explore positive economic and financial investment in Palestine. In response, a delegation from GBPHB (General Secretary Barbara Boigegrain and Chief Investment Officer Dave Zellner) and Global Ministries traveled to Israel and the Palestinian territories in October 2012 to better understand the dynamics of the region and the impact on Palestinian human rights.

Following their fact-finding mission, the Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force (HRIE TF) was convened by GBPHB and Global Ministries “to identify resources, principles and procedures that express our commitment to human rights, taking into account fiduciary responsibility and ministry priorities, consistent with the global mission and ethical standards of The United Methodist Church.”

It was a goal of HRIE TF to explore ways in which the Church could address mission and investment considerations where human rights abuses exist.

Bishop Ken Carter (Florida Episcopal Area) chaired the Task Force, and participants included the UMC general boards of Pension and Health Benefits, Global Ministries, Church and Society, and United Methodist Women; the Georgia United Methodist Foundation; and several United Methodist seminaries and conferences. The Carter Center and Boston Common Asset Management LLC, a leading sustainable investment management firm, also were represented on the HRIE TF.

Over the course of five meetings, the Task Force gathered information about human rights protocols; studied United Methodist teachings and policies related to human rights and investments; discussed case studies on Israel and the Palestinian territories, the Democratic Republic of Congo, and Tibet; shared strategies for socially responsible investing; and engaged theologians in conversation and readings related to theology and human rights.

The HRIE TF produced a report that was shared across The UMC in 2014. Since then, the four general secretaries of GBPHB, Global Ministries, UM Women, and Church and Society continue to meet, exploring ways to bring their shared voices together to effect broader change while fulfilling their specific agency missions.

With a follow-up trip with representatives from GBPHB and other UMC agencies scheduled for October 2015, GBPHB follows events in the region closely and is in ongoing dialogue with experts representing a variety of viewpoints.

Paragraph 1506.6 of The Book of Discipline, 2012 directs GBPHB to “present a quadrennial report to General Conference concerning the long-term benefit liabilities of the denomination.”

Quadrennial Report Concerning Long-Term Benefit Liabilities of the Denomination

Annual conferences are required to complete a formal funding plan each year. GBPHB is required to report related findings to each General Conference. All annual conferences have completed funding plans for 2015 and received favorable opinions.

This report focuses on long-term benefit obligations and related benefit funding for the defined benefit components of the Clergy Retirement Security Program (CRSP), which provides pension and retirement benefits for clergy of annual conferences in the United States. Ministerial Pension Plan (MPP) annuities and Pre-1982 Plan benefits are part of these obligations. The report also addresses post-retirement medical benefits currently provided by U.S. annual conferences.

Unlike United Methodist pension and retirement plans outside the U.S., CRSP and its predecessor plans are governed by the General Conference. Plan liabilities are obligations of the U.S. conferences that sponsor the plans.

Composition and size of the clergy workforce are factors in benefit liabilities. The following graph depicts numbers of appointed clergy in the U.S. over 20 years.

U.S. Clergy

Growth in part-time appointments and decline in full-time appointments have affected benefit costs as well as the number of clergy eligible for certain benefits. If recent trends continue (as depicted by the dotted lines), in another 20 years the number of clergy appointed part-time could approach the number appointed full-time.

As the number of clergy serving part-time (primarily part-time local pastors) has grown, plan changes made by recent General Conferences have reduced the number of clergy appointed part-time who are eligible for CRSP. Action of General Conference 2012 removed more than 1,200 clergy in ½-time appointments from continuing to accrue benefits under the plan—about 315 full-time equivalents (FTEs). General Conference 2012 also allowed annual conferences to determine eligibility for other clergy appointed less than full-time. Conference elections further reduced CRSP participation by another 535 FTEs.

Ongoing evaluation of the benefit plans and the clergy workforce is important to keep benefits adequate for the population covered by the plans and costs sustainable for the Church.

Retirement Plan Defined Benefit Liabilities

Denominational defined benefit liabilities include the defined benefit component of CRSP (CRSP-DB), Ministerial Pension Plan (MPP) annuities and benefits of the Pre-1982 Plan. These components of the clergy retirement program provide a lifetime pension for retired clergy, and their spouses and survivors. CRSP-DB and MPP annuities have the same funding levels across all U.S. conferences.

The Pre-82 Plan, discussed below, has a different funding level for each conference. The following table depicts assets, liabilities, and funded ratios on a long-term funding basis for CRSP-DB and MPP annuities as of the 2014 valuation (January 1, 2014 data).

Plan	Assets (Millions)	Liabilities* (Millions)	Funded Ratio
CRSP-DB	$1,274	$1,105	115.3%
MPP Annuities	$3,345	$3,018	110.8%

*Long-term funding basis

The plans are also valued on a market basis. Market liabilities are calculated using an interest rate consistent with the price at which benefit payments would currently trade in an open market. Because current interest rates are lower than long-term rates, market liabilities are higher than long-term funding liabilities, as seen in the following table.

Plan	Assets (Millions)	Liabilities (Millions)	Funded Ratio
CRSP-DB	$1,274	$1,565	81.4%
MPP Annuities	$3,345	$3,594	93.1%

Market basis

The Pre-1982 Plan

(formally, Supplement One to the Clergy Retirement Security Program)

Unlike CRSP and MPP, the Pre-82 Plan did not require conferences to fund benefits as they were earned. General Conference 1980 set December 31, 2021, as the due date for fully funding accrued Pre-82 benefits. Subject to certain minimum requirements, the Pre-82 Plan allows each conference to fund its liabilities as rapidly or as slowly as it chooses. Subject to certain restrictions, the Pre-82 Plan also makes each conference responsible for setting its own benefit levels for Pre-1982 service. Accordingly, Pre-82 benefit rates and funding levels vary significantly from conference to conference, as seen in the following section.

Conference Funding and Benefit Levels

The chart below reflects the January 1, 2013 valuation results¹ and only Pre-82 Plan assets held and protected by the pension trust.

The right-hand side of the graph represents conferences that have achieved 100 percent funding or more. The top half of the chart represents conferences with higher benefit levels. Thus, the upper right quadrant—the most populous—represents conferences with higher benefit levels as well as higher funding levels.

The upper left-hand quadrant represents conferences with higher benefit levels but lower funding levels.

Pre-82 Plan Funded Ratio, 1/1/13 for 2015 Contributions²

(each diamond represents a conference)

1. January 1, 2013 valuation results are for 2015 contributions, and are based on the 2015 PSR benefit level.
 2. Funded ratios as of January 1, 2013 are used to determine contributions.

Funded status can be volatile because actuarial calculations depend on many assumptions about future events. It is quite possible for a conference that has achieved 100 percent funding (or more) to fall back into an underfunded position. Therefore, it is important to maintain a funding plan and reserve even after becoming “fully funded” at that point in time.

A conference’s decision on its Pre-82 benefit level affects the funded status of the entire Pre-82 Plan and changes the financial risk exposure to other conferences. Funding plans, mentioned above, provide a means to better understand the Pre-82 Plan’s financial situation.

Key findings from the 2015 funding plans are summarized below:

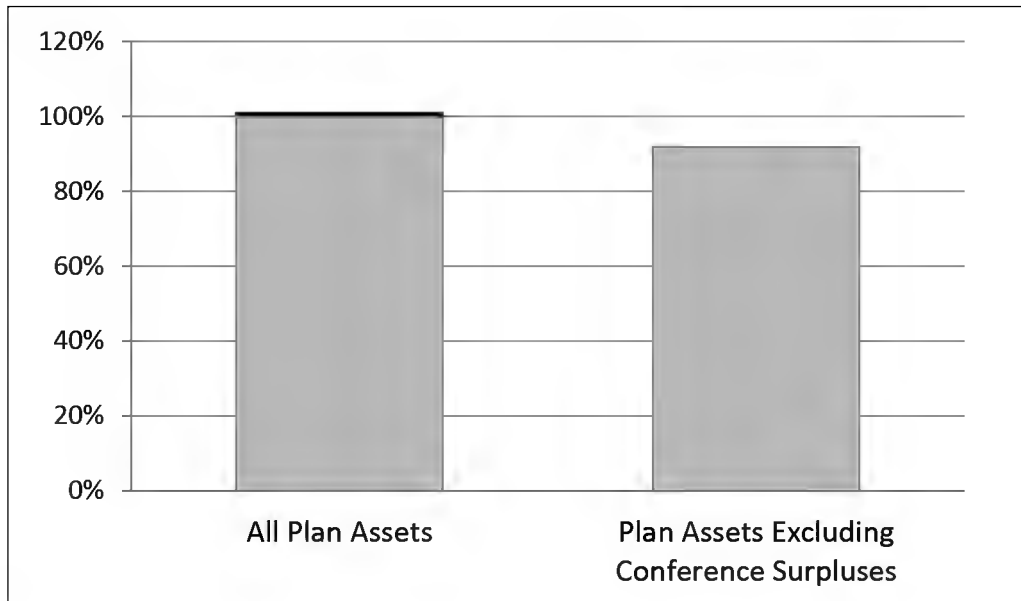

- To date, there are not sufficient assets to relieve conferences of the ongoing financial responsibilities associated with the Pre-82 Plan.
- The disparity among conferences’ Pre-82 benefit levels is beginning to decline.
- The disparity among conferences’ Pre-82 funding levels is significant.

GBPHB has implemented a strategy to improve the sustainability of the clergy benefit programs. In consideration of the Pre-82 Plan’s maturity, we anticipate a decrease in potential volatility for the Pre-82 Plan resulting from future reductions in its equity exposure, coupled with a corresponding decrease in the discount rate used to value the plan’s liabilities. For the 2016 contribution, the discount rate was decreased from 7.00 percent to 6.75 percent.

Overall Pre-82 Plan Funded Status

The chart below shows that in total, if funding surpluses from overfunded conferences are used to satisfy other conferences’ unfunded liabilities, the Pre-82 Plan is more than 100 percent funded. However, under a more practical scenario, assuming individual conferences will retain any surplus they have accumulated, the plan is less than 100 percent funded. Please see Appendix A for conference-specific percentages. The funded status shown is based on conference-specific expectations for future benefit increases, as reported in their funding plans.

Total Pre-82 Plan Funded Ratio for 2015

Please note that funded status is not static and can be volatile. Calculating funded status involves many assumptions about future events, including investment returns, which may or may not be realized.

All funded status analyses in this report are measured assuming that conferences continue to fund the Pre-82

Plan. If the financial support and its associated risk were to be transferred elsewhere (for example, to an insurance carrier), the liabilities would be significantly higher (due to profit loading and current market rates being used, which are at historic lows) and the funded status would be lower.

As of this report, all conferences have contributed the minimum amount required to achieve full funding by December 31, 2021, but several have contributed no more than that minimum. Roughly 60 percent of the conferences (32) had achieved 100 percent funding or more by January 1, 2013. However, most of the remaining 24 conferences³ with funding below 100 percent continue to increase their benefit level, which increases their liabilities. Note that even after “full funding” of accrued benefit liabilities is achieved, contributions will likely be required due to market fluctuations and any benefit increases.

Assets in conference-held accounts for contributions to the Pre-82 Plan are disclosed in their funding plans. The Effective Funded Status graph below shows how funded positions effectively change when considering those assets. Many conferences with unfunded liabilities have enough assets held outside the plan to meet their Pre-82 Plan obligations. However, the vast majority of these assets are available for uses other than Pre-82 funding, e.g., subject to the claims of creditors or potential lawsuits.

3. This number is as of January 1, 2013 for 2015 contributions. As of press-time, our current estimate is that as of January 1, 2015, for 2017 contributions, 16 conferences are still working toward being 100 percent funded.

Benefit Comparison

The disparity among conferences' Pre-82 benefit levels narrowed slightly from 2006 to 2015. Projected benefit levels are also shown, assuming they increase at the rates reported in conferences' 2015 funding plans.

Also varying among conferences is the percentage of a married clergy person's pension benefit that will continue, upon death, to his or her surviving spouse, as shown on the next page. The Pre-82 Plan Funding graph (see next page) is based on most recent valuation results as of January 1, 2013 for determining 2015 contributions and depicts surviving spouse benefits in relation to funded ratio.

Retiree Medical Benefit Obligations in The UMC

In addition to the ¶ 1506.6 provisions for conferences to prepare comprehensive benefit funding plans and GBPHB to provide this report to the General Conference, ¶ 1506.19 calls for conferences to submit valuations of retiree medical liabilities. This report provides an overview of retiree medical liabilities across the annual conferences in the United States, as well as an overview of conferences' approaches to funding these liabilities based on information received from conferences in accordance with ¶ 1506.6 and ¶ 1506.19. All conferences provided the necessary post-retirement medical (PRM) information, including actuarial assumptions and demographic data, through a comprehensive benefit funding plan (CBFP) tool created by the GBPHB. A summary of key actuarial assumptions used in PRM valuations is in Appendix B.

Conference PRM information provided through the CBFP is primarily as of December 31, 2013. Combined with other related survey instruments used by GBPHB in recent years, conference PRM information serves as the basis for this report on the denomination's long-term benefit liabilities.

I. Demographic Shift

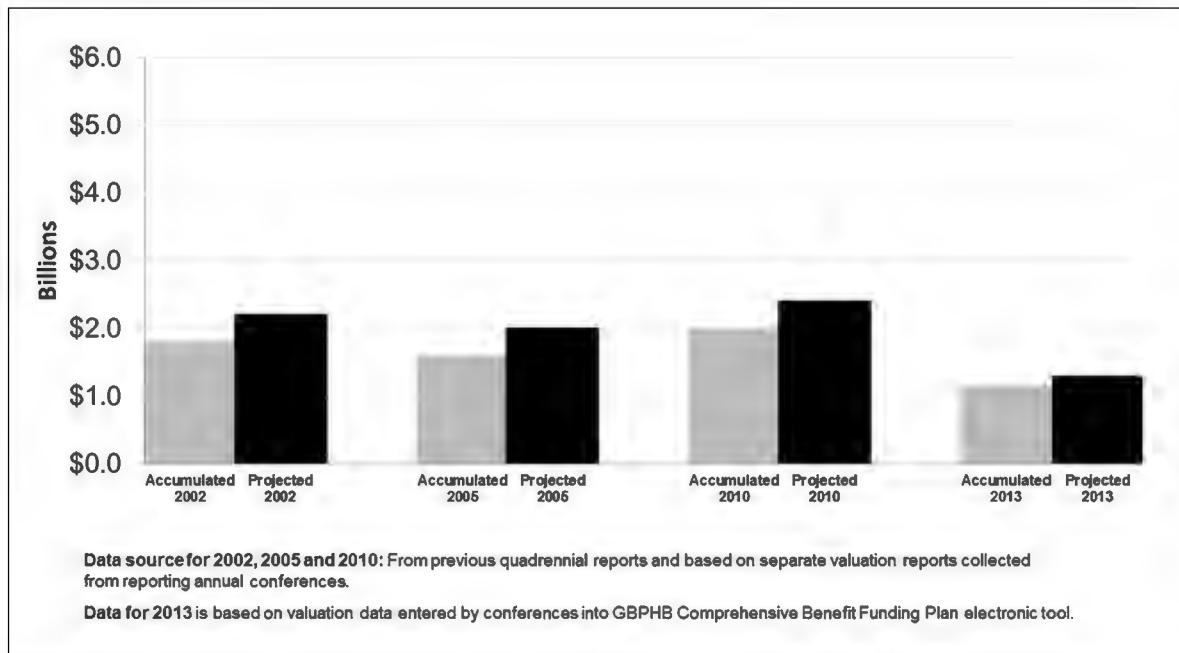

For purposes of retiree medical liabilities, the retired clergy population comprises approximately 56 percent of conferences' total eligible population, compared to approximately 44 percent non-retirees ("actives"). The percentage of retirees has been steadily growing over the years and is expected to continue growing as the clergy population ages.

II. PRM Liabilities (Benefit Obligations) and Funded Status

Despite continued increase in the retiree population, this trend has not resulted in a corresponding growth in conference PRM obligations, primarily because of cost shifting and changes in benefits provided, as described in the next section. As depicted in the chart on the next page, the value of projected liabilities (expected PRM obligations) has actually decreased fairly significantly compared with previous years.

5. Assets in funded ratio only include those contributed to the Pre-82 Plan.

PRM Benefit Obligations (Liabilities)
Net Conference Cost

Although the net conference cost trend appears to be significantly favorable, conferences remain challenged with the funding of these liabilities, with only 30 percent reporting a fully funded status. This highlights the continued need for conferences to complete comprehensive benefit funding plans, as well as to be creative with changes to benefits and cost-sharing strategies that close the funding gap.

III. PRM Benefits and Cost-Sharing Strategies

Given that the retiree population continues to grow, the decreased net plan sponsor cost trend highlighted in Section II has been achieved through significant shifts in conference strategy in the type of PRM benefits and funding offered over the past decade. Evidence of this shift in conference strategy is also reflected in other related survey instruments used by GBPHB.

Total projected liabilities have been increasing fairly significantly over the years, with the conference-paid portion remaining fairly constant and the retiree-paid portion increasing. This shifting of responsibility to retirees is partially in response to financial stressors on the conferences. However, conferences have also become more aware of the increasing financial burden that retirees face and the reality that retirees may also have difficulty absorbing their PRM financial burden.

Regardless of the financial pressures on the conferences and retirees, at least 75 percent of conferences report plans to continue offering some form of retiree medical coverage indefinitely. Conferences are looking to do so in ways to not just control and sustain costs for the conference, but for the retiree as well. As conferences shift increased financial responsibility for PRM to the retirees, conferences also are implementing creative benefit and funding methods that give retirees and spouses more plan choices and therefore greater flexibility to control their own costs and align plan coverage with their needs on an ongoing basis.

To this end, nearly half of U.S. conferences have moved away from offering traditional group Medicare supplement or Advantage plan coverage (typically one or two plan offerings, with funding support provided through traditional group plan premium cost-sharing). Instead, they are offering retirees and spouses access to coverage through the individual Medicare supplement market. This has been a significantly increasing trend over the last quadrennium and is expected to continue. Access to the individual Medicare supplement market varies by conference and includes channels such as the state health insurance plans (SHIP) for retirees, or individual retiree plan market “connector” providers (whose benefit advisors assist retirees and spouses in “navigating” state and local individual retiree plan market options).

Conferences have typically complemented this type of access to PRM with a stipend or contribution to a health reimbursement arrangement that often varies by years of service. This support helps their retirees and spouses purchase plans in the individual Medicare supplement market, usually through a Medicare exchange, such as OneExchange. The combination of this type of access and funding allows for greater flexibility with cost control for both the conference and retiree or spouse. Notably, the individual supplement market typically has more lower-cost plan options compared to a group plan. A smaller conference contribution can purchase more on a dollar-for-dollar coverage basis, without the retiree or spouse forgoing necessary coverage levels. Further, the individual market offers more plan choices than conference-sponsored group coverage, thereby better positioning the retiree or spouse to select a plan most closely aligned with his or her individual needs.

To continue to increase sustainability of retiree medical benefits throughout the denomination, conference funding plans should continue to address potential changes in benefit levels and options, funding approaches, and eligibility criteria.

IV. Key Observations and Conclusions

- Net plan sponsor cost trend (PRM benefit obligations) appears to be significantly favorable from prior years, even amid a growing retiree population.
- Even with favorable net cost trend, conferences remain challenged with the overall funding of their portion of liabilities, with approximately 50 percent overall funded status of PRM benefits and only 30 percent of conferences reporting fully funded status.
- There is a continued need for PRM comprehensive funding plans to be completed, potential adjustments to benefits to occur, cost-sharing levels to change, and funding strategies to be modified in order to close funding gaps for conferences and retirees and to support sustainability of retiree medical benefits throughout the denomination.

Summary of Key Actuarial Assumptions Used in Post-Retirement Medical Valuations

Actuarial assumptions are expectations of future events that will affect the cost of providing benefits in the future. Because actuarial valuations project costs far into the future, the actuary must quantify expectations regarding future events that will affect the cost of providing benefits in the future. Such expectations are called actuarial assumptions.

There are three main categories of actuarial assumptions: economic (financial), medical trend (overall increases in health care costs), and demographic (changes in the plan population due to retirement, death, etc.). The following is a summary of the average key economic and medical trend assumptions used in reporting conferences' PRM valuation information submitted through their respective CBFP (assumptions for respective reported valuation year, primarily as of December 31, 2013).

- Average Discount Rate = 4.35%
- Average Medical Trend Rate = 7.26%
- Average Ultimate Medical Trend Rate = 4.87%
- Expected Return on Assets = 5.99%

The United Methodist Publishing House (UMPH) 2013–2016 Summary Report

“Therefore, go and make disciples . . .” (Matthew 28:19 CEB). All the work of The United Methodist Publishing House is focused on the mission of making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

For 227 years the publishing enterprise has remained completely self-sustaining through sales without the use of any general church funds and over the last fifty years contributed nearly $50 million to support clergy and their dependents’ pensions in the jurisdictional and central conference annual conferences.

UMPH provides a rich variety of products for teaching and learning, scholarship, applied theology and professional ministry, leadership development, Christian living, music and worship, and support for the mission and ministries of congregations. UMPH continues to play a central role in resourcing churches even though declines in worship and Sunday school attendance in UM churches in the United States; changing patterns of usage, decision-making, and purchasing in congregations; and declines in all aspects of the bookselling industry have altered the ecology of its work.

Cumulative sales from continuing operations (excluding discontinued operations of the brick-and-mortar stores beginning in 2013) for the 2012–2015 period were $276,363,000. Cost of goods sold and expenses totaled $276,358,000. Net operating revenue was positive over the four years, and non-operating revenue and investment earnings added $13,736,000. This resulted in a total four-year net revenue of $13,741,000. During this period, $5,629,000 was spent from invested reserves for ministry growth and expansion through research and development activities for new products and services. The balance sheet shows total assets and liabilities of $95,609,000 at the end of the quadrennium.

Though the global financial crisis in 2008–2009 resulted in an asset shortfall for funding future liabilities in the defined benefit pension plan for UMPH staff, carefully implemented activities including changes in our staff structure, the sale of property, gains in investments, and advances in operational efficiencies have enabled UMPH to leverage a strong balance sheet and annual earnings and to be on track to return the plan to 100% funded status by 2018.

Major projects during the quadrennium included publishing Covenant Bible Study; Grow, Proclaim, Serve! children’s curriculum; the Study Bible and Deep Blue Kids Bible, both in the Common English Bible translation; and Deep Blue children’s curriculum. Other significant ventures included ministry resources (Adam Hamilton’s The Way and Not a Silent Night); new books that provide inspiration, modeling, and guidance for Christian living; resources for congregational life; music (The Africana Hymnal); digital textbooks for seminary and college use, and more.

In 2012, UMPH made the carefully researched and timely decision to close its chain of Cokesbury retail stores in the spring of 2013. Years of changing market conditions, rapidly increasing costs of maintaining stores, staff, and inventory along with our customers’ evolving purchasing habits contributed to retail operations financial results that were unwelcome and unsustainable. In the post-brick-and-mortar era, UMPH implemented a retail plan that includes Cokesbury Community Resource Consultants (CRCs) and Resource Consultants (RCs), who provide continued personalized service in places where our stores were located and offer increased attention in some areas where Cokesbury did not have a store presence.

To attract, delight, and make tasks easier for tens of thousands of customers, UMPH made major investments throughout the quadrennium to enhance Cokesbury.com. Improvements include a new search engine, a better browsing experience, a live chat feature, a redesigned checkout function, access to predicted shipping costs and delivery times, a profile and preferences center for a personalized customer experience, and a new look and contemporary design. We continue to work with partners such as Church Publishing, Inc. (the Episcopal Church). Through these and other initiatives, we offer a broad array of quality products and serve more people in more places.

UMPH has invested millions of dollars in digital infrastructure, product development, and marketing as we strive to place UMPH/Abingdon Press/Cokesbury in the forefront of the world of digital publishing and retailing. In an average month, MinistryMatters.com, UMPH’s ecumenical ministry website, receives 200,000 visitors. The Ministry Matters subscription library, a worship planning feature called “This Sunday,” and timely daily articles are helping visitors with their tasks and helping them keep current.

In the summer of 2015, UMPH made the decision to bring the Abingdon Fiction line of books to a close after publication of titles under contract. UMPH introduced the Abingdon Fiction line in fall 2009. Strong sales reached a peak in 2012 but declined over recent years. Factors affecting performance, future prospects, and the ultimate decision to discontinue the line include industry-wide price pressures; deeply discounted books and e-books in the general marketplace; and the closing of many Christian bookstores that previously sold and promoted fiction.

After 57 years at 201 8th Avenue South, UMPH moved in spring 2015 to new headquarters just a few miles north. The new facility is named the John Dickins House in honor of the first Methodist Book Steward in America and is situated on the 20-acre New House Commons campus, which includes 10 acres of Lake Wesley. A state-of-the-art digital infrastructure is a key element in the beautiful 100,000-square-foot office center situated along Lake Wesley with abundant areas for outdoor seating and strolling and attractive and functional team collaboration spaces spread throughout the facility. The UMPH staff gave tremendous evidence of flexibility and care for one another over many months as some demolition work began in the previous location even before the move to New House Commons was complete. The new facility features lakeside views from the JW Café, the Georgia Harkness Library, the W.T. Handy, Jr., Chapel, and the Robert H. Spain multipurpose room.

During the quadrennium we bade farewell to two extraordinary leaders and Abingdon Press authors who partnered with us to help more people in more places come to know and deepen their knowledge of God through Jesus Christ, learn to love God, and choose to serve God and neighbor. Bishop Rueben P. Job and the Reverend Lyle E. Schaller enriched the minds and warmed the hearts of thousands. We celebrate their ministries, their contributions to the life and work of The UMC, and the myriad ways they helped us understand how to live and work with courage, grace, and intentionality as people of faith.

For more than two centuries the publishing house has made huge and sometimes risky changes in ministry models, products, technologies, distribution channels, and budgets to keep pace with and anticipate the shifting needs of churches, leaders, and Christian pilgrims. No matter how frenetic the pace or complex the project, our ultimate objective remains crystal clear. Whether we are planning for a Bible study that will be theologically nuanced and culturally relevant or designing a website that proves to be both intuitive and reliable, we navigate today's obstacles and get ready for tomorrow's required adaptations. Along the way we are surrounded and upheld by a cloud of witnesses, guided by the Holy Spirit, and we stand on the promises of God as we strive to reach more people in more places with quality services and resources that help them come to know and deepen their knowledge of God through Jesus Christ, learn to love God, and choose to serve God and neighbor.

The United Methodist Publishing House (UMPH) 2013–2016

Introduction

A historical timeline that chronicles changes in the Church and in publishing and bookselling over the last quadrennium reveals a remarkable pattern of “creative destruction.” We encounter disruption of once-predictable business patterns, technologies that alter delivery formats, the threat of feisty and determined competitors, and changing behaviors by customers—all of which are picking up speed. And while these challenges can seem daunting, consequential, and upsetting, they are—in the end—simply problems that must and can be understood and resolved.

“Therefore, go and make disciples . . .” (Matthew 28:19 CEB). All the work of The United Methodist Publishing House is focused on making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. The UMPH enterprise is a ministry/business that depends on product appeal, on marketing and selling effectiveness, and on customers who exercise their free will to choose, use, and value our products and services. The environment has long been volatile, with myriad variables in play as our missional imperatives intersect with business realities.

Our mission demands that we demonstrate a fervent desire for continuous discovery and reinvention. We eagerly stretch our necks out (relying on each other to keep our balance) and peer around the bends ahead, expecting to catch a glimpse of the changing landscape. All the while we are praying, seeking to discern, striving to invent, and working to retool so that by God’s good grace we may find the means to reach more people in more places with quality services and resources that help them come to know and deepen their knowledge of God through Jesus Christ, learn to love God, and choose to serve God and neighbor.

UMPH’s decision to close the Cokesbury brick-and-mortar stores in 2013 required enormous amounts of resources to complete and simultaneously helped frame our strategic agenda. Among the consequences were vast improvements in functionality at Cokesbury.com; significant growth in customer purchases through Cokesbury.com; new staff serving as Cokesbury Community Resource Consultants; positive response from UM leaders to the Cokesbury sales exhibits at annual conferences; and an increased number of standing order subscribers for teaching and learning resources. These favorable factors help boost our confidence and shape expectations for the future.

Yet as is most often the case, alongside these are also unfavorable trends, emerging challenges, and unintended consequences, including higher than expected cost-of-goods sold; heightened demand for expensive customer benefits such as bigger discounts and free or low cost shipping; declines in store-dependent product categories; and escalating capabilities and mounting costs of digital technologies.

UMPH is 227 years old and counting. UMPH and its predecessor organizations have been good stewards, faithful to our mission while adapting and reforming over and over again. From filling saddlebags full of books to negotiating multimillion-dollar FedEx contracts, from producing filmstrips for Sunday schools to initiating churchwide distribution of TV satellite dishes and now sophisticated Internet downloads and live-streaming, UMPH has repeatedly upset the status quo in order to seize opportunities and meet the needs of a changing Church in a vibrant world.

The history of the publishing house demonstrates that over two centuries the boards and staff members of the publishing house have made huge and sometimes risky changes in ministry models, products, technologies, distribution channels, and budgets to keep pace with and anticipate the shifting needs of their constituencies.

Paragraph 1613 in The Book of Discipline says:

The objectives of The United Methodist Publishing House shall be: the advancement of the cause of Christianity throughout the world by disseminating religious knowledge and useful literary, scientific, and educational information in the form of books, tracts, multimedia, electronic media, and periodicals; the promotion of Christian education; the implementation of any and all activities properly connected with the publishing, manufacturing in a variety of media, and distribution . . . including the ecumenical outreach of Christianity. . . .

This long-standing assignment to UMPH provides a wonderfully expansive, open-ended, and far-reaching challenge to “go and make disciples of all nations” (Matthew 28:19 CEB).

We are animated by visions of life-changing experiences where people are transformed by the saving grace of Jesus Christ. We anticipate that our ministry partners/customers will be confident that we offer what they want and need for their teaching, serving, spiritual growth, and worship. We pour out our time and talents to assure that we deliver products of outstanding quality, timeliness, affordability, and competitive appeal. We strive to do all we can, in all the ways that we can, for as long as we can so that our work bears witness to the faithfulness, missional commitments, evangelistic zeal, and strong capabilities for good of The United Methodist Church.

We eagerly expect Sunday schools to want to use our materials; watch for keen students who will delight in and tell others about the Common English Study Bible; anticipate an appreciative and growing audience for Covenant Bible Study; predict that small group leaders will turn to Cokesbury for resources such as Not a Silent Night from Adam Hamilton that help them stimulate authentic and world-changing Christian conversations. And we boldly foresee developing, promoting, and delivering products and services people will choose, use, and value!

We recognize the stark reality that overall United Methodist membership and attendance in North America are declining. As a consequence, the natural markets for congregation-based resources that have been the mainstay of UMPH work for decades continue to shrink. Nevertheless, UMPH remains a central player in resourcing our churches and has maintained market share in several categories despite the overriding downward trends in The UMC.

Our charge is to never give up on the hope that propels us to learn more, do better, risk new approaches, and deliver services and products with the highest quality, efficiency, and appeal. And our responsibility is to do that in ways that prove to be winning, practical, adaptive, economically viable, and—most important—fully faithful in a turbulent, highly disrupted, uncertain, and ever-evolving marketplace.

While sales volumes of some important traditional product categories remain stagnant or contract, we continue to introduce new ones. All the while we are humbled to acknowledge that often the relative success of products generated in a highly competitive and segmented marketplace are dwarfed by the loss of much higher margins that came from more robust sales of traditional offerings such as dated curriculum and church supplies—products that have previously been key in covering UMPH's operating costs.

We continue to undertake intense work that helps us increase our capacity to serve the church through digital technologies. UMPH has invested millions of dollars in digital infrastructure, product development, and marketing to situate UMPH/Abingdon Press/Cokesbury in the forefront of the digital world of publishing and retailing for years to come.

Other major ventures during the quadrennium include new curriculum each quarter and Vacation Bible School offerings each year; the expansion of our line of books (in both print and digital formats) that appeal within and beyond The UMC by providing inspiration, modeling, and guidance for Christian living; an emphasis on resources for congregational life (including small-group studies and stewardship resources), digital access to our collection of music for congregational singing and choirs; digital textbooks for seminary and college use; and more. Our agreements with partners such as Church Publishing, Inc. (Episcopal Church) give us a wide variety of products to offer and lead us to new customers to serve.

We vigorously pursue every avenue for accessing more cost-competitive services from vendors, achieving greater internal efficiencies, and fashioning lower cost processes to assure the long-term viability of The UMC's ecumenically focused publishing and retailing ministry. Those efforts have been instrumental in generating a positive bottom-line financial performance for the aggregate of the four years covered in this report, and we continue to pursue mission appropriate revenue growth and additional cost savings with an ever greater sense of urgency.

We are also finding new products to serve existing and new customers. We will bring to the General Conference, jointly with the General Board of Discipleship, legislation approved by the Board of UMPH that will allow for a fresh, up-to-date selection and presentation of core hymnody and worship aids that express and promote UM Wesleyan theology with flexibility to serve The UMC's diversity and will enable The UMC to use cloud technology to periodically curate a much larger collection that can be customized to meet the needs of different contexts.

All of these opportunities and challenges add up to the continuing joy of serving the church through United Methodist publishing and retailing. With prayerful hearts, earnest study and serious reflection, we embrace both what perplexes and delights us as one piece. And we know that we are not depending only on our own wits and abilities. Anticipating and trusting in God's grace, seeking the Spirit's leading, and with confidence about how, working with others, we can make a transforming difference in people's lives and in the world, we pray for God's sustaining help so that we will find the ingenuity and strength to stay the course, eagerly pressing forward.

During the quadrennium we bade farewell to two extraordinary leaders and authors who partnered with us to help more people in more places come to know and deepen their knowledge of God through Jesus Christ, learn to love God, and choose to serve God and neighbor. Bishop Rueben P. Job and the Reverend Lyle E. Schaller enriched the minds and warmed the hearts of thousands. We celebrate their ministries, their contributions to the life and work of The UMC, and the myriad ways they helped us understand how to live and work with courage, grace, and intentionality as people of faith.

More than one thing can be true at the same time. More than one measure is relevant when assessing an enterprise. And more than one set of actions will be employed as we apply what we know while continuing to discern and experiment—taking into account all that we have yet to learn. We will give God thanks when traditional methods continue to deliver results even as we aggressively search for new ways to serve, given the unrelenting march of change in the culture and the Church.

Publishing Ministry

The publishing program of UMPH is designed to provide to The United Methodist Church and the ecumenical community a wide variety of quality services and resources that will help more people in more places know and deepen their knowledge of God through Jesus Christ, learn to love God, and choose to serve God and neighbor. The scope includes varied offerings for teaching and learning, scholarship, applied theology and professional ministry, leadership development, Christian living, music and worship, and support for the mission and ministries of congregations.

Making disciples of Jesus Christ is not only our mantra; it is the core passion and motivation for all that we do. Recognizing and responding to the dreams, challenges, and needs of congregations and their leaders is critical as they are the primary settings for the church's engagement with the world. Assuring the quality, integrity, and relevance of products is not an option but an unconditional requirement. It is essential that we find better and more effective ways to work with local church leaders to conceive, fashion, and deliver life-changing ministry in their settings. Product developers must be increasingly alert and responsive, move at an ever-faster pace, and make greater use of digital technologies as enhancements and as means of delivery.

This work that resources tens of thousands of churches and hundreds of thousands of individuals is fully self-supporting through sales. The tasks include researching customer needs; developing staff skills; identifying and partnering with authors, educators, and other publishers; maintaining the infrastructure for product development; keeping current with digital technology and information systems; and assuming the financial risks associated with production, inventory maintenance, and launch of new products. The work is fully self-supported through sales and is accomplished without the use of any general church funds. Over the last fifty years, UMPH contributed nearly $50 million to support clergy and their dependents' pensions in the jurisdictional and central conference annual conferences.

During the quadrennium hundreds of new products were published under the Abingdon Press imprint in the areas of theology, leadership, biblical studies, small-group studies, ministry resources, Christian living, and Abingdon Fiction. In addition, more than a thousand new Abingdon Press church supplies and new music resources were produced for use in United Methodist churches and beyond. These and other products in print, digital, and video formats were developed and offered through both the multichannel Cokesbury system (call center, Cokesbury Resource Consultants, on-site sales at events, and Cokesbury.com) and through the trade (other retail vendors and Internet sites).

The teaching and learning staff developed and delivered several hundred new and revised curriculum products under the Cokesbury imprint each year for use by all age groups in Sunday school, Vacation Bible School, and other settings.

Official resources, such as the Book of Discipline and the Book of Resolutions, were completed and published under The United Methodist Publishing House imprint following the 2012 General Conference.

All the same, we face the challenge that new product lines are not growing as quickly as mature product lines are declining. We recognize this as a major challenge in terms of both financial sustainability and vibrant contemporary relevance that will continue to require intense attention and innovation.

Bibles, Leadership, and Theology

The publishing team for Bible, Leadership, and Theology advances the love of God and neighbor throughout the world by disseminating Bibles and books about the Bible, theology, and the daily practice of ministry in print and digital formats.

The quadrennium involved a significant emphasis on the Common English Bible (CEB) and on the development of the new Covenant Bible Study. The Deep Blue Kids Bible, a CEB edition, was widely embraced, nominated for national awards, and earned a place on industry best-seller lists. We regularly receive notes from pastors and other teachers and parents telling us that their children are engaged with the Bible as never before. These results led to the Deep Blue Kids Bible serving as the springboard for the newest children's curriculum, Deep Blue.

Covenant, a multiweek comprehensive Bible study from Abingdon Press, centers on our relationships with God, with each other, and with the world. Covenant helps congregations create learning communities where Scripture informs everyday experience. The praying, learning, and sharing build trust in God and others as well as confidence in Scripture as a reliable source of truth and guidance. Covenant provides an exciting opportunity to better understand God's call, God's love, and God's unexpected favor.

Christian Living and Abingdon Fiction

The Christian Living team seeks authors with a clear voice and something important to say as well as qualified, credentialed experts whose knowledge and insight provide the excellence of thought and expression readers expect from Abingdon Press. In categories ranging from personal and spiritual growth to family and relationships, Christian Living titles provide readers with information and encouragement from a Christian perspective.

In the summer of 2015, UMPH made the decision to bring the Abingdon Fiction line of books to a close after publication of titles currently under contract. UMPH introduced the Abingdon Fiction line in fall 2009. Sales reached a peak in 2012 but declined over recent years due to several factors, including industry price pressures; deeply discounted books and e-books in the general marketplace; and the closing of many Christian bookstores that previously sold and promoted fiction.

While Abingdon Fiction received critical acclaim and numerous awards, the line was not adequately self-sustaining. The decision to close the line is part of our ongoing stewardship as we regularly make adjustments in light of the ebb and flow in the publishing environment that requires nimbleness and flexibility in adapting to changing conditions.

Church School Publications/Teaching and Learning

The children's, youth, adult, Vacation Bible School, Korean- and Spanish-language curriculum teams work to support the teaching and learning needs of congregations to help more people in more places come to know and deepen their knowledge of God through Jesus Christ, learn to love God, and choose to serve God and neighbor. This group publishes curriculum and study resources for children, youth, and adults in a variety of settings such as Sunday school, small groups, and fellowship times. The resources are offered in multiple formats including print, video, and download; and in languages including English, Spanish, and Korean.

Research has confirmed that even the most well-trained, highly capable Christian educators are likely to give equal weight to whether a children's learning program is new and different and to the quality of the theological content. They want both. These educators tell us that a theological lesson can be perfectly faithful, coherent, and important—but if it is perceived as boring, they will not be able to reach, teach, and serve the children.

Grow! Proclaim! Serve! children's curriculum was introduced as the centerpiece children's dated teaching and learning resource at the beginning of the quadrennium, and Deep Blue children's curriculum was launched for fall 2015. We delight in being able to share the many stories and expressions of praise from children's ministry leaders about how these children's resources are helping their children come to know and love Jesus.

Outstanding results during the quadrennium include sales of over one million units of the children's curriculum Grow, Proclaim, Serve! and over one million units of the Adult Bible Studies quarterly.

The work of the Teaching and Learning group is specifically outlined in the Book of Discipline in the language about the Curriculum Resources Committee (see paragraphs 1121, 1122, and 1124).

Ministry Resources

The Ministry Resources unit of Abingdon Press serves congregations and their leaders by supporting congregation-wide initiatives, special ministries, and other church events. The purpose is to aid leaders as they plan and implement critical work for the congregation and its mission.

Congregation-wide initiatives include stewardship, prayer, leadership development, church growth, and mission. Special ministries are areas that serve a specific need, such as men's and women's groups. Resources for seasonal church family events for Advent and Lent that involve worship, study, and devotion are also part of the publishing plan.

Ministry resources include tools and materials for pastors, leaders, teachers, families, and individuals. Among these helps are strategic planning aids, plans for worship emphasis, small group study and video for all ages, and resources for individual reading, study, and reflection.

The most widely used ministry resources products during this quadrennium included Adam Hamilton's The Way and Not a Silent Night.

Worship, Music, Official, Congregational

This team supports congregations, primarily in the worship setting. Hundreds of new products are developed annually and vary from lyrics to visually project during worship, to new musical selections from The Africana Hymnal, bulletins for Advent, or a worship planning guide.

Major projects published during the quadrennium include The Book of Discipline, 2012, The Book of Resolutions, 2012, and Guidelines for Leading Your Congregation 2013–2016. The Africana Hymnal, published in 2015, is a digital hymnal that includes music and lyrics, mp3 files, and projection slides. Notable sales include a total of 100,000 copies of The United Methodist Music & Worship Planner over the four-year period and more than three million units of WordAlive!, the weekly church bulletin subscription service.

UMPH and the General Board of Discipleship will bring to the General Conference legislation approved by our board that will allow for a new, relevant, and widely used United Methodist Hymnal, developed with fresh ways to control costs, adjust for unexpected expenses, and permit access to a variety of digital and print formats for ease of use in many settings.

Ministry Matters

Since its launch in 2011, the ecumenical website MinistryMatters.com has grown to 200,000 visitors per month, with a 53%-47% female-to-male ratio and an 89%-11% U.S.-to-international ratio. The most popular aspects of the site are the subscription library; the This Sunday feature; and the magazine, which includes new material each day. Future plans include more podcasts, enlarging the research library, a responsive website (mobile and tablet use has grown from 9% of visits to 48% of visits), and scouting and shaping new writing talent. Challenges facing Ministry Matters include identifying ways to increase revenue related to the site to undergird the costs of providing access and content, providing timely commentary around late-breaking events; and further broadening diversity among the contributors and users.

Retail Ministry

UMPH's retail system, Cokesbury, is a complementary, multichannel selling organization with a cohesive marketing and merchandising strategy. Cokesbury adapts to challenges such as channel migration by customers, declines in institutional purchases of traditional church supplies and furnishings, competitive moves such as free freight and deep discounting, as well as to opportunities such as targeted marketing enabled by sophisticated customer intelligence.

In 2012, UMPH decided to close its chain of Cokesbury retail stores in spring 2013. Years of changing market conditions, rapidly increasing costs of maintaining stores, staff, and inventory along with our customers' evolving purchasing habits contributed to retail operations financial results that were unwelcome and unsustainable. The decision to bolster alternative retail channels gave rise to a number of strategic initiatives.

Most of the regions where stores were located continue to be supported through local, full-time Cokesbury Community Resources Consultants, who meet personally with churches and manage sales at annual conferences and some other events. Churches in each market where stores closed were assigned a team member from the Cokesbury Call Center (phone sales). An intensive coaching system was implemented to ensure that all our Cokesbury customers would be well served.

The Cokesbury Call Center took on heightened importance given customer expectations following the closing of the brick-and-mortar stores. Customer service standards were sustained and improved, the hours of operation were expanded, a fresh training program was launched, and new staff were added to the team.

Major upgrades to Cokesbury.com have continued at a fast and steady pace, with a new shopping cart and checkout experience and a pricing strategy that offers customers the same everyday discounts on books and Bibles regardless of how they choose to shop. This helped increase website traffic and sales and allowed necessary cost savings and efficiencies.

Additional improvements followed to attract, delight, and make tasks easier for tens of thousands of customers. We made major investments throughout the quadrennium to enhance Cokesbury.com with a new search engine, a better browsing experience, a live chat feature, predictable delivery times, a profile and preferences center for a personalized customer experience, and a new look and contemporary design. We remain vigilant as we evaluate, adapt, change, and make continuous improvements.

Increasingly, Cokesbury is seen as the source of products and services for the broad Christian community. Retail agreements with other denominations, along with other strategic partnerships and investments, including arrangements with the curriculum departments of the AME and CME churches, position Cokesbury to strengthen its role as the shopping destination for resources and services for students and scholars, participants and leaders of a wide array of Christian denominations, and all who want to know more about Christian faith and ministry.

Digital Infrastructure and Outreach

Our investment and capabilities in information technology and digital infrastructure continue to grow.

As part of the preparation for UMPH's move to New House Commons, the staff undertook a monumental project to purge unneeded files and to scan and create digital filing systems for many thousands of documents and records. This work helped the staff envision a much less paper-oriented environment in our new location.

At the same time, UMPH embarked on several aspects of a paperless office initiative. We invested in new software to serve as our document management and workflow system, enabling paperless processing for both internal and external customers of invoices, forms, payments, statements, and records. In addition we've developed a new asset management solution that will provide secure storage—as well as search, version control, workflow, and archiving—of all UMPH manuscript, layout, and image assets.

UMPH uses a digital-first publishing workflow that allows for multiple decision points about the most effective publishing platform for each product—from acquisition for use as exclusive content on the UMPH-developed website MinistryMatters.com or as a digital-only version available for an e-reader, to a print-on-demand format or print-first hardcover or paperback book. Intensive business planning helps us understand the potential reach and financial efficacy of each publishing approach and employ a full range of options supported by new technology and digital distribution relationships. To control costs and offer products at lower prices, we have also negotiated favorable contracts with the print-on-demand suppliers as well as with traditional printers and binders.

UMPH (using the trade names of Abingdon Press and Cokesbury) continues to expand our presence on multiple social networking sites, as well as building community within MinistryMatters.com.

Financial Overview

Resolute efforts by UMPH to offer proven and new products, reach and serve more customers, sustain market share in UM churches, grow selected product lines, and control the cost of goods and operating expenses resulted in a positive bottom line in our ongoing core business financial operations for the last four years. This was accomplished despite declines in worship and Sunday school attendance in UM churches in North America; changing patterns in congregations related to purchase of items such as choir robes and pew cushions; stiff competition in pricing for selected congregational resources, furnishings, etc.; and overall declines and dramatic business disruptions in both the religious and secular bookselling industries.

Cumulative sales from continuing operations (excluding discontinued operations of the brick-and-mortar stores beginning in 2013) for the 2012–2015 period were $276,363,000. Cost of goods sold and expenses totaled $276,358,000. Net operating revenue was positive over the four years, and non-operating revenue and investment earnings added $13,736,000. This resulted in a total four-year net revenue of $13,741,000. During this period, $5,629,000 was spent from invested reserves for ministry growth and expansion through research and development activities for new products and services.

The four-year period also included discontinued operations financials related to closing the Cokesbury brick-and-mortar stores. In the discontinued operations there were $17,862,000 in sales and $26,391,000 in related cost-of-goods-sold and expenses. These amounts are not included in the four-year results for continuing operations shown above. The discontinued operations net operating revenue was ($8,529,000), representing a one-time write down against assets to effect the closing of the stores while fulfilling all financial commitments and contracts with outside vendors, landlords, and former Cokesbury store personnel.

The UMPH balance sheet shows total assets and liabilities of $97,344,000 at the beginning of the quadrennium and $95,609,000 at the end, representing a decline of $1,735,000. Included in this change are reductions in accounts receivable and inventory; use of investment reserves to cover Cokesbury brick-and-mortar store closings; defined pension plan funding; capital expenditures including major technology upgrades; research and development; and property, plant, and equipment related to the purchase and improvements at the new headquarters facility. Total liabilities increased by $19,288,000 due to increased pension liability and expanded use of the credit line (an increase of $5,904,000) at the end of the August 2014 to July 2015 fiscal year to handle transition costs for the move to new offices. This extra amount was paid down the first week of the next fiscal year when UMPH closed on the sale of its old headquarters.

Pensions and Conference Claimants

The 2008–2009 world financial crisis resulted in the shortfall of assets and the freezing of the UMPH defined benefits pension plan. Assets have been restored from a low of 68% of the actuarially determined amount needed to cover future liabilities to a current level of 93%. Using proceeds from the sale of property and an aggressive multi-year plan for additional contributions, UMPH expects assets to be at 100% of assets needed to fund long-term liabilities by 2018. Until the assets for the plan are restored and ongoing pension distributions for current staff are guaranteed, UMPH will forgo making further contributions to Conference Claimants but expects to resume them once the past and current staff plans are adequately funded. In addition to payments to the defined benefits plan corpus, annual distributions are made each year to current employees' 403(b) pension accounts.

Personnel

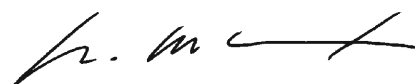

UMPH employs 417 full-time staff members who develop, deliver, and support quality services and products that are sold through the Cokesbury and Abingdon Press telephone and .com order centers, in person, and at sales displays at conferences and events across the United States.

R. Carl Frazier, Jr.
Chair of the Board

After 57 years at 201 8th Ave South, UMPH moved in the spring of 2015 to new headquarters just a few miles north. The new facility is named the John Dickins House in honor of the first Methodist Book Steward in America and is situated on the 20-acre (including 10 acres of lake property) New House Commons campus. A state-of-the-art digital infrastructure is a key element in the beautiful 100,000-square-foot office center situated along Lake Wesley with abundant areas for outdoor seating and strolling and attractive and functional team collaboration spaces spread throughout the facility. The UMPH staff gave tremendous evidence of flexibility and care for one another over many months as some demolition work began in the previous location even before the move to New House Commons was complete. The new facility features lakeside views from the JW Café, the Georgia Harkness Library, the W.T. Handy, Jr., Chapel and the Bishop Robert H. Spain multipurpose room.

Last quadrennium, compensation specialists at PricewaterhouseCoopers evaluated and recommended both the base and incentive pay based on scales of similar positions for comparable publishing, retail, and nonprofit organizations. The research performed by the consultants showed that UMPH's pay fell well below market norms, with all of the executive staff jobs falling under the levels for the 25th percentile (meaning that 75 percent of the same jobs in similar industries and organizations of comparable size and dollar volume pay higher rates than UMPH). The UMPH board annually reviews and approves all executive staff pay and sets the midpoint of pay at the 50th percentile of the market as a benchmark. In accordance with its disciplinary responsibilities, UMPH reports the current salaries of the executive staff: Neil M. Alexander, President and Publisher—$332,933; Audrey Kidd, Chief Revenue and Customer Experience Officer—$265,618; Larry Wallace, Senior Vice President—$230,387; Tammy Gaines, Chief Financial Officer/Treasurer—$183,424; Justin K. Coleman, Chief Ministry Officer—$130,000; Brian K. Milford, Chief Content Officer/Book Editor of The United Methodist Church—$182,000. As with most UMPH personnel, the executive staff members are eligible for incentive compensation as approved by the Board of UMPH annually based on UMPH and individual performance.

For the purpose of empowering the annual conferences to determine their own agenda and structure amend ¶¶ 611-619 dealing with the conference Council on Finance and Administration as follows:

¶ 611. In each annual conference there shall be a conference council on finance and administration, hereinafter called the council, or other structure to provide for the functions of this ministry and maintain the connectional relationships as the conference may direct (¶ 610.1).

¶ 612. The council's purpose, membership, organization, and relationships should the conference choose to create the council, shall be as follows, unless these obligations are assigned by the conference to another conference body, hereinafter known as the designated agency:

1. Purpose—The purpose of the council designated agency shall be to develop, maintain, and administer a comprehensive and coordinated plan of fiscal and administrative policies, procedures, and management services for the annual conference.

2. Membership—a) Each annual conference shall elect, at its session next succeeding the General Conference or jurisdictional conference, a conference council on finance and administration, or other structure to provide for the functions of this ministry. It is recommended that it be composed of not less than five nor more than twenty-one members; it is recommended that there be at least one layperson more than clergy included on the voting membership of the council designated agency. Persons shall be nominated for membership in a manner determined by the conference in accordance with ¶ 610.5. It is recommended that churches of less than two hundred members be represented on the conference council on finance and administration or designated agency. The term of office shall begin with the adjournment of the annual conference session at which they are elected and shall be for a period of four years and until their successors are elected.

b) No member or employee of any conference agency and no employee, trustee, or director of any agency or institution participating in the funds of any conference budget shall be eligible for voting membership on the council designated agency. Any vacancy shall be filled by action of the council designated agency until the next conference session, at which time the annual conference shall fill the vacancy.

c) The following shall be ex officio members of the council designated agency in addition to the number set by the annual conference under ¶ 612.2*a*:

(1) the conference treasurer/director of administrative services, without vote; (2) any members of the General Council on Finance and Administration who reside within the bounds of the conference, with vote unless voting membership is in conflict with another provision of the Book of Discipline, in which case their membership shall be without vote; in either case, they shall not be eligible to serve on an agency receiving funding; (3) the presiding bishop, without vote; (4) a district superintendent chosen by the cabinet, without vote; and (5) the director of connectional ministries or equivalent, or another representative of the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries, without vote.

d) The executive director of the conference or area United Methodist foundation may be included in the membership, without vote.

3. Officers—The council designated agency shall elect from its voting membership a president, a vice president, a secretary, and such other officers as it may deem necessary. Consideration shall be given to inclusiveness (¶¶ 124, 140). The conference treasurer/director of administrative services (¶ 619) shall be the treasurer of the council designated agency. The treasurer/director of administrative services shall not be eligible for voting membership on the council designated agency and shall not be eligible for election to any of those offices that are to be filled by voting members of the council designated agency.

4. No member of the council designated agency shall vote on or take part in deliberations on significant matters directly or indirectly affecting her or his business, income, or employment, or the business, income, or employment of his or her immediate family.

5. Organization—a) Whether the conference chooses to organize the council as provided in ¶ 612 or to assign its functions to another structure as authorized in ¶ 611, the restrictions set forth in ¶ 612.2*b*, .4 shall apply to the members of any conference structure that has responsibility for the following functions:

(1) Preparing annual conference budgets or other funding recommendations.

(2) Nominating the annual conference treasurer/director of administrative services or other officer having the functions described in ¶ 619.

(3) Having authority and supervision over the work of the conference treasurer/director of administrative services.

(4) Having fiscal oversight responsibilities, such as are described in ¶¶ 613.5 through 613.11, and 616-618, for annual conference funds.

b) The council designated agency may establish committees and task forces and define their duties and authority as it deems necessary for fulfilling its purpose and responsibilities.

c) The annual conference may enact bylaws governing meetings, quorum, and other matters of procedure for the council designated agency, or it may authorize the council designated agency to enact such bylaws; in any event, such bylaws shall not be in conflict with the Book of Discipline.

d) If deemed necessary for the fulfillment of its functions and if so authorized by the annual conference, the council designated agency may be incorporated.

6. Amenability—The council designated agency shall be amenable and report directly to the annual conference.

7. Relationships—a) The council designated agency and the principal programming body of the annual conference council on ministries shall cooperate in the development of the conference benevolences budget (¶ 614.3).

b) In the interest of developing and implementing coordinated annual conference policies in the areas of fiscal management and administrative services, the council designated agency shall serve in a liaison role among conference agencies with responsibilities in these areas. It shall be authorized to convene representatives of annual conference administrative and clergy support agencies for the purpose of consulting on matters of mutual concern, such as the coordination of fiscal management, fundraising activities, and administrative services in the annual conference.

¶ 613. Responsibilities—The council or designated agency shall have authority and responsibility to perform the following functions:

13. To establish uniform and equitable policies and practices in the employment and compensation of personnel, in consultation and cooperation with other conference agencies that employ staff, unless the annual conference has designated another agency to carry this responsibility. These policies and practices shall be in accordance with the Social Principles (¶ 162 A, E, F, and I). In addition, the council designated agency shall recommend that the annual conference provide, effective on and after January 1, 2006, 100 percent vested pension benefits of at least three percent of compensation for lay personnel of the annual conference who work at least 1040 hours per year, are at least 21 years of age, and have at least one year of permanent service. The annual conference shall have authority to provide such pension benefits through either a denominational pension program administered by the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits or another pension program administered by another pension provider.

14. To cooperate with the General Council on Finance and Administration ~~and with the General Board of Discipleship in promoting and standardizing the~~ in providing a financial recording and reporting system in for the local churches of the conference.

15. To cooperate with the General Council on Finance and Administration in order to provide leadership, training, and encouragement in the areas of church business administration for individuals and organizations of The United Methodist Church by: (1) distributing information regarding certification as a church business administrator; and (2) listing in the council designated agency's report to the annual conference the names of persons certified as church business administrators by the General Council on Finance and Administration who are employed within the bounds of the annual conference.

16. To make recommendations to the annual conference for its action and determination regarding plans to initiate or cause to be organized a foundation or similar organization for the purpose of securing, conserving, or expending funds for the direct or indirect benefit or support of the annual conference, or of any conference agency, or any of its programs or work. The council designated agency shall have opportunity to make its recommendations regarding such plans if the foundation or similar organization is: (1) proposed to be organized by the annual conference itself, whether acting alone or in concert with other annual conferences; (2) proposed to be organized by any conference council, board, commission, committee, or other agency; (3) to make use of the name United Methodist in its title or solicitation; or (4) proposed for the purpose of soliciting gifts primarily from the United Methodist constituency.

19. To ensure that no annual conference board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of the UMC “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” (¶ 161.F). The council designated agency shall have the right to stop such expenditures. This restriction shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, nor shall it preclude funding for dialogs or educational events where the Church's official position is fairly and equally represented.

¶ 614. Budgets—The council designated agency shall recommend to the annual conference for its action and determination budgets of anticipated income and proposed expenditures for all funds to be apportioned to the churches, charges, or districts.

Prior to each regular session of the annual conference, the council designated agency shall make a diligent and detailed study of the needs of all the conference agencies and causes asking to be included in the budget of any conference fund. The chairperson of each conference agency, or other duly authorized representative, shall have opportunity to represent the claims of that agency before the council designated agency.

1. Clergy Support Budgets—a) It shall be the duty of the council designated agency, unless otherwise provided, to estimate the total amount necessary to furnish a sufficient and equitable support for the district superintendents of the conference, including base compensation, travel, staff, office, and housing. The council designated agency shall report specific recommendations to the annual conference for conference action (¶ 669.4a).

b) The council designated agency shall report to the annual conference at each session the Episcopal Fund apportionment to the annual conference under the methodology approved by the General Conference and shall include in its recommended clergy support budget the amount determined by the treasurer of the General Council on Finance and Administration as necessary to meet this apportionment.

c) Based on recommendations from the episcopal residence committee (¶ 638.4), the council designated agency shall recommend the amount to be raised as the annual conference share of the cost of the bishop's housing.

d) After consultation with the conference board of pensions, the council designated agency shall report to the annual conference the amounts computed by that agency as necessary to meet the needs for pensions and benefit programs of the conference. Such amounts need not be derived solely from apportionments.

2. Administration Budget—a) The council designated agency shall recommend to the annual conference estimates of the amounts needed for administrative expenses of the conference, including its own expenses and those of the conference treasurer's office. It shall consult with the conference agencies and officers to be included in the administrative budget regarding the estimated budgets of their expenses and base its conference administration budget recommendations on information thus received.

3. Conference Benevolences Budget—a) In preparing the conference benevolences budget, the council designated agency, working together with the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries or alternative structure as provided in ¶ 614.3b, shall make diligent effort to secure full information regarding all conference benevolence and service causes that none may be neglected, jeopardized, or excluded. Basing its judgment of needs upon the information secured, the council designated agency shall recommend to the annual conference for its action and determination the total amount to be apportioned for the conference benevolences budget. After receiving the recommendations of the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries or alternative structure, the council designated agency shall also recommend the amount or the percentage of the total of the conference benevolences budget that shall be allocated to each cause included in the said budget. Such recommendations should reflect agreement with the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries or alternative structure on program agency allocations as specified below.

b) The council on finance and administration designated agency and the principal programming body of the annual conference council on ministries shall work together to establish and follow a procedure that shall preserve the following principles:

(1) It is the responsibility of the council on finance and administration designated agency to establish the total amount to be recommended to the annual conference as the conference benevolences budget and, within that amount, the total sum to be recommended for distribution among the conference program agencies. It is likewise the responsibility of the council designated agency to study the budget requests for any agencies or causes to be included in the conference benevolences budget other than the conference program agencies, including the requests of the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries, and to give the chairpersons or other authorized representatives of such agencies and causes opportunity to represent their claims before the council designated agency.

(2) It is the responsibility of the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries to study the budget requests of the conference program agencies and to recommend to the designated agency conference council on finance and administration amounts to be allocated from the conference benevolences budget to each such agency, within the total established by the designated agency conference council on finance and administration.

(3) It is the responsibility of the designated agency conference council on finance and administration to present the conference benevolences budget recommendations to the annual conference. The recommended allocations to conference program agencies should reflect agreement between the council designated agency and the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries or alternative structure.

c) The term conference benevolences shall include those conference allocations and expenditures directly associated with the program, mission, and benevolent causes of annual conference program agencies and institutions. Annual conference program agencies and institutions shall be defined as those agencies with responsibilities parallel to those of the program-related general agencies (§ 703) and institutions whose work is within the field of responsibility of one or more of those agencies. Administrative expenses that are directly related to the program, mission, and benevolent causes of conference program agencies, including the expenses of the principal programming body of the conference council on ministries or alternative structure, may also be included in the conference benevolences budget. The term conference benevolences shall not include allocations and expenditures for other conference agencies and officers whose work is primarily administrative. It shall likewise not include annual conference clergy support funds as set forth in §§ 620-628, allocations and expenditures of conference agencies responsible for administering clergy support funds, or apportionments made to the annual conference by the general or jurisdictional conferences.

d) The council designated agency, on receiving from the treasurer of the General Council on Finance and Administration a statement of the amount apportioned that annual conference for World Service, may recommend that the conference combine the total World Service apportionment, without reduction for the quadrennium, and the approved conference benevolences budget (§ 614.3a). If combined the sum of these two amounts shall be known as World Service and Conference Benevolences, and the combined budget thus established shall include a statement of the percentage for World Service and the percentage for conference benevolences.60 (See also § 619.1a(2).)

4. Other Apportioned Causes—The council designated agency shall include in its budget recommendations specific amounts recommended for all other funds properly apportioned to the annual conference for the support of duly authorized general or other connectional funds. The budget recommendations shall likewise include any other amounts to be apportioned to the districts, charges, or churches by the annual conference for conference or district causes of any kind.

5. Special Appeals—a) No annual conference agency or interest, including any related agency or institution such as a school, college, university, hospital, home, housing project, or other service institution, shall make a special conference-wide appeal to the local churches for funds without the approval of the annual conference upon recommendation of the council designated agency, except in case of an extreme emergency, when such approval may be given by a two-thirds vote of the district superintendents and of the council designated agency, acting jointly. Neither shall special conference-wide appeals to local churches for funds be made by such boards, interests, agencies, or institutions that are not related to the annual conference in which the appeal is to be made, unless approval for such an appeal is granted by the annual conference upon recommendation of the council designated agency. The annual conference approvals specified in this paragraph shall not be required for special churchwide financial appeals that have been approved under the provisions of § 819, for solicitations that have been approved under the provisions of § 812.3, or for any other general fund promotion or appeal authorized by the General Conference or approved and conducted under other provisions of the Book of Discipline.

b) When application is made to the council designated agency for the privilege of a special conference-wide financial appeal, whether by special collections, campaigns, or otherwise, the council designated agency shall investigate the application and its possible relation to other obligations of the conference and in the light of the facts make recommendations to the conference for its action and determination. If application for privilege of a special appeal is made directly to the conference, the application shall be referred to the council designated agency before final action is taken.

c) The council designated agency may include in its budget recommendations to the annual conference amounts to be considered as goals for special appeals or other nonapportioned causes.

6. The council designated agency shall make its budget recommendations to the annual conference in a format based on guidelines suggested by the General Council on Finance and Administration.

§ 615. Apportionments—When a change to the apportionment formula or method is proposed, the council designated agency should provide for a study of the proposed change's effects. After its study, which may include resources supplied by the General Council on Finance and Administration, the council designated agency shall recommend such formula or method to the annual conference for its action and determination which shall include the approved budgeted amounts for clergy support, administration, World Service, Conference Benevolences, and other apportioned causes (§ 614.1-4), the sum of which shall be apportioned to the districts, churches, or charges of the conference.⁶¹

1. The council designated agency, on receiving from the General Council on Finance and Administration a statement of the amount or methodology for apportioning to the annual conference for the several general funds authorized by the General Conference, shall apportion the same to the several districts, charges, or churches by whatever method the conference may direct. The council designated agency shall make every effort for the full payment of these apportionments as a part of the Church's shared financial covenant.

2. The council designated agency shall recommend to the annual conference for its action and determination whether the apportionments referred to in this paragraph shall be made by the council designated agency to the districts only or to the churches or charges of the conference. If the apportionments are made to the districts only, then the distribution to the churches or charges of each district shall be made as provided in ¶ 614.3. The conference may order that the district superintendents make the entire distribution to all the churches or charges of the conference.

4. If the council designated agency recommends an apportioned fund that combines two or more general apportioned funds with one another, or that combines one or more general apportioned funds with funds other than a general apportioned fund, the recommendation and consequent annual conference actions shall include: (1) a statement of the amount of each general fund apportionment included in the combined fund, and (2) a statement of the percentage of the combined fund total that corresponds to each general fund apportionment.

¶ 616. Depository—The council designated agency shall be responsible for designating a depository or depositories for conference funds.

¶ 617. Auditing—The council designated agency shall have the following authority and responsibility with respect to the auditing of the financial records of the conference and its agencies:

1. To have the accounts of the conference treasurer for the preceding fiscal year audited by a certified public accountant within 150 days after the close of the conference fiscal year and to receive, review, and report such audit to the annual conference.

As a part of the audit, the accountant shall confer with the presiding bishop of the annual conference and the president of the council designated agency.

3. To require and review at least annually, in such detail as it may direct, compiled or audited reports of all funds received or administered by districts or district agencies, including funds held or administered by treasurers or officers other than the conference treasurer. Based on its review of such audits, the council designated agency may make such recommendations to the annual conference as it deems appropriate.

4. The council designated agency may establish an audit review committee to review all of the reports and audits required by ¶ 617.1, .2. If the council designated agency chooses to establish such a committee, at least half of its members should be persons who are not members of the council designated agency and who are chosen for their expertise in areas related to the work of the committee. Consideration shall be given to inclusiveness (¶¶ 124, 140) in the selection of persons to serve on the committee.

¶ 618. Bonding—The council designated agency shall have the following authority and responsibility with respect to the bonding of conference and conference agency officers and staff whose responsibilities include the custody or handling of conference funds or other negotiable assets:

1. The council designated agency shall provide for the fidelity bonding of the conference treasurer and other staff under its authority and supervision in amounts it judges to be adequate.

2. In the case of those agencies, institutions, and organizations for which the conference treasurer does not serve as treasurer, the council designated agency shall have authority to require fidelity bonding of their treasurers in such amounts as it deems adequate and to withhold payment of the allocation of any such agency, institution, or organization until evidence of the required bonding has been submitted.

3. The council designated agency may provide, or require any conference agency to provide, directors' and officers' liability insurance in amounts it judges to be adequate.

4. The council designated agency shall require compliance with the policies established as provided by this paragraph and shall report annually to the annual conference on such compliance.

¶ 619. Conference Treasurer/Director of Administrative Services—Each annual conference, on nomination of its designated agency council on finance and administration, shall at the first session of the conference after the quadrennial session of the General Conference or jurisdictional conference, or at such other times as a vacancy exists, elect a conference treasurer or conference treasurer/director of administrative services. The treasurer or treasurer/director shall serve for the quadrennium or until a successor shall be elected and qualify.

If a vacancy should occur during the quadrennium, the council designated agency shall fill the vacancy until the next session of the annual conference. After consultation with the bishop in charge, the council designated agency may remove the treasurer or treasurer/director from office for cause and fill the vacancy until the next session of the conference. The treasurer/director shall be directly amenable to the council designated agency. The treasurer/director may sit with the council designated agency and its committees at all sessions and have the privilege of voice but not vote.

1. As conference treasurer, this officer shall have the following functions:

a) The conference treasurer . . .

(b) Whether apportioned separately or as one combined fund, the treasurer shall, from the share received for conference benevolences, credit monthly the accounts of the several agencies or causes included in the conference benevolences budget or make monthly remittances to the treasurers of such agencies or causes according to the rightful share and proportion of each (§ 614.3a) or according to a payment schedule approved by the designated agency conference council on finance and administration, which shall provide that the total allocated to each agency or cause during the year shall be equal to the rightful share and proportion of each.

c) The treasurer shall prepare at regular intervals such financial statements and reports as may be required for the bishop in charge, the district superintendents, the annual conference, the council designated agency, the agencies served by the conference central treasury and its officers, and the treasurer of the General Council on Finance and Administration.

(1) The treasurer shall make each month a full report of all general funds handled to the treasurer of the General Council on Finance and Administration and to the presiding bishop of the conference.

(2) The treasurer shall prepare annually a report of all receipts, disbursements, and balances of all funds under his or her direction, which report shall be printed in the conference journal.

d) The treasurer may be authorized by the council designated agency to invest funds in accordance with policies and procedures established by the council designated agency (§ 613.5). A listing of securities held shall be printed annually in the conference journal.

e) The treasurer shall provide counsel and guidance to local church business administrators, treasurers, financial secretaries, and committees on finance in the development of standardized financial recording and reporting systems (§ 613.13).

f) The treasurer shall perform such other staff services as the council designated agency may require in the fulfillment of its functions and responsibilities.

2. As director of administrative services, this officer may have responsibility in one or more of the following areas: office management; payroll and personnel services; the provision of administrative services for annual conference officers and agencies; property management with respect to property owned by the annual conference or any of its agencies; and such other responsibilities of an administrative nature as the council designated agency, by mutual agreement with other annual conference officers and agencies, may assign. The director shall be present when the cabinet considers matters relating to conference administration related to the conference treasurer's or conference treasurer/director of administrative services' responsibilities, and other matters as the cabinet and director may determine. The director shall not be present during the cabinet discussions on matters related to the making of appointments.

3. The council designated agency shall have authority and supervision over the director and shall, after consultation with those annual conference officers and agencies for whom the director might be expected to perform services, define his or her specific responsibilities and do regular evaluation.

Standards for Program Staff

Amend ¶ 613.13 by delineating subsections a and b and adding a new section c, as follows:

¶ 613.13—(a) To establish uniform and equitable policies and practices in the employment and compensation of personnel, in consultation and cooperation with other conference agencies that employ staff, unless the annual conference has designated another agency to carry this responsibility. These policies and practices shall be in accordance with the Social Principles (§ 162 A, E, F, and I).

(b) In addition, the council shall recommend that the annual conference provide, effective on and after January 1, 2006, 100 percent vested pension benefits of at least three percent of compensation for lay personnel of the annual conference who work at least 1,040 hours per year, are at least 21 years of age, and have at least one year of permanent service. The annual conference shall have authority to provide such pension benefits through either a denominational pension program administered by the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits or another pension program administered by another pension provider.

(c) All program personnel employed by the annual conference shall be members of a Christian church who model themselves after the servanthood of Jesus Christ. They shall be persons of genuine Christian character who love the Church and are committed to the oneness of the body of Christ, are morally disciplined, and shall uphold the doctrinal and ethical standards of The United Methodist Church as set forth in the Doctrinal Standards (§ 104) and Social Principles, and are competent to serve in the capacity for which they are employed.

Rationale:

Program staff of annual conferences should have the same qualifications as those serving general church agencies. Staff should exhibit United Methodist values, setting a leadership example for members of the annual conference and reinforcing the common doctrinal and ethical standards of United Methodism.

Clarify AC Funding Restrictions

Amend ¶ 613.19 as follows:

9. To ensure that no annual conference board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church “not to reject or condemn lesbian or gay members and friends” (§ 161F); and to ensure that no United Methodist funds shall be given to any local church that identifies or labels itself as an unofficial body or movement (see Judicial Council Decision 871). The Council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. It shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, nor shall it preclude funding for dialogs or educational events where the Church’s official position is fairly and equally presented.

Rationale:

Judicial Council decision 871 (1999) prohibits local churches from identifying or labeling themselves as an unofficial body or movement, declaring such action “divisive” and potentially placing churches “in conflict with the Discipline and doctrines of The United Methodist Church.” Such churches should not receive funding until they cease such identification.

Use of Church Funds

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 613.19 as follows:

To ensure that no annual conference board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall ~~give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The UMC “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” (§ 161.F).~~ ~~The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. This restriction shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, nor shall it preclude funding for dialogs or educational events where the Church’s official position is fairly and equally represented.~~

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church continues to work toward inclusion and justice for all God’s people and Holy conferencing and education are valued processes for United Methodists to discuss current issues before the membership. Language in conflict with the life and teachings of Jesus Christ to be eliminated.

This restriction shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, nor shall it preclude funding for dialogs or educational events where the Church’s official position is fairly and equally represented.

Rationale:

Since 1972 The United Methodist Church has taken increasingly firmer positions opposing non-heterosexual orientations. Attempting to make all United Methodists conform to traditional beliefs has not decreased denominational tension. This petition attempts to relocate decision making to the appropriate level, i.e. annual conference and pastors, and ease tension.

Conference Apportionment Formula

¶ 615. Apportionments—When a change to the apportionment formula or method is proposed, the council should provide for a study of the proposed change’s effects. After its study, which may include resources supplied by the General Council on Finance and Administration, the council shall recommend such formula or method to the annual conference for its action and determination which shall include the approved budgeted amounts for clergy support, administration, World Service, Conference Benevolences, and other apportioned causes (§ 614.1-4), the sum of which shall be apportioned to the districts, churches, or charges of the conference.⁶¹ The amount apportioned to each local church for general church and conference apportionments shall not exceed ten percent (10%) of the church’s income for operations, ministries, and local-church based mission projects.

Rationale:

This makes the local church the focus of ministry to accomplish the task of making disciples. The historic and biblical concept of tithing is a level of giving forward from a church budget that would be easily explained to and accepted by the average church member. Such a cap would . . .

Rationale:

The burden of high apportionments, often exceeding 15 to 20 percent of a local church’s budget, hampers the ability of the local church to make disciples and engage in effective local ministry. Having a cap on apportionments forces the prioritization of budgeting decisions. Such a cap would not preclude appeals to local churches . . .

Remove Restriction on Conference Treasurer Attending Cabinet Meetings

Amend ¶ 619.2 as follows:

As director of administrative services, this office may have responsibility in one or more of the following areas: office management; payroll and personnel services; the provision of administrative services for annual conference officers and agencies; property management with respect to property owned by the annual conference or any of its agencies; and such other responsibilities of an administrative nature as the council, by mutual agreement with other annual conference officers and agencies, may assign. The director shall be present when the cabinet considers matters relating to conference administration related to the conference treasurer’s or conference treasurer/director of administrative services’ responsibilities, and other matters as the cabinet and director may determine. ~~The director shall not be present during the~~ Cabinet discussion on matters related to the making of appointments may include the director of administrative services, conference treasurer, conference benefits officer, or similar officers as the bishop may invite, when their expertise would assist the cabinet, such as when a particular appointment has benefits ramifications.

Rationale:

In many annual conferences, the treasurer is also the conference benefits officer. Occasionally, there are pension and benefits implications of a particular appointment, or a related disability matter. This restriction makes such consultations cumbersome, and serves no practical purpose.

Base Compensation Definition

Amend ¶ 623 as follows:

¶ 623. Base Compensation—The several charge conferences shall determine the pastors’ base compensation according to the provisions of ¶ 247.13. “Base Compensation” shall be defined in “Guidelines: A Resource for the Conference Commission on Equitable Compensation” prepared by The National Association of Commissions on Equitable Compensation (NACEC) and made available by the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) either in print or on the GCFA website.

Rationale:

This revision is intended to help provide a consistent understanding for “base compensation” so that CECs, annual conferences, and charge conferences can act accordingly with regard to setting and supporting minimum base compensation. Currently, the “Guidelines” state: “BASE COMPENSATION: That portion of a pastor’s compensation which is paid directly to . . .

If it becomes apparent that a church or charge will be unable to so provide the base compensation, support, and benefits approved adopted by the charge conference, the church or charge SPRC chair, finance chair, or treasurer, shall immediately notify, both in writing and verbally, the pastor, district superintendent, and congregation. This communication shall indicate all avenues explored to meet the salary base compensation, support, and benefits, including requesting consideration for a short-term emergency subsidy grant from the Equitable Compensation Fund (¶ 625.7). If it becomes necessary to modify reduce a pastor’s compensation, it shall occur at the end of the conference appointment year.

Rationale:

“Full compensation” is inaccurate and “salary” is ambiguous. By definition, “benefits” and “ministerial support” (accountable reimbursements for travel, continuing education, etc.) are not “compensation.” Judicial Council Decision 1122 states: “A health insurance premium paid by a local church is not a compensation amount, but rather is a benefit provided by . . .

¶ 625.9 The Equitable Compensation Fund, secured as described in .7, shall be used to provide each pastor who receives less than the minimum base compensation with an additional amount sufficient to make the base compensation approved by the pastoral charge plus the supplemental aid or income from other sources equal to the minimum base compensation approved by the conference. An annual conference may set a maximum amount to be used in attaining such minimum base compensation in any given case, and it may set its own policy regarding the number of years for which a pastoral charge is eligible to receive equitable base compensation funds, provided that no member in good standing who is appointed to a pastoral charge is denied the minimum base compensation (¶ 342).⁷³ When the grant from the Equitable Compensation Fund expires under the annual conference policy, to ensure that no pastor in good standing is denied the minimum base compensation, the church, district, or conference shall use funds other than equitable compensation to supplement the pastor's minimum base compensation.

Rationale:

To protect ECF from long-term use by church/charge and to encourage remedies such as change in charge lines or appointment of pastor with lower minimum base compensation. If these remedies are not pursued, funding to meet minimum base compensation must come from other sources.

Joint Committee Membership

Replace the opening paragraph of ¶ 652 with the following:

Each annual conference shall establish a procedure by which it will manage clergy medical leave. The annual conference may establish a joint committee on clergy medical leave. If the annual conference establishes such a committee, it shall be composed of two representatives each from the Board of Ordained Ministry and the conference board of pensions, and one active or retired minister with one or more disabilities named by the conference Committee on Disabilities, or—if there is no conference Committee on Disabilities—then by the bishop, all of whom shall be elected either annually or the beginning of each quadrennium, and when a vacancy occurs. Further, a district superintendent shall be appointed from time to time to the committee by the bishop to represent the cabinet. Unless and until other members are elected, the chairperson and registrar of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the chairperson and secretary of the conference Board of Pensions, and the chairperson of the conference Disability Committee or others designated by them, shall be authorized to represent their respective boards and the disability committee in organizing itself either annually or at the beginning of each quadrennium by the election of a chairperson and a secretary. If the annual conference does not establish a joint committee, the annual conference's established policy and process for managing nonetheless should involve the Board of Ordained Ministry, the conference Board of Pensions, the conference Committee on Disabilities and, representation from the cabinet.

Rationale:

Each annual conference is required to establish a procedure for clergy medical leave, an active or retired ordained person with a disability must not be an optional, but a required, part of the decision making body to ensure a fair and just course of action.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. If any matter involves the president or general secretary of GCFA or the applicable agency, the committee shall determine other reporting avenues within GCFA or the applicable agency, as appropriate. The committee shall report its findings to the annual next meeting of the council.

The recommended formula will not exceed ten percent (10%) of an annual conference's income from the apportioned funds received from the local churches.

Rationale:

With some annual conferences attempting to reduce the financial demands on the local church by reducing their apportionment formulas, this amendment seeks to protect the annual conference from being subject to a disproportionate amount of money (as much as 30% or more for some conferences) required by the General Conference . . .

Clarify GCFA Funding Restrictions

Amend ¶ 806.9 as follows:

9. It shall be responsible for ensuring that no board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church “not to reject or condemn lesbian or gay members and friends.” (¶ 161F). It shall likewise ensure that no United Methodist funds shall be given to any local church that identifies or labels itself as an unofficial body or movement (see Judicial Council Decision 871). The Council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. It shall not limit the Church's ministry in response to the HIV epidemic.

Rationale:

Judicial Council decision 871 (1999) prohibits local churches from identifying or labeling themselves as an unofficial body or movement, declaring such action “divisive” and potentially placing churches “in conflict with the Discipline and doctrines of The United Methodist Church.” Such churches should not receive funding until they cease such identification.

Scope of Authority

Amend ¶ 806.9 as follows:

It shall be responsible for ensuring that no general board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” (¶ 161F). Its responsibility shall not extend to any board, agency, committee, commission, or council of any jurisdiction, annual conference, or charge conference. The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. It shall not limit the Church's ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, and in no event shall require actions in contradiction or violation of law.

Rationale:

This makes it clear that GCFA's authority under this paragraph is limited to general boards, agencies, committees, commissions, and councils.

Continue Funding the Church's Response to the HIV Epidemic

Committee on Audit and Review

Amend ¶ 806.13 as follows:

The Committee on Audit and Review (¶ 805.4a), on behalf of the council, shall monitor the compliance of treasuries receiving general Church funds (see ¶ 810.2) with the fiscal accountability policies and practices set forth in ¶ 806, the personnel policies and procedures set forth in ¶ 807.12, ~~and~~ the general policies set forth in ¶¶ 811.1-3, .6, 819, and all applicable accounting standards and practices. ~~The committee also will review with~~ recommendations made by the independent and/or internal auditors under ¶ 805.4a, with respect to matters of possible or potential financial impropriety or violation of policies and procedures. The council shall have authority to implement actions which it may approve based on recommendations from the committee.

a) If the committee finds that there are violations of such policies, practices, or recommendations, it ~~shall first notify the president and general secretary of the agency~~

~~involved and the president and general secretary of the General Council on Finance and Administration of its findings, in writing. It shall also request from the agency, within a specified timeline, a written response to the committee's findings, with the written response to include additional information and/or proposed corrective action. It shall also notify the president and general secretary of the council of its findings, in writing.~~

b) After receiving the ~~agency's~~ response, the committee may take one or more of the following actions:

(1) It may determine that the response and any additional information supplied ~~by the agency~~ is sufficient to explain the issue or situation that occasioned the initial finding, and that no further action is needed.

(2) It may determine that the proposed corrective action ~~proposed by the agency~~ is sufficiently responsive to the issue or situation, and that, when implemented, no further action will be needed.

(3) It may determine that the ~~agency's~~ response is insufficient to address the issue or situation. In that case, it may recommend ~~to the agency, for the agency's consideration~~; the type of corrective actions that it believes necessary to address the issue or situation adequately, along with a timeline for reporting corrective action taken.

(4) It may prepare an informational report on the matter for those members of the council who have been assigned responsibility for reviewing the annual budget ~~of the agency~~.

c) It may recommend to the General Council on Finance and Administration for its action, with notice of the recommendation given to the appropriate leadership president and general secretary of the agency treasury involved, one or more of the following steps:

(1) Continuing monitoring by the council's internal audit department, at the expense of the agency treasury involved, until the committee finds that the issue has been satisfactorily resolved.

(2) Withholding of an appropriate amount of funding from general fund receipts that would otherwise be payable to the treasury agency, until the council, on recommendation of the committee, finds that the issue has been satisfactorily resolved.

(3) Reporting of any unresolved issues to the next session of the General Conference, along with recommendations for General Conference action.

Rationale:

These changes delete the inconsistent use of "agency" and "treasury," fix unclear language in the introductory section, and provide GCFA leadership more flexibility in responding to the information provided by its Committee on Audit and Review.

¶ 1505. Any use of such tools to promote our Church's Social Principles as shareholder advocacy, selective divestment, or advocacy of corporate disinvestment shall be implemented by the board in a way that treats all institutions, companies, corporations, nations, and other entities with moral consistency. In the absence of any clear and unambiguous mandate from the General Conference, the general board shall not divest from any particular company, corporation, institution, fund, or nation for social or political reasons, as opposed to financial reasons, without first publicly inviting feedback on its pending decision from United Methodists of diverse perspectives over a period of no less than 30 days.

Rationale:

It is vital that UMC policy be seen as fair, balanced, and transparent. Activists for various causes understandably make one-sided arguments on issues over which faithful United Methodists disagree. Therefore, the general board should always take steps to hear from a diverse range of voices and craft policy accordingly.

eb. One-twelfth of this annual Church contribution shall be payable to the Plan for each month of coverage provided under the Plan, and the due date for each monthly payment shall be the last day of each such month.

dc. The Administrator may, in its sole discretion, reduce the percentages specified in Section 4.01a and Section 4.01b, provided that any such reduction is in accordance with and justified by commonly accepted actuarial principles and practices. Any such reduction shall not affect the Administrator's right to subsequently increase the percentages, up to the amounts specified in Section 4.01a and Section 4.01b, at any time.

9. Amend Section 4.02 as follows:

4.02 Source of Contributions. Except as provided in Section 4.03 below, the obligation to make the Church contribution on behalf of such an Active Participant shall fall upon, and be restricted to, the applicable unit as follows.

a. The local church, if the Active Participant is serving a local church.

b. The applicable Conference, if the Active Participant is a district superintendent or a Conference staff member.

c. The General Council on Finance and Administration from the Episcopal Fund, if the Active Participant is a bishop.

d. The applicable general board or agency, if the Active Participant is on the payroll of a board or agency.

e. The applicable Conference or local church, if the Active Participant is appointed to sabbatical leave or to attendance at school, as provided in Section 3.02a.

f. The Active Participant's Plan Sponsor, if the Active Participant is other than described in items (a) through (e) above.

10. Amend Section 4.03 as follows:

4.03 Alternative Sources. The following alternative sources of Church contributions shall also be permissible:

a. The applicable Plan Sponsor, in the case of Active Participants in items (a) and (b) in Section 4.02 above, or the applicable unit, in the case of Active Participants in items (c), (d), (e), or (f), may annually elect to require each Active Participant for that Plan Sponsor or unit to contribute an amount up to 1% of such Active Participant's Contribution Base. ~~Notwithstanding the foregoing, the applicable Plan Sponsor or unit may annually elect to require each Active Participant for that Plan Sponsor or unit who is enrolled pursuant to an optional special arrangement described in the second clause of Section 3.03a(1) to contribute an amount up to 4.4% of the Denominational Average Compensation.~~ Any contributions made pursuant to this section 4.03a shall be counted toward meeting the required Church contribution under items (a) and (b) of Section 4.01a. ...

11. Amend Section 5.01a as follows:

a. The Surviving Spouse of an Active Participant who dies prior to entering into an annuity under the Clergy Retirement Security Program shall be entitled to a single-life annuity in an annual amount equal to (1) less (2), where:

(1) is 20% of the Denominational Average Compensation in effect on the date of the Active Participant's death, and

(2) is the annuity benefit (calculated as a single-life annuity increasing 2% annually, regardless of the annuity form actually paid) payable from the Clergy Retirement Security Program and from all other Church-related sources including the annuity equivalent value of account balances in the Ministerial Pension Plan, pension benefits for service prior to January 1, 1982, and the annuity equivalent value of account balances in the United Methodist Personal Investment Plan that are attributable to Plan Sponsor contributions, ~~except Social Security benefits are not considered.~~

(3) Effective January 1, 1989, the amount of the benefit payable under (a) to persons receiving such benefits on that date shall be based upon an amount at least equal to 20% of the Denominational Average Compensation for 1989 less (2) above.

12. Amend Section 5.02c as follows:

c. Any child age 18 years or older, but under age 25 years, who is described in paragraph (a) above shall be eligible to receive an annual educational benefit, as described below, equal to ~~20%~~ the specified percentage of the Denominational Average Compensation in effect on the later to occur of the date of death of the Active Participant or Retired Participant or the date such child attains age 18 years.

(1) Ten percent (10%) of Denominational Average Compensation ~~One-half of such benefit~~ is payable for each year during attendance as a full-time student at a secondary school ~~and, in addition, for each year (not to exceed four years) during attendance as a full-time student at a standard school or college beyond the secondary school level.~~ The annual benefit shall be payable in monthly installments.

(2) Twenty percent (20%) of Denominational Average Compensation ~~One-half of such benefit~~ is payable for each academic year (not to exceed four years) that the child is in full-time attendance at a university, standard school or college, vocational school, or other postsecondary educational institution ~~beyond the secondary level~~ up to age 25 years. If such child completes the secondary education level and enrolls in an institution of higher education prior to attaining age 18 years, the educational benefit may be effective at the time of such enrollment and shall be based on the Denominational Average Compensation in effect on the date of such enrollment. The annual benefit shall be ~~paid prorated~~ in equal installments, not to exceed four per academic year, to match the academic calendar of post-secondary school attended, e.g., semesters, trimesters, or quarters, as requested in writing by the child. The first installment shall be paid before the start of the first academic time period of the academic year provided that the Administrator has received a certificate of enrollment pursuant to subsection (3) below. The second and any other successive installments for each academic year shall be paid at the close of each academic time period once the Administrator has received evidence of an average of passing grades or marks for the coursework completed in that academic time period.

(3) Satisfactory certificate of enrollment and attendance in secondary school, post-secondary school or college shall be provided periodically, as required by the Administrator, in order for any such educational benefit to be paid, as shall evidence of passing average grades or marks to progress toward graduation or successful completion of course of study.

13. Amend Section 5.03 to add a new subparagraph (m) that reads as follows:

m. In paying death benefits under this Section 5.03, the Administrator may rely on the small estate statute in the state in which the deceased Participant, Retired Participant or Surviving Spouse resided or in which probate is being adjudicated; provided that the heir or heirs (claimants) submit affidavits in accordance with such state law and agree to indemnify and hold harmless the Administrator and its agents.

14. Amend Section 5.03 to add a new subsection (n) that reads as follows:

n. Forfeiture of Death and Survivor Benefits. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, any benefits payable under this Section 5.03 or Section 5.01 or Section 5.02 of the Plan, because of the death of any individual (Active Participant, Retired Participant, Spouse, Surviving Spouse, or child), i.e., a decedent ("Decedent" for purposes of this subsection), shall not be payable to any claimant, whether Active Participant, Retired Participant, Spouse, Surviving Spouse, or child, (Intended Recipient) who is convicted of intentionally killing the Decedent or determined in a civil proceeding to have intentionally killed the Decedent. Benefits are not payable to such Intended Recipients even though a criminal conviction or civil determination is pending appeal. Benefits under Section 5.03 not payable to one or more Intended Recipients under this subsection shall be payable, as determined by the Administrator in its sole discretion, to the following person or persons who are surviving on the date of the Decedent's death in the following order of precedence, provided such person or persons are not disqualified under this subsection, in which case the Administrator will treat such person or persons as having predeceased the Decedent:

(1) To the next eligible Beneficiary designated by the Decedent in a writing received by the Administrator before the Decedent's death; or

(2) To the duly appointed executor or administrator of the Decedent's estate.

During the pendency of any criminal or civil proceedings against an Intended Recipient related to this subsection, the Administrator, in its discretion, may suspend payment of any death and survivor benefits under Sections 5.01, 5.02 and 5.03 of the Plan and await the outcome of criminal or civil proceedings. Payment of any death or survivor benefits by the Administrator under this subsection to any person listed above shall bar recovery of those benefits or proceeds by any other person.

15. Amend Section 5.04a as follows:

a. Eligibility. An Active Participant who becomes disabled as defined in paragraph (b) below shall be entitled to a disability benefit under this Section 5.04 (and shall thereby continue to have the status of an Active Participant) under the following conditions:

(1) If the disability results from sickness:

(i) the Active Participant must have been an Active Participant for at least 180 days before the date that the disability is determined to have initially occurred; and

(ii) no disability benefit shall be payable in the event that the Active Participant becomes disabled within the two-year period beginning on the date that he or she first became an Active Participant, and as the result of any pre-existing conditions. A pre-existing condition is any condition of health or sickness for which the Active Participant received medical treatment or consultation within 365 days prior to the date the person became an Active Participant, and which then is the condition (or is related to the condition or is the cause of the condition) that is the basis for the claim for disability benefits under the Plan. No condition will be considered pre-existing if the disability is determined to have begun after the end of the two-year period.

(2) If the disability instead results from an accident, as determined by the Administrator, disability benefits shall be payable without regard to the passage of the 180-day period referenced in subsection (1)(i) above.

(3) If the disability results from sickness but the Active Participant has been enrolled for coverage through another long-term disability benefits plan maintained by the Plan Administrator without a break in coverage of more than 30 days; and provided the coverage under the other long-term disability plan combined with the coverage under this Plan is equal to at least 180 days with respect to subsection (1)(i) above or twenty-four months with respect to subsection (1)(ii) above; then disability benefits shall be payable without regard to the passage of the 180-day period described in subsection (1)(i) above, and without regard to the two-year period described in subsection (1)(ii) above.

16. Amend Section 5.04b as follows:

b. (1) Definition of Disability. A Participant will be considered disabled for purposes of the Plan as of the date the Administrator determines, on the basis of medical evidence, that such person is unable to perform the usual and customary duties of a United Methodist Clergy person by reason of a bodily injury, a disease, or a behavioral illness or disorder, that, in any of these cases, the Administrator determines is expected to last for at least six continuous months, exclusive of any disability resulting from:

- (+A) service in the armed forces of any country;
- (2B) warfare;
- (3C) intentionally self-inflicted injury; or
- (4D) participation in any criminal or unlawful act.

In addition, after having received disability benefit payments from the Plan for 24 consecutive months, the Participant shall be considered disabled only if he or she is unable to engage in substantially all of the usual and customary duties pertaining to any employment for remuneration or profit in any occupation for which he or she is reasonably qualified by training, education, or experience. The Administrator shall have the responsibility for determining whether a person has incurred a disability, and, before approving payment of any disability benefit, may require medical proof of such disability including, but not limited to, a requirement that the person submit to medical examination at the request of the Administrator. The Plan shall pay all reasonable medical fees, as determined by the Administrator, for any medical examinations requested more frequently than annually.

(2) Proof of Claim. Proof of claim for disability benefits must show:

- (A) that the claimant is under the regular care of a physician;
- (B) the appropriate documentation of the claimant's monthly earnings;
- (C) the date the disability began;
- (D) the cause of the disability;
- (E) the extent of the disability, including restrictions and limitations preventing the claimant from performing the usual and customary duties of a United Methodist Clergy person (or, after 24 consecutive months of disability payments, substantially all of the usual and customary duties pertaining to any employment for remuneration or profit in any occupation for which the claimant is reasonably qualified by training, education or experience); and

(F) the name and address of any hospital or institution where the claimant received treatment, including all attending physicians.

The Administrator may request that a claimant send proof of continuing disability indicating that the claimant is under the regular care of a physician. This proof must be received within 60 days of a request by the Administrator for initial claims or 90 days of a request by the Administrator for ongoing claims. In some cases, the claimant will be required to give the Administrator authorization to obtain additional medical information and to provide non-medical information as part of a claimant's proof of claim (or proof of continuing disability). The Administrator will deny a claim, or stop payments of benefits, if the appropriate information, i.e., proof of claim is not submitted within 60 days or 90 days of any request, as applicable.

