(i) To further educate youth and adults on The United Methodist Church as a connectional church by encouraging and supporting the participation of youth and adults in district, annual, jurisdictional, and central conferences, and other general Church ministries.

(j) To promote and educate persons about the Youth Service Fund.

(k) To promote the camping and retreat ministries within the local church.

(l) To promote, introduce, and encourage youth and young adults to become active in United Methodist campus ministry when they attend a college or university.

~~(m) It is strongly recommended that the council develop a program budget for their ministry.~~

(n)~~(m)~~ To empower youth to be full participants and active leaders in The United Methodist Church

~~(e)~~(n) To consult with the pastor/staff parish relations committee in: 1) developing written job descriptions; 2) nominating; 3) evaluating the job performance of the coordinator/staff for ~~of~~ youth ministries ~~(or related position)~~ and any other volunteer and paid staff related to youth ministry in the local church.

d) the coordinator/staff for young-adult ministries and the young ~~adult council~~ leadership team, when organized, shall be responsible for recommending to the church council the activities, program emphases, and settings for young adults, gather the names and address of all college students to send to the campus minister or chaplain of the college or university the students are attending, encourage college students to participate in United Methodist Campus ministry, and recommend opportunities for the congregation to support and participate with annual conference campus ministries and annual conference related colleges and universities.

Rationale:

These changes clarify the role of and further empower young people for ministry in the local church. The changes also give the local church flexibility in how it organizes its young people's ministries.

¶256.4.

Petition Number: 60269-LC-¶256.4; Hanke, Gilbert C. - Nashville, TN, USA for General Commission on United Methodist Men.

Delete Names

Amend ¶ 256.4 of The Book of Discipline as follows:

¶ 256.4) Scouting ministry through civic youth-serving agencies ~~Civic youth-serving agencies and scouting ministries~~ offer another setting for ministry to children, youth, their leaders, and their families. ~~These opportunities would include the Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts of the USA, Camp Fire USA, 4-H, or other appropriate organizations in the central conferences.~~ The Programs of Religious Activities with Youth (P.R.A.Y.) award program ~~may be~~ is available to all appropriate age-level participants of the local church education program including the church school, youth ministry and scouting ~~ministries~~ ministry.

Rationale:

1. There are many other organizations to which we relate, that are not listed anywhere in the Discipline
2. Each of these organizations as well as the GCUMM can end this relationship with a letter
3. Current lists of endorsed organizations and affiliate organizations will be added to the GCUMM.

¶258.2.

Petition Number: 60055-LC-¶258.2-G; Kenaston, Judi M. - Charleston, WV, USA for West Virginia Annual Conference.

PPRC Membership on Multiple-Point Charges

Amend ¶ 258.2 by deletion as follows:

There shall be elected annually by the charge conference ~~in each local church~~ a committee on pastor-parish relations . . .

Rationale:

Paragraph 258.2 contradicts itself, stating in one place that the Committee on Pastor-Parish Relations is a charge committee representing each local church (2C) and in another that the committee is to be elected “in each local church.” This petition seeks to make clear that this is a charge committee.

¶258.2a.

Petition Number: 60210-LC-¶258.2a-G; Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference.

PPRC Membership

Amend ¶258 as follows:

¶ 258. 2. There shall be elected annually by the charge conference in each local church a committee on pastor-parish relations . . .

a) The committee shall be composed of not fewer than five nor more than nine persons representative of the total charge. One of the members shall be a young adult and one member may be a youth. In addition to the five to nine elected members, the lay leader and a lay member of the annual conference shall be members. No staff member . . .

Rationale:

This clarifies the membership of the pastor-parish relations committee, by specifying that the lay leader and a lay member of the annual conference are in addition to those elected.

¶258.2g12.

Petition Number: 60839-LC-¶258.2g12-G; Schoeni, Elizabeth A. - Prairie Village, KS, USA. 20 Similar Petitions

Responsibilities of S/PPRC

Amend ¶ 258.2g12 as follows:

(12) To recommend to the church council, after consultation with the pastor, the professional, and other staff positions (whether employee or contract) needed to carry out the work of the church or charge. The committee and the pastor shall recommend to the church council a written statement of policy and procedures regarding the process for hiring, contracting, evaluating, promoting, retiring, and dismissing staff personnel who are not subject to episcopal appointment as ordained clergy. ~~Until such a policy has been adopted, the committee and the pastor shall have the authority to hire, contract, evaluate, promote, retire, and dismiss nonappointed personnel.~~ Employment policies for nonappointed personnel shall prohibit discrimination in hiring, contracting, evaluating, promoting, retiring, and dismissing lay staff based on age, race, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, or marital status. When persons are hired or contracted . . .

Rationale:

Discrimination against lay employees on the basis of age, race, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, or marital status diminishes the witness of the Church and harms the applicant and/or employee.

¶258.4.

Petition Number: 60057-LC-¶258.4-G; Kenaston, Judi M. - Charleston, WV, USA for West Virginia Annual Conference.

Financial Leadership Restriction for Clergy Family Members

Amend ¶ 258.4 by addition:

. . . The positions of treasurer and financial secretary should not be combined and held by one person, and the persons holding these two positions should not be immediate family members.

No immediate family members of any appointed clergy may serve as treasurer, finance chair, financial secretary, counter, nor serve in any paid or unpaid position under the responsibilities of the committee on finance, as described herein. These restrictions would apply only to the church or charge where the clergy serves.

The committee on finance shall give . . .

Rationale:

This helps to protect the church and the appointed clergy from even an appearance of impropriety and is similar to the prohibition of family members of appointed clergy serving on the Staff/Pastor Parish Relations Committee (2012 Discipline, 258.2a).

¶258.4.

Petition Number: 60125-LC-¶258.4-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Access to Records

Add the following sentence to the end of the third paragraph of ¶ 258.4:

All members of the committee, including the pastor(s), shall have access to the local church's financial records, including giving records.

Rationale:

Paragraph 340.2c(2)(f) requires elders and licensed pastors to “care for all church records and financial obligations” and to “certify the accuracy of all financial . . . reports submitted by the local church to the annual conference.” Those who serve as pastors of local churches cannot meet these obligations without having access . . .

¶258.4.

Petition Number: 60611-LC-¶258.4-G; Marden, Bonnie - Chelmsford, MA, USA.

Financial Accountability

Amend the third paragraph of ¶ 258.4 as follows:

. . . to meet the budget adopted by the Church Council. To ensure stewardship of donors and relationships with ministry partners, the financial secretary shall review giving records with the pastor, and the trustees shall report all building use agreements to the finance committee for budget development. It shall administer . . .

Rationale:

Giving is part of our membership covenant and healthy planning requires good information and data. Congregational vitality, mission capacity and pastoral care for all members and constituents improves significantly when congregations include the pastor in stewardship of donor relationships and document financial agreements that impact congregational resources.

¶260.

Petition Number: 61009-LC-¶260; Ritter, Chris - Geneseo, IL, USA.

Organic Jurisdictional Solution – Transfer Procedures for Churches

~~Amend ¶ 260: A local church may be transferred from one annual conference to another in which it is geographically located by a two-thirds vote of the professing members who are present and voting in each of the following: (1) the charge conference, (2) a congregational meeting of the local church, and (3) each of the two annual conferences involved. Upon announcement of the required majorities by the bishop or bishops involved, the transfer shall immediately be effective. The vote required may originate in the local church or either of the annual conferences involved and shall be effective regardless of the order in which taken. In each case a two-thirds vote of those present and voting shall remain effective unless and until rescinded prior to the completion of the transfer by a vote of a majority of those present and voting. The following provisions are in effect for any local church in the United States of America:~~

1. Other Disciplinary provisions notwithstanding, a local church may transfer from one annual conference to another by a two-thirds majority vote of the professing members who are present and voting at a church conference under the provisions and limitations elsewhere set forth in this paragraph.

2. A district superintendent shall not refuse the request of a church conference by a for the purpose of considering a new conference affiliation if the following conditions are met:

a) the request is made by the church council (or equivalent body) or 10 percent of the professing membership of the local church, and

b) the request for a church conference is made no less than 48 months from any previous church conference vote on annual conference affiliation, and

c) the cabinet of the annual conference the congregation is seeking to join has indicated by 2/3 majority vote, verified in writing, that they are willing and able to receive and supervise the congregation.

3. The following rules shall be in place for congregations transferring from one annual conference to another:

a) The transfer shall be effective on July 1 of the year following the vote, unless another date is consented upon by the bishop and cabinet of the conference being exited.

b) The local congregation shall continue to pay apportionments to their conference of origin for no less than 18 months following the completion of the transfer, minus apportionments that may directly support benefits paid to for clergy. The congregation shall continue to pay these apportionments for as long as the lead pastor serving at the time of the vote remains appointed to the church. If the apportionments assessed to the local church represent over five percent of the annual budget of the annual conference of origin, the church shall continue to pay apportionments to that conference for an additional 12 months for every full percent over five percent of the annual conference budget that their apportionments represented at the time of their transfer. Congregations, however, must begin paying any clergy benefit support assessed by their new conference from the date of transfer.

c) Annual conferences may forego or decrease the amount of apportionments owed by a transferring church by request from the congregation and a majority affirmative vote of the annual conference session.

d) Annual conferences may assess a share of the liabilities of the conference to exiting churches as long as these liabilities are offset by the assets of the conference calculated by the same proportional formula.

e) The local congregation shall not begin paying apportionments to their new conference until all apportionments owed to their conference of origin from the time of transfer are fully paid, except for apportionment categories that directly support the benefits owed to the clergy.

f) Lay members of annual conference shall be entitled to attend and vote at the session of the annual conference they are exiting while transfer is pending but shall not be eligible for election as a delegate from that annual conference to either jurisdictional conference or General Conference.

Rationale:

This is one piece of a larger legislative agenda to achieve amicable unity in The UMC through the “Organic Jurisdictional Solution.” This item defines a fair process whereby congregations may transfer to a new annual conference. Transfers may be necessary to avoid violations of conscience. See jurisdictionalsolution.org.

¶2500. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60811-LC-¶2500-G; Dragonette, Karin - Reynoldsburg, OH, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Disaffiliation

Add new paragraph

¶ 2548. Surrender of Charter of Local Church and Disaffiliation For Reasons Of Conscience—A local church may surrender its charter from The United Methodist Church and disaffiliate based on the local church’s declaration that it is in irreconcilable conflict for reasons of conscience with the provisions of The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church on the practice of homosexuality and the blessing of homosexual unions. Such disaffiliation shall require:

a) A minimum of ninety (90) days of study and discernment by the congregation

b) The affirmative vote of two-thirds (66.7 percent) of the church’s professing members present and voting at a duly called church conference

c) Other provisions of the Book of Discipline shall not be a bar to such disaffiliation

Upon such surrender and disaffiliation, the local church shall be released from the provisions of ¶ 2501 and shall retain full rights to its property and funds, provided that any debts upon such property and any other debts payable by that local church are assumed by that local church. In the event of such proposed action, the bishop, the cabinet, annual conference board of trustees, and other appropriate individuals of The United Methodist Church shall facilitate the orderly and timely administration of this process.

[Renumber following paragraphs from existing ¶¶ 2548-2551.]

Rationale:

A covenant enforced only by legal strictures cannot have the moral force or spiritual cohesiveness required for true unity in Christ or the church. Our covenant must not be enforced only trust clauses and pension programs, but by a willingness to walk together and live by the covenant in agreement . . .

¶2500. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60812-LC-¶2500-G; Graves, Russ - Melbourne, FL, USA. 9 Similar Petitions

Disaffiliation

Add new ¶ 2548 as follows:

¶ 2548. Surrender of Charter of Local Church and Disaffiliation for Reasons of Conscience—Because of the current deep conflict over the church’s position on the practice of homosexuality and the blessing of homosexual unions, a local church may surrender its charter from The United Methodist Church and disaffiliate based upon the local church's declaration that for reasons of conscience, witness, or mission it can better serve Christ and his kingdom by not being affiliated with The United Methodist Church and its annual conference. Such disaffiliation shall require:

a) A minimum of ninety (90) days of study and discernment by the congregation

b) The affirmative vote of two-thirds (66.7 percent) of the church's professing members present and voting at a duly called church conference

c) Repayment to the annual conference any money invested by the conference in that local church through grants or loans during the previous five (5) years. The amount to be repaid shall include any payments made to the local church's clergy by the annual conference, such as salary support, but shall not include subsidies to provide health insurance.

d) Payment to the annual conference of its current year's apportionments in full and an additional sum equal to two times the current year's apportionments

e) Other provisions of the Book of Discipline shall not be a bar to such disaffiliation.

Upon such surrender and disaffiliation, the local church shall be released from the provisions of ¶ 2501 and shall retain full rights to its property and funds, provided that any debts upon such property and any other debts payable by that local church are assumed by that local church. In the event of such proposed disaffiliation, the bishop, the cabinet, annual conference board of trustees, and other appropriate individuals of The United Methodist Church shall facilitate the orderly and timely administration of this process.

[Renumber following paragraphs from existing ¶¶ 2548-2551.]

Rationale:

Despite efforts to preserve unity in the Church, irreconcilable differences persist regarding the practice of homosexuality. The Church needs to value the consciences of our people and provide an honorable way for those whose consciences are violated to disaffiliate without the loss of property and in a ministry-affirming way. For . . .

¶2533.2.

Petition Number: 60158-LC-¶2533.2; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Adequate Insurance Coverage

Amend ¶ 2533.2 as follows:

The board of trustees shall ~~review~~ annually compare the existence and adequacy of the property, liability, and crime church's insurance coverages to an insurance schedule annually published by the General Council on Finance and Administration on church-owned property, buildings, and equipment. The board of trustees shall also review annually the adequacy of personnel insurance. The purpose of ~~these~~ this reviews is to ensure that the church, its properties, and its personnel are properly protected against risks. The board shall include in its report to the charge conference (¶ 2550.7) the results of its review and ~~any~~ recommendations needed to timely bring the church into compliance with the published schedule it deems necessary.

Rationale:

This change provides guidance and empowerment to local church boards of trustees in ensuring that the assets of the denomination are protected by adequate insurance coverages.

¶2533.6.

Petition Number: 60739-LC-¶2533.6-G; McCart, Sharon Rae - Irvine, CA, USA for DisAbility Ministries Committee of The UMC - Global Health - GBGM.

Accessibility Audits

Amend Discipline ¶ 2533.6

The board of trustees, ~~in cooperation with the health and welfare ministries representative,~~ shall conduct or cause to be conducted an annual accessibility audit of their buildings, grounds, and facilities to discover and identify what physical, architectural, and communication barriers exist that impede the full participation of people with disabilities and shall make plans and determine priorities for the elimination of all such barriers. It is highly encouraged that members of the congregation or from the community who have disabilities, who are family members of persons with disabilities, and who are builders or architects or rehabilitation professionals be involved in conducting the audit. The Accessibility Audit for churches shall be used in filling out the annual church and/or charge conference reports. A copy of the audit will be submitted to the conference disability concerns committee or other conference entity having the responsibility for disability concerns.

Rationale:

Including people familiar with accessibility requirements and individual needs makes an audit much more effective. Submitting the audit to the disability concerns committee enables tracking and allows the committee to offer assistance (financial or otherwise) where needed.

¶2549.

Petition Number: 60004-LC-¶2549-G; Paige, Peggy - Ingalls, MI, USA for UM Rural Advocates.

Disposition of Closed Local Church Property

Delete ¶ 2549 and replace with the following:

¶ 2549. Disposition of Property of a Closed Local Church—1. Except as provided in ¶ 2548.3, the district superintendent may, pursuant to this paragraph, recommend the closure of a local church, upon a finding that:

a) The local church no longer serves the purpose for which it was organized or incorporated (¶¶ 201-204); or

b) The local church property is no longer used, kept, or maintained by its membership as a place of divine worship of The United Methodist Church.

2. Procedure—a) Prior to a recommendation to close a local church, the district superintendent shall:

(1) Guide the congregation in an assessment of its potential as outlined in ¶ 213, in consultation with the appropriate agency assigned the responsibility of the conference parish and community development strategy;

(2) Obtain and consider an opinion of legal counsel as to the existence of any reversion, possibility of reverter, right of reacquisition, or similar restrictions to the benefit of any party;

(3) Develop, in consultation with the appropriate district board of church location and building, a plan for the future use of all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property of the local church; and

(4) Develop a plan for the transfer of the membership of the local church (¶ 229).

b) Upon a recommendation by the district superintendent, and with the consent of the presiding bishop, a majority of the district superintendents, and the appropriate district board of church location and building, the annual conference may declare a local church closed. If the annual conference closes a local church, title to all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property of the local church shall immediately vest in the annual conference board of trustees, who shall hold said property in trust for the benefit of the annual conference.

c) The annual conference board of trustees may retain, sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of the property of a closed local church in accordance with the direction of the annual conference, if any. It shall be the duty of the annual conference board of trustees to remove, insofar as reasonably practicable or necessary, all Christian and United Methodist insignia and symbols from such property. In the event of loss, damage to, or destruction of such local church property, the annual conference board of trustees, as the duly and legally authorized representative of such local church, is authorized to make a claim for, and collect on, any applicable insurance policies. If the annual conference board of trustees sells or leases the property, consideration should be given to selling or leasing the property to one of the other denominations represented in the Commission on Pan-Methodist Cooperation and Union.

d) If the annual conference closes any local church, the failure to complete any of the prior steps will not invalidate such closure.