17. Amend Section 5.04c as follows:

c. Amount and Payment of Disability Benefit. The Administrator shall grant disability benefits to an Active Participant under this Plan who is determined by the Administrator to be disabled pursuant to Section 5.04b above, as follows:

(1) General Amount. An annual disability benefit, payable in monthly installments, shall be paid from the Protection Benefit Trust to the Participant in an amount equal to 70% of the annualized Plan Compensation for that Participant for the Plan Year in which the first payment becomes due and effective (with the annualized Plan Compensation calculated as of the effective date of that first payment), ~~provided that such annual disability benefit generally shall not be less than 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation unless otherwise provided under the Plan.~~

(i) Benefits Approved Before January 1, 2002. Any persons already receiving a disability benefit before January 1, 2002 shall continue to receive the amount previously awarded to them, which was based on 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation for the Plan Year in effect on the date of first payment (as adjusted for the increases provided in Section 5.04c(3) below), for as long as they remain disabled or otherwise eligible under other provisions of the Plan.

(ii) Benefits Approved January 1, 2002 through December 31, 2016. Any persons already receiving a disability benefit before January 1, 2017 shall continue to receive the amount previously awarded to them, which was based on 70% of Plan Compensation for the Plan Year in effect on the date of first payment subject to certain reductions and offsets and limits to those reductions and offsets, i.e., a general benefit floor of 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation, for as long as they remain disabled or otherwise eligible under other provisions of the Plan.

(iii) The Plan Compensation that is considered for this revised disability benefit shall be limited to an amount that is not greater than 200% of the Denominational Average Compensation for the Plan Year in which the Plan Compensation is being determined.

(ivii) This revised disability benefit is subject to the reductions and offsets described in Section 5.04c(7), Section 5.04c(8), and Section 5.04c(9).

~~(iv) The application of the Social Security reduction described in Section 5.04c(7) shall not result in an annual disability benefit for a Participant that is less than 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation for the Plan Year in effect on the date of first payment (determined on pro-rata basis, as needed, for any partial years of disability). Notwithstanding the foregoing, for Participants described in Section 3.02e, annual disability benefits may be less than 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation, i.e., when calculated as 70% of Plan Compensation, and may be reduced to less than 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation by application of the Social Security reduction described in Section 5.04c(7).~~

~~(v) Notwithstanding the foregoing, an annual disability benefit for a Participant may be reduced to less than 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation in cases where the Administrator is offsetting or otherwise recouping an overpayment to the Participant resulting from an award of Social Security benefits or other income.~~

~~(vi) After the application of the Social Security reduction described in Section 5.04c(7), an annual disability benefit for a Participant shall be further reduced as described in Section 5.04c(8) and Section 5.04c(9).~~

18. Amend Section 5.04c(2) as follows:

(2) Retirement Contribution Pension Credit. In addition, during the Participant's disability, an annual allocation from the Protection Benefit Trust, made in monthly installments, shall be credited to the Participant's defined contribution account in the applicable clergy retirement plan maintained by the Administrator in an amount equal to the Plan Sponsor's nonmatching and matching contribution obligations with respect to the Participant, limited in aggregate to no greater than 3% of the Participant's compensation as defined by the applicable clergy retirement plan, including any increases, imputed or otherwise, to such compensation as determined under the applicable clergy retirement plan. Notwithstanding the foregoing, any allocation described in this Section 5.04(c)(2) shall cease for any Participant who (i) is retired pursuant to §358.3 of the Book of Discipline or (ii) severs his or her Conference relationship by honorable location or administrative location as described in §§359 and §360 of The Book of Discipline, or terminates or has terminated his or her Conference relationship in any manner, thereby ceasing to be a member of the Conference as of the date of such termination.

19. Amend Section 5.04c(7) as follows:

(7) Social Security Offset. The disability benefit payable under this Section 5.04 shall be reduced on a dollar-for-dollar basis by any benefits received by the Participant under the Social Security Act with regard to his or her disability (unless the Social Security benefits are forwarded to the Plan).

(i) The amount of this reduction will be based on the total benefit payable with regard to the Participant under the Social Security Disability Insurance Program, including amounts payable to the Participant and amounts payable to his or her spouse or children (including any common-law spouse).

(ii) The amount of this reduction will include a reduction for any retroactive awards of Social Security disability benefits (unless the benefits are forwarded to the Plan). To the extent requested by the Administrator, the Participant shall have an obligation to reimburse the Plan for the amount of any overpayment of disability benefits from the Plan that results from any retroactive awards of Social Security disability benefits.

(iii) To effectuate these provisions on Social Security disability payments, the Participant shall take all needed steps to obtain such Social Security benefits. The Administrator may supply the Participant with such aid as it deems appropriate with regard to the Participant's application for Social Security benefits. The Participant shall supply the Administrator with all relevant information that is requested regarding his or her eligibility and application for such Social Security benefits, whenever it is requested. If a Participant fails, without good cause, to furnish such information, the disability benefits otherwise payable to the Participant from the Plan may be suspended (and ended), pursuant to Section 5.04d(5) below.

(iv) If the Participant does not receive such Social Security benefits, for the any reasons described in Section 5.04c(7)(v) below, then the benefit payable under this Section 5.04 shall still be reduced, on a similar dollar-for-dollar basis, by looking to the imputed benefits that the Participant would have received under the Social Security Act. For this purpose, it will be assumed that: (a) the Participant would have had his or her application for Social Security disability benefits approved, (b) the Participant would have received the maximum benefits available under Social Security for that Participant's circumstances and level of compensation, and (c) there would not have been any retroactive award of Social Security benefits.

(v) For the application of the reduction described in item (iv) above, it will be assumed that the payment of imputed amounts began: (a) immediately after the date the Participant refused to apply for Social Security benefits, if the Participant has refused to apply; or (b) six months after the date the Participant's disability was determined by the Administrator to have commenced, if the Participant has elected under Code Section 1402(e) not to be covered by Social Security ~~or the Participant is otherwise ineligible for Social Security (e.g., too few quarters credited); or (c) 24 months after the date the Participant's disability was determined by the Administrator to have commenced, if the Participant has applied for Social Security disability benefits but has been denied such benefits, for a reason other than having elected under Code Section 1402(e) not to be covered by Social Security.~~ Notwithstanding the applicability of the imputed amount to Participants in clause (e), ~~t~~ The Administrator shall begin applying the reduction described in Section 5.04c(7) (iv) above, after 12 months of disability benefit payments to the Participant, in all cases where the Participant has applied for Social Security benefits. The application of this offset will reduce the likelihood of a substantial overpayment to the Participant as a result of a retroactive award of Social Security benefits. In the event that the Administrator applies this offset and the Participant is denied benefits under the Social Security Act (for reasons other than those in clause (b), e.g., an election under Code Section 1402(e)), the Administrator shall make the Participant whole for this applied offset, ~~between month 6 and month 24 of disability benefits, as would be appropriate under clause (e), after the Participant has exhausted Section 5.04c(7)(v)(e).~~

20. Amend Section 5.04c(8) as follows:

(8) Other Income Offset. After the application of the Social Security reduction described above in Section 5.04c(7), the amount of the disability benefit payable under this Section 5.04 shall also be reduced as described below.

(a) During the first 24 months of disability, the disability benefit payable shall be reduced on a dollar-for-dollar basis when the sum of the amounts specified in items (i), (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) below exceeds 100% of the Plan Compensation of the Participant at the time the disability occurred, as increased annually by 3%.

(b) After the first 24 months of disability, the amount of the disability benefit payable under this Section 5.04 shall be reduced on a fifty cents on the dollar basis when the sum of the amounts in items (i), (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) below exceeds 70% of the Plan Compensation of the Participant at the time the disability occurred, as increased annually by 3%; and the amount of disability benefits payable shall be reduced on a dollar-for-dollar basis when the sum of the amounts in items (i), (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) exceeds 100% of Plan Compensation of the Participant at the time the disability occurred, as increased annually by 3%. The amount of this reduction shall be the amount by which the sum of items (i), (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) exceeds the amount described in (a) or (b) as applicable.

(i) The amount of gross income resulting from earned income of the Participant, or from payments received by the Participant that, by their nature, are a substitute for earned income. The sources of gross income are limited to: (a) compensation for services, including fees, commissions and similar items, and gross income derived from a business, as provided in section 61(a) of the Code; (b) compensation payments received from Worker's Compensation Insurance in respect to lost earnings; (c) payments received from any branch of the United States Armed Forces, excluding veteran's disability compensation and pension benefits; (d) payments received from any other agency of the United States Government; (e) payments received from any State of the United States, in respect to disability; and (f) disability benefits payable under this Plan. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Plan Administrator will not reduce a Participant's disability benefits under this Section 5.04c(8) by amounts that a Participant receives from a Plan Sponsor in lieu of coverage in a group health plan, for the Participant or his or her family, even if such amount is considered taxable income or compensation for services.

(ii) The amount that the Participant received as retirement benefits, or the amount that the Participant's spouse and children received as retirement benefits because of the Participant's receipt of retirement benefits under the Social Security Act.

(iii) The amount of the reduction for Social Security disability benefits as described in Section 5.04c(7).

(iv) The above amounts (other than the disability benefits payable under this Plan) shall constitute the "Other Income Benefits" referred to below.

(v) If a Participant engages in return to work program rehabilitation ~~employment under Section 5.04f of the Plan~~ during the time that he or she is receiving disability payments under the Plan, and is actively participating in a rehabilitation return to work program ~~approved by the Administrator at that time~~, the earnings from such employment shall be a part of the Other Income Benefits on the following basis:

A. During the first 24 months of disability payments, only 50% of such earnings shall be included in the Other Income Benefits.

B. After the first 24 months, 100% of such earnings shall be included in the Other Income Benefits.

(vi) To enable the Administrator to make all of these calculations, the Participant shall supply all relevant information and documentation that is requested, whenever it is requested. If a Participant fails, without good cause, to furnish such information or documentation, the disability benefits otherwise payable to the Participant may be suspended (and ended), pursuant to Section 5.04d(5) below.

21. Amend Section 5.04d as follows:

d. Discontinuance of Disability Benefits. A Participant's disability benefit will be payable pursuant to paragraph (c) above, subject to the following:

(1) Medical Examinations. If the Participant refuses to submit to a medical examination or deliver any related documentation that, in either case, is requested by the Administrator for purposes of verifying the continuance of disability, the disability benefits otherwise payable to the Participant may be suspended (and ended), pursuant to Section 5.04d(65) below.

(2) Medical Treatment. If the Administrator determines the Participant is not under the Appropriate Available Treatment as defined below ~~regular care and treatment of a properly licensed physician with expertise in the appropriate medical specialty for the disabling condition~~, the disability benefits otherwise payable to the Participant under the Plan may be suspended (and ended), pursuant to Section 5.04d(65) below. Regardless of the type of disabling condition, a physician who is a member of the Participant's family is not an acceptable treating physician. For this purpose, a member of the family shall include parents and stepparents, children and stepchildren, spouses, former spouses, siblings and step-siblings, mothers-in-law, fathers-in-law, brothers-in-law, sisters-in-law, grandparents, uncles, aunts and cousins.

(A) "Appropriate Available Treatment" means care or services which are:

(i) generally acknowledged by Physicians to cure, correct, limit, treat or manage the disabling condition;

(ii) accessible within a reasonable geographic area of the Participant;

(iii) provided by a physician who is licensed and certified by the American Board of Medical Specialties or the American Board of Physician Specialties (osteopaths) and qualified in a discipline suitable to treat the disabling injury or sickness; and

(iv) in accordance with generally accepted medical standards of practice.

(B) In addition, "Appropriate Available Treatment" with respect to a Mental Illness (as defined below) means care or services which are:

(i) generally acknowledged by Psychiatrists and Psychologists to cure, correct, limit, treat or manage the disabling condition; utilizing both psychotherapy and psychopharmacology modalities when indicated, occurring with a regular frequency, as defined by accepted guidelines, as long as the condition is significantly decreasing capacity, including the obtaining of second opinions when there is little clinical improvement after six months;

(ii) accessible within a reasonable geographic area of the Participant;

(iii) provided by a provider who is a licensed psychologist, psychiatrist or both; and

(iv) in accordance with generally accepted American Psychological and Psychiatric Association's standards of practice.

(C) In addition, for the purposes of this subparagraph Mental Illness means a psychiatric or psychological condition classified in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Health Disorders (DSM), published by the American Psychiatric Association, most current as of the start of a disability. Such disorders include, but are not limited to, psychotic, emotional or behavioral disorders, or disorders relatable to stress. If the DSM is discontinued or replaced, these disorders will be those classified in the diagnostic manual then used by the American Psychiatric Association as of the start of a disability.

(3) Administrator Determinations. If the Administrator determines at any time that the Participant is no longer disabled, payment of all disability benefits shall cease, as provided in Section 5.04d(54) below (irrespective of the period that has elapsed since the Participant first became disabled).

(4) Mental Health Conditions. If the primary basis for a disability benefit paid from the Plan is a "Mental Illness" (as defined in Section 5.04d(4)(iii) below), then all such benefits shall cease on the June 30 next following the expiration of 24 months after the later of:

(a) the Participant's date of disability; or

(b) January 1, 2013 (if, in either case, benefits do not cease at an earlier date pursuant to other provisions of the Plan), except in cases where the Participant meets one or both of the following conditions described in (ii) and (iii) below.

(i) "Mental Illness" means a psychiatric or psychological condition classified in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Health Disorders (DSM), published by the American Psychiatric Association, most current as of the start of a disability. Such disorders include, but are not limited to, psychotic, emotional or behavioral disorders, or disorders relatable to stress. If the DSM is discontinued or replaced, these disorders will be those classified in the diagnostic manual then used by the American Psychiatric Association as of the start of a disability.

~~(ii) The Participant is confined to a hospital or institution on the June 30 that follows the end of the 24-month period, benefits will continue during such confinement. If the Participant remains disabled when discharged, benefits will continue for a recovery period of up to 3 months. If the Participant becomes confined to a hospital or institution again at any time during the recovery period and remains confined for at least 14 consecutive days, benefits will continue during that additional confinement and for one additional recovery period up to 3 more months.~~

~~(iii) The Participant has a Mental Illness, which, in the view of the Administrator, based on medical evidence is "severe" and not "returnable" based on generally accepted psychiatric standards.~~

~~(iv) The Administrator will not apply the Mental Illness limitation in this Section 5.04d(4) to dementia if it is a result of: (a) stroke; (b) trauma; (c) viral infection; (d) Alzheimer's disease; or (e) other conditions not listed which are not usually treated by a mental health provider or other qualified provider using psychotherapy, psychotropic drugs, or other similar methods of treatment.~~

(54) General Time of Cessation. If the disability benefits for a Participant are ended for the reasons described in Section 5.04d(3) (regarding Administrator determinations), the cessation of benefits shall be subject to the following provisions:

(i) In such a case, the payment of the disability benefits shall cease as of the June 30 next following the final day of the regular session of such person's Conference, if the final day falls in the month of May or June, or, otherwise, as of the last day of the month in which the closing day of such Conference session occurs, based, in either case, on the session that occurs at the time or immediately after the time (whichever is applicable) of the date that the Administrator sends a written notice to the Participant regarding the cessation of the disability benefits.

(ii) For a cessation of disability benefits that is instead due to a lack of cooperation from the Participant that is described in the Plan with reference to Section 5.04d(65) below, the cessation shall be subject to the provisions of Section 5.04d(65).

(65) Suspensions and Related Cessations. If the disability benefits for a Participant are to be suspended due to a lack of cooperation from a Participant with regard to a requirement for benefits that is described in the Plan with an express reference to this Section 5.04d(65), the following provisions shall apply:

22. Effective January 1, 2013, amend Section 5.04d(7) as follows:

(7) Disability Prior to Age 62. On or after January 1, 2013, if the Participant becomes disabled prior to the date he or she attains age 62, and the disability continues, then the benefits will terminate on June 30 that follows the date on which the Participant reaches his or her Social Security full retirement age under the Social Security Act.

23. Effective January 1, 2013, amend Section 5.04d(8) as follows:

(8) Disability On or After Age 62. On or after January 1, 2013, if the Participant becomes disabled on or after the date he or she attains age 62, and the disability continues, then the benefits will terminate on the earlier to occur of:

24. Amend Section 5.04d(7) as follows:

(7) Disability Prior to Age 62. If the Participant becomes disabled prior to the date he or she attains age 62, and the disability continues, then the benefits will terminate on June 30 that follows the earlier of (i) the date on which the Participant retires pursuant to ¶ 358.1 or ¶ 358.2 of the Book of Discipline or (ii) the date on which the Participant reaches his or her Social Security full retirement age under the Social Security Act.

25. Amend Section 5.04d(8) as follows:

(8) Disability On or After Age 62. If the Participant becomes disabled on or after the date he or she attains age 62, and the disability continues, then the benefits will terminate on the earlier to occur of:

(i) the June 30 on or following the last day of the eligibility established in the age benefit reduction table below; or

(ii) June 30 following such person's retirement date if the individual retires pursuant to ¶ 358.1 or ¶ 358.2 of the Book of Discipline provided~~(if~~ the final day of the regular session of such person's Conference falls in May or June, or otherwise on the last day of the month in which the closing day of such Conference session occurs).

26. Amend Section 5.04d by adding a new subsection (10) that reads as follows:

(10) Incarceration. Notwithstanding anything else to the contrary herein, disability benefits under this Plan shall not be payable for any months in which a Participant is incarcerated for conviction of a crime that is a felony as classified by the statute under which the Participant was charged. A Participant's benefits can be reinstated, if he or she remains otherwise eligible, starting with the month following the month he or she is released from incarceration. However, disability benefits will not be payable for any month before the Participant has affirmatively notified the Administrator of such release.

27. Delete Section 5.04e in its entirety:

~~e. Rehabilitation Benefits. The Administrator is authorized to allocate reasonable added amounts, as it deems~~ appropriate (not to exceed two-thirds of the Denominational Average Compensation), for rehabilitation benefits on behalf of a disabled Active Participant.

(1) ~~Standard for Benefits.~~ Expenditures for any such rehabilitation benefits shall only be made when the expenditure:

(i) could in the judgment of the Administrator, reasonably result in the Participant engaging in employment for remuneration or profit in an occupation for which he or she will then be reasonably qualified by training, education or experience; and

(ii) would be directed toward a specific program of rehabilitation services that has been approved by both the Participant's physician and by the Administrator prior to the Participant's receipt of any such services.

(2) ~~Initiation of Benefits.~~ A disabled Participant may request that the Administrator provide rehabilitation benefits under this paragraph (c), and the Administrator, in its discretion, shall then determine, pursuant to the above rules, whether rehabilitation benefits will be provided. In addition, the Administrator may identify a Participant as being a candidate for rehabilitation services, pursuant to the above rules. Any such action by the Administrator will normally occur within the first 24 months of the Participant's disability benefits, and a Participant who has received disability benefits under the Plan for more than 24 months may not request any such rehabilitation benefits.

(3) ~~Required Use of Services.~~ If the Administrator identifies a disabled Participant as a candidate for rehabilitation services, the Participant must participate in the program of rehabilitative services that is recommended. If the Administrator determines that the Participant has not been properly participating in such a rehabilitation program, the disability benefits otherwise payable to the Participant under the Plan may be suspended (and ended), pursuant to Section 5.04d(5) of the Plan.

(4) ~~Disability After Rehabilitation.~~ The expenditure of such amounts for rehabilitative services for a Participant shall not disqualify the Participant from continued disability benefits under the Plan, if following the completion of the rehabilitative services the Participant continues to meet the definition of disability in paragraph (b) above and the other requirements of this Plan.

28. Delete Section 5.04f in its entirety and renumber as appropriate:

f. ~~Transitional Disability.~~

(1) ~~Subject to the limitations described in Section 5.04f(2), an Active Participant's disability benefits under this Section 5.04, shall continue, if:~~

(i) ~~the Administrator determines that the Participant no longer satisfies the definition of disability as described in Section 5.04b;~~

(ii) ~~the Participant recovers sufficiently so that he or she returns to the performance of his or her duties, but on a less-than-full-time basis; and~~

(iii) ~~the Participant's monthly Plan Compensation from the performance of such duties is no more than 70% of Plan Compensation prior to disability.~~

(2) ~~Any disability benefit payments for a transitional disability shall be subject to the following rules:~~

(i) ~~The disability benefit payable for a transitional disability shall be reduced on a dollar-for-dollar basis so that the sum of such benefit and the monthly Plan Compensation received by the Participant, for the performance of his or her duties on a less-than-full-time basis, shall not exceed the Participant's monthly Plan Compensation for the Plan Year in which his or her first disability benefit payment became due and effective.~~

(ii) ~~Except for Section 5.04b, the Participant shall remain subject to all of the provisions pertaining to the receipt of benefits for a full disability (including the requirement of continuing treatment by a physician).~~

(iii) ~~The disability benefit payments for a transitional disability shall not be made for more than 12 months.~~

29. Amend Section 5.04h as follows:

fh. Return to Work Plans. The Administrator is authorized to establish "Return to Work" processes and transitional and rehabilitation disability benefit plans to better transition claimants back into working. The Administrator may establish and maintain such programs involving itself, Plan Sponsors and the claim administrator or other agent. In addition, to increase the effectiveness of such programs, the Administrator may utilize the following incentives and disincentives.

(i1) Claimant Disincentives. The Administrator may reduce a Participant's disability benefits payable by 10% if the Participant has been identified as a candidate for a Return to Work process and he or she refuses to participate in such program or fails to comply with the Administrator or its agents in the implementation of such Return to Work process.

(ii2) Plan Sponsor Incentives. The Administrator is authorized to allocate an amount equal to the lesser of 50% of the Participant's Plan Compensation on the date of disability or 40% of the Denominational Average Compensation, annually, as a grant to a Conference or other Plan Sponsor as an incentive to reappoint or re-employ a Participant in a Return to Work process as a means of assisting the Conference/Plan Sponsor in compensating the Participant. The grants will continue as long as the Participant is disabled and otherwise eligible under the Plan and complies with the Return to Work process, ceasing on the June 30 that follows the end of such disability.

30. Amend Section 6.04a as follows:

a. Generally. To be considered a Transition Participant eligible for this Voluntary Transition Program, an individual must be a clergy member in full connection or an associate member of a Conference and an Active Participant in the Plan under the terms of Section 3.01a(3)(i); i.e., a Clergy member in full connection, as of the date of Separation from Service. However, Active Participants who are bishops, provisional members, members of Other Methodist Denominations, members of the Puerto Rico Methodist Church, or clergypersons of other denominations may not be Transition Participants; such individuals are not eligible for Transition Benefits. ~~Active Participants enrolled through special arrangements under Section 3.02 or Section 3.03 of the Plan may not be Transition Participants; such individuals are not eligible for Transition Benefits. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, an Active Participant enrolled through special arrangements under Section 3.02 because he or she receives an appointment to less-than-full-time service, may be a Transition Participant if he or she has been an Active Participant in the Plan as an Active Participant other than through a special arrangement, i.e., he or she was appointed full-time, for at least five years preceding the part-time service appointment, and has not been participating through a special arrangement longer than 24 months. An Active Participant enrolled through a special arrangement under Section 3.02 because he or she is appointed to granted a voluntary leave of absence that is a personal leave or a transitional leave, or former Active Participant who, within the last 24 months, has ceased to be an Active Participant because he or she is appointed part-time or granted to a voluntary leave of absence that is a personal leave of a transitional leave, may be a Transition Participant provided that he or she has been an Active Participant other than through a special arrangement for at least five years preceding the part-time appointment, personal leave or to transitional leave.~~

31. Amend Section 6.06 as follows:

6.06 Return to Ministry. If a former Transition Participant returns to ministry ~~through recertification~~ at any time, he or she shall be required to repay the Transition Payments received under this Voluntary Transition Program. Such amount shall be considered an overpayment under this Plan and subject to recovery by the Administrator as of the date that the Annual Conference board of ordained ministry approves a return to active ministry ~~the former Transition Participant again becomes an Active Participant in the Plan.~~

32. Amend Section 8.10 as follows:

8.10 Appeal a Condition Precedent to Civil Action. No cause of action in law or equity with respect to any alleged violation of the terms and conditions of this Plan, or otherwise regarding the benefits under this Plan, shall be commenced or maintained by any claimant (or his or her representative) unless and until such claimant (or the representative) has initiated and completed the process of an Appeal as set forth in Sections 8.07 to 8.09 of this Plan. In addition, any such cause of action with respect to this Plan must be commenced by the claimant (or the representative) within 12~~six~~ months of the date of the written notice sent by the Administrator to the claimant (or the representative) regarding the final denial of the Appeal. The notice sent out by the Administrator should describe this time limit.

Provided, however, that health and welfare organizations that have a covenant relationship with United Methodist Women's national office may also seek a relationship or connection with an annual conference pursuant to this section, but shall not be required to do so.

United Methodist Women's national mission institutions have a covenant relationship with United Methodist Women. This report shall then be published in the annual conference journal. The organization may then establish a relationship statement with the United Methodist Association consistent with the requirements of ¶ 2517.

Rationale:

As health and welfare organizations grow in size and complexity, many of them now operate in multiple annual conferences. While it is desirable to establish relationship statements with all such annual conferences, that is not always possible. Carbon Emissions Offsetting

The whole earth is God's good creation and has as such an inherent value. We are aware that the current utilization of energy resources threatens this creation fundamentally. As members of The United Methodist Church we are committed to dealing with creation and especially with its resources in a responsible and careful way.

In its call to action "God's Renewed Creation," the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church calls for the practice of environmental holiness to conserve natural resources and use only renewable resources in every gathering and every ministry of our congregations and Church. An important expression of this is the reduction of our carbon footprint with regard to the travel related to the Church's meetings.

This issue has been addressed in previous resolutions, although not in a comprehensive manner. Resolution 1002 calls to "expand our use of public transportation, carpooling, and teleconferencing to reduce fossil fuel consumption." Resolution 1031 resolves "that members should make an effort to learn about human production and release of greenhouse gases and evaluate their own lifestyles to identify areas where reductions in production and release of greenhouse gases can be made. [...] [and] that members should also work to make their own congregations more aware of the issue of global warming and create policies and practices which reduce greenhouse gas emissions from congregational infrastructure (church buildings, parsonages, vehicles, etc.)." The most pertinent on this issue is probably resolution 6030, stating that "Therefore, The United Methodist Church calls on general agencies, annual conferences, and members of local churches to model sustainable travel and tourism and to reflect on the following when traveling: Does the travel respect and protect God's creation? Are there ways to lower and/or offset carbon emissions from the mode of transportation? Is the travel respectful of resources in and the natural habitat of the community being visited?" Building on the experience of annual and central conferences (e.g., Germany) who have started the journey towards adoption of comprehensive mandatory mobility concepts, the General Conference of The United Methodist Church resolves

1. that for all travel related to the activities of annual, central, jurisdictional and general conference bodies, a threefold strategy of avoiding (avoiding travel where possible, replacing physical meetings through phone or videoconferencing), reducing (choosing less polluting means of travel than air travel) and offsetting (where the first two strategies are not applicable) is being pursued;

2. that action be taken by the General Council on Finance and Administration in cooperation with the General Board of Church and Society to propose mandatory guidelines for climate-friendly travel and for carbon offsetting in the case of unavoidable air travel related to the activities of annual, central, jurisdictional and general conference bodies;

3. that in the case of offsetting, projects will be selected that operate according to the CDM (Clean Development Mechanism) Gold Standard;

4. the offsetting costs will be covered by the relevant bodies responsible for the meeting and the related travel.

Rationale:

The Council of Bishops stated in the Pastoral Letter "God's renewed creation – a call to hope and action": "We pledge to measure the "carbon footprint" of our episcopal and denominational offices, determine how to reduce it, and implement those changes." Therefore the UMC has to develop and . . .

Missional or Mission-Focused BOD for The UMC

The 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church will appoint an appropriate team or task force for the sole purpose of drafting a new missional or mission-focused Book of Discipline.

The team or task force membership will include, but not be limited to, active bishops, ordained elders, ordained deacons, licensed local pastors, and lay representatives from United Methodist Men, United Methodist Women, United Methodist Foundations, youth, young adults, racial/ethnic persons from caucuses, ecumenical partners, missiologists, mission strategists (outside of UM membership) and others, as determined by the general Church leadership.

The task force or team, upon its organization, will determine their work timetable, including an objective evaluation of the current Book of Discipline and its missional impact and annually report to the Council of Bishops and the Connectional Table their progress and needs, along with a communication plan to the broader United Methodist community and a detailed report to the General Conference 2020, preferably a draft of an outline of a new Missional Book of Discipline and a drafted action-plan for the following quadrennium.

Financial Information

In order to constitute and implement a Task Force for drafting A New Book of Discipline called “The Missional Focus Book of Discipline,” an estimated cost would be $100,000 toward at least five meetings in the next quadrennial (each meeting might be costing approximately an amount of $20,000). Total cost may come from the general budget, to be approved by the 2016 General Conference and the sources may be identified or determined by GCFA.

Rationale:

The current Book of Discipline is not helpful for Church health, growth, and vitality, and not relevant or contextual in its language and approach to doing church in the postmodern missional context. A Missional Book of Discipline would lift up the value of missional focus and maximize creative ministry potential.

These members will meet quarterly by telephone conference, provide advisory reports to the Pension Board quarterly, and publicize within the church those companies that remain in Pension Board portfolios despite significant and documented human rights abuses.

Petroleum and Natural Gas Investment Policy

General Conference of The United Methodist Church directs the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits of The United Methodist Church to adopt the following policy:

Investments shall not knowingly be made in any company or entity whose core business activity involves the production of petroleum or natural gas. Core business activity refers to a company’s primary, or central focus of activity and is an essential element in the company’s eco-

Aligning Investments With Social Principles

The General Conference directs that all United Methodist general boards and agencies align their investments with current United Methodist resolutions on Israel/Palestine and with the Social Principles by divesting promptly from Caterpillar, Motorola, and Hewlett Packard, which have been engaged repeatedly by United Methodist agencies and annual conferences on this issue, until these companies end their involvement in the Israeli occupation and their participation in the violation of the basic human rights of Palestinians.

All United Methodist general boards and agencies will immediately engage with other companies in their portfolios that have been identified by researchers in United Methodist agencies and annual conferences as being involved in the occupation, so that if these companies do not change their involvement within two years, they should also be removed from United Methodist portfolios.

The General Conference:

1) Calls on all United Methodist general boards and agencies to provide updates on their websites regarding the process of corporate engagement with and/or divestment from companies that support the Israeli occupation,

2) Directs all United Methodist general boards and agencies to provide a report to the 2020 General Conference regarding their progress toward complying with this resolution,

3) Calls on The United Methodist Church boards and agencies, annual conferences, local churches, and individuals to prayerfully consider corporate involvement beyond Israel's occupation and all companies who contract or directly exploit the sacred worth of human beings for monetary gain when making ethical investment decisions in the present and future, and

4) Encourages United Methodists to partner with Jews, Christians, Muslims, and other people of conscience working for corporate accountability, human rights, and an end to the occupation of Palestine.

Rationale:

While every General Conference for forty years has endorsed calls for peace in the Holy Land, including ending military sales, Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory continues to dehumanize all involved. Petition Number: 60038-FA-R4071-G; Boigegrain, Barbara - Glenview, IL, USA for General Board of Pension and Health Benefits.

Investment Ethics

Amend Resolution 4071 as follows:

Introduction:

Churches in the Wesleyan tradition have a long history of witness for justice in the economic order. John Wesley and the early Methodists, for example, were firmly opposed to the slave trade, to smuggling and to ~~what we today call~~ conspicuous consumption. Beginning in 1908, social creeds adopted by our predecessor churches focused attention especially on working conditions and child labor.

For decades, the Church has promoted safe and humane working conditions and the right to organize and bargain collectively. It has opposed discrimination in the workplace based on race, ethnic background, gender, age or disability as well as investing in companies whose products and services violate United Methodist values. Recently, the Church has promoted sustainable and responsible corporate environmental practices and heightened stewardship of the natural world.

Because every financial investment has ethical dimensions with consequences that are both fiscal and social, The United Methodist Church's investment philosophy is based on the biblical concept that all resources are God-given and can be used to promote the reign of God on earth. believes that social justice concerns must be given consideration together with financial security and financial yield in the investment of funds by individuals, churches, agencies and institutions in the United Methodist family. Consequently,

The Social Principles recognize that "corporations are responsible not only to their stockholders, but also to other stakeholders: their workers, suppliers, vendors, customers, the communities in which they do business, and for the earth, which supports them" ([163]). United Methodist investors, therefore, are active owners, calling upon the companies in which they invest to be good corporate citizens. Significantly, the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (also known as the Dodd-Frank Act) provides investors additional tools to influence corporations. The legislation gives shareholders increased rights to vote on executive compensation and to nominate directors to serve on corporate boards. It also requires US companies to disclose minerals originating in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, a country where mining activity has been linked to violence and the violation of human rights.

General Conference has instructed all Church-related investors to "make a conscious effort to invest in institutions, companies, corporations, or funds whose practices are consistent with the goals outlined in the Social Principles..." This values-aligned investment philosophy is based soundly on the biblical concept that all resources are God-given and may be used to promote the reign of God on earth both now and into the future.

In recent years, leaders across The United Methodist Church have identified four areas of focus to continue and deepen the transforming work of Methodism in the world (Engaging in Ministry with the Poor, Improving Global Health, Developing Principled Christian Leaders, Creating New and Renewed Congregations). Two of the focus areas, engaging 1. in ministry with the poor and eradicating deadly diseases by improving health globally, are especially important as we consider the investment ethics of Investors in the Church. investors community are well-positioned to promote the Church's ministry in thesetwo areas of the focus areas: Engaging in Ministry with the Poor and Improving Global Health.

Preamble:

The United Methodist Church strongly urges all of its member institutions to invest in a sustainable and socially responsible manner, which is an investment discipline that integrates environmental, social and corporate governance (ESG) factors to achieve suitable financial returns and positive societal and environmental impact. Investing sustainably demands that United Methodist investors consider the moral and ethical dimensions, as specified in the Social Principles, of the policies and practices of the institutions in which they invest. They must also be cognizant of their fiduciary obligations as stipulated in the Book of Discipline.

Trustees, individuals, and committees responsible for the oversight of United Methodist assets are first legally bound to execute their responsibilities in a prudent manner. This responsibility is broadly referred to as "fiduciary duty." The Book of Discipline is consistently clear in its directive to local churches, boards, and agencies at all levels of the denomination that these entities must discharge their fiduciary duties in conformity with the laws of the country, state, or like political unit in which they are located.

However, fiduciaries must also be mindful of ¶ 717 of the Book of Discipline that states it shall be the policy of The United Methodist Church that these same denominational entities “make a conscious effort (emphasis added) to invest in institutions, companies, corporations, or funds whose practices are consistent with the goals outlined in the Social Principles. . . .” This two-tier directive presents both unique challenges and opportunities to those responsible for investing United Methodist assets.

Socially Responsible Investment Policy

The investment policy goals of The United Methodist Church are to:

Investment Policy Goals for The United Methodist Church’s Investment Community

The United Methodist Church aspires to have members of its investment community pursue the following investment policy goals, reflecting Church values and financial responsibilities:

1. avoid investments in companies whose products and/or services are not aligned with the Social Principles of The United Methodist Church;

~~2. invest in corporations, companies, institutions or funds~~ seek investments in corporations, companies, institutions, funds or ventures making a positive contribution to the realization of the goals outlined in the Social Principles and the Book of Resolutions;

2. exclude from investment companies that violate Church values;

3. ~~persuade corporations to integrate responsible business~~ promote sustainable investment practices ~~only~~ by integrating environmental, social, and governance (ESG) factors into the investment decision-making process;

4. influence corporations to manage ESG issues into their operations and to report on these practices publicly be transparent in monitoring and documenting these practices in public reports;

~~45. seek to invest~~ investments in corporations with environmental “best practice”, companies, institutions, funds, or ventures whose policies and strategies that address conservation, sustainable development, renewable energy, practices help protect the reduction of natural world by, among other things, recycling, eliminating toxic chemicals and materials, and reducing greenhouse gas emissions; ~~increased~~ and pursue investments in companies that provide products, technology, and services that seek to increase energy efficiency, recycling, eliminating the use of toxic chemicals and materials, and the disclosure of environmental risk and mitigate and/or adapt to climate change;

~~56. seek opportunities to invest in~~ pursue investments in corporations, companies, ~~banks~~institutions, funds, or ventures with positive records in hiring and promoting women and persons of color and/or that are owned by women and persons of color, racial and ethnic persons, or other underrepresented segments of society;

67. pursue investments in the Native American community financial institutions, non-gambling-related economic enterprises, and ~~community~~ development projects that support and/or are owned by Native American and indigenous communities;

~~78. seek opportunities to invest in~~ pursue investments in underserved communities through affordable housing and community development projects;

9. seek investments in corporations, companies, institutions, funds, or ventures that respect international human rights and labor standards by avoiding the manufacture, or purchase through subcontracting, of products made with sweatshop, forced, or child labor and adhering to business practices detailed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the United Nations Global Compact, the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (also known as the Ruggie Principles), and the International Labour Organization’s core labor standards; and encourage companies that have not adopted the foregoing standards to do so;

10. seek investments in companies that publish and enforce supplier codes of conduct and hold suppliers accountable for any breaches of conduct;

~~9. encourage companies to adopt, implement, and monitor for compliance a supplier code of conduct that is consistent with the International Labor Organization’s core labor standards and designed to prevent the manufacture, or purchase through subcontracting, of products made with sweatshop, forced, or child labor;~~

~~10. encourage companies to honor and promote human rights and the dignity of human life consistent with the ten principles of the United Nations Global Compact and provide disclosure and transparency consistent with the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act;~~

911. seek opportunities to invest ~~investments in~~ corporations, companies, ~~banks~~institutions, funds, or ventures located in developing countries or dedicated to alleviating poverty in developing countries, provided that those countries respect human and labor rights and have a record of pursuing improvements in national living standards while working to maintain ecological integrity;

~~112. seek~~ pursue opportunities to encourage companies to work in partnerships to address major health challenges, including treatment for HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis; and malaria and to promote access to medicines and global health care;

13. ~~seek opportunities~~ endeavor to commend corporations publicly for their transparency, disclosure, ~~socially responsible behavior~~ sustainable business practices, and efforts to raise industry standards on ~~environmental, social, and governance~~ ESG issues that are of major concern to The United Methodist Church; and

14. ~~consider using investment portfolio managers and funds that specialize in corporate social responsibility screening or are owned by women and persons of color~~ actively evaluate external consultants, investment advisors and funds regarding their commitment to sustainable investment practices and diversity within their workforce and governance structure.

Socially Responsible Investing Investment Strategies

~~The Church shall pursue~~ The United Methodist Church's investment community is encouraged to use widely practiced sustainable investment strategies to fulfill its investment policy goals ~~through widely practiced socially responsible investing tools such as~~. These include:

1. ~~Portfolio Screening~~ Avoidance ("Screening" or "Ethical Exclusions")

~~Based on long-standing~~ United Methodist values, the Church does not invest in companies deriving significant revenue (usually 10 percent or more) from:

- alcoholic beverages
- tobacco products;
- gambling equipment or enterprises;
- pornography;
- operating or managing prison facilities;
- antipersonnel weapons, armaments, ammunition, or weapons-related systems provided for commercial and private markets and nuclear weapons.

~~investors should endeavor to exclude from their investment portfolios companies whose products or services do not align with long-standing Church values and/or ethical considerations in accordance with ¶ 717 of the Book of Discipline.~~

2. ~~Social Impact Investing~~ Advocacy ("Engagement" or "Active Ownership")

~~General Conference has instructed all Church-related investors to "make a conscious effort to invest in institutions, companies, corporations, or funds whose practices are consistent with the goals outlined in the Social Principles...." Investment strategy, therefore, is based on careful consideration not only of financial returns, but also of social returns across a wide range of issues. Some investments are designed to achieve very specific social outcomes, such as the construction of affordable housing, the renewal of neighborhoods, or the expansion of business ownership among those traditionally excluded from~~

~~such ownership.~~ The Social Principles (Book of Discipline ¶ 163.I) recognize that "corporations are responsible not only to their stockholders, but also to other stakeholders: their workers, suppliers, vendors, customers, the communities in which they do business, and for the earth, which supports them."

~~Companies may meet the broad investing guidelines of the Church but still fall short of the goals outlined in the Social Principles and the Book of Resolutions.~~

~~United Methodist investors, therefore, should endeavor to be active owners, engaging the companies in which they invest to manage ESG issues and exhibit high standards of corporate responsibility.~~

~~Engagement with companies may take many forms, including written communications, dialogues (including face-to-face meetings,) proxy voting, and the filing of shareholder resolutions.~~

~~Sustainable investment is also dependent on actions beyond engagement with individual corporations and may involve influencing public policy and regulatory bodies where the long-term sustainability of investment funds can be enhanced and priority ESG issues can be addressed.~~

3. ~~Shareholder Advocacy~~ Positive Impact Investments

~~Companies may meet the broad investing guidelines of the Church but still fall short of the goals outlined in the Social Principles and the Book of Resolutions. Responsible Christian investing includes seeking to change company business practices to match more closely articulated Church values. As shareholders of corporations, Church investors may engage corporate management in a variety of ways from writing letters to voting proxies, filing shareholder resolutions, building investor coalitions, and engaging in corporate dialogues. Some investments may be designed to achieve specific positive outcomes, such as the construction of affordable housing, the renewal of neighborhoods or the provision of clean energy. United Methodist investors are encouraged to pursue such opportunities around the world.~~

4. Strategic Partnerships

~~Working in collaboration with others~~ like-minded partners strengthens and magnifies the socially responsible sustainable investment voice and allows the convergence of strategies to engage corporations more forcefully on. Strategic partners may include United Methodist boards, agencies, foundations and universities, other faith-based investors, domestic and global nongovernmental organizations, responsible investing affinity groups and other global sustainable investors, such as those connected with signatories to the United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment (PRI), and other socially responsible investors.

5. Divestment

Divestment is ~~one of the socially responsible investing tools~~ a strategy available to United Methodist investors but it should be considered an investment strategy of last resort. Shareholder advocacy/engagement—though it takes time—generally is a more effective, and constructive way to influence corporate decision-making.

6. Public Policy Initiatives

~~Investors, as shareholders, work directly with companies to promote greater corporate responsibility; but good corporate responsibility also is dependent on actions beyond the individual corporate boardroom. Policies emanating from the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Reserve, state and federal legislatures, and other regulatory bodies play a significant role in the operation and behavior of companies. Responsible investing involves influencing these bodies to craft policies and procedures that promote greater corporate responsibility.~~

Investing Guidelines for Program Agencies

The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) is responsible for preparing and distributing the ~~socially responsible~~ investment guidelines that are to be used by all general agencies receiving general Church funds. ~~GCFA~~The council shall review and update these guidelines periodically, inviting the input of the agencies and other interested sectors of the Church. GCFA encourages investing agencies to be involved actively ~~involved~~ in the overview of socially sustainable and responsible investing as described in this policy.

Each general agency receiving general Church funds shall provide GCFA with a copy of its investment policy. The policy shall be made available upon request to any interested member of the Church.

All organizations affiliated with The United Methodist Church, including annual conferences, local churches, foundations, health-care systems, and colleges, and universities are strongly urged to follow these guidelines and to make public, either on the Internet or by request, their specific investing policies. Investing organizations may want to consider disclosing all of their ~~socially responsible~~ sustainable investing activities on publicly accessible web sites.

Where financial considerations preclude immediate ~~divestment~~ exclusion of securities held in violation of the above policies, the affected boards, agencies, and institutions of The United Methodist Church shall develop a plan for complying with the guidelines no later than the ~~2016~~2020 General Conference.

All United Methodist investors and users of financial services, whether institutional or individual, are strongly encouraged to use these guidelines.

Rationale:

Peace with Justice Sunday and Special Offering

Background: From Despair to Hope

Today our world is facing crises on an unprecedented scale: war, genocide, poverty, hunger, disease, and global warming. Saddened by the state of the world, overwhelmed by the scope of these problems, and anxious about the future, we believe God calls us and equips us to respond.

Harsh economic conditions have made it impossible for the world's poor to break the ongoing cycle of despair and exploitation. The disparity between rich and poor has grown. Global financial improvement has not affected many of those living on the margins of society.

Ongoing wars and intractable conflicts and political strife and repressive conditions have led to the disregard for international law and the breakdown of international cooperation. Human rights continue to be violated and disregarded. These and related changes taking place in our global community diminish our hope for potential future reductions in military expenditures. Global military spending, totaling $1.75 trillion in 2013 (Stockholm International Peace Research Institute Yearbook), drains resources of money and talent that might be used for meeting urgent social needs, long-term sustainable social and human development and protecting God's creation.

We have realized that we live in a broken world. We are challenged by acts of intolerance and aggression, by acts of racism and xenophobia, by acts of classism, sexism, ageism, and gender discrimination. God's beautiful universe and all that was good in creation are in danger of extinction by unsafe and unsound environmental practices. HIV/AIDS continues to escalate to pandemic proportions. Malaria and tuberculosis remain urgent concerns, even as new and deadly viruses like Ebola ravage communities around the world.

We must renew our call for a social transformation, for the quest to open the doors of opportunity for all, to distribute resources more equitably, and to provide better care for persons in need.

Peace with Justice is a faithful expression of shalom in the Bible. It calls the church to strengthen its capacity to advocate publicly in communities and nations throughout the world. It aims to make shalom visible and active in people's lives and communities by setting people free from bondage. We will celebrate Peace with Justice when all people have access to adequate jobs, housing, education, food, health care, income support and clean water. We will further celebrate when there is no more economic exploitation, war, political oppression, and cultural domination.

Biblical Basis for Response

The United Methodist Church, with its historic commitment to peace and justice, can and should provide leadership to this social transformation. This heritage is expressed in the Social Principles and the Social Creed. It was articulated by the United Methodist Council of Bishops foundation document "In Defense of Creation: The Nuclear Crisis and a Just Peace," which offers a well-grounded biblical analysis for Peace with Justice. The bishops wrote:

"At the heart of the Old Testament is the testimony to shalom, that marvelous Hebrew word that means peace. But the peace that is shalom is not negative or one-dimensional. It is much more than the absence of war. Shalom is positive peace: harmony, wholeness, health, and well-being in all human relationships. It is the natural state of humanity as birthed by God. It is harmony between humanity and all of God's good creation. All of creation is interrelated. Every creature, every element, every force of nature participates in the whole of creation. If any person is denied shalom, all are thereby diminished.

"The Old Testament speaks of God's sovereignty in terms of covenant, more particularly the 'covenant of peace' with Israel, which binds that people to God's shalom (Isaiah 54:10; Ezekiel 37:26). In the covenant of shalom, there is no contradiction between justice and peace or between peace and security or between love and justice (Jeremiah 29:7). In Isaiah's prophecy, when 'the Spirit is poured upon us from on high,' we will know that these laws of God are one and indivisible:

"Then justice will dwell in the wilderness, and the effect of righteousness will be peace, and the result of righteousness, quietness and trust forever. My people will abide in a peaceful habitation, in secure dwellings, and in quiet resting places' (Isaiah 32:16-18).

"Shalom, then, is the sum total of moral and spiritual qualities in a community whose life is in harmony with God's good creation" ("In Defense of Creation," pp. 24, 25-26).

Paul's letters announce that Jesus Christ is "our peace." It is Christ who "broke down the barrier of hatred that divided us," creating one humanity, overcoming enmity, so making peace (Ephesians 2:14-19). It is Christ who ordains a ministry of reconciliation. Repentance prepares us for reconciliation. Then we shall open ourselves to the transforming power of God's grace in Christ. Then we shall know what it means to be "in Christ." Then we are to become ambassadors of a new creation, a new Kingdom, a new order of love and justice (2 Corinthians 5:17-20).

In their 2010 pastoral document, "God's Renewed Creation: Call to Hope and Action," the Council of Bishops reminds us:

"No matter how bad things are, God's creative work continues. Christ's resurrection assures us that death and destruction do not have the last word. Paul taught that through Jesus Christ, God offers redemption to all of creation and reconciles all things, 'whether on earth or in heaven' (Colossians 1:20). God's Spirit is always and everywhere at work in the world fighting poverty, restoring health, renewing creation, and reconciling peoples."

This is the foundation of faith that enables us in The United Methodist Church to offer hope to those who despair and to bring forth joy to replace sadness. We can join hearts in the traditional prayer of Saint Francis of Assisi that we act in the spirit of Christ, so we too can sow love where there is hatred, can dispense pardon where there is injury, can cast light where there is darkness. As instruments of peace and justice, we can seek to replace discord with harmony and to repair the brokenness that shatters the wholeness of shalom.

Program Activities

The General Board of Church and Society will carry out the following "Peace with Justice" activities:

1. implement the "Policies for a Just Peace" as specified in the Council of Bishops' "In Defense of Creation," the Council's "God's Renewed Creation: Call to Hope and Action," and the resolutions on "The United Methodist Church and Peace," "Globalization and Its Impact on Human Dignity and Human Rights," as well as other resolutions on war, peace, disarmament, and terrorism;

2. participate in the pilgrimage of Justice and Peace as our contribution to realizing the call of the 10th assembly of the World Council of Churches in 2013 held in Busan, South Korea.

3. work with the World Council of Churches, inter-faith and ecumenical bodies, and secular organizations for social-justice policies and programs that seek the wholeness of shalom for all of God's people, and

4. work to eradicate attitudinal and systemic behavior patterns that perpetuate the sin of racism and gender discrimination as it is lived out in the areas of peace, justice, and the integrity of creation.

To achieve these objectives, the General Board of Church and Society may:

a. assist annual conferences, districts, and local churches to organize and carry out Peace with Justice activities, and to promote the Peace with Justice Special Sunday Offering in coordination with United Methodist Communications;

b. provide a regular flow of information on public issues to local churches, districts, and annual and central conferences;

c. strengthen its capacity to act as a public-policy advocate of measures that improve global relations and move toward just peacemaking, and measures that provide jobs, housing, education, food, health care, income support, and clean water to all;

d. assist annual and central conferences and/or local churches to assess and respond to the disproportionate effect of injustices on racial and ethnic persons in the world; and

e. assist annual conference Peace with Justice coordinators to carry out their duties.

For the purpose of financing activities (a) to achieve the "Policies for a Just Peace" contained in the Council of Bishops' "In Defense of Creation" and "God's Renewed Creation: Call to Hope and Action," and (b) to pursue other justice and peace objectives contained within the vision of shalom in this same document, revenue shall come from the Peace with Justice Special Sunday offering and other possible sources in accordance with the 2012 Book of Discipline ¶ 263.5 and World Service Special gifts.

Assignment

The Peace with Justice Sunday and Special Offering shall be assigned to the General Board of Church and Society.

Rationale:

Peace with Justice is a faithful expression of shalom in the Bible. This new resolution provides explanation and guidance on understanding the importance of the Peace with Justice Special Sunday, and how it supports biblical shalom.

Diplomacy and Investments in Palestine

Add new Resolution “Middle Eastern Diplomacy and Investments in Palestine”

Whereas, the Israeli/Palestinian conflict is one of the world’s most intractable conflicts with years of an unsuccessful peace process despite strong support for a two-state solution on the part of both the Israeli and Palestinian people; and

Whereas, the 1967 war between Israel and the surrounding Arab nations resulted in the occupation of Palestinian Territories, and the peace process that began with the 1993 Oslo Accords has still not created a sovereign Palestinian State although final status offers were made in 2000 and in 2008. An agreement was never reached and both parties have at different times walked away from the negotiations; and

Whereas, ongoing suffering continues for both parties with Israeli settlement growth and control over the Palestinian population and economy and a lack of security for Israelis;

Whereas, intransigence by both parties creates a regionally and globally dangerous and volatile situation and only a negotiated agreement leading to a peace treaty will bring a true end to this conflict; and

Whereas, simple calls for the parties to return to the negotiating table are no longer sufficient to address the urgency of the situation;

THEREFORE, be it resolved that the 2016 General Conference calls on the General Board of Church & Society, the General Board of Global Ministries, and the General Board of Pensions and Health Benefits of The United Methodist Church respectively to:

1. Lobby the United States government to draft a just and comprehensive peace agreement to present to the Israelis and Palestinians with the expectation that both parties sign within a two-year period and to offer a variety of strong incentives to encourage them to sign. In addition to foreign aid, these incentives could include favorable trade and shipping agreements, favorable student and work-related visa arrangements, and coordination on various diplomatic fronts. The comprehensive agreement would recognize a sovereign Palestinian State, define borders, and address the core issues of the status of Jerusalem, settlements, refugees, and security arrangements; and

2. Urge all national governments represented in The United Methodist Church to invest substantial diplomatic capital in support of such a framework; and

3. Encourage the General Board of Pensions and other investors, such as United Methodist foundations to continue to research and identify investment opportunities in the infrastructure of the Palestinian economy to help build a viable Palestinian state and strengthen the economic well-being of Palestinian communities.

Rationale:

In light of the breakdown and stagnation of the peace process, United Methodists should lobby the United States government to take a more proactive role in negotiations.

Divest from Caterpillar

Add new resolution to the Book of Resolutions as follows:

The United Methodist 2012 General Conference asked “all United Methodist general boards and agencies prayerfully consider advocating that all companies formally recognize and adopt into their codes of conduct the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (also known as the Ruggie Principles). The United Methodist Book of Discipline’s statement on Socially Responsible Investments says, “The boards and agencies are to give careful consideration to shareholder advocacy, including advocacy of corporate disinvestment” (2012 Book of Discipline, ¶ 717). Further, The United Methodist Church opposes Israel’s occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip (Resolution 6111, “Opposition to Israeli Settlements in Palestinian Land,” 2012 Book of Resolutions).

Caterpillar, Inc. machines are used by the Israeli government and by the Israeli military for the demolition of Palestinian houses and water supplies in the occupied Palestinian territories, the construction of the Separation Wall, construction of settlements and settlement infrastructure on Palestinian land, the uprooting of olive trees, creation of roadblocks, and as weapons (“Facts on the Ground: Heavy Engineering Machinery and the Israeli Occupation Report,” Who Profits Research Center, July 2014).

Caterpillar's D9 bulldozers favored by Israel's military are not the familiar equipment used for farming or for municipal projects, but rather are two-story machines weighing 54 kilos/60 tons with a front blade more than 1.8 meters/6-feet high and 4.5 meters/15-feet wide and a clawlike hydraulic "ripper" in the back, as well as gun turrets (The Caterpillar Campaign, U.S. Campaign to End the Israeli Occupation, [www.endtheoccupation.org]). In fact, an Israeli military commander referred to Caterpillar bulldozers as "the key weapon" in its military occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (Alon, Ben David 'Israel-Double Jeopardy,' Janes Defense Weekly, 11/17/04). Israeli Defense Minister Shaul Mofaz has declared, "The D-9 is a strategic weapon here" (www.btselem.org/Download/200101_Civilians_Under_Siege_Eng.doc). Caterpillar machines have been used in the killing of Palestinian civilians, including a pregnant woman, a paraplegic, an elderly paralyzed man, and families including children (www.apnewsarchive.com/2002/Bodies-Recovered-in-Nablus-Rubble/id-d7216a4b0417bdcf-9c2beac8a5a7e554). An American peace activist, Rachel Corrie, was killed by a Caterpillar bulldozer as she tried to protect a Palestinian home from demolition (<http://rachelcorriefoundation.org/>).

Caterpillar sells its military equipment to Israel through the U.S. Foreign Military Sales Program. Because this equipment is weaponized and used as a weapon in the occupied territories, the sale of Caterpillar bulldozers to the Israeli military violates the U.S. Arms Export Control Act, which prohibits the use of U.S.-made machinery or weapons against a civilian population.

Israel's sole Caterpillar distributor, Zoko Enterprises, provides employees who can function as reserve soldiers to service the D-9s during military operations on the battlefield ("Facts on the Ground: Heavy Engineering Machinery and the Israeli Occupation Report," Who Profits Research Center, July 2014).

A 2013 report to the United Nations Human Rights Committee states: "Caterpillar could protect against the militarized misuse of its equipment by contracting restrictions for use in its sales agreements, such as the insertion of provisions eliminating further sales if Caterpillar products were employed in human rights violations. Such an option would allow Caterpillar to send a clear message that it will not be complicit in human-rights abuses" (The Global Initiative for Economic, Social and Cultural Rights Joint Parallel Report to the United Nations Human Rights Committee, 109th Session, 14 October–1 November 2013).

Caterpillar has shown it can guide its dealers and subsidiaries in matters concerning equipment use by a letter prohibiting them from accepting orders for equipment that could ultimately be used in Iran (www.wsj.com/articles/SB10001424052748703429304575095430605944518).

The Palestinian Christian community, through the Kairos Palestine document, has requested the support of the wider Church (Kairos Palestine, "A Moment of Truth: A Word of Faith, Hope and Love from the Heart of Palestinian Suffering" [www.kairopalestine.ps/sites/default/Documents/English.pdf Web. December 2009]). Palestinian Christian leaders have specifically requested the support of The United Methodist Church; (Letter to The United Methodist Church from Rifat Odeh Kassiss, General Coordinator, Kairos Palestine, November 28, 2014 [www.kairosresponse.org/Rifat_Kassiss.html. Web. January 2015]). All UMC missionaries serving in the Holy Land over the last 25 years likewise support concrete actions by our denomination to show our support of Palestinian rights (United Methodist Missionaries Support Divestment from the Israeli occupation. [www.kairosresponse.org/UMC_Missionaries_Divestment.html. Web. January 2015]).

The United Methodist General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBPHB) holds stock in Caterpillar, Inc. and has increased those holdings significantly since General Conference 2012.

For ten years, various groups from The United Methodist Church, other denominations, and numerous advocacy groups have brought human-rights violations to the attention of Caterpillar, Inc. through letters, e-mails and private meetings with Caterpillar officials, yet the company has failed to respond with any corrective measures. Despite repeated discussions concerning this issue, Caterpillar, Inc. has refused a direct request from GBPHB to sign the U.N. Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

The GBPHB, as part of its Socially Responsible Investing screens, lists "weapons" among other products that do not align with United Methodist values and thus "excludes investments in companies earning significant revenues from . . . weapons . . ." In 2012, GBPHB released a statement expressing "our belief that the company's policies expose Caterpillar—and by extension, its shareholders—to reputational and financial risk."

To encourage companies to be responsive to United Methodist concerns and to avoid profiting from weapons that support Israel's occupation, the United Methodist 2016 General Conference directs the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits to divest its shares of Caterpillar stock, and to exclude it from further investment until the company

1. signs the U.N. Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights,

2. stops providing D-9 bulldozers for Israel to use as weapons in the occupied Palestinian territories, and

3. prohibits all Caterpillar dealers or subsidiaries from accepting any orders for equipment where the dealer or subsidiary knows that the products will be used in the construction of Israeli settlements, the construction of bypass roads, the construction of the security barrier, or the demolition of Palestinian homes or agricultural fields in the occupied Palestinian territories.

Rationale:

United Methodist funds should not be invested in companies or institutions that profit from activities conducted in illegally occupied territory.

The Greatest Commandment

Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength. The second is this: Love your neighbor as yourself. There is no commandment greater than these. Mark 12:30-31 (NIV)

Jesus, when asked what the greatest commandment was, answered the teacher of the law with the words above. The requirement to “love your neighbor as yourself” often is the hardest to follow.

Covenant Bible Study offers a unique blueprint for strengthening community and building deeper relationships within churches.

The premise of the study is to encourage participants to live covenant life together—deepening relationships through shared faith and Bible study. Designed in three, 8-week sessions, Covenant takes participants directly into scripture's navigating themes and stories of what it means to live in authentic community and walk alongside each other in a real and honest way.

Visit the Cokesbury store and take a firsthand look at Covenant; while you're there, pick up some free samples to share among leaders in your church.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Volume 2

Nashville, Tennessee

Report of the Committee on Faith and Order to the General Conference of The United Methodist Church 2016

The Committee on Faith and Order shall give leadership to The United Methodist Church in reflecting upon, discerning and living out matters of faith, doctrinal teaching, order, and discipline in the midst of mission and ministry in the church and the world. The committee shall be a visible expression of the commitment of The United Methodist Church to carry on informed theological reflection for the current time in dynamic continuity with the historic Christian faith, our common heritage as Christians grounded in the apostolic witness, and our distinctive Wesleyan heritage.

Created with this mandate at the General Conference of 2008 in Fort Worth, Texas, the Committee on Faith and Order has been on a circuitous and rich journey this past quadrennium. As the General Conference of 2012 was working to put together a structure for the church following a Judicial Council ruling, the paragraphs authorizing the Committee on Faith and Order were inadvertently left out. The Committee is grateful that the Council of Bishops, with whom we had developed a close working relationship, was willing to provide funding and support for our continuing work. The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships have also been valuable and significant partners in our work, providing support and staffing. In spite of the organizational challenges, we continued to respond to the mandate given at our creation by providing a forum for intentional systematic and inclusive conversations about matters of faith, doctrine, and order.

Our work this quadrennium has focused on four areas: (1) We have been working in a consultative role with the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters as they make proposals for a “General Book of Discipline” (as per ¶ 101). They have consulted with us on their legislation. (2) We have prepared a constructive statement of United Methodist ecclesiology, now entitled Wonder, Love and Praise. We are presenting legislation for the Book of Resolutions proposing a churchwide study process for this document. (3) We have been working on the theology and practice of Christian conferencing at the request of the Commission on the General Conference as the commission sought to shape the 2016 General Conference. A presentation on Christian Conferencing was made to the Council of Bishops. Time will be spent at General Conference on Christian Conferencing, with supporting materials in the ADCA and in a booklet to be published by The United Methodist Publishing House. (4) We continue working on a teaching resource for our denomination that might be used in confirmation classes, in adult faith formation, and in outreach and evangelism. In addition to these focus areas, we are proposing through legislation a reauthorization of the Committee of Faith and Order related and amenable to the Council of Bishops (ADCA, new ¶ 443-450).

In the coming quadrennium we will continue our work on the following projects: (1) Wonder, Love and Praise with the goal of presenting a version to the 2020 General Conference for adoption as an official teaching document of the church comparable to By Water and the Spirit and This Holy Mystery; and (2) the teaching resource, which we hope to have completed by 2020. We anticipate that to these projects will be added others by the Council of Bishops and the General Conference. In a time of great change and ferment in church and world, we believe there is value in convening a group whose purpose is to be a visible expression of the commitment of The United Methodist Church to carry on informed theological reflection for the current time in dynamic continuity with the historic Christian faith, our common heritage as Christians grounded in the apostolic witness, and our distinctive Wesleyan heritage.

Respectfully Submitted,

David Kekumba Yemba, Chairperson
The Committee on Faith and Order
The United Methodist Church

Proposed Amendments to the Book of Discipline

¶101.

Petition Number: 60276-FO-¶101-G; Streiff, Patrick - Zurich, Switzerland for Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters. Yemba, David Kekumba - Kinshasa II, nu Democratic Republic of Congo for Committee on Faith and Order.

General Book of Discipline

Amend the Book of Discipline as follows:

Part II

~~GLOBAL~~ GENERAL Book of Discipline

¶101. The General Book of Discipline reflects our Wesleyan way of serving Christ through doctrine and disciplined Christian life. We are a worldwide denomination united by doctrine, discipline, and mission through our connectional covenant. The General Book of Discipline expresses that unity. Each central conference may make changes and adaptations to the General Book of Discipline to more fruitfully accomplish our mission in various contexts. However, some portions of the General Book of Discipline are not subject to adaptation. The following parts and paragraphs are not subject to change or adaptation except by action of the General Conference. The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters has primary responsibility for proposing to General Conference revisions to this paragraph.

Parts I, ~~III~~-V

I. Constitution ¶¶ 1–61

II. General Book of Discipline ¶ 101

III. Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task ¶¶ 102–105

IV. The Ministry of All Christians ¶¶ 120–143

V. Social Principles ~~Preface, Preamble, and ¶¶160–166~~

The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, in consultation with the Committee on Faith and Order, will bring recommendations to the 2016 General Conference as to which parts and paragraphs in Part VI of the Book of Discipline are not subject to change or adaptation. legislation to the 2020 General Conference to change the structure of the General Book of Discipline to include a Part VI, General Organization and Administration not subject to change or adaptation by central conferences, and a Part VII, Additional Organization and Administration, adaptable by central conferences according to ¶ 31.5. The content of Part VI of the 2016 Book of Discipline will be included in either Part VI or Part VII of the General Book of Discipline.

The Commission on the General Conference is directed to set aside adequate time in the first three days of the 2020 General Conference for plenary consideration and action on Part VI, General Administration and Organization, submitted by the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters. Subsequent changes to Part VI shall be reviewed by the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters for submission to General Conference.

Rationale:

The revision mandates the Standing Committee to complete the work during the next quadrennium, replaces ‘global’ by ‘general’ and thus brings unity in the terminology (general conference, bishops as general superintendents, see ¶ 31.5), and directs the Commission on General Conference to structure a process for the 2020 General Conference . . .

Petition Number: 60352-FO-¶101-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

General Book of Discipline Process

Amend ¶101

Part II. ~~GLOBAL~~ Book of Discipline THE NEW GENERAL DISCIPLINE

¶ 101. ~~The Book of Discipline reflects our Wesleyan way of serving Christ through doctrine and disciplined Christian life. We are~~ The United Methodist Church is a worldwide denomination united by doctrine, discipline, and mission through ~~our a~~ connectional covenant. The Book of A new General Discipline will reflect our Wesleyan way of serving Christ and expresses that our unity. Each central conference may make changes and adaptations to the Book of Discipline to more fruitfully accomplish our mission in various contexts. However, some portions of the Book of Discipline are not subject to adaptation. The following parts and paragraphs are not subject to change or adaptation except by action of the General Conference. The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters has primary responsibility for proposing to General Conference revisions to this paragraph.

Parts I, ~~III~~-V

The new General Discipline will contain what is distinctively connectional and is subdivided into the following parts:

I. Constitution ¶¶ 1–61

III. Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task ¶¶ 102–105

IV. The Ministry of All Christians ¶¶ 120–143

V. Social Principles Preface, Preamble, and ¶¶ 160–166

VI. Organization and Administration: The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, in consultation with the Committee on Faith and Order, will bring recommendations to the ~~2016~~ 2020 General Conference as to the draft of all of Part VI in a new General Discipline, the draft of General Regulations, and the draft of additional legislation for territories outside the boundaries of central conferences, for adoption and implementation by the 2020 General Conference. In preparation of the draft of Part VI, chapter 5 (Administrative Order), the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters shall work jointly with the Connectional Table. In preparation of the draft of Part VI, Chapter Two (The Ministry of the Ordained), and Part VI, Chapter Three (The Superintendency), the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters shall work jointly with the Commission for the Study of Ministry. Following the 2016 General Conference, central conferences shall continue to have the power of adaptation of the Book of Discipline according to par. 31.5.

Rationale:

Because of the Connectional Table's responsibility for recommendations related to Administrative Order and the Commission for the Study of Ministry's responsibility for studying and making recommendations for Licensed/Ordained Ministry and Superintendency, both of these bodies need to be included in the development of a new General Discipline.

Two-Jurisdiction Solution – Power to Adapt the Discipline

Amend: ¶ 101 The Book of Discipline reflects our Wesleyan way of serving Christ through doctrine and disciplined Christian life. We are a worldwide denomination united by doctrine, discipline, and mission through our connectional covenant. The Book of Discipline expresses that unity. Each central conference and jurisdictional conference may make changes and adaptations to the Book of Discipline to more fruitfully accomplish our mission in various contexts. However, some portions of the Book of Discipline are not subject to adaptation. The following parts and paragraphs are not subject to change or adaptation except by action of the General Conference. The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters has primary responsibility for proposing to General Conference revisions to this paragraph.

Parts I, III-V

1. Constitution ¶¶ 1-61

2. Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task ¶¶ 101-104

3. The Ministry of All Christians ¶¶ 120-142

4. Social Principles Preface; and Preamble and ¶¶ 160–166

Rationale:

One way to achieve amicable unity in the UMC is through a Two-Jurisdiction solution. This piece of that solution grants jurisdictions the same power as central conferences to adapt parts of the Discipline and expands the adaptable sections to include the main body of our Social Principles. See jurisdictionalsolution.org.

Deletion

Delete ¶ 104 - ARTICLE XXIII – Of the Rulers of the United States of America

~~The President, the Congress, the general assemblies, the governors, and the Councils of the state, as the delegates of the people, are rulers of the United States of America, according to the division of power made to them by the Constitution of the United States and by the constitutions of their respective states. And the said states are a sovereign and independent nation, and ought not to be subject to any foreign jurisdiction.~~

Rationale:

The article addresses the rulers of the United States of America and owing to the fact that The United Methodist Church is global in nature, the article is irrelevant for the global United Methodist church.

THE NICENE-CONSTANTINOPOLITAN CREED

We believe in one God, the Father, the Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, of all that is, seen and unseen.

We believe in one Lord, Jesus Christ, the only Son of God, eternally begotten of the Father, God from God, Light from Light, true God from True God, begotten, not made, of one being with the Father; through Him all things were made. For us and for our salvation he came down from heaven, was incarnate of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary and became truly human. For our sake He was crucified under Pontius Pilate; He suffered death and was buried. On the third day He rose again in accordance with the Scriptures; He ascended into heaven and is seated at the right hand of the Father. He will come again in glory to judge the living and the dead, and His kingdom will have no end.

We believe in the Holy Spirit, the Lord, the Giver of Life, who proceeds from the Father and the Son, who with the Father and the Son is worshiped and glorified, who has spoken through the prophets. We believe in one holy catholic and apostolic church. We acknowledge one baptism for the forgiveness of sins. We look for the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come. Amen.

Rationale:

Implementing legislation for amendments to ¶¶ 3 and 17. The Doctrinal Standards affirm the Nicene Creed. Including the creed further strengthens ecumenical conversation, giving a theological framework for dialogue and discernment within United Methodism. Also, it professes our theological connection and heritage with the greater Church of Jesus Christ.

Revision of Our Theological Task

Amend ¶ 105 as follows:

¶ 105. SECTION 4—OUR THEOLOGICAL TASK

Theology is our effort to reflect upon God's gracious action in our lives. In response . . .

The Nature of Our Theological Task

Our theological task is both critical and constructive. It is critical in that . . .

Theological Guidelines: Sources and Criteria

...

In practice, theological reflection may also find its point of departure in tradition, experience, or rational analysis. ~~What matters most is that all four~~ Yet these three guidelines must be brought to bear in faithful, ~~serious~~, theological consideration upon the living core of the Christian faith as revealed in Scripture, our primary authority. We turn to these three in the process of interpreting Scripture (a process known as hermeneutics), but not as independent sources of truth. Insights arising from serious study of the Scriptures and tradition enrich contemporary experience. Imaginative and critical thought enables us to understand better the Bible and our common Christian history.

Scripture

United Methodists share with other Christians the conviction that Scripture is the primary source and criterion for Christian doctrine. Through Scripture the living Christ meets us in the experience of redeeming grace. We are convinced that Jesus Christ is the living Word of God in our midst whom we trust in life and death. The biblical authors, illumined by the Holy Spirit, bear witness that in Christ the world is reconciled to God. The Bible bears authentic testimony to God's self-disclosure in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ as well as in God's work of creation, ~~in the pilgrimage of God's covenant relationship with ancient~~ Israel, and in the Holy Spirit's ongoing activity in human history.

As we open our minds and hearts . . .

The Bible is sacred canon . . .

Our standards affirm the Bible . . .

We properly read Scripture . . .

We interpret individual texts . . .

We are aided by scholarly inquiry . . .

Through this faithful reading of Scripture, we may come to know the truth of the biblical message in its bearing on our own lives and the life of the world. Thus, the Bible serves both as a source of our faith and as the basic criterion by which the truth and fidelity of any interpretation of faith is measured. As the primary source and critterion, Scripture therefore holds a privileged position among the other sources in the theological task.

While we acknowledge the primacy of Scripture in theological reflection, ~~our attempts to grasp its meaning always involve~~ we do not minimize the contributions of tradition, experience, and reason in that reflection. Like Scripture, these may become creative vehicles of the Holy Spirit as they function within the Church. ~~They~~ These three sources quicken our faith, open our eyes to the wonder of God's love, and clarify our understanding.

The Wesleyan heritage, reflecting its origins in the catholic and reformed ethos of English Christianity, directs us to a self-conscious use of these three sources in interpreting Scripture and in formulating faith statements based on the biblical witness. These sources are, ~~along with Scripture~~ therefore, indispensable to our theological task.

The close relationship of tradition, experience, and reason . . .

The developing communities of faith judged them, therefore, to be an authoritative witness to that revelation. ~~In recognizing~~ Thus, while we recognize the interrelationship ~~and inseparability~~ of the four basic resources for theological ~~understanding~~ reflection, ~~we are following a model that is present in the biblical text itself~~ emphasize that tradition, experience, and reason—taken singly or in combination—cannot be interpreted to contravene Scripture as the primary source and criterion for doctrine.

Tradition

The theological task . . .

In these attempts, tradition, understood both in terms of process and form, has played an important role. The passing on and receiving of the gospel among persons, regions, and generations constitutes a dynamic element of Christian history. The formulations and practices that grew out of specific ~~circumstances~~ historical contexts constitute the legacy of the corporate experience of earlier Christian communities.

Wesley believed that doctrines should be proved first by Scripture and reason, and then by Christian antiquity if need be. He understood Christian antiquity to be the "primitive church," a pristine age of Christianity, which he generally took to be the first three or four centuries of Christian history. These traditions are found in many cultures around the globe. But the history of Christianity includes a mixture of ignorance, misguided zeal, and sin. Thus, we United Methodists are heirs of a great heritage, which includes the Apostles' Creed and the ecumenical creeds framed at Nicaea and Chalcedon (and preserved in our Doctrinal Standards, § 104). In addition to antiquity, Wesley relied on the liturgy, articles of religion, and homilies of the Church of England, in which he was an orained priest. Yet Scripture remained the norm by which all traditions ~~are were~~ to be judged.

The story of the church reflects the most basic sense of tradition, the continuing activity of God's Spirit transforming human life. ~~Tradition is the history of that continuing environment of grace in and by which all Christians live, God's self-giving love in Jesus Christ. As such, tradition transcends the story of particular traditions.~~ In this deeper sense of tradition, all Christians share a common history. ~~Within that history, Christian tradition precedes Scripture, and yet Scripture comes to be the focal expression of the tradition. As United Methodists, we pursue our theological task in openness to the richness of both the form and power of tradition.~~

~~The multiplicity of traditions furnishes a richly varied source for theological reflection and construction. For United Methodists, certain strands of tradition have special importance as the historic foundation of our doctrinal heritage and the distinctive expressions of our communal existence.~~

~~We are now~~ Today, we are challenged by traditions from around the world that accent dimensions of Christian understanding that grow out of the sufferings and victories of the downtrodden. These traditions help us rediscover the biblical witness to God's special commitment to the poor, the disabled, the imprisoned, the oppressed, the outcast. In these persons we encounter the living presence of Jesus Christ.

These traditions underscore . . .

A critical appreciation of these traditions ~~can~~ compels us to think about God in ~~new ways~~ ways that are both ancient and modern, enlarges our vision of shalom, and enhances our confidence in God's ~~provident~~ redeeming love.

Tradition acts as a measure of validity . . .

It is by the discerning use of our doctrinal standards and in openness to ~~emerging~~ diverse forms of Christian ~~identity~~ tradition that we attempt to maintain fidelity to the apostolic faith. ~~At the same time~~ In this process, we ~~continue to~~ draw on the ~~broader~~ ecumenical Christian tradition as an expression of the history of divine grace with-in which Christians are able to recognize and welcome one another in love.

Experience

In our theological task, we follow Wesley's practice . . .

Our experience interacts with Scripture in this confirming role. We read Scripture in light of the conditions and events that help shape who we are, and we interpret our experience in terms of Scripture. As with tradition, Scripture remains the norm by which all experiences are judged.

~~All religious experience affects all human experience; all human experience affects our understanding of religious experience.~~

On the personal level, experience is ~~to the individual as tradition is to the church~~. It is the personal appropriation of God's forgiving and empowering grace. Experience authenticates in our own lives the truths revealed in Scripture and illumined in tradition, enabling us to claim the Christian witness as our own.

Wesley described faith . . .

This "new life in Christ" is what we as United Methodists mean when we speak of "Christian experience," which is not the ordinary experience of the unbeliever. Rather, it is the unique experience of the believer, and corporately, the church, in the task of reflecting upon Scripture and the realities of Christian living. Christian experience gives us new eyes to see the living truth in Scripture, confirming the biblical message for our present. Therefore, experience does not contravene Scripture as the primary source and criterion for doctrine. It confirms the biblical message for our present. ~~It~~ Christian experience illumines our understanding of God and creation and motivates us to make sensitive moral judgments.

Although profoundly personal, Christian experience is also corporate; our theological task is informed by the experience of the global church and by the common experiences of all humanity. In our attempts to understand the biblical message, we recognize that God's gift of liberating love embraces the whole of creation.

Some facets of human experience . . .

A new awareness . . .

As a source for theological reflection, experience, like tradition, is richly varied, challenging our efforts to put into words the totality of the promises of the gospel. We interpret experience in the light of scriptural norms, just as our experience ~~informs~~ vivifies our reading of the biblical message. In this respect, Scripture remains central in our efforts to be faithful in making our Christian witness.

Reason

In theological reflection, the resources of tradition, experience, and reason are integral to our study of Scripture without displacing Scripture's primacy for faith and practice. These four sources—~~each making distinctive contributions, yet all finally working together~~—together guide our quest as United Methodists for a vital and appropriate Christian witness.

The Present Challenge to Theology in the Church

In addition to historic tensions and conflicts that still require resolution, new issues . . .

Rationale:

These changes clarify our roots in Mr. Wesley's understanding of Scripture, and the confirmatory roles of reason, tradition, and experience, in order to make clear that tradition and especially experience are untrustworthy whenever they deviate from Scripture, which is always trustworthy.

UM Seminary Accessibility

Amend Discipline ¶ 140.

We recognize that God made all creation and saw that it was good. As a diverse people of God who bring special gifts and evidences of God’s grace to the unity of the Church and to society, we are called to be faithful to the example of Jesus’ ministry to all persons.

Inclusiveness means openness, acceptance, and support that enables all persons to participate in the life of the Church, the community, and the world; therefore, inclusiveness denies every semblance of discrimination. The services of worship of every local church of The United Methodist Church shall be open to all persons.

The mark of an inclusive society is one in which all persons are open, welcoming, fully accepting, and supporting of all other persons, enabling them to participate fully in the life of the church, the community, and the world. A further mark of inclusiveness is the setting of church activities in facilities accessible to persons with disabilities.

In The United Methodist Church inclusiveness means the freedom for the total involvement of all persons who meet the requirements of The United Methodist Book of Discipline in the membership and leadership of the Church at any level and in every place. In the spirit of this declaration, United Methodist seminaries will ~~make all efforts to meet Americans with Disabilities (ADA) accessibility standards by the year 2011. Exemptions for historical or existing buildings are not allowed under this requirement~~ begin or continue to improve access to facilities, to information and communication, and to appropriate support services and accommodations, as delineated by The United Nations Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities.

Rationale:

This petition proposes to remove an outdated deadline and replace a US-centric requirement with a global standard. Seminaries need to be prepared for students with disabilities but it is understood that work toward this goal will vary from place to place.

Called to Inclusiveness

Amend ¶ 140:

¶ 140. We recognize that God made . . . to all persons Inclusiveness means openness, acceptance, and support that enables all persons to participate in the life of the Church, the community, and the world. ~~Therefore, inclusiveness denies every semblance of discrimination. The services of worship of every local church of The United Methodist Church shall be open to all persons.~~ The mark of an inclusive society is one in which all members are open, welcoming, fully accepting, and supporting of all other persons, enabling this participation. ~~them to participate fully in the life of the church, the community and the world.~~ A further mark of this inclusiveness is ~~the setting of church activities in facilities accessible to persons with disabilities.~~ It is an important value, but it is not unconditional or all-controlling.

Throughout its history, the Church has been inclusive in matters of race and ethnicity and exclusive in matters of belief and conduct. Genesis 1:27, John 3:16-17, Acts 10:34, Galatians 3:28, and 2 Peter 3:9 are just a few of the Scriptures highlighting this inclusiveness. But the same Lord Jesus Christ who said, "And I, when I am lifted up from the earth, will draw all people to myself" (John 12:32), also said, "Not everyone who says to me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven, but only the one who does the will of the Father in heaven" (Matthew 7:21). People exclude themselves from God's kingdom and the Church by willfully clinging to unbelief and evil deeds (cf. John 3:19-20, 1 John 2:18-19). Christ warned us to "Beware of false prophets" (Matthew 7:15). We are given criteria for virtuous discrimination of the true child of God from the imposter (Deuteronomy 13:1-6, 18:20-22, Matthew 7:16-16-20, 1 Corinthians 12:2-3, and 1 John 2:18-29), and our proper response is "speaking the truth in love" (Ephesians 4:15).

Our Wesleyan forbears understood well and promoted this long-held church tradition. Membership in their societies were conditioned solely on "a desire to flee from the wrath to come," but to the habitual breaker of the societies' rules, they warned, "We will admonish him of the error of his ways. We will bear with him for a season. But then, if he repent not, he hath no place among us" (The General Rules).

Therefore, in ~~the~~ The United Methodist Church inclusiveness means that (1) the services of worship of every local church shall be open to all persons as far as is consistent with good order, public safety, and lawful court orders, and (2) the freedom for the total involvement of all persons who meet the requirements of the United Methodist Book of Discipline in the membership and leadership of the Church at any level and in every place. This second stipulation means that, while we allow considerable diversity in "opinions which do not strike at the root of Christianity" (Wesley, The Character of a Methodist), those engaging in practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be contrary to Christian teaching and those who spread teachings contrary to our established standards of doctrine exclude themselves and forfeit this freedom. With this in mind, we must consider five further areas of inclusiveness or exclusion affecting our mission to make disciples.

1. Racism. Racism and its accompanying evils of segregation (sometimes called apartheid) and slavery should have no place in the thinking or practice of any Christian. We celebrate the thousands of Methodists, Evangelicals, and United Brethren who protested these evils, preached against them, and worked tirelessly to end them. But, to our shame, many others practiced racism or tolerated it by silence or even misrepresented the Scriptures to justify it biblically. These things should never have happened. They must not happen again.

Our stand against racism has led us to oppose the naming of sports teams after the names of Native American peoples and other words associated with Native Americans. Many Native Americans are grieved by this sports practice and view it as perpetuating negative racial stereotypes. However, other Native Americans are not offended in every instance and have sometimes viewed the practice as a compliment. An inclusive church will recognize and be sensitive to both views.

2. Burdening the disabled. A further mark of inclusiveness is setting church activities in facilities accessible to persons with disabilities. In the spirit of this declaration, United Methodist seminaries will make all efforts to meet Americans with Disabilities (ADA) accessibility standards by the year 2011. Exemptions for historical or existing buildings are not allowed under this requirement.

3. Inclusive or gender-neutral language. Ironically, the pursuit of inclusiveness here has sometimes prompted exclusion. For some in the Church, "Biblical faithfulness requires the use of inclusive language." For others, gender-neutral expressions (especially those that suppress such biblical titles for God as "Father," "King," and "Lord," for Christ as "Son of God," and for the Church as "the Bride of Christ") represent distortions of biblical teaching and Christian truth. So does calling God "Mother," which echoes the theologies of Mormonism and Christian Science. Other expressions, such as “Godself,” are equally repugnant. With respect to both opinions, an inclusive church will exercise great sensitivity and restraint. One has truly observed, “The trouble with inclusive language is no one’s agreed when’s enough.” When gender-neutral language alters the language of worship and Scripture, those who revere traditional phrases in Scripture, hymns, and liturgies feel excluded. Still others who support limited uses of gender-neutral language have found themselves censured and belittled by those who demand more.

These things ought not to be. We call for tolerance, respect, and civility by those on all sides of the question and urge the thorough-going supporters of gender-neutral language to consider these thoughts by the late Georgia Harkness: “No understanding of God that leaves out his fatherly care for all his children, and with it the implied brotherhood of all men [sic] can be fully Christian”; and (spoken just days before her death), “I believe because Jesus spoke of God as Father, so should we. I am certainly not going to call God ‘she,’ and if you don’t say ‘he’ or ‘she,’ then the only alternative is ‘it.’ I am not going to say that”; and (spoken in the same interview), “It seems to me we had better accept the fact that our language uses the word man not only as male but in a generic sense of human.” From this, it follows that, if inclusiveness demands that we reduce Christian teaching to what is socially acceptable, a faithful Church must forgo this form of inclusiveness to hold to the truth.

4. Marginalization of conservative Christians. We must end the ridicule and marginalization of part of our membership and members of other churches through the disparaging use of terms like “Fundamentalists,” “Evangelicals,” “Bible Belt Christians,” “the Religious Right,” “biblical literalists,” “bibliolaters,” “biblical docetists,” and “Pietists.” Still worse labels, such as “Talibaptists,” identifying conservative Christians with the violently oppressive former Afghan rulers, highlight the unfairness of this practice. Many types of fundamentalists coexist. Fundamentalist Mormons are vastly different from fundamentalist Baptists or Presbyterians. One has identified five varieties of Roman Catholic fundamentalism. It is wrong to confound one group with another or to charge one group with the sins of others. Moreover, there are strong reasons to deny that Islamic, Buddhist, or Hindu fundamentalisms are legitimate categories. They represent, instead, terms of abuse to be condemned and avoided.

About 70 percent of United Methodists believe with Otterbein, Asbury, Albright, and Wesley that, “if there be any mistakes in the Bible, there may as well be a thousand. If there be one falsehood in that book, it did not come from the God of truth” (Wesley, Journal, July 24, 1776).

Belittling them and disparaging their belief is an affront to inclusivism and violates the command to love one another. Yet it happens. Even worse is the labeling of evangelicals as “racists” because some racists have misquoted or misinterpreted Scripture to justify their racism. We repudiate these practices and hold that those who would question the belief in a fully authoritative Bible have the burden of proof of demonstrating the truth of their claim. An inclusive church will insist that discussions of these issues will be civil, even-handed, and focused on facts, not on doubtful inferences, personalities, or speculations about motive.

5. Proper use of the name, The United Methodist Church. A widespread, but largely overlooked obstacle to being an inclusive church is the omission of United from our church name and the name of our people. The Methodist Church ceased as an organization on April 23, 1968, as did The Evangelical United Brethren Church (EUB). On that date, The United Methodist Church was born, a new church created by the marriage of the two former bodies. This was the intention of the Plan of Union. When the word United is omitted, it suggests that the marriage was a pretense and that the union was, as some disappointed former EUB’s have termed it, a hostile corporate takeover.

Since 1980, the General Conference has declared that omitting United from our church name is “unacceptable usage.” Yet the practice continues in conversation and in print. Former EUB’s are not being oversensitive about a few syllables. When Methodist is used in place of our proper name, it becomes, to them, a painful reminder of more than a dozen serious betrayals of the spirit of union and inclusiveness:

1. Glorifying Wesley and Asbury, while ignoring or belittling the inheritances from Otterbein, Boehm, and Albright.

2. Abandoning beloved EUB institutions, including Westmar College, Otterbein Press, Kamp Koinonia, and the Church and Home magazine.

3. Cutting off EUB clergy widows from their only pension income, the dividends from Otterbein Press.

4. Repeated attempts to close United Theological Seminary.

5. Identifying Heritage Sunday with Aldersgate Sunday in 1976 and 2004.

6. Removing the EUB Hymnal from circulation and canceling its status as an official United Methodist hymnal in 1972.

7. Including only two EUB hymns in the 1988 United Methodist Hymnal.

8. Replacing “debts” or “sins” in the Lord’s Prayer with “trespasses.”

9. Excluding the EUB service of infant dedication from The Book of Worship.

10. Restoring the Lovely Lane Chapel while leaving the EUB birthplace, the Peter Kemp Farmhouse, just a few miles away, to the fickle mercies of a secular economy bent on commercial expansion.

11. Suppressing the fact that the twin flames in the cross-and-flame emblem represent the Methodist and EUB traditions and that, when depicted correctly, the two flames are equal in size.

12. Closing a disproportionate number of former EUB churches (28 percent of those closed between 1975 and 1985).

13. Representing an ashless Ash Wednesday, the EUB practice and the universal Protestant practice before 1970, as “un-United Methodist.”

These are not petty acts to be ignored and forgotten. They exclude and offend part of our membership. An inclusive church will confess their gravity and strive to halt their continuation. If we can respect the sensitivities of Native Americans regarding the names of sports teams, we must do the same for a portion of our members regarding our Church’s name. Christ’s words provide a more than adequate incentive: “It is these you ought to have practiced without neglecting the others” (Matthew 23:23).

Rationale:

This expansion goes beyond platitudes to everyday reality where congregations face legal/moral quandaries involving bigotry, thoughtlessness, and accommodating registered sex offenders at worship. Sins against former EUB’s are documented in Holsinger and Laycock, Awaken the Giant; Young, Companion to “The United Methodist Hymnal”; and the United Methodist Reporter.

Study of Ministry – Deepening the Theology of Ordination

Amend ¶ 301

¶ 301.1. Ministry in the Christian church is derived from the ministry of Christ, who calls all persons to receive God’s gift of salvation and follow in the way of love and service. All Christian ministry is grounded in the covenant of baptism by which we are initiated into the body of Christ and called into a life of discipleship. The sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion ground the ministry of the whole church. They are celebrated in the Christian community as means of grace. Thus, the whole church receives and accepts this call, and all Christians participate in this continuing ministry (see ¶¶ 120-140).

2. Within the church community, there are persons whose gifts, evidence of God’s grace, and promise of future usefulness are affirmed by the community, and who respond to God’s call by offering themselves in leadership as set-apart ministers, ordained and licensed (¶ 302). Individuals discern God’s call as they relate with God and their communities, and the Church guides and confirms those callings. Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

While the practice of homosexuality is a sin, so is fornication and adultery. They should be treated equally. Yet we seem to be elevating active homosexuality to a special sin category. Sin is sin, yet we often look the other way when we see people having sex outside of marriage.

Re-establish Committee on Faith and Order

Insert new ¶¶ 443 through 450 as follows:

¶ 443. There shall be a Committee on Faith and Order related and amenable to the Council of Bishops. This relationship shall be collaborative, with attention paid in particular to working with the persons designated by Council of Bishops.

¶ 444. Purpose—The Committee on Faith and Order shall give leadership to The United Methodist Church in reflecting upon, discerning and living out matters of faith, doctrinal teaching, order, and discipline in the midst of mission and ministry in the church and world. The committee shall be a visible expression of the commitment of The United Methodist Church to carry on informed theological reflection for the present time in dynamic continuity with the historic Christian faith, our common heritage as Christians grounded in the apostolic witness, and our distinctive Wesleyan heritage. The committee shall be charged with three broad responsibilities:

1. Upon request of the Council of Bishops, to support and provide resources to the Council in its responsibility to “guard, transmit, teach, and proclaim, corporately and individually the apostolic faith as it is expressed in Scripture and tradition, and as they are led and endowed by the Spirit, to interpret that faith evangelically and prophetically.” (§414.3)

2. To lead and coordinate studies commissioned by the General Conference in matters related to the faith, doctrine, order and discipline of the church.

3. To prepare and provide resources and study materials to The United Methodist Church as deemed appropriate.

¶ 445. Responsibilities—The responsibilities of the Committee on Faith and Order shall be:

1. To provide a venue and context for ongoing conversation on matters of faith, doctrine, order and discipline.

2. To draw upon scholars and scholarship in biblical studies, biblical theology, systematic theology, historical theology, Christian ethics, Wesleyan studies, practical theology, missiology, and other areas thereby providing expertise and knowledge to lead and assist the church in addressing matters of faith and order critical to the life, ministry and mission of the church.

3. To provide research and resourcing for the Council in Bishops upon their request in matters related to faith, doctrine, order and discipline.

4. To receive and administer mandates from the General Conference for studies on matters that require significant inquiry into and application of the faith and order of the church.

5. To bring studies, materials or publications as appropriate to the Council of Bishops or to the General Conference for approval and action.

6. To make provision for the preparation and dissemination of study documents and materials for the church upon request of the Council of Bishops, or the General Conference.

7. To coordinate and provide for effective interaction and communication among various study committees, commissions and teams when multiple studies have been mandated.

¶ 446 Authorities and Powers—The Committee on Faith and Order shall have the authority and power to fulfill all the responsibilities noted in §§ 444 and 445.

¶ 447. Membership—The Committee on Faith and Order (CFO) shall be organized each quadrennium and shall be composed of sixteen persons.

1. Nominations to the CFO shall be made by the CFO Executive Committee, in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships, and sent to the Council of Bishops and to the entire Committee on Faith and Order for their review.

2. Four bishops shall serve as members one of whom shall be the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church and three other bishops as assigned by the Council of Bishops. At least one of the bishops shall be from central conferences.

3. New members of the committee shall be elected by the Council of Bishops at its spring meeting in the year of the General Conference each quadrennium. Election shall be for a term of eight (8) years, and no person shall serve as a member of the Committee on Faith and Order for more than sixteen (16) years in succession. The classes of membership shall be established so that the terms of service of 50% of the membership expire when their successors are seated at the organizational meeting of the Committee following each General Conference.

4. The composition of the committee, and all sub-committees and teams, shall attend to lay and clergy status, racial/ethnic and gender diversity, and regional representation. It shall model effective representation of the theological diversity of The United Methodist Church. The Council of Bishops shall exercise oversight in the nomination and election of members with regard to inclusiveness, diversity, and representation. Vacancies occurring during any quadrennium shall be filled by the CFO Executive Committee in consultation with the Council of Bishops.

5. The committee may, in consultation and collaboration with the Council of Bishops, carry out any mandated study internally or may create such sub-committees and teams using members from within the committee and others beyond the committee as may be required by the volume and complexity of work.

6. Membership on the board of directors of any other general agency, or serving as a staff member of a general agency, does not make one ineligible to serve as a member of this committee, §§ 710.5 and 715.6 to the contrary notwithstanding, and the limitations specified in § 710.4 for membership on general agencies shall not apply to anyone as a result of membership on this committee.

¶ 448. Organization—The Committee on Faith and Order shall be organized as follows:

1. The committee shall elect from its episcopal membership a chairperson and from its total membership other officers as it may determine.

2. There shall be an executive committee of the CFO with powers as determined by the CFO.

3. The committee shall meet for organizational purposes each quadrennium prior to the end of the first quarter of the year following the year in which the General Conference is held.

4. The committee shall meet at least annually and at such other times as it shall deem necessary. A majority of members of the committee shall constitute a quorum.

¶ 449 Staffing—Staff for the work of the Committee on Faith and Order shall be provided as determined by the Council of Bishops in consultation with the Executive Committee of the Committee on Faith and Order. The Council of Bishops may request staff assistance and consultation from agencies and other bodies of the Church.

¶ 450. Funding – In collaboration with the Council of Bishops, the Committee on Faith and Order shall propose its budget as part of the Episcopal Fund, to be approved by General Conference.

This legislation or any portion of it approved by General Conference shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

¶ 450. There shall be a Committee on Faith and Order that, while functioning with the authority of an independent committee (¶ 701.2), shall be amenable to the Council of Bishops.

¶ 452. Responsibilities—The responsibilities of the Committee on Faith and Order shall be:

3. To receive and administer mandates from General Conference for studies on matters that require significant inquiry into and application of the faith and order of the church.

a) The committee shall nominate from its own membership and from others those who are to serve on various study committees and teams.

b) The committee may, with approval of the Council of Bishops, carry out any mandated study internally or may create such committees and teams using members from within the committee and others from beyond the committee as may be required by the volume and complexity of work.

c) The committee itself and all committees and teams empowered by the committee shall include racial/ethnic and gender diversity and regional representation, and it shall model effective representation of the theological diversity of The United Methodist Church.

4. To coordinate and provide for effective interaction and communication among various study committees, commissions and teams when multiple studies have been mandated.

5. Upon request to provide research and resourcing for the Council in Bishops in matters related to faith, doctrine, order, and discipline.

6. To make provision for the preparation and dissemination of study documents and materials for the church upon request of the General Conference, or the Council of Bishops.

7. To bring all studies, materials or publications as appropriate to the Council of Bishops or the General Conference as directed by the Council of Bishops for approval and action.

¶ 453. Authorities and Powers—The Committee on Faith and Order shall have the authority and power to fulfill all the responsibilities noted in ¶¶ 437 and 438. The Committee on Faith and Order shall be amenable to the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church.

¶ 454. Membership—The Committee on Faith and Order shall be organized each quadrennium and shall be composed of twenty-four persons chosen as follows:

1. Six bishops shall serve as members including the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church and five other bishops assigned by the Council of Bishops. At least one of the bishops shall be from a central conference.

2. Six members shall be nominated by the Association of United Methodist Theological Schools chosen from the faculties of seminaries affiliated with The United Methodist Church. The Association of United Methodist Theological Schools shall rotate nominations from among the seminaries on a basis established by itself.

3. Twelve members who are not bishops shall be chosen by the Council of Bishops upon nomination by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. Three of the members nominated by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry shall be nominated from the faculties of seminaries affiliated with The United Methodist Church in the central conferences. The budget for the Committee on Faith and Order shall be proposed by the Council of Bishops, and it shall be part of the Episcopal Fund.

4. All twenty-four members of the committee shall be elected by the Council of Bishops at its fall meeting following the General Conference each quadrennium. Election shall be for a term of eight (8) years, and no person shall serve as a member of the Committee on Faith and Order for more than sixteen (16) years in succession. The classes of membership established upon the initial organizational meeting of the committee shall be maintained so that the terms of service of 50 percent of the membership expire when their successors are seated at the organizational meeting of the committee following each General Conference.

5. At least three (3) of the members of the committee shall be clergy actively serving full-time in the local church and at least three (3) shall be laity. It is recommended that one third of the membership be persons of minority racial/ethnic identity.

6. In its capacity of providing spiritual and doctrinal leadership, the Council of Bishops shall exercise oversight in the nomination and election of members with regard to central conference inclusion, geographic diversity, and age representation; it shall also ensure that the committee complies with the inclusivity guidelines of ¶ 438.3.c).

7. Membership on the board of directors of any other general agency does not make one ineligible to serve as a member of this committee, ¶¶ 710.5 and 714.6 to the contrary notwithstanding, and the limitations specified in ¶ 710.4 for membership on general agencies shall not apply to anyone as a result of membership on this committee.

¶ 455. Organization—The Committee on Faith and Order shall be organized as follows:

1. The committee shall elect from its episcopal membership a chairperson and from its total membership other officers as it may determine.

2. There shall be an executive committee of the committee with powers as determined by the committee.

3. The committee shall meet for organizational purposes each quadrennium prior to the end of the first quarter of the year following the year in which the General Conference is held.

4. The committee shall meet at least annually and at such other times as it shall deem necessary. A majority of members of the committee shall constitute a quorum. The committee may conduct meetings by telephone conference or video conference, or make decisions by mail ballot or other method, provided that notification of all members is ensured and the provision of quorum is met.

¶ 456. Staffing—Staff for the work of the Committee on Faith and Order shall be provided as determined by the Council of Bishops in consultation with the executive committee of the Committee on Faith and Order. The Council of Bishops shall have authority to request staff assistance and consultation from agencies and other bodies of the Church, such as, but not limited to, the Office for Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

¶ 457. The Committee on Faith and Order shall not be considered to be a general agency of The United Methodist Church.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

Gandhi Commemoration

PART I – Gandhi’s Message for the Twenty-first Century

Mohandas Gandhi started his journey to nonviolence and human dignity in a crisis inspiring anger. He was forced off a train in South Africa because of his ethnicity. Indians were not allowed in first-class coaches. He stood his ground, refusing to be humiliated. He spent the night in a train station after his ejection, trying to control his anger and vowing to fight this injustice to his people with all his energy and character. He would build a road of resistance rather than be treated as less than human. His resistance was nonviolent because that was both humane and effective.

Today, almost a century and a half after Gandhi’s birth, many people are still treated as less than human: in war zones, in urban ghettos, in places of work, even in homes. Why is the world this way? Why do the “powers that be” do such damage? Why do humans treat one another so shabbily and even lethally? And what is to be done about it? A review of what Gandhi learned and reclaimed from both Eastern and Western spiritual traditions can be of help to us. We can study what he taught.

As his 150th birthday approaches in 2019, we can invite our neighbors of all spiritual traditions to reexamine our responses to social inequality, racism, militarism, and environmental degradation.

PART II – Reflecting on Gandhi’s “Seven Social Sins”

Gandhi, the “Mahatma” (great soul), spoke of seven social sins. The first of these was what he called politics without principles. The concept of “public leadership” implies a desire to serve the common good. Self-serving or bigoted motivations have no place in democratic societies. It is never acceptable to enforce laws differently for members of one’s own social group, class, or color than for others. It is never acceptable to oppress or neglect women, cultural or sexual minorities, children, or people with disabilities. Each society, as well as the global community of nations, has a responsibility to ensure that all persons have access to good quality food, shelter, and health care.

Wealth without work brings into question the existence of a social class with investment income surpassing the salary levels of ordinary high-achieving workers. When one small class of people can derive fabulous amounts of income from “work” that benefits themselves, but serves little or no public good, that society has become corrupt. All who are able must contribute, but those unable to work must be able to meet their basic needs. As we experience increasing automation, where essential production can be accomplished with few workers, we must devise means for wealth to be allocated responsibly. It is not acceptable for one person to make $2 million an hour—as one North American hedge fund trader did in a recent year—while others starve.

Pleasure without conscience: Living the high life, stashing cash in overseas banks and offshore tax havens, while billions of people exist on a few dollars a week, is both immoral and unsustainable.

Knowledge without character: If education is only a fast track to affluence, but not a means to serve, or to lift the human spirit, one may have learned skills but not wisdom. It is not a good life that does not respect and enhance other lives. It is not a good life that does not show compassion to the vulnerable.

Commerce without morality: Business is valuable when it organizes economic life so that work is made effective, producing products and services to benefit human society. Corporations were created for human good. Apart from that purpose they have no inherent right to exist.

Science without humanity: Research that threatens human existence is without morality. When science is pursued for military domination, for genocide, or promotes the slow extinction of vital earth systems, humans must redirect it for good.

Worship without sacrifice: Self-serving religion, designed to make individuals feel good, but not motivating them to better respect and love their neighbors, is no religion at all. Said John Greenleaf Whittier: “To worship rightly is to love each other. Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer. Follow with reverent steps the great example of Him whose holy work was doing good; So shall the wide earth seem our Father’s temple. Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.”

PART III – Additional Sources of Inspiration and Energy

As we commemorate Gandhi’s work, we draw upon other sources of energy as well, including the work of persons inspired by him. The following quotations are illustrative:

Dorothy Day said: “The greatest challenge of the day is how to bring about a revolution of the heart, a revolution which has to start with each one of us. When we begin to take the lowest places, to wash the feet of others, to love our brothers with that burning love, that passion which led to the cross, then we can truly say, ‘Now I have begun.’”

Martin Luther King, Jr. directed these words to bishops and leaders of universities: “Cowardice asks the question, is it safe? Expediency asks the question, is it politic? Vanity asks the question, is it popular? And there comes a time when one must take a position that is neither safe, nor politic, nor popular—but one must take it because it’s right.” Daniel Berrigan, SJ, reflected: “One is called to live nonviolently, even if the change one works for seems impossible. It may or may not be possible to turn the US around through nonviolent revolution. But one thing favors such an attempt: the total inability of violence to change anything for the better.”

Once again, Dorothy Day: “What we would like to do is change the world—make it a little simpler for people to feed, clothe, and shelter themselves as God intended for them to do. . . . We can, to a certain extent, change the world; we can work for the oasis, the little cell of joy and peace in a harried world. We can throw our pebble in the pond and be confident that its ever widening circle will reach around the world. We repeat, there is nothing that we can do but love, and, dear God, please enlarge our hearts to love each other, to love our neighbor, to love our enemy as well as our friend.”

PART IV – A Suggested Timeline of Action

We propose that work begin immediately to invite and engage the participation of marginalized people in conveying to legislators their particular concerns and needs.

We propose that initial observances of a Gandhi Commemoration take place on or near October 2, 2016—three years ahead of the 150th birthday observance—with public marches led by persons whose lives overlapped with Gandhi’s, that is, persons born before the date of Gandhi’s death (January 30, 1948). These “torchbearers” of Gandhi’s light will invite all people of conscience to hold before their societies the vision of participatory democracy. Together, we will invite those who are poor, dispossessed, and marginalized to speak their truth to power, demanding that the comfortable and powerful hear and heed.

We propose that work continue—with particular intensity during the next three years in communities worldwide—to draw out the experiences and unmet human needs of people facing structural injustice, prejudice, and hardship. Faith communities, in particular, must be challenged to undertake the work of contacting and seeking to empower those marginalized.

On or near October 2, 2017—two years ahead of the 150th birthday observance—public demonstrations will be organized worldwide, led by churches, synagogues, mosques, and interfaith alliances, calling upon each society to live justly, love mercy, and walk humbly, implementing policies that allocate wealth and opportunity with greater breadth and fairness.

On or near October 2, 2018—one year ahead of the 150th birthday observance—educators, clergy, and social service professionals will be invited and encouraged to lead “teach-ins” and other public discussions relating to policies that alienate, debilitate, incarcerate, and otherwise depress the potential of our citizens—particularly children, youth, and young adults.

On or near October 2, 2019—as we come to celebrate Gandhi’s 150th birthday—public officials and public servants—including police, fire and emergency personnel, jail and prison staffs—will be invited and encouraged to lead the public in demonstrations and declarations that they understand the purpose of their employment as service to the entire community, with particular emphasis on helping those most alienated to feel respected, and empowered to become whole persons.

PART V – A Commitment to Action

Along with other organizations—public and private, worldwide—we commit ourselves to act cooperatively, taking the timeline above as a guide. Contributing our own staff resources, we will seek the widest possible collaboration in searching out and empowering those dispossessed, disempowered, and thereby impoverished and/or neglected. Our purpose will be to organize for justice, using nonviolence as our method. Our actions will constitute a critique of militarism as a self-defeating mode of action, strategizing with others who share the vision of a kingdom of peace. We will use and create nonviolent tactics, old and new, in a common struggle for human dignity, freedom, and fulfillment.

There will be financial implications for groups accepting this challenge, particularly as regards the time of leaders committed to the task. Each participating organization will determine to what extent it invests itself in the project over the next four years, and if or how the collaborative effort might continue into the future.

Study of Ecclesiology Document - Wonder, Love, and Praise

Include in the 2016 Book of Resolutions the following resolution:

Since its authorization in 2008 (Book of Discipline, ¶ 1907-1912), the Committee on Faith and Order has been working in various ways to deepen our denominational reflection on ecclesiology. Under our auspices, Dr. Russell Richey drew upon statements from our Book of Discipline and added additional materials from our United Methodist heritage to help us see what we already affirm about the nature and mission of the church, a document available on-line at: <http://www.gbhem.org/sites/default/files/documents/publications/DOM_Nature_Mission_Faithfulness_of_Church.pdf>

We continue to work with United Methodist theologians from across the world on a basic catechetical resource for use in our churches.

One of the centerpieces of our work this quadrennium has been the development of a constructive statement on ecclesiology, entitled Wonder, Love and Praise. The time has come for this document to be offered to the entire United Methodist Church for its study. The aim of this period of study is twofold, namely, to stimulate and aid theological reflection throughout the church on the identity and mission of The United Methodist Church, within the larger context of the whole church; and to elicit constructive critique of the document itself that might lead to its improvement.

The study and response process in the coming quadrennium will involve these elements:

1. Wonder, Love and Praise will be made available electronically through www.umc.org <<http://www.umc.org>> and www.gbhem.org <<http://www.gbhem.org>>, along with a brief study and response guide to facilitate study of the document.

2. Each resident bishop will be asked to arrange for congregationally-based studies of Wonder, Love and Praise between June 2016 and December 2017 involving approximately ten percent of both the laity and clergy of her or his episcopal area.

3. Responses to the document will be solicited from specific groups who may have particular expertise in ecclesiology, including: faculty from United Methodist seminaries and schools of theology, general agency staff, pan-Methodist theologians and officials; and other selected ecumenical partners.

4. All United Methodists will be invited and encouraged to read and offer responses to Wonder, Love and Praise.

5. The Committee on Faith and Order will design processes to solicit and receive these responses.

6. The Committee on Faith and Order will be responsible for evaluating the study process, considering the responses received, and will offer appropriate action to the 2020 General Conference. The Committee on Faith and Order hopes to present a revised version of Wonder, Love and Praise to the 2020 General Conference for its adoption as an official teaching document of the church, comparable to By Water and the Spirit and This Holy Mystery.

Rationale:

A coherent and systematic teaching document on the ecclesiology of The United Methodist Church might sharpen our identity, focus our mission, and make us stronger ecumenical partners in the work of Jesus Christ. The process proposed here moves us toward the adoption of a denominational teaching document on ecclesiology.

The Connectional Table Summary Report to General Conference

The work of the Connectional Table over the 2013-2016 quadrennium has resulted in effectively executing the mandates outlined by General Conference. Our collective work has led to significant progress in:

- Fostering a culture shift from a US-centric denomination to one that is truly global;
- Ensuring a level of accountability across the denomination toward assessing ministries and making adjustments to meet the needs of our church and our world;
- Discerning a collective vision for even greater missional impact in the future.

The Connectional Table continues to follow the VISION and direction of the Council of Bishops. We believe our mission and vision calls us to remain steadfast in our denominational focus on increasing the number of vital congregations worldwide and strengthening ministries in the Four Areas of Focus. The Connectional Table continues to focus attention, energy, and resources toward making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world through vital congregations that:

- Develop principled Christian leaders for the church and the world;
- Create new places for new people and revitalize existing congregations worldwide;
- Engage in ministry with the poor; and,
- Improve health globally by combating the diseases of poverty.

In maintaining focus on these areas of ministry, the Connectional Table seeks a firm foundation for growth and vitality in The United Methodist Church worldwide. To capture the fullest understanding of the worldwide nature of our denomination, the Connectional Table has engaged important partnerships:

- Working with the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, in our work toward a “General Book of Discipline,”

- Collaboration with the General Board of Church and Society on the review and reshaping of the Social Principles.
- Collaboration with the General Council on Finance and Administration on a Global Apportionment formula.
- Engagement with leaders throughout the connection to address questions related to the jurisdictional structure of the United States and how this aligns with our worldwide reality with which we have been blessed.

All of this represents and signals overarching culture shifts that are happening within the denomination: The first aspect of this shift is from a US-centered denomination to one that is truly worldwide, and the second is fostering a shift toward a culture that engages in research, evaluation, and assessment of our ministries that yield quality data to help us plan effective strategies to address the needs of our church and our world.

Our 2020 Vision: Strategic Directions for 2017-2020

Aligning The United Methodist Church for greater missional impact has been and will continue to be at the heart of the work of the Connectional Table. The following represent goals for strategic directions in our pursuit to increase vital congregations through these focus areas for our church in the next quadrennium. The Connectional Table remains committed to developing these goals and the strategies that support them. These are all a part of a VISION for the next quadrennium, our 2020 Vision.

Vital Congregations

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church equipping 3 million people across the connection to be “difference makers,” called out to serve as principled Christian leaders in our world today.

Creating and Sustaining New Places for New People

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church with 1 million new disciples who profess their faith through renewed and new faith communities around the world.

Ministry with the Poor

The Connectional Table Report to General Conference

Mission—Vision—Values

Our Strategic Work in The United Methodist Church

The purpose of the Connectional Table is for the discernment and articulation of the VISION for the church and the stewardship of the MISSION, ministries, and resources of The United Methodist Church as determined by the actions of General Conference and in consultation with the Council of Bishops.

(The Book of Discipline, 2012, ¶ 904, emphasis added)

The work of the Connectional Table over the 2013-2016 quadrennium has resulted in effectively executing the mandates outlined by General Conference. Our collective work has led to significant progress in:

- Fostering a culture shift from a US-centric denomination to one that is truly global;
- Ensuring a level of accountability across the denomination toward assessing ministries and making adjustments to meet the needs of our church and our world;
- Discerning a collective vision for even greater missional impact in the future.

Focus and Align for the Mission

Over this quadrennium, the Connectional Table discerned three primary tasks that illustrate the VALUES guiding our work as we seek to accomplish our purpose:

- 1) To build relationships and cross bridges across The UMC for deeper collaboration and deeper connections throughout the Church;
- 2) To focus and connect the strategies in order to coordinate the program life of the church and foster greater alignment for the mission of making disciples of Jesus Christ;
- 3) To connect the story of The UMC internally, so that the external message aligns with the internal operations.

When the Connectional Table engages in these three tasks with clarity and purpose, we advance the mission of The UMC and fulfill our purpose as envisioned by the General Conference.

The MISSION of the Connectional Table IS the mission of The United Methodist Church, which is to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. The Connectional Table continues to follow the VISION and direction of the Council of Bishops. We believe our mission and vision calls us to remain steadfast in our denominational focus on increasing the number of vital congregations worldwide and strengthening ministries in the Four Areas of Focus. The Connectional Table continues to focus attention, energy, and resources toward making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world through vital congregations that:

- Develop principled Christian leaders for the church and the world;
- Create new places for new people and revitalize existing congregations worldwide;
- Engage in ministry with the poor; and,
- Improve health globally by combating the diseases of poverty.

In maintaining focus on these areas of ministry, the Connectional Table seeks a firm foundation for growth and vitality in The United Methodist Church worldwide. Indeed, the work of the Connectional Table this quadrennium has engaged in efforts to better understand how our Church is configured in the many places where United Methodists are gathered, and how we can continue our mission faithfully in these places. We have engaged important partners throughout the connection to capture the fullest understanding of the worldwide nature of our denomination. These partnerships include:

- Work with the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, which is charged with bringing recommendations to this General Conference about what is essential for the worldwide Church in our work toward a “General Book of Discipline.”
- Collaboration with the General Board of Church and Society on the review and reshaping of the Social Principles.
- Collaboration with the General Council on Finance and Administration on a Global Apportionment formula.
- Engagement with leaders throughout the connection to address questions related to the jurisdictional structure of the United States and how this aligns with our worldwide reality with which we have been blessed.

A Shifting Culture

All of this represents and signals an overarching culture shift that is happening within the denomination.

The first aspect of this shift is from a US-centered denomination to one that is truly worldwide. The Connectional Table and the Council of Bishops deeply engaged conversations about this shift this quadrennium. Making our strategy, goal setting, and overall mission more relevant to the worldwide connection must still be addressed. In addition, emerging issues that foster or hinder our work in the future in making disciples of Jesus Christ must be engaged. We remain committed to playing a necessary role in examining the nature of our United Methodist institutions in light of this shifting reality as a worldwide denomination.

The second emphasis is toward a culture that engages in research, evaluation, and assessment of our ministries that yield quality data to help us plan effective strategies to address the needs of our church and our world. The Connectional Table is responsible for evaluating missional effectiveness of general program-related agencies and connectional structures, and we have identified the need to build capacity across our connection to more effectively assess the progress of our denomination-wide ministries.

Building up faith communities that are united in mission and vision throughout the world will have greater impact for disciples of Jesus Christ. The Connectional Table is engaging collaboratively with leaders across the denomination, including the Council of Bishops, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, General Council on Finance and Administration, and annual conference leadership, to build up faith communities that are transforming the world.

Our 2020 Vision: Strategic Directions for 2017-2020

Aligning The United Methodist Church for greater missional impact has been and will continue to be at the heart of the work of the Connectional Table. This quadrennium, the Connectional Table, together with the Council of Bishops, formed a Missional Collaboration Group on Vital Congregations, serving as the key body responsible for connecting our strategies and building relationships among those working collaboratively to increase vital congregations bearing fruit in the Four Areas of Focus.

This body is discerning and affirming goals for strategic directions for The UMC in the next quadrennium.

Progress reports on these goals were offered and affirmed by the Council of Bishops and the Connectional Table in early 2015. These emerging strategies have generated enthusiasm and collaborative energy for the work of grounding the church in our core values as a worldwide connection. The Connectional Table remains committed to developing these goals and the strategies that support them. These are all a part of a VISION for the next quadrennium, our 2020 Vision.

Vital Congregations

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church that can double the number of highly vital congregations excelling in the five markers of vitality—disciples in worship, new disciples (professions of faith), disciples in small groups, disciples in mission, and giving to mission.

A vital congregation is the body of Christ making and engaging disciples for the transformation of the world.

The goals, planning processes, and strategic visioning for vital congregations exist to enable each local church to have a vital future in disciple making. Achieving goals is not an end in itself, but rather a tool to see if what we are doing is producing fruit. The actual process of disciple making, the means of grace, is our main priority.

In the congregation, these have been practiced through the ministries of worship, making new disciples (professions of faith), small groups, mission, and generous giving. Congregations that consistently engage in the process of making disciples, grace-filled Christ followers putting faith into action, and practicing the ministries of discipleship increase vitality for making more disciples and transforming the world.

Making disciples through vital congregations increases our opportunity for witness in the world. Vital congregations are shaped by and witnessed through ministry with the poor, improving global health, creating new places for new people, and shaping principled Christian leaders.

The Four Areas of Focus

Calling and Shaping Principled Christian Leaders

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church equipping 3 million people across the connection to be “difference makers,” called out to serve as principled Christian leaders in our world today.

Our United Methodist Church believes that Jesus is “calling you out” for something greater than any one person. The question for every United Methodist today and into our future is: “What difference will you make?”

We define principled Christian leadership as making a difference wherever you are: at the local church, in the mission field, across a denomination, in each community and society across our world. As “grace-filled followers of Jesus Christ” our discipleship leads to our decision to make a difference in the world. We believe we can equip every United Methodist across our connection to be “difference makers” for Jesus.

Creating and Sustaining New Places for New People

Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church with 1 million new disciples who profess their faith through renewed and new faith communities around the world.

New faith communities are critical to the task of making new disciples and transforming the world. A faith community is a group that gathers under the lordship of Jesus Christ to worship, engage, and send. This includes but is not limited to new church starts, Global Mission Initiatives, and missions, circuits and preaching points across our connection.

We receive new disciples through professions of faith and increase professions of faith through new faith communities. The denomination is reaching more people, more young people, and more diverse people for Christ by creating new places for new people. The people of The United Methodist Church seek to cultivate the leaders, develop the systems, and implement the strategies necessary to regain our healthy denominational practice of starting two faith communities each day.

The real measure of success will not be in those numbers or in membership increases or improved giving but in the lives that will be touched and drawn to Christ as disciples because these new faith communities were able to reach people with the gospel of Christ who might otherwise not be reached.

Ministry with the Poor

*Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church that can build 400 vibrant, flourishing and transforming communities addressing issues of poverty and ministry with the poor, particularly with children.

Vital congregations reflect God’s transforming love into their communities and around the world. As faithful disciples, we are called to love our neighbors—to walk, worship, and witness with them so that all may enjoy God’s vision of abundant life. As United Methodists we will challenge and transform broken systems and structures that create and perpetuate poverty.

Wesley understood that ministry must be centered on relationships. To truly love our neighbors we must first know them: their struggles, joys, gifts, and challenges. Rooted in these relationships, United Methodists are engaging in meaningful and transformational ministries with poor people and communities. Leveraging connections and partnerships within and beyond The United Methodist Church, we can transform communities and open doors for children to a more promising future.

Abundant Health for All

*Our 2020 Vision looks forward to a United Methodist Church that can reach 1 million children with lifesaving interventions.

Every child is a life filled with promise and potential, yet, every 5 seconds a child dies from preventable causes. There is a global move to significantly improve health for all by 2035, with a specific goal of saving the lives of 15 million children by 2020.

The United Methodist Church has a sacred calling to ensure abundant health for all children, engaging disciples to be agents of God’s healing transformation in the world. Jesus said, “I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly” (John 10:10 NRSV). Our promise is to make that a reality for millions of those whom Jesus has blessed.

Conclusion

Together we have seen the denomination make significant advances in accountability, assessment, and collaboration that have prepared us well for our future vision.

We take the submission of this report as an opportunity to celebrate all that we have been able to accomplish this quadrennium by the grace of God and through the Holy Spirit’s leading in our connectional church. We look forward to seeing the fruit of this aligning and collaborative work as we continue to focus on our 2020 Vision for a more vital and authentically worldwide church, making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

Petition Number: 60989-GA-¶2-C-!-G; Merrick, Tracy R. - Wexford, PA, USA for NEJ Global Structure Task Force.

Global Connectional Conference - Name Change

Amend by changing the term “General Conference” to “Global Connectional Conference” wherever it appears in the Constitution.

~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference

Necessary in ¶¶ 2, 8, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 33, 34, 35, 36, 38, 39, 42, 43, 44, 46, 47, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS:

The actual incremental costs of this proposal will be dependent upon the global structure finally adopted by General Conference.

There will probably be some additional costs related to connectional conferences, committees, etc., but these costs may be offset by a possible reduction in costs related to the meeting of the Global Connection. If the business of the North America connection is removed from the agenda of the Global Connectional Conference, the duration of that meeting will be less than the current General Conference, perhaps by three or four days, resulting in a reduction in costs for that meeting.

The most significant increase in costs will probably involve the meetings of the connectional conferences. This proposal would require each connectional conference to meet quadrennially, prior to the Global Connectional Conference. Depending upon when and where the connectional conferences meet, the incremental cost of these meetings is estimated to be between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000. GCFA will be asked to develop more accurate cost projections.

Any incremental cost increases will also need to be examined in the context of the overall budget for the 2016 General Conference budget of over US$10 million.

Rationale:

These constitutional amendments are a component of the The Proposal to Restructure the Global UMC. The amendments in this petition change the name of the General Conference to Global Connectional Conference in the paragraphs of the Constitution listed.

Add Nicene Creed to Doctrinal Standards

Amend Discipline ¶ 3 as follows:

¶ 3. Article III.—Articles of Religion, and the Confession of Faith, and the Nicene Creed—The Articles of Religion and the Confession of Faith of The United Methodist Church are those held by The Methodist Church and The Evangelical United Brethren Church, respectively, at the time of their uniting.³ The Nicene-Constantinopolitan Creed that is part of the Church’s doctrinal standards is the version that is printed under the heading, “The Nicene Creed,” in the 1989 edition of The United Methodist Hymnal.

Rationale:

The Doctrinal Standards affirm the Nicene Creed. Including the creed further strengthens ecumenical conversation, giving a theological framework for dialogue and discernment within United Methodism. Also, it professes our theological connection and heritage with the greater Church of Jesus Christ.

Petition Number: 60163-GA-¶4-C-G; Hare, Dawn Wiggins - Chicago, IL, USA for General Commission on the Status and Role of Women.

Inclusiveness of Gender and Age

Amend ¶ 4. Article IV

¶ 4. Article IV. Inclusiveness of the Church—The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one Body in Christ. The United Methodist Church acknowledges that all persons are of sacred worth. All persons without regard to race, gender, color, national origin, status, age or economic condition, shall be eligible to attend its worship services, participate in its programs, receive the sacraments, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, and upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection. In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the Church shall be structured so as to exclude any member or any constituent body of the Church because of race, color, national origin, status or economic condition, nor shall any member be denied status or access to an equal place in the life, worship, and governance of the Church because of race, gender, color, national origin, status, age or economic condition.

Rationale:

Adding “gender” (meaning male and female) to the Constitution affirms and protects the UMC’s commitment to gender equity throughout our worldwide connection. “Gender” is the disciplinary term for fair treatment of women and men (e.g., ¶16). The addition of the proposed final clause allows gender-specific groups like UMW and UMM.

Petition Number: 60606-GA-¶4-C-G; Fisher, Zachary S. - Brentwood, TN, USA.

Inclusiveness of Sex and Gender

Amend ¶ 4 as follows:

In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the Church shall be structured so as to exclude any member or any constituent body of the Church because of race, color, national origin, status, economic condition, sex, or gender.

Rationale:

¶ 405.2a, of The Superintendency provides: “Jurisdictional and central conference delegates, in electing bishops, shall give due consideration to the inclusiveness of The United Methodist Church with respect to sex, race, and national origin.” ¶ 4, Article IV, of The Constitution provides: “The United Methodist Church is a part of . . .

Inclusiveness of Gender and Sexual Orientation

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 4 as follows:

¶ 4. Article IV. Inclusiveness of the Church The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one Body in Christ. The United Methodist Church acknowledges that all persons are of sacred worth. All persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status,⁴ ~~or~~ economic condition, gender, or sexual orientation shall be eligible to attend its worship services, participate in its programs, receive the sacraments, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, and upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection.⁵ In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the Church shall be structured so as to exclude any member or any constituent body of the Church because of race, color, national origin, status ~~or~~ economic condition, gender, or sexual orientation.

Rationale:

As Christians and followers of God's word, it is our duty to love and accept all of God's children. Therefore, the official church stance should explicitly state that The United Methodist Church does not discriminate based on sexual orientation.

Definition of Status

Amend ¶ 4 as follows:

¶ 4. Article IV. Inclusiveness of the Church—The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one body in Christ. ability, or disability—or economic condition. (Footnotes omitted.)

Rationale:

The Judicial Council has held that only the General Conference may define the word “status” in ¶ 4 of the Constitution. The proposed amendment will provide a definition of status that encourages inclusiveness as envisioned by the General Conference when status was added to ¶ 4.

tries, receive the sacraments, and participate in the rites of the church, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, and upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection, and, upon recommendation of the appropriate body as defined by the Discipline, serve as appointed clergy. In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the church shall be structured or act so as to exclude any member or constituent body of the church because of race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression.

Rationale:

Lesbians, gays, bisexuals, transgender, and intersex persons are not inherently immoral and their ministries within our communities of faith make us a vital and vibrant church. This Constitutional amendment to the Discipline will enable The United Methodist Church to truly live out the mission to make disciples of Jesus Christ . . .

2. ~~One Great Hour of Sharing UMCOR Sunday~~—Historically, ~~One Great Hour of Sharing UMCOR Sunday~~ has been celebrated with an offering on the Fourth Sunday in Lent. Congregations are to observe ~~One Great Hour of Sharing UMCOR Sunday~~ on this date or on another date appropriate to the local church. Lent is the season of repentance, self-examination, and awareness of the hurts of the peoples of the world. ~~One Great Hour of Sharing UMCOR Sunday~~ calls the Church to share the goodness of life with those who hurt. In connection with ~~One Great Hour of Sharing UMCOR Sunday~~, the General Commission on Communication shall conduct a churchwide appeal. The observance shall be under the general supervision of the United Methodist Committee on Relief, General Board of Global Ministries. ~~Insofar as possible, planning and promotion of One Great Hour of Sharing shall be done cooperatively with other denominations through the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. However, receipts shall be administered by The United Methodist Church.~~ Net receipts, after payment of promotional expenses, shall be remitted by the treasurer of the General Council on Finance and Administration to the General Board of Global Ministries.

Rationale:

In practice, One Great Hour of Sharing has not served as an ecumenical fundraiser, but in fact has functioned as the primary fundraising vehicle for UMCOR operational costs. Changing the name to UMCOR Sunday provides clarity, accuracy and greater effectiveness.

Native American Ministries Sunday

Amend ¶ 263.6c)(2) as follows:

(2) ~~Expansion of the number of target cities in the Native American Urban Initiative~~ Strengthen, develop and equip Native American rural and urban congregations, ministries and communities: 50 percent (General Board of Global Ministries)...

Rationale:

Not merely an “urban initiative,” Native American Ministries already exist in rural areas, as well as urban areas, but more are needed. Lack of necessary resources has led to a shortage of Native American Ministries and community centers to respond appropriately to conditions in urban and rural Native American communities.

4. Men’s Ministry Sunday—Men’s Ministry Sunday

...

5. Women’s Ministry Sunday—Women’s Ministry Sunday may be observed annually on a Sunday designated by the local congregation. The day is designed to celebrate a variety of women’s ministries, women’s history and the contribution of women within and beyond the local church. This includes, but is not limited to, organized (chartered or unchartered) units of United Methodist Women; women Emmaus communities; work teams; prayer groups; Bible studies; study and enrichment groups; MOPS groups; and other places and organizations where women of The United Methodist Church join together for fellowship, nurture, spiritual development, witness, and outreach. Resources for this observance may be available through a variety of organizations or may be developed through the local church depending on the groups that choose to participate.

Rationale:

The role of women in the church should be acknowledged and celebrated in order to continue to promote involvement and equality. As stated in the Book of Discipline Social Principles, page 118: “We affirm the importance of women in decision-making positions at all levels of Church and society and urge . . .

Volunteers In Mission Awareness Sunday

Insert ¶ 265.5 under Approved Sundays for Annual Conference Observance.

Volunteers in Mission Awareness Sunday—Volunteers in Mission (UMVIM) Awareness Sunday shall be observed annually on a date to be determined by the annual conference. UMVIM Awareness Sunday calls the Church to celebrate those who have served in short-term missions and the work of UMVIM throughout the world. If the annual conference so directs, an offering may be received and used by the annual conference volunteer in mission program. The observance of UMVIM Awareness Sunday shall be under the general supervision of General Board of Global Ministries Mission Volunteers.

Rationale:

The 2004 General Conference ruled that each annual conference may set aside a Sunday to be declared Volunteers in Mission Awareness Day. As indicated in Resolution 3111 Volunteers in Mission, 2008 Book of Resolutions, the UMVIM movement is one of the most dynamic mission outreach programs of the denomination with . . .

Votes Reported Publicly

Amend the Book of Discipline by adding a new paragraph, ¶ 711, after current ¶ 710 as follows:

¶ 711. Transparency in Decision-Making— the votes of individual members of general boards and agencies on whether or not to petition General Conference or release a public statement in the name of the board or agency shall be matters of public record, to be reported on the website of each general board and agency. In extraordinarily special circumstances, general boards and agencies may vote that such a pending decision will be made by secret ballot, in which case the votes of individual members on whether or not to have a secret ballot in that instance shall likewise be a matter of public record.

Rationale:

Fair, transparent, and trust-building leadership involves having the courage to stand by rather than hide the key decisions one makes. Fostering greater openness, communication, and responsibility at all levels of church leadership is essential for the health, unity, and functionality of our denomination.

Plan UMC Revised - Connectional Table

To strengthen the role of the Connectional Table in the life of the Church, take the following action:

Amend ¶ 701 as follows:

¶ 701.2. . . . The term agency, wherever it appears in the Book of Discipline, is a term used to describe the various councils, boards, commissions, committees, divisions, tables, or other units constituted within the various levels of Church organization (general, jurisdictional, central, annual, district, and charge conferences) under authority granted by the Book of Discipline; the term does not and is not meant to imply a master-servant or principal-agent relationship between these bodies and the conference or other body that creates them, except where the authority is specifically granted.

3. . . . The general agencies of The United Methodist Church are the regularly established councils, boards, commissions, committees, tables, or other units with ongoing responsibilities that have been constituted by the General Conference and which report directly to General Conference. . . .

Amend ¶ 713 as indicated following:

¶ 713. Election of General Secretaries of Program Agencies—The general secretary of each of the four general program boards ~~agency~~ that is accountable to the Connectional Table shall be elected quadrennially by ballot of the board of the Connectional Table following nomination by the board of directors of the program board, and she or he shall be accountable programmatically to the board of the agency that establishes priorities, goals, and objectives for the agency. He or she will report administratively to the Executive General Secretary of the Connectional Table who, after evaluation and review, which shall be conducted annually, shall make recommendations to the board of the Connectional Table on the employment and dismissal of each program board's general secretary based in large part on the degree of cooperation and collaboration with other agencies toward the goal of making disciples of Jesus Christ. Since the Connectional Table is responsible to direct the flow of attention and energy to an intense concentration on fostering and sustaining an increase in the number of vital congregations effective in making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world and for providing strategic guidance to increase understanding and implementation of the vision, mission, and ministries of the global Church, consideration shall be strongly given in this process of evaluation and review as to how successful each agency has been toward this goal. Other general agencies shall elect general secretaries quadrennially by ballot. ~~of the board of the agency involved.~~ The balloting shall be secret, but the presiding officer shall announce to the membership the results of the election, including the number of votes for election, against election, and in abstention.

Amend ¶ 901 as follows:

¶ 901.1 Name—There shall be a Connectional Table in The United Methodist Church where ministry and money are brought to the same table to coordinate the mission, ministries, and resources of The United Methodist Church. ~~Effective January 1, 2005, t~~ The Connectional Table shall be assigned the primary responsibilities, general policies and practices found in the relevant 700 paragraphs.

2. The Connectional Table (CT) shall have responsibility for monitoring and reviewing the work of all program agencies of The United Methodist Church. The CT shall work in partnership with other agencies and the Council of Bishops to conduct necessary research efforts as needed to support strategic thinking and planning and the implementation of mission critical ministries.

3. In the exercise of its responsibility prescribed in §2 hereof, the Connectional Table shall have authority during the 2017 to 2020 quadrennium to guide and work with all program and administrative agencies and connectional bodies, to include the general secretaries, of The United Methodist Church to plan for and implement the overall restructure and reorganization approved by the 2016 General Conference for those agencies and bodies. One of the goals is the consolidation of program and administrative leadership to eliminate unnecessary duplication of effort as provided in ¶ 806.13 and ¶ 811.2 while ensuring that critical and important connectional ministries are functional and adequately carried forward.

4. The Connectional Table's responsibility, shared with the General Council on Finance and Administration, to monitor and review the work of the agencies shall include authority for the consolidation of administrative services to the extent practicable for all general church activities into the appropriate agency on a fee for service basis as it affects agencies receiving general church funds.

Amend ¶ 905 as follows:

¶ 905. Objectives—The essential functions of the Connectional Table are:

1. To provide a forum for the understanding and implementation of the vision, mission, and ministries of the global church as determined in consultation with the Council of Bishops and/or the actions of the General Conference.

2. To enable the flow of information and communication among annual conferences, jurisdictions, central conferences, general agencies, and the Council of Bishops.

3. Consistent with actions of the General Conference, to coordinate the program life of the church with the mandates of the gospel, the mission of the church, and the needs of the global community by listening to the expression of needs, addressing emerging issues, and determining the most effective, cooperative, and efficient way to provide optimum stewardship of ministries, personnel, and resources.

4. To review and evaluate the missional effectiveness of general program-related agencies and connectional structures of the church as they collectively seek to aid annual conferences and local churches as they fulfill the mission of The United Methodist Church to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

5. To recommend to the General Conference such changes and implementing legislation as may be appropriate to ensure effectiveness of the general agencies.

6. To provide leadership in planning and research, assisting all levels of the church to evaluate needs and plan strategies to carry out the mission of the church.

7. In order to be accountable, along with the General Council on Finance and Administration, to The United Methodist Church through the General Conference, the Connectional Table shall have the authority and responsibility in the following matters:

a) To collaborate with the General Council on Finance and Administration in the preparation of budgets for the apportioned funds as provided for in ¶¶ 806.1 and 810.1. In the process of preparing budgets for General Conference consideration and approval primary responsibility for providing the assessment of the resource potential of the Church rests with the General Council on Finance and Administration, and primary responsibility for determining the optimum distribution of those resources among the various needs and opportunities rests with the Connectional Table.

b) To receive from the General Council on Finance and Administration and approve all general agency budget reviews.

c) To review and approve special offerings and churchwide appeals.

Add a new subparagraph ¶ 905.7.d) as follows:

¶ 905.7.d) To provide, review, and evaluate program internal audits of all agencies of the Church that receive world service or general administration funds in relationship to goals, objectives, and measurable outcomes established by the General Conference, the governing board, and donor designations. The Connectional Table shall work with the General Council on Finance and Administration in executing this audit function and shall advise GCFA on appropriate circumstances for the application of measures specified in ¶ 806.13. The Connectional Table is responsible to direct the flow of attention and energy to an intense concentration on fostering and sustaining an increase in the number of vital congregations effective in making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. It shall provide strategic guidance to increase understanding and implementation of the vision, mission, and ministries of the global Church.

Add new sub-paragraphs ¶ 907.8, .9, and .10 as follows:

8. The Connectional Table and its Executive General Secretary shall annually evaluate the strategic planning, goals, objectives and quantitative commitments made by organizations and staff receiving church funds. This review shall take into account the utilization of general church funds in achieving the stated mission of the entity as defined by the General Conference, the governing board, and donor designations. After reviewing the performance of an agency and evaluating its progress toward established goals, the CT may take into account any deficiencies in recommending in the budget process any funding for any programs and activities in pursuing the CT's responsibility to ensure that all general agencies have achieved, or identified means satisfactorily to achieve, the established outcomes. This process should be an ongoing, continuing function of the CT.

9. During the quadrennium the Connectional Table shall administer funds which have been made available by General Conference as a Connectional Table Adaptive Challenge Fund within the World Service budget. The funds shall be distributed to the various agencies receiving funds from the World Service Fund based on need, evaluation and review of measurable outcomes, and facilitation of initiatives for the adaptive challenge of increasing vital congregations.

10. Executive General Secretary—a) The Connectional Table shall elect an Executive General Secretary, who shall not be a bishop.

b) The Executive General Secretary shall be limited to a total of twelve (12) years in the same office.

c) The Executive General Secretary shall be an ex officio member of the Connectional Table with voice but without vote.

d) The Executive General Secretary shall be reviewed and evaluated by the Connectional Table based on measured effectiveness on redirecting the focus toward vital congregations.

Amend ¶ 906.1.a), b), and c) as follows:

¶ 906. Organization of the Connectional Table—

1. Membership—Members of the Connectional Table should be effective, informed leaders who take responsibility for the good of the whole by advocating for the various parts of the Church as it seeks to respond to the demands of the gospel. The voting and non-voting members of the Connectional Table shall consist of 49 persons as follows: be selected as provided in ¶¶ 705.3.f) and 705.5. Consideration should be given to ethnic, gender, and age inclusivity.

~~a) Twenty-eight persons elected through jurisdictional and central conferences, one from each of the central conferences by their own nomination processes and 21 from the jurisdictional conferences elected by the jurisdictional nomination process. Jurisdictional membership shall include one person from each jurisdiction and the balance of the jurisdictional members shall be allocated by the Secretary of the General Conference so as to insure to the extent possible that the members represent the proportionate membership of the jurisdictions based upon the combined clergy and lay membership. Advisory members shall serve without vote. The participation on the Connectional Table of nonvoting advisory members shall be at the expense of the agencies they represent.~~

b) An effective bishop, selected by the Council of Bishops, serves as the chair of the Connectional Table shall represent the Council, serve as a member with right of voice and vote, and shall convene an organizational meeting of the Connectional Table within two months of the last jurisdictional conference.

~~c) The ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops and the presidents of the following agencies: General Board of Church and Society, General Board of Discipleship, General Board of Global Ministries, General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, General Commission on Religion and Race, General Commission on Status and Role of Women, General Commission on United Methodist Men, General Commission on Communications, and General Commission on Archives and History, program-related agencies that are accountable to the Connectional Table (as expressed in ¶ 702.2), and the president of the General Council on Finance and Administration shall also sit with voice and vote on the Connectional Table. The following officers of the Connectional Table shall be elected from the jurisdictional and central conference members: chair, vice chair, secretary, and treasurer.~~

~~Delete ¶¶ 906.1.d), e), and f) in their entirety.~~

Amend ¶¶ 906.1.g) and i) and ¶ 906.5 as follows:

g) Jurisdictional, central conferences, and other groups involved in the nominating and election of persons to the Connectional Table shall ensure the diversity objectives of, insofar as possible, fifty percent clergy, fifty percent laity, fifty percent female, fifty percent male, not less than thirty percent members of racial/ethnic groups (excluding central conference members), and not less than ten percent youth and young adults, ensuring diversity as otherwise provided in ¶ 705.4b.

i) Members shall meet all the membership qualifications as expressed in ¶ 710 and shall possess knowledge of the operations of the general church.

¶ 906.5. *Staff—*The Connectional Table shall determine the support staff that it deems appropriate to facilitate its work elect an Executive General Secretary with knowledge of The United Methodist Church operations and with executive management experience in church and/or not-for-profit organization who shall provide leadership to the Connectional Table in performing the duties assigned to the Connectional Table in accordance with directives of the General Conference and policies set by the Connectional Table. The Connectional Table shall determine the support staff that it deems appropriate to facilitate its work. The Executive General Secretary shall be responsible for the staff and the operations of the Connectional Table.

Delete the existing text of ¶ 907 and replace it with the following text:

¶ 907. There shall be a committee of the general secretaries of agencies specified herein following which shall be called the General Secretaries Committee. It shall report to the Connectional Table for purposes of agency collaboration and alignment. It shall not be considered to be a general agency of the Church.

1. The members of the General Secretaries Committee (GSC) shall be the general secretary or other employed chief executive officer of each of the following agencies:

- Connectional Table
- General Board of Church and Society
- General Board of Discipleship
- General Board of Global Ministries
- General Board of Higher Education and Ministry
- General Council on Finance and Administration
- United Methodist Communications
- United Methodist Men
- United Methodist Women

2. The GSC shall have other duties as approved by the Connectional Table.

3. If at any time there should be a conflict between guidance to a general secretary or other chief executive officer provided by the GSC and direction provided by the board of directors of the agency she or he represents, then the affected officer should follow the direction provided by her or his board and advise the GSC of the conflict.

4. The GSC shall be chaired by the Executive General Secretary of the Connectional Table.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

Non-UM Coalitions

Amend ¶ 702 by adding a new section 8 as follows:

¶ 702. Amenability and Program Accountability—1. All the general agencies of The United Methodist Church that have been constituted by the General Conference are amenable to the General Conference, except as otherwise provided.

...

8. The joining of, or ongoing participation in, a non-United Methodist coalition by any general agency must be approved quadrennially by the General Conference. Interim approval may be granted by the Connectional Table, subject to final approval by the next session of the General Conference.

Rationale:

Because non-United Methodist coalitions by nature can include groups with a wide disparity of views, not necessarily aligned with United Methodist doctrinal and ethical standards, membership in such coalitions ought to be subject to review and approval by the General Conference on behalf of the whole church.

Clarification

~~3.~~ 2. Members of the general agencies . . .

Representation on General Church Bodies

Amend ¶ 705 by addition as follows:

The following provisions shall govern the nomination and election of the voting membership of those general Church bodies to which the Jurisdictional Conferences nominate and elect and Central Conferences nominate and elect members.

The voting members of the general church bodies must be proportionate and equitable by jurisdictional and central conferences. Central Conferences Representation shall be equal to at least one-third of the general Church bodies' membership

Rationale:

The growth of The United Methodist Church outside of the United States continues every quadrennial. Participation is a major component of our connectional system. Plan UMC Revised - Agency Membership Consolidation

In the consolidation of agency membering provisions into the general provisions section, take the following action:

Amend ¶ 705 as follows:

~~¶ 705. General Agency and Connectional Table Membership—~~The people of God are called to faithful discipleship in the name of Jesus Christ. “He gave some apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers. His purpose was to equip God’s people for the work of serving and building up the body of Christ.” (Ephesians 4:11-12). In response to God’s call, some are called forth from local congregations to fulfill the common mission of The United Methodist Church as an expression of the Church made visible in the world. This call includes the invitation to some to be in ministry with others who together seek to fulfill the vision for the Church as members of general Church bodies. Such persons come to this ministry as servants of the whole Church, entrusted with caring for the missions and legal and fiduciary responsibilities of the agencies.

The basic responsibilities of the boards of the general agencies include, but are not limited to, the following:

- a) Determine mission and purpose.
- b) Select the general secretary.
- c) Support and evaluate the general secretary.
- d) Ensure effective planning.
- e) Monitor and strengthen programs and services.
- f) Ensure adequate financial resources.

g) Protect assets and provide proper financial management.

h) Ensure legal and ethical integrity.

i) Enhance the agency's public standing.

The following provisions shall govern the nomination . . .

¶ 705.1. Nominations by Conferences—a) Each annual and missionary conference in the United States, upon recommendation from a committee composed of the bishop and the general and jurisdictional conference delegation, and having allowed opportunity for nominations from the floor, shall elect persons to be submitted to a jurisdictional pool. The jurisdictional nominating committee shall select persons for election to the following general Church bodies: Connectional Table; General Board of Church and Society; General Board of Discipleship; General Board of Global Ministries; General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; General Board of Pension and Health Benefits; The United Methodist Publishing House; ~~Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships; General Commission on Communication and United Methodist Communications; General Commission on Religion and Race; and the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women.~~ Jurisdictional conferences may decide that persons elected by the annual and missionary conferences in the United States for inclusion in the jurisdictional pool shall not serve as members of the jurisdictional nominating committee. Before election, nominated members will be informed of the fiduciary, strategic, and generative responsibilities they will be assuming upon election so that they may clearly understand the time and resource commitment they are making.

¶ 705.3.f) The total central conference membership, including central conference bishops, in general Church bodies shall be allocated as follows: nine (9) members on each of the General Board of Church and Society (GBCS) and the General Board of Discipleship (GBOD), ten (10) members on the General Board of Global Ministries (GBGM), eleven (11) members on the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM), seven (7) members on the Connectional Table (CT), three (3) members on the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA), three (3) members on the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits (GBOPHB), three (3) members on each of The United Methodist Publishing House (UMPH), the United Methodist Men (UMM), and ten (10) members on United Methodist Communications (UMCOM).

For each of the following agencies, one of the central conference members shall be a bishop: GBCS, GBOD, GBGM, GBHEM, GBOPHB, UMPH, UMM, UMCOM.

The central conference membership shall be allocated to the central conferences by the Council of Bishops. Europe and the Philippines shall each be allocated eight (8) of the sixty-eight (68) members with the remaining fifty-two (52) members to be distributed among the African central conferences as determined by the Council of Bishops. The sixty (60) central conference members who are not bishops shall be assigned to the general agencies as determined by the Council of Bishops.

As allocated to them by the Council of Bishops, central conferences shall elect members to general agencies from a pool of candidates supplied by their annual conferences by a method to be determined by each central conference as appropriate to its culture and circumstances.

¶ 705.4. General Program Board Membership—a) Each general program board shall have the number of members herein specified in ~~¶¶ 1006, 1105, 1311, and 1407.~~

b) Jurisdictional Membership—Each jurisdiction shall elect the number of persons herein specified ~~listed in the specific legislation for membership on each of the four general program boards.~~ In the jurisdictional nominating process for membership on those boards, special attention shall be given to the inclusion of clergywomen, youth (¶ 256.3), young adults, older adults, people with disabilities, and persons from small membership churches. In order to ensure adequate representation of racial and ethnic persons (Asian Americans, African Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, Pacific Islanders), it is recommended that at least 30 percent of a jurisdiction's membership on each of these general program boards be racial and ethnic persons. It is further recommended that the jurisdiction membership on each program board incorporate one-third clergy, one-third laymen, and one-third laywomen ~~(except as provided in ¶¶ 1105.1, 1311.2; see also ¶¶ 1311.6, 1407).~~ The episcopal members shall not be counted in the computation of the clergy membership. For each program board, including the General Board of Church and Society, the General Board of Discipleship, the General Board of Global Ministries, and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, clergy, laywomen, and laymen shall be elected to the board by the jurisdictional conferences upon nomination from the annual conferences based on the following formula:

General Board of Church and Society: North Central—3, Northeastern—2, South Central—3, Southeastern—5, and Western—1.

General Board of Discipleship: North Central—3, Northeastern—2, South Central—3, Southeastern—5, and Western—1.

General Board of Global Ministries: North Central—2, Northeastern—1, South Central—2, Southeastern—4, and Western—1.

General Board of Higher Education and Ministry: North Central—2, Northeastern—2, South Central—3, Southeastern—4, and Western—1.

~~e) Central Conference Membership—The total central conference membership, including central conference bishops, in general Church bodies shall be allocated as follows: two members on the General Commission on Religion and Race; three each (one from each region: Philippines, Europe, Africa) on the General Commission on Archives and History, the General Commission on Communication, the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women, the General Commission on United Methodist Men, and The United Methodist Publishing House; three each on the General Council on Finance and Administration; seven each (one from each Central Conference) on the Connectional Table, the General Board of Church and Society; and three on the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; four (at least one from each region from the Philippines, Europe, and Africa) on the General Board of Discipleship; and ten on the General Board of Global Ministries, only one of whom shall be a bishop. It is recommended that the aggregate central conference membership on the program boards be composed of one-third clergy (half of whom shall be women), one-third laymen, and one-third laywomen. The central conference membership, excluding episcopal members, shall be elected by the Council of Bishops.~~

~~d) Episcopal Membership—The episcopal membership of the general program boards shall be nominated by the Council of Bishops and elected by the General Conference with two (2) bishops to serve on each of the following agencies, one of whom shall be from a central conference: (see exception, ¶ 1311.6). At least one of the episcopal members of each general agency, with the exception of the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits, shall be a central conference bishop and, in the case of the General Board of Global Ministries, three central conference bishops (one from each region: Africa, Europe, Philippines): the General Board of Church and Society, the General Board of Discipleship, the General Board of Global Ministries, and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.~~

~~e) Additional Membership—(1) Additional members shall be elected by each general program board in order to bring into the board persons with special knowledge or background that will aid in the work of the agency, to consider differing theological perspectives, and to perfect the representation of racial and ethnic persons, youth (¶ 710.3), young adults (¶ 710.3), older adults, women and men, people with disabilities, and persons from~~ small-membership churches. After the election of central conference members as provided in ¶705.3.f) ¶ 705.4e, ~~and with the exception of the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women (¶ 2104.1.b)~~, the remaining number of additional members shall be allocated by the secretary of the General Conference so as to insure to the extent possible that membership of each board reflects the proportionate membership of the jurisdictions based upon the combined clergy and lay membership, excluding episcopal members. In executing this responsibility the secretary has authority to make adjustments in the allocation of members so that the total number of members of each church body as provided herein is the prevailing principle when rounding numbers is required ~~In the determination of proportionate allocation, minor fractions shall be rounded down and major fractions rounded up to the nearest integer, and there shall be no minimum number of additional members assigned to any jurisdiction. Insofar as possible, the nominating committee shall select from the jurisdictional nominating pool for the election of persons to fill the additional membership positions from their jurisdictions insuring diversity as otherwise provided in The Book of Discipline (¶ 705.4b). Each of the following general program boards shall elect six (6) additional members, and there shall be no minimum number of additional members assigned to any jurisdiction: the General Board of Church and Society, the General Board of Discipleship, the General Board of Global Ministries, and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, as specified in general program board membership paragraphs. Insofar as possible, no more than one person shall be elected from each episcopal area.~~ It is recommended that such additional membership shall maintain the one-third laymen, one-third laywomen, and one-third clergy balance.

Add a new sub-paragraph following existing ¶ 705.4.e) as follows:

¶ 705.4. [NEW] Other Membership—The General Board of Global Ministries shall have five members selected by the United Methodist Women.

Add a new sub-paragraph following all that remains in ¶ 705.4 as follows:

¶ 705.5. Other General Agencies—a) From the jurisdictional pool nominated by the annual and missionary conferences in the United States the jurisdictional conferences shall elect to each of the Connectional Table, General Board of Pension and Health Benefits, The United Methodist Publishing House, and United Methodist Communications clergy, laywomen, and laymen as members, based on the following formula:

Connectional Table: North Central—3, Northeastern—3, South Central—3, Southeastern—6, and Western—1.

United Methodist Communications: North Central—3, Northeastern—3, South Central—4, Southeastern—4, and Western—2.

b) Additional Members—The number of additional members to be elected by each other agency, with the exception of the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits, shall be allocated by the secretary of the General Conference so as to insure to the extent possible that membership of each agency reflects the proportionate membership of the jurisdictions based upon the combined clergy and lay membership, excluding episcopal members. In executing this responsibility the secretary has authority to make adjustments in the allocation of members so that the total number of members who are not bishops of each agency as specified herein is the prevailing principle when rounding numbers is required, and there shall be no minimum number of additional members assigned to any jurisdiction. Insofar as possible the nominating committee shall select from the jurisdictional nominating pool for the election of persons to fill the additional membership positions from their jurisdictions insuring diversity as otherwise provided in the Book of Discipline (¶ 705.4*b*). The agencies shall consider names forwarded to them by the Connectional Table as having been nominated by the annual and missionary conferences in the United States or in the central conferences, but not elected by these conferences to general agency membership. Additional names may be considered in order to perfect the representation as provided in ¶ 705.4*e*. Each of the following general agencies shall have the following number of additional members:

Connectional Table: five (5). One of these additional members shall be named by each of the recognized racial and ethnic caucus groups of The United Methodist Church, which are Black Methodists for Church Renewal, Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic Americans, Native American International Caucus, National Federation of Asian American United Methodists, and Pacific Islanders National Caucus United Methodist.

General Board of Pension and Health Benefits: eight (8)

United Methodist Publishing House: six (6)

United Methodist Communications: (7)

Other paragraphs of the Discipline notwithstanding, membership on the United Methodist Publishing House shall be by classes based on term of office for one, two, or three quadrennia, attention being given to the principle of rotation so that, as far as practicable, one third of the membership shall be elected each quadrennium. The principle of rotation is also applicable to the executive committee of that agency.

¶ 1502. 1. Membership—a) The membership of the general board shall be composed of two bishops, elected by the Council of Bishops; sixteen members elected by the jurisdictional conferences from the annual conference nominations on a ratio providing for an equitable distribution among the various jurisdictions, based on the combined clergy and laity membership thereof, as determined by the secretary of the General Conference; six members, with not more than two from the same jurisdiction, elected by the General Conference on nomination of the Council of Bishops; and eight additional members of the General Board as provided in ¶ 705.5 for the purpose of bringing to the general board special knowledge or background, not more than two from the same jurisdiction, shall be nominated and elected by the general board in such manner as it shall provide in its bylaws, other provisions of the Book of Discipline notwithstanding.

b) The aforementioned electing bodies shall give consideration during the nominating process to equitable representation on the basis of race, color, age, gender, and people with disabilities.

c) The general secretary of the general board shall be an ex officio member thereof, without vote.

d) The terms of all members so elected shall be four years, to take effect at the first meeting of the general board following the General Conference, hereinafter referred to as the organizational meeting.

(1) Members shall serve during the terms for which they are elected and until their successors shall have been elected and qualified.

(2) Other paragraphs of the Discipline notwithstanding, members of the general board may serve a maximum of three consecutive terms.

(3) In case a vacancy occurs between regular sessions

~~of the jurisdictional conferences for any cause, the general board shall fill the vacancy for the unexpired term from that jurisdiction in the representation of which the vacancy occurs, except in the case of members elected by the General Conference or the general board where such vacancies would be filled by the general board in the manner prescribed by its bylaws without regard to geographic or jurisdictional representation.~~

Delete all the existing text of ¶ 1602 except subparagraph ¶ 1602.1.i, so that ¶ 1602 shall read as follows:

¶ 1602 The publisher of The United Methodist Church (¶ 1614) shall be an ex officio member of the board without vote.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

Representation from Central Conferences

Amend ¶ 705.1c as follows:

Each central conference or a body authorized by it shall ~~nominate~~ elect to each general program board membership at least ~~one~~ four (4) persons(s) from each of the following ~~three~~ categories (1) clergy, (2) laymen, (3) laywomen, (4) youth or young adults to form a pool from which each ~~board~~ general church body is to elect additional members that are to come from the Central Conferences pursuant to ¶ 705.4c. These lists shall be sent to the connectional table for use by the general agencies in electing additional members.

Rationale:

The Representation of Central Conferences on general Church bodies is inadequate. Additional members to general agencies should reflect the growth of the global Church by the participation of United Methodist members from central conferences in a proportionate and equitable way as we journey to the future of the global UMC.

Youth and Young Adult Voting

Amend ¶¶ 705, 710, and 1105 as indicated.

¶ 705.3.c) It is recommended that ~~the membership of general agencies that~~, to the extent possible, permitted by the state laws applicable to the general agencies, at least 10 percent of the voting membership of each general agency, ~~include both~~ be youth and young adults (¶ 256.3;) and that the number of youth be equal to the number of young adults. ~~In any state in which youth and young adults are not permitted to serve as voting members of a general agency incorporated in that state, youth and young adults who are elected~~ Youth and young adult members of general agencies shall serve with vote except when local laws prohibit them from voting on corporate matters under consideration (see ¶ 2506.1) in which case and for which purpose youth and young adult members shall serve as non-director representatives with voice, but not vote, until they reach the legal age to serve as voting members for this purpose, at which time they shall become voting members for all purposes. The youth and young adult membership of each general agency shall be inclusive (consistent with ¶¶ 705.3d) and 2506.1.)

¶ 710.3. All youth representatives (¶ 256.3) elected to general agencies shall be at the time of organizational board meetings twelve to sixteen years of age. All young adults (¶ 256.3) elected to general agencies shall be at the time of organizational board meetings seventeen to twenty-eight years of age. All older-adult representatives ¶ 705.1.b(6)) shall be at the time of organizational board meetings at least sixty-five years of age.

¶ 1105.1.d) Division on Ministries With Young People—The Division on Ministries With Young People will elect two members, one youth and one young adult as defined by the age qualifications for the Division on Ministries With Young People in accordance with ¶ 1207. ~~Members who do not meet the requirements of ¶ 2506.1 shall serve with voice and vote, except in matters related to the fiduciary responsibilities of the board in which they~~

d) Episcopal Membership—The episcopal membership of the general program boards shall be nominated by the Council of Bishops and elected by the General Conference (~~see exception, ¶ 1311.6~~). Rationale:

¶ 1311.6 requires rotation of bishops from each jurisdiction and central conference region (Africa, Europe, and Philippines) every three quadrennia. ¶ 705.4 c) Central Conference Membership

The total central conference membership, including central conference bishops, in general Church bodies shall be allocated as follows: two members on the General Commission on Religion and Race; three each (one from each region: Philippines, Europe, Africa) on the General Commission on Archives and History, the General Commission on Communication, ~~the General Commission on~~

~~the Status and Role of Women~~, the General Commission on United Methodist Men, and The United Methodist Publishing House; three each on the General Council of Finance and Administration; seven each (one from each Central Conference) on the Connectional Table, the General Board of Church and Society; and three on the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; four (at least one from each region from the Philippines, Europe, and Africa) on the General Board of Discipleship and the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women; and ten on the General Board of Global Ministries, only one of whom shall be a bishop. It is recommended . . .

Rationale:

This revision conforms with ¶ 2104 (GCSRW Membership), which mandates four total Central Conference members and maintains the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women's commitment to being a global Commission with global vision. Currently, these two provisions regarding membership are different and need to be harmonized.

3. Unless otherwise specified . . .

4. Any petition submitted to the General Conference on behalf of a general agency must first receive, at a minimum, the support of two-thirds of the agency's members present and voting at a scheduled meeting.

Rationale:

Overwhelmingly endorsed in committee at last General Conference, never considered in plenary. The supermajority requirement would help promote dialogue and common-ground-finding, rather than division and alienation, between members of differing perspectives.

An agency's board must approve the termination of employment of its general secretary. Absent a contrary action by, or policy of, the agency's board, the agency's general secretary may terminate the employment of all other agency staff, including elected staff.

¶715. Provisions Pertaining to Staff—1. . . .

9. For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel, and in consideration of the influence of United Methodist agencies on the lives of other persons both within and outside the Church, the Church expects its general agency staff to make a complete dedication of themselves to the highest ideals of the Christian life. To this end, all individuals newly hired for full-time staff positions in United Methodist general agencies after January 1, 2018, shall be professing, church-attending Christians who agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationships, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, abstinence from homosexual practice, social responsibility, and growth in grace and in the knowledge and love of God.

9: 10. . . .

Rationale:

Even if they are laity, the work and personal example of general agency staff can impact our church's integrity and witness just as powerfully as that of ministers of our local churches. The same basic Christian standards for our clergy are just as proper for them.

10. Individuals employed full-time by any board, agency, committee, commission, council, or table of the general Church shall be ineligible for election or service as voting delegates to General or jurisdictional conferences.

Rationale:

General agencies are charged with fulfilling the agendas set by General Conference, where they can testify to give information. This includes engaging with companies to create positive change and hold them accountable for their actions, while also considering exclusion if companies fail to act responsibly.

Petition Number: 60815-GA-NonDis-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table.

General Church Council

The General Conference shall maintain the basic structure and functions of the Connectional Table in the next quadrennium (2017-2020) so that the attention, energy, and resources focus on developing a General Church Council structure that will model our worldwide connection more faithfully.

The Connectional Table in partnership with the Council of Bishops will create a Missional Collaboration Group made up of CT and COB Members from our worldwide church. This group will be tasked with establishing and recommending a model for a General Church Council to align with the work of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters (StC-CCM) and the Committee on Faith and Order (CFO) for a General Book of Discipline.

The Missional Collaboration Group will be tasked to: 1) provide a forum for conversations with key constituents within our primary partnerships to foster wide investment in a "General Church Council" concept; 2) develop legislation to create a General Church Council replacing the Connectional Table in 2020 to accompany the General Book of Discipline legislation. The General Church Council legislation will address the membership of the General Church Council, name the essential functions, and set a timeline for implementation.

The Missional Collaboration Group work will be guided by the following vision and principles for a General Church Council:

Vision: A General Church Council would be a geographically representative, intergenerational body exemplifying the diversity of our worldwide connection.

Principles: A General Church Council shall seek to live out the focus and spirit of the following principles: 1) Build trust in three primary relationships: i) the General Conference through a partnership with the Commission on General Conference; ii) annual conferences through collaboration with active bishops and directors of connectional ministries; iii) program-related general agencies through World Service stewardship, and administrative general agencies through stewardship of mission and vision alignment; 2) Guide a uniquely Wesleyan/spiritual Connection; and 3) Create an open-handed/permission-giving culture that enables innovation by fostering creativity and enhancing ministry at all levels of the church.

Rationale:

This proposal offers a process that helps our denomination achieve its mission in our interconnected, diverse, worldwide context. It is in line with work related to General Book of Discipline process. Allowing the Connectional Table to continue to build trust among key partners strengthens the outcome for the worldwide mission.

Petition Number: 61000-GA-NonDis-G; Lavender, Wayne - NY, USA.

Missional Priority

The Missional Priority of The UMC will be the embracing of orphans and vulnerable children (OVC) with the four areas of focus fitting under their overall effort. OVC, like everyone else, need food, clothing, shelter, education and the good news of Jesus Christ. Our denomination is well positioned to offer these essential components for these suffering children.

Rationale:

In 1819 the Methodist Missionary Society was created. In 1919, in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of this organization, clergy and lay leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Methodist Episcopal Church South initiated the Centennial Campaign. Together they raised $105 million to help re-build war-torn Europe . . .

Mission Worldwide: A Report from the General Board of Global Ministries to the 2016 General Conference

You will receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you, and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth.

— Jesus to the Disciples (Acts 1:8 CEB)

Introduction

The United Methodist Church hears this promise of Jesus Christ. Through the General Board of Global Ministries we engage in God’s worldwide mission of evangelism, church planting, leadership development, missionary sending, and the alleviation of poverty and suffering. We work for justice, peace, and freedom, and for spiritual, emotional, and physical health. We embrace all people as recipients of the grace and love of God in Jesus Christ. In mission to the ends of the earth, Global Ministries connects and focuses United Methodist mission energy. We collaborate with congregations, annual conferences, church-related and ecumenical institutions, and the wide range of United Methodist agencies and organizations.

Through Global Ministries, our United Methodist work together includes personnel, projects, and mission partners in more than 125 countries, with missionaries in more than 60 of those. We continue and extend the commitments of some dozen mission agencies representing historical American Methodist and Evangelical United Brethren traditions. Our earliest predecessor agency was chartered in 1819. Global Ministries approaches a bicentennial in mission strong in faith and constantly renewed by the Holy Spirit.

We rely on the leading of the Holy Spirit in formulating and reformulating mission programs and projects. We rejoice in the language of our mission statement: “the Spirit is always moving to sweep the church into a new mission age.”

In the 2013-2016 quadrennium, we report new and renewed emphasis on:

- Young adults in mission service
- Missionary service “from everywhere to everywhere”
- Global health—abundant health for all
- New faith communities through focused mission initiatives
- Mission with the poor and marginalized
- Promoting human rights around the world
- Agency structure and operational style to more effectively connect the church in global mission in the unfolding twenty-first-century context.

In 2015, we celebrate the 75th anniversary of the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR). UMCOR is in the center of our connectional life in mission, in this quadrennium responding to Ebola in West Africa, storms in the U.S., floods and storms in the Philippines, earthquakes in Nepal, the displacement of persons in the Middle East, and to many lesser-known disasters.

In this report, we reflect upon mission activity from late 2012 through mid-2015. We include some information from 2012 in the report for this quadrennium because the last year of a quadrennium is not included (due to printing deadlines) in reports to the General Conference.

Global Ministries’ directors in 2014 made a historic decision in envisioning a new configuration for the administration of the agency’s work. They affirmed a network of offices around the world linked and accountable to a lead office in Atlanta, which will also serve mission in the United States. All Disciplinary processes were completed as the decision was affirmed by the necessary units of the church. Regional offices, planned for Africa, Asia, and Latin America, will have fully contextual mission agendas and regional distinctions. The regional offices will work in alignment with the Atlanta-based agency leadership.

New York City was a productive base for Methodist mission offices for almost 200 years. The impetus for the dramatically new approach is God’s mission through The United Methodist Church, a truly global mission—from everywhere to everywhere. Through God’s grace, all give and all receive. This reciprocity and theological reality is embodied in the new configuration of mission. We are committed to maximizing resources, finding new partners, and being attuned to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The plan continues to unfold and some salient information is given in the section on New Initiatives below.

A large part of our report is organized around the denomination’s four focus areas:

- Congregational Development
- Developing Principled Christian Leaders
- Ministry with the Poor
- Improving Health Globally

Other sections respond to various General Conference assignments and special mandates. These include disaster relief and subsequent community development, and several racial/ethnic ministry plans in the United States.

The agency in mid-2015 had a missionary community of 363 persons and a staff of some 200 from around the world. The staff leadership team (cabinet) includes a person from every continent where The United Methodist Church has mission work. The missionary number does not include Nationals in Mission, who receive Global Ministries support through mission partners in their home countries.

Mission is the authentic witness of believers in many cultures to their faith in God through Jesus Christ. We are grateful to share a sampling of this great expanse of mission engagement of the people of The United Methodist Church. Each delegate to the 2016 General Conference, like each disciple wherever he or she may be, gives witness in their own ministries to the grace of God alive in mission—worldwide mission “to the ends of the earth.”

I. NEW OCCASIONS AND INITIATIVES

(Unless otherwise stipulated, all references to the Book of Discipline [BOD] are to the 2012 edition.)

The General Board of Global Ministries in the 2013-2016 quadrennium has faced new occasions and undertaken new initiatives in fulfillment of its responsibilities as the mission agency of “The United Methodist Church, its annual conferences, missionary conferences, and local congregations in the context of a global setting” (§ 1301, BOD). It has operated creatively and effectively under the policy guidance of a board of directors of 36 members, reduced from 98 in preceding recent quadrennia, the reduction having been approved by the 2012 General Conference. “The smaller board made us more focused and efficient in matters of policy and government,” according to Thomas Kemper, general secretary since 2010 and a former director, reflecting on the work during the current quadrennium. “And financially, we spend so much less on meetings and still have a geographically and ethnically diverse and balanced panel of directors.”

Here are nine of the new occasions and initiatives of the quadrennium.

A. Toward a Greater Global Presence

In October 2014, directors approved a plan to reshape the agency’s operations across the next few years. Central to the change is a network of offices around the world linked to a headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia, that will also have mission responsibilities in the U.S.A. Three regional offices are initially projected—in Latin America, French-speaking Africa, and Asia. The exact locations had not been determined as of July 2015. This plan is a dramatic shift that takes into account the fact that the gravity of Christian growth has shifted from North America and Europe to the Global South and East. It recognizes that areas that were once “receivers” of mission are today actively engaged in global mission reflecting the current reality of “mission from everywhere to everywhere.” Mission is understood as a means of grace through which all give and all receive and the board wants to represent that theological truth in its operational style.

The new regional offices will reflect the cultures of their locations but will be closely aligned with the diverse global leadership at the headquarters, which by late 2016 will be relocated from New York City to Atlanta, Georgia. In early 2015 the board purchased, for the price of the mortgage ($1.9 million), the sanctuary and educational buildings of Grace United Methodist Church, space being developed into a global mission center. In a creative move that links global and local in mission, Grace Church and its community service ministries remain in the property, located near downtown Atlanta in a bridge area between two economically disparate neighborhoods.

Atlanta was picked as the site of the new mission center in part because of its church-related educational institutions that can assist in missionary training, and its concentration of international health-related schools and other facilities anxious to serve as partners in United Methodism's expanding global health emphasis (see below, Sec. I.C and Sec. II.D under "Global Health").

Purchase of the property was approved in late 2014 by both the Connectional Table and General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA), as required by the Book of Discipline (§ 807.6) and GCFA also endorsed relocation of Global Ministries' headquarters, also required by the Discipline (§ 807.7). The board of directors authorized $9.4 million for building renovations. The sum of $5 million for relocation and staff severance is included in the 2016 budget. Staff teams have been actively involved in the design of the new office space and in anticipating issues to be addressed in the relocation. Support staff and executive personnel not invited to relocate will receive the severance packages stipulated for all general agency employees in such situations and are also receiving services for job-seekers. All proceedings affecting staff were carried out with the goal of transparency and, regarding support staff, in consultation with the in-house staff association.

B. The Missionary Community

(Also see below under Sec. II.A.1).

A new initiative during the quadrennium was the restructure and expansion of young adult mission service opportunities. Several historical programs were brought together and redefined under the banner of Generation Transformation. These include:

1. Global Mission Fellows—The program continues the goals of the historic US-2 and Mission Intern programs. It takes young adults ages 20-30 out of their home environments and places them in new contexts for mission experience and service. Global Mission Fellows become parts of their new local communities. They connect the church in mission across cultural and geographical boundaries. They grow in personal and social holiness and become strong young leaders working to build just communities in a peaceful world. In the 2009-2012 quadrennium, the board commissioned 80 young adult missionaries; in the current quadrennium, by mid-summer of 2015, it has commissioned 126 and is expected to add another 65 in 2016. The program is international in scope and increasingly draws young adults from central conferences and partner autonomous Methodist churches in Asia and Latin America. In 2013, missionaries came from nine countries; in 2015, the number had climbed to 22. In the U.S., Global Mission Fellows are assigned from a network of affiliates, usually annual conferences, districts, congregations, and church-related institutions. In 2015, there were 12 such affiliates.

2. Global Justice Volunteers—The program offers short-term (often two months) service to young adults 18-30 years of age. It too is international in scope. Volunteers work alongside their host community in addressing health, poverty, migration, and human rights issues. There were 18 such volunteers in 2013 and 37 in 2015. Young adults can also volunteer for regular Individual Volunteers in Mission service (see Sec. II.A.4).

C. Global Health

In 2014, Global Ministries restored a distinct unit on health in keeping with denominational priorities. For several years, a former health and welfare unit had been combined with the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR). The executive director of Global Health sits on the agency cabinet. For details of the unit's work, see Sec. II.D.

D. Human Rights and Related Issues

The 2012 General Conference asked all general agencies to consider advocating that all companies formally add into their codes of conduct the United Nation's Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, and also consider economic sanctions against companies that refuse, with special reference in the General Conference action to corporate involvement in Israel's occupation of Palestinian land in making investment decisions. In 2013, a delegation from Global Ministries and the General Board of Pensions and Health Benefits visited Palestine/Israel to better understand the situation. Subsequently, the two agencies jointly formed a Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force (HRIE TF) to "identify resources, principles and procedures that express our commitment to human rights, taking into account fiduciary responsibility and ministry priorities, consistent with the global mission and ethical standards of The United Methodist Church." One goal was to bring mission and money into compatible relationship. Bishop Ken Carter of Florida served as chair of the panel composed of persons from the two convening agencies, the General Board of Church and Society, United Methodist Women, the Georgia United Methodist Foundation, and several seminaries and annual conferences.

Over the course of five meetings, the task force gathered information about human rights protocols; studied United Methodist teachings and policies related to human rights and investments; discussed case studies on Israel and Palestine, the Democratic Republic of Congo, and Tibet; shared strategies for socially responsible investment; and engaged theologians in conversation and readings related to theology and human rights.

The HRIE TF produced a report that was shared across the Church in 2014. The report notes the importance of fostering both internal and external coherence to frame investment ethics and human rights in the context of each agency's mission. Recognition of the tension that can exist between mission and financial investment gave the group a common ground to move the conversation forward. Since then, the four general secretaries of Pensions and Health Benefits, Global Ministries, United Methodist Women, and Church and Society continue to meet, exploring ways to bring together their shared voices on common human rights challenges while fulfilling their specific missions.

Global Ministries monitors the human rights situations in the places it has work and often addresses violations, including those of religious freedom. Two countries of recent acute concern were Pakistan, where Christians faced constant repression, and Nigeria, where conflict between religious factions endangered individuals and communities and where many young women were kidnapped by Boko Haram militants.

A new resolution, "Religious Freedom: Grounded in Love," is proposed by directors for adoption by the 2016 General Conference. The statement is unique in that it does not base human rights and claims to religious liberty in natural law or political frameworks, but in the love ethic of the New Testament. It maintains that when Christians affirm their faith in the Prince of Peace they commit themselves to respect and protect the rights of all faith communities that find themselves in harm's way (see new resolution section of ADCA).

E. Ministry of Repentance and Reconciliation

The Office of Native American and Indigenous Ministries, in concert with the Council of Bishops coordinated the Church's Act of Repentance movement in relation to indigenous people, as a follow-up to the Act of Repentance Toward Healing Relationships with Indigenous People held at the 2012 General Conference. As of mid-2015, 26 annual conferences have engaged in some aspect of this ministry and others were in preparation. In November 2014, staff coordinated an immersion Act of Repentance worship service for the bishops, meeting in Oklahoma City. The theme was "Indigenous Women: Forever Healing Our Communities," with women participants from five native nations: Euchee, Kickapoo, Navajo, Shawnee, and Pawnee. In related work, the office took part in United Nations and World Council of Churches panels looking at relations between the work of the churches and indigenous people, and offered workshops in Native American ministries at the 2013 School of Congregational Development and other denominational training events.

F. Relations with United Methodist Women

This was the first quadrennium in many decades in which United Methodist Women was not a structural part of the General Board of Global Ministries. United Methodist Women became a freestanding organization by approval of the 2012 General Conference. Women's mission societies for foreign and domestic work were parts of the three denominations that came together in 1939 to form The Methodist Church. A single mission organization resulted from that union. A division representing women in mission became part of Global Ministries when The Methodist and Evangelical Brethren Churches united in 1968. While structurally separate, Global Ministries and United Methodist Women remain connected in mission. This new relationship has proved a valuable learning experience in mission partnership during the current quadrennium. The two organizational entities remain linked in resource planning for schools of mission, the Prayer Calendar, missionary processing and placement, and concerns including ministries with women and children, migrants, human trafficking, and international issues addressed by the Church Center for the United Nations.

G. Care for God's Creation

Global Ministries is working with the Council of Bishops to advance respect and care for God's earth. The new office of Care for God's Creation, staffed by a former missionary and pioneered in the Virginia Annual Conference, reflects the theology of the bishops' 2009 pastoral letter, "God's Renewed Creation." That document outlines the Christian responsibility to understand and connect pandemic poverty/disease, environmental degradation, and the proliferation of violence. The office works with annual conferences and United Methodist and ecumenical organizations in understanding links between theology and the environment and in ways to integrate care of creation into the work of mission locally and globally. An example of the latter is the awarding of stipends in environmental studies through leadership development scholarships (for this program, see Sec. II.A.2). A seminar of environmental scholars was held in Zimbabwe in August 2014, with nine recent advanced degree graduates or candidates taking part. The United Methodist Church was strongly represented at the 20th Conference of the Parties (COP) of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, held in Lima, Peru, in 2014.

H. Mission Celebrations

These are congregation-based or district mission events facilitated in part by Global Ministries. (See Sec. II.B.4.)

I. United Methodist Microfinance Connection.

This is a partnership involving Global Ministries, the Large Church Mission Connection, and FINCA (Foundation for International Community Assistance), an international financial intermediary, bringing economic empowerment to small businesses in two pilot locations in Malawi and Mexico. (For details, see under Ministry with the Poor, Sec. II.C.)

The Advance

The Advance for Christ and His Church is the designated, accountable, mission-giving arm of The United Methodist Church. It ensures that 100 percent of each gift is used for its intended mission or ministry. In a typical year, some 900 projects respond to physical and spiritual needs worldwide. The partnership of donor plus The Advance plus project makes life-changing and long-lasting impact. Gifts to The Advance represent second-mile giving—contributions above a congregation’s “first-mile” support of United Methodist Church missions and ministries through World Service and other apportioned funds. Giving through The Advance is an outward sign of an inward love for God’s mission and the church.

In the two years of 2013 and 2014, Advance gifts totaled $99,888,360 for projects in 129 countries, including the work of the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR). Of that, $9.5 million was for missionary support.

The Advance operates with the highest level of accountability, integrity, and transparency. The system ensures that each gift reaches the intended project or missionary, usually through wire transfers; gifts can be tracked to the penny and date, and regional auditors operate under an independent audit committee. Annual reports are required from each Advance project.

On #GivingTuesday, December 3, 2013, United Methodists joined together in record-breaking online giving through The Advance, affirming our connectional partnership and demonstrating strong passion for global mission. Eighty percent were new donors; more than 11,000 persons from 32 countries made gifts. The Advance led the U.S. in participation for that day of online philanthropy. Donors continued to support UMC#Giving Tuesday in 2014. Working closely with United Methodist Communications, more than $9 million was raised for Advance projects in the first two years of the campaign.

II. MISSION AND MINISTRIES IN THE FOUR FOCUS AREAS

The United Methodist Church currently has four focus areas that define much of the program and budgeting of general agencies. The four provide the framework for a major part of this report. They are complementary and often overlap in mission. In each area, one common goal is to increase mission service opportunities across racial, cultural, national, and political boundaries. The four are not exhaustive of the work of Global Ministries, so there are also distinct reports following this section.

A. Developing Principled Christian Leaders for the Church and the World

Goals: To deepen the strategic leadership capacity of clergy and laity so that they may have a positive impact on the priority needs of their churches and communities; and to enhance their ability to connect disciples to lives engaged in God’s mission.

Highlights:

1. Missionaries from Everywhere to Everywhere.

Global Ministries' missionaries serve in some 60 countries, including the United States. They are pastors, church planters, teachers, doctors, nurses, social workers, agronomists, and other professionals. One particular growth category is that of young adult personnel (Sec. I.B.1). In other categories, 23 new missionaries were commissioned and introduced at the 2012 General Conference in Tampa, Florida. Another 69 persons were commissioned for international assignment and for service in the U.S. through the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministries and as Church and Community Worker missionaries, the latter in communities of rural and urban economic need. Approximately 50 percent of the 170 international missionaries are originally from outside the U.S., as are some of those serving inside the U.S. In addition to these missionaries, the board contributes to the support of 314 Nationals in Mission, persons serving through a central conference or partner church in their own countries. At any given time, five missionaries or missionary couples serve as mission advocates in the church's five U.S. jurisdictions, plus three young adults in the central office.

2. Leadership Development Scholarships. An average of $1 million is invested each year in scholarship support for men and women around the world. A total of 783 awards were made this quadrennium, with $4,159,270 granted. Scholarships are distributed among the four focus areas, with the largest number in the congregational development category, a cause with the most designated gifts. There are new and continuing scholars each year. A significant proportion of the recipients are World Communion Scholars, funded by the annual World Communion Sunday Offering. This program assists both North American racial/ethnic minority persons and international students, principally from the Global South and Europe/Eurasia, to attain advanced degrees in a wide range of fields, such as education, law, health, and theology. In the scholarship years 2012 to 2015, there were 283 recipients from Africa, 146 from Asia/Pacific, 76 from Europe/Eurasia, 149 from Latin American/Caribbean, and 129 from North America.

Scholarships often open new vistas of opportunity for persons on the economic or social margins. For example, in 2015, Lodema Doroteo received a grant expected to allow her to become the first college graduate of the Dumagat people, a tribal group in the Philippines. She will return to her community as a teacher. In the meantime, leadership scholarships are training pastors and others in such far-flung mission initiatives as Cameroon in Africa and Thailand, Laos, and Cambodia in Asia.

3. Mission Roundtables. Mission roundtables represent a consultative process for drawing together a network of equal partners engaged in particular expressions of God's mission. They may focus on a specific geographic area or a topic or enterprise. They are particularly helpful in denominational or ecumenical contexts for determining the "lay of the land" and what measures may be needed to more effectively facilitate mission. Roundtables are useful in making plans for lay and clergy leadership development, and the process and decisions are always guided in large degree by indigenous input. Such gatherings are not new but are increasingly utilized at Global Ministries. They are typically held in a country or episcopal area that allows for local leadership to articulate priorities and for partners to discover how they can collaborate in meeting goals.

Dozens of roundtables took place during the current quadrennium, with a particular concentration in Africa with the units of the central conferences and in Latin America and the Caribbean, where Global Ministries has partnerships with many autonomous Methodist churches. In Africa, there were eight roundtables in 2013 through 2015. In the Americas, there were eight roundtables in 2013, nine in 2014, nine in 2015, and others projected for 2016. The Latin American events not only promoted more effective partnerships between the board and the autonomous churches but also more collaborative mission among the churches and partners in the region. Global Ministries encourages partners to explore local resources for any project in which they are involved.

The process employed in the Malawi and Côte d'Ivoire events in 2013 and 2015 respectively illustrate the lasting value of roundtables. The minutes indicate the participants and their affiliations, including indigenous persons, missionaries, agency personnel, ecumenical partners, and annual conference and institutional representatives—all equals at a roundtable. Then the records spell out agreed-upon goals, challenges, and responses considered, and next-step objectives, including specific commitments. In many cases, roundtables result in formal memoranda of understanding relating to specific mission objectives.

The roundtable in Malawi and another in Eurasia were concerned in part with movement from “mission initiative” status to fuller participation in the conference structure of the church. Consultations on Cambodia and Vietnam also moved churches in those countries toward next steps in their maturation, including healthy partnerships, self-sufficiency, and leadership development, within the United Methodist and world Methodist structures.

- 4. Mission Volunteers. An estimated 400,000 United Methodist adults and young people volunteered for short-term mission service (often a week or two) during the quadrennium. Most worked through teams organized by congregations, districts, or annual conferences. Church and parsonage construction, health ministries, and Christian education are among the most popular mission team activities. There are some 80 individual Mission Volunteers each year serving from two months to two years in many places around the world. Training for volunteer teams and individuals—both those “sending/going” and those “hosting”—is on the rise, assisted by the 2014 publication of “A Mission Journey: A Handbook for Volunteers.” Developed by Global Ministries and published and distributed by the Upper Room, the resource is being translated into Spanish, Korean, and French. A partnership with the General Board of Discipleship produced a study guide for the handbook in the Lay Servant Ministries curriculum series for 2016.

New in the quadrennium were international volunteer training events, held in Central America, Southern Africa, Europe, the Asia Pacific region, and South America (2016). A VIM partnership with UMCOR is strengthening the relations between annual conference UMVIMs and disaster coordinators. After many natural disasters in the U.S., volunteers form early response teams, and volunteers are also needed to help with long-term recovery and reconstruction. Training is provided at what was once named Disaster Academies, but is now called Mission Academies. And, locating the volunteer office within the missionary service unit strengthens the recruitment of missionaries from among volunteers.

- 5. Leadership for Racial/Ethnic and Multicultural Churches. Twenty-eight persons with leadership experience in ethnic/racial and multicultural churches were trained as coaches for ministry in such contexts. They received 60 hours of training, 10 hours of mentor coaching, and committed to 100 hours of coaching for certification by the International Coach Federation. As of mid-2015, they were coaching 52 lay and clergy leaders at no cost to their annual conferences, districts, or congregations.

The board provides scholarships to the annual School of Congregational Development (see Sec. II.B.5) for racial/ethnic participants: 90 in 2013, including 12 seminarians, with another 139 persons taking part in eight satellite links; 93 scholars in 2014, including 12 seminarians, with 190 taking part in five satellite links.

Five regional leadership-training events were held or scheduled in 2015, in Houston, Detroit, Little Rock, San Francisco, and Columbus, Ohio. These focus on development of skills to recognize and use community assets to build strong neighborhoods and congregations.

- 6. Global Praise. The program seeks to connect the worship life of the church in diverse contexts to understandings of God, self, and mission. It finds concrete expression in: 1) leadership training, including “One Body: Multicultural Journeys in Worship” workshops, with 10 offered in the quadrennium; 2) facilitating cross-contextual worship, particularly in events sponsored by general agencies and annual, jurisdictional, and central conferences; 3) mission education, especially by linking missionaries and congregations and providing the downloadable resource, “Worship Together: From Everywhere to Everywhere”; 4) consultation and resourcing, including a biblical cantata, “Manos Indocumentadas/Undocumented Hands,” and a Facebook group encouraging cross-contextual sharing of worship resources in times of disaster or special needs. Global Praise also facilitates worship for the Global Ministries’ staff and directors.

B. Starting New Congregations and Renewing Existing Ones

Goals: To plan, establish, and strengthen Christian congregations in areas where opportunities and needs are found, in cooperation with partner churches and conferences.

Highlights:

1. Mission Initiatives. A mission initiative is a conscious effort to plant and nurture a Wesleyan movement in a place of no or limited Methodist presence. It usually involves missionaries and relies on laity to start new faith communities, including house churches, Bible study groups, class meetings, and other small groups. Some of these starts grow into congregations. The vision is shaped by local people in consultation with Global Ministries and, after a time, an assigned episcopal leader. Local aspirations and assets leverage support from partnerships in relational, mutual ministries with strategic funding. The partnerships have agreed-upon terms and values. Indigenous leadership is essential, and systems and structures are required to assure sustained growth and movement. Methodism began as a movement and movement is essential in a successful mission initiative empowered by the Holy Spirit to be and become the church in every place. (For more on partnerships, see “In Mission Together,” Sec. II.B.2.)

The Mission Initiatives launched in the early 1990s are now becoming mature parts of the global church, some taking their places in the conference systems or seeking autonomy, as is a viable option.

In March 2015, a Mission Initiative Summit, the first of its kind, brought together people from all of the initiatives for prayer, worship, small group discussions, and personal interaction. This not only invited sharing/learning from the sites but also was a way to introduce new mission resources and practical concepts on how new mission starts achieve maturity and self-sustainability.

Global Ministries anticipates new initiatives in 2016; for now, here are snapshots from the work of the 12 initiatives that have become stronger across the quadrennium.

Initiative snapshots:

a. New Faith Communities. In the 2009-2012 quadrennium, the goal was to start 400 new faith communities through the initiatives; the actual harvest was 574. The goal for 2013-2016 is 600 with 202 started by mid-2014.

b. Entering the Conference System. By the end of the current quadrennium, three initiatives—Russia/

Eurasia, Latvia, and Lithuania—will have been fully integrated into the United Methodist conference system. These were the earliest and made possible by the dissolution of the Soviet Union, leading to the revival of Methodism in Russia and the Baltic States, where it had existed prior to 1917. As of mid-2015, Russia/Eurasia operates in five annual conferences and has a comprehensive plan for church development and self-sufficiency, as a successful movement does. It has 91 churches, 5 faith communities, with 113 pastors, four missionaries, and seven nationals in mission. Latvia and Lithuania are now districts of the Estonia Annual Conference; Latvia has 12 churches and 10 pastors; Lithuania, 10 churches, 2 other faith communities, 8 pastors, and 2 missionary pastors. United Methodist theological seminaries are located in Moscow and Tallinn, Estonia.

c. Outreach in Central Asia. This initiative covers all five of the Central Asia Republics, with church development most active in Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan, where God continues to call new leaders, some of whom receive training at an extension center of the seminary in Moscow. Active in both rural and urban areas, the mission’s goals include more evangelistic outreach to young adults and increased health services. Traveling from town to town, much like early Methodist circuit riders, leaders are holding meetings in individual homes and starting house churches. A local church in the region is often also a community center and a stimulus for economic development.

In the town of Ushtobe in southeastern Kazakhstan, a local ethnic Korean population and Kazakhstani work together in the local United Methodist church, which is blessed with a large building with social facilities. The church has a farm where chickens are raised, and organic eggs gathered for market. Profits from the raising of pigs go to the church. Vegetables are cultivated and used for meals after Sunday worship and also for the new community Meals on Wheels program. Space in the church is rented to a pharmacy and a hair stylist. In Central Asia, there are 11 congregations, 5 faith communities, and 11 pastors. The work in Central Asia began in 2003.

d. Momentum in Southeast Asia. Cambodia is the oldest of the four initiatives in this region, the others are in Laos, Thailand, and Vietnam. The Cam- bodia Initiative is a collaborative of five Methodist mission organizations and is developing into an autonomous Methodist church. It is increasingly covering its own operational and missional expenses and all of its superintendents are Cambodian. The first United Methodist missionaries, Cambodian refugees who had become United Methodists in the U.S., arrived in 1998. Leadership is almost entirely indigenous today. There are 154 faith communities and 140 pastors, with new churches projected for the capital city of Phnom Penh and outlying provinces. The mission is strong in Christian education, health and agricultural programs, and a microfinance program. The Thailand Initiative began in 2006 in a country that is 94 percent Buddhist and 1 percent Christian. Methodism has struggled to find its footing. An emphasis on children was added in 2009 with the formation of the Chiang Mai girls orphanage and medical care for children infected with HIV/AIDS in that city. There are six congregations.

The United Methodist Church is not an officially registered denomination in either Laos or Vietnam, but it has a growing presence in both. The work in Laos really began among Hmong people living in the U.S., who wished to take the Wesleyan Christianity to their homeland. United Methodists have found a welcome in some provinces because of their emphasis on social as well as spiritual welfare. The church has been successful in starting a home-based mushroom operation, offering microloans, setting up a vocational training school, and offering health and agricultural ministries. There are now 48 churches, 24 faith communities, and 62 pastors, including 3 women. A “church” in Laos is defined as a congregation with 15 or more members aged 15 years or older. The strength is in villages and rural areas, though plans include a mission center in Vientiane, the capital city.

The mission in Vietnam started in 2002 with the placement of a missionary couple who had been Vietnamese refugees in the U.S. Phenomenal expansion has ensued. Since 2007, the government has been more hospitable to churches because of the opening of international trade opportunities. Today there are 322 churches, 248 pastors, and more than 17,000 members, including many young adults. Sixty-two churches are self-sufficient and there are 10 church buildings. Twelve new Local Elders in Mission have been ordained, a category approved for missions by the 2012 General Conference. There is a United Methodist center with educational facilities in Ho Chi Minh City. The goal is for 1,000 churches by 2020, and plans are underway to train lay evangelists, expand ministries with orphans, and to organize more ministries with Agent Orange victims. A major objective is to achieve legal standing as a registered church.

e. “Center” Church Model in Mongolia. The initiative began in 2002 with a hospice ministry, which continues today, serving some 40 terminally ill persons at any given time and providing emotional, social, and spiritual support to patients’ families. Two, then more, churches developed. The first 2 congregations, each with more than 200 members, are the “center” churches out of which others develop; the model works well in Mongolia and is expected to continue into the future. Churches provide various forms of social services and outreach including day care, job training, and ministries with street people. They are also training centers for tomorrow’s pastors. Today there are 9 United Methodist churches, 2 faith communities, 9 pastors, and 4 missionaries in Mongolia.

f. Small Groups Flourish in Honduras. This initiative started with missionaries from the Caribbean in the late 1990s. Some of the first work centered on recovery from Hurricane Mitch. Most of the United Methodist presence is in small groups in rural areas. There are 46 small groups and 18 congregations for a total of 64 faith communities. Clergy training is a pivotal need. An ordination process is strengthened by collaboration with the Rio Texas Annual Conference. Volunteer-In-Mission teams from the nearby U.S. assist with construction, environmental, educational, health care, and economic development ministries. As the mission matures, the local churches are moving toward greater self-sufficiency in leadership and resources, locally determined priorities, and healthy partnerships with churches in the U.S. The initiative has four Global Ministries’ missionaries including one from the Methodist Church of Mexico.

g. On the West Coast of Africa. Initiatives in Cameroon, started in 2002, and Senegal, started in 1989, are both under the jurisdiction of the bishop in Côte d’Ivoire, and both share the challenge of being relatively unknown faith expressions in their countries. The United Methodist Church is not an officially registered denomination in Cameroon, but is in Senegal. Strides are being made to increase social ministries and to develop both lay and clergy leadership and plant new faith communities and covenant discipleship groups. Cameroon has 20 churches, 5 faith communities, 9 ordained pastors, 7 probationary pastors, and 9 lay preachers. Senegal has 7 churches and 6 faith communities (and anticipated more in 2015) with 8 ordained pastors and 32 lay pastors.