3. Ad Interim Procedures—a) At any time between sessions of annual conference, a local church may voluntarily transfer title to all its real and personal, tangible and intangible property to the annual conference board of trustees following the procedures set forth in ¶ 2540 or ¶ 2541. In such case, the annual conference board of trustees shall hold or dispose of such property in its sole discretion, subject to any standing rule of the annual conference. When it next meets, the annual conference shall decide whether to formally close the local church.

b) At any time between sessions of annual conference, if the presiding bishop, the majority of the district superintendents, and the appropriate district board of church location and building all consent, they may, in their sole discretion, declare that exigent circumstances exist that require immediate protection of the local church's property, for the benefit of the denomination. In such case, title to all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property of the local church shall immediately vest in the annual conference board of trustees who may hold or dispose of such property in its sole discretion, subject to any standing rule of the annual conference. Exigent circumstances include, but are not limited to, situations where a local church no longer serves the purpose for which it was organized or incorporated (¶¶ 201-204) or where the local church property is no longer used, kept, or maintained by its membership as a place of divine worship of The United Methodist Church. When it next meets, the annual conference shall decide whether to formally close the local church.

4. All the deeds, records, and other official and legal papers, including the contents of the cornerstone, of a closed local church shall be collected by the district superintendent and shall be deposited for permanent safekeeping with the annual conference commission on archives and history.

5. The annual conference board of trustees shall review all gifts held in trust, assets of any endowment funds, and assets of any foundation of the closed local church.

The annual conference board of trustees shall dispose of the property in its discretion, unless otherwise directed by the annual conference or as required by law.

6. Any gift, legacy, devise, annuity, or other benefit that accrues to a closed local church shall become the property of the annual conference board of trustees. The annual conference board of trustees shall dispose of the property in its discretion, unless otherwise directed by the annual conference or as required by law.

7. If a local church in an urban center with more than 50,000 population is closed, any proceeds of the sale of its property must be used for new and/or existing ministries within urban transitional communities, as described in ¶ 212, and consistent with the annual conference's urban ministry strategic plan.

8. Upon the discontinuance or abandonment of a local church, the gift of said property may be made to an organization that is a nonprofit and has values consistent with The United Methodist Church's values and consistent with our Wesleyan heritage, theology, and United Methodist polity that will begin, enhance, or continue the work and vision of ministry with the poor in that community.

Rationale:

This rewrite removes confusing language and terminology, more clearly outlines the steps that must be taken to close a local church, and describes how to manage the closed church's property. It also gives an option for the gift of the property to enhance the ministry with the poor in rural . . .

¶2549.

Petition Number: 60104-LC-¶2549-G; Stanovsky, Elaine - Greenwood Village, CO, USA for General Board of Discipleship.

Disposition of Local Church Property

Amend ¶ 2549 as follows:

Discontinuation or Abandonment of Local Church Property — 1. Prior to a recommendation by a district superintendent to discontinue the use of church property as a local church pursuant to ¶ 2549.2 hereof, or before any action by the annual conference trustees with regard to the assumption of any local church property considered to be abandoned pursuant to ¶ 2549.3, the district superintendent should obtain and consider an opinion of legal counsel as to the existence of any reversion, possibility of reverter, right of reacquisition, or similar restrictions to the benefit of any party.

2. Discontinuation — a) Prior to a recommendation of the district superintendent, in consultation with the appropriate agency assigned the responsibility of the conference ~~parish and community congregational~~ development strategy, that a local church be discontinued, the district superintendent shall guide the congregation in an assessment of its potential as outlined in ¶ 213. A recommendation of discontinuance shall include recommendation-s as to ~~the future use of the property and where the membership (¶ 229) and the title to all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property~~ of the local church shall be transferred. On such recommendation that a local church no longer serves the purpose for which it was organized and incorporated (¶¶ 201-204), with the consent of the presiding bishop and of a majority of the district superintendents and the district board of church location and building of the district in which the action is contemplated, the annual conference may declare any local church within its bounds discontinued.

~~b) If a church has been discontinued by the annual conference without direction concerning the disposition of the property, the real and personal, tangible and intangible property shall be disposed of as if it were abandoned local church property (¶2549.3).~~

~~e b) If the annual conference declares any local church discontinued, the failure to complete any of the prior steps will not invalidate such discontinuance.~~

3. Abandonment — When a local church property is no longer used, kept, or maintained by its membership as a place of divine worship, the property shall be considered abandoned, and when a local church no longer serves the purpose for which it was organized and incorporated (¶¶ 201-204), with the consent of the presiding bishop, a majority of the district superintendents, and of the district board of church location and building, the annual conference trustees may assume control of the real and personal, tangible and intangible property. If circumstances make immediate action necessary, the conference trustees should give first option to the other denominations represented in the Commission on Pan-Methodist Cooperation and Union. The conference trustees may proceed to sell or lease said property, retain the proceeds in an interest-bearing account, and ~~recommend the disposition of the proceeds in keeping with annual conference policy. utilize the proceeds in keeping with ¶ 2549.5.~~ It shall be the duty of the annual conference trustees to remove, insofar as reasonably possible, all Christian and church insignia and symbols from such property. In the event of loss, damage to, or destruction of such local church property, the trustees of the annual conference are authorized to collect and receipt for any insurance payable on account thereof as the duly and legally authorized representative of such local church.¹⁰

4. All the deeds, records, and other official and legal papers, including the contents of the cornerstone, of a church that is so declared to be abandoned or otherwise discontinued shall be collected by the district superintendent in whose district said church was located and shall be deposited for permanent safekeeping with the commission on archives and history of the annual conference.

5. ~~All gifts held in trust, assets of any endowment funds, and assets of any foundation of the church, shall be reviewed as part of assets of any foundation of the church, shall be reviewed as part of the discontinuance or abandonment. All such assets shall pass as directed by the annual conference, unless otherwise directed by operation of law. The annual conference board of trustees are encouraged to use the net proceeds (sale price less all expenses incurred and including, but not limited to, insurance, taxes, or the maintenance, repair, management, marketing or sale of the property) resulting from the sale of real estate, including land, church buildings, and parsonages, as the result the closing and sale of a discontinued or abandoned church property, to provide land and buildings for new churches, new faith communities, new missional ministries, relocating churches, and churches building multi-campus facilities for the purpose of evangelistic church extension. The funds, including any accrued interest or dividend, are encouraged to be used wherever in the annual conference they are most needed, without regard to district boundaries, except as restricted in ¶ 2549.7. The bishop and cabinet are encouraged to consult with the annual conference staff person and/or the conference agency responsible for new church development to determine the best use of the funds. The Bishop and Cabinet are encouraged to make final determination of the disbursement of such funds.~~

6. ~~Any gifts, legacy, devise, annuity, or other benefit to a pastoral charge or local church. Other property and assets, including tangible and intangible property, gifts held in trust, assets of any endowment funds, assets of any foundation of the church, and any similar asset that accrues or becomes available after a church has been discontinued or abandoned, may be utilized by the conference board of trustees in accordance with annual conference policy. It is recommended that preference are encouraged to be given to purposes and programs aimed at starting new churches, new faith communities, new missional ministries, relocating churches, and churches building multi-campus facilities for the purpose of evangelistic church extension, when determining how these assets of discontinued or abandoned churches are used.~~

Rationale:

The proposed change provides a consistent funding source within an Annual Conference for the purpose of evangelistic church extensions through starting new churches and new faith communities.

¶2549.

Petition Number: 60159-LC-¶2549-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration. 1 Similar Petition

Property of Closed Churches

Delete ¶ 2549 and replace with the following:

¶ 2549. Disposition of Property of a Closed Local Church—1. Except as provided in ¶ 2549.3, the district superintendent may, pursuant to this paragraph, recommend the closure of a local church, upon a finding that:

- a) The local church no longer serves the purpose for which it was organized or incorporated (¶¶ 201-204); or
- b) The local church property is no longer used, kept, or maintained by its membership as a place of divine worship of The United Methodist Church.

2. Procedure—a) Prior to a recommendation to close a local church, the district superintendent shall:

(1) Guide the congregation in an assessment of its potential as outlined in ¶ 213, in consultation with the appropriate agency assigned the responsibility of the conference parish and community development strategy;

(2) Obtain and consider an opinion of legal counsel as to the existence of any reversion, possibility of reverter, right of reacquisition, or similar restrictions to the benefit of any party;

(3) Develop, in consultation with the appropriate district board of church location and building, a plan for the future use of all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property of the local church; and

(4) Develop a plan for the transfer of the membership of the local church (¶ 229).

b) Upon a recommendation by the district superintendent, and with the consent of the presiding bishop, a majority of the district superintendents, and the appropriate district board of church location and building, the annual conference may declare a local church closed. If the annual conference closes a local church, title to all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property of the local church shall immediately vest in the annual conference board of trustees, who shall hold said property in trust for the benefit of the annual conference.

c) The annual conference board of trustees may retain, sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of the property of a closed local church in accordance with the direction of the annual conference, if any. It shall be the duty of the annual conference board of trustees to remove, insofar as reasonably practicable or necessary, all Christian and United Methodist insignia and symbols from such property. In the event of loss, damage to, or destruction of such local church property, the annual conference board of trustees, as the duly and legally authorized representative of such local church, is authorized to make a claim for, and collect on, any applicable insurance policies. If the annual conference board of trustees sells or leases the property, consideration should be given to selling or leasing the property to one of the other denominations represented in the Commission on Pan-Methodist Cooperation and Union.

d) If the annual conference closes any local church, the failure to complete any of the prior steps will not invalidate such closure.

3. Ad Interim Procedures—a) At any time between sessions of annual conference, a local church may voluntarily transfer title to all its real and personal, tangible and intangible property to the annual conference board of trustees following the procedures set forth in ¶ 2540 or ¶ 2541. In such case, the annual conference board of trustees shall hold or dispose of such property in its sole discretion, subject to any standing rule of the annual conference. When it next meets, the annual conference shall decide whether to formally close the local church.

b) At any time between sessions of annual conference, if the presiding bishop, the majority of the district superintendents, and the appropriate district board of church location and building all consent, they may, in their sole discretion, declare that exigent circumstances exist that require immediate protection of the local church's property, for the benefit of the denomination. In such case, title to all the real and personal, tangible and intangible property of the local church shall immediately vest in the annual conference board of trustees who may hold or dispose of such property in its sole discretion, subject to any standing rule of the annual conference. Exigent circumstances include, but are not limited to, situations where a local church no longer serves the purpose for which it was organized or incorporated (¶¶ 201-204) or where the local church property is no longer used, kept, or maintained by its membership as a place of divine worship of The United Methodist Church. When it next meets, the annual conference shall decide whether to formally close the local church.

4. All the deeds, records, and other official and legal papers, including the contents of the cornerstone, of a closed local church shall be collected by the district superintendent and shall be deposited for permanent safekeeping with the annual conference commission on archives and history.

5. The annual conference board of trustees shall review all gifts held in trust, assets of any endowment funds, and assets of any foundation of the closed local church. The annual conference board of trustees shall dispose of the property in its discretion, unless otherwise directed by the annual conference or as required by law.

6. Any gift, legacy, devise, annuity, or other benefit that accrues to a closed local church shall become the property of the annual conference board of trustees. The annual conference board of trustees shall dispose of the property in its discretion, unless otherwise directed by the annual conference or as required by law.

7. If a local church in an urban center with more than 50,000 population is closed, any proceeds of the sale of its property must be used for new and/or existing ministries within urban transitional communities, as described in ¶ 212, and consistent with the annual conference's urban ministry strategic plan.

Rationale:

This rewrite removes confusing language and terminology, more clearly outlines the steps that must be taken to close a local church, and describes how to manage the closed church's property.

¶2551.

Petition Number: 60873-LC-¶2551; Galvan, Elias - USA for Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic Latino Americans.

Covenant Relationships in Multi-Ethnic and Multi-Language Settings

¶ 2551. Covenant Relationships in Multi-Ethnic and Multi-Language Settings—Ministry in the UMC tradition is about partnership and mission. In situations where a local church or churches share a building with a congregation or with another group performing ministries in different languages and/or with different racial and ethnic groups; it shall be in accordance with ¶¶ 202, 206, and 212. The district superintendent must consent to any such action before implementation. The district board of church location and building must be informed of such action.

1. If the congregations are United Methodist, the following shall apply:

a) By action of the charge conference(s) involved, a covenant relationship shall be mutually agreed upon in written form and shall include a statement of purpose for sharing the facility and shall state whether the agreement is seen as temporary, long-term, or permanent. The covenant of relationship may provide for mutual representation on such bodies as church council and other committees and work groups. The board of trustees of the church that holds title to the property may form a property committee composed of representatives of each congregation. The purpose of this arrangement is to enhance communication between the two or more congregations, to coordinate schedules and building usage, to involve the congregations in building maintenance and care under supervision of the board of trustees, and to coordinate cooperative programs.

b) The covenant relationship shall not require that a United Methodist congregation pay rent to another United Methodist church, or a United Methodist community of faith or a social ministry. ~~However, each congregation~~

~~should be expected to pay a mutually agreed share of building expenses.~~ The financial relationship established in the covenant is neither intended to generate profit nor to support the general budget (other than utilities) of the receiving local church or any other entity involved in the sharing of the facilities.

Rationale:

There are an increased number of new United Methodist ministries emerging as a result of outreaching racial ethnic people who need to share facilities with existing congregations. The covenant relationship between United Methodist groups needs to be done in a spirit of collaboration and connectionalism between the groups involved.

Proposed Resolutions

R9999.

Petition Number: 60844-LC-R9999-G; Kiser, Kathryn - Carrollton, TX, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Women's Ministry

WHEREAS, the Call to Action Project, adopted by the Council of Bishops and the Connectional Table, concludes that congregational vitality must be the first priority over the next decade for The United Methodist Church to be effective in its mission and change the path of membership decline;

WHEREAS, the report (Call to Action Final Report, p. 20) proposes that intense concentration be given to building effective practices in local churches using the drivers of Vital Congregations, and that attention and resources should be directed toward enriching and extending high-quality ministries in and through congregations as the primary arenas for making disciples (CTA, p. 20), (also see ¶¶ 201 and 202, 2012 Book of Discipline);

WHEREAS, "multiple small groups and programs have been determined to be a key driver of Vital Congregations" (CTA, p. 21);

WHEREAS, the report recommends that the church should demonstrate "profound respect for and then encourage and celebrate diversity in the ways churches apply the drivers of vitality that fit their local contexts" (CTA, p. 21);

WHEREAS, the report states emphatically that "rule-bound structures inhibit innovation, continuous renewal, and viability, a key responsibility of leaders is to suspend rules in order to test and assess the efficacy of new, worthy ideas" (CTA, p. 21);

WHEREAS, women make up 57 percent of The United Methodist Church and approximately 12 percent of those women participate in the only official women's ministry of the UMC through United Methodist Women (statistics derives from General Commission on Finance and Administration 2013 annual report);

WHEREAS, the needs of women today are complex, dynamic, and unique in every congregation and studies show that a variety of women's ministry programs is the most effective means of enabling and encouraging women to grow deeper in their relationship with Jesus Christ, to serve effectively in their local church, and to serve passionately in mission outreach to a lost and hurting world.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church encourages the local church to provide supplemental women's ministry programs, in addition to United Methodist Women, that fit the unique needs of the women in the church.

Ministry and Higher Education/Superintendency

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Volume 2

Nashville, Tennessee

Summary Report of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry

Preparing Leaders for a Vital Worldwide Church

The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) invites, equips, and supports faithful and effective clergy and lay leaders for congregations and the world. In partnership with other agencies, higher education institutions, and church leaders, GBHEM has shaped a new understanding of how to support emerging leaders discerning God's call in The United Methodist Church (UMC).

Access to Education

Clergy and lay leaders are formed in the United Methodist (UM) tradition through our network of institutions around the world. In Africa, we support hundreds of schools, 16 theological seminaries and 18 institutions of higher education. In Asia, our schools, colleges, and theological seminaries in Cambodia, Philippines, and Vietnam are part of the thriving Asia-Pacific Association of Methodist-related Educational Institutions. In Europe, nearly 20 theological seminaries are connected to GBHEM through the Methodist-related Theological Schools in Europe. In Latin America, we work closely with the Latin American Association of Methodist Educational Institutions. In the United States, there are 13 United Methodist theological schools. Our 97 UM-related schools, colleges, and universities in the U.S. and 520 collegiate ministries expand the denomination's diversity and prepare the next generation of leaders from and for the worldwide community.

In collaboration with Discipleship Ministries, GBHEM launched the E-Reader Project to offer affordable, reliable access to textbooks, reference books, the Bible and Wesleyan resources in English, French, and Portuguese to faculty and students of 22 UM-related theological institutions in Africa and Asia and 4 seminaries in the Philippines. Visit www.umcereader.org.

The Office of Loans & Scholarships administers over 90 loan and scholarship programs and awards $5 million in financial assistance annually to UM undergraduate and theological students. Since 2013, $11.5 million (including $4 million to 1,895 seminarians and $680,000 to 285 international students) in scholarships has been awarded to 7,622 students enrolled in higher education institutions in the U.S. Overall, 40 percent of scholarships were awarded to students who identified as racial-ethnic.

The Ministerial Education Fund (MEF) supports the 13 UM theological schools in the U.S. and the Course of Study theological education programs for elders, deacons, and local pastors. MEF also supports continuing education for clergy, funds Boards of Ordained Ministry in clergy recruitment and education initiatives, and underwrites GBHEM ministry programming.