2. In Mission Together. This concept promotes, interprets, and facilitates mission partnerships. Mission partnerships are about relationships. They are not casual or even formal funding arrangements; they are spiritual, missional, God-centered covenants in which the partners pledge to use their God-given assets to maximize efforts in God's mission. Partners are congregations, districts, or annual conferences in different locations and cultures. The partnerships help make real the global nature of the church and the work of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The empowerment of leadership is one of the primary objectives, and that means mission leaders for both partners, say, one in Minnesota and one in Mongolia. The concept of 50/50, or equal sharing, strengthens mission partnerships. This framework prevents dependency and fosters self-sufficiency; addresses systemic issues; empowers local leaders; and puts partners on track for long-term, productive impact. See the five core values in the adjoining box.

Five Core Values of 50/50 Partnerships

- Church planting
 - Spiritual formation
 - Community development
 - Communication through social networking
 - Promoting self-sufficiency to prevent dependency

3. Request for new Asia Provisional Central Conference. The board of directors in April 2015 asked that the General Conference create a new "provisional central conference" (permitted by ¶¶ 540, 560, BOD) to pave the way for mission initiatives, particularly in Southeast Asia, to potentially enter the conference system. A central conference must exist in order to set up new "provisional annual conferences," in such places as, likely examples, Laos, Mongolia, and Vietnam. The request illustrates the maturing of mission in those areas over the last 10 to 20 years. Provisional annual conferences require benchmarks in organization and in the number of ordained clergy (¶¶ 580 ff.). The request for a provisional central conference projects confidence in the continued growth of the church in Asia.

4. Mission Celebrations. Global Ministries helped to plan and facilitate more than 30 local and district mission celebrations from 2013 through 2015, with 20 more projected for 2016. These events, tailored to contexts, linked United Methodists in their home churches and districts to God's worldwide mission. They incorporate Bible study, music and worship, the concept of mission partnership, and practical applications of mission engagement; they often include visits and presentations by missionaries.

5. School of Congregational Development (SCD). For many years, Global Ministries and Discipleship Ministries have collaborated in a School of Congregational Development, usually hosted by an annual conference in the U.S. Path 1 is today also a sponsor. Enrollment typically surpasses 450, with an increasing number of racial/ethnic leaders attending and presenting their work. While leadership development is a major component, the goal is to equip clergy and laity to lead dynamic, life-changing congregations. The school includes worship, addresses, and workshops that illustrate qualities needed for effective leaders of Spirit-filled congregations. During the current quadrennium, live Internet broadcasts provided by Global Ministries increased participation by another one-third or more. The agency also provides a limited number of scholarships. The 2013 SCD took place in Denver, Colorado; 2014 in Charlotte, North Carolina; 2015 in Indianapolis, Indiana; with 2016 scheduled for Chicago, Illinois.

6. Racial/Ethnic Local Church Grants. These grants are from funds set aside to strengthen U.S. local racial/ethnic congregations in their witness and mission. The allocations can be used in relation to any of the four focus areas, depending on the application, and for the development of multi-ethnic and multicultural congregations. In the first two years of the current quadrennium, such grants totaled more than $825,000. Consideration is given in making awards to ethnic balance and geographical location.

7. Congregational Development through Ethnic Plans. The four ethnic plans administered by Global Ministries put strong emphasis on starting new congregations and strengthening existing ones. Each of these plans, special mandates of the General Conference, makes its own report each quadrennium. The locations of those reports are indicated under “Additional Assignments” (Sec. IV).

C. Engaging in Ministry with the Poor

Goals: To inspire and resource church leaders to deepen their personal spiritual journey through building relationships with the poor; to cross boundaries and build authentic, mutual sustained relationships with people living in poverty; to understand and respond to systems that perpetuate poverty around the world; and to develop appropriate ministries with (not “to” or “for”) poor and marginalized communities.

Highlights:

1. Relationships. Ministry with the Poor is about building and sustaining mutual relationships and partnerships among persons, congregations, and communities unaccustomed to working together as equals. It takes patience, good will, creativity, and loving attitudes on the part of everyone involved; it involves openness to tried and true “best practices,” yet a willingness to try new things, to be willing to change “the way we have always done it.” Crossing boundaries of race, ethnicity, and culture is an integral part of this work. Other essentials include a willingness to listen and learn about the causes and conditions of poverty, a willingness to examine inherited attitudes and practices, often unconscious, about wealth and poverty, a willingness to see the assets each has to offer, and a willingness for mutuality with regard to power and decision-making. Such conditions are necessary to bring about sustainable, transformational change. (See “Characteristics of Ministry with the Poor” in accompanying box.)

2. Ministry with the Poor Roundtables/Trainings.

Strides were made in the quadrennium to expand, strengthen, and promote this work. This included efforts to identify and connect local models of successful ministries that cross boundaries and address the causes and conditions of poverty. Two roundtables in 2013, in Chicago and Dallas, advanced a process of identifying best practices and building a network of experienced practitioners. These events were springboards to a series of training events in 2014 and 2015, co-sponsored or otherwise resourced by Global Ministries, utilizing the expertise of practitioners in such areas as community economic development, financial literacy and management, employment, and multicultural worship and relationships. (See “Experiential Trainings,” No. 4.) One of the primary partners in these trainings was the Church of All People in Columbus, Ohio, which in May 2014 hosted a “Crossing Boundaries” event requested by practitioners at the Chicago roundtable to hone their skills. Later in the year, Global Ministries hosted a workshop on “Networking, Collaborating, and Community Building Across Race, Class, and Cultures: Strategies and Techniques for Cultivating God’s Kingdom,” also at the Church for All People. The Ohio congregation, linked to a community development corporation, is a diverse congregation involved in a wide range of community ministries. Other training venues included the 2014 United Methodist Women’s Assembly, the South Carolina Summit on the Black Church, the Schools of Congregational Development, the 2015 Pacific Northwest Annual Conference training on “Engaging the Mission Field” (presented in partnership with the Church of All People), and the 2015 Southeast Jurisdiction Training event.

Characteristics of Ministry with the Poor

- Relationship building—authentic, open, caring relationships among people of different economic, cultural, and class situations.
 - Power equity—inclusive decision-making that honors the experience and knowledge of all participants brought from many backgrounds.
 - Asset-based approach—values and uses the assets, gifts, talents, grace, and hopes of all rather than “needs assessment” of what is lacking in the community; empowers residents and the community as a whole.
 - Inclusive worship—crosses boundaries and embraces diversity of worshipers and forms of participation; honors and incorporates the liturgical arts, music, and languages of the many in the collective experience.
 - Vulnerability—includes humility on the part of leaders; openness and courage; willingness to listen, learn, and build trust and deeper relationships.
 - Sustainable impact—provides long-term commitments of partnerships and recognition of the role of local participants, focused on bringing about changes in systems and structures, not just short-term interventions and relief; objectives include long-term impact on and access to quality housing, health care, food security, and employment opportunities.

3. Focus Area Partners. The focus area was co-led in the 2013-2016 quadrennium by Global Ministries and Church and Society in collaboration with the Justice and Reconciliation Table of the Council of Bishops and the Vital Congregations—Four Areas of Focus Workgroup of the Connectional Table. Ministry with the Poor permeates all aspects of Global Ministries' theology and work, including missionary service, volunteer journeys, mission education, scholarships, disaster response, and global health. It defines several distinct Global Ministries programs.

4. Experiential Trainings. Five regional Ministry with the Poor experiential trainings were hosted by congregations with outstanding records in community development. These were designed to illustrate creative ministry with diverse populations. Their locations were: St. John's Church, Houston, a downtown congregation where one-third of 9,000 members were formerly homeless; Theresa Hoover Church/Better Community Development, Inc., Little Rock, Arkansas, a reborn congregation that has virtually rebuilt and revitalized its community through its development corporation; Glide Memorial Church, San Francisco, a downtown church that found new life after middle-class flight through social, health, and communities ministries; Cass United Methodist Church and Cass Community Services, on the north edge of downtown Detroit; and the Church for All People, Columbus, Ohio (see above). Each of these training churches exemplifies the concept and techniques of asset-based community development as integral to ministries with the poor.

5. "Mission from the Margins." The theology of ministry with rather than "for" or "to" the poor resonates with the 2013 World Council of Churches statement "Together Towards Life: Mission and Evangelism in Changing Landscapes." This broadly ecumenical document acutely and accurately observes the important role in mission today of those once considered the targets of mission at the geographical and economic margins. A shift is especially notable as the gravity of the Christian population shifts from Europe and North America to the Global South and East. "Mission from the margins" implies both greater leadership from and respect for those persons once considered only recipients of the gospel. Like the concept of asset-based development, mission from the margins encourages the church to value the gifts and insights of those persons once marginalized. This means that the church at large is called to new ways of listening, learning, giving, and receiving. "Together Towards Life" has become a valuable mission education tool for personnel, volunteers, staff, and church members at large.

6. Migrants. Global migration is one of the most pressing issues before the world community today. People relocate or become displaced for many reasons: war, natural disaster, persecution, and economic need. As a denomination that itself crosses many geographical boundaries, The United Methodist Church, as a General Conference resolution states, "experiences the dilemmas of nations that both 'send' and 'receive' migrants. Citizens and undocumented immigrants are within the church's membership, as are employers and migrant workers, police and detainees, and affluent and poor families. The United Methodist family is a microcosm of migrant issues" (No. 6028, p. 737, the 2012 Book of Resolutions). Congregations in Europe are being impacted by the arrival of Methodist and other migrants from Africa. To deepen its commitment to migrant ministries, the Germany Central Conference has for some years offered annual seminars for European churches who serve international congregations. In December 2014, Global Ministries was part of a larger United Methodist Global Migration Gathering in Freudenstadt, Germany, in which seven central conferences took part. The objective was to highlight a new framework of migrant ministry in four segments: 1) The right of people to stay in their country of origin, 2) the right of safe passage while in transit, 3) the right to welcome and belonging in a receiving community, and 4) support for those deported. Models of such ministries were presented and "best practices" considered. This framework is reflected in a revised resolution on "Global Migration and the Quest for Justice" submitted to the General Conference by Global Ministries' directors (resolutions section of ADCA).

Global Ministries supports the ministries with migrants developed by partners in areas where need is most critical. By mid-2015, Global Ministries was working with the United Methodist and Methodist Church of Mexico annual conferences along the U.S.-Mexico border, across Mexico, and with partners in Central America to develop a strategy to address the needs of migrants and their communities in those areas. Global Ministries began to assist partners in Europe, notably Italy, receiving boatloads of migrants from across the Mediterranean.

National Justice for Our Neighbors (NJFON) is a ministry in the U.S. that advocates for immigration laws that are just, humane, and righteous, and provides clinics and legal counsel for families or individuals trying to traverse the complexities of U.S. immigrant law. It was organized by UMCOR in 1999 and is today a nonprofit corporation with its own board of directors. NJFON is today a network of 13 sites that support approximately 35 clinics to serve more than 3,500 clients annually. Most of the clinics are sponsored and housed by United Methodist congregations.

- 7. Microfinance Connection. Responding to the 2012 General Conference concern about global poverty (No. 4092, the Book of Resolutions), the Large Church Mission Connection partnered with Global Ministries to establish the United Methodist Microfinance Connection, with pilot projects in Malawian and Mexican communities where the church is already engaged. (The Large Church Mission Connection is a network of local church staff serving as mission directors in United Methodist congregations with average Sunday worship attendance that exceeds 1,000 persons.) The objectives are to reduce poverty by giving people the opportunity to start and grow small enterprises, and to develop a holistic practice and presence of the church. The work is in collaboration with FINCA, a highly reputable international financial intermediary. The pilot in Malawi is facilitated by a missionary experienced in microcredit; in Mexico a local National In Mission fills that role, organizing community meetings, providing financial literacy and business training, and equipping persons with the skills needed to successfully manage a budget and a very small enterprise. These professionals organize solidarity groups and connect these groups to a local FINCA loan officer, who explains the financial services offered. As of mid-2015, some 1,500 individuals had received training, of which 582 had gotten small business loans.

Through an online platform (www.umcmicrofinance.org), donors may connect with these budding entrepreneurs and support their efforts to lift themselves, their families, and their communities out of poverty. The website includes entrepreneurs' stories, photos, and the opportunity to sponsor small loans. The funds from donations made on the website go toward loan capital that will help not just one individual but will cycle perpetually through FINCA's system, becoming available to other entrepreneurs within the same country after a loan is paid back. Having completed the pilot phase of this partnership, the United Methodist Microfinance Connection and FINCA are ready to scale up the program, expanding the operation to additional countries.

- 8. Community Developers Program. Launched as a community-organizing ministry in 1968, this program has undergone creative change over the years, while retaining its commitment to confronting racism and oppression. It is a ministry of church-based community development and local organizing sponsored by largely racial/ethnic congregations. More than 100 churches and communities have benefited from the service of a "developer" whose presence within the lives of the churches is made possible by a "seed-money" and modest-support system provided by funds from the Human Relations Day Special Offering. In 2015, there were 30 community developer sites, with six added in that year—in Berkeley/Oakland, California; Buffalo, New York; Chicago, Illinois; Lexington, Kentucky; and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Four more new sites were under consideration in mid-2015. Global Ministries today provides a seed grant of $6,000 to a new site, then $10,000 for each of the next three years, and $8,000 the 4th and $6,000 the 5th years. The local program must be a 501(c)(3) nonprofit corporation able to pay a director $20,000 per year. Global Ministries funds are payable to the annual conferences, which are then released to the developer sites.
- 9. Post-disaster Economic and Community Development. See relevant information under "Disaster Relief and Community Development," in Sec. III.

D. Improving Health Globally

Goals: To scale up existing programs on community health education; to improve the quality of health care services through church-supported hospitals and clinics; to increase the scope of such programs; and to increase mission service opportunities in health.

Highlights:

- 1. Separate Unit Established. After being folded into UMCOR for several years, global health again became a separate unit in 2014, partly in response to enthusiasm within the church for the Imagine No Malaria Campaign (see below) and the assignment of the health focus area to Global Ministries by the Council of Bishops. The malaria effort led to a palpable United Methodist desire to “do more” in the realm of health—understood theologically as comprising spiritual, emotional, and physical wholeness and well-being: abundant life, to use Jesus’ term in John 10 (NRSV). The new unit is composed of existing health-related ministries and new initiatives. Its staff leader is an executive director who sits on the board cabinet. Strong emphasis in health ministries is put on convergence with other faith-based and philanthropic organizations seeking abundant life for all persons. Convergence means: 1) collaboration, 2) the awareness that poverty and health are intertwined, 3) improving neonatal and infant care, and 4) commitment to preventing sickness and death from communicable diseases.

2. Imagine No Malaria (INM). Imagine No Malaria is part of a coordinated international effort to wipe out a disease that can be prevented but still kills someone every 60 seconds, especially in Africa. It is a major fundraising campaign, with a goal of $75 million, built on foundations laid earlier in the 2000s by the Nothing But Nets public appeal. The dollars provide mosquito nets and other services in affected areas. To maximize the effort, some 51 percent of the funds raised go to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. The remainder is expended by Global Ministries in collaboration with its health facilities and annual conferences in Africa, facilitated initially through UMCOR and, more recently, the new Global Health unit of the board. Some 194 health facilities and 12 annual conferences or episcopal area-defined health boards (see below) are involved in the hands-on work of INM. More than one million mosquito bed nets were obtained and distributed, and 252,851 persons successfully diagnosed and treated with drugs provided by INM. More than 2,000 health workers have been trained and 22 health facilities renovated. The combined efforts of many groups led to a 47 percent reduction in the malaria mortality rate from the year 2000 to 2014, according to the World Health Organization. United Methodist Communications carried out the fundraising for INM. The United Methodist Church is the largest faith-based contributor to the Global Fund.

INM received a Superhero Award from the Rotarians Action Group on Malaria at the 2015 annual meeting of the Alliance for Malaria Prevention, a coalition of government, nonprofit, humanitarian, and faith-based organizations working for malaria control. INM, the only faith-based awardee, was honored for grassroots efforts to extend its prevention methods into rural and hard-to-reach areas. The celebration and formal culmination of Imagine No Malaria will take place at the 2016 General Conference.

3. Africa Health Boards. The network of annual conference or episcopal area United Methodist health boards in Africa continues as Imagine No Malaria moves toward formal conclusion; they continue their efforts to train and organize for community-based primary health care (see below) and to respond to emergencies; such was the case in 2014 with the Ebola outbreak in West Africa. Health boards in Liberia and Sierra Leone were instrumental in church response to the crisis there. (For the Ebola response, see under UMCOR, Sec. III.B.3). The health boards represent important steps toward the annual conferences of the central conference in Africa assuming the oversight and ownership of expanding health ministries. Africa has almost 200 United Methodist health facilities and a growing number of community-based primary health care programs. During this quadrennium, representatives of the board met periodically in a Pan-African Health Forum to share information and coordinate ministries.

4. Global AIDS Fund. This fund and its inter-agency committee were established by the 2004 General Conference as a United Methodist response to the AIDS pandemic. It was readopted with changes in 2012, moving to an emphasis on prevention of mother to child transmission of the HIV virus, with the slogan, “Just Save One.” From 2004 to 2012, grants went primarily to grassroots projects related to United Methodist congregations or organizations, partner ecumenical groups, and other recommended organizations. The range of recipients was wide and the allocations often small. Since the 2012 policy shift went into effect in 2014, priority has been given to clinics and community health programs and application is by invitation. In 2012/2013, the fund made 47 grants in 20 countries, directly benefiting 84,064 persons; in 2014/2015, 15 mother-to-child grants were made in 9 countries, with figures on beneficiaries not yet available. A total of some $560,000 was allocated, with most funds donated through The Advance.

5. Community-based Primary Health Care. Global Ministries works with 15 partners in 12 countries, including the U.S., to promote and facilitate community-based prevention of diseases such as HIV/AIDS and malaria and to achieve safe birth, safe motherhood, and good nutrition. The value of community-based care and training was clearly evident in the Imagine No Malaria campaign. Current programs include prevention of mother-to-child transmission of HIV and the training of health workers in India, Liberia, and the Democratic Republic of Congo. The community-based primary health care program is being redefined so that the focus is on maternal and child health. This recognizes that mothers and children are priority groups for health interventions. The first expression of this is the Abundant Life: Our Promise to Children project.

- 6. Abundant Life: Our Promise to Children. This is a campaign in formation. In 2013, 6 million children died from preventable causes, or one every five seconds. This staggering fact provides incentive to a new United Methodist signature health effort. The church has a sacred calling to ensure abundant health for all children. “I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly,” Jesus says in John 10:10 (NRSV). Every child is a life filled with promise and potential. In this campaign, the United Methodist people will seek to reach 1 million children with lifesaving interventions by 2020. Goals and means include education on safe births for mothers and babies, addressing nutritional challenges and promoting breastfeeding, advancing prevention and treatment of killer diseases, and promoting child access to treatment. This campaign is a United Methodist contribution to an extensive global effort to improve health for all by 2035 and is expected to kick off at the 2016 General Conference.
- 7. Congregation-based Health Ministries. “Healthy Congregations, Healthy Communities” is a new initiative for churches, primarily in the U.S., but potentially also in Europe, which will be introduced in September 2015 at the U.S. Health Forum in Houston, Texas. The goal is to equip and empower churches, districts, and conferences to nurture spirit, mind, and body in holistic ways. The forum will be organized around opportunities for health ministries in a range of contexts, including medical institutions, schools and seminaries, and local churches. Planned in collaboration with Pension and Health Benefits, Church and Society, and Wesley Theological Seminary, Washington, D.C., the event will be sponsored and hosted locally by the Methodist Med- ical Center and St. Paul’s United Methodist Church. The effort complements the pension board’s work in the area of clergy wellness. The goal is to have churches provide opportunities for physical activities, promote healthy diet and nutrition, encourage prevention and recovery from addictive substances, and promote the mental well-being of members of their congregations and communities.
- 8. Special Program on Substance Abuse and Related Violence (SPSARV). Once a General Conference special mandate program, SPSARV is now a regular part of the mission program and budget. The objectives are to equip congregations to respond effectively and compassionately to those affected by substance abuse; promote the recovery of families and loved ones trapped in addiction; and promote prevention ministries for comprehensive education of children and youth. International in scope, in this quadrennium SPSARV worked with and provided support for partners in the Czech Republic, Germany, Latvia, Lithuania, the Philippines, and Russia. There is ongoing support for the SPSARV Africa Task Force, which offers assistance in setting up local self-help and peer counseling groups. An online survey in 2015 helped SPSARV better understand the challenges and opportunities congregations face in providing recovery ministries.
- 9. Deaf/Hard of Hearing Ministries. In 1992, the General Conference recognized the need for a ministry among those who are deaf, deafened, or deaf-blind; and since that time Global Ministries has provided coordination and administration for several committees, task forces, and international programs. Support for grants and resources comes through The Advance and other funds. One goal is to expand the network of churches and conferences providing sign language interpreters, assistive listening systems, and captioning. One example of this outreach is a 2014 grant of $10,000 to fund an internship for Paul Aseka, a deaf native of Kenya, at Lover’s Lane United Methodist Church, Dallas, Texas, which has a highly developed deaf ministry. “I have learned how to have conversations in English,” Paul reports. “This has helped me to identify emotions and values of people in the church.” The board assisted with the Third International Methodist Missions Conference of the Deaf in Nairobi, Kenya, August 2013.
- 10. Disabilities Ministries. Long a part of mission commitment, such ministries received new visibility through an action of the 2012 General Conference urging annual conferences to practice more disability awareness in their own sessions. Global Ministries makes small grants to assist local churches to become more accessible to those with mobility challenges. It provides resources such as an “Accessibility Awareness Walk Around” tool to help churches discover specific needs. There is now a database of resource persons for churches and a Facebook page.

III. DISASTER RELIEF AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

A. Nature of the Work

The United Methodist Church has a long history of understanding disaster response and the subsequent rebuilding of lives and communities in its understanding of God’s mission. For more than 75 years, UMCOR (and its predecessor, Methodist Committee on Overseas Relief) has represented hope and a new start in the wake of natural forces—wind, flood, earthquake, and fire—and war and armed aggression, as well as epidemics and climate change.

UMCOR has a big workload, but it is not a big organization in terms of employees and administration. In the U.S., the first responders to, for example, hurricanes and floods are neighbors. UMCOR concentrates on training and equipping annual conference leaders and local church members to provide immediate support to survivors of disasters. In all cases, the consistency of UMCOR’s national training enables the United Methodist connection to provide a holistic and long-term response. Every annual conference has an UMCOR-related disaster coordinator. The slogan “Be Hope. Be UMCOR.” is recognition that it is the people of the church who form the agency of hope. United Methodists in other places, notably through the central conferences, are also agents of hope on local levels, as was demonstrated in 2014 in response to the Ebola outbreak in Liberia and Sierra Leone. United Methodists equipped by health boards (see Sec. II.D.3) did heroic work in providing education on how to avoid and respond to the disease.

UMCOR has an unsurpassed reputation in post-disaster efforts to strengthen local communities as they seek to restore and revitalize their members’ assets and capacities, accompanying them to safer, healthier, more inclusive and productive futures. Disasters are hardest on the poor and it often takes long-term work to rebuild their lives and communities. The church is particularly sensitive to this reality. UMCOR typically works with and through partners, occasionally opening its own office. Nine field/country offices were in operation during or for part of the current quadrennium (see Sec. III.F).

UMCOR also works to end hunger and poverty around the world through awareness, advocacy, and action. It promotes strategies leading to self-reliance, working with communities to put love into action (see Sec. III.G).

In 2014, UMCOR Health was transferred to a new Global Ministries’ unit on Global Health (see Sec. II.D.1, above), but UMCOR remains the channel for donor response to health disasters, such as the Ebola situation. Every dollar given to UMCOR’s work through The Advance goes to its intended recipient. UMCOR’s administrative costs are covered by contributions to One Great Hour of Sharing Special Sunday Offering and undesignated gifts. Global Ministries is asking the 2016 General Conference to rename that occasion UMCOR Sunday and Offering.

In recent years, a new emphasis has been placed on disaster risk reduction, that is, equipping people and communities to prepare for the likelihood of disasters, especially in areas subject to storms, floods, or wildfires. Disaster risk reduction programs maximize the effectiveness of organizations to respond to emergencies worldwide. The World Bank estimates that each dollar invested in risk management yields between 2 to 11 dollars in benefits, so even a small investment in building communities’ abilities to prepare for and mitigate common disasters results in significant impact. And risk reduction saves lives. Reference to risk reduction appears in several places in this report.

B. International Disaster Response

In 2014, UMCOR made 107 international grants totaling $8.5 million for projects with 50 partners in 35 countries. This was triple the volume of 2013 and indicated a strategy of intentional response to smaller, less well-known disasters, often in areas with newer, less-experienced partners. One example of a lesser-known disaster is a 2013 unprecedented snowstorm in Chile that wiped out a herd of alpaca on which a village depended for sustenance. UMCOR moved quickly to help a regional relief organization provide emergency food. Another example is the provision of food vouchers in 2015 for persons internally displaced by civil conflict in Yemen.

Because of its work with smaller, newer partners, UMCOR has launched a series of regional partner training events, the first held in Chile for partners in South America, followed by an event in the Philippines for Asia, with Africa, the Middle East, and the Caribbean/Central America in late 2015 and 2016. The week-long trainings cover international standards of disaster response, best practices of humanitarian assistance, and the basics of risk reduction. They also address the selection of program participants, the protection of vulnerable groups, and financial and communications practices. The goal of the effort is to raise the understanding of how partners can best work with UMCOR—after and well before a disaster.

Major disasters to which UMCOR responded during the quadrennium included:

- 1. Syria-Iraq Crisis. In Syria, conflict began peacefully in March 2011 with local pro-democracy protests. Over the course of the next four years, this burgeoned into nationwide civil war and then became a theater of international conflict involving the Islamic State, the United States, and regional powers. As of June 2015, more than 220,000 people had been killed, about a million injured, and more than half the Syrian population had been displaced from their homes, according to the United Nations. In Iraq, the U.N. estimates that more than 3 million persons are internally displaced and more than 8 million are in urgent need of humanitarian assistance. UMCOR has worked with five organizations in response to internally displaced persons in those countries and those fleeing into Turkey and Lebanon.
- 2. Typhoon Yolanda. On November 13, 2013, the typhoon known locally as Yolanda, devastated large parts of Southeast Asia, notably the Philippines. It is the deadliest typhoon on record to hit that country, killing some 6,300 people. UMCOR and The United Methodist Church in the Philippines were quick to respond. A total of more than $6 million was committed to emergency and long-range needs and to future risk reduction in a country increasingly subject to massive storms. Major sums are going to evacuation shelters and to rebuild housing.

- 3. Ebola. Beginning in May 2014, UMCOR responded to the Ebola crisis in West Africa through grants to United Methodist Health Boards and other partners in Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Côte d'Ivoire. The church's role was especially important in education on how to prevent the spread of the disease and in helping families know how to seek health care for relatives and avoid contagion.
- 4. Nepal Earthquake. On April 25, 2015, an earthquake measuring between 7.8 and 8.1 in magnitude shook Nepal, killing some 9,000 people, injuring 23,000, and destroying many, many homes and public buildings. UMCOR's response was continuing as this report was in process; working with partners, the expected grant commitment will exceed $1 million.
- 5. Japan Update. Since the triple disaster of tsunami, earthquake, and nuclear accident of March 11, 2011, UMCOR has issued 47 grants totaling $10.4 million. The balance of funds designed for this disaster, exceeding $800,000, was set to be distributed by the end of 2016.

C. United States Disaster Response

Forty-one grants were made in 2013 ($6.8 million), 73 in 2014 ($7.7 million), and 41 through June 2015 ($3.3 million) offering relief to thousands of people. During the quadrennium, disaster response grants and training occurred in every annual conference across the United States. Training events encompassed more than 10,190 participants, and more than 22,000 ERT (early response team) persons credentialed. Major highlights illustrating four different types of responses are:

- 1. Rural—Rocky Mountain Conference, Colorado. Widespread flooding in Sept. 2013 left three people dead and damage across the state limited access to some towns for more than a year. UMCOR's assistance led to the formation of a recovery team that partnered with six long-term recovery organizations and created a bilingual case management team to meet survivor needs. The large geographic expanse of the flooding required a multiple-site response.
- 2. Urban—Detroit Conference, Michigan. The largest U.S. disaster of 2014 occurred in August with 130,000 families affected within the city of Detroit. The ongoing financial struggles of the city led to long-term difficulties for the survivors. The first organization to start a recovery response was UMCOR, working with the annual conference in the Northwest quadrant of the city. This led to partnerships with All Hands Volunteers, Mennonite Disaster Services, Illinois state representatives, The Salvation Army, and the Southern Baptists. This urban setting continues to present challenges.

3. Immigration Crisis at the Border. The influx of 60,000 unaccompanied minors along the southwest border of the U.S. led to an unprecedented opportunity for UMCOR to work with innovative ministries with the California-Pacific conference (welcoming congregations and training and leadership camps for the minors), Rio, Texas (an immigration specialist to draw together partners and educate churches), and a new Justice for Our Neighbors office in Austin, Texas.

4. Civil Disobedience and Disturbances in Response to Violence Involving Police. In Ferguson, Missouri, in 2014, UMCOR partnered with Lutherans to hold Camp NOAH sessions, giving children a place to reflect on issues and protests resulting from the killing of an unarmed black youth. UMCOR provided resources to the Baltimore-Washington Conference in 2015 to meet immediate food-security needs of children within the area affected by civil disturbances; this led to town forums within the local United Methodist churches and dialogue continues. Material supplies and ERT teams were also utilized in both areas.

D. Continuing Work in Haiti

Following the January 2010 earthquake in Haiti, UMCOR worked in partnership with the Methodist Church in Haiti in providing emergency relief to thousands of people; in 2011, the focus shifted toward long-term recovery. UMCOR continues to help rebuild communities there with emphasis on livelihood support; agriculture; water, sanitation, and hygiene; education; and shelter.

Some of the projects current at the end of 2014 included: 1) Partnership for Learning, a partnership with CARE to provide school and hygiene kits and textbooks to primary-level students, directly benefiting 50,000 children; 2) the “WINNER” project, improving incomes and food security for 400 farming families in the Cul-de-Sac Plains by reducing post-harvest losses and increasing ability to sell produce at good prices; 3) the “PISANS” (“Power” in Creole) Program, a partnership with USAID to improve community services in Haut Damier, assisting 10,000 people, and 4) “SEED” (Strengthening Entrepreneurship and Economy through Women’s Business Development”), which assists 600 women to develop small businesses. Underway is “Neighborhood Renewal—Footbridges and Safe Public Space,” which emerged from extensive community involvement in Bristout and Bobin. Safe footbridges, public spaces, and ravine protection will increase access to work and social services for 23,750 people in 4,750 households.

E. Relief Supplies

UMCOR distributed large quantities of relief supplies from 2012 through the first quarter of 2015 to recipients in some 20 countries and 22 U.S. states. The supplies include several kinds of kits: health, school, layette, sewing, clean birthing, and bedding. More than 825,000 health kits were shipped in that time period. Other items are cleaning buckets and food boxes for senior citizens. The total value of the supplies was just shy of $20 million, and engaged 11,893 volunteers who gave 271,000 hours of work.

F. Field/Country Offices

UMCOR’s field/country offices provide ongoing programs in a long list of areas: community-based health and hygiene, communicable disease control, water and sanitation, nutrition and food security, livelihood development, school construction, anti-human trafficking, and emergency response. Food programs were scaled up in Zimbabwe, control of HIV/AIDS work increased in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), and new efforts exerted in South Sudan for quality education for girls. Services for external refugees and internally displaced persons were important in Afghanistan, Armenia, DRC, Georgia, Haiti, Sri Lanka, Sudan, and South Sudan in response to natural and human-caused emergencies. In the Darfur area of Sudan, UMCOR provided integrated community-based programs for displaced populations. In Georgia, UMCOR is building confidence between divided communities while improving access to quality health care services. In this period, three field/country offices—Afghanistan, Georgia, and Sri Lanka—completed their missions, with two national nongovernmental organizations resulting from the UMCOR legacy in Georgia and Sri Lanka, thus continuing to build civil societies in those countries.

UMCOR’s 20+ years of participation in Operation Provide Hope in Armenia, Georgia, and earlier, Azerbaijan, ended as that program of the U.S. Department of State ran its course in areas once part of the Soviet Union. Over the last 10 years, UMCOR delivered into Armenia and Georgia more than $43 million in medicines, medical supplies, and equipment, and more than $22 million in non-medical commodities. As important were the opportunities for rebuilding their own lives that the program brought to persons, families, and communities.

In Armenia, UMCOR established the UMCOR-Armenia Foundation, a locally managed entity to continue and further enhance the ministries started by the field/country office. UMCOR was the sole shareholder of the highly successful, more than 15-year-old Aregak micro-credit program. After UMCOR transfers the share to the new foundation, which requires board approval, the annual dividend income from shares will enable the location foundation to carry out existing and new programs into the foreseeable future.

G. Community Development

Community development goes hand in hand with disaster relief and is involved in virtually all of the UMCOR work mentioned above. Successful community development may provide some outside resources, but it rests on the creative involvement of the people of a place; it will eventually stand or fall on the basis of the aspirations and assets of the community, and the capacity of that community to attract partners in the effort. UMCOR is always a partner in community development; the community is the primary actor. Two important components of such development are sustainable agriculture and water, sanitation, and hygiene.

1. SAFS (Sustainable Agriculture and Food Security) partners with international, regional, and community organizations to move toward a food-secure world. Food security exists when all people have reliable access to sufficient, safe, nutritious, and culturally appropriate food to maintain healthy and active lives. SAFS recognized that food insecurity and malnutrition compromise the ability to recover from illness, endure healthy pregnancies, and maintain high levels of work or learning potential. Poor agricultural practices and insecure land tenure leads to deforestation, which intensifies the effects of natural disasters and pollution, causes disease by reliance on chemical inputs, and often causes violence.

UMCOR, in partnership with others, works with subsistence farmers to increase production and diversify their crops, increasing their own food security and making healthy food available in markets. It offers training and access to credit to support sustainable livelihood, increases access of the severely malnourished to lifesaving products (such as soy and moringa), and works with community groups to form savings and loan associations that enable the start of small enterprise. It also provides training and stock to families that wish to engage in animal husbandry and partners with various fair trade organizations.

From 2012 to 2014, UMCOR's SAFS unit managed a grant portfolio totaling $5,558,568, consisting of 27 active partnerships in 19 countries.

2. WASH (Water, Sanitation, and Hygiene) is a technical office within the International Development unit that addresses critical water-related issues. Some 783 million people around the world do not have access to water, especially not clean water. Every 47 seconds a child under five years of age dies of a water-related disease, including diarrhea, according to UNICEF. And 2.5 billion people lack basic sanitation. WASH was significantly expanded in 2014. Its capacity to make grants was enlarged, from a low of $40,546 in 2010 to $302,761 in 2014 for the ensuing year. Water, sanitation, and hygiene will play important roles in the emerging mission emphasis on Abundant Life: Our Promise to Children (see Sec.II.D.6).

Entering its next 75 years, UMCOR has high confidence it will continue its long-standing mission of alleviating human suffering without regard to race or creed and will continue as a hallmark of Global Ministries. UMCOR will, of course, adapt to the changing needs of the world as it works in humanitarian assistance and development consistent with the ever-improving practices in these fields. UMCOR will continue to hold the sacred trust between generous churches and donors and those worldwide who have a right to receive assistance with dignity. As Global Ministries expands its reach in the world through a regionalized strategy, UMCOR will continue to build the capacity of the church and local organizations as together they respond to global needs, demonstrating the love of Christ in action for all people, everywhere. Together, UMCOR; Together, hope.

IV. ADDITIONAL ASSIGNMENTS

In addition to the general global mission responsibilities, Global Ministries has been charged by the General Conference with a range of special mandates and assignments of value to the entire church and often related to other agencies. Among these are:

A. Racial/Ethnic Ministry Plans

Six such plans receive designated financial support from the General Conference. The administration of four plans is entrusted to Global Ministries. These plans serve the whole church and each has a committee to provide program supervision and direction, within the framework of Global Ministries' general and personnel policies. While chartered as U.S.-focused initiatives, the plans have naturally become more international in scope as migration affects the composition of the U.S. church, and the mission energies of ethnic groups in the U.S. extend onto the global scene. Each plan makes its own account to the General Conference as part of the Global Ministries report. Each also includes in its account an outline of its projected work in the next quadrennium. The plans are:

- Asian American Language Ministry
- Korean Ministry Plan
- National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry
- Pacific Islanders National Plan

Full reports of each can be found below at the end of the Global Ministries narrative.

B. Deaf/Hard of Hearing Ministries

A special mandate is reported on under "Global Health" (see Sec. II.D.9).

C. Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

The committee is "an independent coordinating body . . ." to "study the structure and supervision of The United Methodist Church in its work outside the United States and its territories and its relationships to other Church bodies" (§ 2201.1, BOD). Global Ministries, named by the General Conference as the committee's facilitating agency, provides staff and logistical support. The committee meets at least twice within a quadrennium to develop resolutions and petitions related to central conference matters as well as to the creation of a "General Book of Discipline." It may be called into session during a General Conference. Members are elected by the General Conference. Committee meetings and action are supported by the General Administration Fund.

V. OTHER INFORMATION

A. Missionary Conferences

Missionary conferences serve special opportunities, have limited membership and resources, and represent unique leadership requirements, strategic regional or language considerations, and ministerial needs (see ¶ 585, BOD). Global Ministries provides guidance and assistance to these conferences, which are organized in the same manner as annual conferences and are under episcopal supervision. There are currently three missionary conferences: Alaska, Oklahoma Indian, and Red Bird.

1. The Alaska United Methodist Conference, organized as a mission in 1904 and as a missionary conference in 1972, has 28 active congregations and 2 new faith communities, 2 community centers, and 2 camps. Focus is on indigenous, youth, and student ministries; military chaplaincy; and mission outreach. In 2014, the conference had four candidates for ordained ministry; many Alaska pastors come from other annual conferences.
2. The Oklahoma Indian Missionary Conference traces its origins to the "Trail of Tears" of the late 1830s, which forced many Native Americans in the Southeast to relocate to Oklahoma. An eventually formed Indian Mission became a missionary conference in 1972. It has some 6,000 members in 84 churches, including 3 in Kansas, 1 in Missouri, and 1 in Dallas, Texas. It has 6 new fellowships. The Act of Repentance movement (see Sec. I.E) has brought new visibility to the conference in the current quadrennium.
3. The Red Bird Missionary Conference is a ministry with Appalachian communities and families in Southeastern Kentucky. It has 23 congregations, 4 outreach centers, and 3 mission institutions: Henderson Settlement, Red Bird Clinic, and Red Bird Mission. The mission came out of the Evangelical United Brethren (EUB) branch of what is now The United Methodist Church. It became a missionary conference when Methodist and EUB churches united in 1968.

B. Walking with Palestinian Christians

Some 300 people gathered at Ginghamburg United Methodist Church in Tripp City, Ohio, in August 2014 for a unique event co-sponsored by the church and Global Ministries. “Walking with Palestinian Christians . . . for Holy Justice and Peace,” though planned far in advance, coincided with a time of acute crisis over Gaza between Israel and the Palestinians. It developed into an important occasion to be in prayer and solidarity with Palestinian Christians, who shared their pain, uncertainty, and hopes for peace in a Holy Land that is also their home. The program looked at ways to strive nonviolently for justice and peace for all of the people of Israel and Palestine.

C. Language Interpretation Services

Global Ministries provides such services to meet both its own needs and those of other church units and ecumenical partners. In the current quadrennium it assisted with 312 events, divided into four categories: its own programs, 91; other United Methodist agencies or programs, 176; ecumenical, 30; and community groups, 15. Of those, 99 involved only the rental of language interpretation equipment. By far the most, 173, entailed full coordination with language teams, and 40 provided alternative options when agency services and equipment were not available. Among the users are the Council of Bishops, the Connectional Table, the Standing Committee for Central Conference Matters, and sundry annual and central conferences, as well as the Commission on the General Conference. Global Ministries has a long history of providing interpretative services for General Conference plenaries and legislative sessions and their subgroups. In 2012, the legislative process required 150 interpreters. In 2016, all delegates will use headsets because there may be some sessions held in languages other than English.

D. Inter-Agency Collaboration

Global Ministries has been strongly proactive across the quadrennium in encouraging and initiating collaboration among the church’s general agencies for the sake of efficiency and effectiveness, and to illustrate the value and necessity of administrative and program partnership. Significant strides in collaboration have taken place with GCFA in the areas of human resources, financial services, IT, travel, and meeting planning; with United Methodist Communications; and with other agencies in the interpretation of the four focus areas and the promotion of human rights. Global Ministries is aligning its accounting software with that of other general agencies so that the whole group uses the same system, with the eventual goal of all being on the same platform. This is a major undertaking. References to inter-agency collaboration appear throughout the foregoing report.

(Data in the foregoing report is accurate as of July 31, 2015, unless otherwise indicated.)

Report on the Asian American Language Ministry

I. Introduction

The 1996 General Conference authorized the Asian American Language Ministry (AALM) Study, a landmark in the inclusion of Asian American ministries as a mandated area of ministry in The United Methodist Church. Ever since then, AALM has been a significant resource for developing new ministries as well as strengthening existing ones in the Asian American community. Each successive General Conference also continued support of AALM as an advocate on behalf of the Asian immigrant, including an ever-growing refugee population. The ethnic subgroups represented have grown from 10 to 12 in 2015. These are Cambodian, Chinese, Filipino, Formosan, Hmong, Japanese, Korean, Lao, South Asian, and Vietnamese, and the two new ones, Pakistani and Middle Easterner. Demographically and historically the church moves along with the growth of the population in general.

The 2010 census reports the following relevant information (see www.census.gov/2010census):

- 14.7 million = The number of U.S. residents who identify as Asian without any other ethnicity (another 2.6 million identified as Asian in combination with one or more other ethnicities).
- 4.8% = The total percentage of the U.S. population that is of Asian background (5.7% when combined with Asian mixed with other ethnicity).
- 43.3% = The increase in number of U.S. residents who identified as Asian from 2000 to 2010 (by comparison, the Hispanic/Latino community grew by 43%, blacks or African Americans by 12.3%, and whites by 5.7%).
- 11% = The number of counties in the U.S. where ethnic minorities make up more than 50% of the population.
- 40.6 million = The projected number of U.S. residents in 2050 who will identify themselves as Asian or of Asian descent (comprising 9% of the total U.S. population).

Worldwide, Asians as a whole represent the largest number of un-churched people; according to the Barna Group, 63 percent of Asian Americans are un-churched. What needs to change if we are to be faithful to Christ's commission to make disciples of all nations, especially when "the nations" are migrating to the United States? What would it look like to respond to the biblical invitation: "The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few; therefore, ask the Lord of the harvest to send out laborers into his harvest" (Matthew 9:37-38 NRSV)?

Economically, the perception is that Asian Americans are doing relatively well compared to other immigrant and ethnic groups. The reality is more complex. Internally, what would it mean for Asian groups who have experienced seasons of stability, vitality, and growth to be "kyoudai/shimai" (Japanese for "brothers/sisters") to those who are struggling and still adjusting to life within the United States?

Externally, what would it mean for Asian Americans to see themselves as "ashirvad" (Hindi for "a blessing") to the whole United Methodist Church and for all United Methodists to receive and see those of diverse cultural background as wanted and necessary for the vitality and health of the Church universal? The theological challenge of our time will be to engage the diversity with openness, humility, and mutual love, holding to the biblical truth that all are beloved of God.

With full support from General Conference and annual conferences, AALM is continuously bringing forth much fruit in the four areas of focus. AALM's vision, purpose, and intention are to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world by integrating the Wesleyan tradition in the social-economic, cultural, and language contexts to the Asian American constituents.

II. Mission Statement

The formal mission statement of the Asian American Language Ministry is: To make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world in a cultural and sensitive language relevant to the Asian American social context.

III. During the 2013-2016 Quadrennium

Much of the plan's work is carried out through ethnic caucuses. Here are some highlights from across the current quadrennium and the caucuses' interactions with AALM:

A. Cambodian Annual Convocation

AALM supports the 13 congregations with an annual convocation. Worship and leadership training are central components of the weeklong event. Worship represents joyful celebration of grace and salvation. Technical skills are also taught, such as how to use computers and other electronic media in education, worship, and evangelism. The website of the United Methodist Fellowship of Carrollton, Texas (www.khmerumc.org), provides a link to Khmer language versions of the Bible through the Cambodian affiliate of the United Bible Societies. It also links to English versions.

B. Chinese/Asian Ministries in North Louisiana

This four-year-old ministry is active in Ruston, Monroe, and Homer—along the I-20 corridor—working in collaboration with Trinity United Methodist Church in Ruston. The Chinese/Asian fellowship numbers some 80 persons and in 2015 there were several professions of faith and baptisms. The ministry offers language study in both Mandarin and English, as well as Bible study classes. Fellowship and pastoral care are provided.

C. Hmong Ministries

There are more than a dozen Hmong congregations or fellowships, mostly in California, North Carolina, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. One started in 2013 in Brookfield, Wisconsin, a section of Milwaukee, is affiliated with the area's Agape United Methodist Ministry. It started with 3 families consisting of 28 people and by mid-2015 had grown to 23 families with 133 adults and children. AALM has helped the Agape congregation to grow and make connections in the community, the annual conference, and other Hmong congregations.

D. Filipino

The year 2013 marked the 100th anniversary of Filipino-American Methodism, a long and strong history reflecting the presence of Methodism in the Philippines. A joyful celebration marked the 14th biennial Convocation of the National Association of Filipino-American United Methodists (NAFAUM) held at Riviera United Methodist Church in Redondo Beach, California. In 2014, AALM partnered with the Northern Illinois Conference in support for a transformative Filipino-led ministry at the Edison Park United Methodist Church in Chicago. The former Anglo congregation had declined to the point that its future was in question. But a new future was born as more and more people of Filipino background attended worship. A pastor from the Philippines was appointed for a congregation, now some 80 percent Filipino and 20 percent Anglo.

E. Laotian

There is some overlap between Hmong and Laotian United Methodism because of historical, geographical, and cultural factors in Southeast Asia. There are also opportunities for mixed cultural church development. One new start this quadrennium is the Laotian/Karenni language ministry in Johnson City, New York, and the Karenni Language Ministry in Syracuse. The Karenni speakers are refugees from Burma. This unfolding opportunity began on Pentecost Sunday 2014, at the annual Laotian Convocation. A number of Karenni-speaking people had been invited to worship but understood no Lao or English; some knew Thai. Multiple levels of interpretation were needed, but the important lesson was the realization, as one participant said, that, "the strategy and the preaching style must be changed and adapted to the situation. The preacher must transliterate the text into a story-telling form from one language to another and to another. All the people who came for worship that morning were totally dependent on the Holy Spirit so God's Word could make sense in our lives and the lives of the people who hear it."

F. Vietnamese

There are more than two-dozen Vietnamese United Methodist churches in the U.S., with one-third of these in California. New church development is a priority. A Local Pastor Licensing Class was included in the 2015 caucus convocation at Westminster, California, to train 30 candidates for ministry in the Vietnamese language. The school was planned in collaboration with the Vietnamese Theological College of Union University.

One of the oldest, in Arlington, Virginia, serving the Washington, D.C. area, is more than 15 years old. Five years ago, the Arlington congregation almost became dormant but is now revitalized, with a weekly worship attendance of almost 100 persons. AALM was instrumental in providing resources to undergird a turnaround. AALM is also supporting a new English-language ministry for second-generation members. The national Vietnamese caucus is 25 years old and in 2015 marked the anniversary with a convocation of young adults. More than 80 young people took part in the event in Westminster, California.

New church starts during the quadrennium include the Garden Grove Vietnamese Ministry in California; a Vietnamese Language Ministry at Wesley United Methodist Church, Atlanta, Georgia; a new congregation in partnership with the Mouzon United Methodist Church, Charlotte, North Carolina, and a Vietnamese Fellowship in the Renaissance Center of Detroit, Michigan, a city with some 10,000 persons of Vietnamese lineage.

IV. Vision for 2017-2020

The Asian American Language Ministry envisions an active community of faith that integrates and strengthens the ministry in the connectional body of The United Methodist Church. AALM is a vital catalyst within the interconnectional body of the church. It promotes the making of disciples of Jesus Christ within appropriate language context, and builds cross-cultural bridges and inter-generational ministries. AALM will reach out to the Asian American community by focusing on these four goals.

A. Develop New Faith Communities and Congregations

Bring about new congregations and faith communities in consultation with the respective annual conferences and districts. The goals are 12 new such ministries by 2020 and the strengthening of 12 existing communities of faith; 4 new intentional multiracial next-generational ministries will have been directly assisted in their development.

B. Recruit and Develop Pastoral and Lay Leadership

Develop language-friendly and culturally appropriate training programs to equip lay and clergy leaders with tools and resources for church starts and growth; provide local pastor licensing courses in specific Asian languages to equip pastors for ministry with their language group; equip and encourage next-generation leadership by assisting them in dealing with their current realities, such as discrimination; generational conflicts; cultural understandings; and living in a multicultural, multiracial society.

The goal is for 280 leaders to be trained in establishing new language ministries and strengthening the existing congregations serving the specific needs of racial ethnic groups by 2020; these targeted leaders will be trained in their language to have a better knowledge about The United Methodist Church, its polity, theology, structure, and connectionalism, so that they can become more effective in The United Methodist Church. Youth will have been trained in 10 regional youth-ministry programs to equip and encourage next-generation leadership. One hundred twenty young adults will have been trained in 4 young adult leadership conferences to recruit, nurture, equip, and encourage the next-generation leaders.

C. Ministry with the Poor

Develop programs to work more effectively with immigrants within their own communities in areas such as legal services; immigration/citizenship education; English as a Second Language; access to social services, housing, and employment, through faith-based community centers; and providing 10 grants to adapt models and offer training for community outreach ministries.

D. Develop Language Resources and Materials

Develop relevant Asian resources in culturally sensitive written materials as well as audiovisual resources in the areas of evangelism, Christian education, leadership development, stewardship, and worship. Financial assistance will be provided for the development of six language-specific resources that will have been established by 2020.

V. Conclusion

AALM plays an important role in connecting The United Methodist Church in mission. As society continually becomes more diverse and multicultural, AALM is a well-prepared agent for providing resources and expertise to the district and annual conferences in the areas of local evangelism, church growth, and discipleship, done in culturally sensitive and relevant manners.

The General Conference's continued support is essential to Asian American ministry in the U.S., even as the Asian presence is essential to the global objective of making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. AALM is a means of celebrating diversity in a united church, sharing the gospel of Jesus Christ with children, youth, adults, refugees, and immigrants to the ends of the earth. In Christ, we discovered a common faith, a shared language, and a mutual love. AALM is committed to the belief that our differences, as meaningful as they may be, are not and should not be barriers to our shared humanity renewed in Christ.

We offer thanks to God because The United Methodist Church envisioned the task of making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world and also entrusted the church with the capability to do the work through its faithful members. AALM is privileged to contribute its portion in the mission of the Church.

VII. Recommendation: The Budget Request for 2017-2020

We request the World Service Fund to support AALM for 2017-2020 in the amount of $1,408,000. Considering the potential and the needs of the Asian American community, such an investment will have a lasting impact for the kingdom of God.

Report on the Korean Ministry Plan: Advancing United Methodist Ministries Among Koreans

“Our vision is to integrate Wesleyan tradition and Korean spirituality to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.”

The Korean Ministry Plan, entitled, “Advancing United Methodist Ministries Among Korean Americans,” represents the first comprehensive nationwide mission initiative of The United Methodist Church to develop and vitalize Korean American ministries in North America. After a comprehensive four-year study on the issues, needs, and mission opportunities of the Korean American United Methodist community, the 2000 General Conference enthusiastically approved what was initially called the Korean American National Plan, as did consecutive General Conferences of 2004, 2008, and 2012. During the current quadrennium, the name was changed to the Korean Ministry Plan: Advancing United Methodist Ministries Among Koreans. For the coming quadrennium, it is expected that the plan will continue to reflect the global nature of The United Methodist Church and its ministry.

“The growth of Korean American United Methodist churches means growth for the whole United Methodist Church!” This statement expresses the core spirit of the Korean Ministry Plan. The plan’s intention is that the Korean churches and ministries will be active and integral parts of the connective life of The United Methodist Church and will make important contributions to the life, mission, and ministry of the entire denomination for the glory of God.

The Korean Ministry Plan for the 2013-2016 quadrennium aimed to create, nurture, and enable communities of faith in disciple-making ministries, to build bridges in cross-cultural/racial and cross-generational ministries, and to be agents of social justice in the global context. Pursuit of this vision focused on five main areas:

- Congregational Development
- Leadership Formation
- Next Generation Ministries
- Justice-related Ministries
- International Missions

I. Korean Ministry Plan for 2013-2016: Achievements of the Current Quadrennium

Based on these five vision areas, the following specific ministries were implemented during the 2013-2016 quadrennium.

A. Congregational Development and New Church Starts

In the early years of the plan, much of the energy and resources were focused on planting new congregations and enabling the existing mission congregations to become self-supporting. In the last two quadrennia there was a shift to revitalization and congregational development through the implementation of effective ministry strategies. However, the plan continued to promote and assist new church starts. During the quadrennium it:

1. Developed 11 new Korean-language churches in full partnership with annual conferences, jurisdictional Korean mission directors/superintendents, and local Korean UMC congregations with the goal of becoming chartered and self-supporting in the subsequent three to five years.
2. Nurtured both existing and recently launched mission churches to grow in their life and mission.
3. Continued implementation of the $1 million “Matching Fund Campaign” for new church starts.
4. Collaborated with the “1,000 Church Campaign” of the Korean Association of the UMC.

B. Leadership Formation

The Korean United Methodist Church realizes that leadership formation for clergy and laity is a vital part of a congregation’s sustainability and growth. However, leadership formation needs to be broad in scope since the leadership of the Korean Ministry has become increasingly diverse in terms of age, ethnic makeup, background, leadership style, and cultural orientation. In this quadrennium, there has also been a shift from focusing on “revival and growth” in leadership training to “spirituality and the healthy church.” Listed below are goals implemented in leadership formation:

1. Continued to implement a comprehensive small-group leader-training module for pastors and laity, utilizing the Korean language resource, “Longing to Meet You,” and further developed this resource in collaboration with the School for Congregational Development.
2. Created a task force on “confliction transformation” in collaboration with the Korean Network of United Methodist Women for 11 regional training events.

3. Launched the first “Korean Academy of Spiritual Formation” in collaboration with the Upper Room of Discipleship Ministries (formerly GBOD).
4. Supported leadership development for Korean clergy, including clergywomen, serving in cross-cultural/racial appointments.
5. Supported future young clergy by offering a “United Methodist Seminarians and Ministerial Candidates Information and Mentoring Session” in partnership with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

C. Next Generation Ministries

Ministries serving second- and third-generation Korean Americans require new strategies for reaching out to an immigrant community that continues to diversify in age, culture, and ethnicity (through interracial marriages). The Korean Ministry Plan provides critical support in recruiting and developing new spiritual leaders—clergy and lay—from the community. In this regard, the following strategies were implemented:

1. Developed seven new English-language congregations in full partnership with annual conferences, jurisdictional Korean mission directors/superintendents, and local Korean congregations.
2. Supported the creation of Nexus, a new next-generation caucus, for Korean American English-speaking clergy, laity, and missionaries.
3. Strengthened leadership development through the Korean American United Methodist Youth Initiative, College Initiative, and the Children’s Ministry Initiative.
4. Published the English edition of the small-group training resource, “Longing to Meet You,” through Cokesbury and organized training events in English for next-generation clergy.

D. Justice-related Ministries

The plan enlarged its areas of focus to include justice ministry. In the current quadrennium, it provided support for changes in immigration policy, recognizing the needs of the immigrant community and their struggles. The plan was also active in efforts for peace and reunification of the Korean peninsula. It helped organize the “Peace March” in Washington, D.C., endorsed by the 2012 General Conference, commemorating the 60th anniversary of the armistice in the Korean conflict.

E. International Missions: Global Partnerships

The Korean Ministry Plan worked to develop new partnerships with central conferences, autonomous Methodist denominations, and other global organizations. In particular, the plan collaborated with Global Ministries and the Korean Association of The UMC in a mission project in Myanmar. A team visited Myanmar to train clergy and laity in small-group ministry utilizing the English edition of “Longing to Meet You.” A similar project focused on the Korean diaspora in Europe.

II. Korean Ministry Plan Goals for 2017-2020: The United Methodist Council On Korean Ministries

Across the past four quadrennia, the Korean American National Plan faithfully served The United Methodist Church in strengthening Korean American ministries. Now, Korean ministries are important and influential not only in the national church, but also globally, a fact reflected in the change of the name to “Korean Ministry Plan.”

The Korean Ministry Plan goals for 2017-2020 reflect three of the four focus areas of The United Methodist Church: leadership development, congregational development, and ministry with the poor. Following are eight specific goals of the plan for the next quadrennium.

III. Focus Area: Leadership Formation

Leadership formation of clergy and laity is a vital part of the church’s sustainability and growth. The objective is to identify, recruit, and train both current and upcoming leaders. National and regional clergy and lay leadership training events and projects are supported by direct funding and leadership resources, in addition to collaboration with various ministry groups in the national Korean American community and general program agencies.

A. Goal 1: Next Generation Ministries

To build, support, and strengthen the leadership capacity of the Next Generation Ministries; to be achieved through the support and nurture of:

1. The Youth Initiative (YI)—a national leadership conference for Korean American United Methodist youth, the training of campus ministers and college leaders through the College Initiative (CI), and training of children’s ministry pastors and teachers through the Children’s Ministry Initiative (CMI).

2. The Nexus Ministry and the Nexus Internship Program, a national coordinating caucus for Next Generation clergy and laity, which also administers the internship program for college students and seminarians.
3. National and regional network groups for the Next Generation pastors and seminarians, as well as campus ministries.

B. Goal 2: Effective Leadership for Clergy and Laity

To nurture effective clergy and laity leadership through existing national networks, to be achieved by:

1. Further development of training for clergywomen and clergy serving in cross-racial appointments (National Association of Korean American United Methodist Clergywomen and National Association of Korean American United Methodist Pastors Serving Cross-Racial Appointments) and implementation of mentoring programs for such newly ordained pastors.
2. Development of Korean female lay leadership through collaboration with the National Korean United Methodist Women.

C. Goal 3: Transformational Leadership

To develop effective leadership in the Korean church through clergy and laity leadership training programs that nurture spiritual growth and enable healthy church development, including:

1. An effective mentoring/coaching program for young Korean pastors and new mission congregations.
2. A “Conflict Transformation” training course to encourage ministries of reconciliation.
3. An “Academy for Spiritual Formation” in partnership with the Upper Room.

IV. Focus Area: Congregational Development

The primary focus of this area is to launch new viable congregations and nurture them to become self-sustaining churches, which are key signs of a vital congregation. A new strategy of church “restarts” will help to spur new growth in existing congregations, and small-group ministries will be encouraged.

A. Goal 4: Plant New Korean-speaking Congregations

To plant 12 new (and restart) Korean Ministry congregations that will become sustaining within three to five years, relying on:

1. Partnerships with annual conferences, jurisdictional Korean mission directors/superintendents, Path 1, the “1,000 Church Campaign,” and local congregations to locate sites, raise funds, and identify pastors.
2. Direct support to new congregations as they develop innovative methods to grow both in their congregational life and mission, including small-group training materials and clergy and lay training.

B. Goal 5: Plant New English-speaking Congregations

To plant five new English-speaking Korean American congregations to become self-sustaining within three to five years, relying on:

1. Partnerships with annual conferences, jurisdictional Korean mission directors/superintendents, and local congregations to locate sites, raise funds, and identify pastors for each church.
2. Consultation teams to provide support for the newly launched Next Generation churches, and English small-group training materials for clergy and laity.

C. Goal 6: Small-group Ministry

To implement a comprehensive small-group ministry strategy for pastors and laity through:

1. Promotion and distribution of the Korean and English publications of “Longing to Meet You” small-group leadership training materials.
2. A small-group ministry resource website with documents, resources, videos, and networking materials.
3. Direct funding and leadership resources for national and regional small-group ministry training based on “Longing to Meet You.”
4. Specialized small group ministry resources and training for specific contexts, including clergywomen and cross-racial appointments.

V. Focus Area: Ministry with the Poor

The Korean Ministry Plan, in partnership with other agencies and organizations, will focus on support for justice ministry in the context of emerging needs. As immigrants, the Korean American church understands the importance of being connected to the global community. The plan will also work on fostering global partnerships for international missions.

A. Goal 7: Justice Ministry in the Context of Emerging Needs

To engage the church in justice-related ministries such as the peace movement of the Korean peninsula and immigration reform, seeking to achieve this goal through:

1. Collaboration with other agencies and organizations, such as Global Ministries and Church and Society, which focus on ministries with immigrants, global migration, and peace issues.
2. Building awareness in the Korean community of peace efforts.
3. Supporting local congregations that have immigrant-focused ministries, and collecting and sharing resources available to assist non-documented immigrants, especially within the Korean American community.

B. Goal 8: Global Partnerships

To develop new relationships with organizations globally, expanding the work of the Korean Ministry Plan beyond the United States, achieving this goal through:

1. Developing and sustaining relationships with global and ecumenical organizations, especially with autonomous Methodist denominations.
2. Planting new churches and starting new mission projects internationally through partnerships with global ecumenical organizations and autonomous Methodist denominations in Latin America, South-east Asia, and Korea.
3. Collaborating with central conferences and existing Korean congregations, building relationships and providing resources to strengthen Korean United Methodist faith communities throughout the world.

To fulfill the work described above, a national office shall be continued with one full-time, executive staff person, and additional staff as needed and financially possible, with administration placed within Global Ministries under the direction of the United Methodist Council on Korean Ministries. The executive Committee of the United Methodist Council on Korean Ministries will provide supervision for the executive of the plan within the personnel policies of Global Ministries.

Report on the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry: A Journey of Accompaniment and Service

I. A Visionary Path: A New Global Community Walking Together in Service and Love

More than a quarter of a century ago, The United Methodist Church approved the creation of the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry (NPHLM, the National Plan, or the Plan hereafter). The vision was for all cultures to hear about the liberating acts of God, celebrate them in our own languages, and minister to the needs of others, particularly the needs of those who suffer most.

Today, in light of the demands of new realities, the Plan envisions a new global community walking together, in which all of God's creation serve one another in love. In an effort to fulfill this vision, the Plan now believes that its mission is to help create that type of community by collaborating with annual conferences in the discovery of principles and strategies in the formation of transforming communities, forming leaders through educational, spiritual, and practical tools, and accompanying annual conferences in the development and implementation of ministerial action plans.

Since the 1992 General Conference, the NPHLM has been steadily meeting some of the needs of the Hispanic/Latino population in the United States of America. Thanks to the opportunity of being in partnership with the four programmatic general agencies, more than 49 annual conferences, many local congregations, and committed leaders, the National Plan has been able to develop contextual leadership, creating relevant training resources, contributing with planting new congregations and revitalizing existing ones, and successfully accompanying our churches and communities with the issue of immigration.

These accomplishments have moved us closer to achieving the divine vision that the Plan started out with several decades ago and that has guided its steps until the present.

II. New Challenges Along the Way: The Twenty-First Century

The Plan's journey has been rewarding but not easy. New and complex realities are confronting The UMC.

While the U.S.A. has continued to grow in population and complexity, the face of the Hispanic/Latino community (which now represents 17% of the entire population) has drastically changed even more in the last years, especially in the areas of language, citizenship, culture, and communication. Let us take a close look at some striking numbers.

- Although the number of U.S. foreign-born Hispanics and Latinos has flattened out over the past 10 years (due in part to increased U.S. border law enforcement and removal processes), the number of U.S.-born Hispanics continues to rise sharply. As of 2012, for instance, it was estimated that 34.1% were U.S. born.
- Currently, two out of three Hispanics/Latinos are U.S. citizens.
- The Hispanic/Latino community has changed from being monolingual to bilingual. While 28% of Hispanics/Latinos speak Spanish only, 72% speak English (15% speak English only, 21% mostly English, 4% English and Spanish, and 28% mostly Spanish).
- Over the next two years, 2.7 million English-speaking Hispanic teenagers will become adults. Five years later another 4.8 million will become adults. And given that the U.S. is now experiencing a net loss of foreign-born Hispanics/Latinos, within seven years there should be over 4 million more English-speaking U.S. Hispanic/Latino adults than Spanish-speaking ones.¹

Hispanics/Latinos born and raised here are automatically U.S. citizens, their first language is English, they are cultural products of the U.S. educational system, are part of the standard U.S. workforce, and are at least bicultural Americans. They are part of the emerging U.S. global culture of today and tomorrow.

To add to this situation, accelerated changes taking place in the areas of technology and communication have influenced the way in which Hispanics/Latinos communicate, particularly between the X and Millennial generations, for whom English is their first language.

- U.S.-born Latinos are more likely than foreign-born Latinos to be online (81% vs. 54%); to have a home Internet connection (71% vs. 45%); to have a home

1. See <http://nphlm.org/2015/why-is-our-denomination-where-it-is-today-how-can-it-change/> broadband connection (60% vs. 35%); and to own a cell phone (86% vs. 70%).

- Some 47% of Spanish-dominant Latinos use the Internet, compared with 74% of bilingual Latinos and 81% of English-dominant Latinos.
- Some 37% of Spanish-dominant Latinos have a home Internet connection, compared with 61% of bilingual Latinos and 77% of English-dominant Latinos.
- About one-fourth (26%) of Spanish-dominant Latinos have home broadband access, compared with about half (52%) of bilingual Latinos, and two-thirds (66%) of English-dominant Latinos.
- Some 68% of Spanish-dominant Hispanics have a cell phone, compared with 78% of bilingual Hispanics and 86% of English-dominant Hispanics.²

With respect to Hispanic/Latino leadership and representation in local United Methodist churches, it is clear that The United Methodist Church is far behind in meeting the demands of our society; our efforts are not commensurate with U.S. demographics.

- Out of the 17% of people who are of Hispanic/Latino descent, one-tenth of 1% are United Methodists; this represents only 0.1%.
- About 17% of all Hispanics/Latinos who speak English are members of The United Methodist Church.
- With respect to clergy, 0.9% of Hispanics/Latinos are deacons in full connection, 1.2% are elders in full connection, 0.5% are deacons in probation, and 2.1% are elders in probation, 2.4% are associate member pastors, 5.2% are full-time local pastors, and 2.4% are part-time local pastors. Most of our current pastors are Spanish speakers, because boards of ordained ministry and seminaries are not recruiting new Hispanic/Latino candidates in numbers commensurate with current U.S. demographics.

The implications are loud and clear. As we enter into the second decade of the twenty-first century, an age in which the forces of globalization and the extraordinary advances of technology and communication impose new paradigms and challenges to the church, The United Methodist Church must read the signs of current times and reassess its goals and priorities in light of the actual demands of our communities. Our need to develop new systems of contextualizing our mission and role in society with greater speed than in the past is imperative.

Thus, it is urgent for our church to create a new and vital generation of Hispanic/Latino leaders and communities who are equipped with a good understanding of the extensive range of world views, cultural backgrounds, and perspectives represented in the world today, particularly within the emerging needs and challenges affecting the Hispanic/Latino community in the U.S. and the nation as a whole.

Moreover, we must press the church to move from its shallow understanding of ethnic and cultural inclusiveness to a solid strategy of recruitment of young adult candidates for the different range of ordinances of our structure. The absence of effective marketing strategies to recruit Hispanics/Latinos at the college and seminary level, the outdated policies and requirements for admission, and inadequate theological education programs suggest an unfriendly environment for potential Hispanic/Latino candidates to their programs. This results in negative consequences for The UMC and a disservice to society. There is so much we have to be thankful for, and yet the road ahead is demanding.

In the present report, the readers will get a chance to celebrate what the NPHLM has been able to achieve this past quadrennium, but you will also have an opportunity to take a close look at some recommendations regarding what we need to do to get closer to fulfilling the vision God has put in our heart for the 2017-2020 quadrennium, as we all enjoy glimpses of a global community in which its members serve each other, transformed by the overwhelming power of God's grace.

III. Footprints of a Recent Walk: The 2013-2016 Quadrennium In Retrospect

Since the 2008 General Conference blessed the NPHLM for the 2009-2012 quadrennium, through the present time, the national office has been working diligently on four areas of ministry to help The United Methodist Church fulfill its mission: developing leadership, accompanying annual conferences and developing local church strategies, developing new congregations, and working on immigration and other critical social concerns.

In context of an economic recession, anti-migrant sentiments, and law-enforcement crackdown efforts to counteract unauthorized migration, Hispanic/Latino communities and churches have managed to hold on and move forward in hope and faith. In spite of these challenging circumstances, we see signs of growth. Thanks to our partnerships with local congregations, annual conferences, and general agencies, the Plan has been able to achieve many of the goals set for the quadrennium that is now ending. Several testimonies and stories add a personal touch and encourage The UMC to do more. We hereby share with the general church the results of our collaboration.

A. Developing Leadership

Hispanic/Latino churches need leaders. We praise God for allowing all of us to make a contribution in this area as well, as we recommit ourselves to making this a priority during our next quadrennium.

With the growing support of the general church, Global Ministries, Higher Education and Ministry, Discipleship Ministries, and Church and Society, in this past quadrennium the Plan succeeded in:

1. Organizing the Third National Consultation on Hispanic/Latino Ministry for more than 300 selected participants, and structuring a platform that would permit a successful implementation of the resulting recommendations during the next four to six years.
2. Cooperating with MARCHA (Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic Americans) and Higher Education and Ministry in creating and assigning leadership formation scholarships.
3. Assisting Higher Education and Ministry in strengthening the course of study schools and providing financial support to some of their local pastors enrolled as students.
4. Designing and implementing theological education programs and curricula for laypersons, lay missionaries, and lay ministers.
5. Helping produce educational resources for children and the theological formation of lay leaders and pastors.
6. Giving grants to several Hispanic/Latino academias, community centers, legal clinics, and the journal Apuntes.
7. Updating Modules I and II.
8. Creating websites and blogs for global, educational dialogues.
9. Supporting several Hispanic/Latino students who participated in the ethnic young adult summer internships.
10. Supporting 40 intergenerational training events, for 520 people, in three languages, in all jurisdictions.
11. Helping provide hands-on training to future church planters so they could have a significant impact in the church residency program.

B. Accompanying Annual Conferences and Developing Local Church Strategies

The Plan celebrates the substantial progress The UMC continues to make in the area of collaboration and partnership with annual conferences in order to develop effective strategies for the formation of transforming communities. To this end, progress has been reached in the ministries of collaboration, leadership development, and accompaniment.

With the growing support of the general church, Higher Education and Ministry, and Global Ministries, in this past quadrennium the Plan succeeded in:

1. Increasing the number of annual conferences by 37% to 53 since the last quadrennium.
2. Elaborating and implementing cooperation agreements with several annual conferences to reach out to a significantly higher percentage of second- and third-generation Hispanics/Latinos in their geographical boundaries and accompany local churches in their work with that sector of the population.
3. Organizing Hispanic/Latino Ministries committees and working closely with cabinet members and conference staff.
4. Assigning 21 missionaries to serve in 14 annual conferences, in 5 jurisdictions and the church of Puerto Rico.
5. Visiting 34 annual conferences in 5 jurisdictions (a total of 62 visits) to help them develop ministry strategies.
6. Crafting a strategy-development process to simplify the implementation of the National Plan, based on principles that address ministry priorities.
7. Creating three granting categories to assist specific ministry areas: a laity training center, youth development, and a community center.
8. Shaping financial collaboration agreements with partners that provided almost $1 million to support the implementation of conference strategies.

C. Developing New Congregations

The NPHLM assisted The United Methodist Church in planting and infusing vitality into existing Christian gatherings, while providing technical and financial assistance to annual conferences and districts on developing new places of worship and service. With the support of the general church and in collaboration with Global Ministries and Discipleship Ministries, in this past quadrennium the Plan succeeded in:

1. Establishing five Brazilian ministries in several annual conferences, mostly in the northeastern jurisdiction.
2. Designing three sequential modules as accompanying tools for planting new congregations in the Hispanic/Latino context.
3. Granting church development funds to nine annual conferences in four jurisdictions.
4. Designing and implementing coach training for church planters and equipping more than 250 men and women to plant new Hispanic/Latino congregations.

D. Working on Immigration and Other Critical Social Concerns

The issue of unauthorized migration has been extremely important and challenging to the life and mission of The UMC. Many of our Hispanic/Latino leaders and churches have been negatively impacted by anti-immigrant sentiments and tough law-enforcement actions. However, we rejoice in our contributions and accomplishments in spite of this negative atmosphere.

With the growing support of the general church, and in collaboration with Church and Society and the institutional Task Force on Migration, this past quadrennium the Plan succeeded in:

1. Participating in global migration dialogues and sending young leaders to participate in these events as speakers.
2. Designing and implementing hospitable and networking programs for migrants in Central America and the U.S., in cooperation with Methodist churches in the region.
3. Keeping leaders and churches informed about immigration-related issues at the national and state levels.
4. Helping formulate resolutions that advocate for comprehensive immigration reforms and supporting the Dream Act and Deferred Action.
5. Creating educational material to facilitate dialogue on the issues of immigration so that some practical solutions can be implemented.
6. Participating in Black-Brown conversations.
7. Supporting prayer vigils at the White House, immigration trainings, “Not One More” Weekend of actions to stop deportations, etc.

IV. Looking at the Road Ahead: Goals for the 2017-2020 Quadrennium

Based on an assessment of current realities, prayers, consultations, and the praxis of everyday-life ministry with Hispanics/Latinos, the Plan recommends that the General Conference continue investing efforts and energy in the 2017-2020 quadrennium on the following focus areas of ministry with the defined goals and objectives included in this quadrennial request:

A. On Leadership Development

To develop principled Christian leaders whose work is relevant to the realities and needs of the current generations of Hispanics/Latinos in U.S. and foreign places. The Plan will meet this objective through the implementation of the following goals:

1. To strategically identify, recruit, and train new leaders for ministry to address the needs of their ever-changing local communities.
2. To accompany annual conferences and the global church to strategically align the resources available in the connection for the identification, recruitment, and training of a new generation of principled leaders for impacting their communities.

B. On Church Growth

To assist in the development of new places of worship and established Hispanic/Latino churches in a process of revitalization and transformation so they become missional congregations. The Plan will meet this objective through the implementation of the following goals:

1. To provide technical and financial assistance to annual conferences and districts on developing new places of worship.
2. To intentionally identify, recruit, and train local mission teams of new leaders for ministry among members who are second- and third-generation Hispanic/Latino Americans, who will create new faith communities and community-based ministries within their ever-changing local communities.
3. To provide financial grants to empower the unfolding ministries of the local mission teams created by the ministry team formation process, and the pastor-mentor and lay missionary teams formed by the Module I-II process.

C. On Ministry with the Poor and Migration

To equip and support the church for compassionate global service. The Plan will meet this objective through the implementation of the following goals:

1. To understand and monitor the unfolding situation affecting global migrants and the nations that send, transit, and receive them.

2. To seek and develop new partners to raise awareness and respond to the global migration phenomenon.

V. Pilgrims Working Together: Structures and Resources

In an effort to be more effective and maximize the use of available resources, the National Office of NPHLM will be operating in the new facilities of Global Ministries and under its administration while retaining its current structure; namely, the national office and its coordinator and the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministry and its executive committee.

A. General Agencies Partnership

The United Methodist Church's mission is to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world, a mission that calls all of us to go into a world of needs and challenges, in which Hispanics/Latinos are now a priority. However, based on the experiences and assessments of previous quadrennia, the Plan now believes that God is calling the whole church to engage this sector of the population with a more focused, renovated work, as part of The United Methodist Church's mission. In the past, the representatives of the general program agencies who have worked on various elements of the National Plan, in collaboration with the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministries, have shown creativity and effectiveness in this collaborative process of fulfilling the Plan's vision and mission. Based on this precedent, we are confident that, by the grace of God, the general agencies will continue to partner with the National Plan to face the complexity of challenges and opportunities provided by a world that more than ever prioritizes inequality, individualism, and violence instead of the principles of God's kingdom.

In ongoing collaboration with the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministries, each general agency is expected to continue collaborating with the implementation of the National Plan and toward its proposed goals and objectives for the 2017-2020 quadrennium, as described in the following paragraphs:

1. To provide a process of acompañamiento (accompaniment) to assist annual conferences to develop and assess their strategic plans for Hispanic/Latino ministries based on guidelines developed under the direction of the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministries and provide matching grants to conferences for developing leadership, accompanying annual conferences and developing local church strategies, developing new congregations, and working on immigration and other critical social concerns.
2. To design, test, and perfect model programs and resources that use the National Plan's methodology to respond to identified needs in implementing the National Plan.
3. To design and implement Module III workshops addressing the systemic and structural issues related to Hispanics/Latinos and immigration, health care, education, unemployment, housing and poverty, and other social issues.
4. To design and update Module I and II for the lay missionaries and pastor-mentor teams and design and implement Module III in areas of ministry related to making disciples for the transformation of the world.
5. To resource the revitalizing and mobilizing of Hispanic/Latino congregations, particularly through the congregational mobilization process described earlier in the National Plan.
6. To promote and collaborate to review the course of study curriculum to reflect the National Plan's priorities and goals, and to coordinate and upgrade the academic quality of the Spanish-language course of study, making it more relevant to the Hispanic/Latino community and context, in collaboration with the directors and faculty of the Spanish-language course of study schools.
7. To produce resources for pastors serving in The United Methodist Church coming from other countries and denominations, in order to help them grow in their understanding of the Hispanic/Latino culture and the context in the United States and The United Methodist Church's doctrine and polity.
8. To continue working with the existing task force on designing, testing, implementing, and evaluating at least one alternative model of theological education for Hispanic/Latino pastoral leaders with undergraduate United Methodist colleges, seminaries, and/or training centers that facilitate these pastors' movement toward ordination.
9. To design and offer Module III workshops in annual conferences to strengthen The United Methodist Church's understanding of Hispanic/Latino theology, spirituality, and ethos, as well as its understanding of the Hispanic/Latino United Methodist community's contribution to the overall United Methodist ethos.
10. To identify placement opportunities for missionaries that support the National Plan's stated strategies, priorities, and goals; and to recruit, train, commission, deploy, and accompany at least 50 missionaries.

11. To promote and administer the National Challenge Fund for Hispanic Ministries.

B. National Coordination

To support and coordinate the NPHLM's implementation, the Plan recommends the continuation of a national office headed by a coordinator and guided by a national committee. Several factors make the coordination of the National Plan an important and necessary function. A coordinator is needed to work with all the general agencies and annual conferences of the church and facilitate interagency work. Only the national office can provide the regular communication and exchange of success stories asked for by annual conference leaders. Having done an extensive assessment of Hispanic/Latino ministry, the NPHLM recognizes the need for ongoing assessment and research of the denomination's work among Hispanics/Latinos. There is a strong desire to learn from examples of successful Hispanic/Latino ministries, examples that need to be collected and disseminated on an ongoing basis. Such research, data collection, and dissemination need to be done at a national level for effective and efficient use. The Plan recommends that the national office and coordinator be hosted at the facilities of Global Ministries.

C. The National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministry

1. Organization. The Plan recommends that the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministry continue to be the entity responsible for overseeing and guiding the implementation of the NPHLM and be composed of 15 members who meet the following criteria:
 - a. Two bishops named by the Council of Bishops, attending with funds from the Episcopal Fund.
 - b. One representative from, and named by, MARCHA (Metodistas Asociados Representando la Causa Hispanos Americanos).
 - c. One elected board member from the general program boards: Church and Society, Discipleship Ministries, Global Ministries, and Higher Education and Ministry, all to be selected and funded by their respective agencies.
 - d. Up to seven at-large members, selected by the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministries, to reflect the varied constituency of The United Methodist Church with regard to gender, age, lay versus clergy status, Hispanics/Latinos and non-Hispanics, with jurisdictional inclusiveness as well. At least one shall be a person involved with Brazilian ministries in the United States.
 - e. In addition to committee members, at least one staff person from each of the program agencies who has responsibility for Hispanic/Latino ministries within the general program agency (and other staff resource persons as may be needed) will be invited to serve on the committee with voice but no vote, all to be selected and funded by their respective agencies.
 - f. A representative from The United Methodist Publishing House, from United Methodist Communications, from the General Commission on Religion and Race, and from the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women—these latter two who will serve as monitors—will be invited to the committee meetings, all to be selected and funded by their respective agencies.
2. Functions and Responsibilities. The Plan recommends that the National Committee be charged:
 - a. To set policy and direction for the development, implementation, monitoring, and evaluation of the NPHLM.
 - b. To lead the church in the development of guidelines for grants and programs for Hispanic/Latino ministries with the general agencies, seminaries, annual conferences, training centers, and others responsible for implementing components of the National Plan.
 - c. To coordinate responses to the National Plan of all the general agencies and annual conferences and facilitate interagency collaboration.
 - d. To monitor and assist in the evaluation of programs in Hispanic/Latino ministries by the general agencies and annual conferences.
 - e. To give direction and support to the office of the National Plan.
 - f. To undertake program initiatives in response to identified needs in collaboration with the general program agencies, seminaries, training centers, and annual conferences, and to provide final approval of the distribution of grant funds allocated to the National Plan.
 - g. To revise the existing guidelines, as needed, for the Challenge Fund and to assist in the promotion of the Fund.
 - h. To promote and support the necessary ongoing research on issues affecting Hispanic/Latino communities and the mission of The United Methodist Church in these communities.
 - i. To build a strong relationship with the holistic plan for Latin America and the Caribbean because of the global nature of these ministries.

- j. To send a representative to the United Methodist national task force on immigration.
- k. To make an oral report, in addition to a written report, to the 2020 General Conference of The United Methodist Church.

VI. Travel Supplies: A Budget for the 2017-2020 Quadrennium

To achieve all the above goals with the existing organization, we request the 2016 General Conference approve $3,194,226.00 for the continuation of the implementation of the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry during the 2017-2020 quadrennium. This amount will be allocated to Global Ministries in consultation with the National Committee on Hispanic/Latino Ministry. The funds allocated to Global Ministries through the NPHLM, with the exception of those funds designated for the national office, the coordinator, staff, and the National Committee of the NPHLM, shall be used for program initiatives to strengthen and support annual conference and local church ministries with Hispanic/Latino people, according to the priorities and criteria of the NPHLM.

In order to fulfill the work of the NPHLM, a national office shall be continued with one full-time, unencumbered executive staff person, with additional staff as needed and financially possible, administratively placed within Global Ministries under the direction of the National Committee of the NPHLM. The executive shall be selected by the National Committee of the NPHLM in consultation with Global Ministries.

A portion of the program initiatives outlined in the NPHLM shall be delivered through the budgets of the various general program agencies of The UMC and their governing bodies. All funds allocated through the NPHLM shall be designated as separate line items within the general programs of Global Ministries.

We recommend that these funds be allocated to the general program of Global Ministries according to the responsibilities assigned, with final allocation to be determined by the National Committee of the NPHLM in consultation with the General Council of Finance and Administration.

VII. And the Walk Continues: Concluding Remarks

With its dramatic, fast-paced changes and crossroad challenges, the twenty-first century represents for United Methodists another stage in history that puts the faith, values, and convictions of The UMC to the test. It is a time in which we are called to renew our partnership with God on that timeless vision to create a world in which all of The UMC’s members, once transformed by the power of the Holy Spirit, celebrate life in its fullness. We are slowly but steadily moving in that direction, although there is still a long way to go and much work to be done.

We know that trying times await us as we move forward with faith and hope. We know that the thorns and thistles of destructive or cynical criticism will cross our path. The wild beasts of the status quo and the rigid structures and ideologies that oftentimes choke the church, will try to make us quit or go back to where we came from. The scorching heat of the fight in the middle of the desert will make us long for the privileges we once enjoyed in the risk-free walks of institutional comfort. But that past has equally taught us that, as we press forward with hopeful resilience, several oases will appear and hospitable hosts will welcome us with open arms so we can pause to renew our strength. Deep inside we know that we will find healing, shelter, food, water, friendship, and words of encouragement to move on to the next sanctuary, until one day we reach our final destination at the end of the horizon. With your commitment and help we can and will reach the home all of us have longed for!

As we continue to walk together on the road that leads to life, and show compassion to individuals and communities who are hurting or are too weak to walk by themselves (Luke 10:33; cf. 2 Corinthians 1:16), let us remember that only in God's presence is there "fullness of joy" (Psalm 16:11 NRSV). Shoulder to shoulder to defeat the forces of dismay, complacency, and indifference, we can and will meet the challenges that cross our path and take advantage of the opportunities to succeed, always trusting that God's Word is "a lamp" unto our feet and "a light" to our path (Psalm 119:105 NRSV), that only our God can make "a way in the sea" and "a path in the mighty waters" (Isaiah 43:16 NRSV).

Report on the Pacific Islander Ministry Plan

I. Origins and First Quadrennium

At the 2012 General Conference, The United Methodist Church underscored the Wesleyan understanding of the church as a worldwide parish by creating the Pacific Islander Ministry Plan (The Plan), the newest of the five other national ethnic plans marking the diversity of the church in the United States. The Plan's overall goal is that of reaching out to the Pacific Islander communities to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

A. Mission Statement

The mission of The Plan is fourfold:

1. To empower Pacific Islander United Methodists to fully participate in the life of the church and be agents of Christian love and service within the world community.
2. To enable Pacific Islander United Methodists to navigate their faith life in their new surroundings using the gifts that they have brought from their respective island homes and incorporating the necessary and appropriate resources to their new home.
3. To join all members of the church in bringing different and diverse gifts to the table of the Lord and ensure that the church is shaped by all.
4. To affirm the common heritage of Pacific Islanders whose identity is partly anchored in their shared inhabitation of the Pacific Ocean and the diversity of their particular histories, traditions, and languages.

B. Constituencies and Background

As an ethnic initiative, The Plan brings together people from the three distinct groups of Pacific Islanders from:

- Micronesia, including the Marianas, the Carolinas, and the Marshall Islands.
- Melanesia, including Fiji, the Solomon Islands, and Papua New Guinea.
- Polynesia, including, Samoa, Tonga, Tahiti, the Cook Islands, and Hawaii.

At present, Chamorros (originally from the Marianas), Fijians, Samoans, and Tongans comprise more than 75 Pacific Islander UMC congregations and/or ministries, primarily in the Western Jurisdiction of the United States.

According to U.S. census data, Pacific Islanders began entering the U.S. before the 1970s, with the biggest wave of migration occurring in the 2000s. Many of these Pacific Islander immigrants relied on a strong faith, including Methodism, grounded in their cultural context to survive in those new settings. In 1822, the Methodist Church of Australia sent its first missionaries to Tonga. The Methodist Church grew in the Pacific Islands in part because Tongans shared in the evangelization of the rest of the Pacific Islands, work that continues today. Pacific Islanders in the U.S. still find themselves in new settings and seek to make their faith experience relevant and applicable to life in a new country and culture. The strong, interrelated social and cultural network of the Pacific Islands has allowed immigrants to create successful communities of faith that draws on the life experiences of people who are accustomed to living out the practice of mutuality and reciprocity, consistent with biblical teachings.

C. Challenges

Gaps exist, however, between this way of living and the current social realities of today. Common challenges in immigrant societies exist, such as poverty, poor health, gang violence, and lack of education.

The Plan seeks to address these social challenges along with planting and strengthening congregations. Doing so strengthens the Pacific Islander United Methodist faith communities, and enables them to fully utilize their gifts and graces, and thus contribute further to the Church's mandate to make disciples of Jesus Christ to transform the world.

The task of strengthening existing congregations and ministries has cultural implications. As recent immigrants, Pacific Islander United Methodists identify more with their native churches than with The United Methodist Church. The existing ministries were set up in part to help alleviate a sense of alienation that characterizes first-generation immigrants, and as a result, the churches and ministries closely resemble the ministries of their home countries. This approach allows for the transmission of strong spiritual gifts such as stewardship, Wesleyan small-group formation, deep spirituality, and energetic singing and worship.

The Pacific Islander Ministry Plan is a practical ministry that the denomination can use in providing guidance, direction, and nurturing to Pacific Islander ministries. It is a means of self-determination, as it allows Pacific Islanders to name and define the issues and provide meaningful and appropriate strategies for strengthening Pacific Islander ministries.

The task of strengthening the Pacific Islander ministry is not an end product. It is a means of strengthening the full United Methodist connection. Success of the Pacific Islander ministry will be measured by how the church is strengthened by the participation and involvement of Pacific Islanders. Pacific Islanders have a deep sense of loyalty to God that has been instilled by their native surroundings, and affirmed and reaffirmed in their life experiences. Culture and faith have come together to form a strong and resilient foundation that impels them to embrace United Methodism and all its charge. In these challenging times, a vibrant faith and resiliency borne out of a proven way of life are valuable, needed assets for The United Methodist Church. Pacific Islanders in The United Methodist Church have much to receive—and much to give.

D. Current Quadrennial Activities

The Pacific Islander Ministry Plan, organized in 2013, has an executive advisory committee consisting of 10 members who were elected by constituting caucuses, namely Fijian, Samoan, and Tongan. This committee meets once a year to consider and project next steps.

The Plan was launched September 5-7, 2013 at “Catching the Vision,” a convocation in Santa Ana, California, to present it as a mandate program of the General Conference. The theme from scripture was Proverbs 29:18 (KJV): “Where there is no vision, the people perish.” One hundred fifty clergy and laity engaged together in worship, workshops, and planning sessions. These sessions were geared toward interpretation of the goals and objectives of The Plan, showing how The Plan benefits faith communities in five areas of focus: congregational development, leadership development, language resource development, ministry with the poor, and healthy living.

The work of the general agencies and other denominational organizations was reviewed. Other themes were lay-clergy partnership, participation in annual conferences, network building, small-group meetings, stewardship, and alignment of United Methodist and Pacific Islanders’ visions of mission.

Several “visioning” events, often along language/cultural lines, both preceded and followed the Santa Ana convocation. These included “Talanga” (“Let Us Build”) visioning session for the Tongan community in the California-Pacific Annual Conference and training in “Catching the Vision” at the Waimanalo First Tongan United Methodist Church in Hawaii. Training events for each language group took place in collaboration with general agencies, United Methodist Women, and the Racial Ethnic Local Churches (RELC) emphases.

The Plan supported the purchase of language-appropriate worship and education resources, including Fijian Bibles and hymnals at Shoreline United Methodist Church in the Pacific Northwest Annual Conference. It also resourced youth ministries in Sacramento, Palo Alto, Santa Rosa, Hayward, and San Bruno, California, as well as Seattle, Washington. In Hayward, a grant was received to help the youth ministry develop musical leadership for worship; in Seattle, young people received training on how to transport both the elderly and the young to church. In San Bruno, computer training was provided to both youth and adults.

The response to The Plan was overwhelmingly positive among the annual conferences and Pacific Islander congregations. There is a sense of being included and valued. Not every need has been met, but there is a growing sense of partnership within the United Methodist connection that makes it desirable and possible for congregations and ethnic communities to set their priorities within the broad scope of God’s mission through The United Methodist Church.

II. Program and Strategies Proposal for 2017-2020

The following are proposed in six areas for the coming quadrennium, now that The Plan is firmly established.

A. Leadership Development

- 1. Training and Recruitment Events. Twelve events for clergy and laity will be offered to encourage and partner with each caucus (Tongan, Fijian, and Samoan), including such sessions at their annual convocation.
- 2. New Youth Leadership Development. Sponsoring two events for youth and young adult leadership development. The Plan will collaborate with the General Board of Discipleship, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, and others to provide scholarships for the youth and young adults to fully participate.

B. Church Growth

- 1. Four New Faith Communities. These will meet with each caucus clergy to discuss new church development, encouraging pastors to look beyond their current parish to see possibilities for new faith communities near where they are.

- 2. Revitalization of Four Existing Ministries. After consulting with the pastor and district superintendent, The Plan will identify the congregation's needs in areas such as leadership training or worship. The plan will help develop a strategy and will provide assistance for congregational revitalization.
- 3. One Multiracial New Generation Ministry. The Plan will assist the Pacific Islander Youth and Young Adults organization to rally at the national level once a year for the purpose of encouraging leadership development and mission orientation. Youth and young adults will be recruited to participate in events and programs provided by the general agencies throughout The United Methodist Church.

C. Youth and Young Adults Programs

- 1. Leadership Training Events. Ten events will be designed particularly for Pacific Islander communities' youth and young adults in the jurisdictions that have a significant number of Pacific Islanders, these sites to be determined.
- 2. Outreach Programs. The Plan will partner with local congregations to start 10 musical and evangelistic outreach programs designed for youth and young adults in their local churches or cities.
- 3. Grants to Congregations. Ten grants will be made where after-school programs or school tutoring sessions and activities have been developed for youth. These grants can also be applied toward career-training/job-seeking workshops for young adults.

D. Ministries with the Poor

- 1. Community Outreach Development. The Plan will provide three grants, one for each language group, and will choose the best proposal from the churches on organizing a community outreach program.

E. Development of Language Resources

- 1. Multimedia Resources. The Plan will encourage and assist congregations to develop and maintain a professional website that will introduce their faith communities and activities.
- 2. Study and Training Materials. The Plan will assist congregations in purchasing materials for Sunday school, music for worship, children's Bible stories, and worksheets for Christian education.
- 3. Creativity Awards. The Plan will give out ten awards for creativity in writing songs for worship.

F. Healthy Living Promotion & Education

- 1. Resource Development. The Plan will consult with the Global Health unit of Global Ministries on suitable programs and projects. It will develop (for language purposes), or assist the congregations to obtain, resources on the following subjects: healthy eating; food and nutrition education; and chronic illness, including hypertension, diabetes, oral health, mental health awareness, domestic violence, and elderly care.

III. Recommendation: The Budget Request for 2017-2020

We request the World Service Fund allocate to the Pacific Islander Ministry Plan for 2017-2020 the sum of $543,544. This investment will have a lasting impact on the Pacific Islanders community for the kingdom of God, and a lasting impact on The United Methodist Church as a force for making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

United Methodist Global Aids Fund Report 2013-2016

“I’ve shared about Prevention of Mother to Child Transmission (PMTCT) with my husband, my housemaid, my close friends, our congregation, and, finally, I’ve met four pregnant women who are now all registered at the hospital for Prenatal Care, which means they’ll receive HIV screening and treatment.”

—Mrs. Merlyn, The Christian AIDS/HIV National Alliance (CANA), New Delhi, India, UMGAF-funded project.

For United Methodists, combating HIV and AIDS remains a high priority as the church addresses diseases of poverty by improving health globally. With over 35 million people infected with HIV and millions more becoming infected each year, the church is called to be in the forefront of the struggle to improve education, prevention, care, and treatment.

HIV and AIDS particularly impact the poor of the world. Only 38 percent receive life-giving antiretroviral drugs. Far more persons die yearly from HIV than malaria or tuberculosis.

In the United States, AIDS rates are increasing in African American women, Latinas, the elderly, as well as those using intravenous drugs.

Of the 35 million plus persons infected globally, almost 50 percent are women. In sub-Saharan Africa, 58 percent are women. Though medicine exists to stop mother-to-child transmission, some 240,000 children are born each year HIV positive.

Just Save ONE

UMGAF is a global health initiative of The United Methodist Church. This quadrennium the interagency United Methodist Global AIDS Fund (UMGAF) Committee adopted the slogan “Just Save One,” emphasizing the importance particularly of helping a child to be born free of HIV. Because grant funds have been limited due to the church having other priorities, the committee has focused primarily on supporting church projects in Africa and Asia that have sought to stop mother-to-child transmission. Each day approximately nine hundred babies are born with HIV—something completely preventable if the mother has access to HIV testing and treatment. Thirty-eight percent of women who are pregnant do not have access to AIDS medications.

History

The UMGAF was created in 2004 by the General Conference and serves as an educational, advocacy, and grant-making initiative of The United Methodist Church. It is an Advance Special (Advance #982345) governed by an interagency committee comprised of representatives from the Council of Bishops, General Board of Global Ministries, General Board of Church and Society, General Commission on Communications, United Methodist Women, Division on Ministries with Young People, and Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships, along with six at-large persons not affiliated with these agencies. The committee meets twice each year. Each agency contributes time and resources to support the work of UMGAF for which we are very grateful.

During each meeting, the committee takes the opportunity to listen to the voices of people living with AIDS and agencies addressing the epidemic in the respective cities where the committee meets. These conversations have greatly enriched and informed our work as we partner with annual conferences around the globe and other Methodist-related programs.

Successful Efforts

- UMGAF has raised over $3.5 million in funds. This money has been distributed to 284 projects in 44 countries. Applications are made through UMCOR and are evaluated methodically and regularly for effectiveness. To find a world map with the locations of all our grants, go to: www.umglobalaidsfund.com, “Resources.”
- Twenty-five percent of all contributions made through local churches for UMGAF remain in the respective annual conferences for AIDS projects. To see a listing of annual conferences and their activities, go to www.umglobalaidsfund.com and click on “Resources.”
- Special educational conferences on HIV and AIDS this quadrennium have been held for Native American youth and Latina leaders. These events increased knowledge of the AIDS epidemic and ways to prevent its spread. Participants developed their own action plans to take back to their local churches and annual conferences.
- In 2014, an HIV conference focused on the United States was held in Denver, Colorado, which provided educational opportunities for 125 attendees including a specific track for 31 annual conference representatives who received intensive training on how to educate persons in their respective annual conferences about HIV and AIDS.
- In 2016, an international AIDS conference preceded General Conference in Portland, Oregon, which focused on the current critical issues requiring action.
- In 2015, UMGAF sponsored the East Africa Methodist AIDS Summit for pastors and lay leaders in Nairobi, Kenya, in partnership with the Methodist Church of Kenya.
- Upper Room “Prayers of Encouragement” for persons living with HIV and AIDS have been distributed free to over 750,000 persons. More than twenty different language translations exist; new editions have been published in the Philippines (Ilokano and Tagalog), Rwanda (Kinyarwanda), and an interfaith version in India (Hindi and Tamil). Electronic versions were provided during the Ebola crisis in Liberia and Sierra Leone.
- Resources for local churches were produced and distributed to help people in congregations become more aware of the AIDS crisis and how to respond. Such resources include an Advent Study and World AIDS Day information.

- An AIDS Network of 2,500 AIDS Ambassadors is maintained by the General Board of Church and Society working in close partnership with UMGAF. Periodic newsletters are sent to the AIDS Ambassadors containing information about UMGAF projects, resources, and announcements about upcoming events.
- Three persons received the AIDS Ambassador Award during the 2014 UMGAF Conference held in Denver, Colorado. Dr. Cheryl Anderson, Professor of Old Testament at Garrett Evangelical Theological Seminary; Rev. Ernie Turney, Pastor of Bering UMC in Texas; and Patricia Magyar, longtime UMGAF Committee member and Executive Secretary, Domestic Health at GBGM.

Challenges

- Having individuals, local churches, and conferences eradicate HIV stigma and discrimination by becoming involved locally in programs and advocacy initiatives.
- Developing educational seminars in West Africa, Philippines, and for African Americans in the United States.
- Financially supporting UMGAF (Advance #982345). Checks from a local church will go to the Conference Treasurer and 25 percent will remain in the annual conference for special AIDS projects. Or online contributions can go directly via www.umglobalaidsfund.com.
- Funding unmet needs and proposals from around the world.
- Changing realities and perceptions of AIDS. In developed nations, such as the United States, AIDS is now considered a manageable, chronic disease due to the availability of treatment. However, in countries with high poverty rates and harmful cultural practices (such as child marriage, lack of rights for women, and homophobia), people contracting HIV and AIDS have a diminished chance for survival. Moving people in rich nations beyond apathy to a place where all God's people deserve access to treatment and care is a significant challenge for UMGAF.

What Limits United Methodist Outreach

Because the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund is not supported by apportionment dollars, the work of the committee is limited to operating funds provided by the Connectional Table. It means that both fund-raising and grant-making within the denomination are also limited.

If United Methodists truly want global health to be one of the four priorities of the church, more funds need to be invested to addressing HIV and AIDS. Every year our churches around the world are asking for help in their grassroots HIV ministries, but we do not have funds to distribute to these worthy ministries.

HIV and AIDS are not over yet—in fact, the quadrennium ahead is critical if we are to begin to make the world AIDS-free. Please join us by becoming an AIDS Ambassador and mobilizing support in your local church and annual conference.

Jurisdictional VIM Coordinator

Add ¶ 538 in the Jurisdictional Conference section, following ¶ 537 about the Committee on United Methodist Men.

United Methodist Volunteers in Mission—

There shall be a jurisdictional volunteer-in-mission (UMVIM) coordinator for the purpose of coordination of volunteers, in collaboration with annual conference UMVIM and Disaster Response Coordinators within their jurisdiction and the Global Ministries Mission Volunteer Office. The jurisdictional coordinator will network to coordinate opportunities and resources for volunteers in collaboration with the General Board of Global Ministries and other UMC agencies as requested. The Jurisdictional UMVIM Coordinator will communicate the need for Early Response Teams within their region in collaboration with UMCOR.

Rationale:

The Jurisdictional UMVIM Coordinators maintain the International, USA, and Youth project lists for the denomination; as well as, network with the annual Conference UMVIM coordinators to provide resources for training team leaders. The current jurisdictional role in the SCJ is as the UMVIM and Disaster Response Coordinator. The NCJ and . . .

District Case Manager

Amend ¶ 633.4 b) 22 by adding the following:

(22) To appoint ... Annual conference and district disaster response coordinators shall receive training at least once a quadrennium. In addition, at least once a quadrennium, a person from each district of every Annual Conference shall be trained in “case management” by the staff of UMCOR.

Rationale:

In times of disasters, UMCOR usually provides training for “case managers” to facilitate long term recovery. A person already trained would provide immediate help.

Relationship to UMW

Add New ¶ immediately following current ¶ 1311 as follows:

Relationship to the United Methodist Women—The board shall elect three of its directors to serve as members of the United Methodist Women Program Advisory Group.

Rationale:

This new paragraph that should follow ¶ 1311 corresponds to a UMW petition to amend UMW ¶ 1328 that provides for election of three Global Ministries Directors to serve on the UMW Program Advisory Group, thus continuing that programmatic link between the two agencies.

Missionary Standards

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 1309 by adding a new sub-paragraph 3 as follows:

¶1309. Personnel Policies—1. ...

2. ...

3. Missionary Standards—For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel, and in consideration of the influence of United Methodist missionaries on the lives of other persons both within and outside the Church, the Church expects its missionaries to make a complete dedication of themselves to the highest ideals of the Christian life. To this end, all new individuals approved by the General Board of Global Ministries after January 1, 2018 for full-time missionary service directly financially supported by the board shall agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationships, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and in the knowledge and love of God.

Rationale:

Even if they are laity, the work and personal example of our missionaries matters for our church's mission and witness. Those GBGM sends around the world to be ambassadors for Jesus Christ should be expressly committed to the same basic standards of Christian living as our clergy (Paragraph 304.2).

Petition Number: 60300-GM-¶1311; Kemper, Thomas - New York, NY, USA for General Board of Global Ministries.

UMW Directors Serving on GBGM

Amend ¶ 1311.2, and 1311.4 as follows:

2. ~~United Methodist Women's membership procedures are described in ¶¶705.3a and 1323. Members of United Methodist Women who are members of the board shall also serve on the membership of the board's other units and committees. The United Methodist Women shall~~ elect three members of its board of directors to serve as directors of the General Board of Global Ministries with voice and without vote.

4. Members of the board shall be distributed across the component units and standing committees in accordance with the board's bylaws. The members elected by the United Methodist Women shall serve on the program committees of the board with voice and without vote.

Rationale:

Per agreement with UMW, amended ¶ 1311.2 guarantees UMW three non-voting members on the Global Ministries Board. (See also UMW petition amending UMW ¶ 1327). Sentences deleted from ¶ 1311.2: first deletion belongs in the UMW section BOD; second deletion is being replaced by new sentence added to ¶ 1311.4.

¶1311.5.

Petition Number: 60292-GM-¶1311.5-G; Kemper, Thomas - New York, NY, USA for General Board of Global Ministries.

Term of CC Members (Except Bishops) of GBGM

Amend ¶ 1311.5 as follows:

a) Except as provided below in subparagraph 1311.5b), the ~~The~~ term of office of all members whose election is provided for in this paragraph shall begin and the board shall organize at a meeting to be held within ninety days after the adjournment of the last meeting of the several jurisdictional conferences held after the adjournment of the General Conference.

b) The term of office of each basic member elected by the central conferences shall begin immediately following the central conference meeting at which he or she was elected to the board. The term of office of any additional members nominated by the central conferences shall begin at the board meeting at which he or she is elected in accordance with the bylaws. Unless otherwise specified in the Discipline or the board's bylaws, the term of office of each member whose election is provided for in this paragraph shall end when his/her successor takes office as provided for in this paragraph.

Rationale:

The exception created by subparagraph b) of ¶ 1311.5 provides for orderly selection and succession of central conference board members (not bishops) to Global Ministries that accounts for the fact that central conferences typically are not able to meet and choose board members until much later than the jurisdictions.

Increase Number of Bishops Serving on GBGM

Amend ¶ 1311.6 as follows:

6. On nomination of the Council of Bishops, the General Conference shall elect ~~two~~ three bishops from the five jurisdictions and ~~one two central conference~~ two of the three central conference regions (Africa, Europe, Philippines) to the board. Each jurisdiction and each central conference region (~~Africa, Europe, Philippines~~) shall have representation from this category on the board at least once within a three-quadrannia period. Except as provided in the preceding sentence ~~¶1311.5~~, bishops shall not be permitted to serve as members of the board.

Rationale:

¶1311.6 requires the rotation of bishops from each jurisdiction and central conference region (Africa, Europe and Philippines) every three quadrannia. To meet this requirement while allowing for the possibility of bishops to serve for more than one quadrannium (providing continuity in the board membership), it is necessary to have a . . .

Add new sub-paragraph 1313.5, as follows:

5. Global Health

a) Engaging in, supporting, facilitating, advocating, and partnering with others (including UM organizations and ecumenical, interfaith, and secular organizations, as appropriate) to provide global and local health ministries that, in the spirit of Jesus Christ, foster abundant health for all, including holistic physical, mental and spiritual well-being, regardless of religion, nationality, culture, race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, or physical or mental disability.

b) Combating preventable diseases of poverty and supporting comprehensive community-based health care.

c) Convening, mobilizing, resourcing, and equipping United Methodists to engage in, support, and advocate holistic health ministries, locally and globally.

d) Encouraging awareness of the gifts, graces, assets, and needs of persons with special physical, mental, and other developmental needs, fostering a culture of inclusivity within The United Methodist Church as a place where people with special needs will be embraced in all aspects of worship, leadership, and ministry.

e) Encouraging and supporting congregations to respond effectively and compassionately to those affected by substance abuse and related violence.

Budget implications are included in Global Ministries' budget submitted to GCFA.

Rationale:

New subparagraph 1313.5 updates and replaces health and welfare provisions that are being deleted from Paragraph 1330 and being consolidated into a new Global Health program area. Budget implications are included in Global Ministries' budget submitted to GCFA.

and secular coalitions. The General Board of Global Ministries will maintain its special consultative status with the United Nations and its collaboration with United Methodist Women and the General Board of Church and Society through the United Methodist Office at the Church Center for the UN.

Rationale:

One of the ways Global Ministries engages in connectional and ecumenical relationships is through its Special Consultative Status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council, and its Affiliate Status with the United Nations Department of Information. The sentence added to ¶1312.2 explicitly recognizes Global Ministries' UN status and connection . . .

Rationale:

As seen on its website, www.endtheoccupation.org, this group encourages "comprehensive divestment" against Israel (far more radical a step than proposals already rejected by the UMC), seeks "to isolate Israel economically, socially, and culturally," expresses little concern for the genocidal hatred and ongoing violence by anti-Israel terrorists.

Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean

MARCHA (Methodist Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic/Latino Americans) petitions 2016 General Conference to continue the Holistic Strategy on Latin American and the Caribbean Special Program into the next quadrennium (2016-2020), as outlined in ¶ 703.10 of the Book of Discipline: "A special program is a quadrennial emphasis initiated by a general program-related agency in accordance with ¶ 905.1, .2, and .4, approved by General Conference and assigned to a general program-related agency. The program shall be designed in response to a distinct opportunity or need in God's world that is evidenced by research or other supporting data and shall propose achievable goals within the quadrennium."

The Holistic Strategy on Latin American and the Caribbean Special Program will continue to be coordinated by the General Board of Global Ministries (GBGM), in collaboration with several agencies, with funding provided through the participating agencies through their quadrennial budgets.

As it was approved last quadrennium, the Holistic Strategy on Latin American and the Caribbean Coordinating Group will continue to meet regularly under the coordination of the General Board of Global Ministries. The Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean Special Program will be granted administrative funding at the level of $30,000 to facilitate the participation of the representatives from Latin America and the Caribbean.

The asking of $30,000 will partially cover the expenses of the seven representatives of the partner churches in Latin America and the Caribbean. The expenses of the representatives of the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church and United Methodist general agencies will be covered by the council and the agencies respectively.

There will be at least one face-to-face annual meeting. There will be additional meetings during the quadrennium via telephone/web. The average amount allocated for each of the seven persons traveling from Latin America and the Caribbean for airfare accommodations and meals will be $1,000 per meeting for a total of $7,000 annually and $28,000 for the quadrennium. Other meeting-related expenses, such as printing, meeting room expenses, etc. are estimated to be approximately $500 per meeting; a total of $2,000 for the quadrennium.

The description of the special programs follows:

Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean Special Program 2016-2020

Come, you that are blessed . . . inherit the kingdom . . . for I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you welcomed me, I was naked and you gave me clothing, I was sick and you took care of me, I was in prison and you visited me. (Matthew 25:34-36)

Statement on Latin America and the Caribbean

MARCHA (Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic/Latino Americans) calls upon The United Methodist Church to pay close attention to the critical needs in the Latin America and the Caribbean region and to respond to the missional opportunities that are present there. The United Methodist Church should continue to include in its top priorities missional programs that respond to the continued high number of persons living in chronic poverty in the region, with women and children being the most affected. Despite the social and economic progress in many countries in Latin America and the Caribbean this need continues to be critical.

Missional Opportunities

Evangelization:

Methodist churches in twenty countries and the Methodist Church in the Caribbean and the Americas (MCCA), knit together in mission through the Council of Evangelical Methodist Churches of Latin America and the Caribbean (CIEMAL), are reaching out through new initiatives in evangelization, with significant church growth being experienced in many communities, and with renewed commitment to their Wesleyan heritage of witness with and on behalf of the poor and the oppressed. The United Methodist Mission in Honduras continues to be developed by the General Board of Global Ministries (GBGM). Methodist Churches in Colombia, El Salvador, Nicaragua, and Venezuela also continued to develop in work under the auspices of CIEMAL with support of GBGM. Church growth would be enhanced if additional resources are provided. Furthermore, the constant migration south to north and south to south, as well as high deportation rates from the US, open new opportunities for evangelistic outreach for Hispanic/Latino Ministries in the United States and in the Latin American and Caribbean countries. A coordinated effort between the UMC and CIEMAL should enhance our evangelistic outreach and strengthen our witness both in the US and in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Prophetic Voice and Accompaniment:

The different crises in Latin America and the Caribbean require the prophetic presence of the church helping the people to keep the faith and to seek solutions that would be fair to all. The churches in the region, within their limited resources, are responding to the more immediate needs. They also continue to advocate for justice and the preservation of human rights. The deep and complex relationships between the United States and the different countries in the Latin America and the Caribbean region demand a closer working relationship between the churches in the United States with the churches in the Caribbean and Latin America to amplify the effectiveness of our prophetic witness.

Poverty:

The Methodist Churches in collaboration with CIEMAL are engaged in innovative ministries addressing the persistent level of chronic poverty in the region. A study of the World Bank revealed that “one in four Latin Americans today remain poor.” Those who experience shocks that cause them to fall temporarily into poverty are said to be the “transitory poor.” However, many people are born into poverty and never escape their poverty status: these are the “chronic poor.” The chronic poor have not benefitted much from the impressive growth rates of the 2000s and may have fallen into the cracks of the social assistance system; they have been left behind. Furthermore, the prospects of them escaping poverty in the near future are weak (Left Behind: Chronic Poverty in Latin America and the Caribbean Overview, Vakis, Rigolini, and Lucchetti, World Bank, 2015). These ministries should be strengthened and expanded due to their importance and for the witness of the Methodist tradition that they represent in the region.

Children and Child Labor:

Children between the ages of five and thirteen continue to work long hours each day to assist in the survival of their families if they have one, or just to feed themselves. Many are not able to go to school and are being exploited in many ways including prostitution. A majority is suffering from malnutrition and has no, or very limited access to health care facilities. The Methodist Churches have a tradition to minister to children at risk and have initiated programs to provide support to the children and their families through after school, education, and nutrition programs. These programs continue to need the support of The United Methodist Church.

Political and Economic Changes:

The changing political and economical context in Latin America and the Caribbean offers an extraordinary opportunity for ministry in the region. Democratic governments that promote social policies that intend to favor the poor and indigenous populations have been elected. Yet, the implementation of policies that favor the economic powers by even some of the same governments, have generated an increased gap between the rich and the poor in the region. The financial havoc, the failure of political systems to respond to the needs of the people, and the growing violence are producing a significant rise in migration. Border issues throughout the region, including the United States are becoming more critical. The churches are asked to be in partnership with the poor and indigenous to fortify the democratic changes and demand just economic and social practices.

Afro-Latin, Afro-Caribbean, and Indigenous Peoples:

According to the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank statistics, of the 502 million people who live in Latin America and the Caribbean, 120 million are of African descent and 40 million are indigenous people. These two groups constitute the majority of the poor in the region. They have less access to formal education, health care, and other social services, while encountering greater discrimination based on race/color in accessing basic institutions, including the justice system.

Migration:

The vulnerable communities affected by the situations listed above continue to be forced to migrate in search of better living conditions. Many embark into perilous journeys toward regions of better economic opportunities in the whole continent or in search of safety from the violence in their communities. The Methodist churches are engaged in ministries serving those communities affected by migration, migrants who are in the journey, sojourners who have reached a distant land, and returned migrants who have been deported. This challenging situation affects all the countries in the region, including the United States. The United Methodist Church is called to be in solidarity with the migrants, with the communities that are affected by migration and with the churches that are witnessing and ministering to migrants.

Education/Leadership Development:

Leadership development is a must within the churches if they are to respond in the name of Christ to the aforementioned needs. There are many persons and church leaders with a good theological education; but, unfortunately, most of the pastors in the emerging churches or those serving rural areas have no formal theological education. The United Methodist Church should assist in the formation of persons in this region to enable them to serve their churches and countries more effectively in different fields. A major concern for the emerging churches is the lack of opportunities and resources for training new pastors in Methodist Studies.

Implications

There is a long list of indicators of the need for attention and assistance. Those named above, without even mentioning the growing problem of violence in Colombia, Mexico, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala, and in other countries, are sufficient to show that the Caribbean and Latin American region needs urgent attention. The changing economic and political contexts increase the demand for social assistance from the churches in the Latin America and the Caribbean region. Regretfully, many churches are suffering financial crises themselves due to the impoverishment of their membership.

The Call

There is an urgent need for a continued coordinated strategy within The United Methodist Church in collaboration with CIEMAL, the MCCA, and other Methodist churches and ecumenical organizations in the Latin America/Caribbean region. We affirm the beginning implementation of the Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean during the quadrennium 2008-2012. This provided a fruitful dialogue that addressed in a significant manner the increased needs of the region. We call upon the program agencies of The United Methodist Church to continue their support of ministries responding to the deteriorating social conditions of the growing number of the population who live in severe poverty.

We call upon GBGM to continue the implementation of the Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean in partnership with CIEMAL, and invite the General Agencies and MARCHA to attend the meetings of the Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean Committee. We call on the General Conference to request that the Holistic Strategy for Latin America and the Caribbean Coordinating Group report to the Connectional Table.

We call upon the General Board of Church and Society (GBCS) to advocate in the US Congress to obtain a financial aid package for the Latin American and Caribbean countries in financial crisis without compromising their sovereignty or undermining their responsibility to provide for the needy in their midst. Measures of structural adjustment imposed by international creditors continue to increase the suffering of the poor. Countries are not able to pay their external debt and provide services urgently needed by the population. GBCS should continue its advocacy for debt relief, including education of the UMC constituency regarding these issues.

We call upon GBGM, Discipleship Ministries, and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministries to seek ways to undergird effectively the ministries of the continually developing Methodist churches in Colombia, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Venezuela. The relatively new churches are in great need of opportunities for leadership development. We ask these agencies in collaboration with the Council of Bishops to call for an event where representatives of the annual conferences doing work in different parts of the Caribbean and Latin America and other interested persons could share experiences and coordinate strategies to increase the overall level of support and enable local churches in the United States to grow by being directly involved in mission.

We call upon United Methodist Communications (UMCom) to provide more coverage to the news coming out of church sources in the Caribbean and Latin America and to help in the mission education of United Methodists by informing them of the mission realities in the region.

We call upon all annual conferences and individual United Methodists to pray for and support the development of church programs in the Latin America and the Caribbean region. We are grateful for all the persons who have sent their contributions to the permanent fund Encounter with Christ in Latin America and the Caribbean (GBGM Fund 025100), contributed to the Advance, or joined Volunteers in Mission (VIM) teams or other mission teams to be in ministry in the region. These forms of collaboration need to be increased and new ones established in response to the needs of the region.

Proposed Implementation of the Holistic Strategy on Latin America and the Caribbean

The Holistic Strategy for Latin America and the Caribbean coordinating group will meet once a year, and when feasible, in conjunction with the meetings of the Board of Directors of CIEMAL (Council of Evangelical Methodist Churches of Latin America and the Caribbean) and including specific representation from MCCA (Methodist Church of the Caribbean and the Americas) and MARCHA (Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of the Hispanic/Latino American). The expenses for the participation of the representatives of The United Methodist Church will be covered by the respective sending agencies. The expense for an additional day of the meetings of the Board of Directors of CIEMAL and for the participation of MARCHA will be covered by The United Methodist Church, through funding allocated by General Conference through the General Board of Global Ministries.

3104. Church and Community Workers

WHEREAS, current social and economic needs across the USA continue to call upon the church for attention and action in accordance with Christ's teachings; and

~~WHEREAS, financial undergirding of human service programs by the public sector on all levels has failed to meet the needs of people; and~~

WHEREAS, developing contacts and linkages between local church/cooperative ministries and community groups is key to the understanding of and response to human hurt and need and responding to justice issues and is a primary strength of the church and community ministry program; and

WHEREAS, ~~for many decades church~~ over half a century church and community workers have worked effectively in mission outreach with The United Methodist Church in town and rural, urban, and specialized settings; and

WHEREAS, the goals of Church and Community Ministry programs are closely aligned with the four mission initiatives of The United Methodist Church; and

~~WHEREAS, church and community workers are the only cadre~~ an effective cadre of missionaries serving within the bounds of the USA who are employed and assigned by the General Board of Global Ministries;

Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Board of Global Ministries continue to recruit, enlist, train, and deploy church and community workers and provide joint funding with other partners; and

Be it further resolved, that the funding partnership continue between the local area, annual conference, and the General Board of Global Ministries in order to place church and community workers in economically depressed areas ~~where they are desperately needed.~~

Rationale:

Two Resolutions supporting Church and Community Workers are not needed so by deleting 3105 and then updating 3104 to include elements contained in the old 3105 we have a better resolution describing Church and Community Workers a vital mission cadre of missionaries in The United Methodist Church.

WHEREAS, mission personnel in the United States, which includes church and community workers, global mission fellows, ~~US-2, mission interns, summer interns~~, community developers, rural chaplains, lay missionaries, and others, have faithfully and effectively enabled The United Methodist Church to facilitate mission and ministry across the United States in ~~settings often neglected and overlooked by others~~ impoverished and oppressive settings; and

~~WHEREAS, for many people in the United States, life is becoming increasingly difficult, with the basic necessities of food, shelter, health care, job and educational opportunities, childcare, and transportation required for daily survival often being beyond reach; and~~

WHEREAS, God continues to hear the cries of the oppressed, impoverished, and neglected people; and

WHEREAS, God continues to call persons to offer themselves for service with the poor to provide both compassionate care and personal empowerment; and

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church, with its unique Wesleyan traditions of identity and advocacy with the poor and its historical focus on social issues and human development, is challenged by God to be radically attentive and responsive to marginalized and dispossessed people and to bear responsibility for keeping their plight before the total church and world community; and

WHEREAS, mission personnel in the United States provide leadership vital to initiate and maintain cooperative ministries, including communities of shalom and missionary programs and other efforts that focus attention on the needs of women, children, youth, racial and ethnic populations, the aging and people with disabilities in both rural and urban areas;

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church reaffirm its commitment to impoverished people and oppressed communities in the United States by creating and maintaining among its highest levels of priority the recruitment, training, and placement of mission personnel in the United States who can offer Christ and enable people, churches, and communities to move beyond their present circumstances to participate in healthy, whole communities;

United Methodist Global AIDS Fund

United Methodist Global AIDS Fund

“Come to me, all you who are struggling hard and carrying heavy burdens, and I will give you rest.” Matthew 11:28 (CEB)

~~WHEREAS, For almost over thirty years the General Conference of The United Methodist Church has spoken with prophetic compassion to the global issues of HIV/AIDS HIV & AIDS. Our resolutions, however, have not always been matched by a resolve to commit significant financial and denominational resources in the struggle for education, prevention, treatment and care in the world-wide struggle against HIV/AIDS; and WHEREAS,~~

The United Nations has declared the AIDS pandemic a “global emergency,” saying human life is threatened everywhere and world security is at risk as the planet faces the worst health crisis in 700 years; and WHEREAS, with 33 million people infected, more than 25 million already deceased,

According to the World Health Organization since the beginning of the epidemic, almost 78 million people have been infected with the HIV virus and about 39 million people have died of HIV. Globally, 37 million people are living with HIV or AIDS. and Approximately 7,500 people are new-infectioneds daily with including 900 babies born with HIV, which is completely preventable with access to testing and anti-retroviral drugs. the leaders of all the nations in the world unanimously asked faith-based organizations to join them in the battle to save human life; and

WHEREAS, The 2004 General Conference established the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund (UMGAF) (UMCOR Advance #982345), and the 2008 and 2012 General Conferences reaffirmed this global ~~health initiative. that By 20105 UMGAF had funded, in partnership with the General Board of Global Ministries, 175 287 church-oriented and Christ-centered HIV/AIDS HIV & AIDS projects in 37 44 countries plus scores of annual conference AIDS projects. UMGAF facilitates ongoing educational efforts to equip hundreds of United Methodists to respond to the AIDS crisis locally and globally. Advocacy for prevention, care, and treatment has been a consistent focus of UMGAF since 2004 through its partnership with the General Board of Church and Society, which administers the AIDS Network in The United Methodist Church. and~~

~~WHEREAS, to date the response of Christians, including United Methodists, has been minimal, particularly in comparison to our resources and other commitments; and~~

~~WHEREAS, the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund Committee has launched an on-going campaign called “20/20: Visioning An AIDS-Free World;”~~

The face of AIDS is changing in the world. More persons have access to life-saving drugs, which is reducing the number of overall deaths. But stigma inflicted by the Church and society keeps people from being tested and treated. UMGAF is the official entity in The United Methodist Church addressing these concerns as it works and prays for an AIDS-free world.

~~Therefore, be it resolved, that the 2012 General Conference recommits itself to the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund (UMGAF).~~

Be it further resolved, that Of the total money raised in each annual conference for UMGAF, 25 percent shall be retained by the annual conference that raised it, to be used in for programs combating HIV/AIDS HIV & AIDS in their region and/or in other global connectional projects. Each annual conference shall designate an appropriate agency for the promotion and distribution of these funds.

~~Be it further resolved, that Also, of the total money raised in each annual conference for the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund, 75 percent shall be remitted by the conference treasurer to the Advance office at the General Board of Global Ministries for by UMCOR for distribution to global projects in consultation with GBGM staff and the interagency United Methodist Global AIDS Fund Committee. UMGAF is governed by a The ten-member committee will be comprised of one representative each from the General Board of Global Ministries, Council of Bishops, General Board of Church and Society, Division on Ministries with Young People, General Commission Office of on-Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships Concerns, United Methodist Women and General Commission on Communications, and four three persons~~ who are not serving on any of these agencies chosen by the committee for expertise and diversity. UMGAF is staffed by the volunteer committee as well as consultants. In order to ensure United Methodist HIV and AIDS ministries, operational and programmatic funds for the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund Committee will be provided either by a special apportionment or contingency funds of The United Methodist Church.

~~Be it further resolved, that~~ The United Methodist Global AIDS Fund Committee will faithfully . . .

1. assist local congregations and conferences in identifying and creating global partnerships for mutual ~~HHV/AIDS~~ HIV & AIDS ministry;
2. provide support for projects sponsored by local congregations or organizations related to The United Methodist Church, partner autonomous Methodist churches and the ecumenical church;
3. encourage partnerships between congregations and conferences in the United States and Methodist congregations and ecumenical organizations globally that are engaged in the struggle against ~~HHV/AIDS~~ HIV & AIDS;
4. advocate for social justice, particularly related to decreasing stigma and increasing governmental and non-governmental funding for ~~HHV/AIDS~~ HIV & AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria;
5. develop appropriate promotional materials and funding guidelines;
6. resource United Methodists through training and networking opportunities; and
7. ~~seek funding for Committee operations from various sources.~~ explore ways to ensure sustainability both fiscally and programmatically through intentional coordination and collaboration with the global health efforts at the general church level.

APPENDIX

Amended Resolution #3244 Submitted by the United Methodist Global AIDS Fund

Request for Funding in the Amount of: $240,000 for the 2016-2020 quadrennium

Rationale: The UMC Global Aids Fund (UMGAF) historically has been fiscally supported by the Connec-tional Table as an unfunded mandate. UMGAF is seeking apportionment funding that will enable continued imple-mentation of its General Conference mandate to educate United Methodists to respond to the AIDS crisis and fund critically needed projects worldwide. (Please reference our report in the ADCA)

In the past, UMGAF counted on general agency staff to care for the preponderance of administrative and fund-raising responsibilities. An emerging reality is the down-sizing and/or restructuring of some of the general agen-cies, which has resulted in UMGAF’s staffing capacity being diminished.

Our request to the General Conference is, in part, for funds to build our capacity both administratively and pro-grammatically. The amount of administrative oversight required for this initiative is considerably greater than the volunteer members can maintain.

Although HIV and AIDS are considered “manage-able” diseases in the developed nations, millions of peo-ple in poor countries, primarily in Africa and Asia, lack access to education, testing, health care, and anti-retro-viral medications. Stigma and discrimination are reali-ties endured by millions of people living with AIDS. The UMGAF is committed to funding projects that address these concerns.

Since 2004 UMGAF has raised approximately $3.5 million for 287 projects in 44 countries around the globe that are saving lives and bringing hope to thousands of God’s people. Most of our grants have been $10,000 or less. Due to existing unmet needs and a desire to create an AIDS-free world, UMGAF proposes increasing its ca-pacity to mobilize financial support. In this proposal we are requesting funding for a dedicated, part-time Develop-ment Consultant. With increased revenue, UMGAF will be able to award larger grants and more renewals for effective projects. To facilitate this process, UMGAF is exploring an expanded relationship with GBGM’s global health unit to fund projects that not only address HIV & AIDS, but also maternal and child health, malaria and other health-related initiatives that are evidence-based, effectively monitored and evaluated, and have measurable impacts.

The UMC continues its longstanding commitment to the rights and dignity of all workers. The educational and advocacy work called for in the resolution takes place primarily through participation in ecumenical and interfaith partnerships. Given these existing networks, there is no longer a need for a distinct task force.

Global Migration and the Quest for Justice

Amend and Readopt Resolution 6028 as follows:

6028. Global Migration and the Quest for Justice

"Ways must be found to share more equitably the resources of the world."

—Social Principles, ¶ 163E, The United Methodist Church

Global Migration is a historical and current concern of The United Methodist Church, addressed in the Social Principles and frequently by General Conference action. ~~has frequently addressed general and specific topics related to migration.~~ The Social Principles affirm frame the issue in theological and humanitarian contexts:

1. "We commit ourselves as a Church to the achievement of a world community that is a fellowship of persons who honestly love one another. We pledge ourselves to seek the meaning of the gospel in all issues that divide people and threaten the growth of world community" (§ 165).

2. "In order to provide basic needs such as food, clothing, shelter, education, health care, and other necessities, ways must be found to share more equitably the resources of the world" (§ 163E).

3. "We advocate for the rights of all migrants and applaud their efforts toward responsible self-organization and self-determination" (§ 163F, 2004 Book of Discipline).

I. Introduction

Human migration is as old as human history. Individuals, families, tribes, and nations have been on the move since the days of Abraham and Sarah and before. Throughout the centuries, political and economic factors, including wars; health and environmental challenges; and racism, xenophobia, and religious discrimination have at times uprooted people and at others lured them to new venues across ~~continents and oceans as well as national and ethnic boundaries~~; deserts, rivers, continents, oceans, and national and ethnic boundaries.

Today, migration is ~~at once~~ a critical international issue and ~~at times~~ a pressing national issue ~~and a necessary option~~; a matter of last resort and no other choice for millions of human beings, and a desperate alternative to many who would rather stay where they are if conditions could permit safety and essentials for survival. In general terms, migrants today are those who by force or choice leave their regions of origin because of armed conflict, natural disaster, institutional or gang violence, development projects, human trafficking (including labor, sexual or drug trafficking) or extreme economic deprivation. ~~Some people seek to move; others have no alternatives~~. Contemporary migration involves the linked realities of abundance and poverty and racial/ethnic/religious identities and exclusion. It often reflects a global system that ~~The current global economic system reflects an expectation that expects~~ many people ~~will to~~ live in poverty, or have their nations torn by conflict, or their natural resources exploited, so that others may live in abundance. That many people will resist poverty and war through migration is an ancient and modern fact of human existence. As a consequence, elaborate national and international systems of containment and classification based on national origin have been developed over the past quarter-century with regard to migrants (see below).

Global migration as a factor in the quest for justice is ~~of major concern to~~ a major priority of The United Methodist Church as a denomination that is global in its vision, mission, and ministries. This concern is rooted in both a biblical mandate for justice and a commitment to the future of the church. Many migrants and potential migrants today are Methodists; some are welcomed in new places, bringing new vigor to old congregations, while others face discrimination and exploitation in new places. Migration today is inextricably linked to the issues of Christian community, evangelism, new church development, the nurturing of church leadership, and ministry WITH the poor. Migrants in the future will increasingly enrich United Methodist understanding and practice of mission, church life and organization, intergroup relations, and concepts of the universal love of God.

This resolution addresses the varieties, contexts, and responses to global migration in the first quarter of the twenty-first century. It reflects concern for the right to stay where one is, for safe passage in migration, and for a welcome that can lead to a sense of belonging in a new place.

II. Contemporary Migrants Migration

~~Four traditional categories of migrants can be delineated:~~ Environmental catastrophe, organized violence, political chaos, economic desperation, human trafficking, and ecological exploitation are among the most common causes of contemporary migration. To respond to and keep track of massive movements of people, the international community has instituted categories of migrants. The four traditional categories are:

Refugees—persons outside of their country of origin who are unable or unwilling to return for fear of persecution based on race, religion, ethnicity, political affiliation, or opinion; official "refugees" are so recognized by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), which is charged by the international community to oversee service to, and protection of, refugees. As of 2014, UNHCR listed 51 million displaced people; in 2015, some 3.8 million Syrian refugees.

Asylum seekers—a type of refugee, persons who have left their homeland to petition for refuge in the country to which they have fled; asylum seekers must be so recognized by the countries whose protection they seek. In 2007 recognized refugees and asylum seekers totaled 13.9 million. More than a million people requested asylum in 2013, according to the UNHCR, including large numbers in transit. Others were Central American refugees in Mexico and the United States, and Africans in Italy. Many asylum seekers find no protection and are jailed or returned to dangerous situations.

Internally displaced persons—those who are displaced within their own country because of military, economic, and social upheaval, and natural disasters such as famine, earthquake and flood; they are generally not protected by the international community, ~~but~~ and must depend for protection and assistance primarily on their country of residence, which may be implicit in the cause of displacement. ~~In 2007, such persons numbered 24.5 million. In 2014, some 33.3 million people lived uprooted in their own countries.~~

Economic migrants—people who move from one country to another to find work. Most frequently they seek to flee from poverty ~~to economic opportunity~~, and often permanently relocate so they may feed their families. Some are allowed into more affluent nations as immigrants; some enter without documentation and may be welcomed in times of labor shortages and deported in times of economic downturn or public disapproval. Such migrants are among the most vulnerable in any society; many are women and children who become the objects of abuse and brutality. One subcategory in this classification consists of ~~migrant migratory or itinerant~~ workers, people who move from place to place, often with the agricultural cycle, to find employment. Large numbers of such workers are technically short-term contract laborers, or “guest workers,” although they may stay a lifetime, renewing short-term contracts under circumstances that are at best precarious. Some return on a periodic or eventually permanent basis to their homelands; others make domestic and other ties in places of employment and wish to remain. The number of current economic migrants is difficult to calculate. ~~Some estimates run as high as 100 million globally, with large numbers in the affluent regions of North America and Europe. In 2015, the International Labor Organization (ILO) placed the global estimate of migrant worker at 232 million, including 53 million domestic workers, focused in affluent regions such as North America, Japan, Australia, the Gulf States, and Europe.~~

III. A Context of Migration

Virtually all groups of today’s migrants and refugees are battered by the divide between the rich and the poor, a divide rooted in nineteenth and twentieth century colonialism and directly caused by rapid corporate globalization in agriculture, industry, and commerce. ~~Currently, slightly more than 10 percent of the world’s population consumes 85 percent of the world’s wealth while the rest make do with just 15 percent of that wealth. For example, agricultural subsidization in Europe and the United States results in the dumping of commodities in the poor countries of the global South, resulting in the disruption of family farming and unemployment. Trade policies and arms deals further enrich the rich and undercut economies in the global South without providing new contexts for prosperity or hope. These realities, along with armed conflict, environmental spoilage, and natural disasters force people to find new homes within their own countries or~~ across national borders. ~~The entire planet~~ Every region of the world is affected in some way by the global economic divide.

Yet, while money and products ~~easily flow~~ may flow with relative ease across borders, the movement of people is increasingly restricted, leading to concentrations of the poor along borders and, often, to the building of literal and figurative walls of exclusion, notably around the rich nations of the northern hemisphere and the affluent enclaves in Asia, Latin America, Africa, the Middle East, and the Pacific. While the legal and physical walls seek to exclude flows of undocumented migrants, in fact, there is growing demand in wealthier nations for cheap labor. Millions of migrants do enter—through formal guest worker programs or through informal business networks that actively seek undocumented workers while maintaining them in an exploitative noncitizen underclass. Many of those who are shut out or who migrate without legal status are at the bottom of racial, ethnic and caste hierarchies. They are often poor women and children. On either side of the divide, families are relegated to intense human suffering, inadequate nutrition and health service, lack of educational opportunities, and the reverberating, debilitating experience of oppression. Ironically, and horribly, with regard to economic migrants, the rich say, “Come in, do our dirty work at low wages, and then go away.” ~~Significant percentages of the work force are migrants in affluent countries, with the figure exceeding more than 50 percent in parts of the Middle East. Such “guest workers” enjoy limited civil and human rights.~~

The global South is particularly concerned with the ~~migration of people from rural to urban areas and with the loss of young generations to other countries, the departures dictated either by economic need or wooing by affluent societies seeking to fill jobs with cheap labor. Such émigrés often do not want to leave; they may feel pressured by promises of education, jobs, and economic security for themselves and their families. They become entrapped in unjust global systems that drain the resources of poor, Southern countries for the benefit of the affluent societies of the global North.~~

IV. Biblical Perspectives: Justice and Shared Resources

Attitudes toward and treatment of migrants are usually conditioned today, even within the church, by nation-state considerations expressed in the language of “us” and “them”—or “we” the homefolks and “they” the intruder/alien. A beneficent attitude sometimes prevails: “‘We’ will allow X number of ‘them’ to come among ‘us’ provided they acknowledge our generosity and become like us; so long, of course, as they do not threaten our comfort.”

There are more biblically and theologically sound perspectives for Christians. In the biblical understanding, it is not about us and them, but about one people of God, called to seek justice and share equitably, at the very core of our spiritual and physical survival.

The prophet Isaiah put the matter in context and posed the daunting question: “On your fast day you do whatever you want, / and oppress all your workers. / . . . You shouldn’t fast as you are doing today / if you want to make your voice heard on high. / . . . Isn’t this the fast I choose: / releasing wicked restraints, untying the ropes of a yoke, / setting free the mistreated, / and breaking every yoke? / Isn’t it sharing your bread with the hungry / and bringing the homeless poor into your house?” (Isaiah 58:3-7 CEB). Not only does God’s understanding of faithfulness entail the achievement of justice, but for the comfortable, the promise of healing and salvation depends on that action. It was only when the people turned from false religiosity to operative justice that they would receive the promise of spiritual wholeness. ~~“The LORD will guide you continually and provide for you, even in parched places. . . . You shall be like a watered garden. . . . that won’t run dry” (Isaiah 58:10-11).~~

The Hebrew Scriptures contain many references to “strangers” and “sojourners” among the people of Israel and to provisions for treatment that reflect a tribal framework that had stipulated rules for hospitality and also limits on the outsiders. However, the Books of the Law, and to an even greater extent in the prophetic literature, concern for the stranger focuses on justice and the sharing of resources that flow from the bounty of God. Ezekiel anticipated a time when foreigners would share with the ancient Jewish nation all the blessings of the land, which was understood to belong to God alone (Leviticus 25:23). In a real sense, the ancient scriptures understand both the people of Israel and sojourners to be aliens since the people of Israel had been sojourners in Egypt. God’s providence for Israel extends to others (Psalm 146:9; Malachi 2:5), and everything, and everyone, belongs to God (Psalm 24:1-2).

~~The breadth of God’s love permeates the New Testament; that love incorporates faith community and goes beyond it. This is clearly emphasized in a short passage in 1 Thessalonians (3:12), where Paul prays that God will provide the grace for Christians to “increase and enrich your love for each other and for everyone.”~~

Christians do not approach the issue of migration from the perspective of tribe or nation, but from within a faith community of love and welcome, a community that teaches and expects hospitality to the poor, the homeless, and the oppressed. The Christian community at its best not only welcomes and embraces migrants but can be led by them toward clearer understandings of justice and hospitality. Christians rejoice in welcoming migrants who are also Christian. ~~Furthermore, many migrants in many parts of the world today are themselves members of the Christian community;~~ brothers and sisters of the same baptism, gathered around the same sacramental table. And people beyond the Christian community deserve no less hospitality than Christians extend to themselves.

The breadth of God’s love permeates the New Testament; that love incorporates faith community and goes beyond it. This is clearly emphasized in a short passage in 1 Thessalonians (3:12), where Paul prays that God will provide the grace for Christians to “increase and enrich your love for each other and for everyone.”

United Methodists should harbor no doubt about their responsibility to all those who live here on the earth, especially the poor, the homeless, and the mistreated. John Wesley’s concern for the poor and outcast was constant and extended far beyond acts of charity. He worked for just systems in which persons could with dignity stand on their own feet. Wesley advocated just relationships within the social order. When some have great abundance while others are homeless and hungry, the biblical task is not merely to help those in need, but to seek justice—to shift resources and opportunity so that all are at the table, all are fed, all experience the abundance of God’s God’s love, both physically and spiritually.

V. Critical Issues Relating to Migration Today

United Methodists and all Christians face numerous critical situations, causes, and effects relating to migration today, especially in regard to war and economic systems and policies that perpetuate poverty. As a ~~global~~ denomination with a global mission, The United Methodist Church experiences the dilemmas of nations that ~~both~~ “send,” “transit,” and “receive” migrants. Citizens and undocumented immigrants are within the church’s membership, as are employers and migrant workers, police and detainees, and affluent and poor families. The United Methodist family is a microcosm of migrant issues; a church that through God’s grace seeks to respond to the needs of the most physically vulnerable and traumatized, but also address the spiritual needs of the privileged.

The following are among the critical issues demanding attention:

1. The volume of refugees, asylum seekers, and persons displaced within their own countries is growing, as are the numbers of economic migrants with and without documentation.

2. Wealthy nations, especially those with decreasing populations, are increasingly dependent upon migrants to maintain their current economies. They seek both highly skilled professionals and low-wage workers for jobs in construction, health care, agriculture, meat packing, and domestic service. ~~The “receiving” nations or areas on a world scale include Australia, Canada, Europe, Japan, New Zealand, the United States, and some countries of the Middle East (such as Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates, Lebanon). Regional migration, often in the form of contract labor, is common in Brazil, Hong Kong, Lebanon, South Africa, South Korea, and other nations.~~

3. The critical loss of skilled workers and potential leaders in “sending” countries undermines the future economic and social advancement of those societies. Doctors from poorer nations can often earn more in the US as a nurse than as a physician in their country of origin. The “brain drain,” often deliberately encouraged by rich countries for their own benefit, affects teachers, engineers, medical personnel, researchers, and technicians. Large numbers of persons, including young, unaccompanied children, traverse the corridors of “transit” countries, on the move from their homes to other places. In Mexico, nearly half a million Central Americans ride the freight trains known as “La Bestia” (The Beast) as the trains head north to deliver goods for export. Since there are no passenger cars, people ride atop the moving trains on a perilous trek.

Those who survive are faced with extortion and violence at the mercy of gangs and organized crime that control the migrant corridors. People often die along the route, unidentified, with their families often never knowing the fate of their loved ones. Another dangerous and recurring intersection for migrants is off the coast of Italy, near the island of Lampedusa. Shipwreck catastrophes have occurred involving migrants from Libya, Eritrea, Somalia, Ghana, Palestine, and Syria. Traffickers torture and rape migrants who have paid thousands of dollars to gangs that move people across the Sahara to Libya.

4. Old wars and territorial occupations have left a critical migration crisis and new wars add to the problem. This can be illustrated in the Middle East, where many Palestinians remain as refugees more than a half century since they lost their homes in Israel. In recent years, millions of Iraqis and Syrians have fled their countries ~~country~~, adding to the displaced population of the greater Middle East.

5. The passage of stricter enforcement of anti-immigrant legislation and the building of exclusionary walls, often in response to increased migration, intensifies cultural tensions, marked by racial, class, and religious “backlash.” Restrictive policies also intensify migrant resistance based on fear of arrest and deportation, substandard wages, physical and mental abuse, and even death for crossing a border.

Migrants fall prey to trafficking for economic or sexual purposes and sometimes become virtual slaves in their new place of residence.

6. ~~The~~ An increasing percentage of migrant women, who now make up almost half of the international migrant population ~~and as much as 70 to 80 percent in some countries~~. Many of these women are domestic workers, who may raise other peoples’ children while being separated from their own. Some migrant women and girls ~~who are migrant~~ are subjected to physical and sexual abuse and fear reprisals if they complain. Human trafficking is growing globally, especially in the area of forced labor, which includes the sex trade, the primary reason. The 2014 report of the UN Office of Drugs and Crime indicates that women and girls account for 70 percent of all trafficking victims. One in three victims is a child and two out of three are girls.

7. Migration policy and practice today divides families across generations. Filipino contract workers in Saudi Arabia may serve in those countries for their entire careers, and then watch their own children, who they hardly know, step into their roles as they retire. Families are also divided by the deportation of the undocumented parents who leave behind children holding citizenship, while children hold citizenship.

8. Remittances (sending “home” the paycheck) have become major sources of financing for poor countries; revenues that threaten to undercut aid assistance from rich nations. The monies migrants send home is massive, an estimated $230 billion in 2005 $650 billion in 2015, according to the World Bank. Some nations, including the Philippines, Bangladesh, and El Salvador, depend on remittances to support ~~the~~ their financial system. In an effort to escape responsibility for the sharing of resources, some officials in the global North tout remittances as replacements for development aid. This attitude violates the spirit of the ~~Millennium~~ Sustainable Development Goals and other United Nations accords. Through international instruments, northern nations have set the goal of providing 0.7 percent of their gross national product in development aid to poor nations, as well as to cancel some debt and alter trade policies in ways that benefit poor nations.

VI. Response of the Church

The United Methodist Church commits itself to:

7. ~~recognizing~~ the right of sanctuary in any United Methodist local church for migrants subject to detention or deportation by government security forces.

1. just and equitable trade and development policies that support human rights and counteract the root causes of migration such as war and militarization, environmental spoilage, and corporate greed;

In December 2009, Palestinian Christian leaders from all the church families present in the holy land, launched a Kairos Palestine document: “A moment of truth: a word of faith, hope and love from the heart of Palestinian suffering.” (See www.kairopalestine.ps <<http://www.kairopalestine.ps>>)

In Kairos Palestine, which the 2012 General Conference commended as a study resource, Palestinian Christians have issued an invitation to all sisters and brothers: “In order to understand our reality, we say to the Churches: Come and See. We will fulfill our role to make known to you the truth of our reality, receiving you as pilgrims coming to us to pray, carrying a message of peace, love and reconciliation.” See <<http://www.kairopalestine.ps/content/come-and-see-call-palestinian-christians-journey-peace-justice-guidelines-christians>>.

Political Status of Puerto Rico

The United States Congress, ~~and other entities of the United States government, and different groups in Puerto~~ ~~Rico~~, have long been studying the relationship between the United States and Puerto Rico. This topic is a hot and divisive issue in Puerto Rico with many diverse and strong opposing views. The Church enters into this discussion because of its mandate to be a prophetic voice that intends to assist in finding ways that are in accordance with the values of the Reign of God. There are certain principles that need to be emphasized:

1. We believe that all human beings are God's creatures and therefore of equal value and dignity.

2. We recognize that the church must take into consideration the following historical facts as it develops its theological thinking regarding the political status of Puerto Rico:

a. Puerto Rico officially came to be subject to the United States of America as result of the Treaty of Paris on December 10, 1898, through which Spain surrendered its colonies to the United States. At that point Puerto Rico began to be governed by United States military authorities.

b. The Foraker Act approved by the US Congress in 1900 put an end to the US military government of Puerto Rico. The President of the United States appointed a governor of Puerto Rico and the administration of the island came to be under the US Department of the Interior.

c. In 1917, the Jones Act was approved by the United States granting United States citizenship to all Puerto Ricans.

d. In 1947, the United States Congress approved a law allowing the people of Puerto Rico to elect their own governor.

e. The United States authorities have persecuted and acted against the Puerto Rico pro independence movements all along. There was even a period when it was forbidden to raise the Puerto Rican flag, or to display the shield of arms that served as an emblem of Puerto Rico, or to speak of advocating for the independence of Puerto Rico.

f. The people of Puerto Rico, as permitted by the appropriate United States authorities, approved in 1952 the constitution of the "Commonwealth of Puerto Rico" known in Spanish as "Estado Libre Asociado de Puerto Rico." The relationship is described as a pact. The people of Puerto Rico continue to be subjugated to the authorities of the United States of America.

~~g. Several proposals are being discussed in the US Congress (2007) intending to address the problem caused by the political subordination of the people of Puerto Rico to the United States of America (see: H.R. 900, Puerto Rico Democracy Act of 2007, and H.R. 1230, the Puerto Rico Self-Determination Act of 2007). Representatives of different political parties in Puerto Rico participated~~ in public hearings in reference to the aforementioned law projects:

The present economic crisis in Puerto Rico has served to highlight how problematic is the territorial or colonial condition of Puerto Rico in subordination to the United States of America. The government of Puerto Rico approved a local bankruptcy law to enable public authorities to have a mechanism to work in an orderly fashion with their lack of funds to cover all their financial obligations. The Federal Court, District of Puerto Rico ruled that the law approved by the government of Puerto Rico was unconstitutional given that federal laws cover bankruptcy situations. The government of Puerto Rico appealed to Boston and the aforementioned court affirmed the determination of the Federal Judge in Puerto Rico. The government of Puerto Rico then tried to be covered under the US bankruptcy laws, but this was not accepted, leaving Puerto Rico without the possibility of bankruptcy protection for the public authorities.

US Policy in Vieques

The Exodus story of liberation speaks volumes about the experience of the people of Vieques, Puerto Rico. Exodus, Chapter 3, describes very well the experience of this courageous people who have confronted the power of the US military and have come out victorious. "And the Lord said: 'I have surely seen the oppression of My people who are in Egypt, and have heard their cry because of their taskmasters, for I know their sorrows. So I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up from that land to a good and large land, to a land flowing with milk and honey...'" (3:7-8, NKJV). God has surely seen the oppression experienced by the people of Vieques, and today we can celebrate their journey of no more bombs in Vieques and no more military maneuvers.

Historical Background

Vieques is a small island about eight miles east of the island nation of Puerto Rico. In 1938, the US Navy began using the island-municipality of Vieques for military practices. In 1941, during the height of WWII, the United States initiated a campaign of expropriation of territory (evicting over 3,000 people), which ended in the Navy's control of over two-thirds of the island's most arable land. Thousands of families were displaced and those remaining were jeopardized in their basic means of subsistence. The net effect of these policies was the clustering of the entire civilian population into a small strip of land right in the middle of the island. Only 25 percent of the island remained under civilian control.

One of the effects of sixty years of bombing has been the degradation, and in some cases destruction, of Vieques' delicate ecosystems. Hundreds of species of plants and animals have been killed as a result of the direct impact of projectiles during military practices. These bombings and military maneuvers have led to serious contamination of the environment due to toxic residues and other contaminants.

In an article published in 1988, engineer and environmental consultant Rafael Cruz-Pérez identified three ways that the military bombs pollute the environment in Vieques: (1) chemicals in the missiles' explosive payloads, (2) dust and rock particles released into the air from the missile impact and/or detonation, and (3) metallic residues left by missiles after they detonate and the junk and scrap heap they use for target practice. "According to information provided by the Navy, this material has never been removed... Under the effects of additional explosions and sea breezes, metals are oxidized or decomposed, turning in accelerated fashion into leachates that pollute the environment," wrote Cruz-Pérez. He also cited a scientific study by the US Navy that found the drinking water sources in Vieques' Isabel Segunda village and Barrio Esperanza are polluted with toxic chemicals, including TNT, tertyl and RDX. Cruz-Pérez wrote that "the study doesn't explain how these substances got to the water sources, located more than fourteen kilometers away from the shooting area."

In the 1970s, the US Environmental Protection Agency sampled Vieques' air and soil. After studying the samples, the EPA determined that the air has unhealthy levels of particulate matter and the ground has iron levels above normal.

The net result of this environmental pollution is high levels of cancer and other serious health problems that Vieques have been experiencing for years. Studies carried out by the Puerto Rico Department of Health have shown that from 1985 to 1989 the cancer rate in Vieques was 26 percent higher than the rest of Puerto Rico's already high levels of cancer.

—Dr. Rafael Rivera-Castaño, a retired professor from the University of Puerto Rico's Medical Sciences Campus, has documented the increase in extremely rare diseases, including scleroderma, lupus, thyroid deficiencies, as well as more common ailments like asthma, which are significantly affecting Vieques' children.

—According to Dr. Rivera-Castaño there is no reason for the children of a small island like Vieques to develop asthma. "The winds that blow in from the ocean are rich in iodine, which prevents asthma. The only possible cause for this high incidence of asthma is air pollution," he stated. Vieques does not have factories or any large industry that could cause the high incidence of asthma; the only source of air pollution on the island has been the Navy.

—Economic development on the island has also been drastically affected by the Navy's presence. About 9,400 people live on Vieques and the unemployment rate is almost fifty percent by most conservative estimates.

—General Electric, the only large company in Vieques, ended its operations in the summer of 2003. One of the few viable industries in Vieques today is commercial fishing. The bombing, however, has left this industry barely profitable.

—Agriculture, the largest industry in Vieques before the Navy expropriated the most fertile land, is today almost nonexistent. Now the economic inheritance of the people and the children of Vieques is economic stagnation.

Conclusion

The United Methodist Church has been a key supporter of the struggle in Vieques. The voice of our Church joined with the voices of many organizations in Puerto Rico and around the world to halt the Navy's maneuvers on the island. The Navy's military presence finally ended on May 1, 2003, which the 2004 General Conference celebrated. Justice, however, is not complete.

The majority of the people of Vieques rejoiced with the announcement that the bombing, mainly by the US Navy, against their island had ended. Regretfully even when now there is no longer any bombing, bombs continue to explode in the former vase that was called Camp García.

Over twelve years have passed since the end of the bombing and other military practices in Vieques. Nevertheless, the waters surrounding the former target practice area still filled with unexploded bombs and contaminants from the target area continue to be allowed to go into the sea causing great damage to the ecosystem. It is imperative that these issues be addressed as soon as possible not only because of the clear environmental justice concerns but also for bringing about economic justice and full respect for human rights that continue to elude new generations of Puerto Ricans.

—The removal of thousands of live bombs in the area is being done by exploding them on site, in the open air. This produces an additional quantity of contaminants that enter different ecosystems and continue to have an adverse impact on the food chain and on the health of the people of Vieques. The cleanup process is going too slow and many times is not done in ways that protect the residents of Vieques from further contamination.

The US Navy has reported that the open air bomb explosions on site in Vieques may continue until the year 2010 or even 2012. According to information published by the US Navy, by March 16, 2007 as part of the "cleaning" of Vieques, some 5,754 explosive artifacts were detonated in the open air. It is not acceptable to continue to put at risk the peace, health and security of the people of Vieques.

—Now the people of Vieques need the Church to call for restoration for their island, urging environmental cleanup of the damage left behind by the US Navy and restoration of the economy through the creation of new jobs and new industry.

—Reconstruction in Vieques is only just beginning. It is important that renewal principally benefit the resident people of the island and not the hotel interests, politicians or other powerful forces. Equally important is that restoring agriculture, fishing, ecotourism, housing, archaeological-historic investigation and environmental study, will be the backbone of the new model of cooperative, community and sustainable development.

—Community participation in all steps of reconstruction (the environmental cleanup, return of the lands, future development) is necessary to ensure a process of genuine healing and reconstruction.

—The land cannot be developed if it is not returned—and demilitarized. The use proposed by the Navy for some of the land will determine the level of cleanup. The Navy looks to bypass the Viequeses' demands by "passing" the land to the US Department of the Interior and Fish and Wildlife Service, so that cleanup is not an essential part of the end of military use process.

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church:

1. request of the appropriate agencies of the United States government that the cleaning of all the contaminants produced by the US Navy activities or activities allowed by the US Navy be done using methods that will keep to a minimum the release of toxic agents into the environment. The health of the residents of Vieques must be protected. Diverse sources have published information on the availability of equipment and methodology that make possible the removal of explosive artifacts without detonating them in open air spaces;

2. urge the US Congress to appropriate sufficient funds to decontaminate Vieques such that the land is again suitable for agriculture, environmental tourism, and other social uses;

3. call upon the United States government to assign funds to enable the people of Vieques to have access to new health programs directed to reduce the high incidence of different types of cancer, to provide treatment to all the persons with toxic chemicals in their bodies, and to treat and reduce the high incidence of respiratory diseases;

4. urge Congress and the government of Puerto Rico to establish mechanisms to promote the reconstruction and sustainable economic development of Vieques;

5. call upon the Environmental Protection Agency and all other government agencies responsible for the cleaning to also expedite the cleaning of the island of Culebra, Puerto Rico, which was also contaminated as a result of military maneuvers.

~~6. urge that civil and religious leaders in Vieques be involved in every decision regarding the future of the island;~~

~~7. develop educational resources through the General Boards of Church and Society, Global Ministries, and Discipleship, to help United Methodists and others understand the issues affecting the people of Vieques;~~

~~8. send a copy of this resolution to the US House and Senate Armed Services Committees, the governor of Puerto Rico, and the secretary-general of the United Nations; and~~

~~9. send a copy of this resolution to the bishop of the Puerto Rico Methodist Autonomous Affiliated Church.~~

Africa Growth and Development

Amend and Readopt Resolution 6081 as follows:

6081. Africa Reconstruction Growth and Development

We applaud . . .

The continent of Africa is gradually moving from crisis to peace, economic growth, and development, in crisis. A century of colonial rule, preceded by two centuries of a vicious slave trade and followed by a generation of neo-colonialism, has left much of Africa's social, political, and economic life in a shambles. The scale of poverty and suffering is daunting. More than 300 million people survive on under $1 per day. Life expectancy remains lower than 60 in 41 of the 53 countries. Africa is now the epicenter of the greatest catastrophe in recorded human history—the HIV/AIDS pandemic—with women making up 58 percent of those infected and more than 11 million children orphaned since the pandemic started. Corruption and bribery in many African countries places unbearable burdens on the most vulnerable people and blocks progress towards poverty reduction. More than one-third of all children are malnourished, and more than 40 percent have no access to education and are far more likely to die before the age of five than children in any other region. Famine and starvation continue to devastate women, children and men. In December 2002, the United Nation's World Food Programme issued an "African Hunger Alert" appealing for emergency assistance to care for 38 million Africans threatened by famine. Almost half the continent does not have access to safe water. Decades of inter and intra-state conflicts that left much of Africa's social, political, and economic life in a shambles are being replaced by a new dispensation marked by growth and signs of development. Six of the world's ten fastest growing economies of the past decade are in sub-Saharan Africa. A clutch of countries have enjoyed growth in income per person of more than 5% a year since 2007. Based on UN reports, the continent is expected to have 5% to 7% income increase in years to come. One of the challenges facing Africa currently is to transform economic growth into development, job creation and into improved wellbeing of its citizens. Despite significant economic growth, Africa is still braced with catastrophic diseases like HIV, Malaria, Tuberculosis, and Ebola. The 2014 United Nations Conference on Trade and Development report indicates that:

"Despite Africa's relatively strong economic growth performance over the past decade, many countries in the continent are grappling with several development challenges ranging from food insecurity, high unemployment, poverty and inequality, to commodity dependence, lack of economic transformation, environmental degradation, and low integration of the continent in the global economy. Since the dawn of the new millennium, African governments and the international community have adopted various initiatives aimed at addressing these development challenges and improving living conditions on the con-continent. At the continental level, African Heads of State and Government adopted the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD), which emphasizes African ownership of the development process and outcome, and calls for interventions in the following priority areas: agriculture and food security, regional integration and infrastructure, climate change and environment, human development, economic governance, and capacity development and women empowerment.”

Delete the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth paragraphs (beginning with “Conflicts affect” and ending with “Special Session on the UN General Assembly”) . . . continue as follows:

Africa is blessed with people of remarkable energy, spirit, and ingenuity. The continent is rich in natural resources needed by the entire world. The spread of democracy and the growing strength of African civil society offer a real chance to tackle the root causes of poverty and conflict. Social movements and organizations throughout the continent have developed to hold governments accountable and to build societies where public institutions and policies will guarantee cultural, economic, political, and social rights of all citizens. There is a call for alternative development programs based on the fundamental principles of democracy, human rights, gender equality, and social justice. African leaders have developed their own initiative for establishing new relationships between Africa and the world. New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) focuses on the eradication of poverty and support for sustainable development. Key priorities of NEPAD are to attract investment in energy, agriculture, communications and human resources as well as to request increased aid and debt relief to build the infrastructure to attract investment. The African Union (replacing the Organization of African Unity) was established in 2002 and endorsed NEPAD at its first meeting in July 2002. The United Nations General Assembly officially endorsed NEPAD in November 2002. African civil society (including the faith communities), which has not been consulted on NEPAD, is organizing to study and offer their suggestions to the initiative. The debate has been heated across the continent.

The United Methodist Church in Africa is continuing to grow rapidly and is a transforming presence in many countries, influential beyond its numbers, engaging in a holistic Wesleyan ministry of outreach, evangelism, and humanitarian service. The church in Africa is part of civil society and has a strong witness to make in participating in the eradication of poverty community development; in promoting reconciliation, conflict resolution, reconciliation and justice ministries; in humanitarian assistance, and refugee resettlement programs; and public health and diseases prevention, including Malaria, HIV/AIDS, and Ebola, and in pastoral training in HIV/AIDS. The church in the United States and in Europe has a strong role to play in advocating respect for the rights of African governments and peoples to define their economic policies and priorities and for continuing to support—among other things—debt cancellation, increased humanitarian and development aid, removal of trade barriers which discourage African exports, and funding to overcome HIV/AIDS, Malaria, Tuberculosis, Ebola, and other preventable diseases ~~ratification of the Treaty to Ban Landmines, as well as discouraging the militarization of the continent.~~

As Christians, our faith . . .

Therefore, we call upon the United Methodist people, local churches, and agencies to:

1. encourage . . .

2. encourage United Methodists to participate in Volunteers in Mission programs and other volunteer-based projects; and educate themselves (through orientation, cultural sensitivity, and contingency planning) for working alongside African brothers and sisters to, for example, ~~reconstruct~~ construct more schools, clinics . . .

3. urge United Methodist churches in Africa to advocate with government leaders in every country as to the need for people and justice to be at the center of any concerted national and international efforts toward the eradication of poverty; and sustainable and equitable development, and reconstruction on the continent of Africa. ~~Urge United Methodist churches to become knowledgeable about the Copenhagen Commitments, the continuing United Nations plans of action and commitments to Africa and other bilateral and multilateral initiatives including the Special Program of Assistance to Africa (SPA) and the U.N. System-Wide Initiative on Africa; Urge the United Methodist Office for the United Nations in New York to be ready with resources regarding the United Nations and Africa; Advocacy for appropriate exploration and usage of natural resources must be undertaken so that a sustainable growth and development is guaranteed in a long run;~~

4. urge . . .

6. urge the General Board of Church and Society to develop a grassroots public policy action network to:

a) ~~address peacemaking concerns including the end of arms sales and landmines sales to government and non-government combatants;~~ good governance and democratization issues, including electoral rights and peaceful co-existence of political parties;

b) ~~urge the reduction of foreign assistance to countries that rely on African arms sales for their own hard currency;~~ support efforts aimed at promoting the development and implementation of policies that guarantee equitable distribution of resources;

e) support efforts to end the international trade in stolen diamonds and other minerals to fund chronic African wars. Support the General Board of Global Ministries' efforts to remove landmines safely and in sufficient numbers to return land to productive agriculture.

7. continue and further develop the General Board of Global Ministries' commitment to health care in Africa through comprehensive, community-based primary health care, and public health, recognizing the role that poverty, lack of awareness, and poor sanitation play in the spread of communicable diseases across the continent; ~~the collapse of the health care systems in many countries; and the ineffectiveness of total reliance on institutional medical models.~~ Support the revitalization of mission hospitals as critical adjuncts to community-based care. Support AIDS, Malaria, and Ebola prevention training through the ~~African Churches, AIDS orphan trusts, prevention of mother to child transmission of HIV and equipped and informed home care for terminally ill family members~~ UMC health boards, Annual Conferences Health Coordinators, and other partners working on health issues;

8. monitor . . .

a) give priority . . .

b) involve full consultation with African United Methodists, relying upon their experience, wisdom, and resourcefulness/local assets;

c) design programs . . .

d) seek resources for program support from beyond the church to augment the church's contribution to African social, economic, and political development;

e) implement . . .

f) program for sustainability, both in terms of ecological integrity and appropriate technologies that do not require continuing input of resources from other countries, and capacity building for local hand-off of sustainable size and scale of projects.

God bless Africa . . . Guard her children . . . Guide her leaders . . . And give her peace

Democratic Republic of the Congo: Hope for a Radiant Future

Delete current text and replace with the following, including new title: Democratic Republic of the Congo: ~~A New Beginning~~ Hope for a Radiant Future

Violence will no longer resound throughout your land, / nor devastation or destruction within your borders. / You will call your walls Salvation, / and your gates Praise. (Isaiah 60:18)

The people of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) have not seen peace since its independence in 1960. Decades of a corrupt dictatorial government, backed by the U.S. and other Western powers, and war have been their history. A war over the country's vast resources involving nine countries broke out in 1998. Cruelties and atrocities have been inflicted upon its people. Children and young people were forcibly recruited by militias operating in the East and South regions of the country. Sexual violence has been used as a weapon of war against females, both young girls and older women. It is estimated that 4 million died, largely from disease and hunger, or have disappeared without a trace. The war is one of the bloodiest in modern times.

In 2006, the Congolese people elected a president, Joseph Kabila, and a National Assembly. The newly elected administration, which is the first elected in over 40 years, has taken steps toward the building of democracy and infrastructure. The DRC has a new constitution and security in parts of the country has improved dramatically, except the challenging eastern and southern regions still preyed upon by intransigent militias who assault innocent people and government symbols. The elections and regional security are milestones in the restoration of stability in the Congo and show there is hope for the future of the country.

We pray for the rebirth of the nation and end to war and conflict.

Life for the Congolese People

The vast majority of the people live in poverty, despite the country's rich natural resources and having the second largest rainforest in the world. Only 20 percent of the population has access to safe water, 70 percent has little or no access to health care, 16 million have critical food needs, and the country has the highest infant mortality rate in Africa. Very few social services are provided to the population by the government. The conflict has caused the displacement of millions of people. Children have experienced extreme hardships—lifelong physical and psychological harm—due to the war. Each year, more children die in DRC than in China, a country with 23 times the population, and than in all the Latin American countries combined, according to a 2006 UNICEF report. According to the 2013 Human Development Index the Democratic Republic of the Congo has a low level of human development, ranking 186 out of 187. According to the World Bank, with 80 million hectares of arable land and over 1,100 minerals and precious metals, the DRC has the potential to be one of the richest countries on the African continent and a driver of African growth.

Challenges for the New Government

The challenges facing the new government are vast. It must consolidate the peace process, rebuild the government's administrative capacity, and restore its authority at all levels throughout the entire country, overcome corruption, insure freedom of assembly and free speech for its citizens, unify and consolidate its armed forces, and institute an impartial and credible judiciary system. The government has developed an economic development plan for reconstruction. The success of the plan requires reform and enforcement of laws on the extraction, production, and use of the country's natural resources. The government and its international partners must implement the independent mechanism to monitor the implementation of contracts and ensure transparent and fair management of mining resources.

The country's development cannot be achieved without political stability, accountability and the active participation of its citizens. Nongovernmental organizations need to be strengthened and given a real voice in the future of their country.

Congolese need and deserve support to consolidate peace, construct democracy, save lives, and rebuild their country. Celebrating with the Congolese people in the re-birth of their nation, the General Conference urges United Methodists to:

1. support the peoples and the mission of The United Methodist Church in the DRC through Advance Special giving, covenant relationship between annual conferences, and other mission funding. We also urge United Methodists and all Methodist peoples to join in prayer and solidarity for the people, leaders, and churches of the DRC;

2. work with The United Methodist Church in the DRC and with nongovernmental organizations in rebuilding the country, its churches and seminaries, and the repatriation, resettlement, and provision of shelter for displaced persons, child soldiers, and other war victims;

3. encourage the government of the DRC to continue to implement and move forward with reforms, including freedom of assembly and free speech; security; economic and mining; judiciary; education; and communications; and implement an economic platform that promotes entrepreneurship and investment to help poor communities; encourages fair play; and environmental protection;

4. encourage all parties involved in the conflict to eliminate all forms of sexual violence;

5. request governments and international institutions to provide economic assistance for reconstruction and development and debt cancellation to the government of the DRC;

6. engage multinational corporations, especially mining companies, and neighboring countries to respect the sovereignty and integrity of the DRC; and

7. support the continued presence of MONUSCO, the U.N. peacekeeping force in the DRC, in order to neutralize militias operating in the eastern and southern regions and train Congolese security forces.

Rationale:

This rewrite updates the resolution with information about the role of militias and use of sexual violence as weapons of war in the ongoing conflict. It highlights challenges to DRC's future, including overcoming corruption, ensuring freedom of assembly and free speech, political stability and accountability.

Liberia

Insert in fifth paragraph, second sentence:

Since President Sirleaf's . . . The new government has resettled tens of thousands of refugees and begun training new security forces, increased government revenues, partially restored electricity and water to part of the capital, substantially increased primary school enrollment, and has begun to rebuild roads and attempts have been made for the rebuilding of other critical infrastructure.

Insert new paragraph after sixth paragraph:

In 2014, Ebola devastated Liberia, Sierra Leone, and other countries in West Africa. It killed almost half of the people it affected. Fear gripped the countries. Government offices, businesses, and schools were closed. Streets were completely deserted. Economic development was stalled. The entire health sector collapsed, thus leaving the population vulnerable.

Amend next paragraph:

Given this dreadful disease we, as United Methodists, remain steadfast in our support of ~~are encouraged to partake in the journey of~~ the Liberian people in their journey for a new future. We commit ourselves to:

Amend subparagraph 2:

2. urge governments to provide economic assistance for reconstruction and development ~~and debt cancellation~~ to the government of Liberia and should hold multinational corporations and other big businesses operating in Liberia accountable for any breach of national and international laws with respect to the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights;

Amend subparagraph 5:

5. provide humanitarian assistance, including medical services for Ebola, HIV/AIDS, and other illnesses, food, and water;

Amend subparagraph 9:

9. assist young people to become responsible citizens by developing their skills in career development ~~the transition of soldiers into the civilian sector~~ through the resources of counseling, vocational and general education;

Rationale:

This amendment updates the resolution to include a paragraph on the Ebola crisis that devastated Liberia in 2014, along with other West African nations. It also recommends holding multinational corporations and big businesses accountable for doing business not in keeping with principles on business and human rights.

In Support of the United Nations

Delete current text and replace with the following, including a suggested new title:

~~In Support of t~~The United Nations and Multilateralism

Come now, let us reason[a] together, says the LORD: / though your sins are like scarlet, / they shall be as white as snow; / though they are red like crimson, / they shall become like wool (Isaiah 1:18 ESV).

He will judge between the nations / and will settle disputes for many peoples. / They will beat their swords into plowshares / and their spears into pruning hooks. / Nation will not take up sword against nation, / nor will they train for war anymore (Isaiah 2:4 NIV).

Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called children of God (Matthew 5:9 NIV).

Reasoning Together to Secure Peace and Justice

The world is the responsibility of each of our communities where the securing of peace and justice for one individual, one community, and one nation contributes to the securing of peace and justice for all globally. This is a theological posture that is also at the core of multilateralism.

“The earth is the LORD’s and the fullness thereof” (Psalm 24:1 KJV). God’s people are graciously blessed to joyfully partake of the fruits of God’s good creation. To work for justice and peace for all is to affirm God’s promise of abundant and full life for everyone on earth.

To work for justice and peace is to lay claim to our common humanity and shared cosmos, whose destiny and survival lie in the flourishing of true security and just peace, of human rights founded on human dignity, of human progress and well-being built on sustainable practices, of human health and the planet’s health, and of mutual interdependence and diplomacy governing the relations of peoples and nations. These are what truly constitute multilateralism: evolving and living into a truly just, participatory and sustainable international community and cosmos.

Multilateralism is diplomacy that engages collaboration and cooperation. Multilateralism is at its best when peoples and nations reason together with words and agreed texts arising from respectful dialogue and recognition of the common good.

The United Nations (U.N.) and related international agencies collaborate multilaterally on many issues and concerns. These concerns could be lingering or emerging, including breaches of the peace or epidemic outbreaks for which the U.N. has the enormous capacity and mandate to mobilize human and material resources.

The world is made better when collective will is mustered and global resources are harnessed to address them. The U.N. has a charter obligation to do just this. For example, the U.N. is working hard to prevent pandemics by developing treatments for HIV/AIDS, viruses like Ebola, bird and swine influenzas, and pernicious diseases like malaria and tuberculosis.

The U.N. has a charter mandate to stop wars and prevent conflicts. It approaches this mandate with a deep diplomatic tool kit in the fields of conflict transformation and management. Its peacekeeping operations are in many locations with lingering conflicts and flashpoints. Its disarmament work concerns the prevention of nuclear proliferation, or the development and use of biological and other weapons of mass destruction. It is also about curbing the production and use of small arms.

In its more than seventy years of existence, the U.N. has evolved to reflect our changing understanding of peace and security, which is at the core of the U.N. mandate. Multilateral dialogues and the recognition of the common destiny of humanity and the cosmos have led to the understanding of security that is beyond the assured existence of sovereign nation states. Human security flourishes with the recognition of human dignity and human rights for all. Human security includes, for example, food and water security, or the security that decent jobs and living wages provide. Human security promotes gender equality, especially the empowerment of women and girls. Human security recognizes the humanity of indigenous peoples and the need to secure their indigenous knowledge and resources.

The U.N. is also about peace and security arising from the elimination of hunger and the eradication of poverty. Its focus on sustainable development, including measurable goals and targets, is laudable. Key to achieving sustainable development goals lies in the primacy of human dignity and human rights and addressing historic inequalities, exploitation and oppression, especially those brought about by colonialism, slavery, genocide, the holocaust, and world wars for which reasons more than seventy years ago the architects of what is now the U.N. were compelled to imagine and to never let the world and its peoples experience again.

The U.N., all too human an institution, remains called to these mandates and more. There are many shortcomings but even more there are major positive strides for global peace, security, and development. Former U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld described the U.N.

as a human institution, saying, “The U.N. was not created to take mankind (sic) to heaven, but to save humanity from hell.”

Multilateralism must prosper norm-based policy coherence. If the pursuit by the international community for sustainable development goals (SDGs) were to result in transformation of people’s lives and communities, it must pursue not only the eradication of poverty but also address the inequalities and injustices that hitherto development models have spawned. Such pursuit must be based on solidarity, justice, cooperation, mutual accountability, and the participation of all stakeholders: governments, non-governmental, and peoples’ organizations.

Our Common Humanity in Christ

Our claim to common humanity in Christ, and our assertion that all peoples and nations reverence God’s good earth, and recognize every person’s sacred worth and inherent dignity define our support for the United Nations. This support lays claim to this human institution whose lofty objectives contained in its Charter are but human imaginations of governance of the relations of nations and the well-being of peoples. Still, we assert in our Social Principles the United Nations and its related bodies are “the best instruments now in existence to achieve a world of justice and law” (2012 Social Principles, ¶ 165D).

The Christian faith and community are rooted in theological understanding that is at once local and global. The foundation for the church’s involvement in the quest for peace and justice everywhere can be found in the following biblically based beliefs:

(1) The transcending sovereignty and love of God for all creation and the expression of that love in the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, whose mission was to reveal understanding about that divine presence, to proclaim a message of love and salvation, and to bring justice and peace; (2) the unity of creation and the equality of all races and peoples; (3) the dignity and sacred worth of each person as a child of God; and (4) the church, the body of believers, whose global mission and public witness to building peace, seeking justice, and reconciling communities testifies to God’s action in history.

The Pillars of Peace for the 21st Century

The world is the responsibility of each of our communities where the securing of justice for one individual, one community, and one nation contributes to the securing of justice and peace for all. To work for justice and peace for all is to affirm God’s promise of the fullness of life: “The earth is the LORD’s and the fullness thereof” (Psalm 24:1 KJV); “I came so that they could have life—indeed, so that they could live life to the fullest” (John 10:10b).

The United Methodist Church, therefore, reaffirms its support for the United Nations and calls upon all governments to fully support it fulfilling its Charter and its highest calling to work for peace and justice for all. Furthermore, The United Methodist Church affirms the following principles as Pillars of Peace for the 21st Century:

1. Political Accountability. Peace rooted in justice requires increased political collaboration and accountability within the United Nations system, and among regional bodies, governments, local authorities, peoples' organizations, and global economic structures to seek the common good and equality for all.

2. Economic Accountability. Peace rooted in justice requires increased moral, ethical, and legal accountability at all levels from governments, financial institutions, multilateral organizations, transnational corporations, and all other economic actors to seek a just, participatory, and sustainable economic order for the welfare and well-being of all people and all creation.

3. Legal Accountability. Peace rooted in justice requires a comprehensive international legal system, capable of change as conditions require, in order to prevent and resolve conflicts, to protect rights, to hold accountable those who disturb peace and violate international law, and to provide fair and effective review and enforcement mechanisms.

4. Liberation and Empowerment. Peace rooted in justice requires the participation of vulnerable and marginalized groups seeking to promote justice and peace in those mechanisms capable of redressing the causes and consequences of injustice and oppression.

5. Peace and Conflict Resolution. Peace rooted in justice requires the nurturing of a culture of peace in homes, communities, religious institutions, nations, and across the world; the use of nonviolent means of resolving conflict; appropriate systems of common security; and the end of the unrestrained production, sale and use of weapons worldwide.

6. Human Dignity and Rights. Peace rooted in justice requires respect for the inherent dignity of all persons and the recognition, protection, and implementation of the principles of the International Bill of Human Rights so that communities and individuals may claim and enjoy their universal, indivisible, and inalienable rights.

7. Preservation of the Environment. Peace rooted in justice requires a commitment to long-term sustainability of the means of life and profound reorientation of economic systems and individual lifestyles to support ecological justice for human communities in harmony with the whole of creation.

International Justice and Inclusive Human Community

“So then let us pursue what makes for peace and for mutual upbuilding” (Romans 14:19 ESV).

International justice requires the participation and de-termination of all peoples. We are called to look beyond the “limited and competing boundaries of nation-states to the larger and more inclusive community of humanity” (United Methodist Council of Bishops' Call for Peace and the Self-Development of Peoples).

Unprecedented international cooperation has occurred through the United Nations and its specialized agencies as they collaborated to solve global problems of health, education and the welfare of people, especially children and mothers. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been successful in this area has been successful in this area, especially in achieving universal primary education and reducing child mortality. UNICEF's advocacy on behalf of the rights and welfare of children in situations of armed conflict, including the condition of children recruited and used as soldiers, is highly commendable.

Commendable achievements have been reached through multilateral cooperation, especially in the areas of sustainable development, universal human rights, religious freedom and tolerance, peacebuilding and security. Most laudable are the advancements in gender equality and women's empowerment, especially the creation of the U.N. Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (U.N. Women) and U.N. Security Council Resolution #3125 on the role of women in peacebuilding and security. In other areas, however, political considerations have diminished the support needed for the United Nations to achieve its goals. Many nations, including the most powerful, participate in some programs only when the actions required do not interfere with their national interest and advantage.

At a time when nuclear security concerns have increasingly become transnational, the work of this agency needs support by all governments so that it can efficiently and effectively perform functions dealing with nuclear security, especially in improving international coordination, monitoring, reporting, and sharing of information and best practices among states and the private sector. The mission of the International Atomic Energy Agency is important and must not be politicized.

Global warming and climate change are urgent issues that need attention in all levels of governance. The U.N. is positioned to lead in addressing them. Responses to climate change must be rooted in global solidarity and justice. Such responses must reflect people's demands that are focused on a global energy transformation, defense of food sovereignty, and recognition of human rights so that any global temperatures goal minimizes harms and impacts on peoples. Upon developed countries are placed legal and moral responsibilities to provide financing needed for adaptation and international mitigation.

We believe the United Nations and its agencies must be supported, strengthened and improved. We recommend that Christians, and all people of goodwill, work for the following in their respective nations:

Educate about and promote among our members The Universal Declaration of Human Rights as a standard of achievement for all peoples and nations. We must advocate in legislative halls around the world for the universal ratification of international agreements, covenants and conventions, including protocols arising from these conventions.

In light of our church's call to an act of repentance, we must call for the global ratification of the Universal Declaration of the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, approved in 2009 by the United Nations General Assembly.

Peace and world order require the development of an effective, enforceable framework of international law that provides for peaceful settlement of conflicts between and among nation-states and the protection for human rights and guarantees of justice for all people. While wars continue and many conflicts remain intractable, the Peacekeeping Operations of the United Nations deserves continued support. Professionalization of peacekeepers, including the adherence to discipline and human-rights principles, forms part of this support. We must be ready to admonish the United Nations and its peacekeeping forces when there is proven and clear violation of their sworn duty to be a force of peace and goodwill.

With the International Court of Justice fully in place to adjudicate conflicts between and among states, we call on all nations to access and ratify the International Criminal Court so that it becomes an effective and responsible international body to adjudicate on war crimes, crimes against humanity, genocide and crimes of aggression. Nations should remove any restrictions they have adopted that impair effective functioning of both courts.

The industrialized world must not dominate development agencies. We support efforts to make controlling bodies of such agencies more representative. We support the development and strengthening of international agencies designed to help nations or peoples escape from domination by other nations or transnational enterprises. In this instance, support is crucial for the sustainable development and governance of the least developed and land-locked countries of the world. Without such support, these countries risk making little progress in any of the key indicators of achieving eradication of hunger and poverty within the framework of internationally agreed development goals, including the SDGs (Sustainable Development Goals).

We must support a better and more effective and just protection of the human rights and welfare of people on the move. As asserted by Churches Witnessing With Migrants (CWWM): "Freedom of movement is a human right that allows peoples to forge human relations and found sustainable communities. Forced migration is a climate change, violation of human rights. Violent situations, environmental degradation, militarization, wars, lingering conflicts and political persecution in countries have resulted in internal displacement and forced and external movement of peoples that have produced asylum seekers and massive numbers of refugees. Under such conditions, people have fled their communities and sought refuge elsewhere, including in other countries. In situations like these, indigenous peoples, women, children, and peoples with disabilities who are migrants or are family members of migrants are especially more at risk and vulnerable. A meaningful dialogue on migration must address these, including refugees and asylum-seekers." We must "urge governments to ratify and implement relevant United Nations and International Labor Organization (ILO) treaties and conventions, and amend their national laws to be consistent with such treaties and conventions, especially the U.N. Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and ILO Convention 189 concerning decent work for domestic workers."

Economic and political considerations greatly affect issues of food, energy, raw materials and other commodities. We support efforts in the United Nations to achieve new levels of justice in the world economic order and work for the realization of internationally agreed development goals through the United Nations and other multilateral organizations such as the African Union, especially the post-2015 Sustainable Development Goals (See United Methodist Resolution #6025, "Globalization and Its Impact on Human Rights and Human Dignity"). Critical to the realization of sustainable development is support for the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

We support the concept of collective action against threats to peace. This collective action is possible and meaningful when pursued within a multilateral framework. Reform of the United Nations, including and especially the Security Council, is crucial in this regard. Such reform must include organizational and programmatic coherence aimed at transforming the U.N. to be a relevant, useful, responsible and accountable body in dealing with today's global challenges. It must be a United Nations that takes seriously the participation of peoples in keeping with its Charter. Reform must include making the Security Council more democratically representative, transparent, accountable in its structure, and decision-making.

Wars fought in the search for justice or through acts of terrorism might well be averted, diminished, or stopped altogether, if the nations of the world would work vigorously in concert to seek changes in oppressive political and economic systems. This cooperation should use human rights as foundational principles of national, international, and human relations, including the promotion of rapprochement among cultures and religions. Just, equitable and sustainable sharing of the world's resources will greatly address the economic despair, political anguish and war-weariness of many peoples and communities of the world.

We support a fair, ambitious and binding agreement to address climate change built on the common but differentiated responsibilities of each nation to reduce emissions and provide resources for adaptation and resilience.

The Abolition of Torture

Amend and Readopt Resolution 6147 as follows (and delete all footnotes and superscripts):

"Remember those who are in prison, as though you were in prison with them; those who are being tortured, as though you yourselves were being tortured" (Hebrews 13:3 NRSV).

Torture is a crime and the biblical mandate is clear that evil must cease and evil deeds must stop grave sin that inflicts severe moral injury not only to victims, their families, and communities, but also to any society that remains silent whenever the evil acts of torture occur. The biblical mandate is clear that evil must cease and evil deeds must stop. "Put an end to such-[C]ease to do evil, / learn to do good; / Seek justice; / help-rescue the oppressed, / defend the orphan, / plead for the widow" (Isaiah 1:16-17 NRSV). The Social Principles remind United Methodists that the "use of detention and imprisonment for the harassment and elimination of political opponents or other dissidents violates fundamental human rights. Furthermore, the mistreatment or torture and other cruel, inhumane, and degrading treatment or punishment of persons by governments for any purpose violates Christian teaching and must be condemned and/or opposed by Christians and churches wherever and whenever it occurs" (Social Principles ¶ 164A).

The United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment came into force June 26, 1987. The Convention is a key tool to fight torture and other forms of ill-treatment and protect the rights of the survivors, the women, children, and men in every country. By ~~2007~~early 2015, ~~144~~ 157 governments had ratified the Convention but in ~~102~~ of these 131 countries there were cases of torture and ill-treatment by security forces, police, and other state authorities, according to Amnesty International. (Amnesty International Report 2014/15: The State of the World's Human Rights, <<https://www.amnesty.org/en/documents/pol10/0001/2015/en/>>). Torture is defined as ". . . any act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, is intentionally inflicted on a person for such purposes as obtaining from him or a third person information or a confession, punishing him for an act he or a third person has committed or is suspected of having committed, or intimidating or coercing him or a third person, or for any reason based on discrimination of any kind, when such pain or suffering is inflicted by or at the instigation of or with consent or acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity. It does not include pain or suffering arising only from, inherent in or incidental to lawful sanctions." (Part I, article 1 of the Convention against Torture . . .) and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession by General Assembly resolution 39/46 of 10 December 1984, entry into force 26 June, 1987, in accordance with article 27 (1)-Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, <<http://www.ohchr.org>>).

Each year, the 26th of June is lifted up as the International Day in Support of Victims of Torture. It reminds us what the writer of Hebrews urged long ago, that we are first and foremost called to offer compassion for all victims of torture as if it were ourselves. We seek societies based on the golden rule that would never condone the use of torture that we would never want imposed on ourselves. The International Federation of Action by Christians for the Abolition of Torture (FIACAT) on June 26, 2014, joined together in calling on all States to take up three key actions:

Prevent torture by ensuring respect for all human rights, by training government agents, by cooperating with international and regional institutions and by making their populations aware of torture and other forms of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment or treatment;

Condemn any act of torture by criminalizing it in their legislation, by systematically prosecuting those responsible for acts of torture and by fighting against impunity;

Support victims of torture and ill-treatment by offering them protection and by putting into place mechanisms for reparation and compensation.

(International Federation of Action by Christians for the Abolition of Torture, Statement on International Day in Support of Victims of Torture: FIACAT celebrates 30 years of the UN Convention against Torture. See www.fiacat.org <<http://www.fiacat.org>>.)

In the United States the religious community's struggle against torture is interreligious. The National Religious Campaign against Torture (NRCAT) has a membership of over 445 320 religious organizations including Christians (Catholic, evangelical, mainline Protestant, and Orthodox), Unitarians, Bahai, Buddhist, Jewish, Muslim, and Sikh communities. NRCAT works for an end to torture in four areas:

1. To ensure that U.S.-sponsored torture of detainees never happens again.

2. To end the use of torture in U.S. prisons and detention facilities, in particular the use of prolonged solitary confinement.

3. To end U.S. support (direct or indirect) of any country that engages in torture and to work for U.S. policies that help other nations stop their torture practices.

4. To end the bigotry and hatred that promotes the practice and acceptance of torture against religiously, ethnically and other targeted groups. Since the fall of 2010, NRCAT has worked for an end to anti-Muslim bigotry.

(National Religious Campaign against Torture (NRCAT) WHAT IS NRCAT? See web site: www.nrcat.org <<http://www.nrcat.org>>. Note: Both the Board of Global Ministries and Board of Church and Society of The United Methodist Church belong to NRCAT.)

Delete next ¶ beginning "Their demands for swift ..."

On June 26, 2007, the United Nations International Day to Remember the Victims of Torture, several religious leaders, representing member organizations of NRCAT, spoke. Dr. Ingrid Mattson, President of the Islamic Society of North America, noted, "Torture is a major transgression of God's limits. The impact of such a transgression is not just on the victim, but on the souls of those engaged in and complicit in the evil act." Rabbi Gerry Serrota, Chair of the Board of Rabbis for Human Rights-North America, joined her, "...torture shatters and defiles God's image...meaning that torture violates the tortured human being, who was created in the likeness of God, as well as the torturer's human soul, which is inevitably defiled and compromised in dishonoring the image of God in his victim."

And, Dr. Charles Gutenson, an evangelical leader and Professor at Asbury Theological Seminary, adds, "Jesus not only commanded, but also modeled a way of life that refused to repay evil with evil. When his enemies came for him, he embodied that call to love our enemies. How then can we who seek to imitate this Jesus ever see torture as a legitimate tool wielded to serve our own purposes?"

(NRCAT Press Release—June 26, 2007, Religious Leaders' Message to Congress: Restore Habeas Corpus, Abolish Torture.)

Increasingly governments are using prolonged solitary confinement as a form of punishment. According to the Vera Institute, roughly 80,000 incarcerated adults and youth are held in solitary confinement each day in the United States. The UN Special Rapporteur on Torture, Juan Mendez, in a 2011 report found that "where the physical conditions and the prison regime of solitary confinement cause severe mental and physical pain or suffering, when used as a punishment, during pre-trial detention, indefinitely, prolonged, on juveniles or persons with mental disabilities, it can amount to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and even torture. In addition the use of solitary confinement increases the risk that acts of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment will go undetected and unchallenged." (See <<http://solitaryconfinement.org/uploads/SpecRapTortureAug2011.pdf>>)

The UN Special Rapporteur, international human rights organizations, and the National Religious Campaign Against Torture are all calling for: an end to prolonged solitary confinement beyond 15 days; abolishing the use of solitary confinement for pretrial detainees, individuals with mental illnesses, youth under the age of 18, pregnant women, and immigrants detained on immigration charges.

Therefore:

1.The United Methodist Church must continue to publicly condemn and oppose torture wherever it occurs through legislative and other means. The Council of Bishops and all agencies of the church must work together to develop resources and find ways to keep the information about torture, its perpetrators, the victims, their families, and their communities continuously in the consciousness of United Methodists.

2. United Methodists must take time in their churches, women's, youth and men's groups to study, reflect, and pray about how to abolish torture and live out the biblical mandate to "love our neighbors" even in the midst of a "war on terror." (Paraphrase from Letter to the United Methodist Women on Torture, May 11, 2005, sent by Kyung Za Yim, President, Women's Division, Global Ministries, United Methodist Church, and Jan Love, Deputy General Secretary, Women's Division.)

3. United Methodists must seek to ensure the ratification by and compliance of their governments with the provisions of the Convention against Torture and all internationally accepted norms and standards on the prevention of torture; fully support the work of the International Criminal Court (ICC) and honor their international obligations to prosecute alleged perpetrators of torture.

4. United Methodists should ~~encourage initiatives to establish join~~ international ~~strategies to abolish all forms of torture~~ efforts to end the use of solitary confinement.

5. United Methodists must express their solidarity with churches and peoples everywhere in the common struggle to have the provisions of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Convention against Torture strictly applied in all countries. And, United Methodists should organize or join events ~~such as~~ and join in prayer on the 26th of June, the United Nations International Day to Remember the Victims of Torture.