Creating a "Culture of Call"

Almost every United Methodist—lay and clergy—can name a church member who inspired, influenced, and encouraged them at some point in their journey, to consider a particular vocation or to pursue a gift. Congregational vitality begins in local churches, where faith is formed and nurtured in people of all ages, especially the young.

GBHEM leads a multiagency collaboration on a new resource—Called: One Word, Many Ways—that equips congregations to speak the language of call and move disciples of all ages to discover and nurture vocations. Focused attention to call will contribute to the health and vitality of the individual's faith, the community, and the Church. Visit www.explorecalling.org/called.

Supporting Clergy Leaders

The Effective Ministry Assessment is a new GBHEM resource resulting from over a decade of broad, deep research across the Church. Through covenant-building, the pastor and congregational leaders assess the pastor's performance based on needs of their particular ministry context. This assessment fosters effectiveness, support, and accountability for clergy and congregational lay leaders by providing the structure for a healthy, constructive conversation among the pastor, Staff-Parish Relations Committee, and district superintendent.

The United Methodist Candidate and Record Entry System (UMCARES) launched in February 2015. UMCARES tracks psychological assessments, reference forms, and completed candidacy tasks for each candidate, with more than 5,000 users annually including Boards of Ordained Ministry officers, district superintendents, and candidates. UMCARES is instrumental in determining qualifications for scholarships and MEF distribution to UM theological schools.

Pastors who serve in a specialized environment benefit from Module III Workshops, a part of the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry and other programs. GBHEM supports four U.S. Ethnic Centers—Pacific/Asian American, Hispanic/Latino, Multi-Ethnic, and Native American—that recruit and prepare ethnic UM men and women for leadership positions in the Church.

The UMC Cyber Campus is an online gateway for Wesleyan-based theological and higher education for lay and clergy. The website provides a single entry point to free and affordable high quality, church-related leadership resources in a worldwide, multilingual Christian learning space. Visit www.umccybercampus.com.

The United Methodist Endorsing Agency (UMEA) validates credentials, advocates for and supports endorsed clergy in ministry beyond church walls. Currently, 1,670 clergy are in relationship with UMEA (1,263 endorsed; 407 ecclesiastically approved). Collaborating with The UMC's ecumenical officer and other church leaders, UMEA has worked to establish new ways to endorse and support the work of chaplains through a covenant established with Pan-Methodist denominations.

Strengthening Higher Education in the UM Tradition

The Africa University Fund supports the critical mission of Africa University. Currently, 1,475 students are enrolled full-time at the campus near Mutare, Zimbabwe. With the installation in March 2015 of Professor Munashe Furusa as the university's fourth vice chancellor, the institution is focused on increasing its relevance and impact. More than 6,000 graduates are participating in Africa's transformation and serving in significant leadership roles across Africa. Faithful connectional support has built a permanent endowment of more than $64 million, and the university is currently in a campaign to increase that total by $50 million.

The University Senate is charged "to provide an effective review process to ensure UM-related schools, colleges, universities, and theological schools listed by the University Senate and qualifying for Church support have institutional integrity, well-structured programs, sound management and clearly defined Church relationships" (Book of Discipline, ¶ 1415.3). The Senate has updated its Guidelines and procedures to more faithfully carry out its consultative, collegial role with institutions by transitioning from a regulatory to a capacity-building agency focused more on church-relatedness and less on areas evaluated by regional accrediting bodies.

The International Association of Methodist Schools, Colleges, and Universities (IAMSCU) develops cooperative and supportive relationships among the approximately 800 educational institutions in the Methodist tradition worldwide so institutions can learn from and strengthen each other while sharing resources (e.g., student and faculty exchange). IAMSCU promotes the development of quality, value-centered education and increases the availability of educational opportunities throughout the world. IAMSCU's 2014 triennial meeting in Hiroshima, Japan, focused on "Peace, Reconciliation, and Human Rights" with record attendance from nearly 50 countries.

The Methodist Global Education Fund for Leadership Development (MGEFLD) offers technical assistance, scholarships, and fundraising training. MGEFLD has established five regional hubs in Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and North America to share expertise and assistance. Visit methodistglobaleducation.org.

The National Association of Schools and Colleges of The UMC, a 75-year-old network of presidents and deans of Methodist-related educational institutions in the U.S., gathers biannually to strengthen their institutions' UM ties. At the February 2015 meeting, attendees unanimously adopted a resolution to "give leadership on behalf of social justice and human dignity by developing new patterns and practices of communication and by attending to questions of justice within [their] institutions."

The Black College Fund supports 11 UM-related historically black colleges and universities and demonstrates the Church's continued commitment to access and empowerment through higher education. Church support allows these institutions to advance research, maintain facilities, and create a nurturing environment for over 15,000 students (many, the first in their families to attend college).

Integration of Sustainable Environmental Practices

GBHEM has implemented e-filing for the Loans and Scholarships, Clergy Lifelong Learning, and Candidacy offices. GBHEM has increased the use of online seminars to reduce travel. The agency requires recycling in offices and meeting rooms.

Initiatives Established by General Conference 2012

Find full reports on these initiatives at www.gbhem.org/gc16.

If current trends continue, The UMC will face a shortage of trained ordained elders to serve local congregations by 2032. The $7 million Young Clergy Initiative Fund, administered by GBHEM and designed to "increase the number of young clergy among the jurisdictional conferences," awarded 76 grant recipients and doubled the investment in the 2013-2016 quadrennium by encouraging grant recipients to secure additional funding.

Administered by GBHEM, the Central Conference Theological Education Fund is overseen by a commission named by the Council of Bishops. The commission met annually to review grant proposals aimed at bolstering the work of theological education in central conferences and awarded $1 million each year of the 2013-2016 quadrennium.

The Seminary Indebtedness Task Force, charged with creating a denominational plan to reduce and eliminate seminary debt for ordained ministry candidates, presented a report to the Council of Bishops and Connectional Table in 2015.

Summary Report of the Young Clergy Initiative Fund

General Conference 2012 created the Young Clergy Initiative (YCI) Fund, as follows:

There shall be a Young Clergy Initiative Fund which provides support to increase the number of young clergy among the jurisdictional conferences. This begins a three-quadrannium effort to enable The United Methodist Church to focus efforts on encouraging young adults who wish to respond to the call to ordained ministry to receive a strong theological education in the United Methodist tradition in preparation for ordination. This initiative is in addition to the funds that the church already has budgeted for discernment, recruitment, nurturing, education, and support of young clergy leaders.

The agencies, in collaboration with Boards of Ordained Ministry, seminaries, bishops, and cabinets will determine the most effective use of the Young Clergy Initiative Fund in response to the need for young clergy leaders to reach their own generation and those younger generations. With measured success, it is hoped that the next General Conference will increase this investment. The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry will administer this designated fund.

In August 2012, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) hosted a Young Clergy Summit with young adult candidates, clergy, and annual conference representatives to define the triumphs and challenges faced by young adults during the ordination process and establish goals to guide the fund's use.

GBHEM organized an advisory team to develop a grant program for supporting projects that promote systemic denominational change. Grant applications were evaluated on the project's potential to: prepare young people to hear God's call to ordained ministry; assist young people in responding to God's call to ordained ministry; develop young people in spiritual and theological formation; and nurture young clergy for lifelong transformational ministry.

Two rounds of grants were awarded in May 2014 and October 2014, with up to $100,000 available per application. In total, YCI received 164 applications and awarded 78 projects.

The jurisdictional distribution for awards was as follows:

Jurisdiction	Number Awarded	Percent of applications awarded
North Central	13	60%
Northeastern	8	42%
South Central	16	40%
Southeastern	32	48%
Western	9	60%

Awards fell into six main categories:

- Covenant groups with peers;
- Call exploration events;
- Internships;
- Intentional communities;
- Mentoring experiences;
- Missional immersion experiences.

A full list of YCI grant recipients can be found at www.explorecalling.org/yci/awards.

Three projects are highlighted here:

Project Transformation

Project Transformation (PT) invites young adults discerning a vocational call to ministry to serve with children experiencing poverty and at-risk for lower educational accomplishments. The grant enabled PT to expand from a regional to a national ministry. In 2014, there were 183 young adults in ministry to more than 2,000 children. Participant Justin Mayo said, "In finding community, in sharing my story, in serving others at PT—I am being transformed. I'm now finishing my sophomore year at college, where I've gotten more involved with my campus ministry at the Wesley Foundation. I have switched my major to Social Work. I now sing in a gospel choir at my church. I feel more at peace. While my relationship with God isn't perfect, I'm trying to be open to God's path for me."

The Raices Latinas Institute

The Boston University School of Theology organized the Raices Latinas Institute to help Hispanic/Latino students better discern God's call to ordained ministry. During its first year, the institute engaged 48 master's-level students and facilitated space to nurture new generations of Hispanic/Latino religious leaders. One participant, Cesar Esteves, reported, "I was encouraged to think about the implications of my spiritual beliefs while helping me realize this is a constant process I must engage in, especially through dialogue with my community."

Called: One Word, Many Ways

Similar project requests from three annual conferences were combined to plan and launch a new churchwide vocational discernment resource. This resource, Called: One Word, Many Ways, was a collaboration among GBHEM, Discipleship Ministries, United Methodist Communications, and the Forum for Theological Exploration. Contributors represented a broad diversity among age, gender, nationality, and race; location of ministry; deacons; and elders. Resources include sermon starters, graphics, liturgical resources, videos, retreat plans and educational material for children, youth, and other small groups. Called will be updated annually and available for free download at www.explorecalling.org/called.

Distribution of Funds

Nonprofit Organizations

Grants were awarded to nonprofit organizations related to an annual conference, church, college, university, or theological school.

Matching Support and Additional Funding

Grant recipients were encouraged to seek additional project support from other sources. Grant leaders secured supplemental funds from annual conference initiatives, special collections within local churches, districts, colleges, universities, theological schools, endowments, and more. By seeking additional funding, projects could increase the scope of their work and expand the impact of the YCI awards. In total, grant recipients raised an additional $6.8 million, nearly doubling the General Conference's investment in ministry discernment and young clergy development.

Direct Scholarships and Debt Relief

Much consideration was given to using the fund for direct scholarship support and debt relief for candidates and clergy. In considering the most strategic and far-reaching ways to utilize the fund, the leadership team discerned that direct support for individuals would not allow the fund to reach its potential for systemic denominational change.

The number of people the fund would be able to directly support was drastically fewer than the number of those who could benefit from the diversity of projects that were ultimately awarded.

Given the fund's $7 million allocation and the average amount of seminarian debt accumulated by graduation ($66,367.45), direct support could assist only 105 of the 2,162 young adult candidates and clergy in the Church. Even if the YCI Fund awarded $10,000 grants to individuals, the fund would be able to assist about 700 people. While direct support initially appeared promising, the fund's size could not help a substantial percentage of young adult candidates and clergy if awarded to individuals. Additionally, direct support would not lay the groundwork for systemic change in the recruitment and development of young clergy.

YCI Evaluation

One of the challenges in evaluating the fund's success is seeing immediate change in its primary desired outcome—to "increase the number of young clergy among the jurisdictional conferences." New projects may not produce young clergy for many years given the time it takes to be ordained; therefore, evaluation currently is gauged by measuring behaviors and intentions as early success indicators. Each project's timeline and context varies. Reports are collected and posted as each project begins and concludes at www.explorecalling.org/yci.

Key learnings are also being compiled. Highlights include:

- Changing Church culture requires time and involvement from a broad array of influencers including bishops, cabinets, boards of ordained ministries, and others;
- A more proactive and selective fund distribution process may yield more desired results;
- Personal relationships are the most effective way to guide a person in vocational discernment. Means for establishing and maintaining those relationships vary by culture and context;

- Youth feel called into Christian work but do not discern that call to be into ordained leadership;
- Youth seek and need opportunities to be in conversation with other youth who are discerning similar calls;
- Churches that regularly engage children and youth in conversation around vocational discernment tend to discover more children and youth who are interested in ordained ministry than churches that do not;
- General vocational discernment resources, such as Called: One Word, Many Ways, are helpful in framing conversations with children and youth and in creating a congregational culture of call.

Hopes for the 2017-2020 Quadrennium

YCI is a three-quadrennium emphasis (2013-2024), and 2016 marks the conclusion of its first quadrennium. While much has been learned, more will be discovered as projects evolve and new projects begin.

Some areas identified for future focus include:

- Seminary debt relief;
- Young clergy financial wellness;
- Ethnic/minority recruitment and early ministry support;
- More frequent best practice sharing;
- Discernment/recruitment issues outside of the jurisdictional conferences;
- Continued development of vocational discernment resources;
- Support for hiring vocational discernment coordinators in each annual conference.

Funding Request

GBHEM requests an additional $7 million for the YCI for the 2017-2020 quadrennium. In the diversity of grants awarded and by encouraging grant recipients to secure additional funding, the YCI has been able to double the Church's investment in youth and young adults who are discerning a call to ordained ministry. The Fund's renewal will enable the Church to continue its investment into the next quadrennium and find new, innovative ways to increase the number of young adult clergy for The United Methodist Church.

Report of the Association of United Methodist Theological Schools

The Ministerial Education Fund insures the health of the investment in our 13 schools of theology where the majority of our clergy are prepared. In turn, these schools use those funds, and raise much more, to give preferential scholarships to United Methodist students, to insure a majority of the faculty are active United Methodists, and to support sister schools in global theological education.

Our theological faculty is a team of disciples rooted in the tradition, animated by a vision of making disciples of all nations, and formed by the character of the Lord they have followed. They respond to Jesus' commission by informing and forming the mind of the church. They trust the One who promised to be with us will empower and sustain their work.

These are our schools:

Boston University School of Theology seeks to prepare students for compassionate, bold, and prophetic leadership in faith communities and public service, offering them a diverse learning community that is academically rigorous, spiritually vibrant, and deeply engaged with communities outside its door and across the globe.

Candler School of Theology at Emory University blends rigorous intellectual preparation and practical ministry experience, offering our students extensive contextual learning opportunities so they graduate ready to lead the church.

Located in the Pacific Rim in the most diverse part of the U.S., Claremont School of Theology trains lay and clergy leaders through its interreligious theological education focus to navigate such a complex world and to work for transformation in faith communities and society through collaboration with leaders of other religious communities.

Drew Theological School, rooted in the Methodist tradition of innovative and bold interpretations of Christian theology and spiritual practices, empowers creative thought and courageous action to advance justice, peace, and love of God, neighbor, and the earth.

Duke Divinity School seeks to form scriptural imagination for the sake of renewal of the church, to bring the Christian tradition into lively dialogue with the world of the research university, and to articulate a Christian witness about crucial issues of our time.

Gammon Theological Seminary, a historically African American institution, is a unique and diverse community that seeks to educate and equip called individuals to become prophetic leaders who will commit to and practice a liberating and transforming spirituality that is deeply rooted in the African American religious experience.

Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary founded in 1853 and located on the campus of Northwestern University, serves the church and the world through preparing public theologians and scholars who are equipped to proclaim the good news of the gospel, to foster deep spirituality in the lives of others, to serve with cultural competence and commitment to racial equity, and to lead transformative change for the well-being of all persons and creation.

Huff School of Theology situates itself in the world and deliberately and critically operates out of the complexities of the world to educate and develop leaders with courageous theological imaginations to serve the world, the church, and the academy as pastors, activists, and academics and, because of its United Methodist heritage and relationships, is committed to social justice, inclusiveness, and religious diversity.

Methodist Theological School in Ohio prepares Christian leaders for lives of lasting significance in service to the church and the world. It is a learning community united by shared commitments to social justice and the care of God's creation.

Uniquely positioned in the southwestern United States, Perkins School of Theology/Southern Methodist University prepares women and men for faithful leadership in Christian ministry through the integration of rigorous theological reflection on theory and practices across disciplines—within a culturally and theologically diverse community of faculty and students—and practical experience gained during the Perkins Internship.

Centered in Christ and rooted in the Wesleyan tradition, Saint Paul School of Theology is a seminary of collaborations committed to forming people for ministry through rigorous academics and radically diverse contextual experiences.

Spirit-led and steeped in the historic Christian faith, United Theological Seminary recruits and educates faithful leaders for pastoral ministry, worship, mission, and renewal in the local and global church.

Seated in the nation's capital and centered in the Christian tradition, Wesley Theological Seminary equips exemplary teachers, preachers, and leaders to be prophetic voices in the church and the world.

Summary Report of the 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry

The Charge to the 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry

The 2012 General Conference authorized the 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry to undertake its work based on guidelines stated in Petition 20868-MH-Non-Dis, which assigned the following tasks to the Commission:

“The scope of the work will be to provide future research and recommendations on any ministry issue lacking clarity from the 2012 General Conference. Secondly, the work of the Focus Team will be constructive and futuristic, examining the following issues that continue to need work:

1. The nature and grounding of the elder;
2. The nature and grounding of the variety of lay ministries;
3. Course of Study and education for local pastors;
4. The status of associate membership;
5. The education of clergy in terms of seminary reform, relevant curriculum, global theological education, funding, and debt of seminary graduates; and
6. The present accountability structure of United Methodist theological schools including the University Senate and Commission on Theological Education.”

The commission is pleased to offer this report, including legislative proposals for the 2016 General Conference.

Observations and Analysis

Note: Unless preceded by “ADCA,” all Disciplinary references are to The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, 2012.