6. United Methodists should seek access to places of detention and interrogation centers in order to ensure that persons held are not mistreated. Treatment of prisoners should not be contrary to the Geneva Convention Relative to Treatment of Prisoners of War (1949) particularly Articles 13, 14, 15, 17, 18. (Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, adopted on 12 August 1949 by the Diplomatic Conference for the Establishment of International Conventions for the Protection of Victims of War, held in Geneva from 21 April to 12 August 1949, entered into force: 21 October 1950, Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights: Web site: <<http://www.ohchr.org>>.)

7. United Methodists should ~~find ways~~ join ecumenical and interfaith efforts to ensure the inalienable right of survivors of torture to rehabilitation, access to adequate reparations, including medical and psychological rehabilitation, restitution, compensation, satisfaction, and the guarantee of non-repetition. It is recommended that The United Methodist Church work in partnership with international organizations, such as the Center for Victims of Torture, which have for many years developed the skills to care for victims of torture. Most organizations have Centers around the world sensitive to the language and culture of the victims and their families.

8. United Methodists should urge governments to fully fund the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture which was established in 1981 for humanitarian, legal and financial aid to persons who have been tortured and to members of their families. (Fact Sheet No.4, Methods of Combating Torture, Office of High Commissioner for Human Rights.)

A Pathway for Peace in Palestine and Israel

Add New Resolution:

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church has committed itself to peacemaking, as well as to affirming “the right and duty of people of all nations to determine their own destiny,” (Social Principles, § 165B); and

WHEREAS, in spite of strong support from many for a two-state solution involving Israel and Palestine, the conflict between the two peoples remains an enduring one that has not been resolved over many years and continues to negatively impact the lives of all those in the region in substantial ways; and

WHEREAS, after years of occupation and violence, a deep and fundamental lack of trust exists between many Israelis and Palestinians, requiring the difficult work of genuine reconciliation in order for a just and lasting peace to be sustained; and

WHEREAS, the Church has been called to practice restorative justice wherever it may do so in order to bring about healing and trust, particularly where there has been very little in the past; and

WHEREAS, true peace must reveal itself in both the spiritual and temporal aspects of the life and culture of both Israel and Palestine, where both parties may see themselves as the victims and the other as the aggressors/offenders;

Therefore, be it resolved, that this General Conference of The United Methodist Church affirms strategies including favorable trade and shipping arrangements, student and work-related visa policies, and diplomatic initiatives that will engage both Israelis and Palestinians in an effort to understand the fears, hopes, and aspirations of each other. Such strategies should actively seek a way to promote a just and lasting peace and cooperation that will lead to a two-state solution within two years, an end to the current occupation and violence, and the creation of a viable Palestinian state living side by side in peace with Israel, and

Be it further resolved, that the General Conference fully supports commitments by the General Board of Pensions and United Methodist foundations to research and identify investment opportunities that support the Palestinian economy, as well as joint ventures between Israelis and Palestinians that can help to build trust and reconciliation, and

Be it further resolved, that the General Conference encourages our members around the world to develop a balanced understanding of the concerns and perspectives of both Palestinians and Israelis, being careful to lift up the voices of those victims of violence and injustice across the region, and rejecting oversimplified efforts to simply “blame” one side or the other, even as we encourage United Methodist to join in prayer for “the peace of Jerusalem” (Psalm 122:6) and all of those who call it home.

Rationale:

Because the Church is called to support peacemaking between Israelis and Palestinians, it is important to find positive ways to speak to the fears and aspirations of both nations. Practicing restorative justice calls us as well to be proactive in investing in Palestine and in joint projects between both parties.

in the Israeli settlements in the area receive and to recognize existing titles to land within the West Bank which Palestinians hold. We ask the USA to respect international law and use its influence on Israel to demand equal access to water and electricity, and recognition of land titles.

Rationale:

Wadi Foquin

Be it resolved, that the General Conference of The United Methodist Church write to Secretary of State John Kerry, President Barack Obama, State Department officials, the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem, and the Israeli Civil Authority to address the following items:

A) Inform them of our United Methodist relationship with the village of Wadi Foquin and our concerns over the confiscation of land and destruction of life in the village.

B) In accordance with official U.S. policy, the letter would call on U.S. officials to contact the Israeli government to immediately halt the expansion of illegal Israeli settlements and confiscation of Palestinian land.

C) To call for accountability from the Israeli government for the destruction of land and life by withholding foreign aid until accountability is in place and human rights are restored.

Task Force on Israel/Palestine

WHEREAS, it is God's will that all people enjoy peace/shalom/salaam, i.e., peace, security, prosperity, and right relationships with one another and the earth; and

WHEREAS, the psalmists calls us to pray for the peace of Jerusalem (Psalm 122:6), and to "seek peace and pursue it" (Psalm 34:14); and

WHEREAS, we affirm Israel's right to permanent, recognized, and secure borders, and Palestinians' rights to self-determination and formation of a viable state; and,

WHEREAS, the 2012 Book of Resolution states "we seek for all people in the Middle East region an end to military occupation, freedom from violence, and full respect for the human rights of all under international law"

(Resolution #6073, 2008 Book of Resolutions, amended and readopted in 2012); and

WHEREAS, "The United Methodist Church opposes continued military occupation of the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem, the confiscation of Palestinian land and water resources, the destruction of Palestinian homes, the continued building of illegal Jewish settlements, and any vision of a 'Greater Israel' that includes the occupied territories and the whole of Jerusalem and its surroundings (Resolution 6111: "Opposition to Israeli Settlements in Palestinian Land." 2012 Book of Resolutions); and,

WHEREAS, we are called to support members of Christ's church around the world, including Palestinian Christians who are being forced to leave the Holy Land due to Israel's confiscation of their property and the severe hardships of living under occupation; and,

WHEREAS, the Palestinian Christian community, through the Kairos Palestine document, has requested the support of the wider Church (Kairos Palestine. "A Moment of Truth: A Word of Faith, Hope and Love from the Heart of Palestinian Suffering" <<http://www.kairos-palestine.ps/content/kairos-document>> Web. December 2009); and,

WHEREAS, Palestinian Christian leaders have specifically requested the support of The United Methodist Church (Letter to The United Methodist Church from Rifat Odeh Kassis, General Coordinator, Kairos Palestine, November 28, 2014 <https://www.kairosresponse.org/Rifat_Kassis.html>. Web. January 2015); and,

WHEREAS, the 2012 General Conference reiterated the call to end the occupation, through boycotts of goods produced in the occupied territories (Resolution 6111: "Opposition to Israeli Settlements in Palestinian Land." 2012 Book of Resolutions); and,

WHEREAS, all UMC missionaries serving in the Holy Land over the last twenty-five years support concrete actions by our denomination to show our support of Palestinian rights (United Methodist Missionaries Support Divestment from the Israeli Occupation, https://www.kairosresponse.org/UMC_Missionaries_Divestment.html. Web. January 2015 <https://www.kairosresponse.org/UMC_Missionaries_Divestment.html.%20Web.%20January%202015%20>).

Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Board of Church and Society together with the General Board of Global Ministries shall create a diverse and representative task force to review and research actions that can be taken to respond to these requests by our UMC missionaries and our Palestinian sisters and brothers in Christ, and formulate and publish recommendations for annual conferences, local churches, and members, including helping organize Holy Land Tours that are consistent with the 2008 resolution #6031 “Holy Land Tours” that provides guidelines for travel in Israel/Palestine.

Be it further resolved, that the 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church calls on the U.S. government, the government of Israel, and the elected Palestinian leadership to work for diplomatic and nonviolent solutions to the problems of the region, to respect the equality and dignity of all the region’s people, and to forge solutions based on the principles of international law and human rights.

Lift the US Embargo of Cuba

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church and the Methodist Church of Cuba share a long history of joint ministry and service and a common mission; and

WHEREAS, we, United Methodists, join the international community in celebrating the dialogue and negotiation process between Cuba and the United States that led to the reestablishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries and the reopening of the Cuban Embassy in Washington, DC in July, 2015, and the reopening of the US Embassy in La Habana in August, 2015. And,

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church has spoken through Resolutions approved by the 2004, 2008, and 2012 General Conferences stating that “from its Christian and humanitarian perspective, inspired by the love of God and historic Methodist commitment to peace and social justice, . . . hereby petitions the President and the Congress of the United States to lift its economic embargo against Cuba and any other regulations, practices, or measures enforcing the embargo law.” (p. 770, Resolution #6059, 2012 Book of Resolutions) And,

WHEREAS, the economic embargo has for over fifty-five years created unnecessary suffering and many hardships on the people of Cuba while preventing US citizens from traveling freely to Cuba in the exercise of their constitutional rights, and curtailing the ability of churches to provide missional support freely to its sisters and brothers on the island; and

WHEREAS, the long-standing embargo has provided the Cuban government with a ready-made argument of external aggression to justify its lack of respect for the human and civil rights of dissidents at home; and

WHEREAS, the General Assembly of the United Nations has voted almost unanimously year after year to condemn the US Economic Embargo of Cuba; and

WHEREAS, many religious organizations and churches, like the Council of Evangelical Methodist Churches of Latin America and the Caribbean (CIEMAL), the Caribbean Council of Churches, the United Church of Christ, the Presbyterian Church, the American Baptist churches, and most recently by Pope Francis himself, among others, have also passed resolutions and spoken asking for the end of the embargo against Cuba;

Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Conference of The United Methodist Church commends President Barak Obama for the reestablishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries and the partial easing of travel restrictions. And,

Be it further resolved, that the General Conference of The United Methodist Church requests the US Congress to officially lift the economic embargo against Cuba, which as noted above, has been asked for many years by a great number of religious organizations and the United Nations, and most recently by the President of the United States.

Condemnation of Terrorist Acts of Isis

add the following into the Book of Resolutions:

Title: Condemnation of Terrorist Acts of ISIS and Denial of Statehood

The United Methodist Church condemns terrorist acts of the Islamic state in Iraq and ah-sham commonly referred to as ISIS that violate The United Methodist Church’s principles found in the Book of Resolutions against minorities based on religious or political differences. The acts of ISIS are evil and The United Methodist Church calls for all nations to oppose, dismantle, and disarm ISIS. The United Methodist Church does not condone any attempt to declare or recognize ISIS as a State, with diplomatic relations, and supports the continued effort to bring relief to the captive people of that region.

Be it further resolved, that the 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church shall encourage missionaries, both clergy and laity, to discern and follow the leading of the Holy Spirit, in all facets of spiritual power and grace in that region in the name Jesus Christ and of The United Methodist Church.

Be it further resolved, that the 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church will encourage the United Methodist Committee on Relief to send support of volunteers and supplies to that region and to work alongside the United Nations and other organizations dedicated to helping the captive people of that region to restore a viable and sustainable society.

Rationale:

The Islamic state in Iraq and ah-sham commonly referred to as ISIS has committed unspeakable crimes against humanity of which burning humans alive, beheading in an inhuman manner, kidnapping, execution by means of shooting, rape, and forced marriage, form only a short list of the actual crimes made public.

Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Volume 2

Nashville, Tennessee

Summary Report of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

Work Accomplished Between 2013 and 2016

1. Legislation Proposed by Standing Committee/ Global Ministries

Having considered petitions referred by GC 2012 related to missions, missionary conferences, provisional annual conferences, and their voting rights, the Standing Committee, with endorsement by Global Ministries, brings a number of petitions to GC 2016 regarding these matters.

2. Central Conferences

A. Enabling Central Conferences to Fulfill Their Purposes

“A careful examination of current practice and conditions shows that the central conferences in many parts of the world lack the capacity to function according to their intended mandate.”

(Standing Committee’s Report to General Conference 2012). Understanding and addressing the central conference capacity issues in Africa requires more engagement between the Standing Committee and African central conferences. The Standing Committee expects to receive feedback and invites robust discussion of its study paper (attached Appendix) entitled “Towards criteria for enabling central conferences to fulfill their purpose.”

The Standing Committee is aware that there are problems related to electing central conference bishops, but does not support the 2012 petition for a different nomination and election process.

B. Petitions to Create New Provisional Central Conference for Southeast Asia and Mongolia

The Standing Committee endorses Global Ministries’ petitions to create a new provisional central conference that would include the missions in Laos, Thailand, Vietnam, and Mongolia. Creation of a new provisional central conference requires a two-thirds vote on these petitions.

3. Global or General Book of Discipline

GC 2012 imposed an important new mandate, essentially requiring the Standing Committee to develop, in consultation with the Committee on Faith and Order, a draft Global or General Book of Discipline. That draft is found in Volume 2, Section 4 of the Advance Daily Christian Advocate. The Standing Committee is proposing legislation at GC 2016 providing for the current draft of chapters 1-4 and 6 of Part VI of the Book of Discipline (BOD) to be shared with annual conferences in 2017 for their feed-back through a structured process of consultation, guided by specific questions. Then, at General Conference 2020, an entire draft of Part VI of the BOD would be presented. The goal is that at General Conference 2020 we will have a General Book of Discipline for the worldwide church.

4. Requests for Additional Central Conference Bishops and Episcopal Areas

The Standing Committee evaluated petitions referred to it by GC 2012 regarding requests for four additional bishops in African central conferences and a subsequent petition from the Congo Central Conference to create one additional episcopal area in South Congo.

Applying the criteria established by GC 2012 (§ 404.1 BOD 2012), and conducting on-site assessments of the South Congo, North Katanga, and Zimbabwe episcopal areas, the Standing Committee finds, among other things, that:

- the need for more bishops in Africa affects more regions and central conferences than the committee has been able to assess;

- simply adding one new episcopal area in Africa is insufficient;
- funding new episcopal areas ought to be mandated one quadrennium in advance; and,
- the need for more episcopal areas should be projected into the future, instead of simply reacting to petitions for additional bishops submitted to GC every four years.

Therefore, the Standing Committee unanimously recommends to GC 2016 that a collaborative comprehensive plan be developed, with representatives from all over Africa, to determine the number of episcopal areas and central conferences needed in Africa and their boundaries. An integral part of that plan would increase the number of bishops in Africa from 13 to 18.

5. Other Topics

- Having consulted with the General Council on Finance and Administration regarding various ways in which central conferences have been contributing to the Episcopal Fund, the Standing Committee supports GCFA's proposal to create a new formula, based on membership plus an economic modifier, for annual conferences in central conferences to pay apportionments that would be divided between the Episcopal Fund and General Administration. (See Report #8, Apportionment Formulas).

- The Standing Committee is recommending changes to BOD 2012, ¶ 2201.3 to ensure that all episcopal areas in central conferences and the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships are represented.

Mandate for 2017-2020

We must continue to improve our worldwide connection in mission and ministry within The UMC and with affiliated and concordat churches by:

- restructuring the Standing Committee's membership;
- deepening our relationships and dialogue with central conferences, annual conferences, the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships, and affiliated and concordat churches;
- bringing the draft "General Book of Discipline" to fruition; and
- living into the spirit and culture of the Covenant of a Worldwide United Methodist Church (BOD, 2012, ¶ 125).

Report of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

Mandate

The opening sentence of the provisions for the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters (BOD, 2012, ¶ 2201.1) states: “The General Conference recognizes the differences in conditions that exist in various areas of the world.” The mandate further states: “The standing committee shall serve as the coordinating body to study the structure and supervision of The United Methodist Church in its work outside the United States and its territories and its relationships to other Church bodies.” Therefore, all resolutions and petitions related to central conferences are referred to the Standing Committee for consideration, and the committee reports its recommendations directly to the General Conference. Since 2008 the Standing Committee’s mandate has allowed it to meet at least twice in the quadrennium in addition to a meeting at the site of General Conference. The meetings during the quadrennium have been focused on proactively addressing major concerns faced by central conferences. The Standing Committee is grateful for the staff support provided by the General Board of Global Ministries.

The membership of the Standing Committee is a true expression of the presence of The United Methodist Church around the globe through members from central conferences and jurisdictional conferences, as well as representatives from the board of directors of the General Board of Global Ministries. This diverse membership has enabled a measure of living into the worldwide nature of our church. This wise balance of representation has also fostered greater understanding and cooperation in the midst of very distinct ministry settings within The United Methodist Church. Through multilingual worship, discussion, and decision making, the Standing Committee has attempted to embody our United Methodist Covenant of being a worldwide church (see BOD, 2012, ¶ 125).

In addition to its basic mandate (BOD, 2012, ¶ 2201), the 2012 General Conference further assigned to the Standing Committee work related to what would constitute a Global or General Book of Discipline (BOD, 2012, ¶ 101). This new mandate coincides well with the Standing Committee’s basic mandate, but has also added a significant amount of work to its agenda. As this report shows, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters was able to accomplish a first and important step in this particular mandate and will need to continue its work on this part of its mandate over the next quadrennium. We present to the 2016 General Conference a progress report on our work on a Global or General Book of Discipline and request feedback on the work we have accomplished thus far.

During the 2013-16 quadrennium, the Standing Committee met twice as a full committee, first on September 26 to October 1, 2013, in Gödöllő, Hungary, and then on February 4-9, 2015 in Maputo, Mozambique. The Standing Committee organized itself into three working groups: Conferences; Central Conferences; and Global or General Book of Discipline. It also created an Episcopal Area Assessment Team and an Officers Team. These working groups and teams met and worked between full Standing Committee meetings through conference calls and other electronic means in order to be good stewards of our resources. However, our experience leads us to acknowledge that as a church we have not yet developed a culture of active participation in working processes in-between official face-to-face meetings. This heavily limits what can be accomplished as a worldwide body of leaders in the church.

Accomplished Tasks

Topic 1: Conferences

The 2012 General Conference referred back to the Standing Committee a number of petitions related to missions, missionary conferences, provisional annual conferences, and their voting rights. In collaboration with the General Board of Global Ministries, the Standing Committee closely examined present worldwide church realities and challenges and brings to the 2016 General Conference legislation based on the following guiding principles:

- Establishment of a meaningful process for the certification of candidates for pastoral ministries in missions outside of the bounds of annual conferences or central conferences;
- Acknowledgment that while the concept of a missionary conference may be helpful in the U.S. context, it is not helpful in the context of central conferences (The draft of a Global or General Book of Discipline therefore mentions the category of missionary conferences only within the U.S.);
- Maintaining of the constitutional rights of missionary conferences and provisional annual conferences for the sending of delegates to General Conference;

- Clarification of the process for establishing a mission by the General Board of Global Ministries and/or by a central conference;
 - Clarification of the minimum number of ordained elders needed to constitute an annual conference, as stated in earlier Disciplines prior to a change in terminology;
 - Establishment of a process for a mission to become a provisional annual conference in regions outside the U.S., whether within or outside of existing central conferences;
 - Establishment of a pattern of evaluation for provisional annual conferences that fail to develop into full annual conferences after three quadrennia.
- (See petitions 60278-60283, ADCA, pages 457-459.)

Topic 2: Central Conferences

The final paragraph of the Standing Committee's report to the 2012 General Conference mentioned that: "A careful examination of current practice and conditions shows that some central conferences in many parts of the world lack the capacity to function according to their intended mandate. Time did not allow for deeper conversation about more effective and efficient structures, about numbers and boundaries of central conferences, and about new creative ways to structure the work of The United Methodist Church outside the United States in order to fulfill its mission and ministry in ways that are the most efficient."

During 2012 and 2013, the Standing Committee asked central conferences for feedback to specific questions related to the above-mentioned concern. Unfortunately, only a few central conferences discussed and responded to this request for feedback. In the process we learned that many central conferences meet only for their quadrennial meeting. As discussion continued among the members of the Standing Committee about all of this, it became evident that central conferences have very limited knowledge about each other and about the realities they each face. Some discussion about these concerns was held at the meetings of the College of Central Conference Bishops.

The first central conferences were created in the Methodist Episcopal Church as far back as the 1880s. Their primary purpose was to foster cooperation among neighboring annual conferences in regions outside the U.S. Later on, two other important purposes and authority were given to central conferences: (1) the right to adapt decisions of the General Conference "as the special conditions and the mission of the church in the area require"

(e.g. adaptations to the Book of Discipline, to the Ritual, etc.; see 2012 BOD, ¶ 31 and ¶ 543), and (2) the right to elect bishops according to the number authorized by General Conference.

The Standing Committee is aware of problems related to the election of bishops in central conferences, but does not support a petition for a different nomination and election process referred to it by the 2012 General Conference.

At its meeting in February 2015, the Standing Committee discussed its study paper "Towards criteria for enabling central conferences to fulfill their purpose" (see page 902). Due to the complexity of the task and the brevity of time, the Standing Committee did not take action to approve criteria for central conferences, but will continue to depend on this study paper to inform its ongoing discussion and work on enabling central conferences to fulfill their purpose, particularly in relationship to the proposed plan for Africa (see topic 4 below). Feedback on this concern is welcome and can be sent to the chairperson of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters.

Upon request of the General Board of Global Ministries, the Standing Committee supported bringing a petition to the 2016 General Conference for the creation of a provisional central conference that would include the missions in the countries of Laos, Mongolia, Thailand, and Vietnam [petition # 60289, ADCA, p. 909], along with the Non-Disciplinary petition enabling legislation that sets forth the powers of that proposed provisional central conference [petition # 60290, ADCA, p. 911]. (The General Conference may grant to a provisional central conference any of the powers of a central conference except that of electing bishops). The creation of a provisional central conference requires a two-thirds vote of the General Conference.

Updates on maps and statistics of central conferences and their episcopal areas will be available at the following link: www.umc.org/centralconference.

Topic 3: Global or General Book of Discipline

A new, particular mandate for the Standing Committee is related to a Global or General Book of Discipline as stated in the 2012 Book of Discipline, ¶ 101: "The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, in consultation with the Committee on Faith and Order, will bring recommendations to the 2016 General Conference as to which parts and paragraphs in Part VI of the Book of Discipline are not subject to change or adaptation." During this quadrennium, the Standing Committee concentrated its work on the chapters found in Part VI of the Book of Discipline, that, in its opinion, are of priority need for the ongoing ministry in the central conferences, namely: (1) The Local Church; (2) The Ministry of the Ordained; (3) The Superintendency; (4) The Conferences; and (6) Church Property.

The key questions the Standing Committee has employed to guide its work on this Global or General Book of Discipline have been:

- What essentials unite United Methodists worldwide and enhance the mission of making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world, all to the glory of God (§ 601)?
- What is “distinctively connectional” (§ 16) and not subject to change or adaptation by central conferences (§ 31.5)?

The Standing Committee has done this critical work in consultation with the Committee on Faith and Order and is grateful for the support and insights that have resulted from this consultation process. A draft of the work the Standing Committee did on the above-mentioned Disciplinary chapters of The Book of Discipline, 2012 can be found in Volume 2, Section 4 of the Advance Daily Christian Advocate. The same draft will be shared with annual conferences in 2017 for their feedback through a structured process of consultation. The draft is called the General Book of Discipline. Thus, General Conference, with bishops as General Superintendents, will have a General Book of Discipline for the worldwide church.

At this 2016 General Conference the Standing Committee is proposing a revision to The Book of Discipline, 2012, § 101, that would allow the Standing Committee to complete its work of preparing drafts of Part VI chapters (5) Administrative Order, and (7) Judicial Administration for a General Book of Discipline, while also creating a process of connectional consultations to be implemented during the 2017-2020 quadrennium. Thus, all of the present Part VI of the Book of Discipline would be presented to the 2020 General Conference, either as a new Part VI (not subject to change or adaptation by central conferences) or as a new Part VII (legislated by General Conference and adaptable by central conferences according to § 31.5).

Consultation with annual conferences throughout the connection will be essential to the Standing Committee’s commitment to build trust in the establishment of a truly worldwide Book of Discipline that would guide and empower the mission and ministry of The United Methodist Church all over the globe. In the consultations around those parts of the Book of Discipline that are not adaptable by central conferences, the leading questions the Standing Committee proposes to use are:

1. What is essential for the worldwide connection of The UMC that is missing in this draft?
2. Where is this draft too detailed and in need of further prioritization of that which is truly essential?
3. What inconsistencies or inaccuracies are found in the draft and are thus in need of correction?

The following quote does not come from a Methodist voice, but highlights the same challenges that we United Methodists share with other denominations in establishing a church polity that truly serves community life and the mission of the church:

“All Christian communities have certain rules. . . . Such rules are there in order to serve community life. That is what they are supposed to do, and why they were introduced in the first place, . . . Nevertheless, it is not difficult to collect stories of how such rules can frustrate community life rather than promote it. . . . In a similar way churches in the global South may be hampered by regulations that were inherited from ‘mother churches’ in the global North, but that simply don’t fit in a different context and culture. Or it happens that people have an ecclesial position with certain powers, not in the least the power of being fully aware of all church order regulations. They know how to play the rules and how to increase their influence, . . . However, a lack of rules can have disquieting consequences as well. . . .

“And, generally speaking, a lack of procedures may well lead to improvised ‘solutions’ that are in fact highly arbitrary in the effects they have.

So, rules are there to serve community life, that is all. It is the goal that has to determine the quality of church order regulations; therefore, transparency in terms of why these specific rules are presumed to be necessary is pivotal.” (Leo J. Koffeman, In Order to Serve: An Ecumenical Introduction to Church Polity. LIT Verlag, 2014; pp. 1-2)

In the introduction to the draft of a General Book of Discipline, the Standing Committee offers its thoughts on “Living into the Worldwide Nature of The United Methodist Church.” We commend them to you for your prayerful consideration.

Topic 4: Episcopal Areas in Central Conferences

Through the work of the Standing Committee, the Book of Discipline 2012, ¶ 404.1, established new provisions for the criteria and assessment for the establishment of the number of episcopal areas in central conferences. The criteria do not simply look at membership; rather, they consider what makes up a bishop's workload. The assessment brings the further analysis of the context and missional potential of a given setting of ministry.

The 2012 General Conference referred a number of petitions to the Standing Committee requesting the establishment of new episcopal areas. The petitions requested one additional bishop for Zimbabwe, one additional bishop for Mozambique, and two additional bishops for South Congo. In the months following the 2012 General Conference, the Congo Central Conference sent a petition to the Standing Committee for the creation of one additional episcopal area in South Congo.

The Standing Committee considered these petitions referred to it by the 2012 General Conference alongside its continued study of the challenges and opportunities of the church in the central conferences. According to the criteria established in the Book of Discipline 2012, ¶ 404.1, the Standing Committee affirmed the need to do an on-site episcopal area assessment in the Congo Central Conference. The criteria pointed to the need to also do on-site assessments in the South Congo and the North Katanga episcopal areas. The Standing Committee decided to add a third assessment, but in the Africa Central Conference. On the basis of the established criteria, Zimbabwe emerged as the priority, as compared with Mozambique, both in the Africa Central Conference.

Therefore, the Standing Committee expanded its Episcopal Area Assessment Team into three sub-teams. The teams conducted assessments in the episcopal areas of South Congo, North Katanga (both in the Congo Central Conference), and of Zimbabwe (Africa Central Conference). In all three regions, the teams were overwhelmed by the breadth of ministries, the growth of the church, the limited resources, and the steps being taken toward local solidarity and self-support. The visitation and encounters with lay and clergy leaders were determined to be mutually beneficial. The three assessment sub-teams met prior to and after their visits for preparation, debriefing, and reporting. They readily recognized that the concern of too heavy workloads for bishops would probably be seen in other episcopal areas, particularly but not exclusively in Africa.

As the mission has grown in many parts of Africa, the borders of annual conferences, episcopal areas, and central conferences have expanded to the point of sometimes overlapping. Due to migration, new ministries have been established outside the former boundaries, causing questions of oversight to arise. Episcopal areas seem more able to build collaborative structures, but for many reasons such collaboration appears to be missing on the level of central conferences.

The Episcopal Area Assessment Team became convinced that, as decided at the 2012 General Conference, simply adding one new episcopal area in Africa was insufficient, even if limited to the needs in the Congo Central Conference. It has become clear to the Standing Committee that the need for additional bishops in Africa affects more regions and central conferences than those that have been assessed. We have also seen that the size of the territories covered by central conferences has contributed to making them dysfunctional. We have also been able to determine that funding for new episcopal areas needs to be clearly mandated a quadrennium in advance in order for new episcopal areas to be effectively established.

After weighing all the complexities related to the creation and support of episcopal areas on the continent of Africa, and after intense and prayerful discussion, the Standing Committee agreed to recommend to the General Conference a plan that would be developed in collaboration with representatives from all over Africa. The Standing Committee unanimously voted to recommend that a collaborative comprehensive plan be organized and implemented to determine the number of episcopal areas and central conferences needed in Africa and their boundaries. An integral part of this plan would increase the number of bishops in Africa from 13 to 18. This addition of bishops would occur in the 2021-24 quadrennium, with the Episcopal Fund for this quadrennium reflecting this addition of bishops. This comprehensive plan is being recommended by a unanimous vote of the Standing Committee to the 2016 General Conference for adoption.

As a result of working with the criteria and analysis described in the Book of Discipline 2012, ¶ 404.1, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters is seeking to consider the need for additional episcopal areas in a more future-oriented manner instead of simply reacting to petitions for additional bishops sent to General Conference every four years. In the new quadrennium the Standing Committee hopes to consider the context of ministry in the Philippines Central Conference and conduct further analysis of the episcopal needs in this region of the world.

Other Topics

The Standing Committee worked in a consultative role with the General Council on Finance and Administration on a formula for apportionment contributions from annual conferences in central conferences. Central conferences have contributed to the Episcopal Fund over a long period of time. Some have contributed on a traditional formula based on salaries. Others have worked to contribute 10 percent of their expenditures or more. The new proposed formula for apportionment contributions from annual conferences in central conferences would provide for contributions to be made to the General Administration and the Episcopal Funds, with both of these apportioned funds being classified as truly worldwide. This new formula would also be based on a double factor of membership and an economic modifier (Gross Domestic Product), which would take into account the economic strength of the country of the annual conference. The Standing Committee supports the related legislation being submitted by the General Council on Finance and Administration [Report #8, Apportionment Formulas].

The Standing Committee is also submitting revisions to the membership of the Standing Committee, in BOD, 2012, ¶ 2201.3 We are recommending that each episcopal area in the central conferences have at least one member on the Standing Committee and that the central conference bishop assigned to serve on the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships serve as a member of the Standing Committee instead of the bishop assigned to serve on the board of the General Council on Finance and Administration. For the sake of expertise and continuity, the Standing Committee strongly hopes that eligible members will be reelected for a second term.

Mandate for the 2017-2020 Quadrennium

The Standing Committee has developed into an effective committee of the General Conference. In order to accomplish the tasks given to it by the General Conference as outlined in its mandates in ¶ 101, ¶ 404.1, and ¶ 2201 of the Book of Discipline 2012, in the next quadrennium the Standing Committee plans to meet once each year in 2017, 2018, and 2019, as well as on-site at the 2020 General Conference. It will continue to work diligently to embody and implement the spirit and culture of a church connected for mission and ministry as expressed in the Covenant of a Worldwide United Methodist Church (BOD, ¶ 125).

It is our hope that a General Book of Discipline would offer more clarity on the essentials of what truly makes us a connectional worldwide church. In the next quadrennium, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters further hopes to take up another important, but often neglected, part of its mandate, that being our relationship to affiliated and concordat churches. The Standing Committee's mandate in ¶ 2201 states: "The standing committee shall serve as the coordinating body to study the structure and supervision of The United Methodist Church in its work outside the United States and its territories and its relationships to other Church bodies." We are committed to working on this aspect of our mandate in close cooperation with the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships.

General Conference has entrusted the Standing Committee with essential tasks for a worldwide connection. In listening to each other and to God's spirit among us, we the members of the Standing Committee have been blessed to be part of this journey. We pray that our humble work may contribute to the church's mission of making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world, all to the glory of God.

Study Paper of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

“Towards criteria for enabling central conferences to fulfill their purpose”

Aim: Central conferences fulfill their mission and ministry in effective and efficient ways

1. Background

Historically, central conferences have a long history in United Methodism. They were created in the Methodist Episcopal Church in the 1880s. The Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Evangelical United Brethren Church followed a similar pattern in later years. All these churches created central conferences exclusively for territories outside the U.S. In 1939, at the merger of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Protestant Church into The Methodist Church, the model of central conferences was used in creating jurisdictional conferences for a subdivision of the church in the U.S. Thus, five jurisdictions were created on geographical lines and one additional jurisdiction on racial lines, the central jurisdiction for Afro-Americans. In 1968, at the merger of The Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren Church into The United Methodist Church, the central jurisdiction was abolished.

For territories within the U.S., the five geographical jurisdictional conferences were maintained. For territories outside the U.S., the central conferences were maintained. The constitution was supplemented by “provided that in The United Methodist Church there shall be no jurisdictional or central conference based on any ground other than geographical and regional division” (BOD, 2012, ¶ 9).¹

Structurally, central conferences came into being at a time when there was no intermediate conference structure between annual conferences and the General Conference. As Methodism grew in India and established more than one single annual conference in the country, these annual conferences only had structural links to the U.S., including the mission board in the U.S., but not among themselves. They were looking for a structural link among annual conferences in a region that would enable them to create common programs and institutions for the benefit of the whole region. In the 1880s, General Conference agreed to create a Central Mission Conference, which eventually became the central conference and delegated some of its powers to central conferences.

1. Historical references in other parts of this paper are related to the Methodist Episcopal Church unless otherwise specified.

The primary aim of central conferences was the promotion of collaboration among annual conferences in specific regions outside the U.S. This purpose is expressed in the constitution by “To promote the evangelistic, educational, missionary, social-concern, and benevolent interests and institutions of the Church within their own boundaries” (BOD, 2012, ¶ 31.1) and “To establish and constitute such central conference boards as may be required and to elect their administrative officers” (BOD, 2012, ¶ 31.3).

Concerning election of bishops, central conferences at first had no such rights. All bishops were elected by General Conference whether for the U.S. or for central conferences and almost all of them were U.S. citizens. At certain times, the General Conference allowed the election of “missionary bishops” for territories outside the U.S., but they were not equal to bishops elected by General Conference as “general superintendents.” The 1928 General Conference did not accept the proposal from the Board of Missions to create a central conference for all of the U.S., but delegated the power of election of bishops to central conferences. All bishops for the U.S. continued to be elected by General Conference up until the merger in 1939 when jurisdictional conferences were created for the U.S. However, only since 1968 all bishops, whether elected by jurisdictional or central conferences, became equal. In 1968, central conferences retained the right to decide on the term of election. Usually, a newly formed central conference elected one single bishop. As the ministry grew, a central conference would receive the right to elect additional bishops, but without establishing itinerancy among them. The right of election is expressed in the constitution by “To elect the bishops for the respective central conferences in number as may be determined from time to time, upon a basis fixed by the General Conference, and to cooperate in carrying out such plans for the support of their bishops as may be determined by the General Conference” (BOD, 2012, ¶ 31.2). The equal powers, privileges, and duties of bishops are expressed by “. . . so that a unified superintendency and episcopacy is hereby created and established of, in, and by those who now are and shall be bishops of The United Methodist Church” (BOD, 2012, ¶ 45).

Central conference membership in general boards and agencies is, in historic perspective, a rather recent development. For most of the history, general boards and agencies were strictly limited to ministry in the U.S. The General Board of Global Ministries had a unique mandate that extended to territories outside the U.S. The 1984 General Conference finally gave permission to all general boards and agencies to work outside the U.S. As a consequence, membership in general boards and agencies opened up to central conference delegates. The general provisions in the chapter on Administrative Order include central conference membership in agencies as well as a paragraph on international and ecumenical settings that gives to GBGM a mandate to “facilitate and coordinate the program relationships of other program agencies” (see BOD, 2012, ¶ 720).

2. Present reality

In reality, it has to be acknowledged honestly that central conferences have been able only in limited ways to fulfill their mission and ministry. The 2012 Study on the Worldwide Nature of The United Methodist Church as well as the 2012 report of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters pointed to these problems. The latter closed by saying “members highlighted a number of issues around the structure and work of central conferences. A careful examination of current practice and conditions shows that some central conferences in many parts of the world lack the capacity to function according to their intended mandate. . . . The standing committee is willing to look at these issues in the new quadrennium, to open a conversation with the central conferences at standing committee meetings during the 2013-2016 quadrennium and to bring proposals to the 2016 General Conference.”

During the 2013-2016 quadrennium, only few central conferences sent feedback to the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters concerning the three questions submitted for study.² It has been difficult for members of the Standing Committee to get a good grasp of the diversity, challenges, and potentials of central conferences. The College of Central Conference Bishops was included in the discussion and encouraged to search for a solution in close consultation with the existing central conferences, rather than a top-down solution submitted to and voted at general conference.

2. The questions were:

- (1) What are your mission plans and goals for the quadrennium?
- (2) What are the greatest obstacles the central conference faces to reach the mission plans and goals for the quadrennium?
- (3) What would strengthen your central conference efforts to meet your mission plans and goals? What is most needed?

The following main problems were identified:

1. Distances within and costs of the central conference
2. Problem of resources to bring people together for effective work
3. Many central conferences exist only to elect bishops
4. Most central conferences are more occupied with episcopal elections than with the mission of the church
5. Term episcopacy (as in the Philippines) brings a politicizing of the whole church
6. A bishop is elected from the episcopal area where he or she will serve, but delegates from other episcopal areas in the central conference do not know the candidates and will not be affected by the choice they make because the person elected will never serve in their area. It raises the question why are bishops elected by the central conference?
7. Often it is easier to meet in the U.S. than within the central conference.

3. Toward clarifying the purpose and criteria for establishing central conferences

In order to fulfill their mission and ministry in effective and efficient ways, central conferences need to focus on their unique purpose, which neither annual nor General Conference can do. The main purpose is twofold: (1) to develop collaboration and mutually beneficial work between annual conferences on a regional connectional level, and (2) to develop episcopal oversight on a regional connectional level. How can central conferences best serve this aim, regarding their power and authority, their boundaries, and their administrative and financial organization?

Therefore, the Global or General Book of Discipline proposes the following purpose statement: “The purpose of the central conference is to connect regionally annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, and missions, for common mission and ministry, to establish episcopal supervision as an expression of the General Superintendency, and to facilitate worldwide connections.” (Draft of a General Book of Discipline, ¶ 511.1)

In order to organize a central conference in effective and efficient ways, the following elements need to be considered:

- Power and duties of central conferences
- Proximity and number of annual conferences

- Ministry and number of bishops (see criteria for episcopal areas, BOD, 2012, ¶ 404.1)
- Number of countries and languages
- Financial solidarity and self-support

Each of these elements is developed in more detail and a preliminary analysis of present central conferences was presented to the Standing Committee at its meeting in Maputo 2015 in a separate document.

Power and duties of central conferences

Power and duties of central conferences are established by the constitution (BOD, 2012, ¶ 31) and the relevant section in the chapter on conferences (see BOD, 2012, ¶ 543). BOD, 2012, ¶ 543 gives power and authority to central conferences in a way that few or none of them fully implement in their ministry. The present problem of central conferences is not a lack of power and authority, but a lack of capacity for purposeful implementation.

Therefore, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters does not propose major changes regarding power and duties of central conferences. The new global or General Book of Discipline proposes only slight revision and abbreviation of the present paragraph (see draft of a General Book of Discipline, ¶ 512).

Proximity and number of annual conferences

Because one of the twofold unique purposes of a central conference is to develop collaboration and mutually beneficial work between annual conferences in a region, the proximity and number of annual conferences play a key role.

Only once in history did a single annual conference become a central conference and this was due to political reasons (German Democratic Republic 1970-1992). In all other instances, central conferences were made up of a larger number of annual conferences, including provisional annual conferences and missions. But some central conferences contain annual conferences that do not share any common regional bonds, are far distant from each other, or have different common languages. Without common regional bonds or a common language, there is no rationale that the mission and ministry could be done effectively through collaboration in a central conference.

Therefore, central conferences shall be organized in a way that annual conferences, sharing regional bonds or a common language, can develop collaborative ministry.

Ministry and number of bishops

On the ministry of a bishop, several elements need further consideration: the election term and process, the role as itinerating general superintendent, the accountability, and the criteria for the number of bishops.

Concerning the election term, central conferences have developed a certain range of options. Over long-term two tendencies can be observed. On one hand short, repeated terms of election (every four years) tend to create a climate of constant pre-election considerations, coupled with reluctance to make unpopular decisions needed for the mission of the church. On the other hand very long tenures (20 years or more) together with non-itinerancy tend to create an over-domination of the bishop in all affairs of the conference, coupled with a reduction of diversity in approaches to ministry and in styles of personalities. Each central conference has the freedom to decide on election terms.

Therefore, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters does not propose any changes concerning the freedom to decide on election terms.

Concerning the election process, large central conferences with several bishops have developed a practice where (a) candidates are proposed only from annual conferences where the future bishop will serve, (b) delegates from other episcopal areas hardly know candidates, and (c) delegates from other episcopal areas vote without any consequence that the person elected may become bishop in their own episcopal area. The missing proximity and regional bonds among the annual conferences endanger the spiritual dimension of electing the person who has become known for his or her gifts and graces among God's people. The problem is linked to an overlap of two dysfunctions: (1) the situation of a large central conference without regional bonds among its annual conferences, and (2) non-itinerancy of the elected bishops.

Concerning the role as itinerating general superintendent, central conference bishops usually have lived within the limitations of remaining within the same episcopal area. If their episcopal area is composed of more than one annual conference, their itinerating role is at least extended to the supervision of several annual conferences, and their general superintending role depends on their mandates in the general Church. Thus, there is a tendency that central conference bishops may become or be seen as diocesan bishops, similar to most other denominations, particularly if they supervise only one annual conference.

Therefore, central conferences with more than one bishop need to match the two criteria of (1) constituting a meaningful regional entity and (2) itinerancy of its bishops.

Concerning the accountability, central conference bishops do not form one single college of central conference bishops, but are amenable to the College of Bishops in their respective central conference. Weak structures in a central conference impede the development of adequate accountability and evaluation of the ministry of bishops by an elected committee of lay and clergy (BOD, 2012, ¶ 412). In some cultures around the world, there is no model in society or churches how leaders can be regularly and meaningfully evaluated by and accountable to an elected group of people who are neither peers nor hierarchically superior. Furthermore, the judicial process established in the Book of Discipline counts on a plurality of active bishops (BOD, 2012, ¶¶ 48 and 413). Therefore it is impracticable in a central conference with a single active bishop.

Therefore, central conferences need to build up adequate leadership of lay and clergy for common purposes of a central conference, including evaluation and accountability of bishops.

Furthermore, the judicial process for bishops needs revision. The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters is willing to help in a consultative role in revising the present process.

On the number of bishops in a central conference: see criteria for episcopal areas, BOD, 2012, ¶ 404.1, and the full report developed by the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters during the 2009-2012 quadrennium. In regions with a low density of UMC ministry (number of local churches and active clergy), a central conference may become a large regional entity and nevertheless be limited to one active bishop.

Therefore, central conferences may exist with as few as one active bishop if the density of UMC ministry (number of local churches and active clergy) is low, but shall have preferably several bishops if The UMC is well implanted in a region.

Number of countries and languages

Concerning the number of countries, central conferences should at least be comprised of one country, because annual conferences in one country share a common civil legal situation, common interest in developing the mission in the country, and common responsibility to represent the interest of the church in ecumenical, interreligious, social, and political matters. The maximum number of countries is linked to two factors: (1) The UMC ministry in these countries should give a workload that reasonably allows the election of at least one bishop; (2) The UMC ministry in these countries should not be spread out beyond what can be organized into a meaningful regional entity.

Concerning the number of languages, central conferences should be able to have one common language for organizing their work, at the maximum two. The ministry in a central conference may be done in a multitude of languages and dialects in the various annual conferences, but a central conference should be able to hold its sessions and committee meetings in one common language of communication. If the work needs to extend to two languages of communication, additional expertise for translation needs to be generated and subsequent costs be built into the budget.

Therefore, the setting of boundaries of central conferences needs to be done by regionally organizing the work of The UMC in balancing the following minimum and maximum factors: (1) at least one country, and at the maximum as many countries as can be organized into a meaningful regional entity and as needed to present a reasonable workload for a bishop; (2) having one common language of communication for its sessions and committee meetings, at the maximum two.

Financial solidarity and self-support

Concerning financial solidarity, each central conference will be made up of sub-regions with different economic situations and a very diverse financial strength of its local churches and annual conferences. Central conference may strengthen financial solidarity among its sub-regions, as well in how it calculates the support in favor of the central conference itself as in how it supports ministry in less developed sub-regions of the central conference.

Concerning self-support, each central conference should be a self-supporting entity through financial contributions from its annual conferences. This principle favors an adequate and efficient use as well of gifts and time by volunteers as of limited financial capacity. In many regions the only effective and adequately funded ministry structure beyond an annual conference is the bishop's office. In less developed regions of the world, self-support remains a challenge for conference structures because the ministry of the Church depends heavily on money from third parties. For all donations in the worldwide UMC, it would be helpful to get clarity and agreement on a percentage that may be used for administration and for the cost of a connectional conference structure.

Therefore, there is still much work to be done in many regions of the world for establishing financial solidarity within central conferences, attaining self-support of central conferences, and building up efficient structures for sessions of the central conference, its committees, and its activities.

Furthermore, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters is willing to help in a consultative role in establishing guidelines on Church-wide donations for ministry that include building up efficient organizational structures in central conferences.

4. Toward implementing such purpose and criteria in territories outside the U.S.

Summary of findings in part 3 that do not need further changes or revision:

- Power, authority, and duties of central conferences do not need major changes. The draft of a global or General Book of Discipline proposes only slight revision and abbreviation of the present paragraph.
- No change is needed concerning the authority to decide on election terms of bishops.

Summary of findings in part 3 that need further study and in which the Standing Committee is willing to help in a consultative role:

- The judicial process for bishops needs revision. The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters is willing to help in a consultative role in revising the present provisions. (See proposed changes in the draft of a General Book of Discipline, ¶ 411.)
- Guidelines on Church-wide donations for ministry should be elaborated that include building up efficient organizational structures in central conferences. In partnership with the Connectional Table, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters is willing to help in a consultative role in establishing such provisions.

Summary of findings in part 3 that need to be implemented in revising and improving central conferences in order that they can fulfill their mission and ministry in effective and efficient ways. The following factors need to be taken into account:

- Boundaries of central conferences shall be organized in a way that annual conferences sharing regional bonds, or a common language, can develop collaborative ministry.
 - Central conferences may exist with as few as one active bishop if the density of UMC ministry (number of local churches and active clergy) is low, but shall have preferably several bishops if The UMC is well implanted in a region.
 - Central conferences with more than one bishop need to match the two criteria of (1) constituting a meaningful regional entity and (2) itinerancy of its bishops.
 - Central conferences need to build up adequate leadership of lay and clergy for common purposes of a central conference, including evaluation and accountability of bishops.
 - Central conferences and provisional central conferences need to establish criteria for assessing missional effectiveness.
- The setting of boundaries of central conferences needs to be done by regionally organizing the work of The UMC in balancing the following minimum and maximum factors: (1) at least one country, and at the maximum as many countries as can be organized into a meaningful regional entity and as needed to present a reasonable workload for a bishop; (2) having one common language of communication for its sessions and committee meetings, at the maximum two.
 - Central conferences shall establish financial solidarity within their boundaries, attain self-support, and build up efficient structures for sessions of the central conference, its committees, and its activities.

For implementing these key factors, numbers, boundaries, and organization of the present central conferences need revision. Such revision shall be done by the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters in consultation with the central conferences, their executive committees, and their active bishops, and shall lead to legislation on numbers and boundaries of central conferences to the 2020 General Conference.

Rationale:

This change corrects the inadvertent inclusion of Zambia in two central conferences.

Composition of Central Conferences

Amend ¶ 541.1:

¶ 541. Composition.1. The central conference shall be composed of clergy and lay members in equal numbers, the clergy members elected by the clergy members of the annual conference and the lay members by the lay members thereof. Their qualifications and the manner of election shall be determined by the central conference itself, subject only to constitutional requirements. Each annual conference and provisional annual conference shall be entitled to at least two clergy and two lay delegates, and no other selection of delegates shall be authorized that would provide for more than one clergy delegate for every six clergy members of an annual conference; except that a majority of the number fixed by a central conference as the ratio of representation shall entitle an annual conference to an additional clergy delegate and to an additional lay delegate. Each missionary conference that has established the right of full ministerial membership (¶ 586.4.a) and has a minimum of six full ministerial members shall be entitled to at least one clergy and one lay delegate. Each missionary conference that has not established the right of full ministerial membership (¶ 586.4.c and g) and mission is authorized to elect and send one of its members . . .

Rationale:

The Constitution ¶¶ 13.1, 14 and 15 were amended in 1976. I move that the consequences of these 1976 amendments shall be implemented in the central conference section ¶ 541.1.

Jurisdictional Administrative Process

¶ 543.22 A central conference shall establish from its membership an Administrative Review Committee of at least three persons who are not members of the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy. Its only purpose shall be to ensure that the disciplinary procedures for any involuntary action recommended by the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy are properly followed. The entire administrative process leading to the action for change of status of the bishop shall be reviewed by the administrative review committee, and it shall report its findings to the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy and the jurisdictional conference prior to any action by those bodies. The administrative review committee shall notify the parties of the review process. The administrative fair process hearing procedures (¶ 362.2) should be followed by the administrative review committee. Prior to its report, if the committee determines that any error has occurred, it may recommend to the appropriate person or body that action be taken promptly to remedy the error, decide the error is harmless, or take other action.

Amending Social Principles to Meet Special Conditions

Amend ¶ 543.7 as follows:

7. A central conference shall have power to make such changes and adaptations of the Book of Discipline as the special conditions and the mission of the church in the area require, especially concerning the organization and administration of the work on local church, district, and annual conference levels, and of the Social Principles, provided that no action shall be taken . . .

Rationale:

To allow a central conference to amend the Social Principles to fit its exigent cultures and situations.

No annual conference shall be organized with fewer than ~~thirty-five~~ seventy-five clergy members except as an enabling act for the quadrennium, which shall not reduce the number below ~~twenty-five~~ fifty. Nor shall an annual conference be continued with fewer than ~~twenty-five~~ sixty clergy members except as provided by an enabling act for the quadrennium.

Rationale:

The petition change will allow for a more just representation from the respective annual conferences in the distribution of General Conference delegates without requiring a constitutional amendment to the Book of Discipline. With the creation of provisional conferences, there is an overrepresentation of these conferences that are guaranteed two General . . .

Petition Number: 60289-CC-¶560-G; Kemper, Thomas - New York, NY, USA for General Board of Global Ministries. Streiff, Patrick - Zurich, Switzerland for Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters.

Provisional Central Conferences

Amend the Book of Discipline as follows:

Section IV. Provisional Central Conferences

¶ 560. Authorization—Annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions outside the United States that are not included in central conferences or in the territory of affiliated autonomous churches and that, because of geographical, language, political, or other considerations, have common interests that can best be served thereby, may be organized into provisional central conferences as provided in ¶ 540.1. (See Judicial Council Decision 525.)

The United Methodist Church shall have a provisional central conference with ministries in the following countries:

a) Southeast Asia and Mongolia Provisional Central Conference: Laos, Mongolia, Thailand and Vietnam.

Rationale:

The missions administered by Global Ministries in these countries are not included in a central conference or in territory of affiliated autonomous churches. A provisional central conference has to be created in order for these missions to be allowed to organize as annual or provisional annual conferences.

Petition Number: 60902-CC-¶586-G; Thaarup, Joergen - Strandby, Denmark.

Missionary Conference Delegates to Central Conference

Amend ¶ 586.3 and 586.4.d:

¶ 586.3. Missionary conferences shall elect clergy and lay delegates to General and jurisdictional conference on the same basis as annual conferences as provided in ¶¶ 502 and 514: and to central conference on the basis provided in ¶ 541.1.

¶ 586.4. d) Affiliated relationship shall entitle the ordained minister to the fellowship of the conference, to full participation in its activities, including holding office and representing the missionary conference in general, ~~and~~ jurisdictional and central conferences. An affiliate member of a missionary conference shall not vote in his or her annual conference while retaining the affiliate relationship to a missionary conference. Such affiliate relationship to a missionary conference shall be only for the duration of the ordained minister's appointment to the conference.

An affiliate member elected to a general or jurisdictional or central conference from a missionary conference shall not be eligible to be elected to such position from the conference where his or her membership is held.

Rationale:

The Constitution ¶¶ 13.1, 14 and 15 were amended in 1976. I move that the consequences of these 1976 amendments shall be implemented in the missionary conference section ¶ 586.3 and 586.4.

General Provisions

Amend ¶¶ 2201.3 and 2201.4 of the Book of Discipline as follows:

3. Other paragraphs of the Discipline notwithstanding, members may serve for three (3) four year terms and may serve on one other general agency. The Standing Committee shall be composed of one bishop from each jurisdiction and from each central conference named by the Council of Bishops; one ordained minister and one layperson from each jurisdiction and from each central conference who are delegates to the General Conference and ~~named by the Council of Bishops~~ elected by the jurisdictional and central conferences; central conferences with more than three episcopal areas shall elect additional members, lay or clergy, up to the total number of episcopal areas in the central conference; one bishop, one ordained minister, and one layperson who are elected members of the General Board of Global Ministries and named by the Council of Bishops General Board of Global Ministries. The central conference bishop assigned to the ~~General Council on Finance and Administration~~ Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships shall also be a member of this committee. Special attention shall be given to the inclusion of women, lay, clergy, youth, and young adults. The chairperson of the committee shall be a central conference bishop and shall also serve as a member of the Connectional Table. Members of the committee will serve until their replacements are named or elected. ~~(This legislation will take effect upon the conclusion of the 2012 General Conference.)~~

4. The Standing Committee ... having voice but no vote until the organizing meeting. ~~(This legislation will take effect upon the conclusion of the 2012 General Conference.)~~

Rationale:

The revision adds members to allow each episcopal area to be represented by at least one person, substitutes the central conference bishop on the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships for the central conference bishop on the General Council on Finance and Administration, and gives more ownership to jurisdictional . . .

Petition Number: 60155-CC-¶2201.3; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Membership

Amend the second sentence of ¶ 2201.3 as follows:

The central conference bishop assigned to the General Council on Finance and Administration, if any, shall also be a member of this committee.

Petition Number: 60555-CC-¶2201.3-G; Kilpatrick, Joe W. - Tucker, GA, USA for Open Door Sunday School Class - Tucker First UMC.

Standing Committee Membership

Amend ¶ 2201.3 by deleting all the existing text and substituting the following text:

3. The committee shall be composed of one bishop from each central conference and each jurisdictional conference plus fourteen (14) ordained clergy and laity who are members of the General Conference with our Church's global perspective and with international experience. Seven clergy and seven laity shall be allocated to the jurisdictions according to membership in the jurisdictions. Seven clergy and seven laity shall be allocated to the central conferences according to membership in the central conferences. The Council of Bishops shall name the members. The members shall elect their officers, their executive committee, and up to three ex officio members that they deem necessary for their work.

Rationale:

As now, there is a bishop from each central and jurisdictional conference. Other members are shared equally, balancing financial and membership stakeholders. Proportionality increases Africa's voice by eight members, to 42.5% of the committee, greatly improving Africa's current substantial (22.5%) underrepresentation. No area has a majority.

Comprehensive Plan for Africa

Comprehensive Plan for central conferences and episcopal areas in Africa

The 2012 General Conference established a set of criteria for episcopal areas in central conferences related to the workload of a bishop, and asked that assessments into the mission potential be made (BOD 2012, ¶ 404.1). After visitations in three different episcopal areas, the assessment teams were convinced that solutions to the immense needs and challenges related to the workload of bishops and to the vastness and dysfunctionalities of central conferences need to be sought in a concerted effort with the leadership in Africa and that such collaboration needs to take place early in the next quadrennium.

Therefore, the 2016 General Conference approves that the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters shall plan, organize and implement a collaborative comprehensive plan on numbers and boundaries of central conferences and episcopal areas in Africa. As an integral part of this plan, the number of episcopal areas in Africa shall increase from 13 to 18 after the 2020 General Conference. Such increase shall be included in the budget of the Episcopal Fund for the quadrennium 2021-2024. The comprehensive plan includes:

A focus on Africa and the number and boundaries of its central conferences and episcopal areas;

Two meetings of representatives from Africa, composed of one delegate from each annual and provisional annual conference in Africa, elected by their central conference, and of all active African bishops;

A participation of the Standing Committee, which will be limited to ten of its members, not from Africa.

The Standing Committee will plan and organize the consultations and recommend to the 2020 General Conference the implementing steps for a revision of the number and boundaries of the central conferences and the episcopal areas in each central conference, including enabling actions to organize the “constituting sessions” of the central conferences.

The financial implications for the 2017-2020 quadrennium are linked to the two meetings planned. The total costs of USD 320,000 are being requested from the General Administration Fund Contingency.

Rationale:

Even if the pressing needs in Africa may claim for immediate action, only a spirit and practice of conferencing and collaboration among all United Methodist leaders in Africa may bring future-oriented and promising solutions to the multiple and complex challenges. Only together will it be possible to build connectional structures . . .

Southeast Asia and Mongolia Provisional Central Conference - Power and Duties

The 2016 General Conference approves the creation of the Southeast Asia and Mongolia Provisional Central Conference with ministries in Laos, Mongolia, Thailand and Vietnam as provided in ¶ 560.

The 2016 General Conference grants the following powers and duties to the Southeast Asia and Mongolia Provisional Central Conference:

1. To a provisional central conference shall be committed for supervision and promotion, in harmony with the Discipline and interdenominational contractual agreements, the missionary, educational, evangelistic, industrial, publishing, medical, and other connectional interests of the annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions within its territory and such other matters as may be referred to it by said bodies or by order of the General Conference; and it shall provide suitable organizations for such work and elect the necessary officers for the same.

2. The General Council on Finance and Administration shall determine the apportionment amounts for the annual conferences of the provisional central conferences for the succeeding quadrennium based on calculation methodology approved by the General Conference upon recommendation by the Council. This determination shall be informed by consultation with the Council of Bishops.

3. A provisional central conference shall have authority to elect and support general officers in all departments of the work of the Church within the boundaries of the provisional central conference but may not elect or determine the number of bishops.

4. A provisional central conference shall fix the boundaries of the annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions within its bounds, proposals for changes first having been submitted to the annual conferences concerned as prescribed in the Discipline of The United Methodist Church. No annual conference shall be organized with fewer than thirty-five clergy members except as provided by an enabling act for the quadrennium, which shall not reduce the number below twenty-five. Nor shall an annual conference be continued with fewer than twenty-five clergy members except as provided by an enabling act for the quadrennium.

5. A provisional central conference may advise its annual conferences and provisional annual conferences to set standards of character and other qualifications for admission of lay members.

6. A provisional central conference shall have power to make changes and adaptations in procedure pertaining to the annual, district, and charge conferences within its territory and to add to the business of the annual conference supplementary questions considered desirable or necessary to meet its own needs.

7. A provisional central conference shall have authority to examine and acknowledge the journals of the annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions located within its bounds and to make rules for the drawing up of the journals as may seem necessary.

8. A provisional central conference shall have authority to adopt rules of procedure governing the investigation and trial of its clergy, including bishops, and lay members of the Church and to provide the necessary means and methods of implementing the said rules; provided, however, that the ordained ministers shall not be deprived of the right of trial by a clergy committee, and lay members of the Church of the right of trial by a duly constituted committee of lay members; and provided also, that the rights of appeal shall be adequately safeguarded.

9. A provisional central conference is authorized to prepare and translate simplified or adapted forms of such parts of the ritual as it may deem necessary, such changes to require the approval of bishop or bishops of the provisional central conference.

10. A provisional central conference shall have the power to conform the detailed rules, rites, and ceremonies for the solemnization of marriage to the statute laws of the country or countries within its jurisdiction.

11. Subject to the approval of its bishops, a provisional central conference shall have the power to prescribe courses of study for the annual conferences and provisional annual conferences within its territory, including those in the vernaculars, for its ministry, both foreign and indigenous, including local preachers, lay servants, Bible women, deaconesses, teachers—both male and female—and all other workers whatsoever, ordained or lay. It shall also make rules and regulations for examination in these courses.

12. In a provisional central conference using a language other than English, legislation passed by a General Conference shall not take effect until twelve months after the close of that General Conference in order to afford the necessary time to make adaptations and to publish a translation of the legislation that has been enacted, the translation to be approved by the bishops of the provisional central conference. This provision, however, shall not exclude the election of delegates to the General Conference by annual conferences within the territory of provisional central conferences.

13. A provisional central conference is authorized to interpret Article XXIII of the Articles of Religion (page 69 of 2012 BOD) so as to recognize the governments of the country or countries within its territory.

14. A provisional central conference shall have power to authorize the congregations in a certain state or country to form special organizations in order to receive the acknowledgment of the state or country according to the laws of that state or country. These organizations shall be empowered to represent the interests of the Church to the authorities of the state or country according to the rules and principles of The United Methodist Church, and they shall be required to give regular reports of their activities to their respective annual conferences.

15. A provisional central conference may, with the consent of the bishops in that conference, enter into agreements with churches or missions of other denominations for the division of territory or of responsibility for Christian work within the territory of the provisional central conference.

16. A provisional central conference shall have the right to negotiate with other Protestant bodies looking toward the possibility of church union; provided that any proposals for church union shall be submitted to the General Conference for approval before consummation.

Rationale:

The newly created provisional central conference is granted appropriate powers and duties by the General Conference according to ¶ 562. The proposed powers and duties are adapted from the powers and duties of the central conferences according to ¶ 543.

Establish Kenya Missionary Conference

In accordance with ¶ 587 Book of Discipline 2012, we the undersigned petition the 2016 General Conference to create the Kenya Missionary Conference.

The petition has global and financial implications in that it seeks co-operation with the General Board of Global Ministries.

Rationale:

Whereas the East Africa Episcopal Area covering six countries is in leadership crisis, we believe that establishment of a Missionary Conference status will help preserve and further the missionary opportunities in Kenya where the UMC is fast growing. Establish Central Asia Provisional Annual Conference

We hereby ask General Conference and Northern Europe and Eurasia Central Conference to make decision concerning the establishment of a Central Asia Provisional Annual Conference. According to the requirements of the Northern Europe Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church 2012 ¶ 581, Central Asia Provisional Annual Conference can be established.

At this moment, Central Asia District has six elders, one minister in probationary membership, four local pastors in Course of Study. There are further fifteen students in the Central Asia Center for Church Leadership which is a part of the Unified Educational System in Eurasia United Methodist Church along with Moscow Theological Seminary of The United Methodist Church. We expect that many of them will become committed ministers and leaders of our churches.

Central Asia District is gradually growing in self-sufficiency. We expect it to become fully self-sufficient within the next two quadrennia.

Rationale:

Central Asia is continuously growing.

The membership and contributions of the conference have shown a reasonable increase during the previous quadrennium and give evidence of an aggressive program for continued progress in both areas.

Further, Central Asia has a common Asian culture that is quite different from the Russian culture . . .

We thank the General Conference for Creating Africa University for the reputable training of African groups.

Given that Africa needs to train more groups, the central conferences have created universities to answer the needs of these groups. This is the case in the DRC Congo with the following Methodist universities: Katanga Methodist University, Kamina Methodist University, Kapanga Methodist University, Kabongo Methodist University; Kindu Methodist University, Wembo-Nyama Methodist University; other universities of the central conferences: Ivory Coast, Liberia, Sierra-Leone, Mozambique and Angola etc.

Summary Report of the General Commission on Archives and History

Listen to me, all you who are serious about right living. . . .

*Ponder the rock from which you were cut, the quarry from which you were dug.
(Isaiah 51:1 The Message)*

The Book of Discipline (§ 1703) sets forth the mandate of the General Commission on Archives and History (GCAH) “to promote and care for the historical interests of The United Methodist Church [UMC] at every level.” The commission uniquely blends critical administrative and programmatic functions across all levels of the connection. Far more than mere records maintenance and management, GCAH both preserves and disseminates texts, artifacts, and photographic images, which are keys to understanding, interpreting, and experiencing United Methodist identity and ethos.

Functionally speaking, GCAH serves The UMC in the collection, archiving, proper care, disposition, and access to information about the history of The UMC and its antecedents. The commission archives the records of all boards and agencies of the Church and the episcopal offices, personal papers of historic figures of the Church, and answers numerous research requests. The Archives Center is a climate-controlled, secure depository that can be electronically accessed anywhere in the world. The commission’s work is done in a professional and competent manner according to the standards of the Society of American Archivists and related organizations worldwide. In fulfilling this task, GCAH maintains the transparency and accountability expected from the leadership spheres of the denomination.

Of equal importance is the commission’s programmatic role. GCAH is tasked with the transmission and interpretation, via all media, of the history of The UMC with special attention to the historic witness made by women, racial, and ethnic persons (§ 1703.1,4,5). This task is fulfilled in many ways: annual Heritage Sunday resources bring denominational history and tradition to life locally; historical societies across the global Church, jurisdictional and annual conference commissions on archives and history, and local church historians are supported and resourced to fulfill Disciplinary functions; Methodist History, an academic journal for Wesley and Methodist studies is published quarterly; an extensive awards program encourages students and scholars in research and writing about United Methodist studies; historic sites and heritage landmarks worldwide are registered (§ 1712). Stories about the intersection of past history, present experience, and future impact are published. Fledgling archival centers in the Philippines and Africa were improved and various historic sites in Central Europe were cataloged.

Located at the United Methodist Archives Center on the campus of United Methodist Church-related Drew University, Madison, New Jersey, the commission is home to 35,000 volumes in print and microfilm, 10,000 pamphlets published by Methodist-affiliated traditions, 4,000 hymnbooks and hymnals, 2,000 Methodist-related periodicals, over 150 John Wesley and Wesley family related letters, 9,000 cubic feet of archival storage material (e.g., the records of the Council of Bishops, the general boards and agencies of The UMC, minutes of the General Conference from 1792, and more than 250,000 photographs).

Partnership with others who have passion for this work is how the agency accomplishes its mission with a small budget and staff (a total of six—four full-time, two part-time, with a cadre of work-study students). The commission works with great efficiency and fiscal prudence. Reserves are carefully invested to generate income. The Archives Center is owned by Drew University. The commission pays for its share of the building costs at a rate of $10/square foot, an amount below market rate. Collaboration between Drew University and GCAH is efficient and effective since the relationship’s inception in 1982.

GCAH’s attention to the 2012 General Conference Four Areas of Focus emerging has been active and intentional. The Developing Principled Christian Leaders and Creating New Places for New People foci depend on knowledge and interpretation of United Methodist ethos.

Leaders lead grounded in a strong sense of the origin and interpretation of the Wesleyan DNA that has formed and continues to shape them. Likewise Seekers are drawn to faith communities keenly aware of and faithful to their identity. As caretakers and promoters of the denominational ethos, GCAH continues to develop resources that get to the heart of where United Methodist identity meets everyday life and faith experience. The commission also awards a $10,000 scholarship annually to a person of color engaged in graduate level archival study.

Regarding Ministry with the Poor and Poor Communities and Abundant Health for All, the commission uses its research and writing resources in creating its own publications (e.g., issues of Methodist History and Heritage Sunday program resources were devoted to these specific foci).

Other accomplishments in the past quadrennium include: maintaining a vital, accessible archival and library collection in service to the church; the acquisition of the Bishop Gilbert Haven papers (1872-1880); answering more than 3,000 research requests from conferences, local churches, and individuals; processing 1,200 cubic feet of documents; hosting distinguished international scholars to view and study a missionary photo album collection; partnering with the African American Heritage Center; supporting the Committee for the Study of the Hispanic/Latino UMC in gathering oral history; supporting the work of the Wesley Works Project; facilitating archival development and record retention in central conferences; keeping close connection with the British Methodist Church and its Heritage Commission; providing annual research grants for racial/ethnic, women's, and central conference history; assisting more than 400 academic researchers, including Dr. Gary Roberts' Sand Creek Report.

Looking to the new quadrennium, GCAH has an eye toward: posting regular social media content about UMC history intersecting and impacting the present; hosting an archivist training event for African central conferences; creating (w/Boston University TS) a digital archive for Russian United Methodist history; collaborating with other general agencies on resources about United Methodist identity and ethos, particularly targeted to youth, young adults, and persons new to The UMC; strengthening the commission's financial strength via an aggressive development campaign.

Far more than the passive collectors and protectors of old records, the commission's place at the table makes "memory" active and experiential, awakening points of contact between past and present, building toward a future grounded in the best of Wesleyan ethos.

The staff and directors of GCAH count it a joy and privilege to engage in this vital ministry for The UMC.

The Book of Discipline (§ 1703) sets forth the mandate of the General Commission on Archives and History (GCAH) “to promote and care for the historical interests of The United Methodist Church [UMC] at every level.” The commission uniquely blends critical administrative and programmatic functions across all levels of the connection, from local churches to the General Conference, reaching to jurisdictions and central conferences, spanning the various boards, councils, commissions, and historical societies of the denomination.

Far more than mere records maintenance and management, GCAH both preserves and disseminates texts, artifacts, and photographic images that are key to understanding, interpreting, and experiencing United Methodist identity and ethos.

Functionally speaking, GCAH serves The UMC in the collection, archiving, proper care, disposition, and access to information about the history of The UMC and its antecedents. The commission archives the records of all boards and agencies of the Church and the episcopal offices, personal papers of nationally and internationally renowned leaders of the Church, answering numerous research requests. The Archives Center is a climate-controlled, secure, state-of-the-art facility that can be electronically accessed anywhere in the world. The commission’s work is done in a professional and competent manner according to the standards of the Society of American Archivists and related organizations worldwide. In fulfilling this task, GCAH maintains the transparency and accountability expected from the leadership spheres of the denomination. Best-practice document processing and retention regimens are scrupulously observed.

Of equal importance is the commission’s programmatic role. GCAH is tasked with the transmission and interpretation, via all media, of the history of The UMC and its antecedents, with special attention to the historic witness made by women, racial, and ethnic persons and The UMC worldwide (§ 1703.1,4,5).

GCAH fulfills this task via –

- annual Heritage Sunday resources bringing denominational tradition to life at local levels,
- supporting and equipping historical societies across the global Church,
- training and resourcing jurisdictional and annual conference commissions on archives and history in fulfilling Disciplinary functions,
- publishing Methodist History, an academic journal for Wesley and Methodist studies,
- publishing local church historian resources in the Guideline series,
- offering an extensive awards program meant to inspire and encourage students and scholars in research and writing about United Methodist history and heritage
- registering over 500 historic sites for annual conferences and supporting 46 heritage landmarks through an active grants program (§ 1712),
- partnering with United Methodist Communications to uncover and publish stories about the intersection of past history and present experience impacting the future.

Located at the United Methodist Archives Center on the campus of United Methodist Church-related Drew University, Madison, New Jersey, GCAH is home to 35,000 volumes in print and microfilm, 10,000 pamphlets published by Methodist-affiliated traditions, 4,000 hymnbooks and hymnals, 2,000 Methodist-related periodicals, over 150 John Wesley and Wesley family related letters, 9,000 cubic feet of archival storage material (e.g., housing the records of the Council of Bishops, the various general boards and agencies of The UMC, minutes and other records of the General Conference from 1792 and more than 250,000 photographs).

Other services include assistance from specialists in the fields of Wesleyan and Methodist studies, support to general Church, annual conferences, and local churches in archival development, records management, and genealogical research.

Partnership with others with passion for this work is how the agency accomplishes its mission with a small budget and staff (a total of six—four full-time, two part-time, with a cadre of work-study students gaining practical experience in the work of an active archival center). The commission is pleased to introduce a new generation to the exciting history of the denomination. GCAH also works in partnership with the Methodist Library and Special Collections staff of Drew University.

There are also close working relationships with annual conference commissions on archives and history and their archivists, as well as the network of jurisdictional commissions. In the 2013-16 quadrennium, the commission hosted training experiences for these groups. It also assisted in the development of archival centers in the Philippines and Africa and supported Central Europe in the publication of a book cataloging key historic sites in that jurisdiction.

The commission works with great efficiency and fiscal prudence. Annual budgets are basic and spending is prudent. Reserves are carefully invested to generate income. The Archives Center is owned by Drew University. The commission pays for its share of the building costs at a rate of approximately $10/square foot. This figure is well below market rate for space of such high quality. The university bears all capital expenses. The collaboration between Drew University and GCAH is both efficient and effective and has been since the relationship's inception in 1982.

GCAH's attention to the 2012 General Conference Four Areas of Focus has been active and intentional. Both the Developing Principled Christian Leaders and Creating New Places for New People foci depend on knowledge and interpretation of United Methodist ethos. Leaders lead grounded in a strong sense of the origins and interpretation of the Wesleyan DNA that has formed and continues to shape them. Likewise Seekers are drawn to faith communities keenly aware of and faithful to their identity. As caretakers and promoters of the denominational ethos, GCAH has and will continue to develop resources, in partnership with other agencies, that get to the heart of where United Methodist identity meets everyday faith and life experience. Further, regarding leadership development foci, the commission awards a $10,000 scholarship annually to a person of color engaged in graduate level archival study.

Regarding Ministry with the Poor and Poor Communities and Abundant Health for All, the commission uses its research and publication resources in creating its own publications (issues of Methodist History and annual Heritage Sunday program resources) devoted to these specific foci. It also assists other agencies in doing the same. GCAH will build on this work in the new quadrennium.

Other accomplishments in the past quadrennium include:

- Maintaining a vital, accessible archival and library collection for service to the church
- Acquisition of the Bishop Gilbert Haven papers (1872-1880)
- Answering more than 3,000 research requests from conferences, local churches, and individuals
- Processing 1,200 cubic feet of documents
- Hosting distinguished international scholars to view and study a missionary photo album collection
- Publishing 16 issues of Methodist History journal, more than 60 essays and book reviews
- Partnering with the African American Heritage Center (see following report)
- Supporting the Committee for the Study of the Hispanic/Latino UMC in gathering oral history
- Supporting the work of the Wesley Works Project as board member
- Facilitating archival development and record retention in central conferences
- Resourcing and archival work with each U.S. jurisdiction and central conference region
- Close connection with the British Methodist Church and its Heritage Commission
- Providing annual research grants for racial/ethnic, women's, and central conference history
- Assisting more than 400 academic researchers, including Dr. Gary Roberts' Sand Creek Report
- Engaging in search and hiring of new general secretary and communications staff
- Creating tributes to Francis Asbury in the year of his bicentennial

Looking to the new quadrennium GCAH has an eye to

- Creating regular social media content about UMC history intersecting and impacting the present
- Hosting an archivist training event for African central conferences at Africa University
- Creating (w/Boston University TS) a digital archive for Russian United Methodist history
- Collaborating with other general agencies on resources about United Methodist identity and ethos, particularly targeted to youth, young adults, and persons new to The UMC
- Strengthening the commission's financial strength via an aggressive development campaign

The "ministry of memory," as GCAH's work is often called, remembers the past, shapes identity in the present, and inspires vision for the future.

One essential in the work of church renewal is recovery of and appreciation for history and heritage. The stories surrounding The UMC's birth, growth, and development become history. History then grows into a system of thought and practice. Systems then evolve to do what systems do best—preserve status quo. It is the ability to turn and return to those primal, formative stories that stirs reawakening and resurrection.

In this paradigm, GCAH plays a critical role, collaborating with the other general commissions and agencies of The UMC, seated at the Connectional Table where the denomination's resources meet the missional mandate "to make disciples of Jesus Christ to transform world."

Far more than passive collectors of data and preserving records, GCAH's place at that table makes "memory" active and experiential, awakening points of contact between the past and the present, building toward a future grounded in the best of Wesleyan ethos.

The staff and directors of GCAH count it a joy and privilege to engage in this vital ministry for The UMC.

Summary Report of the African American Methodist Heritage Center

Mission Statement

The African American Methodist Heritage Center (AAMHC) provides research, preserves artifacts and other memorabilia, and protects and promotes the stories of African American people in Methodism.

Historical Background

The African American Methodist Heritage Center (AAMHC) originated with the National Black Methodists for Church Renewal (BMCR) in 2001. From the beginning, AAMHC worked closely with the General Commission on Archives and History (GCAH). In 2008, AAMHC entered into a partnership relationship with GCAH and co-located its office with GCAH. In 2008, the General Conference approved a $100,000.00 per year grant for the quadrennium. The 2012 General Conference and GCAH together granted $35,000 each year of the quadrennium for funding AAMHC. Reports of accountability and/or stewardship are provided annually to the General Council on Finance and Administration, the General Commission on Archives and History, and the National Black Methodists for Church Renewal.

AAMHC sponsored workshops to encourage and guide the leaders of annual conferences and African American local churches to be more intentional about the recovery and preservation of the history of African Americans in Methodism. AAMHC convened a consultation of Methodist scholars to plan a research agenda. AAMHC reprinted the book Black United Methodists: Retrospect and Prospect, by John H. Graham. It is the story of Black people related to Methodism from as early as 1758.

Accomplishments, 2013-2016

The ministry helps to build upon the contributions of our African American ancestors to develop and enable leadership for The United Methodist Church. Such informed leadership is critical to the growth and vitality of local congregations. The “We’ve Come This Far by Faith” video series was produced to tell the story of African Americans in Methodism, beginning with the Christmas Conference where Harry Hosier was present.

The quarterly AAMHC Journal was initiated in 2014. It is an electronic publication, primarily because of the expense of postage. The AAMHC Journal provides information and stories about historical figures, history-making events, and resources available to assist local church members in being more effective in their ministry to recover and preserve their history.

AAMHC established a partnership with Claflin University, a historically black university in Orangeburg, South Carolina. During 2014, AAMHC assisted Claflin with a small grant to establish an archival site on its campus.

The AAMHC seeks the papers and journals of African American leaders to add to its collection housed in the archival facilities of the GCAH. The collection is available for research. The AAMHC initiated an oral history project to recover from African American lay and clergy persons and episcopal leaders the stories of their journeys within The United Methodist Church and its predecessor structures. This is, and will be, an ongoing project.

During the 2013-2016 quadrennium, the AAMHC entered into a relationship with the United Methodist Church Development Center. The goal is to seek help in developing sources of funding for both the current operation of the AAMHC and to build an endowment base that will enable the ministry to continue into the future.

Goals for 2017-2020

AAMHC will continue the long-term project to collect and share the oral histories of African American lay, clergy, and episcopal leaders. AAMHC will continue to provide training opportunities and resources for local church and annual conference persons to enhance their skills in recovering and preserving their histories. More intensive efforts will be made to add to the collection of memorabilia and documents. Efforts will be continued to establish partnerships, within The United Methodist Church and with the historical African American churches that separated from the denomination during the period of racial segregation. Their story is important to the wholeness of Methodism.

AAMHC anticipates there will be financial support from the general Church during the 2017-2020 quadrennium. This is feasible with the help of African Americans, as well as with the support of all persons in The United Methodist Church.

Joshua obeyed the word from the Lord to place twelve stones in the River Jordan so that “When your children ask in time to come, ‘What do these stones mean to you?’ then you shall tell them that the waters of the Jordan were cut off in front of the ark of the covenant of the LORD” (Joshua 4:6-7 NRSV). AAMHC believes we are called to leave stones that will tell generations to come how African Americans journeyed in Methodism.

Mission Statement

The African American Methodist Heritage Center (AAMHC) provides research, preserves artifacts and other memorabilia, and protects and promotes the stories of African American people in Methodism.

Historical Background

The concept for the AAMHC originated with the National Black Methodists for Church Renewal (BMCR) in 2001. Under the leadership of Bishop Forrest C. Stith and Barbara Ricks Thompson, a small group of people moved the concept to reality. With the endorsement of BMCR, the AAMHC was incorporated with an independent board of directors and received IRS approval as a 501 (c)(3) not-for-profit organization. From its inception, AAMHC has worked closely with the General Commission on Archives and History (GCAH). In 2008, AAMHC entered into a partnership relationship with GCAH and co-located its office on the campus of Drew University. That partnership enables a supportive relationship between the two entities and avoids duplication and replication of ministries. In 2008, the General Conference approved a $100,000.00 per year grant for the quadrennium.

Over the years AAMHC sponsored workshops to encourage and guide the leaders of annual conferences and African American local churches to be more intentional about the recovery and preservation of the history of African Americans in Methodism. Also, AAMHC convened a consultation of Methodist scholars to initiate plans for a research agenda. AAMHC reprinted the book Black United Methodists: Retrospect and Prospect, by John H. Graham. It is intriguing to read the story of Black people related to Methodism from as early as 1758.

In 2012, the General Conference approved a grant to AAMHC of $35,000 ($10,000 of which was to be provided by GCAH from its funds) for each year of the quadrennium 2013-2016. The grant was channeled through GCAH to AAMHC.

Accomplishments, 2013-2016

The AAMHC approached its ministry from the aspect of how to most effectively use its limited resources to tell its story, to recover information, and to prepare others to be more involved in addressing the mission. It is important to recognize that the ministry can help build upon the contributions of our African American ancestors to develop and enable leadership for The United Methodist Church. Such leadership is critical to the growth and vitality of local congregations. It was recognized that the workshops offered in each jurisdiction in earlier quadrennia reached a limited number of people from local congregations. The decision was made to produce a series of videos customized to the jurisdictions to tell the story of African Americans in Methodism, beginning with the Christmas Conference where Harry Hosier was present. The "We've Come This Far by Faith" video series was produced and used in workshops. The series also is used by local congregations as well as with annual conference and jurisdictional events. The series is available for purchase from AAMHC. The AAMHC reprinted the "out-of-print" book by J. H. Graham, Black United Methodists, and includes it as an available resource about African Americans in Methodism since 1758.

Recognizing the need for ongoing sharing of information about the ministry, the quarterly AAMHC Journal was initiated in 2014. Currently it is an electronic publication, primarily because of the expense of postage. Also it recognizes that one of the focal audiences, young people, is greatly attuned to online communications. The AAMHC Journal provides information and stories about historical figures, history-making events, and resources available to assist local church members in being more effective in their ministry to recover and preserve their history.

AAMHC is pleased that it has established a partnership with Claflin University, a historically Black university in Orangeburg, South Carolina. During 2014, AAMHC assisted Claflin in establishing an archival site on its campus. South Carolina has one of the largest populations of African Americans in the U.S.A. Methodism and has contributed many outstanding pastors, laity, and bishops to the denomination. The Claflin site will display portraits and preserve documents of four African American bishops from the South Carolina Annual Conference (and its predecessors) and for numerous other persons who have contributed greatly to the growth and ministry of Methodism.

The AAMHC has been diligent about seeking out the papers and journals of African American leaders to add to its collection housed in the state-of-the-art archival facilities of the General Commission on Archives and History located on the campus of Drew University in Madison, New Jersey. The collection is available for research. There have been occasions when the materials in the collection were used by the families of contributors to reconstruct valuable information lost during natural disasters. There is an open invitation for contributions to be made to the collection.

The AAMHC has initiated an oral history project to recover from African American lay and clergy persons and episcopal leaders the stories of their journeys within The United Methodist Church and its predecessor structures. This is, and will be, an ongoing project. Collecting and sharing the stories will not only help us know from whence we have come, but the stories also will help us understand better where we are today. Even more important is that the stories will help guide us to ministries yet undreamed of.

During the 2013-2016 quadrennium, the AAMHC entered into a relationship with the United Methodist Church Development Center. The goal is to seek help in developing sources of funding for both the current operation of the AAMHC and to build an endowment base that will enable the ministry to continue into the future. Efforts are underway to build and expand a donor base that enables the total church to participate in the ministry.

Goals for 2017-2020

In the coming quadrennium, AAMHC will continue the project to collect and share the oral histories provided by African American lay, clergy, and episcopal leaders. This is a long-term project. African Americans with the stories to be recovered and preserved for future generations live across the full expanse of the United States. Travel distances and time greatly impact the cost of carrying out this effort. This is a critical aspect of the AAMHC endeavor. These stories transcend time because the contributions of African Americans to Methodism are not limited to one point in time or one place in the universe.

AAMHC will continue to provide training opportunities and resources for local church and annual conference persons to enhance their skills in recovering and preserving their histories. AAMHC is in the process of exploring the use of technology to extend the teaching/learning experiences. More intensive efforts will be made to add to the collection of memorabilia and documents maintained in the state-of-the-art facilities at GCAH.

AAMHC is cognizant of the untapped potential partnerships with organizations and entities that could help enrich the ministry. During the quadrennium it is planned that there will be greater intentionality to establish partnerships, within The United Methodist Church and with the historical African American churches that emerged from the denomination during the period of racial segregation. Their story is important to the wholeness of the church.

AAMHC plans more intensive research into the lost and untold stories that will help the denomination be more intentional about including African Americans and their gifts and graces in the future growth of The United Methodist Church. Implicit in this ministry is the question: How do we strengthen the cadre of potential African American leaders, the people who will enrich ministry among African Americans and who will help the total church prosper because there is greater unity emerging from historical separation?

AAMHC anticipates that there will be financial support from the general church during the 2017-2020 quadrennium. The greatest challenge confronting the AAMHC during these years ahead is to develop a funding base that will enable it to be in a financial position that will sustain its ministry into the future. AAMHC steps out on faith that this is feasible with the help not only of African Americans, but with the support of all persons in The United Methodist Church who believe that understanding the source and roots of a community's history builds a firm foundation for the present and a sure future.

The African American Methodist Heritage Center appreciates the support it has received from The United Methodist Church. Reports of accountability and/or stewardship are provided annually to the General Council on Finance and Administration, the General Commission on Archives and History, and the National Black Methodists for Church Renewal. AAMHC commits itself to nurturing its relationship with the denomination and to fulfilling its ministry with integrity and grace.

Joshua obeyed the word from the Lord to place twelve stones in the River Jordan so that "When your children ask in time to come, 'What do these stones mean to you?' then you shall tell them that the waters of the Jordan were cut off in front of the ark of the covenant of the LORD" (Joshua 4:6-7 NRSV). AAMHC believes we are called to leave stones that will tell generations to come how African Americans journeyed in Methodism.

The Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships of the Council of Bishops

Executive Summary Report to the 2016 General Conference

I . . . beg you to lead a life worthy of the calling to which you have been called, with all humility and gentleness, with patience, bearing with one another in love, making every effort to maintain the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

(Ephesians 4:1-3 NRSV)

Much of Scripture teaches us how to be in relationship with God and one another. In fact, “. . . the vision of the oneness of humanity is an original and essential part of the biblical revelation” (Willem A. Visser t’Hooft at the Fourth Assembly of the World Council of Churches). We read passages like Ephesians 4 in a manner that brings both United Methodists and other Christians throughout Christ’s universal church into our hearts and minds. Scripture also teaches that we all share a common humanity. So, we seek to live in peace and understanding with all.

The Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (OCUIR) of the Council of Bishops was created by the 2012 General Conference to help The United Methodist Church with the calling described above in Ephesians. The OCUIR’s mission is to assist and support the Council of Bishops in its corporate oversight of the church’s ecumenical ministries. “In formal relations with other churches and/or ecclesial bodies, the Council of Bishops shall be the primary liaison for The United Methodist Church” (2012 Book of Discipline, ¶ 431.2).

The OCUIR is overseen by the Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops. The Council of Bishop’s Leadership Team on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations provides oversight of OCUIR’s plans and goals. The OCUIR Steering Committee, consisting of laity and clergy, assists and supports the Council of Bishops in this ministry. The ecumenical and interreligious policies of the Council of Bishops are implemented by OCUIR professional staff and supported by United Methodist-appointed representatives throughout the world.

Bishop Mary Ann Swenson, the Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops, believes, “Christianity is the hope of the world; this means to be open to the world . . . to be hospitable to everyone. . . .”

During OCUIR’s first quadrennium, much has been accomplished. The OCUIR has made advances in ministries such as:

1. United Methodist Ecumenical and Interreligious Training (UMEIT), designed to encourage and support ecumenical and interreligious ministries in annual conferences, districts, and local congregations. The structure is both academic and experiential, fulfilling a training need not addressed elsewhere and reaching across the worldwide connection.
2. Dialogues with other faith communities, with full communion legislation being submitted to the 2016 General Conference.
3. Representation of the church’s work for justice, reconciliation, and peace both regionally and internationally, and
4. The joint witness made worldwide by the Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops.

Ecumenical Staff Officer, Rev. Dr. Stephen J. Sidorak, Jr., reminds us of the Lund Principle, and summarizes it in this way: churches should “act together in all matters except those in which deep differences of conviction compel them to act separately.” The Lund Principle still stands as the most practical wisdom available to those who would take seriously the ecumenical commitment of The United Methodist Church as declared in the preamble to its constitution.

The Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships of the Council of Bishops Quadrennial Report to the 2016 General Conference

Introduction

United Methodists believe there is one body of Christ. The First Assembly of the World Council of Churches in 1948 issued the message, “Christ has made us His own, and He is not divided. In seeking Him we find one another.” The Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (OCUIR) of the Council of Bishops was created by the 2012 General Conference for the purpose of embodying, facilitating, and developing credible witness as we strive to incarnate the gift of unity within the body of Christ.

The vision of OCUIR is for The United Methodist Church to actively witness to Christian unity and deepen interreligious relationships. Its mission is to assist and support the Council of Bishops in its corporate oversight of these ministries of the church.

Biblical, Disciplinary, and Theological Mission

The Bible contains all things necessary for salvation. There are many passages in the Bible that speak to the importance of the unity of Christ’s church. Among these are: Psalm 133, John 17:20-23, Acts 2:1, 1 Corinthians 12:12-31, Ephesians 2:11-22, and Ephesians 4:1-6. These passages undergird the ministry of OCUIR.

The 2012 Book of Discipline (as amended) makes clear unity is to be a priority for United Methodists. The Constitution (§ 6, Article VI) says, “. . . The United Methodist Church believes that the Lord of the church is calling Christians everywhere to strive toward unity; and therefore it will pray, seek, and work for unity at all levels of church life. . . .” As ecclesial leaders, bishops must have a “passion for the unity of the church” as one of their disciplines (§ 403.1.e). Further, “the role of the bishop is to be shepherd of the whole flock and thereby provide leadership toward the goal of understanding, reconciliation and unity within the Church—The United Methodist Church and the church universal.” And, in “Our Theological Task” (§ 105), all United Methodists are reminded, “Christian unity is founded on the theological understanding that through faith in Jesus Christ we are made members-in-common of the one body of Christ. Christian unity . . . is a gift to be received and expressed.”

Organizational Principles

The 2013-2016 quadrennium has been an intentional time of restructuring how The United Methodist Church gives formal voice to its ecumenical vocation. According to the Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops, Bishop Mary Ann Swenson, “The OCUIR exists to assist the bishops in facilitating The United Methodist Church’s witness in ecumenical ministries and interreligious dialogue. The vision of the office and the Council of Bishops is to celebrate God’s unconditional love for all people and creation by living more fully into Christian unity and by expanding and deepening the range of interreligious relationships so that the world may experience abundant life.”

The Council of Bishops Ecumenical Officer-Elect, Bishop B. Michael Watson, agrees. He adds, “As ecumenical officers in The United Methodist Church, bishops of the denomination are responsible for providing liaison and leadership in the quest for Christian unity in ministry, mission, and structure and in the search for strengthened relationships with other faith communities.”

The OCUIR lives into God’s vision of the unity of creation through respectful conversations and practical cooperation for the salvation, health, and peace of all peoples. Since 2012, OCUIR has strengthened The United Methodist Church by promoting unity and interfaith dialogue in communities around the globe, fostering collaboration, witness, and understanding among faith traditions.

The OCUIR believes deeply that vital congregations are ecumenically engaged and interreligiously involved, and strives to help the bishops lead toward that vision. The OCUIR is ever mindful of the Four Areas of Focus and views them through its lenses of inclusion and interfaith relationships.

Leadership, Education, and Formation

A major focus of OCUIR is helping train United Methodists in what it means to offer an ecumenical and interreligious witness. The Rev. Dr. Jean G. Hawxhurst, Associate Ecumenical Staff Officer, believes, “Ecumenism is core to who we are as Christians and vital to the integrity of our witness to the world.” The OCUIR’s responsibility, therefore, is to develop principled Christian leaders who have a strong foundation in all things ecumenical.

menical. One of the ways in which this is accomplished is through United Methodist Ecumenical and Interreligious Training (UMEIT) locally, regionally, and internationally. The OCUIR also continues to create and endorse curricula to help local congregations and individuals learn more about the movement.

In the United States, UMEIT is held annually and scheduled in conjunction with the National Workshop on Christian Unity, which provides an opportunity for participants to engage with individuals from other Christian communities. To date, two UMEIT sessions have been held outside the United States, one in the Philippines in 2013 and the second in Norway in 2014. Before General Conference 2020, OCUIR will help facilitate additional UMEIT sessions in Nigeria and Russia.

As part of OCUIR's focus on developing young ecumenists, scholarships are offered to attend a variety of programs, including UMEIT. Daphne Creasman was an attendee at the 2015 United States UMEIT. Daphne's interests lie in "advocating for the beloved community through ecumenism and interfaith relationships." One of the highlights for her was "the power of Anglicans, Catholics, Christian Scientists, Evangelicals, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Methodists, Presbyterians" and others united "in a movement of Christian unity and love." "I look forward to obediently responding to my charge to advocate, grow, lead, learn, serve and teach within the . . . global faith community," Daphne wrote afterward.

As the Rev. Dr. Stephen J. Sidorak, Jr., Ecumenical Staff Officer, has said, "By all accounts, beyond the worthwhile training itself and despite the unrealized potential for networking far and wide, whenever and wherever UMEIT has been held, it has proven to be an added blessing to those in attendance, because it has afforded United Methodists the opportunity to reaffirm as one our faith in a truly ecumenical church in a wonderfully interreligious world."

The OCUIR also utilizes a number of means for engaging conversations and thoughts on ecumenical and interreligious subjects. Among those are social media, electronic and printed materials. The office also promotes publications such as Celebrating God's Love: Living into Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (2015), edited by Dr. Donald E. Messer. This collection of essays is designed as a study guide for local congregations.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Wood's Wonder, Love and Praise: Sharing a Vision of the Church (2016), a product of the United Methodist Committee on Faith and Order, is being created to assist United Methodists in gaining a clearer, comprehensive vision of what it means to be church. It engages the Wesleyan heritage with the common Christian tradition rooted in scriptural witness and contemporary ecumenical discussion.

Ecumenical Dialogues

Three bilateral dialogues took place during this quadrennium under the auspices of the Council of Bishops. The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops-United Methodist Church Dialogue (begun in 1967) initiated its 8th Round in February 2015 and will be reflecting upon half a century of conversations. The aim is to glean insights from what has been learned and deepen the relationship between Roman Catholics and United Methodists, so materials may be prepared for use in local communities that can help members of our two traditions work side-by-side in vital witness and mission.

The Episcopal Church-United Methodist Dialogue, building on the doctrinal, theological, ecclesiological, and historical study by the members of the first committee (2002-2015), began a new phase of its work in May 2015. A second committee, called The Episcopal Church-United Methodist Dialogue on Full Communion, is working to prepare a way forward toward formal recognition of a full communion relationship. Its focus is upon practical engagement of common witness and mission in local communities in which United Methodists and Episcopalians are present.

A third bilateral conversation is that between the Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces) and The United Methodist Church. This group convened for four meetings during 2013 and 2014 and concluded its work with a statement recommending the recognition of a full communion relationship between our churches. Full communion legislation is being submitted to the 2016 General Conference and to the synods of each of the Moravian Church provinces in 2018.

Dr. Glen Alton Messer, II, Associate Ecumenical Staff Officer, reflected, "Moravians and United Methodists discovered that the strongest points they have in common are their openness to Christians of other traditions (as when welcoming others to share the Eucharist with them), their tolerance of ecclesiological and doctrinal diversity (not feeling the need to change or describe the other church in particular ways), and eagerness to be in mission with one another in order to live out Christ's ministry of love in the communities of the world. Put simply, we are already accepting of each other. It is not only alright that there are some differences in our traditions—we see these as strengths and opportunities.” One of the most powerful experiences of these discussions was the sense that we were discovering a kindred relationship that already exists.

“Our Council of Bishops-sponsored dialogues are making excellent progress. Our common emphasis is increasingly upon the affirmation of, and support for, local relationships and initiatives in which we give witness to the love and grace of Jesus Christ,” reports Dr. Glen Messer.

Interreligious Outreach and Relationships

Today, the essence of John Wesley’s “Catholic Spirit” might likely include an interreligious dimension. During the past quadrennium, OCUIR has participated in numerous events that have impacted multiple ecumenical and interreligious ministries of the church, including the National Muslim-Christian Initiative, two Jewish-Christian Roundtables, Religions for Peace-USA, and the Parliament of the World’s Religions.

“Interreligious hospitality is the new leaf that has been inserted into the ecumenical table,” Dr. Sidorak reflected recently. This is endorsed by the March 1978 statement of the Council of Bishops, Christian Unity: Imperatives and New Commitments, which recognizes, “To take risks for the gospel and to converse with different cultures and living faiths, are, indeed, ecumenical tasks under the lordship of Christ.” In the words of the Chair of the Council of Bishop’s Leadership Team on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations, Bishop Sudarshana Devadhar, “Increasingly, interfaith activities and relationships have become the ‘new normal’ around the world.”

The OCUIR will continue to reach out and seek to be a catalyst for dialogue, understanding, and peace, particularly where issues of religious extremism threaten to cause continued violence and suffering. The OCUIR will also extend its focus to relationships with the Hindu and Buddhist traditions.

Ongoing Ecumenical Witness

The OCUIR continues to ensure United Methodist representation in multiple conciliar bodies and ecumenical groups. A cornerstone of OCUIR’s work on behalf of The United Methodist Church and the Council of Bishops is supporting its partnerships through the financial commitment of the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund (ICF).

Through the ICF, OCUIR collaborates, strengthens, witnesses, and advocates on issues of mutual concern, while respecting our unique traditions and distinctions. We unite in creative response to concerns such as widespread poverty, economic injustice, and racism. For example, the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA and Christian Churches Together both recently named mass incarceration as a priority to the NCC. A convening table of the NCC developed a “toolbox” intended to inform and engage individuals, small groups, and congregations, while a program of the World Council of Churches, Accompanying Churches in Situations of Conflict, helps prepare communities in countries where religions have been used to fuel conflict to prevent and cope with such struggles. The Ecumenical Officer of the Council of Bishops, Bishop Swenson, serves as the Vice Moderator of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches, the first woman bishop to occupy this high office.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA)-United Methodist Church Joint Commission on Full Communion meets regularly to implement our vital full communion relationships. The OCUIR collaborates with Discipleship Ministries, the General Board of Church and Society, the General Board of Global Ministries, and the counterpart offices in the ELCA in this ministry. Similarly, we continue our work with our Pan-Methodist Full Communion Partners through the Pan-Methodist Commission.

The OCUIR and the General Commission on Archives and History are working together to bring to this year’s General Conference a celebration of the 200th Anniversary of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with which The United Methodist Church has had a Full Communion relationship since 2012.

Conclusion: Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace

This is a time in the life of our denomination, the life of the whole body of Christ, and the life of all of God’s creation, when United Methodists must be “making every effort to maintain unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.” On behalf of our bishops, OCUIR is working to make this calling more and more a reflection of our visible witness.

Quadrennial Report of the Pan-Methodist Commission to the General Conference of The United Methodist Church

The Pan-Methodist Commission observed its 30th year of existence in 2015 and renewed its commitment to working to fulfill its calling of bringing Methodists closer together and finding ways to be cooperatively involved in ministry. The mission statement of the Pan-Methodist Commission indicates that this group will “work to define, determine, plan, and in cooperation with established agencies of the several denominations, execute activities to foster meaningful cooperation among the Methodist denominations in the collaborations. Such cooperation shall include, but not be limited to, evangelism, missions, publications, social concerns, and higher education.”

The Pan-Methodist family has joined in solidarity to speak to injustice as it has revealed itself in many of our American cities. It was especially noted in Charleston, South Carolina. The Emanuel AME Church congregation faced the heinous murder of their pastor and eight others who attended Bible study and welcomed a stranger on June 17, 2015. This incident challenges Methodists to seek ways to battle racism on all fronts, to visually show a Methodist presence and to speak as one Methodist voice.

The obstacle of not really knowing one another is slowly disappearing as comradery is fostered and ministry opportunities beckon for the attention of Methodists. The work of Pan-Methodism has challenged us to get to know the members of the Methodist family and to explore new methods of working together. The journey has not been easy, but we have learned from one another and we trust God through the process. Some of the highlights of the 2013-2016 journey are as follows:

- Celebrated the life and legacy of bishops from the Methodist denominations who have exchanged life for eternity:
 - AME—Bishop Sarah Davis (11/9/13) and Bishop Vinton R. Anderson, retired (7/9/14)
 - AMEZ—Bishop James E. McCoy (11/13/12), Bishop Roy Anderson Holmes (5/4/13), and Bishop Cecil Bishop, retired (9/21/13)

Clymer (11/25/2013), Bishop Jack Tuell (1/10/2014), Bishop Robert Morgan (3/16/2014), Bishop Lloyd Knox (4/13/2014), Bishop Roy Clark (5/27/2014), Bishop Martin McLee (9/6/2014), Bishop Hermann Sticher (12/19/2014), and Bishop Rueben Job (1/3/2015)
- Celebrated the election of new bishops:

 - AME—Bishop Cornal Garnett Henning and Bishop Carolyn Tyler Guidry
 - AMEZ—Bishop George W. C. Walker, Sr.; Bishop S. Chuka Ekemam; and Bishop Warren M. Brown
 - CME—Bishop Paul A. G. Stewart and Bishop Ronald M. Cunningham

Hutchinson; Bishop Ann Brookshire Sherer-Simpson; Bishop D. Max Whitfield; Bishop Alfred Wesley Gwinn, Jr.; Bishop Charlene Kammerer; Bishop William H. Willimon; and Bishop Richard J. Wills

- Celebrated the life and contributions of the following Pan-Methodist Commission members who exchanged life for eternity: Mrs. Jerry Ruth Williams (UMC), Bishop Roy Anderson Holmes (AMEZ), and Mr. Addison Young (AME)
- Welcomed new members to the Pan-Methodist Commission to include Bishop Mary Ann Swenson (UMC)—Ecumenical Officer; Bishop Jane Allen Middleton (UMC); Mr. Byrd Bonner (UMC); Rev. Jay Williams (UMC); Bishop Robert Hayes (UMC); Bishop Reginald Jackson (AME); Ms. Martinique Mix (AME); Bishop Adolphus Scott (UAME); Dr. Ralph Lampkins (UAME); Bishop Darryl B. Starnes, Sr. (AMEZ); Bishop Warren Brown (AMEZ); Dr. Donnell Williams (AMEZ); Bishop Marvin Thomas (CME); Dr. Lisa Allen McLaurin (CME); Ms. Ada Suarez (CME); and Rev. Keenan Winters (CME)
- Leadership for the Pan-Methodist Commission during the 2013-2016 quadrennium was passed from Bishop Alfred Lloyd Norris (UMC) to Bishop Linwood Rideout (UAME) and is currently held by Bishop Reginald Jackson (AME)
- Appointed a task force to develop a resource regarding Full Communion
- Expressed appreciation and encouragement to areas where Pan-Methodist events are being held, such as a Pan-Methodist Revival in the Detroit area, cooperative ministry for the sake of children in Georgia, and a Pentecost Explosion in the Alabama-Florida area.
- Reviewed the decision to only meet once annually and agreed to proceed and incorporate the use of conference calls and periodic updating to stay connected and accomplish the work
- Continued to operate on the budget approved in 2004. However, the giving to the Children in Poverty Campaign has increased as a result of intentional giving from areas and the offering received at the Methodist Gatherings.
- The Higher Education Committee is working to increase the Pan-Methodist presence within the seminaries. The committee plans to obtain models of Pan-Methodist activity on campuses, develop and distribute a resource packet, and eventually involve Pan-Methodist students in the work and meetings of the Pan-Methodist Commission. The committee chaired by Mrs. Harriet McCabe (UMC) continued its work of encouraging intentional involvement on all levels of the Pan-Methodist institutions of higher learning. It is also working to establish lines of communication to work with the Children in Poverty Campaign. Illness hindered Mrs. McCabe's involvement during the quadrennium.
- Acknowledged the continuous contributions of Dr. Luther Smith (CME) in the work for children in poverty. He leads the force in calling the Pan-Methodist denominations to find ways to work together around this issue and be a united voice for the sake of children.
 - Pan-Methodist seminaries are working in the campaign, finding unique ways to minister to children and persons who work with children.

General Commission on Religion and Race 2012-2016 Quadrennial Report Summary

“The Church has a future to the extent that it can reach more people, younger people, and more diverse people. We can’t just focus on one. We must do all three”

—Dr. Lovett Weems

The General Commission on Religion and Race (GCORR) was created by The United Methodist Church in 1968 to address the turbulent unrest, yet hopeful and new possibilities unleashed as legalized racial segregation and separation were being dismantled in church and society. The commission was the vehicle through which the denomination invited white people and people of color to a common table to tackle institutional racism and engage in new conversations about what a truly desegregated and global Church could look like. The task and mission was to chart a course for living out the gospel of Jesus Christ in more authentic and liberative ways.

Still, the breaking down of barriers and more racially inclusive representation in the Church bureaucracy has not always translated into more open and welcoming congregations. The majority of U.S. congregations are largely monoracial and divided by economic class. The U.S. Church is 94 percent white, according to the General Council on Finance and Administration, even though the nation’s population is, by some estimates, only 65 percent white. While the global population is increasingly younger, more female, bilingual, and poor, the face of The United Methodist Church and its key decision-makers continues to be predominantly white, male, English-speaking, and over age 55, with household incomes far above the majority of the people living in the world.

It is in this context that the General Commission on Religion and Race is inviting and leading the Church into new conversations about our relevance as we seek to serve among a world that is vastly different than when the agency began, while still recognizing the persistence of racism and xenophobia in our midst.

As a result of GCORR’s work, our vision is that the Church at all levels, all around the world, reflects and values God’s gift of diversity. Our work and ministry of GCORR is to build the capacity of The United Methodist Church at all levels to be contextually relevant and to reach more people, younger people, and more diverse people as we make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world. Our promise is to provide practical resources and support to leaders throughout the Church to support them in engaging and embracing cultural diversity present in congregations and communities.

GCORR’s Ministry Model reflects the priorities of the agency in vision, mission, and promise in ministry. The three areas of the ministry model—Intercultural Competency, Institutional Equity, and Vital Conversations—are the touchstone for all of GCORR’s efforts. Everything that GCORR does can be traced back to our commitment to focus on these areas in service to both the mission of the agency and of the Church.

Despite both societal advances in the dismantling of racism and xenophobia around the world, there has been a clear increase in acts of violence and hate motivated by race, gender, religion, nationality, ethnicity, tribe, and culture. Racism and cultural discrimination in the Church also continues to be an issue. GCORR’s role is to equip leaders and systems to be vigilant in the face of discrimination and oppression, to build relationships, and to work toward solutions that defend and honor the dignity, rights, and gifts of all people. Our role is also to ensure that The United Methodist Church is proactively facing the reality that if we do not begin to engage with and relate to those who do not reflect the demographic profile of the average United Methodist, our membership and ministry impact will continue to decline.

This quadrennium, GCORR has established a number of partnerships with annual conferences, local churches, and seminaries/universities for the purpose of mutual learning and developing innovative solutions to the key barriers that institutions face in reaching more people, younger people, and more diverse people. GCORR is providing practical support, resources, and technical assistance to partners on issues such as cross-racial/cross-cultural appointments, intercultural competency, racial ethnic leadership development, revitalizing and reforming the conference commissions on religion and race, and creating dialogue circles on issues of racism and tribalism. The resources developed and the information gathered from these partnerships are transferrable and distributed throughout the connection.

For two quadrennia, GCORR’s board of directors has been focused on creating a relevant ministry and a sustainable agency that fulfills on the promises of the agency and the mission of the Church. As we look forward to the future we have already begun to take steps to further the positive momentum we have built. GCORR submitted legislation to the 2012 and 2016 General Conferences to update the mandates of the agency. These mandates maintain the spirit of the historical work and commitment of the agency while clarifying, simplifying, and focusing its work to increase intercultural competency, institutional equity, and vital conversation in annual conferences and local churches.

The General Commission on Religion and Race seeks to support and equip the Church for a new day, a different world, and a Church that has never existed before.

The General Commission on Religion and Race 2013-2016 Quadrennial Report

About the General Commission on Religion and Race

The General Commission on Religion and Race (GCORR) was created by The United Methodist Church in 1968 to address the turbulent unrest, yet hopeful and new possibilities unleashed as legalized racial segregation and separation were being dismantled in church and society.

The commission was the vehicle through which the denomination invited white people and people of color to a common table to tackle institutional racism and engage in new conversations about what a truly desegregated and global Church could look like. The task and mission was to chart a course for living out the gospel of Jesus Christ in more authentic and liberative ways.

Still, the breaking down of barriers and more racially inclusive representation in the Church bureaucracy has not always translated into more open and welcoming congregations. The majority of U.S. congregations are largely monoracial and divided by economic class. The U.S. Church is 94 percent white, according to the General Council on Finance and Administration, even though the nation’s population is, by some estimates, only 65 percent white.

While the global population is increasingly younger, more female, bilingual, and poor, the face of The United Methodist Church and its key decision-makers continues to be predominantly white, male, English-speaking, and over age 55, with household incomes far above the majority of the people living in the world.

It is in this context that the General Commission on Religion and Race is inviting and leading the Church into new conversations about our relevance as we seek to serve among a world that is vastly different than when the agency began, while still recognizing the persistence of racism and xenophobia in our midst.

As a result of GCORR’s work, our vision is that the Church at all levels, all around the world, reflects and values God’s gift of diversity.

Our work and ministry of GCORR is to build the capacity of The United Methodist Church at all levels to be contextually relevant and to reach more people, younger people, and more diverse people as we make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

Our promise is to provide practical resources and support to leaders throughout the Church to support them in engaging and embracing cultural diversity present in congregations and communities.

GCORR’s Ministry Model reflects the priorities of the agency in vision, mission, and promise in ministry. The three areas of the ministry model—Intercultural Competency, Institutional Equity, and Vital Conversations—are the touchstone for all of GCORR’s efforts. Everything that GCORR does can be traced back to our commitment to focus on these areas in service to both the mission of the agency and of the Church.

Intercultural Competency

Intercultural Competency is displayed when individuals and groups have the skills, awareness, and commitment to build authentic relationships across lines of difference. GCORR works as a catalyst and partners with other leaders in The United Methodist Church who support the development of interculturally competent leaders engaging in ministry that promotes intentional diversity and equity.

GCORR trains, resources, and connects leaders in order to develop intercultural skills, which supports and equips leaders to establish relevant ministries that reflect the diversity around them.

Institutional Equity

Institutional equity is present when the policies, processes, and systems of the Church and world work equally well for all people regardless of race, gender, age, and socioeconomic status. When there are no systemically disadvantaged groups and no disparities in life and ministry, outcomes that can be demonstrated based on group affiliation, equity has been achieved. GCORR is critically examining expressions of racial and cultural injustice in local and global contexts: setting goals for overcoming them, intentionally measuring progress, and resourcing culturally competent leaders (lay and clergy) to promote and sustain institutional equity. We collaborate with leaders to evaluate programs, mission, staffing, budgetary priorities, and leadership development and access to insure that the Church is reaching, serving, and bringing into full participation a membership of younger people and more diverse people.

Vital Conversations

One of the biggest barriers to authentic relationships across lines of difference in the Church is our inability to engage in open, faithful action generating conversations about racial, tribal, and cultural divisions. GCORR is initiating and modeling holy conversations throughout the Church about race, cultural diversity within the global community, and institutional equity. GCORR is facilitating and encouraging direct, respectful, and holy conversations on how the Church can better challenge racial, ethnic, and cultural biases, and institutional injustice. By talking about what divides us as well as what connects us as people of faith, we are able to deepen our faith and live into a more beloved community.

Context for Ministry

Despite both societal advances in the dismantling of racism and xenophobia around the world, there has been a clear increase in acts of violence and hate motivated by race, gender, religion, nationality, ethnicity, tribe, and culture. A few examples include:

- Xenophobia in South Africa: Strained by a high unemployment rate, relations between locals and foreigners have deteriorated into deadly violence.
- Migrant crisis: There was an 86 percent increase in the amount of people claiming asylum in Europe between the first quarters of 2014 and 2015. In the first quarter of 2015, 185,000 people sought asylum in the European Union (EU), according to data released by the EU's statistics office. The International Organization for Migration said that more than 1,900 migrants and refugees have died as they attempted the perilous journey across the Mediterranean to Europe by mid-year 2015.
- Chibok, Nigeria: Two hundred nineteen schoolgirls were kidnapped in 2014. Militants kidnapped the schoolgirls from a boarding school in a move that sparked worldwide condemnation of the group's brutality, as well as the international #BringBackOurGirls campaign.
- Mindanao, Philippines: Death squads and extrajudicial killings in the Philippines' main southern island of Mindanao have resulted in the deaths of hundreds, including media workers and street children.

- Racial profiling, "Driving While Black," and #BlackLivesMatter: Sandra Bland, Eric Gardner, Mike Brown, Freddie Gray, and many other persons of color were victims of violence and murder at the hand of police.
- Immigration: The U.S. Government Accountability Office reports that in 2014 U.S. Customs and Border Protection repatriated 93 percent of unaccompanied children under age 14 from Mexico and Canada without documenting how they decided that the children would be safe when they return to their home countries.
- Mass killings and hate crimes: Racially motivated killing of nine black people attending Bible study at historic Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in South Carolina.

Racism and cultural discrimination in the Church also continues to be an issue:

- Every year bishops and district superintendents report a consistent number of churches refusing to accept a person of color or a woman as pastor.
- African leaders report that tribal affiliations can lead to the exclusion of some from access to conference leadership positions.
- The decision-making processes of the Church as well as the organization of the Church favor a U.S.-centric mind-set, values, and behaviors to the detriment of central conferences.
- Migrant members of European churches are searching for ways to be included as full partners in the ministry of the Church.
- Vocal resistance to Acts of Repentance toward Native Americans.
- Some churches are unwilling to serve as stations of hospitality and sanctuary for undocumented persons.
- Waning support for Ministerial Education Fund and Black College Fund.

In the midst of these realities, many are asking, "Where is the Church?" or "Why do these things happen in the Church?" GCORR's role is to equip leaders and systems to be vigilant in the face of discrimination and oppression, to build relationships, and to work toward solutions that defend and honor the dignity, rights, and gifts of all people. Our role is also to ensure that The United Methodist Church is proactively facing the reality that if we do not begin to engage with and relate to those who do not reflect the demographic profile of the average United Methodist, our membership and ministry impact will continue to decline.

Ministry Highlights This Quadrennium

The agency, which has been in the process of organizational turnaround since 2008, has been primarily concerned with reviewing and revamping its mission, vision, and internal capacity to be a value-added ministry in the life of the Church. This has resulted in major changes in staffing and board structures, elimination or redevelopment of historical programs and practices, and the discernment of new emphases that effectively support ministry at the annual conference and local church levels.

Resolution 6024 asked The General Commission on Religion and Race and GCSRW, in consultation with United Methodist Women, to create a monitoring instrument for assessing evidence of racism in programs for and with women, children, and youth. In response, we have jointly created a tool which is available by contacting any of our offices.

Learning and Resourcing Partnerships

This quadrennium, GCORR has established a number of partnerships with annual conferences, local churches, and seminaries/universities for the purpose of mutual learning and developing innovative solutions to the key barriers that institutions face in reaching more people, younger people, and more diverse people. GCORR is providing practical support, resources, and technical assistance to partners on issues such as cross-racial/cross-cultural appointments, intercultural competency, racial ethnic leadership development, revitalizing and reforming the conference commissions on religion and race, and creating dialogue circles on issues of racism and tribalism. The resources developed and the information gathered from these partnerships are transferrable and distributed throughout the connection. While GCORR spends a considerable amount of time and resources on existing partnerships, we continue to provide support to conferences, churches, and United Methodist entities as requested.

Partner conferences include:

Arkansas	New England
Northwest Texas	West Virginia
Central Texas	Northern Illinois
Great Plains	Michigan Area
Rio Texas	West Ohio
Desert Southwest	Tennessee
Rocky Mountain	Memphis
California Pacific	Florida
Baltimore-Washington	Mississippi
Greater New Jersey	North Carolina
Eastern Pennsylvania	South Carolina

Partner seminaries/universities include:

Garrett Evangelical Seminary
Claremont School of Theology
Africa University

Partner local churches include:

St. John's Downtown—Houston, Texas
Church for all People—Columbus, Ohio
Epworth UMC—Gaithersburg, Maryland
Whitefish Bay UMC—Whitefish Bay, Wisconsin
City Well UMC—Durham, North Carolina

CORR Action Fund

The CORR Action Fund (funded by the Minority Group Self-Determination Fund) is the grant fund administered by GCORR. This quadrennium, the agency awarded more than $2 million to more than 30 projects representing local churches; districts; annual, jurisdictional, and central conferences; seminaries; and other connectional entities. In addition, the CORR Action Fund provided various learning events for grantees to support long-range planning, effective evaluation, and financial sustainability. The grants were provided to support creative initiatives that demonstrated bold and innovative thinking; reached more people, younger people, and more diverse people; and resulted in long-term change that could be replicated.

Balanced Scorecard

In February 2013, GCORR began working with the Balanced Scorecard Institute to develop a more strategy-focused organization and to improve organizational alignment, prioritization of projects, internal and external communications, and performance toward achieving its strategic goals. The result was the creation of a Balanced Scorecard, which created a synergy between our strategic aspirations: program excellence, operational excellence, and thought leadership.

The Future

For two quadrennia, GCORR's board of directors has been focused on creating a relevant ministry and a sustainable agency that fulfills on the promises of the agency and the mission of the Church. As we look forward to the future, we have already begun to take steps to further the positive momentum we have built.

- New mandates: GCORR submitted legislation to the 2012 and 2016 General Conferences to update the mandates of the agency. These mandates maintain the spirit of the historical work and commitment of the agency while clarifying, simplifying, and focusing its work to increase intercultural competency, institutional equity, and vital conversation in annual conferences and local churches.

Plan of Ministry for 2017-2020

GCORR has also begun to outline its goals for the next quadrennium, which relate to two of the four areas of focus. Some examples of impact areas and goals include:

- Implementing a comprehensive training and education program for congregations, boards of ordained ministry, and other connectional groups on intercultural competency, institutional equity, and vital conversations that will impact lay and clergy leaders. The training and education offered will result in clergy leaders who are better equipped with skills to engage in ministry in culturally diverse settings, lay leaders who are equipped and empowered to lead ministries that reach diverse populations, and congregations that are made more vital because they possess the skills to build bridges in the midst of diversity.
- Offering print and web-based educational resources that can be used by individual leaders and well as ministry groups to increase their effectiveness in ministry.
- Growing the number of pastors and congregations that are adequately prepared for and supported in maintaining healthy cross-racial/cross-cultural appointments. This effort requires work with pastors, congregations, and conference leaders (i.e., the cabinet and Board of Ordained Ministry) to identify and provide training and support for pastors going into their first cross-racial/cross-cultural appointment or who find themselves in challenging situations. With training and support, we hope to reduce situations and conflicts that undermine ministry and harm pastors, their families, and congregations.

- Support for the development and maintenance of ethnic-specific churches as well as multicultural churches.
- Implementing a research program that provides valuable data and best practices in global, multicultural, and inclusive ministry. GCORR will conduct research on topics that include but are not limited to: multiculturalism in The UMC, the state of cross-racial/cross-cultural appointments, racial disparities in the lives and careers of clergy, multicultural ministry in Europe, and cultural diversity amongst leadership of The UMC. Results will be shared widely and resources will be created to have a practical impact on local church ministry.
- Supporting the just resolution to allegations of discrimination. GCORR will serve as a fair process advocate, coach, and consultant to persons making complaints of discrimination, conference leadership, and congregations.

The General Commission on Religion and Race seeks to support and equip the Church for a new day, a different world, and a Church that has never existed before.

The General Commission on Communication (United Methodist Communications)

At United Methodist Communications, we see communications as more than information and technology, more than public relations and marketing, more than news and video production. Communication is a ministry, a means for sharing the love of God and for making a positive difference in people's lives.

Telling Our Story

Good storytelling is at the heart of United Methodist Communications' mission—to inform, engage, and inspire. We help The United Methodist Church tell the story of God's love through research, technology, and strategic communication. We deliver messages of healing and hope, invite people into relationship with a faith community, and share inspirational accounts of individuals and congregations living out their faith.

United Methodist Communications seeks to increase awareness and visibility of the denomination in communities and nations around the globe. We work on behalf of the whole Church—local churches, annual conferences, and general agencies—to create a unified voice for the Church in the world.

Working in Partnership with Local Churches

Effective communication is vital to help churches grow into inviting and inspiring places to worship—places where congregations are fully engaged in mission and outreach.

We work in partnership with congregations to develop leaders and reach a new generation of young adults looking to bring about positive change. We produce resources to enable local churches to build on the awareness raised by the Rethink Church national advertising campaign. We continue to provide Rethink Church grants and resources to churches coming together to make a difference through community service.

Live and online training opportunities help church leaders develop the skills they need to reach people in mission and ministry, while the MyCom e-newsletter routinely shares tips and tools to help them communicate more effectively. The Find-A-Church online directory provides a central locator of church ministries and offers local churches a way to highlight their offerings to those who are looking for a church home.

Inspiring People Globally

In a 12.8 million-member church that spans four continents and works in mission in 135 countries, communication is the vital link that joins people and ministries in a worldwide connection.

United Methodist Communications is a global agency with a global focus that remains front and center in our strategic planning. We think globally because we see the world as our place of service.

By the numbers

5.7 million annual website visits
2 million annual Find-A-Church views
1 million resources and products distributed yearly
18,000 people trained quadrennially
500,000+ social media followers
289,500 subscribers

Connecting People and Information

The denomination's official website, UMC.org, provides a go-to hub for stories, resources, and all things United Methodist. Interpreter magazine shares stories and information to enhance spiritual growth and help church members live out their discipleship in ways that go beyond attending weekly worship.

United Methodist News Service provides news, features, and commentaries about what is happening in the Church. InfoServ clarifies the Church's position on current topics and provides answers to those who need assistance, while our United Methodist handbook is filled with comprehensive information about the church and how we live out our global mission.

Embracing Emerging Technologies

Throughout its 75-year journey, United Methodist Communications has sought to stay at the forefront of mass communication using the media of the day, from print to radio to film to TV to advertising to digital media. These tools have shaped how the church communicates faith and empowers people. We strive to be innovative in a dynamically changing communication environment and find new ways to bridge the digital divide.

We use social media channels to reach and engage more people and create places for them to be in conversation with each other, as well as to promote opportunities for people to participate in ministry. We reach millions of people across various channels and continue to see growth in engagement month-to-month and year-to-year. Digital media has driven the evolution of the Rethink Church initiative to use interactive websites and social media to communicate with seekers, rather than to them.

An online training course, Communicating Faith in the 21st Century, helps equip church leaders to use new media to tell stories of faith, while our web hosting service helps them establish an online presence for their churches.

In underserved areas of the world, we are using new technologies to overcome barriers to communication and strengthen the network of The United Methodist Church from the top leadership to members of local churches and extending to local residents. Emerging technologies can enable access to information that improves the quality of people's lives. We help churches integrate innovative new communication technologies in their ministries to parts of the world mostly left behind by technological advances.

Understanding and Serving Our Audiences

More than ever, we are a research-driven agency, basing our strategic planning and daily work on sound data and input. Research provides insights into what is important to our audiences, whether they are pastors, leaders, members, or seekers, and how they prefer to receive information.

Through surveys, we are able to learn more about our constituents' attitudes and opinions regarding various issues facing the church today and assess changes over time in familiarity and support of key Church initiatives. The agency incorporates findings regarding the needs, perceptions, and preferences of its audiences into strategic and tactical decision-making.

Building Bridges for the Future

United Methodist Communications is a dynamic organization filled with people who approach their work with creativity, innovation, and a collaborative spirit.

Our capacity to communicate will continue to grow as technology changes. As we focus on our future and vision as an agency, we will lead with new ways to communicate messages that are relevant for a global Church.

As we move forward, we will seek to recognize and embrace the diversity of The United Methodist Church. We will continue to challenge ourselves to build on our past successes; and we will seek to remember who we serve and why, to set a new standard of excellence in communications and reach people around the world with the good news of Jesus Christ.

Report of the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women

In Christ's family there can be no division into Jew and non-Jew, slave and free, male and female. Among us you are all equal. That is, we are all in a common relationship with Jesus Christ.

(Galatians 3:28-29 The Message)

Our Mission and Our Mantra

The General Commission on the Status and Role of Women (GCSRW) continues to support the Church's "Four Areas of Focus" with an emphasis on creating "Principled Christian Leaders." These leaders have a commitment to the message of Jesus Christ that recognizes every person as a full and equal part of God's human family.

We also recognize that vital congregations are essential to the denomination's mission, "to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world." A vital congregation is a healthy congregation, free of clergy sexual and ethical misconduct, valuing men and women equally.

These truths guide our work.

Education and Leadership

In 2013, under the leadership of a new general secretary, the GCSRW began this quadrennium by conducting a series of listening sessions across the church to determine: 1) the status of women's inclusion in leadership in the denomination (both lay and clergy); 2) the challenges (both real and perceived) facing women in the church; and 3) the programs/resources/systemic changes that are needed to attain equal power and policy-making at all levels of the church, without regard to gender.

What we found

Although there are pockets of extremes, common themes exist across the church. More women are seen in leadership positions, although isolation continues to be a concern. Exacerbating the problem are too few of our male colleagues visibly and vocally supporting women's ministry and leadership in areas heavily populated with denominations that do not ordain women or support women in positions of authority.

We have heard the stories of congregations who turn their backs to women delivering sermons. We've also heard stories of a woman being denied ordination even after a recommendation by her Board of Ordained Ministry and of a male leader stating unequivocally that women should not be elected as bishops, ever.

While much work remains, both women and men are asking for our help and for the Church to be intentional in its inclusion and support of women.

In response to concerns learned through surveys and listening sessions, GCSRW developed and provided training and resources to the annual conferences. These resources included the following: re-publication of Words That Hurt, Words That Heal; a series of webinars on leadership skills; the "Clergy Family Summit" to address the needs of the changing roles of clergy spouses and a related website; French and Portuguese translations of Women Called to Ministry; God of the Bible (a study based on the names used for God in the Bible); training events in Mozambique, the Philippines, and Russia to address the needs of women in central conferences.

Women by the Numbers

GCSRW gathered data from annual conferences, general church agencies, and United Methodist seminaries to determine the status of women's leadership within the Church. We learned that now 27 percent of clergy in the U.S. are women.

Our research has shown that although there were significant increases in the numbers of clergywomen between 1992 and 2002, the rate of increase has slowed. The growth in the numbers of clergywomen who are elders in full connection can best be described as "modest."

In exploring the possible causes of slowed growth and in collaboration with the General Board of Pensions and Health Benefits and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, the GCSRW gathered information that found 50 percent of seminary students were women. Only 40 percent of those female students wanted to seek ordination; 75 percent chose the deacon track and 25 percent chose the elder track.

Statistics were not available across the central conferences. GCSRW is continuing efforts to gather that data.

Resolution 6024 asked the General Commission on Religion and Race and GCSRW, in consultation with United Methodist Women to create a monitoring instrument for assessing evidence of racism in programs for and with women, children, and youth. In response, we have jointly created a tool that is available by contacting any of our offices.

Sexual Ethics and Advocacy

GCSRW continued to offer support and advocacy to individual victims of clergy sexual misconduct and to provide resources and training on church processes to the episcopacy and annual conference leadership. GCSRW worked with the Council of Bishops to develop policies and training for the prevention of misconduct and for the reconciliation and healing of congregations and victims where misconduct has occurred.

GCSRW has worked collaboratively with United Methodist seminaries in exploring leadership training that teaches respect for all persons (women and men) and personal discipline in both self-care and personal boundaries. These courses will teach future leaders to know and exercise healthy boundaries and self-care necessary to lead vital congregations.

GCSRW convened the Inter-Agency Sexual Ethics Task Force and hosted the “2015 Do No Harm” summit that provided training across the church to prevent clergy misconduct. This training also included teams working to develop culturally appropriate adaptations for use in pilot areas of the central conferences.

Legislation

In response to the request from the 2012 General Conference, GCSRW worked with United Methodist Women and the Division of Ministries of Young People to clarify our requested legislation to ensure that no member of The United Methodist Church will be discriminated against because of her or his gender or age. We celebrate that the church has made advances in the inclusion of women. However, these are tenuous. Women continue to struggle to maintain the steps toward the full inclusion that our mission seeks. Accordingly, we are jointly presenting legislation to amend ¶ 4, Article IV of the Constitution to affirm and protect The United Methodist Church’s commitment to equality throughout our worldwide connection.

Conclusion

GCSRW continues to live into its mission through the belief that the seeds that we, the Church, plant will grow to increase the equality of women and men as part of the church’s effort to transform the world.

Sexual Ethics as Integral Part of Formation for Ministerial Leadership (Report on Resolution #2046)

The General Commission on the Status and Role of Women (GCSRW) continues its commitment and work to improve and offer training in professional and sexual ethics for United Methodist ministry leaders.

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church adopted a resolution (2046) proposed by GCSRW. This resolution included a reflection on the commission's work with seminaries and Course of Study programs in shaping curricula and courses to include recommended topics throughout the M.Div. degree or the five-year Course of Study. Topic areas include:

1. Theology of power, privilege, and abuse (including topics such as fiduciary duty of ministry, healthy boundaries, and conflicts of interest)
2. Human sexuality (including topics such as dating, intimacy, work/life balance, pornography and objectification of persons, consent and vulnerability, aspects of gender and sexuality)
3. Sexual misconduct in ministry (including topics such as boundary violations, judicatory processes of justice making, inappropriate uses of social media and networking)
4. Pastoral care (including topics such as working with victims of sexual violence and abuse, transference, dual relationships, confidentiality, and referrals)
5. Best practices of ministry (including topics such as Safe Sanctuaries, healthy communications, clergy self-care, ministering with sex offenders)

In April 2014, staff of GCSRW were invited to attend the spring meeting of the Association of United Methodist Theological Schools (AUMTS) to be in partnership conversation concerning the recommendation set forth in Resolution 2046 in the 2012 Book of Resolutions. It was agreed each school would identify a contact person to gather information on courses and curricula that address the topics identified as priority for professional and sexual ethics education. In addition, the contact person was asked to provide information on course content to the AUMTS secretary to be shared with GCSRW.

Commission staff had the opportunity to meet with faculty at Wesley Theological Seminary, Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, and Candler School of Theology to discuss current and planned coursework related to professional and sexual ethics. A common theme around the importance of integrating recommended topics throughout the curriculum, including field education seminars, was shared among these schools and is being offered in many United Methodist theological schools. In addition, examples of individual course offerings included: "Sexual Issues in Church and Society" and "Sexual Issues in Parish Ministry." In some schools as many as 18 courses across all divisions of the M.Div. curriculum included a unit, module, or instructional session on sexual ethics.

We know a critical piece for healthy ministry is the clergy's ability to develop self-awareness and self-consciousness. This can only happen through the work of knowing oneself. Ministering at the highest level in professional ethics requires one to fully understand and live out the components of sacred trust and fiduciary duty. It makes sense that formal education curriculum would reflect a similar learning experience for seminary students.

Additional resources offered by many schools include:

- Women in ministry student support groups
- Required attendance at sexual harassment information sessions
- Inclusion of policy and sexual ethics materials in student packets
- Faculty/staff/student advisory panels on sexual harassment

Echoed among all was the desire to have collaborative meetings to discuss, research, and plan this part of the seminary education. GCSRW strongly recommends the development of this resource. There is some concern about wide variations in coursework/learning experiences among the seminaries. Few courses focused on sexuality-related issues.

GCSRW worked with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) to assess the content of coursework offered through the Course of Study program. The five-year comprehensive curriculum covers subjects including introduction to Bible studies and theological heritage, congregational care, sexual ethics, and evangelism.

The portrait of what Course of Study programs are doing and not doing demonstrates several points. The curriculum is universally offered throughout annual conferences. GCSRW is concerned about the absence of recommended topics highlighted in Resolution 2046.

Year three recognizes the need for discernment and implementation of appropriate boundaries in ministry. Year four offers a course on ethics that introduces the biblical and theological basis for Christian behavior and emphasizes the pastoral skills needed for moral leadership in the congregation and community.

Courses that focus on sexuality-related issues are absent.

The commission offers this report to the 2016 General Conference with a call for more intentional, coordinated work among seminary faculty (including identified contact persons), GBHEM, and GCSRW. The purpose of such is to advocate and develop resources that satisfy this part of education in seminaries and Course of Study programs.

Eradication of Sexism in the Church (Report on Resolution #3443)

He has shown you, O mortal, what is good.

And what does the LORD require of you?

To act justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with your God.

(Micah 6:8 NIV)

Resolution 3443 from the 2012 Book of Resolutions acknowledges the pervasive and systemic problem of sexism within The United Methodist Church. In a commitment to eradicate it in all forms, the Church mandates the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women (GCSRW) to work toward that end. The legislation, consistent with United Methodist Social Principles, encourages prevention through education in leadership events with annual conferences and congregations, and policy development on sexual harassment in all ministry settings.

GCSRW viewed the websites of 47 annual conferences and found the following information related to available policy around sexual misconduct within the church:

Ten conference websites offered no information; 37 offered information, however, the location of the policy content varied from site to site, ranging from “Resources” to “Clergy” to “Conference Journal,” and the content was often difficult to find. Some referenced 2000 Book of Discipline and suggested the information had not been updated in 15 years.

We remain challenged in this work through problems and barriers in all ministry settings. Across the denomination, annual conferences are inconsistent in the resources made available to GCSRW commissions to sponsor education and leadership events aimed at the issue of sexism. We know women comprise 58 percent of the denomination’s membership but hold only one-fifth of the top leadership positions. GCSRW continues to receive calls from clergy and laity when circumstances of sexual harassment have resulted in hostile work environments. Almost always, laity are unaware of a sexual misconduct policy within the faith community. Clergy are concerned about filing formal complaints for fear of retaliation and ultimate harm to their ministry careers.

Specific recommendations include a uniform policy shared by all annual conferences reflecting clarity in identifying and naming the problem of sexism and also offering a clear reporting protocol. The UMC sexual ethics summit, “Do No Harm 2015,” hosted by GCSRW, offered intensive training by the General Council on Finance and Administration’s Legal Counsel on the development of policy and should continue to prioritize this topic in future trainings. In addition, information and education of the policy would be offered by a trained SPRC or church designee to all people in the faith community and updated every two years. In ministry settings other than the local church, the policy would be distributed by appropriate leaders. Policy would be easily accessible through the annual conference and local church/ministry website and printed materials. Currently there exist differing views and opinions regarding policies and practices for prioritizing these resources. A sample policy as well as a checklist for developing and distributing policy will be available at www.umsexualethics.org.

To avoid harm and be proactive in our commitment to eradicate sexism, we will develop and offer a curriculum designed to teach and encourage individuals to relate to one another from a place of integrity, respect, and honor. We can make a difference if we learn the importance of relating in this manner. GCSRW desires to develop such resources and make these available throughout the worldwide church in all ministry settings.

We submit this report in the hope that it will guide holy dialogue among United Methodists on the importance of prioritizing resources to eradicate sexism and that General Conference will support further efforts to focus our church and its members on the critical need for actions that will ensure the integrity of all humanity.

United Methodist Women in Mission A Summary

United Methodist Women is the women's mission organization of The United Methodist Church, putting faith, hope, and love into action on behalf of women, children, and youth in the United States and internationally. United Methodist Women organizes for mission across the United States and world. United Methodist Women is in mission with sister organizations in Africa, with the Women's Society of Christian Service in the Philippines and Korea, and with various women's mission structures in Europe.

During the 2017–2020 quadrennium, United Methodist Women will commemorate our 150th year in mission. We invite the church to join in our celebration by adopting "Celebration of 150 Years of United Methodist Women," Resolution #60255, page 1002. United Methodist Women has made an indelible impact on The United Methodist Church and the world since eight women gathered in a Boston church on March 23, 1869, and began organizing for mission with women and children. This history is both a foundation and an inspiration for the vital work that lies ahead.

United Methodist Women's Strategic Plan

A fresh wind of the Holy Spirit is moving through United Methodist Women as we pursue a vision of turning faith, hope, and love into action on behalf of women, children, and youth around the world. The 2012 General Conference voted to establish United Methodist Women as an agency within The United Methodist Church and approved the more flexible structure options that we proposed, including national leadership structure comprised of United Methodist Women leaders, representatives from the deaconess and home missionary community, our regional missionaries, and representatives from selected agencies of The United Methodist Church and the World Federation of Methodist and Uniting Church Women.

United Methodist Women has identified five strategic outcomes:

- Provide opportunities and resources to grow spiritually, to become more deeply rooted in Christ, and to put faith into action.
- Organize for growth with flexible structures leading to effective witness and action.
- Equip women and girls around the world to be leaders in communities, agencies, governments, and churches.

- Work for justice through compassionate service and advocacy to change unfair policies and systems.
- Provide educational experiences that lead to personal change in order to transform the world.

The total program of United Methodist Women is mission. Mission Giving makes United Methodist Women mission possible. Mission Giving is United Methodist Women members' second- and third-mile gifts beyond their tithes and offerings. Mission Giving provides vital support for the 97 United Methodist Women-related National Mission Institutions, other U.S. ministries and international work with partners, including annual support for more than 150 programs internationally, carried out by up to 116 organizations in more than 110 countries. Mission Giving supports spiritual growth programs, membership nurture, and opportunities for leadership development, mission education, service, and advocacy. Mission Giving supports the actualization of United Methodist Women's vision of turning faith, hope, and love into action on behalf of women, children, and youth around the world.

Spiritual Growth

Individually and collectively, United Methodist Women members tend to their spiritual growth through prayer, study, fellowship, and informed mission action. United Methodist Women produces an array of resources and programs in English, Spanish, and Korean to promote spiritual growth. From 2012 to 2016, United Methodist Women spiritual growth studies addressed Immigration and the Bible: A Guide for Radical Welcome; The Call: Living Sacramentally, Walking Justly; How Is It with Your Soul?; Created for Happiness: Understanding Your Life in God; and The Bible and Human Sexuality: Claiming God's Good Gift.

Transformative Education

United Methodist Women offers many opportunities for transformative study and experiences. Since 2012, more than 80,000 people in the United States have participated in United Methodist Women's annual Mission events focused on the selected spiritual growth, geographic area, and contemporary issue studies. The Seminar Program on National and International Affairs offers groups an opportunity to bring a faith perspective to complex social issues such as human trafficking, restorative justice, poverty, racial justice, maternal health, and economic justice. More than 6,000 members and friends from around the world attended at the “Make It Happen” quadrennial Assembly in 2014. Our Ubuntu Journey program enabled members to worship, learn, cry, pray, share, rejoice, and work with mission partners and sisters in the faith in Cambodia, Chile, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Haiti, Japan, Liberia, Lithuania, Northern Ireland, Philippines, Sierra Leone, South Korea, the Texas-Mexico border, and Zimbabwe.

Service and Advocacy

United Methodist Women members volunteer and reach out locally and also support direct service at national and international ministries. Through the new maternal and child health initiative with the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR), United Methodist Women has already provided more than $200,000 in grants to projects in 15 countries for formal and non-formal midwife training, nutrition programs, and reproductive health education for women while continuing support to long-time mission hospitals.

United Methodist Women also engages in advocacy work that calls for changes to systems causing harm to women, children, youth, and families including such issues as domestic violence, human trafficking, climate change, and environment justice, racial justice, immigrant rights, and income inequality.

Also, in 2013 United Methodist Women brought together women from the Democratic Republic of Congo, Mozambique, Rwanda, and Zimbabwe for a three-day women’s peace building conference at Africa University in Mutare, Zimbabwe. The Institute of Peace, Leadership, and Governance at Africa University co-sponsored the event, seeking to equip women to promote peace within and between their countries. United Methodist Women in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Mozambique, and Rwanda have grown this peace-building initiative.

United Methodist Women is a part of the United Methodist Immigration Task Force seeking reform in the United States and learning about migration globally, working with United Methodist and other allies, including Justice for Our Neighbors, on the campaign to end detention of undocumented immigrant families.

Leadership Development

United Methodist Women trains women to be leaders in the church and in society in the United States and globally. We have provided scholarships to U.S. students and to international students in higher education institutions in 18 countries on four continents through to completion of their course of study. United Methodist Women’s eight regional missionaries work in their home regions on leadership development for women and youth in 49 countries and focus on gender justice; economic empowerment, including job skills training and microcredit groups; and restorative justice work with women in jail.

United Methodist Women is connected to the Wesley Center in Tokyo, Japan, and the Scranton Center for Women’s Leadership in Seoul, South Korea. These two centers are current expressions of the giving and service of United Methodist Women predecessor organizations, providing educational and leadership development opportunities to young women from around the world.

United Methodist Women also administers the Deaconess and Home Missioner Office, a program for laywomen and laymen who are called to lifetime vocational ministries of love, justice, and service as part of a covenant community. We look forward to celebrating the consecration of deaconesses and home missioners during morning worship on Monday, May 16, at this General Conference.

Legislation to Watch

Key United Methodist Women-supported legislation to watch includes: “Responsible Parenthood,” Resolution #2025, page 327, which affirms “the family, in its varying forms” and the right of families to have access to and education about family planning; and “A Charter for Racial Justice Policies in an Interdependent Global Community,” Resolution #3371, page 362, which undergirds the important work of racial justice in our church, nation, and world.

In response to a 2012 General Conference referral, United Methodist Women is supporting an amendment to Article 4 of the Constitution of The United Methodist Church being submitted by COSROW [General Commission on the Status and Role of Women] to this General Conference that adds gender to the Church’s mandate for inclusivity.

United Methodist Women is submitting legislation based on a study by the Deaconess and Home Missioner administrative office that would designate the community as an order of the Church.

Conclusion

United Methodist Women on the local, district, conference, jurisdictional, and national levels looks forward to moving onward in mission in the upcoming quadrennium. In so many, often-unspoken ways, United Methodist Women has been and continues to be a source of strength for women, a place to grow and learn and recognize the power of their God-given voices. The world has changed since the “dark and stormy night” of our founding in 1869. The needs of women, children, and youth have changed in some ways and remained the same in others. What hasn’t changed is the need for United Methodist Women, because in the twenty-first century women still need to organize for mission.

United Methodist Women in Mission

An Overview

United Methodist Women is the women's mission organization of The United Methodist Church, putting faith, hope, and love into action on behalf of women, children, and youth in the United States and internationally. On the local, district, and conference levels, United Methodist Women is a creative, supportive community of women organized around the Purpose, which is "to know God and to experience freedom as whole persons through Jesus Christ" and "to expand concepts of mission by participation in the global ministries of the church." On the national level in the United States, United Methodist Women is "actively engaged in fulfilling the mission of Christ and the Church," interpreting the organization's Purpose and "support[ing] ministry with and advocat[ing] for the oppressed and dispossessed with special attention to the needs of women, children, and youth" (The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, 2012, ¶1319). United Methodist Women organizes for mission across the United States and around the world. United Methodist Women is in mission with sister organizations in Africa, with the Women's Society of Christian Service in the Philippines and Korea, and with various women's mission structures in Europe.

During the 2017–2020 quadrennium, United Methodist Women will commemorate our 150th year in mission. General Conference affirmed the work of United Methodist Women in 2004 and 2008, and we invite the church to join in our celebration by adopting "Celebration of 150 Years of United Methodist Women," Resolution #60255, page 1002. United Methodist Women has made an indelible impact on The United Methodist Church and the world since eight women gathered in a Boston church on March 23, 1869, and began organizing for mission with women and children. This history is both a foundation and an inspiration for the vital work that lies ahead.

Throughout our history, United Methodist Women and its predecessor organizations brought women together in small groups to grow in faith, learn about their own needs and potential, learn about others, and organize and raise funds so that they could reach out to marginalized neighbors in their local communities and around the world. Together, we continue to be transformed, as the apostle Paul says, by the renewing of our minds (Romans 12:2). Our eyes are opened—and once that happens it is very hard to shut them again.

Our spiritual foundation and the knowledge that we are powerful disciples of Christ is the fertile ground on which God calls us to action. It really is no surprise that school, clinics, and community centers are part of United Methodist Women's mission legacy and ongoing commitment. Our foremothers organized to end foot-binding in China, and we organize to end domestic violence and human trafficking today.

As United Methodist Women approaches our 150th anniversary, we are building upon this legacy of mission focused on the needs of women, children, and youth that has been passed on to us by our foremothers. With one hand, we are gathering our history in events like the "Voices Lost and Found" conference at Methodist Theological School in Ohio in May 2015. With the other hand, we are welcoming yet another generation of women for this important work, as we continue to serve and discern our calling to this specialized mission in the twenty-first century.

United Methodist Women's Strategic Plan

A fresh wind of the Holy Spirit is moving through United Methodist Women as we pursue a vision of turning faith, hope, and love into action on behalf of women, children, and youth around the world. The 2012 General Conference voted to establish United Methodist Women as an agency within The United Methodist Church and approved the more flexible structure options that we proposed to enable local, district, and conference women to organize for mission in ways that best suit their contexts and communities. In the United States, United Methodist Women's streamlined structure includes a smaller 25-member national board of directors and a 70- to 80-member Program Advisory Group comprised of United Methodist Women leaders, representatives from the deaconess and home missionary community, our regional missionaries, and representatives from selected agencies of The United Methodist Church and the World Federation of Methodist and Uniting Church Women.

With this in place, during this past quadrennium United Methodist Women engaged in a strategic planning process in an effort to accomplish key objectives in concert with The United Methodist Church's Discipline and mission charge to the organization:

- Provide opportunities and resources to grow spiritually, to become more deeply rooted in Christ and to put faith into action.
- Organize for growth with flexible structures, leading to effective witness and action.
- Equip women and girls around the world to be leaders in communities, agencies, governments, and churches.
- Work for justice through compassionate service and advocacy to change unfair policies and systems.
- Provide educational experiences that lead to personal change in order to transform the world.

At the heart of our work is faith that animates United Methodist Women members and leads us into compassionate service and passionate advocacy for justice. The needs of the world and the injustice experienced by women, children, and youth drive us to deepen our spiritual resources.

The total program of United Methodist Women is mission. Mission Giving makes United Methodist Women mission possible. Mission Giving is United Methodist Women members' second- and third-mile gifts beyond their tithes and offerings. Mission Giving provides vital support for the 97 United Methodist Women-related National Mission Institutions, other U.S. ministries and international work with partners. Mission Giving supports spiritual growth programs, membership nurture, and opportunities for leadership development, mission education, service, and advocacy. Mission Giving supports the actualization of United Methodist Women's vision of turning faith, hope, and love into action on behalf of women, children, and youth around the world.

Living into this vision requires spiritual growth, transformative education, service and advocacy, and leadership development—the core components of the United Methodist Women mission program.

Spiritual Growth

Individually and collectively, United Methodist Women members tend to their spiritual growth through prayer, study, fellowship, and informed mission action. United Methodist Women produces an array of resources and programs in English, Spanish, and Korean to promote spiritual growth. The Prayer Calendar, produced cooperatively with the General Board of Global Ministries, equips members and friends for intercessory prayer with daily lectionary readings and listings of United Methodist-related National Mission Institutions and international partners along with the names and birthdays of missionaries and mission personnel. Bible studies and spiritual growth reflections are monthly features in the organization's response magazine, and each year United Methodist Women publishes a spiritual growth study to help members mature in their faith as they follow Christ in service.

United Methodist Women offers spiritual growth studies not only to its membership, but also to the entire church for transformative spiritual growth that deepens participants' relationship with God and with neighbors.

From 2013 to 2016, United Methodist Women's spiritual growth studies addressed:

- Immigration and the Bible: A Guide for Radical Welcome. Much of the Bible is the story of migration, immigrants, and journeys of faith. This 2012 study explores the biblical and theological understandings of migration, what it is to be a sojourner and how to live into the biblical mandate of hospitality for “the stranger” and “aliens” in our midst.
- The Call: Living Sacramentally, Walking Justly. This 2013 spiritual growth study explores sacramental understandings of baptism, communion, and discerning—and answering—God's calling on your life.
- How Is It with Your Soul? This 2014 study looks at this question asked often in early Methodist classes and bands to help study participants explore the inner and outer dimensions of the Christian life and be challenged to become more vibrant disciples of Christ.
- Created for Happiness: Understanding Your Life in God. This 2015 study juxtaposes John Wesley's teaching on “The Beatitudes” with popular understandings of happiness and helps participants reflect on how to live the life that God calls us to.
- The Bible and Human Sexuality: Claiming God's Good Gift. This 2016 study explores the depth of the biblical witness on human sexuality and what this says to us as Christians today.

Transformative Education

Mission education deepens spiritual growth and understanding about how God is at work in the world. United Methodist Women provides many opportunities for members and others to educate themselves for mission through events, programs, and personal study. Since 2012, more than 80,000 people in the United States have participated in United Methodist Women's annual Mission events focused on the selected spiritual growth, geographic area, and contemporary issue studies. Participants can get continuing education college credits for some of the studies. United Methodist Women's annual Reading Program features more than sixty titles organized in the categories of spiritual growth, education for mission, leadership development, nurturing for community, and social action.

United Methodist Women's Seminar Program on National and International Affairs offers groups an opportunity to study complex social issues from a faith perspective at the organization's Church Center for the United Nations in New York City and at United Methodist Women-hosted events in other locations. Since 2012, the program led approximately 200 seminars for church, youth, student, and United Methodist Women groups. The seminars addressed such issues as human trafficking, restorative justice, poverty, racial justice, maternal health, economic justice, and more.

Service and Advocacy

United Methodist Women members volunteer and reach out locally and also support direct service at national and international ministries. Such compassionate service takes United Methodist Women to places where people are hurting and offers a clearer view of God's image in the faces of neighbors. This is why United Methodist Women also engages in advocacy work that calls for changes to systems causing harm to women, children, youth, families, and the earth that we all must share. Over the past quadrennium, United Methodist Women advocacy raised awareness about domestic violence, human trafficking, climate change and environment justice, racial justice, immigrant rights, and income inequality.

Leadership Development

United Methodist Women trains women to be leaders in the church and in society in the United States and globally. International examples include United Methodist Women scholarships and our regional missionaries who work with women and youth in their areas (see "International Ministries" section). Our Leadership Development Days program is an example of our U.S. efforts in this area. Since 2012, we've expanded the former annual training for newly elected conference United Methodist Women officers into three regional Leadership Development Days also open to district and local women who want to hone their leadership skills. In addition to sessions specifically for United Methodist Women officers, these weekend training events include workshops on the theology of mission, planning for inclusion, worship and music, practicing dialogue and conflict resolution, Internet basics and communications, acting for justice, and more.

United Methodist Women also administers the Deaconess and Home Missioner Office. Deaconesses are laywomen and Home Missioners are laymen who are called by the Holy Spirit to devote their vocational lives to Christlike service in a lifetime relationship as part of a covenant community. Legislation submitted to this General Conference reflects a study of the understanding of the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner as an order.

We look forward to celebrating the consecration of deaconesses and home missioners during morning worship on Monday, May 16, at the upcoming General Conference.

2012–2016 Highlights of United Methodist Women in Action

Limitless: Redefining Tomorrow

In August 2012, about 200 young women and mentors from around the country gathered at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, for United Methodist Women's "Limitless: Redefine Tomorrow," the first leadership event of its kind designed by and for teens, young women, and their mentors. The event included worship, workshops, an Ubuntu Day of Service, and opportunities for young women to network and have fun. The Limitless initiative is shattering stereotypes and helping to energize a new generation of women to commit to help lead United Methodist Women into its next 150 years of mission. Participants took what they learned back home and organized similar leadership training events and ongoing efforts in their respective areas with their conference United Methodist Women throughout the quadrennium.

Limitless participant Katie Lindsey-McCoy explained: "In the twenty-first century, it is still critical for women to organize for mission because we have a responsibility to generations after us to open doors just as those before us have opened doors. I love our 'faith, hope, and love in action' message. Jesus didn't just tell us he wanted us to spread the good news and 'love thy neighbor as thyself'; he showed us. I'm excited to be a part of United Methodist Women!"

Assembly

More than 6,000 United Methodist Women members and friends from around the world attended Assembly

2014 at the Kentucky International Convention Center in Louisville, April 15–17, 2014. The Assembly theme was “Make It Happen,” and the event included worship, performances, workshops, social gatherings, world-renowned speakers, a fair-trade market, and a march for economic justice. Optional pre-event actions included an Ubuntu Day of Service featuring opportunities to volunteer with local community organizations and a reunion for the young women who attended the Limitless: Redefine Tomorrow event in 2012.

Also at Assembly, United Methodist Women launched a new maternal and child health initiative in cooperation with the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR).

National Seminar

More than 200 women from around the country prepared for bold, faith-based, justice action at “Interrupting Indifference: Jesus, Justice, and Joy,” the quadrennial United Methodist Women National Seminar in Chicago, Illinois, July 29 to August 2, 2015. The training event included site visits, joint actions with local groups, and workshops on spiritually anchored activism, climate justice, maternal and child health, economic inequality, mass incarceration and police brutality, organizing skills, and more. Participants left the event equipped with skills to effect change in their home communities.

Language Ministries

United Methodist Women continued its leadership development work by reaching out to U.S. women whose first language is not English as they organize for mission. The annual VOICES: A Transformative Leadership Event brings together conference United Methodist Women presidents and language ministries coordinators from around the country for a weekend of training in how to welcome, nurture, and resource women of various language groups in our conferences. Currently, United Methodist Women’s language ministries reach women whose first languages are Akan, Creole (French), Hmong, Korean, Spanish, Tagalog, and Tongan.

Health Care

Health care for women, children, and youth has been a key mission area for United Methodist Women since women first began organizing for mission nearly 150 years ago, and it continues to be a mission priority. Through the new maternal and child health initiative with UMCOR, United Methodist Women has already provided more than $200,000 in grants to projects in 15 countries for formal and non-formal midwife training, nutrition programs, and reproductive health education for women. United Methodist Women also continued support to longtime mission hospitals.

On the local level, United Methodist Women members also worked for the health care needs of women, children, and youth. Northwest District United Methodist Women of Texas Conference is an example. The district brought the community together for a youth suicide prevention forum at its fall meeting in 2013. Speakers at the event included local law enforcement officers, the director of a mental health crisis center, educators, and clergy.

United Methodist Women is also urging this General Conference to readopt “Responsible Parenthood,” Resolution #2025, page 327, which affirms “the family, in its varying forms, constitutes the primary focus of human love, acceptance, and nurture,” and that “family life is a major aspect of the abundant life (John 10:10) which Jesus came to bring.” The resolution affirms the right of families to have “access to and education about family planning,” and decries the fact that “women around the world bear the consequences, and so do their families, when they do not have access to and education about family planning.”

International Ministries

From United Methodist Women living out their faith in Liberia to girls dreaming of college education in China; to women farmers feeding their families in Haiti; to women and children receiving treatment for tuberculosis at a mission hospital in the Philippines; to crisis intervention for migrant domestic workers in Hong Kong; to unlocking financial opportunities for rural communities in Mozambique; to literacy for rural Nepalese women; to Central African women writing their own faith stories, United Methodist Women impacts more lives than can be counted through our international ministries.

In 2013–2016, United Methodist Women international ministries:

- Annually supported some 150 programs internationally, carried out by up to 116 organizations in more than 110 countries. Supported programs that provided primary, secondary, and higher education; non-formal health care and education for women; literacy training; human trafficking prevention and intervention; spiritual growth, leadership and organizational development; environmental justice action; work to end violence against women and children; women's economic development; improving women's role in church and society; food security; and addressed migration issues around the globe.

- Sponsored eight regional missionaries who work with women and youth in their home regions in the areas of leadership development for women and youth and other things that make for peace. Their work reaches 49 countries in Africa, Asia/Pacific Islands, Latin America, and the Caribbean and focuses on gender justice; economic empowerment, including job skills training and microcredit groups; restorative justice work with women in jail; and leadership development for women and youth. Regional missionaries partner with Methodist and United Methodist women groups on organizational development, mission education, spiritual growth opportunities, and education.
- Supported disaster/emergency response efforts of partner organizations directly, with UMCOR and supported women's groups' networking efforts during crises. This included providing grants for West African women's response to the Ebola crisis and for relief work after the 2015 earthquakes in Nepal. This is women advocating for women, an approach to disaster relief that includes the needs of women.
- Provided scholarships to more than 73 students enrolled in institutions of higher education in 18 countries in Asia, Africa, Europe, and Latin America/Caribbean. United Methodist Women scholarships are designed to support students to the completion of their course of study.

United Methodist Women used funds that would have paid for our exhibit at the 2012 General Conference to instead award scholarships to two women for seminary education in Cameroon. Georgette N. Atsina and Julienne G. Ngo Um are those women. Both are now serving in the church and society. Ms. Atsina said: "Without the scholarship, I would not have been able to study theology, because the courses are so expensive, and I thank God to have accorded me this privilege."

- Strengthened relationships with mission partners in Japan through the Wesley Center in Tokyo and in South Korea through the Scranton Center for Women's Leadership in Seoul. These two centers are current expressions of the giving and service of United Methodist Women predecessor organizations as the stewardship of funds given years ago is applied to the needs of women, children, and youth today. Each year the Scranton Center provides millions of dollars in scholarships to women throughout Asia and at Africa University.

United Methodist Women, the Scranton Center, and the Wesley Center have worked together to develop another generation of women leaders on issues like peace and the environment. Participants in the programs have included women, age 18–35, from the United States, South Korea, China, and Japan. U.S. participants were from United Methodist Women-supported colleges, the United Methodist Native American International Caucus, and United Methodist Women groups.

Ubuntu Journeys

Since 2006, Ubuntu Journeys have offered unique opportunities for United Methodist Women members to experience the mutuality of mission as they visit international mission partners and worship, learn, cry, pray, share, rejoice, and work with sisters in the faith.

From 2012 to 2016, about 150 local United Methodist Women members participated the Ubuntu Journey program in Cambodia, Chile, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Haiti, Japan, Liberia, Lithuania, Northern Ireland, Philippines, Sierra Leone, South Korea, the Texas-Mexico border, and Zimbabwe.

Rita Gaither-Grant of Indiana Annual Conference, a former director of United Methodist Women and participant in the Sierra Leone Ubuntu Journey, explains the impact of the program: "The Ubuntu Journeys assist us with telling the real stories of women, children, and youth around the world . . . makes being in mission together real. . . . You realize that the hopes, dreams, and concerns we have, they have. . . . We are more alike than different. . . . This is the story of our membership . . . the story of a loving, caring community of women who live the same purpose as we."

Advocacy for Justice

Climate Justice

United Methodist Women's "Be Just. Be Green." initiative created a 13 Steps to Sustainability program, which includes a comprehensive website with guides and surveys to help United Methodist Women groups measure their progress in hosting meetings and events that are environmentally friendly and just for workers. The “Be Just. Be Green.” initiative also includes the first Women’s Carbon Fund, which supports projects that lower atmospheric carbon dioxide, help women and children impacted by climate change, and promote climate justice advocacy efforts.

Climate Justice is the focus of United Methodist Women’s 2016 adult, youth, and children issue mission studies.

Domestic Violence

Working with the FaithTrust Institute, United Methodist Women offered training, educational materials and other resources to local women and district and conference groups. The women, in turn, organized educational panel discussions and domestic violence awareness campaigns in their local churches and communities.

United Methodist Women continued our partnership with United Methodist Men on domestic violence by co-sponsoring a Domestic Violence Church Team Training program with the FaithTrust Institute. The program provided domestic violence awareness training for selected churches that commit to likewise train other churches in their conferences.

United Methodist Women also established the Inelda Z. González Initiative on Domestic Violence in honor of the 2009–2012 Women’s Division president to help conferences work on this issue across the United States.

Gender Justice

Throughout the quadrennium, United Methodist Women joined with international nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) working for women’s equality through our work at the Church Center for the United Nations. United Methodist Women advocated for U.S. adoption of the United Nations (U.N.) Convention for the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) and has sponsored meetings for NGO women in the days before the official U.N. annual meeting accessing CEDAW’s impact. United Methodist Women also worked with the Center of Global Women’s Leadership on a march and prayer vigil on International Women’s Day and with the People’s Global Action on Migration to advocate for the human rights of immigrants around the world. Each year, United Methodist Women brings delegations of women from around the world to participate in the annual U.N.

Commission on the Status of Women as well as other U.N. meetings on peace and justice.

The 2012 General Conference referred an amendment to Article 4 of the Constitution of The United Methodist Church back to the Commission on the Status and Role of Women (COSROW) and Women’s Division, now United Methodist Women, for consideration of how gender should be addressed in the church’s mandate for inclusivity. The result of this shared work is in a petition supported by United Methodist Women that has been submitted by COSROW to the 2016 General Conference.

Human Trafficking

Throughout the quadrennium United Methodist Women’s Washington Office of Public Policy resourced local United Methodist Women members around the country on this issue and mobilized them for action through the Intercept the Trafficker campaign. This effort raised awareness about human trafficking and how large sporting events like the Super Bowl can increase opportunities for predators to profit from the crime. During the Super Bowl season, United Methodist Women members posted fliers in public bathrooms, handed out postcards, and provided inserts in their Sunday worship bulletins about the human trafficking, what it looks like in their communities, and how to contact help if they suspect they have encountered someone who is being trafficked.

Members also organized community educational events about human trafficking. The Northeast District of the North Alabama Conference United Methodist Women is an example. About 350 attended a human trafficking awareness seminar the district women co-sponsored with the district superintendent and host church, Trinity United Methodist Church in Huntsville, Alabama.

On the national level, United Methodist Women gave grants of up to $10,000 each for national and international projects working to end human trafficking, modern-day child and adult slave labor, and sexual exploitation. Susannah Wesley Community Center in Honolulu, Hawaii, is an example. The United Methodist Women-supported center provides social services to human trafficking survivors as they transition back into a “normal” life. The center is a member of the Hawaii Coalition Against Human Trafficking.

The Batis Center for Women in the Philippines is one of several international programs supported by United Methodist Women that is working to end human trafficking as it helps survivors heal. The Batis Center for Women helps Filipino women migrant workers and their families through welfare services, organizing, education, training, and more.

Human Rights and Investment Ethics

United Methodist Women was an active participant on the Human Rights and Investment Ethics Task Force, working with other church agencies to identify resources, principles, and procedures that express our commitment to human rights.

The 2012 General Conference directed United Methodist general boards and agencies to prayerfully consider advocating that all companies formally recognize and adopt into their codes of conduct the United Nations' Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (also known as the Ruggie Principles). United Methodist Women's investment portfolio is currently invested in a socially responsible manner by the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits. United Methodist Women is also a founding member of the Interfaith Center for Corporate Responsibility, which works to integrate social values into corporate and investor actions and is a strong advocate of the Ruggie Principles.

Immigrants Rights

The struggle for just immigration policies here in the United States was a major focus of United Methodist Women's advocacy work from 2012 to 2016. United Methodist Women chief executive officer Harriett Jane Olson, several conference social action coordinators, and deaconesses joined United Methodist and other supporters in a civil disobedience action in Washington, D.C., in 2013. Throughout the quadrennium, United Methodist Women worked closely with United Methodist and other allies, including Justice for Our Neighbors, on the campaign to end detention of undocumented immigrant families that included a national letter-writing effort urging the White House and Congress to stop the practice.

United Methodist Women is a part of the United Methodist Immigration Task Force seeking reform in the United States and learning about migration globally. United Methodist Women provided emergency grants to National Mission Institutions located along the U.S.-Mexico border in Texas and California that opened their doors to the wave of Central American women and unaccompanied children who crossed into the United States during the summer of 2014. During that crisis, local United Methodist Women members provided needed volunteer hands and friendly smiles for the frightened migrant women and children arriving at the mission institutions as well as donated needed supplies.

Peace Building

In the fall of 2012, United Methodist Women responded to the hate language in an anti-Muslim ad campaign targeting New York City subway stations with a counter subway ad campaign promoting peace. Our subway ad simply stated: "Hate speech is not civilized. Support peace in word and deed" in white letters on a bright green background with our United Methodist Church cross and flame logo and tagline, "United Methodist Women: Faith * Hope * Love in Action," along the bottom of the ad. Our ad for peace hung next to the anti-Muslim ad that we sought to counter. United Methodist Women chief executive officer Harriett Jane Olson explained: "The work for peace is very difficult and requires mutual respect and respectful dialogue. Incendiary speech is an impediment to dialogue and to peace making."

A critical part of United Methodist Women's peacemaking work is directing the attention of U.S. and international policymakers to issues raised by grassroots women around the world. The work of our Washington Office on Public Policy and Church Center for the United Nations are key components in this task.

In 2013, United Methodist Women celebrated the 50th anniversary of our ministry of hospitality, peace building, and advocacy at the Church Center for the United Nations, located across the street from the United Nations in New York City.

That same year, following a fall 2012 visit of an ecumenical delegation from the Democratic Republic of Congo to the United States to call attention to human rights atrocities then underway in their nation as many seek its mineral wealth, United Methodist Women brought together women from the Democratic Republic of Congo, Mozambique, Rwanda, and Zimbabwe for a three-day women's peace building conference at Africa University in Mutare, Zimbabwe. The Institute of Peace, Leadership, and Governance at Africa University co-sponsored the event, seeking to equip women to promote peace within and between their countries. United Methodist Women in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Mozambique, and Rwanda have continued and expanded this peace-building initiative.

Later in 2013, United Methodist Women participated in Congo Week, an initiative of Congolese youth and faith leaders in which the third week of October is designated for letter writing, educational forums, and other activities to raise awareness about the international grab for minerals vital to modern technology that keeps triggering war and violent conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

In July 2014, United Methodist Women was granted “special consultative” status with the United Nations and “specialized ministries” status with the World Council of Churches. Prior to 2012, United Methodist Women worked with these organizations as a division of the United Methodist General Board of Global Ministries. United Methodist Women’s new status with these organizations opens new mission opportunities. For example, as a specialized ministry, United Methodist Women was able to send women from Democratic Republic of Congo and Zimbabwe to a World Council of Churches event on peace building in their region.

Racial Justice

United Methodist Women from its beginnings has worked to build a community and social order without racial barriers. In 1952, United Methodist Women drafted and adopted the first Charter for Racial Justice, and The United Methodist Church adopted a version of the charter in 1980. United Methodist Women urges the General Conference to readopt “A Charter for Racial Justice Policies in an Interdependent Global Community,” Resolution #3371, page 362 as the work for racial justice in our church, nation, and world is, unfortunately, far from complete.

Racial justice remains a focus of United Methodist Women mission as members work to promote racial justice in the United States and around the world. Often racism is understood in solely personal terms, when it in fact operates in more insidious and harmful ways through social structures and institutions. Throughout the quadrennium, United Methodist Women leadership training events, seminars, and meetings included workshops on institutional racism, to empower members to recognize it, understand how it operates, not perpetuate it, and help to dismantle it.

Also, as directed by the 2012 General Conference, United Methodist Women has worked with the General Commission on Religion and Race and COSROW to develop an instrument for accessing racism in programs for and with women, children, and youth. The monitoring tool is available by contacting any of our offices.

Conclusion

United Methodist Women on the local, district, conference, jurisdictional, and national levels looks forward to moving onward in mission in the upcoming quadrennium. In so many, often-unspoken ways, United Methodist Women has been and continues to be a source of strength for women, a place to grow and learn and recognize the power of their God-given voices. The world has changed since the “dark and stormy night” of our founding in 1869. The needs of women, children, and youth have changed in some ways and remained the same in others. What hasn’t changed is the need for United Methodist Women, because in the twenty-first century women still need to organize for mission.

Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner Lay Order Report to General Conference

Executive Summary

This report shares the findings and recommendations of the 2012 General Conference referral to the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner to determine if a group of laity can properly be considered an order within The United Methodist Church's polity and theology of ministry and if the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner fits that definition. In short, the study conducted by United Methodist Women concludes yes to both questions and proposes revised legislation as a result [petition #60245, page 977].

Deaconess service has been an integral part of United Methodist ministry for over 127 years. Since 2004, home missionaries have enjoyed the same status. Today, there are at least 650 United Methodist deaconesses and home missionaries globally who “function through diverse forms of service directed toward the world to make Jesus Christ known in the fullness of his ministry and mission” (The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, 2012, ¶ 1314).

Deaconesses and home missionaries represent a different expression of the diaconate than ordained deacons in The United Methodist Church. Deaconesses and home missionaries are a lay expression, while deacons are an ordained expression, with both being diaconal callings. Since 2004 the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner has been open to men (home missionaries) in addition to the long-standing relationship of women (deaconesses).

The 2012 General Conference referral based on legislation submitted by the Women's Division of the General Board of Global Ministries (now United Methodist Women) was welcomed by the administrative office for the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner to study the appropriateness of the use of the term “lay order” in

The United Methodist Church. The administrative office, under the guidance of the Committee on Deaconess and Home Missioner Service, engaged in a study process to answer this referral. Consultation attendees comprising both lay and clergy included historians and theologians from seminaries and universities, general agency personnel, seminary students, deaconesses, home missionaries, and other key persons whose perspectives were deemed especially helpful for deliberations.

The process concluded that:

- Deaconesses and home missionaries are rightly understood as a lay order, as they compose “a covenant community within the church to mutually support, care for, and hold accountable its members for the sake of the life and mission of the church,” which is the definition of an order in the Book of Discipline (¶ 306). The defining characteristic both now and throughout the deaconess and home missionary history is the covenant community with one another.
- Deaconesses and home missionaries have always functioned as an order as they have struggled with and tried to appropriate emerging forms of Christian discipleship. This kind of commitment and obedience requires structure, culture, relationship, and community. Deaconesses and home missionaries form a covenant community that is characterized by a common call rooted in Scripture—a commitment to the mission of the church informed by history, driven by mission, ecumenical in scope, and global in outreach.¹
- The Book of Discipline already recognizes an order inclusive of laity in the Order of St. Luke (¶ 630.4c and ¶ 1113.14).

In appreciation of the study process, revised legislation [petition #60245, page 977] is being presented to General Conference 2016.

Purpose of This Report

This report provides a summary of the findings from the study process, including a 2014 consultation that took place at the Scarritt Bennett Center in Nashville, Tennessee,

1. Theology and Relationship, Handbook of Administrative Policies and Guidelines Offices of Deaconess, Home Missioner, and Home Missionary, October 2013, Policy 201, 9.

exploring the existence of a lay order in The United Methodist Church and the role of deaconesses and home missionaries in light of that order.

At the 2012 General Conference the Women's Division of the General Board of Global Ministries proposed an addition to a subparagraph following ¶ 1314.1 in the Book of Discipline as follows:

The Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner is a lay order of The United Methodist Church as order is defined in ¶ 306 "a covenant community within the church to mutually support, care for, and hold accountable its members for the sake of the life and mission of the church."

The legislation was then amended in subcommittee to state: "The Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner is a lay order." The committee, in later discussions, recommended referral for study to the administrative office for the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner. Through committee discussion, it became apparent that members sought a deeper understanding of order in terms of laity. The Women's Division (now United Methodist Women) welcomed the referral for study.

Current and Historical Context of the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner

Current Context

Deaconesses and home missionaries are laypeople in The United Methodist Church who are called by God to make a lifetime commitment to fulltime ministries of love, justice, and service. They are often involved in diverse forms of service directed toward the world to make Jesus Christ known in the fullness of his ministry and mission, which mandate that his followers:

- Alleviate suffering;
- Eradicate causes of injustice and all that robs life of dignity and worth;
- Facilitate the development of full human potential; and
- Share in building global community through the church universal.

The Book of Discipline, 2012 describes the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner:

The purpose of the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner shall be to express representatively the love and concern of the believing community for the needs in the world and to enable, through education and involvement, the full ministry and mission of the people of God. Deaconesses and home missionaries function through diverse forms of service directed toward the world to make Jesus Christ known in the fullness of his ministry and mission, which mandate that his followers: a) Alleviate suffering; b) Eradicate causes of injustice and all that robs life of dignity and worth; c) Facilitate the development of full human potential; and d) Share in building global community through the church universal. (¶ 1314)

At the time of its establishment in 1888 in the Methodist Episcopal Church, the office of deaconess was limited as a vocation available only for women. In 2004, the category of home missioner was added to make this form of ministry available to men as well. The ordained deacon established as a full and equal clergy order in 1996 is another expression of the United Methodist diaconate that is of ordained persons and is not the focus of this report.

At present, the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner is the only avenue available in The United Methodist Church that enables laity to respond formally to a full-time calling through consecration and commissioning for lifetime ministries of love, justice, and service. There are at least 650 active deaconesses/home missionaries worldwide, 450 of them are deaconesses in active service in the Philippines.

In the global nature of The United Methodist Church and the deaconess and home missioner movement, there exist distinct traditions, processes specific for the context, and distinct contextual expressions of ministry. In general, deaconesses and home missionaries serve under guidelines and with accountability to the appropriate designated church body that works in consultation with the bishop in the annual conference for the fixing of appointments. For example, in the United States, it is the United Methodist Women national office with the advisory Committee on Deaconess and Home Missioner Service. In the Philippines it is the Annual Conference Committee on Deaconess Service along with the Commission on Deaconess Service and Board of Women's Work. U.S. deaconess and home missioner appointments are fixed by the bishop of their annual conference, while in the Philippines, where most deaconesses itinerate, the appointments are fixed by the bishop in the receiving area.

The recognition of deaconesses and home missionaries as an order in no way alters the existing accountability structure or rights, responsibilities, and privileges afforded in the existing Discipline paragraphs or traditions of the various contexts in which deaconesses and home missionaries serve.

Historical Context

When the office of deaconess was established in 1888 it was simultaneously an innovative ecclesiological development and a traditional one, drawing as it did from the rich well of Wesleyan covenantal discipleship found in the General Rules and other sources of United Methodist doctrine.

The office of deaconess was innovative because the legislation that brought it into existence sprang, not just from the so-called “heartlands” of the Methodist movement in the United States but also from its dynamic missional relationships. Some of the appeals to start the office of deaconess came from the Rock River Conference in the United States and from the Bengal Conference in India. Women missionaries were eager to find new ways of reaching out to Indian women, and the office of deaconess looked like a match. On the other side of the world, and as early as 1864, Methodists in Germany were also calling for a “Committee on the Establishment of a Deaconess Institution.” Lutherans in Germany had established a similar office decades earlier, and Methodists drew from this ecumenical stream to create an office of deaconess of their own.

In the twentieth century, Methodist women continued to respond to the call to serve as deaconesses in a variety of missional posts in the United States and around the world. Before the guns of war sounded in Europe in 1914, Methodists had established more than 30 deaconess training schools and hospitals to promote peace and reconciliation in Christ. These schools stretched across the nation and around the world. By 1924, more than 1,800 women had been consecrated as deaconesses. In the 1920s, deaconess training schools came upon difficult times and many closed or were merged into other institutions to become schools of social work, seminaries, and hospitals, which had also begun to train women for roles that the deaconesses had pioneered.²

The Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner is an ecclesial office that encourages covenantal discipleship in the Wesleyan way. It will continue to innovate in response to changing contexts as it strives to be faithful to the rich stream of covenantal discipleship from which it sprang nearly 130 years ago.

Study of the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner Referral by General Conference 2012

To address the referral by the 2012 General Conference, the administrative office for the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner with United Methodist Women solicited papers from individuals representing a variety of perspectives and areas of expertise to inform the discussion. The papers were distributed for review as part of a consultation to address the question of identity as a lay order and related theological themes. Held at Scarritt Bennett Center in Nashville, Tennessee, the September 2014 consultation was attended by members of the laity (including deaconesses, home missionaries, and a home missionary) and clergy (ordained elders and deacons). A list of participants and authors is available in the appendix.

The papers from this study can be organized into three perspectives:

1. Experiential / Ecumenical
2. Historical
3. Biblical / Theological

Some papers, of course, could be categorized in more than one group. They can be read on the United Methodist Women’s website at www.unitedmethodistwomen.org/gc2016/dhm.

Experiential / Ecumenical

The experiential/ecumenical papers provide understanding of the strength and identity of deaconesses and home missionaries across traditions and contexts as a covenant community. A key aspect of the Book of Discipline’s definition of “order” is a covenant community in ¶ 306.

Three papers that best fit this category are those written by Amelita Grace G. Cajiua and Liwliwa Tubayan Robledo, who discuss how deaconesses in the Philippines have impacted the life of The United Methodist Church in their country; Louise Williams, who highlights the experience of Lutheran deaconesses from outside North America; and Becky Louter and Myka Kennedy Stephens, who examine the changes in the Book of Discipline throughout the history of the deaconess movement and also discuss the strategic plan for the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner in the United States, completed in November of 2011.

Historical

As recorded on The United Methodist Church timeline by the General Commission on Archives and History, the earliest call for deaconess as an order was in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Zion's Herald, March 17, 1852, issue. As supported by the various aspects and connections illustrated in the papers falling under this perspective, deaconesses and home missionaries have functioned as an order since the very beginning.

Four papers specifically explored the history of deaconesses in the Methodist tradition, as well as in the experience of the early church. These papers are authored by Lacey C. Warner, who focuses primarily on the consecration rituals used to initiate deaconesses into the office in the early church as well as in Methodism; Ellen Blue, whose work is mainly concerned with the different kinds of laywomen's orders from the early church to the present; Glory E. Dharmaraj, who wrote on the history of Methodist deaconesses with attention to how they have been engaged in mission; and Priscilla Pope-Levison, who provided prepublication research from her recent book, Building the Old-Time Religion (New York University Press, 2014), by telling the stories of deaconesses and the training institutes they built to provide rigorous and affordable academic and practical theological education for laywomen.

Biblical / Theological

The papers that fall under this perspective show ample precedent for the existence and recognition of deaconess and home missionary as an order and office. The Book of Discipline recognizes the Order of St. Luke as a current example of an order that is inclusive of laity.

Four papers examined the biblical or theological foundations for the diaconate: Benjamin L. Hartley examined the linguistic biblical research by Roman Catholic scholar John N. Collins in Diakonia: Reinterpreting the Ancient Sources (Oxford University Press, 1990); David Lowes Watson and Anne Hillman each traced the theological history of lay leadership in The United Methodist Church in their papers; and Sarah Heaner Lancaster wrote a paper that directly addressed the United Methodist meaning of order and office.

The full group affirmed the theological understanding of deaconesses and home missionaries as summarized in Ms. Lancaster's paper, which asserts: Deaconesses and home missionaries are both an order and an office, but not in the same way that deacons and elders are both an order and an office. Although there is much overlap, there is also an important distinction. Deaconesses and home missionaries have an authorized position in the broad structure of the church to carry out ministry, and they exist in a covenant community to support the ministry of the office, but the place they occupy in the structure of the church is not within the ministerial order to which only deacons and elders belong. Laypeople may have their own proper authorization for ministry. Not all laypeople will have the call to be authorized in this way, just as not all are called to ordination, and not all of the ordained have the call to the episcopacy.

The deaconess and home missionary community works in the United States and globally. In the United States, appointments are as varied as the demographics of those in service and include a firefighter, community organizer, medical doctor, disaster relief coordinator, nonprofit administrators, public education teachers, social workers, homeless advocates, nurses, environmental engineer, local church outreach ministries, therapists/counselors, missionaries, general agency and annual conference staff. In The United Methodist Church in the Philippines Central Conference, deaconesses are appointed by the bishop to a local church/agency/program and serve in such ministries as: Christian education, children and youth group work, kindergarten education, music, women's ministries and curriculum writing, and ecumenical and justice ministries, among others.

Shared Conclusions

As a result of the study and the work of the consultation, the following was determined to be true:

- Ample precedent exists to designate United Methodist laypersons, specifically deaconesses and home missionaries, as members of an order as well as members of an office. To describe deaconesses and home missionaries as members of an order is not an ecclesiological innovation, rather it represents recognition of a long-standing reality.
- Deaconesses and home missionaries have exemplified the definition of "order" throughout their history. The Book of Discipline defines "order" in ¶ 306 as "a covenant community within the church to mutually support, care for, and hold accountable its members for the sake of the life and mission of the church."

- The language of “order” to describe the lifetime commitment of deaconesses and home missionaries in covenant with one another and Christ’s church is accurate and is helpful to describe the way it simultaneously stresses accountability to the church and connects to the rich heritage of orders of people called to mission at the margins throughout the history of the Christian movement.
- Deaconesses and home missionaries take seriously the importance of accountability in their life together in the church, even when those ecclesial structures inhibited rather than encouraged women’s ministry and deaconesses’ ministries in particular.

Legislation

In appreciation of the study process, revised legislation [petition #60245, page 977] is being presented for General Conference 2016.

The General Commission on United Methodist Men

What you really need to know about the GCUMM

We are a program agency of The UMC, located in Nashville in a building that we own. We have seven full-time employees and three part-time staff deployed in Indiana, Louisiana, and Florida. We raise 75 percent of our budget through local church charters and contributions from individuals. The ministry also receives 25 percent of its operating expenses from World Service. Most of our work is in the U.S., but we have made some significant impacts in central conferences in the last four years. The staff is guided by a diverse 20-member board of directors composed of jurisdictional leaders of United Methodist Men, representatives of three central conferences, bishops, and additional men and women with specific expertise in ministry with men and civic youth-serving agencies. UMM is the largest, most organized denominational men's ministry in the U.S.

The commission is responsible for two areas of ministry:

1. Men's Ministry: The agency provides resources, workshops, seminars, and conferences to help men develop an ongoing relationship with Jesus Christ. The scriptural basis for this ministry is from the Letter of James; "Be doers of the word, and not hearers only." Our programs are designed to help local churches develop sustained ministry to men in their pews and in their communities. Staff, volunteers, and affiliate organizations provide servant leadership training, resources for small groups, mission projects around the corner and around the world, prison ministries, advocacy for prayer ministry and hunger relief ministries, and partnerships to end domestic violence.
2. Scouting Ministry: Commission staff members and volunteers enable local churches to expand their ministries to young people by establishing youth-serving programs such as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Big Brothers Big Sisters, Camp Fire, and Programs of Religious Activities with Youth (PRAY). The scriptural basis for this ministry comes from Proverbs; "Train children in the way they should go; when they grow old, they won't depart from it." The agency recruits chaplains for national and international scouting events, provides training and resources for volunteers, and promotes scouting as a means to enrich the lives of church youth and a way to reach unchurched youth in their communities.

How have we changed in the last four years?

The commission dramatically increased its electronic presence. During the last four years, the agency moved to webinars and electronic meetings on a regular basis. It continues to have face-to-face meetings for some training and for annual board meetings, but most of the publications are electronic, including an e-version of the UM Men magazine.

Following each training session, whether it is face to face or an e-training event, staff and volunteers follow up to discover ways in which the participants' lives and practices have been transformed by the event. The website has been upgraded and is more tablet/phone friendly. Groups of United Methodist Men are engaged in weekly meetings based on the Wesleyan Class Meeting model. United Methodist Men continue to expand their partnerships with United Methodist Women and other entities in the effort to end domestic violence. The staff assisted the General Board of Global Ministries to recruit a dynamic leader who now works in Côte d'Ivoire to develop a national scouting program, run by Ivoirians. The board has reviewed 20 affiliate/endorsed organizations that assist in providing ministries to men and youth. Using the book Lead like Jesus, servant leadership training has impacted local churches and districts in the U.S. and in the Philippines. The agency had a significant spiritual and missional presence at the BSA National Jamboree.

What is ahead for Men's Ministry and Scouting Ministry in the next four years?

Although the agency is grateful for the funding that comes through the apportionment process, ministry needs have increased while the level of World Service support has not increased since the mid-1990s. The agency will continue to expand its revenue streams to meet the requests and needs of the local church. A director-level position has been open for over four years and must now be filled. The agency is able to respond to a fraction of the ministry requests received from outside the U.S.

Our partnerships are strong at the national level, but there is a critical need to strengthen partnerships across the entire connection. Staff and volunteers will continue efforts to expand prison ministries through DISCIPLE Bible Outreach Ministries and efforts to end domestic violence. Partnerships include organizations that are both inside and outside the structure of The United Methodist Church.

Noting the steep decline in the numbers of youth and millennials involved in churches, the commission will continue to support youth-serving agencies as a way of attracting young people. Amachi, a program of Big Brothers Big Sisters, invites people to become mentors of children of incarcerated parents. Participants in the program can tell you how mentoring an at-risk child can change that child's horizon.

Recent data support assertions the agency is helping local churches develop servant leaders who are establishing small groups to make disciples of Jesus Christ who make more disciples of Jesus Christ who change our world. However, there are thousands of churches that have unmet needs in these critical areas. The commission will use resources, smart technology, and intentional work to repair the connection.

While the number of chartered organizations has increased in some annual conferences, there are others that pay little attention to the critical need to enrich the lives of men and young people.

The commission has certified 40 men who now serve as men's ministry specialists, and the scouting ministry office has certified 300 scouting ministry specialists.

These volunteers are located in cities across the U.S. They are available to help your church expand its ministry to men and young people.

The commission will continue to support Strength for Service, a nondenominational corporation formed in 2015 to provide free copies of Strength for Service to God and Country to the military. The historic book of daily devotions has already been given to more than 500,000 members of the armed services. The corporation will also promote and distribute copies of Strength for Service to God and Community, a similar commission-developed book of daily devotions for police officers, firefighters, and other first responders.

The General Commission on United Methodist Men will continue efforts to make a difference in local congregations around the world. If your church or district is not getting help from this agency, it is only because you have not asked. Please let us help you with this exciting and vital ministry.

Summary Report of the JustPeace Center for Mediation and Conflict Transformation

Mission

The mission of The JUSTPEACE Center for Mediation and Conflict Transformation is “to engage conflict constructively in ways that strive for justice, reconciliation, resource preservation and restoration of community in and through The United Methodist Church and with the Church universal to the world in which we live” (§ 2401, Book of Discipline, 2012).

An Independent Entity

JUSTPEACE was overwhelmingly affirmed by the 2004 General Conference, a sign of the deep yearning among United Methodists for a better way to engage conflict. Originally established in the year 2000 by the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) in consultation with the Council of Bishops, it emerged in the midst of destructive conflict in The United Methodist Church. JUSTPEACE has an independent board of directors and its work is done in partnership with the whole of The United Methodist Church. Its offices are located in Washington, D.C. in the USA.

Vision and Ministries

The work is informed by the vision of fostering a culture of JUSTPEACE. When a culture of JUSTPEACE is embraced and communities or persons are connected with effective contextual resources they will be better prepared to engage conflict well, to break cycles of injury/retribution/violence, and to flourish in community life—important aspects of living as disciples of Jesus Christ and the transformation of the world.

Educating Leaders in Conflict Transformation (Educating leaders, training persons to be a mediating presence in various settings to help engage conflict well and prevent conflict from becoming destructive.)

JUSTPEACE reimagined and revised its core educational resources in the 2013 training event “JustPeace 101: Faith Based Conflict Transformation,” followed by a webinar series. Rooted in biblical and theological principles of JustPeace, the training focused on the following approaches: Conflict Transformation, Trauma Healing, Restorative Justice, Peacebuilding, Appreciative Inquiry, and Emotional Systems Theory.

JUSTPEACE continues to engage United Methodist leaders and students throughout the Church in theology, theory, and practice. It has provided leadership through consultation, teaching, lectures, sermons, Bible studies, workshops, and reflections in a variety of settings including, but not limited to, cabinets, pastors’ schools, annual conference sessions, gatherings (e.g., lay leaders, United Methodist Women, United Methodist Men, young clergy), seminary and law school classes, student interfaith dialogue groups, intentional interim ministry networks, scholar networks, undergraduate and graduate intern programs, chaplains, and other faith leaders.

Nurturing and Connecting Practitioners to Intervene and to Equip Others (Expanding the human resources available to the Church, helping to set up conflict transformation teams in annual conferences, and assisting volunteers and practitioners in resourcing one another.) JUSTPEACE cultivates and sustains a network of people throughout the United Methodist connection who are involved in conflict transformation as facilitators, mediators, and consultants.

Cultivating Sustainable Resource Networks in Conflict and Cultural Competency is a JUSTPEACE initiative supported in part by a CORR Action Fund grant administered by the General Commission on Religion and Race (GCRORR). Working with conference/area leadership, JUSTPEACE is helping establish networks of faith-based leaders and resources with expertise and experience in conflict transformation and intercultural competency. Currently we are working with three areas in the USA and one conference in Africa with the expectation that more will follow. Beyond basic asset identification, the networks are intended to be dynamic and sustainable—to involve peer-learning experiences, resource development, and effective collaborative ministries in each conference or area.

Intervening in Conflicts (Resolving complaints and other costly disputes through mediated or facilitated conversations or other methods of alternative dispute resolution.) JUSTPEACE has been involved in facilitating matters related to church conflicts, conference conflicts, Disciplinary complaints, and organizational conflicts. Some matters involve direct intervention and others involve consultation. We continue to train others in facilitation processes and refer matters to effective practitioners across the denomination. These ministries have helped ruptured communities find paths toward health and wholeness and have contributed to the restoration and healing of individuals. Through this work, JUSTPEACE continues to help preserve human and other resources for vital mission and ministries of the church.

Resource Development (Bringing together theory, practice, and theology.) Key print resources continue to be utilized: The Journey: Forgiveness, Restorative Justice and Reconciliation by Stephanie Hixon and Thomas Porter, The Spirit and Art of Conflict Transformation by Thomas Porter, and Transforming Historical Harms by David Anderson Hooker and Amy Potter Czjakowski.

Soul Care Initiative—Growing out of the deepening attention to trauma healing, JUSTPEACE launched a program to train faith-based leaders and congregations in caring for the spiritual resiliency of military veterans and their families. A key resource in this initiative is the “Soul Care Congregational Tool Kit” (www.soulcareinitiative.org/soul-care-toolkit/). Although the focus of this endeavor begins with military personnel and families in the USA, the resources will be expanded to include warriors in multiple contexts.

JUSTPEACE continues to develop web and digital media resources available through its website, www.justpeaceumc.org, and social media. Continuing to clarify the theology, theory, and practice of JUSTPEACE, a ministry of reconciliation that restores the centrality of this calling to the ministry of the church, is an important aspect of resource development.

Report of the JustPeace Center for Mediation and Conflict Transformation

Mission

The mission of The JUSTPEACE Center for Mediation and Conflict Transformation is “to engage conflict constructively in ways that strive for justice, reconciliation, resource preservation and restoration of community in and through The United Methodist Church and with the Church universal to the world in which we live” (§ 2401, Book of Discipline, 2012).

Background and Origins

Originally created by the General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) in consultation with the Council of Bishops in 2000, JUSTPEACE came into being in the midst of destructive conflict in The United Methodist Church marked by lawsuits, church trials, wounded people, ruptures of communion, financial costs, resource depletion, and loss of focus on ministry and mission at all levels of the Church. The General Council on Finance and Administration (GCFA) provided the vision and means for the initial funding of JUSTPEACE from a portion of investment income from the repayment of Pacific Homes monies.

JUSTPEACE was overwhelmingly affirmed by the 2004 General Conference, a sign of the deep yearning among United Methodists for a better way to engage conflict. JUSTPEACE is responsible for its own sustainability and funding and is grateful to those persons, entities, and foundations that have invested generously in the ministry during the past years. The board of directors of JUSTPEACE acknowledges the supportive relationships with GCFA, providing financial services, and with the General Board of Church and Society (GBCS), contributing building services. The offices of JUSTPEACE are located in Washington, D.C. in the USA.

An Independent Entity

JUSTPEACE has an independent board of directors aimed at positioning JUSTPEACE as an impartial entity in the life of the Church. Its work is done in partnership with the whole of The United Methodist Church including annual conferences, agencies, and leaders. Representatives from general ministries, the Council of Bishops, as well as individuals with expertise from conferences and partner organizations are included in the corporate governance of JUSTPEACE. It has an advisory board of expert practitioners.