I. The Mission of the Church and Its Challenges

The United Methodist Church is clear about its stated mission, to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world (§ 120), and is challenged today to make significant changes in order to fulfill that mission better. Our challenge is an adaptive one, as technical solutions are inadequate, and defining the problem itself requires new learning (Heifetz). Our challenge is also generative. The Church must create networks for formation and support to advance and develop for future generations.

To fulfill our Church’s mission and thrive in the twenty-first century, we must find new settings and structures to adapt its heritage and practices in order to generate a living church for our time. In particular, we must prioritize Wesleyan understandings of service, word, sacrament, order, compassion, and justice to articulate a compelling vision of ordination that engages leaders in lifelong formation.

Recommendations

II. Increasing Flexibility in Leadership Preparation

Our discussions have led us to conclude that The United Methodist Church needs to provide more entry points for Church leadership and be more flexible in how we define and prepare for the leadership we need. Our proposals for achieving those goals are as follows:

1. Remove the minimum age restriction for local pastors to apply for provisional membership (see ADCA, ¶ 324.6).
2. Charge the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry with continued conferencing on theological education.
3. Engage United Methodist seminaries to strengthen Course of Study.
4. Allow candidates to complete the required United Methodist courses in history, doctrine, and polity through approved online offerings.
5. Advanced degrees (beyond the bachelor’s degree) combined with basic graduate theological studies could be considered by Boards of Ordained Ministry as educational preparation for ordained ministry. The issues here require further study and we commend this question to the next commission (see ADCA, Non-Disciplinary Resolution to renew commission).

III. Leadership and the Nature of Ordination

1. Deepening the theology of ordination: We have proposed legislation clarifying our ordination theology, especially in the introductory paragraphs of each section (see ADCA, ¶¶ 301.1, 301.2, 302, 305, and NEW Section VI Introduction).

2. Clarifying the relationship between ordination and the sacraments (see ADCA, ¶¶ 316, 328, 340).
 - a. All ministry, including the ministry of the laity, deacons, elders, and local pastors, is grounded in the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion, with baptism as the fundamental initiation into the body of Christ, and called into a life of discipleship.
 - b. While ministry is born out of baptism, it is sustained in the Eucharistic meal initiated by Jesus Christ's breaking bread with his disciples and giving his own ministry and life for the healing of the world.
 - c. Administration of the sacraments is an act of receiving God's Spirit to preside at the celebration of God's sacraments.
3. Reshaping the ordination process: We propose that the 2016 General Conference reshape the entry process into ordained ministry, such that persons may be ordained and elected to provisional membership after completing all educational requirements, followed by a residency period, then eligibility for election into full membership (see ADCA, NEW Section VI).
4. Increasing flexibility for deacons to preside at the celebration of the sacraments (see ADCA, ¶ 328).

IV. Leadership Support and Development Through Pathways for Thriving in Ordained Ministry

1. Strengthen the requirement for lifelong learning and coaching: Change the word “should” in the first sentence of ¶ 351.2 to “shall” (see ADCA, ¶ 351.2).
2. Covenant groups for clergy: All candidates and clergy shall participate in covenant groups for mutual support and growth across their lifetime of ministry.
 - a. Add group mentoring during the period between certification of candidacy and provisional membership (see ADCA, ¶ 349.1a).
 - b. Add group mentoring for local pastors (see ADCA, ¶ 349.3).
 - c. Continue and strengthen mentoring groups for certified candidates (¶ 349.1a), covenant groups for provisional members (¶ 326), deacons (¶ 328), and elders (¶ 332).
 - d. Emphasize the importance of all deacons and elders participating in covenant with members of their respective order and local pastors participating in their fellowship (¶¶ 323, 328, 332).

3. Periodic clergy assessments: Clergy shall regularly participate in two forms of periodic reviews of their ministries.
 - a. Ongoing evaluation: We propose clearer guidance for ongoing evaluation of full connection members and local pastors and we recommend that cabinets and Boards of Ordained Ministry partner with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry to use the agency's Effective Ministry Assessment process.
 - b. Periodic, more in-depth assessment: Every eight years, each clergyperson shall engage in an extensive personal and professional assessment and development process (see ADCA, ¶ 350.3).

V. Enhance Preparation of and Support for Local Pastors

1. Education and training (see ADCA ¶¶ 319.4, 322.1(3), 324.6c, 1421.3d):
 - a. Create an undergraduate degree program that meets Course of Study requirements.
 - b. Remove the phrase “five-year” everywhere the Book of Discipline references Course of Study to create flexibility for these alternatives.
2. Support and accountability: Local pastors are accountable for ministry through their local churches, district superintendents (¶ 350), and the district Committees on Ordained Ministry. Local churches are encouraged to support local pastors as they meet the commitments of ministry and education.

Each annual conference has a Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members to provide mutual support for its members for the sake of the life and mission of the Church. Local pastors are encouraged to nurture collegial relationships through participation in lectionary groups, covenant peer groups, etc.

Annual conferences are encouraged to include the blessing and sending forth of newly licensed local pastors during the annual conference session.

3. Associate membership: The commission discussed the role and status of associate members as a part of conversations related to licensing, education, and ongoing support of local pastors and associate members. At this time, the commission does not recommend changes to “Section V. Associate Membership,” Book of Discipline.

VI. Leadership for Very Small Congregations

The commission studied the use of certified lay ministers serving in pastoral roles within very small congregations. After considering legislative options to create new possibilities for churches transitioning toward closing, the commission determined that conferences could better handle such work in less formal ways. Adding to the Book of Discipline would be more complicated than helpful.

VII. Clarifying the Status of the Certified Lay Minister

Different conferences utilize certified lay ministers (§ 271) in a variety of ways. The district Committee on Lay Servant Ministries (§ 668) should be charged to review certified lay ministry candidates. The dCOM should not be the body to vet the candidate for certified lay ministry and make a recommendation unless the Board of Laity is unable to do so (see ADCA, §§ 666.10 and NEW § 668.4).

VIII. Conclusion

Focused and sustained study of ministry continues to require attention and responsiveness to cultural needs and church-wide expectations. The 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry requests renewal for the 2017-2020 quadrennium. The resolution to renew the commission for the 2017-2020 quadrennium lists details related to the commission's structure, the questions to address, and funding (see ADCA, Ministry and Higher Education/Superintendency – Non-Disciplinary Resolution).

Works Cited

Heifetz, Ronald A. Leadership Without Easy Answers. Cambridge, Mass.: Belknap of Harvard UP, 1994.

Report of the 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry

The Charge to the 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry

The 2012 General Conference authorized the 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry to undertake its work based on guidelines stated in Petition 20868-MH-Non-Dis, which assigned the following tasks to the commission:

“The scope of the work will be to provide future research and recommendations on any ministry issue lacking clarity from the 2012 General Conference. Secondly, the work of the Focus Team will be constructive and futuristic, examining the following issues that continue to need work:

- 1. The nature and grounding of the elder;
- 2. The nature and grounding of the variety of lay ministries;
- 3. Course of Study and education for local pastors;
- 4. The status of associate membership;
- 5. The education of clergy in terms of seminary reform, relevant curriculum, global theological education, funding, and debt of seminary graduates; and
- 6. The present accountability structure of United Methodist theological schools including the University Senate and Commission on Theological Education.”

Organized by the 2012 resolution and pursuing this charge, the commission is pleased to offer this report, including legislative proposals for the 2016 General Conference.

Observations and Analysis

Note: Unless preceded by “ADCA,” all Disciplinary references are to The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church 2012.

I. The Mission of the Church and Its Challenges

The United Methodist Church is clear about its stated mission, to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world (§ 120), and is challenged today to make significant changes in order to fulfill that mission better. The Call to Action Report (www.umc.org/who-we-are/call-to-action), which served as a backdrop to restructuring proposals at the 2012 General Conference, grew out of a sense that we were not adequately fulfilling our mission as a denomination. Our challenge is an adaptive one, as technical solutions are inadequate, and defining the problem itself requires new learning (Heifetz). While we must always listen for the Spirit, this is a particularly important time to attune our ears to the Spirit, who will guide us “into all the truth” (John 16:13 NRSV).

Our challenge is also generative. The United Methodist Church’s heritage as a spiritual growth movement within a sacramental church is particularly suited to “emerging”/ “emergent church” interests in liturgy, sacrament, spiritual discipline, and incarnational theology that views nature, body, mind, and soul wholistically. The Church must create networks for formation and support to advance and develop these interests for future generations.

In addition, The United Methodist Church needs to cultivate a “learning organization” culture, continuously engaging living Wesleyan theology and contemporary ministry practices. Bishops, deacons, elders, and local pastors must have avenues for constant learning and growth, enriching and fulfilling their ministries as teachers. This does not mean imposing views on church members; rather, the culture of a learning organization is a mutual, collaborative process between lay and clergy that seeks insight into how our living tradition connects with contemporary contexts and issues.

To fulfill our Church’s mission and thrive in the twenty-first century, we must find new settings and structures to adapt its heritage and practices in order to generate a living Church for our time. In particular, we must prioritize Wesleyan understandings of service, word, sacrament, order, compassion, and justice to articulate a compelling vision of ordination that engages leaders in lifelong formation. We must engage in generative work, drawing on the United Methodist way of being church as a creative resource to stir new imagination and design for today’s mission.

The 2012 General Conference charged the Commission for the Study of Ministry to lead the Church in facing these adaptive and generative challenges and resolving issues that hinder the ministry and mission of the Church. We have wrestled with the challenges in conversation with groups and constituents who have helped to shape our observations and recommendations.

II. The Contemporary Context for Ministry and Leadership Formation

If transforming the world is part of the mission to which God calls us in Jesus Christ, what does this world look like? Where do we begin the work of transformation?

The acronym VUCA provides a shorthand way to describe our world. We live in a world that is volatile, uncertain, complex, and ambiguous (Johansen). Global climate change; economic growth and income inequality; political polarization and instability; flourishing racial-ethnic and religious diversity; and the constant onslaught of information reflect a new day. This is a challenging world, but the challenges also bring opportunities.

If this is the world in which we live and serve, what kind of leadership does the Church need? How will our context for ministry shape our visions for ministry? If our description centers on decline and demise, then our ministry may focus on recapturing what has been lost. If our description centers on volatility, uncertainty, complexity, and ambiguity in an age of religious change and new information, then our ministry may focus on discerning the winds of the Spirit amidst the winds of change. To discern God's way, we need to draw upon our rich theological and spiritual resources.

Yet, the future cannot be a simple return to the past. Ministry occurs in contexts—historical, social, and cultural. Jesus told stories and used images that connected with first-century listeners. When we ask questions about the nature and ordering of ministry, formation for ministry, and effectiveness in ministry, we need to consider the fullness of our contexts and God's movements in our Church and world, past and present.

III. The Leadership We Need

What kind of leadership does The United Methodist Church seek in the twenty-first century? What leadership qualities would help us in our adaptive and generative work? Many voices contributed to this conversation. Qualities might include:

- Intellectual openness to God's revelation in many times and places, including an understanding of history, other religious traditions, literature, and sciences;
- Social and emotional intelligence;
- Strong basic ministry skills, especially good communication skills; and
- Adaptive leadership skills, such as conflict transformation and vision to lead change.

We risk reaching for a technical solution to answer questions of leadership. If we understand leaders as “outcomes” with a set of features, we might easily conclude that we can determine a clear path or process for developing leaders. Such linear, product-driven, technical thinking may not honor the organic, messy, and contextual reality of how God calls and deploys leaders for the Church. Scripture suggests that leaders are less a product of a linear process than a gift of God to the faith community, called for a particular time to serve God—even with their shortcomings—and to shape, guide, develop, and lead.

A variety of sources and influences develop and deepen the leaders described in Scripture. Cooperating with God's vision for creation, transformed leaders and transformed communities—not theological schools or learning systems—reshape the Church and society through leading the work and witness of social justice, compassion, mission, and ministry.

The following are guiding questions as we consider leadership for the Church in the twenty-first century:

- What are the fruits of someone called to and gifted for licensed or ordained ministry?
- What formative experiences and curricula transform individuals for vibrant ministry? What is needed in academic degrees, mentoring, apprenticeships, and core teachings?
- How might we accommodate each leader's unique gifts? How might the needs of a first-career young adult be different from a third-career, middle-aged adult? How might curricula adapt to accommodate differences?
- What contextual learning must occur to transform the community where one serves? What core skills are needed regardless of context?
- What strategies are needed for ongoing transformation of the leader in a culture of shifting tensions and ever-changing contexts?

- Spiritual depth, a vibrant relationship with God through Jesus Christ, and a sense of call into licensed or ordained ministry that grows out of that relationship;
- Intellectual grounding in Scripture, historical theology, systematic theology, and practical theology;

IV. Formation for Leadership

Given the complexity of our world and the challenges we face, the education and formation of clergy and pastoral leaders is more complicated and challenging than ever before. Currently, four components—often understood implicitly as stages—mark the trajectory of vocation into ordained and/or set-apart ministry: vocational discernment, spiritual/intellectual formation, practice and placement, and mentoring.

These components are often assumed to focus on individuals. However, this individual-focused, linear picture does not account for the complexity that envelops our ecclesial and broader cultures. Thus, we need to identify places where systemic integration and collaboration occur in forming persons for set-apart ministry.

First, United Methodist seminaries collaborate with local churches and judicatory bodies (e.g., bishops, cabinets, Boards of Ordained Ministry). Learning from these collaborations and providing incentives to replicate and expand collaborations will strengthen United Methodist theological education and formation. Though there is disagreement about the current structure of theological education and the amount of direct input the Church should have in seminary curriculum, collaborations between the Church and seminaries can open both to the world's changing dynamics and promising resources. As Bishop Grant Hagiya says, “. . . [T]he academy must work more directly with the needs of the church and . . . the church must reduce its huge expectations of the seminary” (45).

Collaborations might include:

1. Assessing and deploying technology to enhance the intentionality and accessibility of education and formation for pastoral leaders;
2. Learning from vital congregations and their leaders in the global south; and
3. Working in partnership with immigrant communities within our neighborhoods to develop leadership formation.

Numerous opportunities wait for us in the midst of challenges and complexity.

Second, The United Methodist Church must examine how to use our financial resources most effectively for ministry formation. Many socioeconomic factors impinge on education for ministry, among them the costs of higher education. By requiring graduate education for ordination, for instance, we are asking persons to invest significant resources; often seminary graduates accumulate debt, and then serve in positions with a compensation rate that makes repaying that debt difficult (Early). We are grateful that the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry's Seminary Indebtedness Task Force is studying educational debt in the Church and that several United Methodist seminaries are developing programs to address the problem. The task force's report is printed in the Advance Daily Christian Advocate and posted at www.gbhem.org/gc16.

Recommendations

V. Increasing Flexibility in Leadership Preparation

Recommendations in Section V address points 3, 5, and 6 as outlined above in the commission's task.

Our discussions have led us to conclude that The United Methodist Church needs to provide more entry points for Church leadership and be more flexible in how we define and prepare for the leadership we need. Our proposals for achieving those goals are as follows:

1. Remove the minimum age restriction for local pastors to apply for provisional membership: The current requirement for local pastors to have reached forty years of age before applying for provisional membership is no longer relevant or useful. Its removal broadens another pathway into ordained ministry. This proposal pairs with efforts to strengthen Course of Study (see ADCA, ¶ 324.6).
2. Charge the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry with continued conferencing on theological education: Theological education should be a continuous topic of exploration through venues created and sponsored by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. Such conversations should include seminaries, educational institutions, bishops, and annual conference leadership.
3. Engage United Methodist seminaries to strengthen Course of Study: We propose that the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry draw on the resources of United Methodist seminaries and educational institutions continuously to improve Course of Study.
4. Online Study of United Methodist courses: Allow candidates to complete the required United Methodist courses in history, doctrine, and polity through approved online offerings. This proposal pairs with the strengthened mentoring and formation structures discussed in Section VII below.

- 5. Alternative advanced degrees: Advanced degrees (beyond the bachelor's degree) combined with basic graduate theological studies could be considered by Boards of Ordained Ministry as educational preparation for ordained ministry. Should Boards of Ordained Ministry have flexibility to investigate and accept advanced degrees in fields relevant to ministry, when integrated with basic graduate theological studies in an approved seminary, revising ¶ 335(3) (b)? The issues here require further study and we commend this question to the next commission (see ADCA, Non-Disciplinary Resolution to renew commission).

VI. Leadership and the Nature of Ordination

Recommendations in Section VI address points 1 and 2 as outlined above in the commission's task.

A major theme of this commission's work has been to study the theology of ministry and the nature and theology of ordination in The United Methodist Church. This prompted two major inquiries: (a) the relationship between ordination and the sacraments and (b) the relationship of licensing and ordination to conference membership.

Regarding the first inquiry, United Methodists often describe sacramental leadership as "sacramental authority," stationed in the Order of Elder. This language and its underlying assumptions are misleading. Our theology and practices of ministry in the Wesleyan tradition do not give rise to "sacramental authority," as if we are the givers of God's grace. Rather, the commission recognizes that sacraments are God's gift to the Church, binding together all laity and clergy in ministry. As gifts, sacraments need to be received and administered so all people may participate with openness to God's Triune presence. The elder's authority "to administer the sacraments" emerges from the Holy Spirit's gift and power. As such, in the Laying on of Hands and Prayer for Elders during the ordination service, the church first invokes the Spirit and then authorizes elders to carry out the work that God empowers.

We have complicated this understanding of ordination and the sacraments by ordering ministry in such a way that regularly depends upon non-ordained persons to preside at the celebration of the sacraments. Both licensed local pastors and commissioned ministers in preparation for ordination as elders are authorized and expected to celebrate baptism and Holy Communion, although this responsibility has been reserved to the ordained in most church bodies through Christian history. Under our present system, we have normalized this historical and theological anomaly, and unnecessarily so. While the missional urgency for ministry has extended the responsibility for celebrating the sacraments to local pastors, the exception has increasingly become the rule.

Regarding the relationship of licensing and ordination to conference membership, the Church faithfully deploys its clergy into the world for the sake of Christ's gospel, yet we have created practices of licensing and ordination that are not deeply grounded in a robust theological understanding of Christian ministry and ordination. The theology and practice of commissioning is not fully understood, thus creating a sense of liminality for persons in the roles of commissioned ministers during the time of provisional conference membership. Further, the current attachment of ordination to full conference membership subordinates the primacy of the Church's mission to the Church's structure. Instead of deploying ordained persons to do the work of the ordained, we delay ordination until the completion of the provisional period; instead of ensuring that the church receives ordained persons to meet urgent missional needs, we emphasize the rights and responsibilities associated with conference membership and postpone ordination.

This commission focused on the church's vitality and the promise of new leadership to continue building this vitality. We sought to develop a process that is true to our Wesleyan traditions, resonant with the ecumenical church, and open to new clergy seeking ordination and authorization to lead the church's full ministry, even as provisional members. We have proposed a reshaping that is more coherent, clear, and congruent with the larger Christian tradition.

Thus, we propose the following legislative initiatives:

- 1. Deepening the theology of ordination: We have proposed legislation clarifying our ordination theology, especially in the introductory paragraphs of each section. Ministry, in all of its forms, is a gift of the Holy Spirit, exemplified in the language proposed for ¶ 301.2: "Individuals discern God's call as they relate with God and their communities, and the Church guides and confirms those callings. Calls—and the discernment and confirmation of them—are gifts of the Holy Spirit” (see ADCA, ¶¶ 301.1, 301.2, 302, 305, and NEW Section VI Introduction).

2. Clarifying the relationship between ordination and the sacraments:

Our exploration led to the following theological convictions, which undergird the proposed legislation and require reflection on all forms of ministry throughout the Church (see ADCA, ¶¶ 316, 328, 340).

a. All ministry, including the ministry of the laity, deacons, elders, and local pastors, is grounded in the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion, with baptism as the fundamental initiation into the body of Christ and call into a life of discipleship. The baptized are called to follow Jesus Christ and to serve God with their whole lives. Their baptismal call sends them out to participate in God’s work in creation. Within the body of Christ, some are called, equipped, and set apart to lead the Body so the whole may flourish. Those called to the ministry of deacon are called to witness to the Word in their words and actions and to lead the community’s service in the world for the sake of enacting God’s compassion and justice. Those called to the ministry of elder are called to preach and teach the Word, administer the sacraments, and order the life of the Church so it can be faithful. Those called to the ministry of local pastor are called to preach and teach the Word, preside at the celebration of the sacraments, and order the life of the local congregations in which they serve. The ministry of all Christians is to live every day, in every aspect of their lives, as Christ’s disciples in the world, and to embody God’s call to serve; to love God with all their heart, mind, soul, and strength; and to love their neighbors as themselves. Each of these ministries is vital to Christ’s church and its service in the world.

b. While ministry is born out of baptism, it is sustained in the Eucharistic meal initiated by Jesus Christ’s breaking bread with his disciples, and giving his own ministry and life for the healing of the world. This meal is a thanksgiving for God’s good gifts, for Jesus’ life, and for the continuing work of the Spirit. The meal is a renewing call to the body of Christ—beckoning the community back to its calling into discipleship and nourishing the body with food to strengthen its commitment and service. Within the Body, the deacon is called to set the table, to receive and serve the bread and cup, and to send the community back into the world to serve—and, with the permission of the bishop, to preside at Holy Communion “for the sake of extending the mission and ministry of the church” (¶ 328). The elder is called to administer the sacrament of Holy Communion, leading the people in the feast of celebration and ensuring that all of God’s people have opportunity to receive Holy Communion (¶ 340). The local pastor is called to preside at the celebration of Holy Communion within a particular appointment (¶ 316). All of the gathered community actively receive and participate in God’s grace as conveyed in Holy Communion, opening themselves to God’s action in their lives and to the transformative power of God’s Spirit, then going forth to be God’s presence in the world.

c. Administration of the sacraments is an act of receiving God’s Spirit to preside at the celebration of God’s sacraments. The Christian tradition celebrates the origins of all life in God’s Spirit. In the beginning, God’s Spirit moved over the waters (Genesis 1:1-2) and bestowed the breath of life upon every living being—nephesh hayah (1:20, 27). All people of God are gifted and sustained by God’s Spirit, and the gifts of life and calling of God continue to be poured out irrevocably (Romans 11:29). The language we have for the Spirit’s action in baptism, Holy Communion, and ordination is the same: “pour out your Spirit upon [this person], that [this person] may be. . . .” With these words, we seek the Spirit to make us new.

This means that “sacramental authority” is not adequate to describe ministry. “Sacramental authority” suggests a power that certain people hold, rather than a gift bestowed by God. For example, “take thou authority as an elder,” as spoken in the service of elder ordination, reminds us that elders receive that authority, and that they are called to trust the Spirit’s outpouring of life as they administer the sacraments. To administer is to preside and also to give leadership that ensures the offering of baptism and Holy Communion to all of God’s people. Similarly—but in more circumscribed ways—local pastors (¶ 316) and those deacons granted authority by the bishops “to extend the mission and ministry of the church” (§ 328) are being called to preside at the celebration of the sacraments within their designated settings.

3. Reshaping the ordination process: We propose that the 2016 General Conference reshape the entry process into ordained ministry, such that persons may be ordained and elected to provisional membership after completing all educational requirements, followed by a residency period, then eligibility for election into full membership. The Wesleyan tradition has always emphasized the lifelong process of growing in faith, recognizing God’s movement in young lives through prevenient grace, and continually offered to people as they grow in relationship to God through justification and sanctification. The tradition also emphasizes a life of growing in ministry, initiated at baptism and followed by confirmation and professing church membership. Similarly, ordination is a process, and begins with inquiry, discernment, and several levels of preparation, followed by ordination and ongoing formation under supervision until the person and the church discern a readiness for full membership.

This proposal would authorize the Church, guided by the Holy Spirit, to ordain persons and elect them into provisional membership when they have completed all candidacy and educational requirements. Additionally, the Church would reserve full membership to a later action, after the ordained provisional member completes a residency period and after the church further discerns that provisional member’s readiness for full and lifelong responsibility in and for the connection. Ordination is a lifelong relationship with God and the Church, effected by the pouring out of the Holy Spirit. The authorization to perform ministerial functions depends upon conference relationship. This authorization begins with ordination and provisional membership.

The United Methodist Church has already established practices to require the surrender of such authorization by those ordained clergy who exit the ministry or The United Methodist Church (§§ 359-361). The exit procedures for ordained persons who are not elected into full membership would be parallel. This movement through stages of relationship finds its parallels in ecumenical practice and in other professions, such as medicine. It is also attuned to the traditions of The United Methodist Church and its antecedent denominations, which have taken different forms over nearly three hundred years but have been marked by movements, or stages, in ordained ministry and conference relationships (see ADCA, NEW Section VI).

4. Increasing flexibility for deacons to preside at the celebration of the sacraments: We propose that bishops be empowered to authorize deacons to preside at the celebration of the sacraments. This authority is grounded in the Church’s mission in a particular context, but need not be limited to the particular place of appointment or to circumstances in which an elder is not present. This proposal, as those offered above, is clearer and more congruent with the larger Christian tradition and bears promise for extending and deepening the ministry of Christ’s church in the world (see ADCA, § 328).

VII. Leadership Support and Development Through Pathways for Thriving in Ordained Ministry

Recommendations in Section VII address points 1, 3, and 5 as outlined above in the commission’s task.

The commission studied vocation and the development of The United Methodist Church’s leadership to address issues of support, accountability, learning and growth opportunities, and security of appointment. The discussions have led our group to affirm the need for the Church to:

- Build relationships that foster effective mentoring during candidacy and provisional periods and focus on leadership formation;
- Require lifelong mentoring, learning, and coaching, and provide a range of models to guide conferences in designing and implementing approaches that best fit their unique needs;
- Promote effectiveness through the use of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry’s Effective Ministry Assessment process;
- Collaborate with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry to support annual conference boards and cabinets in their work of holding clergy accountable to effective ministry.

Based on these needs, the commission brings forward three proposals:

1. Strengthen the requirement for lifelong learning and coaching: Change the word “should” in the first sentence of ¶ 351.2 to “shall.” This ensures that clergy actively engage in lifelong learning and coaching. The revised paragraph would read: “A clergy member’s continuing education and spiritual growth program shall include such leaves at least one week each year and at least one month during one year of every quadrennium” (emphasis added).

Further, the Wesleyan Movement has always emphasized the importance of group mentoring to promote fellowship and accountability in spiritual and educational growth. Thus, this petition would make the new ¶ 351.2 consistent with ¶ 351.1 in the 2012 Book of Discipline: “Throughout their careers, clergy shall engage in continuing education for ministry, professional development, and spiritual formation and growth in order to lead the church in fulfilling the mission of making disciples for Jesus Christ. This shall include carefully developed personal programs of study augmented periodically by involvement in organized educational and spiritual growth activities” (emphasis added) (see ADCA, ¶ 351.2).

2. Covenant groups for clergy: All candidates and clergy shall participate in covenant groups for mutual support and growth across their lifetime of ministry. The 2012 General Conference enacted the previous commission’s legislation for ministry candidates to participate in candidacy mentoring groups (¶ 349.1a). The response has been very positive. We now propose that similar groups be developed and continued throughout the active ministry of every clergyperson:

a. Add group mentoring during the period between certification of candidacy and provisional membership. When candidates are outside of the bounds of the annual conference, such as in seminaries, they shall be assigned to courtesy mentoring groups (see ADCA, ¶ 349.1a).

b. Add group mentoring for local pastors. Assign local pastors to a mentoring group, wherever possible. While there are some challenges to group mentoring (geographical distance, new pastoral appointments, schedules, participants’ resistance, time frame of 5-12 years), the group process nonetheless has proven beneficial. As mentors are identified and groups form, we recommend that Boards of Ordained Ministry train mentors to communicate expectations and provide for consistency among groups. The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry will train annual conferences in developing and implementing clergy group mentoring (see ADCA, ¶ 349.3).

c. Continue and strengthen mentoring groups for certified candidates (¶ 349.1a), covenant groups for provisional members (¶ 326), deacons (¶ 328), and elders (¶ 332).

d. Emphasize the importance of all deacons and elders participating in covenant with members of their respective order and local pastors participating in their fellowship, which may include covenant groups for spiritual growth, ministry coaching, and other forms of spiritual enrichment and training (¶¶ 323, 328, 332).

3. Periodic clergy assessments: Clergy shall regularly participate in two forms of periodic reviews of their ministries. In order to support clergy and hold them accountable to reflect seriously on the meaning and fruitfulness of their ministries, annual conferences shall organize two kinds of periodic reviews of clergy on a regular rotation.

a. Ongoing evaluation: We propose clearer guidance for ongoing evaluation of full connection members and local pastors. It is essential for each cabinet and Board of Ordained Ministry to follow the mandate to develop clear “criteria, processes, and training” that will provide the basis for evaluation (¶ 350.1). The criteria for self-evaluation should include self-assessment and appropriate metrics, and we recommend that cabinets and Boards of Ordained Ministry partner with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry to use the agency’s Effective Ministry Assessment process.

b. Periodic, more in-depth assessment: Every eight years, each clergyperson shall engage in an extensive personal and professional assessment and development process. Cabinets and Boards of Ordained Ministry, in consultation with the chairs of the orders and fellowship, will design and implement this process. It shall include both a formal review and an in-depth renewal opportunity comprised of a combination of elements, such as:

- Time apart for prayer and reflection,
- Reflection with a covenant group,
- Meetings with a coach,
- Celebration of ministry milestones, and
- Discernment of future ministry challenges and opportunities.

In addition, the review shall include personal and professional self-assessment, objective measures, observations of trends from the previous eight years, and some form of peer review. Each district superintendent shall receive the initial report of the eighth-year effectiveness review. When deemed important to the evaluation process, the cabinet or Board of Ordained Ministry may request psychological assessments. When recommended by the district superintendent, clergy under review may meet with the bishop and members of the cabinet to assess the review and establish next steps (see ADCA, ¶ 350.3).

VIII. Enhance Preparation of and Support for Local Pastors

Recommendations in Section VIII address points 3, 4, and 5 as outlined above in the commission's task.

- 1. Education and training: While some local pastors will have a master of divinity, most continue theological education through Course of Study (¶ 319.1). The commission recognizes the desire for an alternative to the traditional five-year (or 20-course) program, and the opportunity to earn a degree at Course of Study's completion.

a. Create an undergraduate degree program that meets Course of Study requirements: Authorize the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry to partner with United Methodist-related colleges and universities to develop a degree program that would also meet the requirements of the Course of Study.

b. Remove the phrase "five-year" everywhere the Book of Discipline references Course of Study to create flexibility for these alternatives.

These proposed changes would increase educational access and provide well-rounded liberal arts and theological education for local pastors via an undergraduate institution (see ADCA ¶¶ 319.4, 322.1(3), 324.6c), 1421.3d).

- 2. Support and accountability: Local pastors are accountable for ministry through their local churches, district superintendents (¶ 350), and the district Committees on Ordained Ministry (dCOM). The local pastor meets annually with the dCOM to be recommended for continuance of a license and the opportunity to serve (¶ 319.2). The dCOM is encouraged to have a robust set of information each year to evaluate the ministry of the local pastor, which may include:

- Clergy annual assessment/evaluation,
- Educational progress/Course of Study transcripts,
- Mentor report,
- Continuing education report for local pastors who have finished educational requirements, and
- Written materials submitted in advance for review concerning theology, preaching, leadership, practice of ministry, etc.

Local churches are encouraged to support local pastors as they meet the commitments of ministry and education. This can include supporting the clergy family while the local pastor is away for Course of Study, providing financial support for Course of Study and other training, and communicating to the congregation the expectations and benefits of being part of the United Methodist connection.

Each annual conference has a Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members to provide mutual support for its members for the sake of the life and mission of the Church. The fellowships are encouraged to provide regular gatherings for continuing formation; promote study; develop a bond of unity and commitment to the mission and ministry of The United Methodist Church and the annual conference; and, enable relationships that offer mutual support and trust (¶ 323). Annual conferences, Boards of Ordained Ministry, and bishops are responsible for supporting and funding the fellowship.

Local pastors are encouraged to nurture collegial relationships through participation in lectionary groups, covenant peer groups, etc. All clergy shall engage in continuing education for ministry, professional development, and spiritual formation and growth in order to lead the Church in fulfilling the mission of making disciples for Jesus Christ (¶ 351.1). It is expected that all annual conferences make available and encourage the use of spiritual guides, life coaches, pastoral counselors, or vocational mentors for all clergy—and that clergy utilize these support systems throughout their careers (¶ 349).

Annual conferences are encouraged to include the blessing and sending forth of newly licensed local pastors during the annual conference session.

- 3. Associate membership: The commission discussed the role and status of associate members as a part of conversations related to licensing, education, and ongoing support of local pastors and associate members. At this time, the commission does not recommend changes to “Section V. Associate Membership,” Book of Discipline.

IX. Leadership for Very Small Congregations

Recommendations in Section IX address point 2 as outlined above in the commission’s task.

The commission studied the use of certified lay ministers serving in pastoral roles within very small congregations and heard many stories of congregations with fifteen or fewer active members. We gratefully give witness to the important role that many such congregations have had historically in their communities. We recognize the reasons for their decline are many and various. Nonetheless, we join with others in the growing concern over the amount of energy and resources spent to deploy clergy and laity to very small, single-generation churches. The need to address these concerns continues to increase.

The commission strongly encourages conferences to share and adopt best practices that enable congregations to finish their work well and “pass the baton” to other congregations, new church starts, or community ministries where resources might be used most effectively for future disciple-making. This allows a congregation to leave a legacy for the future. Such congregations might continue to meet in the tradition of a Wesleyan Class Meeting, where they can enjoy fellowship, prayer, study, and accountability for the purpose of discipleship without the burdens of local church structure.

After considering legislative options to create new possibilities for churches transitioning toward closing, the commission determined that conferences could better handle such work in less formal ways. Adding to the Book of Discipline would be more complicated than helpful.

X. Clarifying the Status of the Certified Lay Minister

Recommendations in Section X address point 2 as outlined above in the commission’s task.

Different conferences utilize certified lay ministers (¶ 271) in a variety of ways. The commission understands that Discipleship Ministries is proposing legislation to clarify the role and purpose of the certified lay minister. We support that effort. In our study, we have concluded that the certified lay minister is not intended to be used as a lay supply pastor and to serve a church in the same way as clergy.