Vision and Ministries

Much of the early work of JUSTPEACE focused on education, development of resources, interventions, and building a network of conflict transformation leaders throughout the connection. Our work continues in these four primary areas and is informed by the vision of fostering a culture of JUSTPEACE. When a culture of JUSTPEACE is deeply rooted in congregations and organizations and persons are connected with effective resources for their context, they will be better prepared to engage conflict well, to break cycles of injury, retribution, and violence, and to flourish in community life—important aspects of living as disciples of Jesus Christ and the transformation of the world.

Educating Leaders in Conflict Transformation (Educating leaders, training persons to be a mediating presence in various settings to help engage conflict well and prevent conflict from becoming destructive.)

Experience with faith leaders in addition to key survey findings related to conference conflict transformation ministries surfaced the need for greater depth and breadth in resources that include nuanced and contextual tools related to healthy communities, assessing conflicted situations, and the impact of mental health, addictions, violence, and trauma. JUSTPEACE reimaged and revised its core educational resources in the 2013 training event “JustPeace 101: Faith Based Conflict Transformation,” followed by a webinar series. Rooted in biblical and theological principles of JustPeace, these practices and approaches were included in the training:

- Conflict Transformation—Processes by which conflicts are engaged as opportunities for constructive change and transformation;
- Restorative Justice—An alternative way of engagement that seeks to heal hurt and repair harm while transforming and restoring individual, group, and community relationships;
- Peacebuilding—Practices and processes that are designed to prevent the start of violent conflict by creating a sustainable peace rooted in just relationships;

- Trauma Healing—A holistic approach that seeks to transform the mind, body, soul, and spirit of individuals, groups, and society impacted by the wounds of trauma and/or violence;
- Appreciative Inquiry—A collaborative, strength-based approach to both personal and organizational development that focuses on strengths rather than problems;
- Emotional Systems Theory—A way of seeing congregations and communities as nonlinear, organic, and dynamic, where everything exists in relationship.

The webinar themes included Homiletical Hot Potatoes: Preaching on Difficult Topics; Narrative, Trauma Transformation and Faith Communities; Appreciative Inquiry and Faith Communities and Emotional Systems, Conflict Transformation and Faith Communities.

Webinars, contextual events and specific content-based educational events have replaced the traditional “Annual Gatherings” enjoyed by numerous United Methodists prior to 2012.

United Methodist Leaders and Students: JUSTPEACE continues to engage United Methodist leaders and students in the theology, theory, and practice related to these approaches or lenses. JUSTPEACE has provided leadership through consultation, teaching, lectures, sermons, Bible studies, workshops, and reflections in a variety of settings including, but not limited to, cabinets, lay leader gatherings, pastors’ schools, annual conference sessions, United Methodist Women gatherings, United Methodist Men gatherings, student interfaith dialogue groups, seminary classes, law school classes, young clergy gatherings (e.g., RevItUp, Oasis), intentional interim ministry networks, scholar networks, undergraduate and graduate intern programs, chaplains, and other faith leaders throughout the connection.

Nurturing and Connecting Practitioners to Intervene and to Equip Others (Expanding the human resources available to the Church, helping to set up conflict transformation teams in annual conferences, and assisting volunteers and practitioners in resourcing one another.)

Network of Practitioners: From its beginnings JUSTPEACE has developed a network of people throughout the United Methodist connection who are involved in conflict transformation as facilitators, mediators, and consultants. We will continue to cultivate and sustain circles of professional mediators, consultants, and attorneys as well as those who are volunteers and practitioners working in conflict transformation ministries within annual conferences.

Cultivating Sustainable Resource Networks in Conflict and Cultural Competency is a JUSTPEACE initiative supported in part by a CORR Action Fund grant administered by the General Commission on Religion and Race (GCORR). Working with conference/area leadership, JUSTPEACE is helping establish networks of faith-based leaders and resources with expertise and experience in conflict transformation and intercultural competency. Currently we are working with three areas in the USA and one conference in Africa with the expectation that more will follow. Beyond basic asset identification, the networks are intended to be dynamic and sustainable—to involve peer-learning experiences, resource development, and effective collaborative ministries in each conference or area.

As The United Methodist Church engages in making disciples of Jesus Christ to transform the world, the connection of people called United Methodists is also being transformed. While many communities of faith, particularly in the USA, are aging and often segregated by race, ethnicity, and culture, the call to discipleship engages an increasingly young and diverse world. Experiencing conflict along with change within many faith communities is inevitable. Seeking to be relevant, vital, and adaptive to this current reality in various contexts, the vision of this type of network weaving® and cultivation is that networks of faithful leaders marked by cultural and conflict competency become no more than a personal contact or two away (in person, by phone, via social media).

Intervening in Conflicts (Resolving complaints and other costly disputes through mediated or facilitated conversations or other methods of alternative dispute resolution.)

JUSTPEACE has been involved in facilitating matters related to church conflicts, conference conflicts, and organizational conflicts, as well as Disciplinary complaints across the connection. Some matters involve direct intervention and others involve consultation. We continue to train others in facilitation processes and refer matters to effective practitioners across the denomination.

These ministries have helped ruptured communities find paths toward health and wholeness and have contributed to the restoration and healing of individuals. Through this work, JUSTPEACE continues to help preserve human and other resources for vital mission and ministries of the church.

Related to Disciplinary complaint procedures, JUSTPEACE has contributed to the Administrative and Judicial Procedures Handbook (see www.gcfa.org). Just Resolution and Restorative Justice Principles in the Complaint Procedure of The United Methodist Church offers guidance regarding Disciplinary complaints.

Resource Development (Bringing together theory, practice, and theology.)

Continuing to clarify the theology, theory, and practice of JUSTPEACE, a ministry of reconciliation that restores the centrality of this calling to the ministry of the church, is an important aspect of resource development.

Soul Care Initiative: Growing out of the deepening attention to trauma healing, JUSTPEACE launched a program to train faith-based leaders and congregations in caring for the spiritual resiliency of military veterans and their families. A key resource in this initiative is the “Soul Care Congregational Resource” (www.soulcareinitiative.org/soul-care-toolkit/). Although the focus of this endeavor begins with military personnel and families in the USA, the resources will be expanded to include warriors in multiple contexts.

In addition to the core resources listed below, JUSTPEACE continues to develop web and digital media resources available through its website, www.justpeaceumc.org, and via social media. We have an open source policy and much of our work continues to be improved by the wisdom of our sisters and brothers in the Church.

Core resources of JUSTPEACE:

Engage Conflict Well: Laminated cards are carried in the pockets of many United Methodists and an expanded guide Engage Conflict Well explores the themes more fully.

The Spirit and Art of Conflict Transformation: Creating a Culture of JustPeace by Thomas W. Porter, Jr. (Nashville: The Upper Room, 2010).

The Journey: Forgiveness, Restorative Justice and Reconciliation by Stephanie Hixon and Thomas Porter (New York: Women’s Division, GBGM, 2011) is a small-group spiritual growth/Bible study.

Transforming Historical Harms by David Anderson Hooker and Amy Potter Czjakowski (Copyright Eastern Mennonite University) is a manual with a framework for addressing historical harms generally as well as those with roots in the US practice of slavery.

Conflict and Communion: Reconciliation and Restorative Justice at Christ’s Table edited by Thomas Porter. (Nashville: The Upper Room, 2006)

Future

In a world where conflict, strife, harm, and deep divisions are the landscape in which many of us reside, there seems to be a yearning for a way to engage well and focus on that which can be life-giving—as so much that we experience can be life-depleting. At the heart of our call as JUSTPEACE is reclaiming the ministry of reconciliation as central to our Christian discipleship and critical to thriving ministries.

Proposed Amendments to the Book of Discipline

¶600.

Petition Number: 60659-IC-¶600-C-G; Napier, Carol - Atlanta, GA, USA.

Gender Justice

Add new paragraph between current ¶¶ 5 and 6:

As the Holy Scripture reveals, both men and women are made in the image of God and, therefore, men and women are of equal value in the eyes of God. The United Methodist Church recognizes it is contrary to Scripture and to logic to say that God is male or female, as maleness and femaleness are characteristics of human bodies and cultures, not characteristics of the divine. The United Methodist Church acknowledges the long history of discrimination against women and girls. The United Methodist Church shall confront and seek to eliminate discrimination against women and girls, whether in organizations or in individuals, in every facet of its life and in society at large. The United Methodist Church shall work collaboratively with others to address concerns that threaten the cause of women and girl's equality, which is God-given, in individuals and in all aspects of society, at all times and in all places.

Rationale:

The Constitution contains a paragraph on racial justice but not one on gender justice. As Nobel Peace Prize winner Jimmy Carter states in his recent book A Call to Action, "I have become convinced that the most serious and unaddressed worldwide challenge is the deprivation and abuse of women and . . .

Lay Order

Add new paragraph after ¶ 1314 as follows:

Deaconess and Home Missioner Order—Individuals consecrated and commissioned to the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner in The United Methodist Church form a covenant community as laity in service as an order. Like other orders in the church, they respond to a calling from God. In their distinct tradition, they commit to a lifetime vocation in full-time ministries of love, justice and service. In covenant with one another, they nurture and care for each other in their individual ministry calls and in community. They share a common study and are prepared based upon their unique gifts.

Rationale:

Office of D/HM Lay Order Report to General Conference concludes that UM doctrine and polity support formation of lay orders and that D/HM function as an order. A key aspect of the definition of order (2012 Discipline ¶ 306) is covenant community which has characterized this community throughout its history.

Ecclesiastical Support

Add new ¶ after the existing ¶ 1317

Ecclesiastical Support

Ecclesiastical support is an affirmation provided by The United Methodist Church to employers and professional certification organizations that a deaconess/home missioner is in good standing and has the appropriate professional training and equipping for ministry in specialized settings. Ecclesiastical support acknowledges a covenant of mutual commitment, accountability and support between The United Methodist Church, through United Methodist Women, and the deaconess/home missioner. Deaconesses and home missioners who are called to and professionally trained for chaplain or counselling ministry are eligible for ecclesiastical support for service in ministries not requiring them to administer the sacraments. The ecclesiastical support approval policies, guidelines, and process for those commissioned/consecrated deaconesses and home missioners are administered by the administrative office for the Office of Deaconess and Home Missioner with United Methodist Women.

Rationale:

This petition was crafted to create a path allowing for consecrated/commissioned deaconesses and home missioners serving the church in chaplaincy or counseling ministries to receive ecclesiastical support as required for professional certification.

Responsibilities of UMW

Add a new #1 to ¶ 1320 and renumber the succeeding paragraphs.

1. Encourage United Methodist Women in efforts to bring the good news of Jesus Christ to their local communities.

Rationale:

It would strengthen the image of United Methodist Women if this could be stated forthrightly.

Relationship to GBGM

Amend ¶ 1327:

¶ 1327. Relationship to the General Board of Global Ministries—The board of directors of United Methodist Women shall elect ~~five~~ three members to serve as directors of the General Board of Global Ministries with voice and without vote. The elected United Methodist Women directors shall serve on the program committees ~~It shall also elect members to units and committees of the General Board of Global Ministries as defined in the General Board of Global Ministries' bylaws, including at least one member to serve on its executive committee.~~

Rationale:

Given the size of the United Methodist Women board and its mutual shared programmatic relationships with General Board of Global Ministries, the decrease in the number of directors from five to three and representation on program rather than governance or fiduciary committees is deemed appropriate.

Uniting Church Women and a representative of its North America Region shall be ex officio members, with voice and ~~not~~ without vote. The national president . . .

Rationale:

The number of representatives serving on both the United Methodist Women's Program Advisory Group and General Board of Global Ministries' board should be consistent.

Create a new ¶ 805.4. subsection as follows:

¶ 805.4.f) Committee on Archives and History—There shall be a Committee on Archives and History that shall serve as the official historical agency of The United Methodist Church. It may be separately incorporated, as determined by the council, and it shall be the successor in effect and in law of the General Commission on Archives and History of The United Methodist Church. In so far as practical, changes required by the discontinuation of the General Commission on Archives and History (GCAH) and the creation of the Committee on Archives and History in this section shall be accomplished no later than June 30, 2017, under the guidance of the Connectional Table and the General Council on Finance and Administration. It shall gather, preserve, and hold title to library and archival materials, and it shall disseminate interpretive materials on the history of The United Methodist Church and its antecedents. It shall cooperate with other bodies, especially the Historical Society of The United Methodist Church, the World Methodist Historical Society, and the World Methodist Council in areas of mutual concern. (2) Membership—(a) The committee shall be constituted quadrennially, and its members and all officers elected by it shall hold office until their successors have been chosen. Interim vacancies during a quadrennium where not otherwise provided by the Discipline may be filled by the council as it may determine.

(b) The committee shall be composed of ten members chosen by the council, five of whom shall be members of the council. It is recommended that careful consideration be given to selecting the other five members to be persons with special interests and skills in the history of United Methodism.

(3) Meetings—The committee shall meet annually at such time and place as it may determine, subject to the provisions of the act of incorporation, if the committee chooses to be incorporated.

(4) Officers—The committee shall elect from its membership a chairperson and such other officers as may be needed.

(5) Staff—The council shall choose a general director of the committee, who shall be an associate general secretary of the General Council on Finance and Administration, and such other staff personnel as may be needed. The general director shall be the executive and administrative officer and shall carry on the work of the committee, keep the records and minutes, serve as editor of official publications of the committee, supervise the depositories, make an annual report to the council, and furnish such reports as are required. The general director shall attend meetings of the committee and shall have the privilege of the floor without vote. Archivists, curators, and librarians

(b) Membership in the Historical Society shall be established as the society may determine. Membership shall entail the payment of such dues as the society may direct, in return for which members shall receive publications and other benefits as are deemed suitable.

(8) (a) Archival Definitions—i) Archives, as distinguished from libraries, house not primarily books, but documentary record material.

ii) Documentary record material shall mean all documents, minutes, journals, diaries, reports, pamphlets, letters, papers, manuscripts, maps, photographs, books, audiovisuals, sound recordings, magnetic or other tapes, electronic data processing records, artifacts, or any other documentary material, regardless of physical form or characteristics, made or received pursuant to any provisions of the Discipline in connection with the transaction of Church business by any general agency of The United Methodist Church or of any of its constituent predecessors.

No records shall be destroyed until a disposal schedule has been agreed upon by the committee and the agency. When the custodian of any official documentary record material of a general agency certifies to the committee that such records have no further use or value for official and administrative purposes and when the committee certifies that such records appear to have no further use or value for research or reference, then such records may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of by the agency or official having custody of them. A record of such certification and authorization shall be entered in the minutes or records of both the committee and the agency. The committee is hereby authorized and empowered to make such provisions as may be necessary and proper to carry this paragraph into effect.

iii) The committee shall have the right to examine the condition of documentary record material and shall, subject to the availability of staff and funds, give advice and assistance to Church officials and agencies in regard to preserving and disposing of documentary record material in their custody. Officials of general agencies shall assist the committee in the preparation of an inventory of records in their custody. To this inventory shall be attached a schedule, approved by the head of the agency having custody of the records and the committee, establishing a time period for the retention and disposal of each series of records. So long as such approved schedule remains in effect, destruction or disposal of documentary record material in accordance with its provisions shall be deemed to have met the requirements of ¶ 805.4.f)(8)(c)(ii).

iv) The committee is authorized and directed to conduct a program of inventorying, repairing, and microfilming among all general agencies of The United Methodist Church for security purposes that documentary record material which the committee determines has permanent value and to provide safe storage for microfilm copies of such material. Subject to the availability of funds, such program may be extended to material of permanent value of all agencies of The United Methodist Church.

v) The general boards, committees, and agencies of The United Methodist Church shall place two copies, as they are issued, of all their publications, of whatever kind, in the archives or in lieu thereof shall file a statement with the archivist affirming that they are preserving copies of all such items in their own libraries or depositories.

vii) Whoever has the custody of any general agency records shall, at the expiration of the term of office, deliver to the successor, custodian, or, if there be none, to the Committee all records, books, writings, letters, and documents kept or received in the transaction of official general agency business. This will also apply to the papers of temporary and special general Church committees.

viii) The bishops, General Conference officers, and the general boards, committees, and agencies of The United Methodist Church are urged to counsel with the central archivist concerning the preservation of all materials.

ix) Jurisdictional, central, and annual conference secretaries shall deposit, without charge, two paper copies of their respective conference journals quadrennially or annually, as the case may be, with the Committee and in the archives of the central, jurisdictional, and annual conference as appropriate. One copy of a digital version of the journal will be sent to the committee.

x) Secretaries of jurisdictional and annual conference boards, committees, and agencies shall deposit annually, or as often as they meet, copies of their minutes (as distinguished from reports that are printed separately or in the jurisdictional and annual conference journals) in the central archives or in the appropriate regional archives.

xiii) The committee may authorize the transfer of materials to an organization, agency, or family.

xiv) All materials in the archives shall be available for research and exhibition, subject to such restrictions as may be placed on them.

(9) Historic Sites and Heritage Landmarks—(a) i) Historic Sites—Historic sites are buildings, locations, or structures that are specifically related to a significant event, development, or personality in the history of an annual, central, or jurisdictional conference (or its antecedents). Historic sites are designated by formal action of the annual, central, or jurisdictional conference within whose regions the site is located. Such designation shall first be considered and reviewed by the respective committee on archives and history (or equivalent). After action by the annual, central, or jurisdictional conference to designate a building, structure, or location as a historic site, the president or chairperson of the committee on archives and history (or equivalent) shall advise the committee of the action taken and provide such documentation as may be required. The committee in turn shall provide an official historic site marker, keep a register of all historic sites, and maintain an ongoing file of pertinent information concerning them.

ii) Heritage Landmarks—Heritage landmarks of The United Methodist Church are buildings, locations, or structures that are specifically related to significant events, developments, or personalities in the overall history of The United Methodist Church or its antecedents. They must have distinctive historic interest and value for the denomination as a whole, as contrasted with local or regional historic significance. Ordinarily, buildings, locations, or structures that have achieved historic significance within the preceding fifty years shall not be considered for designation as a heritage landmark.

iii) Designation of Heritage Landmarks—All nominations for the designation of buildings, locations, and structures as United Methodist heritage landmarks shall be made by the annual, central, or jurisdictional conference committee on archives and history (or equivalent) within whose regions they are located. Such nominations shall be referred for consideration to the committee, in accord with guidelines established by the committee. Through its Committee on Heritage Landmarks, the committee shall consider the merits of each nomination and shall make such recommendation as it deems appropriate to the ensuing General Conference for its action and determination.

The committee shall recommend only a building, location, or structure for designation as a heritage landmark that has been registered as a historic site by an annual, central, or jurisdictional conference and has met the requirements established by the committee. The committee shall keep a register of all duly designated heritage landmarks and maintain an ongoing file of pertinent information concerning them.

iv) Quadrennial Review—The committee shall be responsible for making a quadrennial review of the existing duly designated heritage landmarks, according to the criteria that it shall prepare and which shall be compatible with the Book of Discipline. The committee shall further be responsible for recommending to the General Conference the redesignation or reclassification of the designated heritage landmarks as such action may be appropriate in keeping with such criteria.

(b) Present Heritage Landmarks—The present heritage landmarks of The United Methodist Church (and the year of their designation by General Conference) are: Acuff’s Chapel, between Blountville and Kingsport, TN (1968); Albright Memorial Chapel, Kleinfeltersville, PA (1968); Asbury Manual Labor School and Mission, Ft. This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council’s statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

Rationale:

These changes make it clear that the responsibility for establishing record retention and document destruction policies lies with general agencies (as required by ¶ 702.2) and avoid unnecessary legal risks that can result from the unnecessary retention of certain documents in multiple locations.

Funds budgeted in the 2017 to 2020 quadrennium to carry out the operations and programs of GCORR and GCOSROW shall follow the functions.

¶ 910. The United Methodist Committee on Inclusiveness shall have staff as determined by the Connectional Table and shall be located in offices as directed by the Connectional Table.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

4. Other paragraphs of the Discipline notwithstanding, the members of the board shall elect six additional members based on the expertise needed to accomplish the fiduciary, generative, and strategic work of the board. ~~It is recommended that of the additional members, at least one member, shall be elected from the following racial and ethnic groups (Asian, Black, Hispanic/Latino(a), Native American, Pacific Islander, and White). Petition Number: 60162-IC-¶2104.1-G; Hare, Dawn Wiggins - Chicago, IL, USA for General Commission on the Status and Role of Women.

Membership

Amend ¶ 2104.1 b, c, h

¶ 2104.1 b) Amend first sentence: There shall be ~~seven~~ nine additional members elected by the general commission, in accord with the provisions of ¶ 705.3a.

Likewise, United Methodist Women may name one or two such liaison representatives who may serve for a full quadrennium. When invited to present at board meetings, they liaison representatives shall have voice but not vote.

Rationale:

This modifies United Methodist Women representation on the board of the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women so to avoid potential conflicts of interest (conforming to ¶ 710.5 and the Code of Ethics for general agencies), while still maintaining the historic working relationship between GCSRW and UMW.

Create General Commission on Elimination of Violence

Amend Chapter Five, Administrative Order by insertion of a new section XVIII, and ¶ 2402:

Section XVIII, ¶ 2402 – General Commission on Elimination of Violence

The United Methodist Church shall develop, establish and implement a General Commission on Elimination of Violence, in collaboration and consultation from the appropriate boards, agencies, and local churches, which include, but is not limited to the: General Board of Church and Society; General Board of Discipleship; General Board of Global Ministries; General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; General Commission of Religion and Race; General Commission on Status and Role of Women; United Methodist Communications; and The Connectional Table. This commission shall be established as a Missional Priority.

The Mission of this Commission shall be:

• To implement, execute, and monitor the foregoing established recommendations from the listed violence-related resolutions, and all other resolutions and statements of The United Methodist Church related to violence;

• to develop resources, curriculum, and advocacy strategies that will seek to provide creative avenues to address the elimination of conflict and violence in all of our communities;

• to call upon the Church to affirm its faith through vigorous efforts to curb and eliminate all forms of violence;

• to urge and support the denomination to use legislative and non-legislative means at federal and state levels to reduce violence in our society, especially among the young, and to teach our young people conflict-resolution strategies as an alternative to violence;

• to illuminate causes of injustice and inter-group tension, engage in advocacy for peace and justice, provide training for conflict resolution, and become instruments of peace;

• to seek and assess root causes of domestic strife, interpersonal violence and abuse, civil conflict, ethnic and racial clashes—all of which prevent us from achieving God’s shalom;

• to call upon boards and agencies to incorporate violence-eliminating initiatives into their regular programs and budgets;

• to develop, publish, and distribute Christian education material on the biblical basis of violence and restorative justice, and ways in which children, youth, and adults can be peacemakers and seekers of justice; and to publish devotional material for peacemakers, and those who are both victims of and responders to violence;

• to serve as public policy advocate for actions that promote peace and oppose war, to provide resources on peacemaking and violence support to annual conferences and local congregations, and to facilitate training for non-violence that applies Jesus’ teaching in the Sermon on the Mount;

• to work with United Methodist seminaries and Africa University for encouragement of research, teaching, and publications on the theology of peace and methods of peacemaking and peace building with justice.

• to teach the theology of peace to students, clergy, and laity and provide training for peacemaking and responses to violent activity;

The United Methodist Church shall establish a committed, passionate, proactive, and accountable commission to target the elimination of violence in our communities.

Membership on the commission shall include representatives from the following groups without budget support requirements: the Connectional Table; Communities of Shalom; Restorative Justice Ministries Committees; United Methodist Men; United Methodist Women; the Council of Bishops; Representative member(s) from each of the racial ethnic caucuses as elected by the Connectional Table upon nomination from: Black Methodists for Church Renewal; Methodists Associated to Represent Hispanic Americans; Native American International Caucus; National Federation of Asian American United Methodists; Pacific Islanders National Caucus United Methodists.

APPENDIX

Anticipated Financials for a Commission on Elimination of Violence

The anticipated financials (i.e., a proposed budget) for the establishment of the Commission on Elimination of Violence will require a .025 percent resource funding amount from the World Service budget for each of the general boards and program agencies in the matrix below. This budget is predicated on the presumption that the resolutions cited in this Petition (#3421, #3422, #3423, #3424, #3425, #3426) provided the initial authority for each of these boards and agencies to provide resources and to accomplish the tasks of each resolution.

5. The General Commission on the Status and Role of Women continue to monitor and assess the Church's progress in eradicating sexual harassment and will seek ways to report its findings to the Church report to the 2012 General Conference on the specific areas to be strengthened within the life of the Church including policy development, prevention, education, and training;

African American Methodist Heritage Center

Delete current resolution 3062 and replace with the following:

3062. THE AFRICAN AMERICAN METHODIST HERITAGE CENTER (AAMHC)

The history, heritage and hopes of United Methodists of African American descent are inextricably intertwined with the history, heritage, and hopes of John Wesley's Methodism since its beginnings in North America. Yet, the whole church has been slow to celebrate that linkage, perhaps due to a lack of knowledge and understanding of the story of trials and triumphs.

It is not widely known that:

- In 1760 the first person of African heritage to be converted to Methodism was Peter Denis;

- In 1765 when Robert Strawbridge preached in Baltimore one of the speakers was a man of African heritage, Caleb Hyland, who later became a member of Sharp Street Methodist Church, one of Methodism's oldest African American Churches;

- The first Methodist class meeting in New York City included a Black woman named Betty, a servant of Barbara Heck;

- John Wesley himself chided a group at Fells Point in Baltimore for failing to include a group of Black persons as full participants; and

- Black Harry Hosier was a great preacher and colleague of Francis Asbury and, along with Richard Allen, was among the attendees at the Christmas Conference of 1784 when the Methodist Church in North America was organized.

The full and rich history of African Americans in Methodism is still unfolding. It is the vision of the African American Methodist Heritage Center to facilitate the revelation of that history so that it informs the present and builds hope for the future. Through the Heritage Center, African American United Methodists are seeking to recover and preserve the stories and the artifacts of the celebrations and the calamities, the accomplishments and the adversities, the connection and separation, and the whole gamut of experiences encountered over the nearly three hundred years of the church's journey in America. Methodism, as well as the American society in general, struggled with the sin of racism and segregation. African American Methodists as well as non-African American Methodists dared to be proactive in the long pursuit of justice and equality and full personhood under God.

Failure to remember the full story of the depths from which the journey started will doom those who fail to remember to the fate of not recognizing that history oft repeats itself. Even in the twenty-first century vestiges of racial bigotry overshadow the claims of some persons that racism is in the past and is not impacting the dream that we can be "one people under God".

The American Poet, Langston Hughes raised the question in his poem "Harlem," ". . . What happens to a dream deferred? Does it dry up like a raisin in the sun? . . . or does it just explode?" The question is very relevant to the ministry of the African American Methodist Heritage Center should there not be adequate support from the total denomination to implement the dream and to maintain the Heritage Center.

We know that God "Makes a way out of no way," and reality out of dreams. An African American Methodist Heritage Center that is affirmed, supported, and sustained by ALL of United Methodism, is a living testimony to how those who were victimized and those who caused their victimization have been able, with God's help, to make of trials and tribulations, everlasting triumph! The Heritage Center is telling the story of the rocky road Methodism has travelled, and it also is an expression of how a people who believed and trusted when there was no reason to believe and trust sustained themselves and made visible the “Amazing Grace” of God.

As people with a memory and as people of hope, the General Conference of The United Methodist Church affirms the need to remember the past and to live through the present into a future that is richer and stronger because of our journey together. Therefore:

WHEREAS, Black Methodists for Church Renewal (BMCR) and other interested United Methodists had the vision that there be an African American Methodist Heritage Center to recover, preserve, and share the rich history and invaluable contributions of African Americans in The United Methodist Church and its predecessor denominations; and

WHEREAS, the initiative was taken to create a Board of Trustees that established the African American Methodist Heritage Center, which is properly organized and incorporated as a not-for-profit organization under the law of the state of New Jersey and approved as a 501(c)(3) tax exempt organization by the Internal Revenue Service; and

WHEREAS, the 2004 General Conference of The United Methodist Church approved a resolution, “African American Methodist Heritage Center” [#71, The Book of Resolutions, 2004], that affirmed the concept of the Heritage Center and authorized the Board of Trustees to pursue funding through the United Methodist Development Fund (now The United Methodist Development Center); and

WHEREAS, the General Commission on Archives and History has partnered with the board of trustees in the development and ministry of the African American Methodist Heritage Center by officially accepting the Heritage Center to be housed in the Archives Building where the collection is protected by proper scientifically controlled systems for the preservation, cataloguing and maintenance by staff to enable research into the story of African Americans in Methodism; and

WHEREAS, the Heritage Center has implemented many aspects of its Strategic Plan for Ministry, that include providing workshops and some resources; and

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church in its entirety, desires more effective fulfillment of the ministry of the Heritage Center; and

WHEREAS, the fund-raising efforts to date have yielded limited resources for adequately addressing the resource and information needs expressed by the constituency;

Therefore, be it resolved, that permission is continued for fund raising by the African American Methodist Heritage Center and for the continued development of an endowment through The United Methodist Church Foundation; and

Be it further resolved, that the General Conference recognize that Discipleship Ministries, Higher Education and Ministry, Global Ministries, the General Commission on Archives and History, and the General Commission on Religion and Race have cooperated in the undergirding of the ministry of the Heritage Center and encourage all of the general agencies to determine ways and means whereby they too, can support this ministry; and

Be it further resolved, that the Heritage Center will be intentional in reaching out to the Pan-Methodist Commission membership to encourage the identification, preservation and sharing of artifacts and memorabilia of our common Methodist heritage that will benefit the seven individual denominations, and Methodism as a whole, in telling the full story of Methodism in regard to the African American experience (The African Methodist Episcopal Church, The African American Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, The Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, The Union American Methodist Episcopal Church, The American Union Methodist Protestant Church, The Free Methodist Church).

Be it further resolved, that all United Methodists work, study, support and pray for the recovery, preservation and sharing of the unique story of African Americans in Methodism, recognizing that to do so is embracing and remembering the WHOLE story of Methodism.

Functions of AC COSROW

Add new resolution

Functions of an Annual Conference COSROW or Related Committee

Focusing on a general call to make disciples of all people, annual conferences fulfill the responsibilities of the Book of Discipline ¶ 644 through various creative structures and forms of institutional support. When it comes to advocating for the full participation of women in the total life of the Church, some annual conferences maintain an independent Conference Commission on the Status and Role of Women, while others include this work within other structures established to address interrelated concerns. Such an adaptive and flexible model provides an opportunity for identifying how each annual conference will participate in the work of ensuring that disciple making at all levels of the Church is gender sensitive and inclusive, encouraging cooperation between all people with respect for the unique gifts of each person.

Conferences with active and effective existing ministries should continue these programs and regularly relate to the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women around their work and the status of women in the annual conference. The below recommended actions are not intended to replace already existing programs or effective ministries but to guide in planning regardless of the particular conference structure.

(1) Host annual gatherings for the support of women and education about pertinent issues including but not limited to work-life balance, domestic violence, pay equity, leadership development, cooperative leadership, maternity and paternity leave, education, and other relevant topics.

(2) Discuss and encourage attention to issues of sexual ethics. Find out if the annual conference has policies and procedures in place to address instances of sexual misconduct, including practices to care for victims and affected communities (e.g., through the use of response teams). Using the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women and umsexualethics.org <<http://umsexualethics.org>> as resources, sponsor education and training events and work to establish and strengthen policies aimed at fair process, healing and reconciliation.

(3) Arrange meetings with conference leadership. e.g., conference lay leader, board of laity, committee on nominations, board of ordained ministry, cabinet, and bishop. The purpose of these meetings may include recommending any strategies, programs, or resources for the continued effort to improve the full participation of women in the life of the church with awareness of the unique gifts and struggles brought on by race, ethnicity, age, ability, and status.

(4) Send at least two participants to leadership development events sponsored by the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women including Do No Harm sexual ethics summit. Annual conferences are advised to provide as much support as possible to assist with travel costs and registration.

(5) Recruit and identify women for recommendation to the annual conference board of laity, committee on nominations and other leadership. This may take place by requesting recommendations from all local church lay leaders, district lay leaders, United Methodist Women and United Methodist Men district offices, and other persons in local leadership.

(6) Provide at least one monitoring, research, or other report on the status of women to the annual conference. Highlight areas of progress and concern to guide strategic planning and future ministry development. The methods and goal of such reports should be established in consultation with conference leadership, General Commission on the Status and Role of Women staff, and women lay and clergy leaders of the conference.

(7) Use the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women as a regular resource.

The General Commission on the Status and Role of Women will provide resources and recommendations for trainings for conference-wide events. Toolkits for meetings with conference leadership, fact sheets about women's issues, the most recent research, and information about the General Commission on the Status and Role of Women leadership convocation will be made available at gcsrw.org.

Global Church Structure - Judiciary

Amend paragraph 55 as follows:

¶ 55. Article I.—There shall be a Judicial Council. The ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference shall determine the number and qualifications of its members, their terms of office, and the method of election and the filling of vacancies.

AND

Amend paragraph 56 as follows:

¶ 56. Article II.—The Judicial Council shall have authority:

1. To determine the constitutionality of any act of the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference upon an appeal of a majority of the Council of Bishops or one-fifth of the members of the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference and to determine the constitutionality or legality under the global Book of Discipline of any act of a ~~jurisdictional or central conference~~ connectional or regional conference upon an appeal of a majority of the bishops of that ~~jurisdictional or central conference~~ connectional or regional conference or upon the appeal of one-fifth of the members of that ~~jurisdictional or central conference~~ connectional or regional conference.

2. To hear and determine any appeal from a bishop's decision on a question of global law made in the annual conference when said appeal has been made by one-fifth of that conference present and voting.

~~3. To pass upon decisions of law made by bishops in annual conferences.~~

3. To hear and determine the legality of any action taken therein by any ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference board, or ~~jurisdictional or central conference board or body~~ upon appeal by one-third of the members thereof, or upon request of the Council of Bishops or a majority of the bishops of a ~~jurisdictional or a central conference~~ connectional or regional conference.

4. To review, on its own motion and at its own discretion, any ruling by a connectional judicial committee if it is believed that said ruling has such global import as to make this necessary, including when a case had unrecognized implications for constitutional or global church law.

4.5. To have such other duties and powers as may be conferred upon it by the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference.

5. ~~6.~~ To provide its own methods of organization and procedure.

Insert new paragraph between ¶¶ 56 and 57 as follows:

¶ 57. Article III.—There shall be connectional judicial committees in each connectional conference. Connectional Judicial Committees shall have five members who shall be elected by the respective connectional conferences. The respective connectional conferences shall determine the qualifications of their respective connectional judicial committee's members, their terms of office, and the method of election by the connectional conference and the filling of vacancies.

The Connectional Judicial Committees shall have authority to review matters of connectional church law as follows:

1. To determine the legality of any act of their respective connectional conferences upon an appeal of a majority of the respective connectional College of Bishops or one-fifth of the members of the Connectional Conference in accordance with their connectional disciplinary law, and to determine the legality of any act of one of their regional conferences upon an appeal of a majority of the bishops of that regional conference or upon the appeal of one-fifth of the members of that regional conference in accordance with their connectional disciplinary law.

2. To hear and determine any appeal from a bishop's decision on a question of connectional disciplinary law made in the annual conference when said appeal has been made by one-fifth of that conference present and voting.

3. To pass upon decisions of connectional disciplinary law made by bishops in annual conferences.

4. To hear and determine the legality under connectional law of any action taken therein by any connectional conference board or regional board or body, upon appeal by one-third of the members thereof, or upon request of the connectional college of bishops or a majority of the bishops of a regional college of bishops.

5. To have such other duties and powers as may be conferred upon it by its respective connectional conference.

6. To provide its own methods of organization and procedure.

AND

Insert new paragraph before ¶ 57 as follows:

¶ 58 Article IV.—Connectional Judicial Committees shall not have authority to review matters of constitutional and/or global church law. Questions that include such points, including when they include points of connectional and constitutional and/or global church law, shall be referred to the Judicial Council.

AND

Amend paragraph 57 as follows:

¶ 59 Article V.—All decisions of the Judicial Council shall be final. When the Judicial Council shall declare unconstitutional any act of the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference then in session, that decision shall be reported back to that ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference immediately.

AND

Amend paragraph 58 as follows:

¶ 60. Article VI.—The ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference shall establish for the Church a judicial system that shall guarantee to our clergy a right to trial by a committee and an appeal, and to our members a right to trial before the Church, or by a committee, and an appeal. This right shall also be respected by the connectional conferences.

Budget Implications: estimated between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000.

There will probably be some additional costs related to connectional conferences, committees, etc., but these costs may be offset by a possible reduction in costs related to the meeting of the Global Connection. If the business of the North America connection is removed from the agenda of the Global Connectional Conference, the duration of that meeting will be less than the current General Conference, perhaps by three or four days, resulting in a reduction in costs for that meeting.

The most significant increase in costs will probably involve the meetings of the connectional conferences. This proposal would require each connectional conference to meet quadrennially, prior to the Global Connectional Conference. Depending upon when and where the connectional conferences meet, the incremental cost of these meetings is estimated to be between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000. GCFA will be asked to develop more accurate cost projections.

Any incremental cost increases will also need to be examined in the context of the overall budget for the 2016 General Conference budget of over US$10 million.

*Additional Budget Implications will be provided by the NEJ Structure Task Force.

Rationale:

This resolution provides enabling changes to the Book of Discipline for the larger proposal that creates an equitable Global Structure.

The new structure shall consist of a Global Connection, which would meet at the Global Connectional Conference quadrennially to address global matters pertaining to The United Methodist Church. New “United . . .

When the Judicial Council shall declare unconstitutional any act of the General Conference Global Connectional Conference then in session, that decision shall be reported back to that General Conference Global Connectional Conference immediately.

Amend paragraph 58 as follows:

This right shall also be respected by the connectional conferences.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS:

The actual incremental costs of this proposal will be dependent upon the global structure finally adopted by General Conference.

There will probably be some additional costs related to connectional conferences, committees, etc., but these costs may be offset by a possible reduction in costs related to the meeting of the Global Connection. If the business of the North America connection is removed from the agenda of the Global Connectional Conference, the duration of that meeting will be less than the current General Conference, perhaps by three or four days, resulting in a reduction in costs for that meeting.

The most significant increase in costs will probably involve the meetings of the connectional conferences. Depending upon when and where the connectional conferences meet, the incremental cost of these meetings is estimated to be between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000. GCFA will be asked to develop more accurate cost projections.

Any incremental cost increases will also need to be examined in the context of the overall budget for the 2016 General Conference budget of over US$10 million.

Rationale:

These constitutional amendments are a component of the The Proposal to Restructure the Global UMC. The amendments in this petition retain the Judicial Council, establish a connectional judicial committee in each connection, and define the responsibilities for these bodies.

Organic Jurisdictional Solution – Jurisdictional Judicial Courts

Add New Paragraph:

¶539 Jurisdictional Judicial Court—A jurisdictional conference that adapts and edits the Discipline as provided in amended ¶ 27.7 shall establish a judicial court, which in addition to other duties that the jurisdiction may assign to it shall hear and determine the legality of any action of the jurisdiction taken under the adopted portions of the Discipline or of a decision of law by the presiding bishop of the jurisdictional conference pertaining to the adapted portions of the Discipline, upon appeal by the presiding bishop or by one-fifth of the members of the jurisdictional conference. Further, the judicial court shall hear and determine the legality of any action of an annual conference taken under the adapted portions of the Discipline or of a decision of law by the presiding bishop of the annual conference pertaining to the adapted portion of the Discipline, upon appeal of the presiding bishop or of such percentage of the members of the annual conference as may be determined by the jurisdictional conference concerned.

Rationale:

This is one piece of a larger legislative agenda to achieve amicable unity in The UMC through the “Organic Jurisdictional Solution.” Because jurisdictions will be allowed to make adaptations to the BOD like central conferences do, they may elect a court to interpret these adaptations. ¶ 2706.2.c) When respondent is a bishop or a diaconal minister—A respondent who is a bishop or a diaconal minister shall be entitled to select a clergyperson in full connection to serve as respondent's counsel. A respondent shall be entitled to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. In no instance and under no circumstances shall the respondent be entitled to receive an award of compensation for or reimbursement of any expenses or fees associated with the respondent's use of an attorney.

¶ 2706.2.d) Investigation of a respondent who is a layperson—A lay respondent shall be entitled to select a lay member or clergyperson to serve as respondent's counsel. A respondent shall be entitled to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. In no instance and under no circumstances shall the respondent be entitled to receive an award of compensation for or reimbursement of any expenses or fees associated with the respondent's use of an attorney.

¶ 2708.7 . . . The counsel for the Church and for the respondent each shall be entitled to choose one assistant counsel, who may be an attorney, without voice. "Without voice"—means without the ability to speak to or within the hearing of the trial court. In no instance and under no circumstances shall the respondent be entitled to receive an award of compensation for or reimbursement of any expenses or fees associated with the respondent's use of an attorney.

¶ 2711.3 . . . The penalty fixed by the trial court shall take effect immediately unless otherwise indicated by the trial court. Should any penalty fixed by a trial court be altered or reduced as a result of the appellate process, the respondent shall be restored and/or compensated as appropriate, provided that in no instance and under no circumstances shall the respondent be entitled to receive an award of compensation for or reimbursement of any expenses or fees associated with the respondent's use of an attorney.

¶ 2716.4 . . . Expenses for counsel for the Church shall be paid by the annual conference. Such expenses for counsel for the respondent shall be paid by the respondent, ~~unless in the interest of fairness, the committee on appeals orders the annual conference to reimburse the respondent.~~

Rationale:

The Petition reflects the American Rule regarding attorney fees. Parties cannot expect anyone else to reimburse attorney fees if the party prevails. In the polity of the UMC, there is a consistent thread that attorneys are not involved in the ecclesiastical process. This petition strengthens and clarifies that polity.

AACLL Authority to Request Decision

Amend ¶ 2609 as indicated following:

¶ 2609. Jurisdiction and Powers—. . .

2. The Judicial Council shall have jurisdiction to determine the constitutionality of any proposed legislation when such declaratory decision is requested by the General Conference, the Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders, or by the Council of Bishops.

Rationale:

Currently other than the General Conference, itself, which meets for less than 2 weeks every four years, only the Council of Bishops, a body made up entirely of clergy, may request a constitutionality decision on proposed legislation. This will empower the AACLL with that authority.

The functions of this joint committee shall be to discuss the possibility of transfers of bishops across jurisdictional or central conference lines at the forthcoming jurisdictional or central conferences for residential and presidential responsibilities in the ensuing quadrennium; to administer by its executive committee the supervisory response to any complaints filed against bishops (§ 413.3); and to review on the basis of missional needs an application from a jurisdiction which, by number of its church members as provided in § 404, would experience a reduction in the number of its bishops, and recommend the number of bishops to which that jurisdiction should be entitled to the General Conference for determination by the General Conference. Upon receipt of the complaint the president of the College Council of Bishops shall forthwith deliver a copy of the complaint to the respondent bishop, notify active bishops of the existence and nature of the complaint, and refer the complaint to the chair of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy (ICE) for the supervisory response (¶ 413.3). Upon notification from the ICE chair that a just resolution has not been reached, the president (secretary) shall refer the complaint to an elder in full connection within the same jurisdictional or central conference, who shall serve as counsel for the Church. Counsel for the Church shall represent the interests of the Church in pressing the claims of the person making the complaint. b) If a written complaint is made against a bishop . . .

c) If ~~five or more~~ two-thirds of the members of the committee on investigation present and voting so recommend, the jurisdictional committee on the episcopacy may suspend the respondent pending the conclusion of the trial process.

5. Bill of Charges and Specifications, Deliberations, Vote, and Referral

b) Finding of reasonable grounds by committee and referral of bill of charges and specifications for trial

(1) When respondent is a bishop—A vote to adopt any charge or specification shall require ~~five votes~~ a two-thirds majority of those present and voting. Any bill of charges and specifications adopted shall be sent to the bishop charged, to the secretary of the jurisdictional or central conference, to the president and secretary of the College Council of Bishops, to counsel for the Church, and to the chairperson of the jurisdictional committee on the episcopacy.

c) Findings other than reasonable grounds by committee or other actions

(1) If the committee on investigation determines that there are no reasonable grounds for charges, it may dismiss the judicial complaint. When deemed appropriate, it may also refer matters of concern to the proper referring Church official (to the president or secretary of the College Council of Bishops in the case of bishop, to the resident bishop in the case of a diaconal minister, or to the pastor or co-pastors in the case of layperson) for administrative or other action. Notification of these actions, should be given to the respondent, the person making the original complaint, counsel for the Church and the proper referring Church officials.

(2) If the committee on investigation determines . . .

(3) Upon recommendation of the counsel for the Church and the counsel for the respondent, the committee may refer the matter to the resident bishop or the president of the Council of Bishops (if the respondent is a bishop) (or the secretary, if the respondent is the president) as deemed appropriate for a process seeking a just resolution. The bishop shall institute such a process and may use the assistance of a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s). Such referral will not constitute a dismissal or double jeopardy under ¶ 2701.5. The appropriate persons, including the counsel for the Church and counsel for the respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining the process, including any agreements on confidentiality. If resolution is achieved, a written statement, affirming such resolution, including any terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the Disciplinary disclosures required for readmission. The written statement affirming such resolution shall be given to the bishop for further action(s) to implement the agreement, if any (under ¶ 413.3c and 3d if the respondent is a bishop). If the process does not result in resolution, the matter shall be returned to the committee on investigation.

2. The president of the ~~College Council~~ Council of Bishops (or in the case the person charged is the president, the secretary) may preside or designate another bishop to serve as presiding officer.

3. The trial shall be convened as provided in ¶ 2709 with the pool of thirty-five or more persons to consist of ~~clergy in full connection~~ district superintendents named by the College of Bishops whose names are drawn by lot by the president of the Council of Bishops (or secretary if the respondent is the president) from each jurisdictional or central conference in approximately equal numbers from each episcopal area within the jurisdictional or central conference proportional to the professing membership of each conference, with a minimum of one superintendent from each jurisdiction or central conference. Special consideration should be given so that the pool includes persons representative of racial, age, ethnic, and gender diversity.

4. Counsel for the Church shall be a bishop or another clergy-person in full connection.

5. The secretary of the court shall at the conclusion . . .

Rationale:

These changes enhance the accountability of bishops and increase consistency by lodging the accountability function in the global church. They lodge all responsibility for handling complaints to clergy and laity who are not bishops, removing any conflicts of interest involved. The changes also add clarity and definition to the process.

If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. The approval of the resolution agreement by the person filing the complaint shall not be required, but the parties to the process seeking a resolution shall provide an opportunity for the complainant to express his or her position on the proposed resolution before the written statement of resolution is signed by the parties to the resolution process. If the resolution proposes a change of ministerial status, the resolution shall not become binding or effective until the status change is approved by the clergy session of the annual conference. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the disciplinary disclosures required for possible readmission.~~

Rationale:

This petition reconciles differences in the resolution process in ¶¶ 363.1c and 2701.5, including timeframe and the parties who participate in each process. The word “just” is removed from ¶ 2701.5 because once proceedings become judicial a resolution might occur that may, or may not be, agreed upon by all parties.

Just Resolution

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 2701.5 as follows:

¶ 2701.5. A Just Resolution in Judicial Proceedings—A just resolution is one that focuses on repairing any harm to people and communities, achieving real accountability by making things right in so far as possible and bringing healing to all the parties. Special attention should be given to ensuring that cultural, racial, ethnic, age, and gender contexts are valued throughout the process in terms of their understandings of fairness, justice, and restoration. During the just resolution process, the parties may be assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s), in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. Processes that seek a just resolution are encouraged at any time, including through the judicial proceedings. After the referral of a matter as a judicial complaint from counsel for the church to the committee on investigation, if a process seeking a just resolution is used, the appropriate persons, including the counsel for the Church and the counsel for the respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining such process, including any agreement on confidentiality. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergyperson having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the clergyperson against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the supervising bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any just resolution of the complaint achieved at any stage of the process must include this clergyperson being suspended without pay, for no less than one full year, from all ministerial duties and functions, including membership, staff position, or formal leadership role in any district, annual conference, or general church board, agency, committee, commission, or office, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the disciplinary disclosures required for possible readmission.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

Revision of the Episcopal Complaint Process

FAIR PROCESS IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

¶ 2701. Preamble and Purpose—The judicial proceedings . . .

5. A Just Resolution in Judicial Proceedings—A just resolution is one that focuses on repairing any harm to people and communities, achieving real accountability by making things right in so far as possible and bringing healing to all the parties. Special attention should be given to ensuring that cultural, racial, ethnic, age and gender contexts are valued throughout the process in terms of their understandings of fairness, justice, and restoration. During the just resolution process, the parties may be assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s), in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. Processes that seek a just resolution are encouraged at any time, including through the judicial proceedings. After the referral of a matter as a judicial complaint from counsel for the church to the committee on investigation, if a process seeking a just resolution is used, the appropriate persons, including the complainant, the counsel for the Church and the counsel for the respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining such process, including any agreement on confidentiality. The existence and status of a complaint and the specific allegation(s) (ineffectiveness, incompetence, inability to perform the work, or a specific chargeable offense) shall not be considered confidential information. The complainant shall be a party to this process and must agree to any proposed resolution. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. If the respondent is a bishop, the general terms of the resolution shall be made public. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the disciplinary disclosures required for possible readmission.

Petition Number: 60070-JA-¶2702-G; Harper, Trey - Forest, MS, USA for Mississippi Annual Conference.

Chargeable Offense

Amend ¶ 2702 by adding a new chargeable offense as follows:

¶ 2702. 1. A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor,¹⁴ clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4)* with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a heterosexual marriage; (b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings,¹⁵ including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies; (c) crime; (d) disobedience to the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church; (e) interfering with the General Conference or another United Methodist body or agency’s ability to conduct business; (f) dissemination of doctrines contrary to the established standards of doctrine of The United Methodist Church; (fg) relationships and/or behavior that undermines the ministry of another pastor;¹⁶ (gh) child abuse; (hi) sexual abuse;¹⁷ (ij) sexual misconduct or (jk) harassment, including, but not limited to racial and/or sexual harassment; or (kl) racial or gender discrimination. . . .

3. A professing member of a local church may be charged with the following offenses, and, if so, may choose a trial: (a) immorality; (b) crime; (c) disobedience to the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church; (d) interfering with the General Conference or another United Methodist body or agency’s ability to conduct business; (e) dissemination of doctrines contrary to the established standards of doctrine of The United Methodist Church; (ef) sexual abuse; (fg) sexual misconduct;* (gh) child abuse; (hi) harassment, including, but not limited to racial and/or sexual harassment; (ij) racial or gender discrimination; or (jk) relationships and/or behaviors that undermine the ministry of persons serving within an appointment.

Rationale:

Efforts by demonstrators to stop the General Conference and the Connectional Table prevent the church's work, waste valuable resources, and disrupt the democratic process of our conferencing. Such demonstrations cause fear in some delegates and observers and are the antithesis of a Christ-like process for addressing disagreements within the church.

Fiscal Malfeasance

Amend ¶ 2702.1 and ¶ 2702.3 as follows:

.3 . . . ~~or~~ (j) relationships and/or behaviors that undermine the ministry of persons serving within an appointment; or (k) fiscal malfeasance.

Rationale:

Provides for a chargeable offense when fiscal malfeasance is committed whether or not the person has been convicted of crime.

Chargeable Offenses

(b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual who is not within a monogamous same-sex marriage; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;

Add a new subparagraph 2. after ¶ 2702.1. as follows:

2. A clergy member of an annual conference, local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be the subject of an Administrative Fair Process proceeding (excluding ¶ 363.1. e) (2)) when a complaint under ¶ 363 is filed with the person's bishop charging the person with (a) being a self-avowed practicing homosexual within a monogamous same-sex marriage; (b) conducting ceremonies that celebrate same-sex unions; or (c) performing same-sex wedding ceremonies. If the disposition of the complaint is consideration of an appointment to another charge, the charge's pastor-parish relations committee shall be informed of the complaint and consulted before there is a final decision to make the appointment.

Renumber the remaining subparagraphs of ¶ 2702.

Amend the first sentence of the last textual paragraph of ¶ 363.1. to read as follows:

A complaint is a written and signed statement claiming misconduct as defined in ¶ 2702.1. or ¶ 2702.2.

Rationale:

As explained at www.obeyjesusnow.com/analysis, <http://www.obeyjesusnow.com/analysis> our Church wrongfully opposes monogamous same-sex marriages between loving homosexuals. If the opposition continues, we should at least "stop the trials." This petition will substitute an existing supervisory discipline, ending bad publicity from trials without eliminating provisions prohibiting performing of same-sex unions or weddings,

Define Fiscal Malfeasance

Amend ¶ 2702 as follows and define the new chargeable offense in a new ¶ 806.11, assigning responsibility to GCFA. Renumber remaining as necessary.

¶ 2702. 1. . . . ~~or~~ (k) racial or gender discrimination; or (j) fiscal malfeasance as defined by the Church (¶806.11).

3. . . . ~~or~~ (j) relationships and/or behaviors that undermine the ministry of persons serving within an appointment; or (k) fiscal malfeasance as defined by the Church (¶806.11) .

NEW ¶ 806.11 It shall initiate, or support other units of the Church in, the investigation and pursuit of allegations of fiscal malfeasance, which shall be defined as causing, permitting, or condoning the misuse, misdirection, or misappropriation of financial or physical assets of any unit of the Church when proper use has been prescribed by an authorized entity, such as, but not limited to, a donor (¶¶ 258.4.f) and 805.4.a), General Conference, a jurisdictional conference, a central conference, an annual conference, a district conference, a local church, or a general agency.

Removing Practice of Homosexuality From List of Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1 as follows:

A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4) with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a heterosexual marriage; ~~(b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;~~ (c) crime; (d) disobedience . . .

Rationale:

Since 1972, The United Methodist Church has taken increasingly firmer positions opposing non-heterosexual orientations. Attempting to make all United Methodists conform to traditional beliefs has not decreased denominational tension. This petition attempts to relocate decision making to the appropriate level, i.e. annual conference and pastors, and ease tension.

A Third Way - Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1 as indicated following:

¶ 2702. 1. A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 369), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4) with one or more of the following offenses:

(a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a heterosexual marriage; (b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, ~~including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;~~ (c) crime; (d) disobedience to the order . . .

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶ 2702 Chargeable Offenses and the Statute of Limitations

1. A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor,¹⁴ clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4)* with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a marriage; (b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings,¹⁵ ~~including but not limited to being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;~~ (c) crime; (d) disobedience to the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church, (e) dissemination of doctrines contrary to the established standards of doctrine of The United Methodist Church, (f) relationships and/or behavior that undermines the ministry of another pastor;¹⁶ (g) child abuse, (h) sexual abuse;¹⁷ (i) sexual misconduct or (j) harassment, including, but not limited to racial and/or sexual harassment; or (k) racial or gender discrimination. Notwithstanding the foregoing, a bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor,¹⁴ clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church affirms “that sexuality is God’s good gift to all persons” (¶ 161F), yet requires clergy to discriminate against same-gender couples in loving and committed relationships seeking marriage in their church. This change makes ¶ 2702.1 compatible with ¶ 2702.3 and reduces discrimination.

Delete ¶ 2703.2 of the 2008 Book of Discipline (declared in force by Judicial Council Decision No. 1296) and ¶ 2703.2 of the 2012 Book of Discipline, and replace with a new ¶ 2703.2 reading:

2. In each annual conference, there shall be a committee on investigation to consider judicial complaints against clergy members of the annual conference, clergy members on honorable location or administrative location from that annual conference, local pastors, and diaconal ministers. It shall consist of four clergy members in full connection, three professing members, three alternate clergy members in full connection, and six alternate lay members, three of whom shall be diaconal ministers. The committee shall be nominated by the presiding bishop in consultation with the Board of Ordained Ministry (for clergy members) and the conference board of laity (for professing members) and elected quadrennially by the annual conference. If additional members or alternates are needed, the annual conference may elect members to serve for the remainder of the quadrennium. Committee members shall be in good standing and shall be deemed of good character. The committee should reflect racial, ethnic, and gender diversity. The committee on investigation shall elect a chair and organize at the annual conference. None of the members or alternates shall be members of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the cabinet, or immediate family members of the above. Should a member of the committee on investigation have been a party to any of the prior proceedings in the case that finally comes before the committee, he or she shall be disqualified from sitting on the committee during its consideration of that case, and his or her place shall be taken by an alternate member. Seven members or alternates seated as members of the committee shall constitute a quorum.

a) In cases of complaints against clergy members of the annual conference, clergy members on honorable location from that annual conference, or local pastors, the committee shall consist of four clergy members and three professing members.

b) In cases of complaints against diaconal ministers, the committee shall consist of four clergy members and five professing members, two of whom shall be diaconal ministers.

Rationale:

This consolidates the committee on investigation for clergy and the committee on investigation for Diaconal Ministers, into one committee. Membership is structured to maintain a clergy majority for cases regarding clergy, and a professing membership majority for cases regarding Diaconal Ministers.

¶ 2703. Composition of the Committee on Investigation

1. When respondent is a bishop—There shall be a global committee on investigation, elected by eEach jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee shall elect one of its members to serve on this committee. The committee shall be as nearly as possible one-half clergy and one-half lay, with the member from each conference alternating quadrennially between clergy and lay. The secretary of the Council of Bishops shall establish the clergy/lay rotation and notify each episcopacy committee. Nominations shall be made by the College of Bishops in consultation with the jurisdictional episcopacy committee. Further nominations may be offered from the floor of the jurisdictional or central conference. The committee shall consist of seven clergy in full connection (with not more than one clergyperson from each annual conference, if possible), two lay observers, and six alternate members, five of whom shall be clergypersons in full connection (with not more than one clergyperson from each annual conference, if possible), and one of whom shall a layperson. If additional members or alternates are needed, they may be named by the College of Bishops. Committee members shall be in good standing and should be deemed of good character. The committee should reflect racial, ethnic, and gender diversity. The committee shall be convened for its first meeting by the president of the Council of Bishops and shall elect a chairperson and organize at the jurisdictional or central conference during the month of January of the first year of the quadrennium. Seven clergy or alternates seated as Seventy-five percent of the members of the committee shall constitute a quorum. The global committee on investigation may meet for any of its functions via video or phone conference or other electronic means.

Rationale:

These changes enhance the accountability of bishops and increase consistency by lodging the accountability function in the global Church. They lodge all responsibility for handling complaints to clergy and laity who are not bishops, removing any conflicts of interest involved. The changes also add clarity and definition to the process.

a) Judicial Complaint—Pursuant to the provisions of ¶ 363, if the bishop determines that a written complaint is based on allegations of one or more offenses listed in ¶ 2702.1, the bishop shall refer the complaint to the counsel for the Church, who shall be appointed by the bishop. The counsel for the Church shall be a clergyperson in full connection and shall have the right to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. By agreeing to serve, counsel for the Church signifies his or her willingness to vigorously and with integrity uphold the requirements of church law and the Discipline. After being appointed by the bishop, the counsel for the Church shall review all of the alleged facts and events surrounding and related to one or more chargeable offenses. The counsel shall perform . . .

3. When respondent is a diaconal minister

a) If a written complaint is made against a diaconal minister for any of the offenses in ¶ 2702.1, the supervisory response should be initiated and a just resolution process may be used. (See ¶ 363.1c for a discussion of a just resolution.) If the supervisory process does not result in resolution, the respondent's district superintendent may appoint a clergyperson in full connection or diaconal minister as counsel for the Church. By agreeing to serve, counsel for the Church signifies his or her willingness to vigorously and with integrity uphold the requirements of church law and the Discipline. Counsel for the Church shall prepare, sign, and refer the judicial complaint, with all relevant material, to the chairperson of the conference committee on investigation . . .

4. When respondent is a layperson

a) In all cases, the pastor or district superintendent should take pastoral steps to resolve any grievances or complaints. Such steps may include a just resolution process. See ¶ 363.1c for a discussion of a just resolution. If after such steps have been taken and have not resulted in a resolution and a written complaint is made against a layperson for any of the offenses in ¶ 2702.3, the pastor in charge or co-pastors (¶ 205.1) of the local church, in consultation with the district superintendent and the district lay leader, may appoint counsel for the Church, who shall be a United Methodist. By agreeing to serve, counsel for the Church signifies his or /her willingness to vigorously and with integrity uphold the requirements of church law and the Discipline. Counsel for the Church shall prepare, sign, and refer the judicial complaint, with all relevant material, to the chairperson of committee on investigation.

Rationale:

The counsel for the Church must energetically represent the church's requirements, since he/she is the only one in the judicial process able to do so. Recent examples of counsels for the Church who were on record opposing the provisions they were asked to enforce gave the appearance of a process . . .

Revision of the Episcopal Complaint Process

Make the following revisions to ¶ 2704.1.

¶ 2704. Referral of Original Complaint to Counsel for the Church, Who Shall Prepare Judicial Complaint and Supporting Material for Consideration by Committee on Investigation

1. When respondent is a bishop

a) Judicial Complaint—A complaint based on allegations that a bishop has committed one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702 shall initially be served on the president ~~and secretary~~ of the ~~College Council~~ of Bishops (or secretary, if the complaint is against the president) (¶ 413.1-2). Upon receipt of the complaint, the president of the College of Bishops shall forthwith deliver a copy of the complaint to the respondent bishop, notify active bishops of the existence and nature of the complaint, and refer the complaint to two members of the jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee for the supervisory response (¶ 413.3). Upon notification from the episcopacy committee members that a just resolution has not been reached, the president (secretary) shall refer the complaint to an elder in full connection within the same jurisdictional or central conference, who shall serve as counsel for the Church. Counsel for the Church shall represent the interests of the Church in pressing the claims of the person making the complaint. Counsel for the Church shall have the right to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. The counsel for the Church shall draft and sign the complaint as a judicial complaint, forward it to the ~~jurisdictional or central conference~~ global committee on investigation (¶ 2704.1), and represent the Church in the judicial process. The fair process provisions in ¶ 2701 shall apply to this judicial process. The statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4 should be considered prior to the referral of a judicial complaint.19

Revision of Episcopal Complaint Process

Make the following revisions to ¶ 2704.1.

¶ 2704. Referral of Original Complaint to Counsel for the Church, Who Shall Prepare Judicial Complaint and Supporting Material for Consideration by Committee on Investigation

1. When respondent is a bishop

a) Judicial Complaint—A complaint based on allegations that a bishop has committed one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702 shall initially be served on the president ~~and secretary~~ of the ~~College Council~~ of Bishops (or secretary, if the complaint is against the president) (¶ 413.1-2). Upon receipt of the complaint the president of the ~~College Council~~ of Bishops shall forthwith deliver a copy of the complaint to the respondent bishop, notify active bishops of the existence and nature of the complaint, and refer the complaint to the chair of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy (ICE) for the supervisory response (§ 413.3). Upon notification from the ICE chair that a just resolution has not been reached, the president (secretary) shall refer the complaint to an elder in full connection within the same jurisdictional or central conference, who shall serve as counsel for the Church. Counsel for the Church shall represent the interests of the Church in pressing the claims of the person making the complaint. Counsel for the Church shall have the right to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. The counsel for the Church shall draft and sign the complaint as a judicial complaint, forward it to the ~~jurisdictional or central conference~~ global committee on investigation (§ 2704.1), and represent the Church in the judicial process. The fair process provisions in § 2701 shall apply to this judicial process. The statute of limitations in § 2702.4 should be considered prior to the referral of a judicial complaint.19

b) If a written complaint is made against a bishop . . .

c) If ~~five or more~~ two-thirds of the members of the committee on investigation present and voting so recommend, the jurisdictional committee on the episcopacy may suspend the respondent pending the conclusion of the trial process.

Rationale:

These changes enhance the accountability of bishops and increase consistency by lodging the accountability function in the global church. They lodge all responsibility for handling complaints to clergy and laity who are not bishops, removing any conflicts of interest involved. The changes also add clarity and definition to the process.

Reconcile Complaint Process Apparent Conflict

Amend §§ 363.1.e) and 2704.2.a) as follows:

¶ 363.1.e) ~~Referral of a Complaint~~ Referral or Dismissal of a Complaint— Upon receiving a written and signed complaint, the bishop shall, within 90 days, carry out the supervisory response process outlined above. If within 90 days after the receipt of the complaint resolution is not achieved, the bishop shall either:

(1) Dismiss the complaint with the consent of the cabinet giving the reasons therefore in writing, a copy of which shall be placed in the clergy person's file; or

(2) Refer the matter to counsel for the church as a complaint.

All original time limitations may be extended for one 30-day period upon the consent of the complainant and the respondent.

¶ 2704.2. When respondent is a clergy member of an annual conference, clergy on honorable or administrative location or a local pastor

a) Judicial Complaint—If the complaint is not dismissed pursuant to the provisions of § 363 and if the bishop determines that the complaint is based on allegations of one or more offenses listed in § 2702.1, the bishop shall refer the complaint to the counsel for the Church, who shall be appointed by the bishop....

Rationale:

There is a perceived conflict between the authority provided in §363.1.e) regarding complaint dismissals and the judicial complaint process specifications in §2704.2.a). The potential discrepancy should be remedied and the two provisions harmonized.

Selecting Counsel

Amend § 2704.2(a) by adding language as follows:

2. When respondent is a clergy member of an annual conference, clergy on honorable or administrative location or a local pastor

a) Judicial Complaint—Pursuant to the provisions of § 363, if the bishop determines that a written complaint is based on allegations of one or more offenses listed in § 2702.1, the bishop shall refer the complaint to the counsel for the Church, who shall be appointed by the bishop. The counsel for the Church shall be a clergy person in full connection and shall have the right to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. A clergy person may be appointed as counsel for the church only after affirming to the bishop and the complainant that she or he personally agrees that the final result of this complaint process should serve as a future deterrent against a clergy person committing the chargeable offense with which the respondent is being charged. After being appointed by the bishop . . .

Rationale:

There have been multiple instances of bishops appointing counsels who openly disagree with the disciplinary standard in question and so have used their position to prevent effective, deterrent accountability. This deterrent principle is an important part of biblical, Wesleyan teaching (1 Timothy 5:20 and Methodist Articles of Religion #22).

Selecting Counsel

Amend ¶ 2704.2(a) as follows:

2. When respondent is a clergy member of an annual conference, clergy on honorable or administrative location or a local pastor a) Judicial Complaint—Pursuant to the provisions of ¶ 363, if the bishop determines that a written complaint is based on allegations of one or more offenses listed in ¶ 2702.1, the bishop shall refer the complaint to the counsel for the Church, who shall be appointed by the bishop. The counsel for the Church shall be a clergy person in full connection who is in personal agreement with the Disciplinary standard(s) that the respondent is accused of violating and shall have the right to choose one assistant counsel without voice who may be an attorney. In selecting an individual to serve as counsel for the church, the bishop shall consult with the complainant about possible choices. Clergy shall have the right to refuse appointment as counsel for the Church in a particular case as a matter of conscience, with no punishment for making such a choice of refusal. In cases in which it becomes extraordinarily difficult to find an appropriate individual willing to serve, the bishop may appoint as counsel for the Church a clergy member in full connection of another annual conference, provided that written consent is obtained from both this individual's bishop and the complainant. In such cases, all travel expenses for the counsel for the Church shall be paid for by the conference in which the complaint was filed. After being appointed by the bishop . . .

Rationale:

It is reasonable at least to talk to complainants about who may ultimately represent their concerns as counsel for the Church. The rest would maintain the bishop's central responsibilities, give bishops flexibility when needed, and protect clergy from being coerced into pursuing causes with which they personally disagree.

The existence and status of a complaint and the specific allegation(s) (ineffectiveness, incompetence, inability to perform the work, or a specific chargeable offense) shall not be considered confidential information. The complainant shall be a party to this process and must agree to any proposed resolution. If resolution is achieved, a written statement, affirming such resolution, including any terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. Consequences

Add new paragraph:

¶ 2706.5.c.4

In cases where the respondent is charged with conducting a ceremony that celebrates a homosexual union or where the respondent is charged with performing a same-sex wedding the following consequences shall be applied following a process for just resolution:

a) if the respondent is a bishop, that clergyperson will return to his or her annual conference from which he or she was elected bishop for appointment upon completion of a 6-month suspension with all access to salary, continuing education funds, reimbursement funds, health insurance, and pension payments withheld. Furthermore, should this former bishop conduct future celebrations of homosexual unions or perform same-sex wedding ceremonies and be found guilty of such either by a just resolution process or church trial, the following consequences will be given:

First offense—six (6) months suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for six (6) months, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that six (6) months, but the clergyperson may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the Church

Second offense—immediate surrender of elder’s orders to the resident bishop and termination of affiliation with the annual conference. If appropriate the clergyperson may receive a settlement of pension benefits but not payment of retiree health insurance nor conference-provided housing offered to retirees in good standing.

b) if the respondent is an elder, deacon, or commissioned elder or commissioned deacon: First offense—sixty (60) days suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for sixty (60) days, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that sixty (60) days, but the clergyperson may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Second offense—six (6) months suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for six (6) months, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that six (6) months, but the clergyperson may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Third offense—immediate surrender of elder’s orders to the clergyperson’s district superintendent and termination of affiliation with the annual conference. If appropriate the clergyperson may receive a settlement of pension benefits but not payment of retiree health insurance nor conference provided housing offered to retirees in good standing.

c) Should the resident bishop fail to uphold the courses of punishment for a respondent found guilty of celebrating homosexual unions or performing a same-sex marriage, that clergyperson shall be referred to the president or secretary of the College of Bishops for either a just resolution process or a church trial. Should the resident bishop be found guilty of not upholding the consequences for a respondent who conducts a ceremony that celebrates a homosexual union or a respondent who performs a same-sex marriage, that bishop will be removed from office and will return to his or her annual conference for appointment.

Rationale:

The process for just resolution is vaguely understood in the General Church and is very undefined. Since great conflict arises every time there is a just resolution of a complaint involving a clergyperson leading a ceremony involving a homosexual couple, this would provide a uniform policy across the church . . .

Management of Judicial Just Resolution Agreements and Decisions

Amend ¶ 2706.5c(3) as follows:

(3) Upon recommendation . . . If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the Disciplinary disclosures required for readmission. ~~The written statement affirming such resolution shall be given to the bishop for further action(s) to implement the agreement, if any.~~ The committee on investigation shall retain jurisdiction for the period of time stated for the implementation of the resolution agreement. The committee shall periodically monitor the progress of the completion of the terms and conditions of the resolution agreement, and shall certify when the terms and conditions of the agreement are completed. When the terms and conditions of the agreement are completed, the committee on investigation shall report its certification, and the status of the respondent as a result of completing the terms and conditions of the resolution agreement, to the resident bishop. If the process does not result in resolution, the matter shall be returned to the committee for further consideration. Also, decision(s) of a trial court that call for certification as to the completion of terms and conditions of the trial court’s decision(s) after the end of a trial are to be assigned to the committee on investigation for monitoring and certification of completion of the decision. If the respondent fails to complete the terms and conditions of a trial court decision, the committee shall notify the presiding officer of the trial, who may reconvene the trial court for its further consideration.

Rationale:

This will keep management of judicial just resolution agreements and post-trial certification of completion of a trial court's verdicts within a constitutional judicial structure of the church. This will help avoid problems that have occurred when non-judicial structures try to manage or certify judicial resolution agreements or verdicts.

Just Resolution

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 2706.5c(3) as follows:

(3) Upon recommendation of the counsel for the Church and the counsel for the respondent, the committee may refer the matter to the resident bishop as deemed appropriate for a process seeking a just resolution. The bishop shall institute such a process and may use the assistance of a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s). Such referral will not constitute a dismissal or double jeopardy under ¶ 2701.5. The appropriate persons, including the counsel for the Church and counsel for the respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining the process, including any agreements on confidentiality. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergyperson having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the clergyperson against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any final just resolution of the complaint must include this clergyperson being suspended without pay, for no less than one full year, from all ministerial duties and functions, including membership, staff position, or formal leadership role in any district, annual conference, or general church board, agency, committee, commission, council, or office, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church. If resolution is achieved, a written statement, affirming such resolution, including any terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the Disciplinary disclosures required for readmission. The written statement affirming such resolution shall be given to the bishop for further action(s) to implement the agreement, if any. If the process does not result in resolution, the matter shall be returned to the committee.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the "just resolution" process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

Penalties

Amend ¶ 2711.3 as follows:

¶ 2711.3) Penalties—If the Trial Results in Conviction. Further testimony may be heard and arguments by counsel presented regarding what the penalty should be. The trial court shall determine the penalty, which shall require a vote of at least seven members. The trial court shall have the power to remove the respondent from professing membership, terminate the conference membership and revoke the credentials of conference membership, commissioning, ordination, or consecration of the respondent, suspend the respondent from the exercise of the functions of office, and/or to fix a lesser penalty.

The trial court shall also have power to impose conditions for restoration, including, but not limited to, requiring restitution and/or renewing membership or ordination vows. When a penalty includes conditions, the trial court shall indicate the nature and timing of the conditions and which administrative body of the Church shall administer those conditions at the conclusion of the trial. That administrative body shall not alter or change the penalty conditions; it may inquire of the trial court for clarification, since the trial court is considered a continuing body until the final disposition of a charge (¶ 2711.1). Multiple penalties may be applied to a guilty verdict, including, but not limited to, a suspension that converts to additional penalties if conditions for restoration are not met.

The penalty fixed . . .

Rationale:

The current directions have no clear clause for restitution or restorative justice. The hard work of several trial courts has been undone on appeal by this omission (e.g., JCDs 240, 1270). These amendments give greater flexibility for complex cases and clarify the legality of conditional penalties needed for restorative justice.

The trial shall be convened as provided in ¶ 2709 with the pool of thirty-five or more persons to consist of ~~clergy in full connection~~ district superintendents named by the College of Bishops whose names are drawn by lot by the president (secretary) of the Council of Bishops from each jurisdictional or central conference in approximately equal numbers from each episcopal area within the jurisdictional or central conference proportional to the professing membership of each conference, with a minimum of one superintendent from each jurisdictional or central conference. Special consideration should be given so that the pool includes persons representative of racial, age, ethnic, and gender diversity.

4. Counsel for the Church shall be a bishop or another clergy-person in full connection.

6. A bishop suspended from office shall have claim ...

Revision of Episcopal Complaint Process

Make the following revisions to ¶ 2712.

¶ 2712. Trial of a Bishop

1. The president of the College Council of Bishops ~~of the jurisdictional or central conference~~—or in case the person charged is the president, the secretary of the ~~college council~~—shall proceed to convene the court under the provisions of ¶ 2709.

2. The president of the College Council of Bishops (or in the case the person charged is the president, the secretary) may preside or designate another bishop to serve as presiding officer.

3. The trial shall be convened as provided in ¶ 2709 with the pool of thirty-five or more persons to consist of ~~clergy in full connection~~ district superintendents named by the College of Bishops whose names are drawn by lot by the president of the Council of Bishops (or secretary if the respondent is the president) from each jurisdictional or central conference in approximately equal numbers from each episcopal area within the jurisdictional or central conference proportional to the professing membership of each conference, with a minimum of one superintendent from each jurisdiction or central conference. Special consideration should be given so that the pool includes persons representative of racial, age, ethnic, and gender diversity.

4. Counsel for the Church shall be a bishop or another clergy-person in full connection.

5. The secretary of the court shall at the conclusion ...

6. A bishop suspended from office shall have claim ...

Rationale:

These changes enhance the accountability of bishops and increase consistency by lodging the accountability function in the global Church. They lodge all responsibility for handling complaints to clergy and laity who are not bishops, removing any conflicts of interest involved. The changes also add clarity and definition to the process.

Clarify Appeals Committee Powers

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 2715.8 as follows:

8. In all cases where an appeal is made and admitted by the appellate committee, after the charges, findings, and evidence have been read and the arguments conclude, the parties shall withdraw, and the appellate committee shall consider and decide the case. It may reverse in whole or in part the findings of the committee on investigation or the trial court, or it may remand the case for a new trial to determine verdict and/or penalty. It may determine what penalty, not higher than that affixed at the hearing or trial, may be imposed, provided that any newly fixed penalty is within the range of penalties the trial court had the right to impose. If it neither reverses in whole or in part the judgment of the trial court, nor remands the case for a new trial, nor modifies the penalty, that judgment shall stand. The appellate committee shall not reverse the judgment nor change the penalty nor remand the case for a new hearing or trial on account of errors plainly not affecting the result. All decisions of the appellate committee shall require a majority vote.

Rationale:

Needed clarification, given recent confusion over the limits to the penalties trials can impose, and over how broad a right the appeals committee has to substitute its own penalty. It is unfair to allow all the trial court's difficult work to be undone in the absence of relevant errors.

Church Right to Appeal

Amend ¶ 2715.10 as follows:

¶ 2715. “Appeal Procedures—General. . .

10. The Church shall have no right of appeal from findings of fact of the trial court. The Church shall have a right of appeal to the committee on appeals and then to the Judicial Council from findings of the trial court based on egregious errors of Church law or administration that could reasonably have affected the findings of the trial court. When the committee on appeals or the Judicial Council shall find egregious errors of Church law or administration under this part, it may remand the case for a new trial, along with a statement of the grounds of its action. This is not to be double jeopardy. In regard to cases where there is an investigation under ¶ 2702, but no trial is held, egregious errors of Church law or administration may be appealed to the ~~jurisdictional~~ committee on appeals and then to the Judicial Council by counsel for the Church. The committee on investigation's decision not to certify a bill of charges does not alone constitute an egregious error of Church law or administration. When the committee on appeals or the Judicial Council shall find egregious errors of Church law or administration under this part, it may remand the case for a new hearing, in which event it shall return to the chair of the committee on investigation a statement of the grounds of its action. This is not to be double jeopardy.²⁴

Rationale:

The Church/complainant and respondent must have equitable rights. The deletion of “jurisdictional” clarifies that all appeals are available both in jurisdictions and in central conferences. The addition of “and/or the Judicial Council” clarifies that the church may appeal a ruling by the committee on appeals.

Administrative Review Process

¶ 2718.3 The order of appeals on questions of procedures in an administrative process shall be as follows: from the decision of the relations committee to the administrative review committee who has original jurisdiction over the administrative matter, and from the administrative review committee to the central conference or jurisdictional appeals committee in which the appellant holds membership, and from the jurisdictional appeals committee to the Judicial Council.

¶ 2718.4 When an appeal is made on questions of procedure in an administrative process:

a) In all cases of appeal, the appellant shall within thirty days give written notice of appeal and at the same time furnish to the officer receiving such notice a written statement of the grounds of appeal, and the hearing in the appellate body shall be limited to the grounds set forth in such statement.

b) The appellant body shall return to the convening officer of the administrative hearing and to the appellant a written statement of the grounds of its action.

c) An appeal shall not be allowed in any case in which the respondent has failed or refused to be present in person or by counsel during the administrative hearing. Appeals shall be heard by the proper appellate body unless it shall appear to the said body that the appellant has forfeited the right to appeal by misconduct; by withdrawal from the Church; by failure to appear in person or by counsel to prosecute the appeal; or, prior to the final decision on appeal by resorting to suit in the civil courts against any of the parties connected with the ecclesiastical administrative process.

d) The right to appeal, when once forfeited by neglect or otherwise, cannot be revived by any subsequent appellate body.

e) The right to prosecute an appeal shall not be affected by the death of the person entitled to such right. Heirs of legal representatives may prosecute such appeal as the appellant would be entitled to do if living.

f) The records and documents of the administrative process, including any evidence, and these only, shall be used in the hearing of any appeal.

g) The appellate body shall determine one question only: Were there such errors of Church law as to vitiate the recommendation and/or action of the administrative body? This question shall be determined by the records of the administrative process and the argument of the representative of the administrative body making the recommendation and/or action and for the respondent. The appellate body shall in no case hear witnesses. It may have legal counsel present for the sole purpose of providing advice to the appellate body.

h) If the appellate body determines that any error has occurred, it may recommend to the appropriate person or body that action be taken promptly to remedy the error, decide the error is harmless, or take other action. The appellate committee shall not reverse the judgment nor remand the case for a new hearing on account of error plainly not affecting the result. All decisions of the appellate committee shall require a majority vote.

i) In all cases, the right to present evidence shall be exhausted when the case has been heard once on its merits in the proper administrative hearing body, but questions on Church law may be carried on appeal, step by step, to the Judicial Council.

j) Questions of procedure may be raised with the presiding officer or secretary of the appellate body. Under no circumstances shall one part in the absence of the other party discuss substantive matters with members of any appellate body while the case is pending.

k) Contacts with members of any appellate body shall be limited to matters of procedure and shall be directed only to the presiding officer or secretary of the appellate body. Under no circumstance shall matters of substance be discussed.

Rationale:

Allow Discipline to comply with Judicial Decision 1276: “The Judicial Council acknowledges that although appeal step in judicial cases are clearly stated (§§ 2715-2717), the appeal process in administrative matters is less clearly delineated. However, the General Conference, not the Judicial Council, is the body to address this lack of clarity.”

Support of LGBT Persons

Add Resolution to the Book of Resolutions:

WHEREAS, the Constitution of The United Methodist Church requires that at least some parts of The United Methodist Church are fully welcoming and affirming of God's love to all lesbians, gays, bisexual and transgendered (LGBT) persons so as to stop the use of Christianity as an excuse for bullying and violence toward gender and sexual minorities; and

WHEREAS, our United Methodist connection calls us to treat well-intentioned, well-reasoned differences of opinion with mutual respect (as this resolution proposes) rather than insisting upon a verdict or single position that rejects one side or the other; and

WHEREAS, the Book of Discipline reflects John Wesley's understanding that "everyone must follow the dictates of his own conscience; NOW

THEREFORE LET IT BE RESOLVED THAT THE MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH 2016, be strongly encouraged to:

1. Support LGBT lay members who marry and to consider refraining from filing complaints against pastors who perform marriages between gender and sexual minorities, and

2. Consider refraining from using United Methodist resources to investigate or enforce a ban on marriages between same gender and sexual minorities, or for church trials, or for otherwise disciplining clergy that perform same-sex marriages; and

3. Consider refraining from using United Methodist resources to investigate the gender or sexual orientation of a minister or candidate for ministry, and consider refraining from using United Methodist resources to enforce a ban on the certification of an LGBT candidate for ministry, or the ban on ordination of an LGBT minister; and

Be it further resolved that the GENERAL CONFERENCE 2016 implores all members of The United Methodist Church Connection to:

1. Be in ministry with all people, regardless of their economic status, race, age, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, disability, or immigration status.

2. Endorse proposed changes to the Book of Discipline and Social Principles that permit matters concerning LGBT persons to be discerned by individual members, congregations, pastors, bishops, committees and conferences through biblical obedience with the aid of the Holy Spirit and at the discretion of the individual members, pastors, congregations, bishops, conferences, and committees; and

3. Endorse proposed changes to the Book of Discipline and Social Principles that permit those that disagree with one another with respect to homosexuality and LGBT persons to remain inside The United Methodist Church connection, including, at a minimum, deletion of the excluding language in Social Principle ¶ 161.F; eliminating the ban on same-sex marriages, Book of Discipline ¶ 341.6; eliminating the restriction on expenditure of funds, Book of Discipline ¶ 613.9; eliminating performing same-gender weddings as a chargeable offense, Book of Discipline ¶ 2702.1; eliminating the definition of marriage as between a man and a woman, Book of Discipline ¶ 161.B; and eliminating the ban on ordination of homosexuals or LGBT persons, Book of Discipline ¶ 304.3.

Petition Number: 60664-LC-¶205.4-G; Sterling, Jeffrey D. - Allison Park, PA, USA for Northeast Jurisdiction Committee on Ministry.

Hired Pulpit Supply

Amend ¶ 205.4 as follows:

When a pastoral charge is not able to be served by an ordained or licensed minister, the bishop, upon recommendation of the cabinet, may assign a qualified and trained layperson, lay minister, or lay missionary to do the work of ministry in that charge. The layperson is accountable to the district superintendent or another ordained or licensed minister appointed to oversee the charge, who will make provision for sacramental ministry ~~and provide guidance and mentoring to the layperson assigned.~~ Upon the bishop's assignment, the layperson will be assigned an additional clergyperson as a guide to provide support in the assignment. If the assignment is to continue longer than one year, within that year, the layperson will begin the process of becoming either a certified lay minister or a certified candidate, thus coming under the care of the District Committee on Ministry. The layperson assigned is also accountable to the policies and procedures of the annual conference where assigned.

Rationale:

As the number of laypersons "hired by the superintendent" are on the rise, due to our smallest churches needing ministers to care for them, the NEJ COM is concerned that our conference Boards of Ordained Ministry and related DCOMs have no relationship with these persons, and that many of them . . .

Adapting to Transitional Community

Amend ¶ 212 as follows:

Section IV. Churches in Transitional Communities

¶ 212. Since many of the communities . . .

1. When the communities . . .

5. The ministry of the local church . . .

6. Every effort should be made to educate the congregation on the changes in the surrounding community. The local church has always been called 'to minister to persons in the community where the church is located' (¶ 202), so in times of transition the membership needs to understand that the Church's mission is the same.

Rationale:

When communities are in transition it can be natural for the church members to not notice the change and continue with their traditional programming. If they do not acknowledge that their community is changing and proactively work to integrate the life of the church into the life community a barrier . . .

Membership

Add the following language to the end of ¶ 214:

The decision about an individual's readiness to affirm the vows of membership and to become a professing member of The United Methodist Church rests with the pastor in charge of the congregation or charge in which that individual seeks membership. However, in the event that the pastor deems that an individual is not ready to affirm the vows of membership, that person may appeal the pastor's decision to the pastor-parish or staff-parish relations committee of the church or charge.

Rationale:

There may be times when, for reasons of safety or integrity, membership in a church is appropriately denied or deferred. The ability to appeal the decision protects against the abuse or capricious use of pastoral authority.

The right of appeal is enshrined in our Constitution (§ 20). P/SPRC is the . . .

Accountability

Amend ¶ 221.1 as follows:

1. All professing members ~~are to~~ shall be held accountable for faithfulness to their covenant of baptism the vows of baptism and professing membership.

Rationale:

The proposed change aligns this paragraph with previous changes made to our language for an understanding of professing membership and clarifies the mandatory nature of accountability as part of professing membership.

¶228.

Petition Number: 60021-LC-¶ 228-G; Fuller, Dan - Port Crane, NY, USA.

Accurate Membership Statistics

Amend Discipline ¶ 228 as follows:

- ¶ 228. 1. The local church . . .
2. Care of Members-a) The pastor . . .
b) While primary responsibility . . .

(1) If a professing member . . . If the member does not comply with any of the available alternatives over a period of two years, the member's name ~~may~~ shall be removed. (See § [4].)

(2) . . .

Rationale:

For the sake of effective and efficient planning of mission and ministry and the congregational, district, annual conference, and general church levels, it is important to have meaningful, updated membership statistics. This change helps make the accurate counting of our membership more firmly expected than a mere option.

¶228.

Petition Number: 60022-LC-¶228-G; Fuller, Dan - Port Crane, NY, USA.

Accurate Membership Statistics

Amend Discipline ¶ 228 as follows:

- ¶ 228. 1. The local church . . .
2. Care of Members-a) The pastor . . .
b) While primary responsibility . . .

(2) If a professing member whose address is known is residing outside the community and is not participating in the worship or activity of the church, the directives to encourage a transfer of the member shall be followed each year until that member joins another church or requests in writing that the name be removed from the roll of professing members; provided, however, that if after two years the council has not been able to relate that member to the church at the new place of residence, ~~the name may be removed from the roll of members by the pastor, in consultation with the evangelism ministry chairperson, shall recommend that the name be removed from the roll of members according to the procedure of § (4) below.~~

Rationale:

There is too much congregational and regional variation in how often or even if membership rolls are thus updated. Making such removals more clearly mandatory helps ensure greater consistency across the connection in making our membership statistics, and consequent allocation of leadership positions, reflect our church's reality more accurately.

¶228.

Petition Number: 60023-LC-¶228-G; Fuller, Dan - Port Crane, NY, USA.

Accurate Membership Statistics

Amend Discipline ¶ 228 as follows:

- ¶ 228. 1. The local church . . .
2. Care of Members-a) The pastor . . .
b) While primary responsibility . . .

(1) If a professing . . .

(2) If a professing . . .

(3) If the address of a professing member is no longer known to the pastor, the membership secretary and the evangelism ministry group chairperson shall make every effort to locate the member. If the member can be located, the directives of either § (1) or § (2) above shall be followed, but if after two years of such efforts the address is still unknown, ~~the member's name may be removed from the roll of members by the pastor shall recommend that the member's name be removed from the roll of members according to the procedure of § (4) below. . . .~~

Rationale:

Basic Christian honesty should drive us to tell the truth to ourselves and others of our numerical growths and declines, avoiding artificially padding our numbers. This language shift makes such practices to ensure membership-counting integrity more than merely permissible, as was suggested by the word “may.”

PPRC for Charge

¶ 244: Organization: The basic organizational plan for the local church shall include provision for the following units: a charge conference, a church council, ~~a committee on pastor-parish relations~~, a board of trustees, a committee on finance . . .

Rationale:

While Paragraph 258.2 indicates that the committee on Pastor-Parish Relations shall represent the whole charge this paragraph states that each local church shall have such a committee. This petition, in relation to Paragraph 258.2, clarifies that the intention is for a charge-wide committee.

¶244.3.

Petition Number: 60713-LC-¶244.3-G; Case, Riley B. - Kokomo, IN, USA.

Church Council

Amend ¶ 244.3 as follows:

Members of the charge conference shall be persons of genuine Christian character who love the church, affirm its teachings as set forth in the doctrinal standards, are morally disciplined, are committed to the mandate of inclusiveness in the life of the church, are loyal to the ethical standards of The United Methodist Church as set forth in the Social Principles, and are competent to administer its affairs.

Rationale:

Doctrinal standards should get equal time with the Social Principles and inclusiveness.

Powers and Duties of the Charge Conference

Add a new ¶ 247.19 and renumber subsequent paragraphs:

247.19 The charge conference shall promote awareness of and concurrence with the Doctrinal Standards and the General Rules of The United Methodist Church (Discipline, Part II).

Rationale:

Makes this paragraph consistent with ¶ 247.20 by including doctrine with the social positions of the Church.

Local Church Alternatively Conceived

Amend ¶ 247 as indicated.

¶ 247.2. The charge conference, the district superintendent, and the pastor, when a pastor has been appointed (see ¶ 205.4), shall organize and administer the pastoral charge and churches according to the policies and plans herein set forth. When the membership size, program scope, mission resources, or other circumstances so require, the charge conference may, in consultation with and upon the approval of the district superintendent, modify the organizational plans, provided that the provisions of ¶ 243 are observed. Such other circumstances may include, but not be limited to, alternative models for the conception of a local church, such as coffee house ministries, mall ministries, outdoor ministries, retirement home ministries, restaurant ministries, and other emergent ways in which people can gather in God’s name to be the church.

Rationale:

The rigorous structural model of ¶ 244 as the “basic organizational plan for the local church” might not serve well in meeting the needs of people not attuned to historic ways in which the local church has been conceived. More innovative methods must be permitted for us to reach this demographic.

¶251.1.

Petition Number: 60609-LC-¶251.1-G; Backley, Carol R. - Mechanicsburg, PA, USA.

Chairperson of Administrative Council

Amend ¶ 251 to include:

Duties of Leaders and Members—1. Out of the professing membership of each local church (¶ 126), there shall be elected by the charge conference a lay leader who shall function as the primary lay representative of the laity in that local church ~~and~~. In order to secure experience and stability, the lay leader shall be elected for a six-year term and be a certified lay servant or in the process of working on that certificate. The lay leader shall have the following responsibilities:

Rationale:

Titus 1:7-9 lists the qualities of an overseer as “God’s steward . . . blameless—not arrogant, not quick tempered, not given to drunkenness, not greedy for gain, must be hospitable, a lover of goodness, prudent, upright, devout, and self-controlled . . . must have a firm grasp of the word that is trustworthy in accordance . . .

Petition Number: 60608-LC-¶251.3-G; Backley, Carol R. - Mechanicsburg, PA, USA.

Chairperson of Administrative Council

Amend ¶ 251.3:

~~3. The church council chairperson shall be elected by the charge conference and shall have the following responsibilities:~~

3. Out of the professing membership of each local church (¶126), there shall be elected by the charge conference a church council chairperson. In order to secure experience and stability, the church council chairperson shall be elected for a six-year term. The church council chairperson shall have the following responsibilities:

Rationale:

1 Timothy 3:1-7 lists the qualities of an overseer as one who is “above reproach . . . temperate, sensible, self-controlled, respectable, hospitable, an apt teacher, not given to drunkenness, not violent but gentle, not quarrelsome, not a lover of money . . . Council Chair Attendance at SPRC

Amend the final paragraph of ¶ 251.3 as follows:
g) . . .

The church council chairperson shall be entitled to attend meetings of all boards and committees of the church unless specifically limited by the Book of Discipline. This entitlement includes attendance at meetings of the committee on staff-parish relations; however, the church council chairperson shall have no vote. The chairperson is encouraged to attend annual conference.

Rationale:

A policy that chairpersons of Church Council may not attend meetings of the Committee on Staff-Parish Relations, is clearly in opposition to the Book of Discipline. Paragraph 251.3 states in part: “Church Council chairpersons are entitled to attend meetings of all boards and committees . . . unless specifically limited by . . .

Amend ¶ 253 as follows:

¶ 253. Age-Level, Family, and Specialized-Ministries Coordinators (see also ¶ 252)—The charge conference may elect annually a coordinator of children’s ministries, a coordinator of youth ministries, a coordinator of adult ministries, and a coordinator of family ministries. Where young adult and specific age-level ministries would be enhanced, coordinators of young adult and/ or older adult ministries may be elected. Where camps and retreats are part of faith formation across the age span, a coordinator of camp and retreat ministries may be elected. Where there are civic . . .

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church is blessed with one of the most expansive and vital camp and retreat ministries of any denomination. Camps and retreats sponsored by local churches or done connectionally with UM Camp and Retreat centers provide significant opportunities to grow in faith and discipleship.

Supplemental Ministries

Amend ¶ 256 by adding a sub-point 7 as follows:

¶ 256. Program Ministries—The ministries of the local church are offered so that people encounter God’s redeeming love . . .

7. Supplemental Ministries—In view of the fact that the needs of women and men are complex, dynamic, and unique in every congregation, local churches are encouraged to develop a variety of supplemental ministry programs for women and men, in addition to United Methodist Women and United Methodist Men.

Rationale:

Studies show that a variety of women’s and men’s ministry programs is the most effective means of engaging women and men in discipleship and mission. Some congregations have been discouraged from providing additional gender-based ministries out of deference to UMW and UMM. All ministry types are needed in local churches.

Safety

Amend ¶ 256.1 as follows:

1. Local churches or charges ~~are encouraged to~~ shall develop a policy policies and procedures to provide for the safety of the infants, children, ~~and~~ youth, and vulnerable adults entrusted to their care.

The proposed change aligns the language with current expectations of our responsibility to provide safe environments for the most vulnerable in our communities of faith.

Young People’s Ministries

Amend ¶ 256.3 as follows:

3. Young People’s Ministries – The term young people is inclusive of all persons from approximately twelve through thirty years of age in the United States and thirty-five in the Central Conferences. The term encompasses both youth and young-adult ministries and allows for age flexibility given the different age definitions for young people in various cultures around the world. The term youth ministry is an inclusive title, encompassing all the concerns of the Church and all activities by, with, and for youth. The Youth ministry of The United Methodist Church shall include all persons from approximately twelve through eighteen years of age in the United States and up to twenty-four in the Central Conferences, ~~(generally persons in the seventh grade through the twelfth grade,~~ taking into account the grouping of youth in the public schools), who are currently or potentially associated with the church or any of its activities.