- 1. The district Committee on Lay Servant Ministries (¶ 668) should be charged to review certified lay ministry candidates. The dCOM should not be the body to vet the candidate for certified lay ministry and make a recommendation unless the Board of Laity is unable to do so. This process confuses the nature of the dCOM, which is an extension of the Board of Ordained Ministry. The Board of Ordained Ministry relates to clergy, and the dCOM recommends candidates, local pastors, provisional members, and associate members to the Board of Ordained Ministry and clergy session for licensing and ordination. The certified lay minister is a layperson and relates to the Board of Laity. Thus, having the dCOM recommend a certified lay minister is confusing and might lead one to misunderstand the certified lay minister’s role (see ADCA, ¶ 666.10 and NEW ¶ 668.4).

XI. Conclusion

Focused and sustained study of ministry continues to require attention and responsiveness to cultural needs and church-wide expectations. The 2013-2016 Commission for the Study of Ministry recommends and requests renewal for the 2017-2020 quadrennium. The resolution to renew the commission for the 2017-2020 quadrennium lists details related to the commission’s structure, the questions to address, and funding (see ADCA, Ministry and Higher Education/Superintendency – Non-Disciplinary Resolution).

Works Cited

- Early, K., S. Miller, & A. Ruger. “The Gathering Storm: The Educational Debt of Theological Students.” Auburn Studies. September 2005.
- Hagiya, Grant. Spiritual Kaizen: How to Become a Better Church Leader. Nashville, Tenn.: Abingdon, 2013.

Heifetz, Ronald A. Leadership Without Easy Answers.
Cambridge, Mass.: Belknap of Harvard UP, 1994.

Johansen, Robert. Leaders Make the Future. San Francisco: Berrett-Koehler, 2009.

Summary Report of the Seminary Indebtedness Task Force

Since 2012, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) has collected debt-related data through the Seminary Indebtedness Task Force to better understand the obstacles facing certified candidates for ordained ministry in The United Methodist Church. The Seminary Indebtedness Task Force was charged by the 2012 General Conference with creating a denominational plan to reduce and eliminate seminarian debt (Petition 20868):

Clergy Indebtedness Task Force (20868-MH-Non-Dis)

The Church Systems Task Force recommends that the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry convene a task force to address financial assistance and seminary indebtedness for seminary students by:

- addressing both Resolution 218 (Financial Help for Seminary Students) and Resolution 233 (Seminary Student Indebtedness) from General Conference 2004;
- developing a denominational plan to reduce or eliminate seminary debt for certified candidates intending to enter ordained ministry;
- including persons with diverse backgrounds and expertise to develop funding sources;
- preparing a report and recommendations for presentation to the Connectional Table and Council of Bishops no later than 2015; and
- submitting the report to General Conference 2016.

The Denominational Plan

The task force created the following plan, divided into four focus areas, to promote awareness, assistance, maintenance, and prevention to the burden of educational debt among United Methodist clergy.

- I. Research: Understanding the current educational debt reality for United Methodist candidates for ministry, provisional members, elders, and deacons through GBHEM research.
- II. Collaboration: Engaging denominational constituents in conversations who are directly involved in the ecology of call for a pastor.
- III. Intervention: Identifying assistance opportunities for clergy in need of current debt relief.
- IV. Prevention: Identifying proactive assistance to prevent future unmanageable debt burdens for clergy.

I. Research

The following summarizes the Seminary Indebtedness Task Force's work over the past quadrennium in data collection and analysis. A detailed report of this data is available in the full report at www.gbhem.org/GC16.

In a 2014 survey conducted by GBHEM, clergy and candidates for ordination aged thirty-five and under most commonly identified finances as a barrier to ordination or other professional goals in ministry. In the 2013-14 academic year, the thirteen United Methodist theological schools reported providing over $32 million in institutional scholarships and grants to students. That same academic year, these institutions disbursed over $42 million in total Stafford loans, private non-Federal Loans and Perkins loans.

GBHEM received undergraduate and graduate-level educational debt information from eleven of the thirteen United Methodist seminaries in the U.S. for each United Methodist Master of Divinity graduate in the 2013-2014 academic year. Of the students, 28.7 percent reported graduating with no debt. Graduates who borrowed averaged $22,048.29 in undergraduate debt and $44,319.16 in graduate-level debt, for a total average debt of $66,367.45.

For all active, full-time provisional elders and deacons with two years or less of service, the median total annual compensation is $49,742. This includes a median annual base salary of $38,000 plus housing allowance or parsonage. Using this median income and standard interest rates of a ten-year payment plan, a new provisional member can reasonably afford a monthly debt payment of up to $409. This equates to a financial aid critical debt level of $35,500—a figure the average debt load of a United Methodist seminarian graduate well surpasses. Many individuals reported student debt at more than double this critical level.

GBHEM is working to improve existing data collection with theological schools and developing a systematic way for annual conferences to annually report ordinand seminary information and local pastor Course of Study information. The agency is also analyzing data from Ministerial Education Fund distributions and the Office of Loans and Scholarships, specifically as it relates to clergy finance and debt.

II. Collaboration

GBHEM has facilitated, led, and partnered with intentional ongoing meetings over the past quadrennium among United Methodist theological schools, annual conferences, foundations, local churches, and other entities to collaborate in data collection and analysis that will help identify specific student needs. Such conversations took place at the annual meetings of the National Association of Financial Aid Administrators, Association of United Methodist Theological Schools, and National Association of United Methodist Foundations. Other joint meetings included the Boards of Ordained Ministry Staff Network, deans and financial aid officers of the thirteen United Methodist theological schools, and other leaders in United Methodist theological education across the U.S.

In February 2015, the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits, in partnership with GBHEM and the Texas Methodist Foundation, were awarded a $50,000 planning grant by Lilly Endowment, Inc., to help the Church improve financial literacy of pastoral leaders and their overall financial well-being, as part of the National Initiative to Address Economic Challenges Facing Pastoral Leaders. In August 2015, the three organizations submitted a collaborative implementation grant proposal for this initiative. This grant will allow for evaluation of proposed programming and continued monitoring of finance-related data over the next quadrennium.

III. Intervention

The average cost of tuition, books, and fees to attend one year of seminary is $20,000. Adding $19,000 for cost-of-living expenses, the total cost of attendance for one year of seminary averages $39,000.

Educational assistance is available at all levels of the Church for candidates in ministry. Students may inquire about these opportunities from their local church, theological school, and annual conference, as well as from the general agencies and foundations of the Church. A partial list of United Methodist scholarships, loans, and grants available to students and young clergy can be found in the full report at www.gbhem.org/GC16.

Federal student loan service providers also offer student borrowers government-approved repayment options. These programs include income-based reduced payment plans, extended repayment periods, and a public service loan forgiveness program to assist the borrower.

Annual conferences and foundations of the Church continue to develop additional creative intervention strategies to alleviate clergy debt and educate candidates, provisional members, and clergy on refinancing, reducing, and eliminating existing student loans. Existing programs include the Foundation for Alabama-West Florida Annual Conference “Stegall Seminary Scholarship,” the Florida Annual Conference Board of Pension and Health Benefits’ “Passing the Torch” program, the Oklahoma United Methodist Foundation’s “Oklahoma United Methodist Pastor Education Fund,” the New England Preachers Aid Society’s Higher Education Loan Program, and the Texas Annual Conference Emerging Leaders Initiative’s grant program for young, gifted, diverse clergy.

In 2014, the Young Clergy Initiative Fund (YCI) awarded grants to three annual conferences focused on assisting young clergy to prevent debt and become models of faithful stewardship: the Florida Annual Conference, the Texas Annual Conference Emerging Leaders Initiative, and the Inve$t YC program in the Western North Carolina Annual Conference. A full list of YCI grant recipients can be found at www.explorecalling.org/yci/awards.

IV. Prevention

The Seminary Indebtedness Task Force identifies prevention goals as: (1) to change the culture in the Church so there is no shame around financial debt; (2) to provide financial literacy and education throughout the candidacy process; and (3) to make the realities of educational debt transparent throughout the Church.

In 2013 and 2014, Lilly Endowment, Inc., awarded grants of up to $250,000 to 67 theological schools across the nation as part of the Theological School Initiative to Address Economic Issues Facing Future Ministers. This initiative made awards to seven United Methodist theological schools: Boston University School of Theology; Emory, Candler School of Theology; Duke University Divinity School; Iliff School of Theology; Southern Methodist University, Perkins School of Theology; United Theological Seminary; and Wesley Theological Seminary. A summary of how each of the seven Lilly-awarded United Methodist theological schools are uniquely implementing the grants can be found in the full report at www.gbhem.org/GC16.

GBHEM continues to learn and share best practices from YCI grant recipients’ progress described above and other Lilly Endowment grant recipients within the Church, including the Indiana Foundation Rejuvenate Program, the Missouri United Methodist Foundation, and the seven United Methodist theological schools. Additionally, a new chapter on financial health and educational debt will appear in the revised handbook for certified candidates, published by GBHEM.

Plans continue to develop a financial form to equip district Committees on Ordained Ministry and Boards of Ordained Ministry when assisting candidates in the interview process to evaluate their financial health. The agency plans to expand the Academy of Faith and Money training event and offer sessions regionally in the U.S. to equip young clergy and provisional members with knowledge about church finances and stewardship.

Find the full report of Seminary Indebtedness Task Force at www.gbhem.org/GC16.

Summary Report of Africa University

Africa University is embracing a new era in the evolution of its mission as a connectional ministry of The United Methodist Church. The generous investment and prayerful affirmation of United Methodist congregations, agencies, and individuals, as well as the contributions of charitable organizations and development partners around the world, have resulted in a ministry effective in making and equipping disciples of Jesus Christ.

For twenty-three years, Africa University has delivered groundbreaking and significant instruction, research, and community service programs. These labors are the foundation for a United Methodist-related, pan-African higher education experience that develops principled leaders with the networks, skills, values, and personal attributes to serve and transform their communities.

Faithful connectional support from The United Methodist Church has built first-rate campus infrastructure comprised of forty-five buildings—all debt-free—and a permanent endowment of more than $64 million, due to significant contributions from the Africa University Development Office and investments in the Africa University Fund apportionment and World Service Special Gifts. Through Africa University, the denomination holds true to its Wesleyan values and tradition and is actively reaching out to love God's people in word and deed.

Annual full-time enrollment at Africa University stands at fifteen hundred students. Students choose among undergraduate and graduate degree programs in theology, agriculture and natural resources, education, health sciences, humanities and social sciences, and management and administration. These areas reflect crucial skills gaps in the worldwide church, as well as in the public and business sectors of students' home countries.

With the installation in March 2015 of Professor Munashe Furusa as the university's fourth vice chancellor, the institution is focused on increasing its relevance and impact. The Africa University Board of Directors continues its strong leadership role, and the directors with Furusa's guidance intend to champion key institutional priorities in the 2017-2020 quadrennium. These include enhancing student quality of life; instituting robust academic program review and development; increasing fiscal accountability to incorporate cost-cutting/right-sizing; and increasing the focus on African donors for resource mobilization.

The peace, education, and leadership formation initiatives of Africa University's flagship Institute of Peace, Leadership, and Governance are recognized as important contributions to social stability in sub-Saharan Africa. As graduates return home or serve elsewhere, African nations thrive as graduates contribute to the achievement of education, food security, public health, poverty alleviation, and governance goals.

Africa University's alumni now number more than 6,200. Graduates are at work in at least twenty-nine African countries, Australia, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and North America. Many serve The United Methodist Church and their nations in senior and strategic roles within and beyond Africa. Africa University increasingly functions as an essential feeder institution, nurturing and sending forth leaders for new institutions and initiatives that expand the mission of our denomination in Africa. Africa University alumni include:

- A Liberian graduate, Alfred Zigbuo, is a Global Ministries-supported missionary and administrator in the East Congo Episcopal Area. He brings experience as the country director of Operation Classroom and expertise in post-conflict healing/institution building in Liberia to his new mission field, a recently formed and conflict-ravaged annual conference.
- Clare Paidamoyo Katiyo, a young mother who earned a degree in health services management with United Methodist scholarship support, is now the district administrator overseeing a network of four large hospitals and thirty-seven health centers in rural Zimbabwe. Her skills and commitment put her on the front line of an ongoing national effort to improve health and save lives.
- Ilda Guambe was born in a remote rural village in Mozambique. She is the first woman in a family of nine to earn a degree. Her 2014 speech to the U.S. Africa Summit in Washington, D.C., was a powerful and moving invitation for African and American leaders to work together in reducing the number of early marriages and improving access to education for African girls. She continues to mentor and inspire young people in her country to stay in school to realize their God-given potential and their dreams.
- In the Democratic Republic of Congo, Pastor Mujinga Mwamba Kora serves as a lecturer and registrar of Kabongo Methodist University, while the Rev. Dr. Kimba Evariste Kyakutala is the president of Kabongo Methodist University and also lectures at Kamina Methodist University. They are both two-time graduates of Africa University and represent a growing number of alumni who lead United Methodist higher education institutions on the continent of Africa.

The United Methodist Church benefits greatly from the leadership of Africa University graduates at the general Church level and within the General Conference delegations from the African central conferences. These leaders include:

- The Rev. Manuel João André of West Angola and the Rev. Daniel Mhone of Malawi, who serve as board members of the United Methodist boards of Church and Society and Global Ministries, respectively; the Rev. Dr. Laishi Bwalya of the Congo Central Conference, who serves on the Connectional

Table; and the Rev. Dr. Kimba Evariste Kyakutala of North Katanga, who is the secretary of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters.

- In the wider Methodist fellowship, the Rev. Olga Choto Ranchaze of Mozambique, serves on the World Methodist Council's Standing Committee on Education.

Increased and steadfast support for the Africa University Fund apportionment and investment through World Service Special Gifts over the next quadrennium are vital to Africa University's development and sustainability.

Together with The United Methodist Church, Africa University celebrates its progress as a world-class university for ethical and transformational leadership development. Africa University is changing Africa in exciting ways as its students and graduates learn here, live here, lead here, and serve God, all the time and everywhere.

Summary Report of the Commission on Central Conference Theological Education

General Conference 2012 established the Central Conference Theological Education Fund and charged the Council of Bishops to elect a commission that would administer the fund and set policies and procedures.

General Conference 2012 set these priorities for funding submissions to the Central Conference Theological Education Fund:

- Development of theological schools;
- Development of Courses of Study;
- Development of libraries and contextually developed resources;
- Scholarships and faculty development;
- Support for associations and networks of faculty and schools;
- Support for new and innovative approaches to theological education.

Guided by these priorities, the newly formed commission gathered in August 2013, in Haslev, Denmark, to begin its work. The commission set four general priorities for funding:

- Capacity building;
- Development of contextual education;
- New and innovative initiatives;
- Sustainability.

The commission also established guidelines for who may apply for these funds:

- Institutions in central conferences that are related to The United Methodist Church;
- Boards of Ordained Ministry;
- Organizations that are integrally related to ministry in The United Methodist Church and theological education.

The commission further stipulated that “no individual applications will be accepted for scholarships. Scholarships would be requested via institutions for faculty or students as they expand the capacity of the school in particular fields, or by Boards of Ordained Ministry to strengthen the ministerial outreach for a particular context for ministry.”

In February 2014, the commission met in Atlanta, Georgia, USA, to review applications and award the first grants. Fifty-seven grants totaling more than $1 million were awarded for theological education in eleven countries in Africa, Asia, and Europe. Projects funded in 2014 included curriculum development, training of local pastors, continuing education for clergy, faculty development, provision of e-readers and even $50,000 for the solar electrification of the Banyam Theological Seminary in Nigeria.

The commission placed a high priority on fair distribution of the funds. To do so, the commission relied on regional screening committees from each central conference to ensure as many qualified recipients as possible received some funding.

While General Conference 2012 approved $5 million for the fund, the General Council on Finance and Administration expected the World Service Apportionment Fund to pay out at 85 percent; therefore, the commission initially planned to award $4.2 million, or about $1 million a year for each year of the 2013-2016 quadrennium. The World Service Apportionment Fund came in at a higher rate than expected in 2013, so the commission had an extra $13,000 to award that year above the forecasted $1 million.

Under the leadership of Bishop John Innis, the commission met in December 2014 in Dallas, Texas, USA, to review and award the 2015 grant applicants. In this second round, seventy-three grants totaling $1 million were awarded for theological education in twenty-two countries in Africa, Asia, and Europe. Again, funded projects included the training of local pastors, development of faculty, provision of e-readers, curriculum development, development of libraries, and more.

At the conclusion of its December 2014 meeting, the commission agreed that the combined efforts of Central Conference Theological Education Fund-awarded projects would make a tremendous, positive impact on the development of theological education throughout the central conferences. With that confidence, the commission resolved to petition General Conference 2016 to renew its approval of $5 million for the Central Conference Theological Education Fund, through the World Service Apportionment Fund.

In May 2015, the commission initiated the application process for a third round of grants to be awarded in 2016. A final round of grants for the 2013-2016 quadrennium will be awarded later in 2016 for distribution in 2017.

Proposed Amendments to the Book of Discipline

¶20. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60802-MH-¶20-C-G; Lomperis, John S.A. - Valparaiso, IN, USA.

Automatic Penalties

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 20 as follows:

¶ 20. Article IV.—The General Conference shall not do away with the privileges of our clergy of right to trial by a committee and of an appeal; neither shall it do away with the privileges of our members of right to trial before the church, or by a committee, and of an appeal.¹⁴ This shall not apply to cases of clergy who admit to their bishop, or to the bishop supervising a directly relevant complaint against them, of having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or performed a same-sex wedding ceremony. In such cases, automatic penalties shall be imposed.

Rationale:

Currently, a small minority of covenant-breaking clergy have been abusing our lengthy accountability system to use the threat of the costs of church trials to avoid serious accountability for this one offense. This would allow for a more effective, efficient, and ultimately less painful process than trials.

¶45.

Petition Number: 60518-MH-¶45-C-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

Delete Historical Material

Amend ¶ 45 as indicated following:

¶ 45. Article I.—There ~~shall be a continuance of an episcopacy in The United Methodist Church of like plan, powers, privileges, and duties as now exist in The Methodist Church and in The Evangelical United Brethren Church in all those matters in which they agree and may be considered identical; and the differences between these historic episcopacies are deemed to be reconciled and harmonized by and in this Plan of Union and Constitution of The United Methodist Church and actions taken pursuant thereto so that a unified superintendency and episcopacy is hereby created and established of, in, and by those who now are and shall be episcopal leadership and supervision through~~ bishops of The United Methodist Church; ~~and the~~

~~said episcopacy shall further, who shall~~ have such powers, privileges, and duties as are herein set forth.

Rationale:

The material proposed for deletion is of historical significance but has no function in the life of the Church. No person who was a bishop of The Methodist Church or The Evangelical United Brethren Church is currently an effective bishop of The United Methodist Church.

¶46.

Petition Number: 60213-MH-¶46-C-$-G; Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. Wolover, Amber - Sun Prairie, WI, USA for Wisconsin Annual Conference.

Global Church Structure - Episcopacy

Amend paragraph 46 as follows:

¶ 46. Article II.—The bishops shall be elected by the respective ~~jurisdictional and central conferences~~ regional conferences and consecrated in the historic manner at such time and place as may be fixed ~~by the General Conference for those elected by the jurisdictions and by each central conference for those elected by such central conference~~ by each connectional conference.

AND

Amend paragraph 47 as follows:

¶ 47. Article III.—There shall be a Council of Bishops composed of all the bishops of The United Methodist Church. The council shall meet at least once a year and plan for the general oversight and promotion of the temporal and spiritual interests of the entire Church and for carrying into effect the rules, regulations, and responsibilities prescribed and enjoined by the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference and in accord with the provisions set forth in this Plan of Union.

AND

Insert new paragraph between ¶¶ 47, 48 as follows:

¶ 48. Article IV.—The bishops of each connectional conference shall constitute a connectional College of Bishops. Such connectional College of Bishops may meet according to its needs in order to plan for the general oversight and promotion of the temporal and spiritual interests of the connection.

AND

Amend paragraph 48 as follows:

¶ 49. Article V.—The bishops of each ~~jurisdictional~~

~~and central conference~~ regional conference shall constitute a regional College of Bishops, and such College of Bishops shall arrange the plan of episcopal supervision of the annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions within their respective territories.

AND

Amend paragraph 49 as follows:

¶ 50. Article VI.—The bishops shall have residential presidential supervision in the ~~jurisdictional or central conferences~~ regional conferences in which they are elected or to which they are transferred. Bishops may be transferred from one ~~jurisdiction region~~ to another ~~jurisdiction region~~ region for presidential and residential supervision under the following conditions: (1) The transfer of bishops may be on either of two bases: (a) a ~~jurisdiction region~~ region that receives a bishop by transfer from another ~~jurisdiction region~~ region may transfer to that ~~jurisdiction region~~ region or to a third ~~jurisdiction region~~ region one of its own bishops eligible for transfer, so that the number transferred in by each ~~jurisdiction region~~ region shall be balanced by the number transferred out; or (b) a ~~jurisdiction region~~ region may receive a bishop from another ~~jurisdiction region~~ region and not transfer out a member of its own College of Bishops. (2) No bishop shall be transferred unless that bishop shall have specifically consented. (3) No bishop shall be eligible for transfer unless the bishop shall have served one quadrennium in the ~~jurisdiction region~~ region that elected the bishop to the episcopacy. (4) All such transfers shall require the approval by a majority vote of the members present and voting of the ~~jurisdictional regional~~ regional committees on episcopacy of the ~~jurisdictions regions~~ regions that are involved. After the above procedures have been followed, the transferring bishop shall become a member of the receiving College of Bishops and shall be subject to residential assignment by that ~~jurisdictional regional~~ regional conference.

A bishop may be assigned by the Council of Bishops for presidential service or other temporary service in another ~~jurisdiction region~~ region than that which elected the bishop, provided that the request is made by a majority of the bishops in the ~~jurisdiction region~~ region of the proposed service.

In the case of an emergency in any ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~ region through the death or disability of a bishop or other cause, the ~~Council of Bishops~~ respective connectional College of Bishops may assign a bishop from another ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~ region to the work of the said ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~ region, with the consent of a majority of the bishops of that ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~ region.

AND

Amend paragraph 50 as follows:

¶ 51. Article VII.—¶ 50. Article VI.—The bishops, ~~both active and retired, of The Evangelical United Breth-~~

~~ren Church and of The Methodist Church at the time union is consummated shall be bishops of The United Methodist Church.~~

~~The bishops of The Methodist Church elected by the jurisdictions, the active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church shall have life tenure. Each bishop elected by a central conference of The Methodist Church shall have such tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined.~~

Each bishop shall have such tenure as has been determined by the connectional conference within which said bishop has been elected.

The ~~jurisdictional conference~~ regional conference shall elect a standing committee on episcopacy to consist of one clergy and one lay delegate from each annual conference, on nomination of the annual conference delegation. The committee shall review the work of the bishops, pass on their character and official administration, and report to the ~~jurisdictional conference~~ regional conference its findings for such action as the conference may deem appropriate within its constitutional warrant of power. The committee shall recommend the assignments of the bishops to their respective residences for final action by the ~~jurisdictional conference~~ regional conference.

AND

Amend paragraph 51 as follows:

¶ 52. Article VIII.—A bishop presiding over an annual, ~~central, or jurisdictional,~~ connectional, or regional conference shall decide all questions of law coming before the bishop in the regular business of a session, provided that such questions be presented in writing and that the decisions be recorded in the journal of the conference . . .

AND

Amend paragraph 52 as follows:

¶ 53. Article IX.—The bishops of the several ~~jurisdictional and central~~ connectional and regional conferences shall preside in the session of their respective conferences.

AND

Amend paragraph 53 as follows:

¶ 54. Article X.—In each annual conference there shall be one or more district superintendents who shall assist the bishop in the administration of the annual conference and shall have such responsibilities and term of office as the ~~General Conference~~ respective connectional conferences shall prescribe.

AND

Amend paragraph 54 as follows:

¶ 55. Article XI.—The bishops shall appoint, after consultation with the district superintendents, ministers to the charges; and they shall have such responsibilities and authorities as the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference and connectional conferences shall prescribe.

Budget Implications: estimated between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000.

There will probably be some additional costs related to connectional conferences, committees, etc., but these costs may be offset by a possible reduction in costs related to the meeting of the Global Connection. If the business of the North America connection is removed from the agenda of the Global Connectional Conference, the duration of that meeting will be less than the current General Conference, perhaps by three or four days, resulting in a reduction in costs for that meeting.

The most significant increase in costs will probably involve the meetings of the connectional conferences. This proposal would require each connectional conference to meet quadrennially, prior to the Global Connectional Conference. Depending upon when and where the connectional conferences meet, the incremental cost of these meetings is estimated to be between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000. GCFA will be asked to develop more accurate cost projections.

Any incremental cost increases will also need to be examined in the context of the overall budget for the 2016 General Conference budget of over US$10 million.

*Additional Budget Implications will be provided by the NEJ Structure Task Force.

Rationale:

This resolution provides enabling changes to the Book of Discipline for the larger proposal that creates an equitable Global Structure.

The new structure shall consist of a Global Connection, which would meet at the Global Connectional Conference quadrennially to address global matters pertaining to The United Methodist Church. New “United . . .

¶46.

Petition Number: 60525-MH-¶46-C-G; Brooks, Lonnie D. - Anchorage, AK, USA.

Election of CC Bishops

Amend ¶¶ 46 and 542.2 as follows:

¶ 46. Article II.—The bishops shall be elected by the respective jurisdictional and central conferences and consecrated in the historic manner at such time and place as may be fixed by the General Conference for those elected by the jurisdictions and by each central conference for those elected by such central conference, provided that episcopal elections in central conferences shall be held at a regular, not an extra, session of the central conference, except in the case where an unexpected vacancy must be filled.

. . .

¶ 542.2. Each central conference shall meet within the year succeeding the session of the General Conference at such time and place as the central conference itself or its bishops may determine; for the purpose of electing bishops when vacancies occur and for attending to other matters as required. ~~with the~~ The central conference has the right to hold such adjourned sessions as it may determine. The sessions of said conference shall be presided over by the bishops. In case no bishop is present, the conference shall elect a temporary president from among its own members. The bishops resident in a central conference or a majority of them, with the concurrence of the executive committee or other authorized committee, shall have the authority to call an extra session of the central conference to be held at the time and place designated by them.

. . .

Include the following provision in the adoption of the proposed changes:

The changes in ¶ 542 shall be effective if and when the proposed changes in ¶ 46 have been certified by the Council of Bishops.

Rationale:

As is the case for the jurisdictions, episcopal elections in the central conferences should be held in the regular sessions of those conferences, except when unexpected vacancies occur because of the death or early retirement of one or more bishops.

¶46.

Petition Number: 60987-MH-¶46-C-!-G; Merrick, Tracy R. - Wexford, PA, USA for NEJ Global Structure Task Force.

Global Connectional Conference - Episcopacy

Amend ¶ 46 as follows:

¶ 46. Article II.—The bishops shall be elected by the respective ~~jurisdictional and central conferences~~ regional conferences and consecrated in the historic manner at such time and place as may be fixed ~~by the General Conference for those elected by the jurisdictions and by each central conference for those elected by such central conference~~ by each connectional conference.

Amend ¶ 47 as follows:

¶ 47. Article III.—There shall be a Council of Bishops composed of all the bishops of The United Methodist Church. The council shall meet at least once a year and plan for the general oversight and promotion of the temporal and spiritual interests of the entire Church and for carrying into effect the rules, regulations, and responsibilities prescribed and enjoined by the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference and in accord with the provisions set forth in this Plan of Union.

Insert new paragraph between ¶¶ 47, 48 as follows:

¶ 48. Article IV.—The bishops of each connectional conference shall constitute a connectional College of Bishops. Such connectional College of Bishops may meet according to its needs in order to plan for the general oversight and promotion of the temporal and spiritual interests of the connection.

Amend ¶ 48 as follows:

~~¶ 48 Article III~~ ¶ 49. Article V.—The bishops of each ~~jurisdictional and central conference regional conference~~ shall constitute a regional College of Bishops, and such College of Bishops shall arrange the plan of episcopal supervision of the annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions within their respective territories.

Amend paragraph 49 as follows:

~~¶ 49 Article V~~ ¶ 50. Article VI.—The bishops shall have residential presidential supervision in the ~~jurisdictional or central conferences regional conferences~~ in which they are elected or to which they are transferred. Bishops may be transferred from one jurisdiction region to another jurisdiction region for presidential and residential supervision under the following conditions: (1) The transfer of bishops may be on either of two bases: (a) a jurisdiction region that receives a bishop by transfer from another jurisdiction region may transfer to that jurisdiction region or to a third jurisdiction region one of its own bishops eligible for transfer, so that the number transferred in by each jurisdiction region shall be balanced by the number transferred out; or (b) a jurisdiction region may receive a bishop from another jurisdiction region and not transfer out a member of its own College of Bishops. (2) No bishop shall be transferred unless that bishop shall have specifically consented. (3) No bishop shall be eligible for transfer unless the bishop shall have served one quadrennium in the jurisdiction region that elected the bishop to the episcopacy. (4) All such transfers shall require the approval by a majority vote of the members present and voting of the ~~jurisdictional regional~~ al committees on episcopacy of the ~~jurisdictions regions~~ that are involved. After the above procedures have been followed, the transferring bishop shall become a member of the receiving College of Bishops and shall be subject to residential assignment by that ~~jurisdictional regional~~ regional conference.

A bishop may be assigned by the Council of Bishops for presidential service or other temporary service in another jurisdiction region than that which elected the bishop, provided that the request is made by a majority of the bishops in the jurisdiction region of the proposed service.

In the case of an emergency in any ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~ through the death or disability of a bishop or other cause, the Council of Bishops ~~respective connectional College of Bishops~~ may assign a bishop from another ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~ to the work of the said ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~, with the consent of a majority of the bishops of that ~~jurisdiction or central conference region~~.

Amend paragraph 50 as follows:

~~¶ 50 Article VI~~ ¶ 51. Article VII.— The bishops, both active and retired, of The Evangelical United Brethren Church and of The Methodist Church at the time union is consummated shall be bishops of The United Methodist Church.

~~The bishops of The Methodist Church elected by the jurisdictions, active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church shall have life tenure. Each bishop elected by a central conference of The Methodist Church shall have such tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined. Each bishop shall have such tenure as has been determined by the connectional conference within which said bishop has been elected.~~

The ~~jurisdictional conference regional conference~~ shall elect a standing committee on episcopacy to consist of one clergy and one lay delegate from each annual conference, on nomination of the annual conference delegation. The committee shall review the work of the bishops, pass on their character and official administration, and report to the ~~jurisdictional conference regional conference~~ its findings for such action as the conference may deem appropriate within its constitutional warrant of power. The committee shall recommend the assignments of the bishops to their respective residences for final action by the ~~jurisdictional conference regional conference~~.

Amend paragraph 51 as follows:

~~¶ 51 Article VII~~ ¶ 52. Article VIII.—A bishop presiding over an annual, ~~central, or jurisdictional connectional or regional conference~~ shall decide all questions of law coming before the bishop in the regular business of a session, provided that such questions be presented in writing and that the decisions be recorded in the journal of the conference . . .

Amend paragraph 52 as follows:

~~¶ 52 Article VIII~~ ¶ 53. Article IX.—The bishops of the several ~~jurisdictional and central~~ connectional and regional conferences shall preside in the session of their respective conferences.

Amend paragraph 53 as follows:

~~¶ 53 Article IX~~ ¶ 54. Article X.—In each annual conference there shall be one or more district superintendents who shall assist the bishop in the administration of the annual conference and shall have such responsibilities and term of office as the ~~General Conference~~ respective connectional conferences shall prescribe.

Amend paragraph 54 as follows:

~~¶ 54 Article X~~ ¶ 55. Article XI.—The bishops shall appoint, after consultation with the district superintendents, ministers to the charges; and they shall have such responsibilities and authorities as the ~~General Conference~~ Global Connectional Conference and connectional conferences shall prescribe.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS:

The actual incremental costs of this proposal will be dependent upon the global structure finally adopted by General Conference.

There will probably be some additional costs related to connectional conferences, committees, etc., but these costs may be offset by a possible reduction in costs related to the meeting of the Global Connection. If the business of the North America connection is removed from the agenda of the Global Connectional Conference, the duration of that meeting will be less than the current General Conference, perhaps by three or four days, resulting in a reduction in costs for that meeting.

The most significant increase in costs will probably involve the meetings of the connectional conferences. This proposal would require each connectional conference to meet quadrennially, prior to the Global Connectional Conference. Depending upon when and where the connectional conferences meet, the incremental cost of these meetings is estimated to be between US$300,000 and US$1,000,000. GCFA will be asked to develop more accurate cost projections.

Any incremental cost increases will also need to be examined in the context of the overall budget for the 2016 General Conference budget of over US$10 million.

Rationale:

These constitutional amendments are a component of the Proposal to Restructure the Global UMC. The amendments in this petition indicate that bishops will be elected by regional conferences, retain the Council of Bishops, establish connectional and regional colleges of bishops, and give connections an option to designate episcopal tenure.

¶47.

Petition Number: 60066-MH-¶47-C-G; Harper, Trey - Forest, MS, USA for Mississippi Annual Conference.

Tenure of Bishops

Amend ¶¶ 47, 48, and 50 as follows:

¶ 47. There shall be a Council of Bishops composed of all active bishops of The United Methodist Church. Upon completing active service in the office of bishop, membership in the Council of Bishops shall cease.

¶ 48. The active bishops of each jurisdiction and central conference shall constitute a College of Bishops, and such College of Bishops shall arrange the plan of episcopal supervision of the annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions within their respective territories. Upon completing active service in the office of bishop, membership in the College of Bishops shall cease.

¶ 50. The bishops, both active and retired . . .

The bishops of The Methodist Church elected by the jurisdictions, the active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church before 2020 shall have life tenure. Beginning with jurisdictional conferences in 2020, bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church shall have a tenure of two quadrennia. If a bishop is elected to complete the term of a bishop who vacated his or her office, this shall not count toward the limit of two quadrennia. Those holding the office of bishop shall retain membership in their home annual conferences while serving as bishop and may return to serve as an elder in their home annual conference after completing their term as an active bishop. Each bishop elected by a central conference shall have such tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined . . .

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church does not grant unlimited tenure to bishops anywhere in the world except in the US, where lifetime tenure in such a powerful position inevitably invites abuse of power and creates a mistrust with the local churches that hinders the ministry of the Kingdom.

¶47.

Petition Number: 60510-MH-¶47-C-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

Tenure of Bishops

Amend ¶¶ 47, 48, and 50 as indicated following:

¶ 47. Article III.—There shall be a Council of Bishops composed of all the residential bishops of The United Methodist Church. The council shall meet at least once a year and plan for the general oversight and promotion of the temporal and spiritual interests of the entire Church and for carrying into effect the rules, regulations, and responsibilities prescribed and enjoined by the General Conference and in accord with the provisions set forth in this Plan of Union. The word residential shall be understood to indicate those bishops who have not retired and whose terms of office have not expired.

¶ 48. Article IV.—The residential bishops of each jurisdictional and central conference shall constitute a College of Bishops, and such College of Bishops shall arrange the plan of episcopal supervision of the annual conferences, missionary conferences, and missions within their respective territories.

¶ 50. Article VI.—~~The bishops, both active and retired, of The Evangelical United Brethren Church and of The Methodist Church at the time union is consummated shall be bishops of The United Methodist Church.~~

The bishops of The Methodist Church elected by the jurisdictions, the active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and b Bishops elected by the jurisdictions and central conferences of The United Methodist Church shall have life tenure a term of office as determined by the General Conference, provided that the term established shall be the same for all bishops. Each bishop elected by a central conference of The Methodist Church shall have such tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined.

Any bishop who retires while in residential status as a bishop will continue to be a bishop. However such a bishop will have membership in an annual conference of his or her choosing with the consent of the presiding bishop and will no longer have membership in a College of Bishops or in the Council of Bishops. A retired bishop will have all the powers, duties, and privileges of any other retired elder as long as he or she remains in good standing.

Insert new paragraph ¶ 406 and amend existing ¶ 409 as indicated. Renumber all paragraphs as appropriate.

¶406.—Term of Office—Bishops elected by the jurisdictions and central conferences shall have a term of office of eight years, and a bishop may be reelected for one additional eight-year term. If a bishop is elected as provided in ¶ 407 because of an unanticipated vacancy in the office, then the bishop's term and limits thereto will be as follows, where for this purpose the quadrennium begins on 01 September of the year in which General Conference is held:

1. If at least twenty-four months remain in the quadrennium at the time of election, then the bishop's term of office shall be four years plus the amount of time served in the quadrennium of election.

2. If less time than twenty-four months remains in the quadrennium at the time of election, then the bishop's term of office shall be eight years plus the amount of time served in the quadrennium of election.

3. In the case of a bishop subject either to §1. or 2., the bishop shall be eligible for election to one additional eight-year term. However, no elder who has served at least fourteen years as a bishop shall be eligible for reelection as a bishop.

¶ 409. Status of Retired Bishops—~~A retired bishop is a bishop of the Church in every respect and continues to function as a member of the Council of Bishops in accordance with the Constitution and other provisions of the Discipline. Retired bishops shall become members of an annual conference of their choosing with the consent of the presiding bishop.~~

1. Retired bishops may participate in the Council of Bishops and its committees, but without vote. They may preside over sessions of an annual conference, provisional annual conference, or mission if requested to do so by the bishop assigned to that conference, or in the event of that bishop's incapacity, by the president of the College of Bishops to which the conference is related. Retired bishops elected by the Council of Bishops may serve as the executive secretary and the ecumenical officer of the Council. In emergency situations, where the resident bishop is unable to preside, the College of Bishops shall assign an effective or retired bishop to preside over the sessions of the annual conference (¶ 48). They may not make appointments or preside at the jurisdiction or central conference. However, when a retired bishop is appointed by the Council of Bishops to a vacant episcopal area or parts of an area under the provisions of ¶¶ 409.3, 410.1, or 410.3, that bishop may function as a residential bishop in the effective relationship.

These implementing changes will be effective if and when the Council of Bishops certifies the enactment of the enabling changes in the Constitution.

Rationale:

Life tenure is inconsistent with realities of human development and interaction. Accountability to the Church and changes for bishops demand election be for limited terms. Moreover, membership of retired bishops should revert to the annual conference. And all bishops of the Church should have the same term of office.

¶49.

Petition Number: 61008-MH-¶49-C-G; Ritter, Chris - Geneseo, IL, USA.

Organic Jurisdictional Solution – Assignment of Excess Bishops

Amend ¶49: Add the words at the end of the paragraph: Bishops without episcopal assignment due to dissolution or downsizing of their jurisdiction may be received into another jurisdiction by a majority vote of the members present and voting of the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy and by consent of a majority of the bishops of that same jurisdiction. These bishops may alternately be assigned duties by the Council of Bishops as elsewhere set forth.

Rationale:

This is one piece of a larger legislative agenda to achieve amicable unity in The UMC through the “Organic Jurisdictional Solution.” This item defines the options available to surplus bishops whose jurisdiction may have dissolved or downsized due to due to annual conferences exercising right of jurisdictional transfer. See jurisdictionalsolution.org.

¶50.

Petition Number: 60548-MH-¶50-C-G; Fordham, Rita R. - Dalton, GA, USA for Abundant Life Sunday School Class - Dalton First UMC. 5 Similar Petitions

Episcopal Term Limits

Amend ¶ 50 as follows:

¶ 50. Article VI.—The bishops . . .

The bishops of The Methodist Church elected by the jurisdictions, the active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church prior to 2020 shall have life tenure. Beginning in 2020, all new elections for bishop in the jurisdictions and central conferences of The United Methodist Church shall be to elect elders for a single term of no longer than sixteen (16) years or until they reached the age the General Conference has specified for mandatory retirement (whichever comes sooner) to the office of bishop. This term may not be extended. No individual who has previously served as bishop may be re-elected to the office. All bishops serving terms to which they were elected before 2020 shall fully enjoy all the rights and privileges afforded to them by the 2012 edition of the Book of Discipline for the duration of this term. Each bishop elected by a central conference

~~of The Methodist Church shall have tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined.”~~⁹⁸

The jurisdictional conference . . . by the jurisdictional conference.

~~98.—See Judicial Council Decisions 4, 303, 361, 799.~~

Rationale:

This would enhance accountability and better reflect our tradition’s foundational belief that elders and bishops are the same order. 16 years would allow bishops time to itinerate as needed, while making more room for the best new leadership available. Episcopal re-elections can unhelpfully politicize and compromise bishops’ leadership.

¶50.

Petition Number: 60600-MH-¶50-C-G; Wilson, Peggy - Marshall, TX, USA for Summit UMC - Marshall, TX.

Office of Bishop

Amend Division Three, Episcopal Supervision ¶ 50, Article VI of the Constitution

Resolution Concerning the Office of Bishop

~~¶50. Bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church shall have life tenure. Each bishop elected by a central conference of the Methodist Church shall have such tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined.~~

A bishop in The United Methodist Church shall serve the office for eight years total and eight years of consecutive service in one annual conference. Such limitation does not preclude one from maintaining the full ministry of ordained elder with appointments to the local church or to extended ministry until the mandatory age of retirement.

Rationale:

Whereas the position of bishop shares in the full ministry as ordained elders, ¶ 404, and

Whereas the task of superintending in The United Methodist Church extends from the office of bishop to the district superintendent, ¶ 401, a shared task although differing in assigned responsibilities, and

Whereas the office of district . . .

¶50.

Petition Number: 60658-MH-¶50-C-G; Dumont, Christine M. - Murfreesboro, TN, USA.

Inclusive Language

Amend ¶ 50. Article VI, as follows:

¶ 50. Article VI.—The bishops . . .

The bishops of The Methodist Church elected by the jurisdictions, the active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and bishops elected by the jurisdictions of The United Methodist Church shall have life tenure. Each bishop elected by a central conference of The Methodist Church shall have such tenure as the central conference electing said bishop ~~him~~ shall have determined.

Rationale:

Reference to “him” should be deleted since it implies that women are excluded from the right to be consecrated as bishops.

¶50.

Petition Number: 60909-MH-¶50-C-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Term Episcopacy

Amend to read:

~~. . . The bishops of The Methodist Church, elected by the jurisdictions, the active bishops of The Evangelical United Brethren Church at the time of union, and bishops elected by The United Methodist Church shall have life tenure. Each bishop elected by a central conference of The Methodist Church shall have such tenure as the central conference electing him shall have determined . . .~~

Incumbent bishops in The United Methodist Church shall be entitled to the term of service for which they were last elected. Bishops shall be elected quadrennially. Newly elected bishops shall serve for an initial term not to exceed eight years, with the possibility of additional quadrennial elections. A standard maximum tenure for episcopal service may be set by any central conference for its elected bishops. Bishops shall retain the status of ordained elder throughout their time of service within or outside their episcopal role. The honorary title of “bishop” may be retained among those who have served in this office.

Rationale:

A singular core standard will serve us better than the present double standard favoring instant life tenure reserved for U.S. jurisdictions. Quadrennial reelection allows flexibility for changing leadership needs in the church and vocational renewal for incumbent bishops. Parity of influence and accountability among bishops internationally and bishops among their . . .

¶50.

Petition Number: 60912-MH-¶50-C-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Council of Bishops to Have Accountability Authority

¶ 50 of the Constitution to add language after the last paragraph:

These provisions shall not preclude that adoption by the General Conference of provisions for the Council of Bishops to hold its individual members accountable for their work, both as general superintendents and as presidents and residents in episcopal areas.

Rationale:

Judicial Decision 475 ruled unconstitutional the Council of Bishops holding its individual members accountable for their work, referencing ¶ 50 of the Constitution. This legislation follows Judicial Decision 1275 requirement of a legislative resolution from General Conference so the Council of Bishops may provide oversight of one of its members.

¶54

Petition Number: 60511-MH-¶54-C-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

No Guarantee of Appointment

Amend ¶ 54 as indicated following:

¶ 54. Article X.—The bishops shall appoint, after consultation with the district superintendents, ministers to the charges; and they shall have such responsibilities and authorities as the General Conference shall prescribe. A presiding bishop has the authority, but not the obligation, to appoint any minister to any charge within the annual conference where the minister has membership and where the charge is located within the conference over which the bishop presides. This provision is not a guarantee of appointment of any minister. Moreover, the guarantee of a right to trial prescribed in Restrictive Rule 4, ¶ 20, of this Constitution is not a guarantee of appointment or a guarantee of lifetime employment for any minister. General Conference may provide for the bishops to make other appointments of ministers and other persons in representative service in the Church.

Rationale:

This change in the Constitution will remove the obstacles to ending guaranteed appointment that were identified by the Judicial Council in Decision 1226.

¶54.

Petition Number: 60523-MH-¶54-C-G; Brooks, Lonnie D. - Anchorage, AK, USA.

Consultation

Amend ¶ 54 as follows:

¶ 54. Article X.—The bishops shall appoint, after consultation with the district superintendents and others as designated by the General Conference or selected by the bishop, ministers to the charges; and they shall have such responsibilities and authorities as the General Conference shall prescribe.

Rationale:

The specific reference to district superintendents in ¶ 54 was never intended to limit the consultation process to superintendents. This change will clarify that, enabling such processes as are defined in ¶ 426.

¶271.

Petition Number: 60099-MH-¶271-G; Stanovsky, Elaine - Greenwood Village, CO, USA for General Board of Discipleship.

Clarification of Role of Certified Lay Minister

Delete current ¶ 271 as part of reorganization of Lay Ministries.

Rationale:

Reformatting provides consistency, reduces confusion, and makes functions both broader and more specific so that Certified Lay Ministers might be utilized beyond pastoral leadership in small membership churches, emphasizing “team ministry” under clergy supervision. This change also clearly separates the CLM from the role of licensed local pastor.

¶271.

Petition Number: 60480-MH-¶271-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries to Review Certified Lay Ministry Candidates

Amend ¶ 271.2-5

2. A certified lay servant or a person with equivalent training as defined by his or her district or conference may be certified as a lay minister by the District Committee on Ordained Ministry or the District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries after he or she has: . . .

e) Made application in writing to the District Committee on Ordained Ministry or the District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries.

f) Appeared before the District Committee on Ordained Ministry or the District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries for review and approval.

3. The certified lay minister is to apply in writing for recertification biannually to the District Committee on Ordained Ministry or the District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries upon: . . .

4. The certified lay minister under assignment is to appear bi-annually before the District Committee on Ordained Ministry or the District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries for recertification after: . . .

5. Transfer of Certification by Certified Lay Ministers—A certified lay minister who moves may transfer certification to the new district upon receipt of a letter from the previous district’s Committee on Ordained Ministry or District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries confirming current certification.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section X – Clarifying the Status of the Certified Lay Minister, Number 1 – The district Committee on Lay Servant Ministries (¶ 668) should be charged to review certified lay ministry candidates.

¶305.

Petition Number: 60484-MH-¶305-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Deepening the Theology of Ordination

Amend ¶ 305

¶ 305. Orders in Relation to the Ministry of All Christians—

. . . Within the people of God, some persons are called to the ministry of deacon. . . . This ministry exemplifies and leads the Church in the servanthood every Christian is called to live both in the church and the world. ~~The deacon embodies the interrelationship between worship in the gathered community and service to God in the world. Those called to the ministry of deacon are called to witness to the Word in their words and actions, and to embody and lead the community’s service in the world for the sake of enacting God’s compassion and justice.~~

Within the people of God, other persons are called to the ministry of elder . . . assisted the bishop in leading the gathered community in the celebration of sacraments and the guidance and care of its communal life. ~~The ministry of elder exemplifies and leads the Church in service to God in the world, in remembering and celebrating the gifts of God and living faithfully in response to God's grace. Those called to the ministry of elder are called to bear authority and responsibility to preach and teach the Word, to administer the sacraments, and to order the life of the church so it can be faithful in making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.~~

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and the Nature of Ordination, Number 1 – Deepening the theology of ordination.

¶310.

Petition Number: 61033-MH-¶310-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. 2 Similar Petitions

Amend Footnote

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 310.2 (d) Footnote 3 (On Page 226) as follows:

~~BOD 2012 footnote 3 ¶310.2(d) The General Conference, in response to expressions throughout the Church regarding homosexuality and ordination, reaffirms the present language of the Discipline regarding the character and commitment of persons seeking ordination and affirms its high standards.~~

Rationale:

The Christian Church must continue to work toward inclusion and justice for all God's people. Clergy are required to uphold the highest standards of holy living in the church and world, and the same expectations of Christian conduct apply regardless of sexual orientation or gender identity of the clergyperson.

¶310.

Petition Number: 61034-MH-¶310-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 2 Similar Petitions

Amend Footnote

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 310.2 (d), footnote 3 (located on page 228) as follows:

The General Conference has made it clear in the "Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task" (Part II of the Discipline) that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are our guidelines. "United Methodists share with other Christians the conviction that Scripture is the primary source and criterion for Christian doctrine.

~~In the Social Principles, the General Conference has said that "we do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching." Furthermore, the The Social Principles state that "we affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between two persons a man and a woman. We believe that God's blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage." Also, "we affirm the integrity of single persons, and we reject all social practices that discriminate or social attitudes that are prejudicial against persons because they are single."~~

Rationale:

The Christian church must continue to work toward inclusion and justice for all God's people. Clergy are required to uphold the highest standards of holy living in the church and world, and the same expectations of Christian conduct apply regardless of sexual orientation or gender identity of the clergyperson.

¶310.

Petition Number: 61035-MH-¶310-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table. Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan Annual Conference. Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference. 7 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Amend Footnote

Amend ¶ 310.2.d), the footnote referenced therein, footnote 3, beginning on page 225 as follows:

¶310.2.d), Footnote 3. . . .

~~The General Conference, in response to expressions throughout the Church regarding homosexuality and ordination, reaffirms the present language of the Discipline regarding the character and commitment of person seeking ordination and affirms its high standards.~~

For more than 200 years candidates for ordination have been asked Wesley's Questions . . .

. . .

In the Social Principles, the General Conference has said that ~~"we do not condone the practice of homosexual-~~

ity and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.” Furthermore, the Principles state that “we affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between two people who are married to each other a man and a woman. We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, which is traditionally between one man and one woman, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage.” Also, “we affirm the integrity of single persons, and we reject all social practices that discriminate or social attitudes that are prejudicial against persons because they are single.”

...

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶310.

Petition Number: 61037-MH-¶310-G; Frech, Cheryl - Norman, OK, USA.

Amend Footnote

Delete ¶ 310.2(d) footnote 3 (found in the third paragraph of the footnote on page 226 of the 2012 BOD and tenth paragraph of the footnote on page 228):

~~The General Conference, in response to expressions throughout the Church regarding homosexuality and ordination, reaffirms the present language of the Discipline regarding the character and commitment of persons seeking ordination and affirms its high standards.~~

Amend Footnote 3 of ¶ 310.2 (d) (found in the tenth paragraph of the footnote, on p. 228 of the 2012 BOD):

The General Conference has made it clear in the “Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task” (Part II of the Discipline) that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are our guidelines. “United Methodists share with other Christians the conviction that Scripture is the primary source and criterion for Christian doctrine.”

~~In the Social Principles, the General Conference has said that “we do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.” Furthermore, the Principles state that “we affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment,~~

~~and shared fidelity between a man and a woman. We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage.” Also, “we affirm the integrity of single persons, and we reject all social practices that discriminate or social attitudes that are prejudicial against persons because they are single.”~~

Rationale:

Ordination requirements and processes requiring Christian conduct should be the same for all.

¶310.

Petition Number: 61038-MH-¶310-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Amend Footnote

Amend footnote 3 of ¶ 310.2(d), by deletion and addition as indicated:

The General Conference, ~~in response to expressions throughout the Church regarding homosexuality and ordination,~~ reaffirms the present language of the Discipline regarding the character and commitment of persons seeking ordination and affirms its high standards.

...

~~In the Social Principles, the General Conference has said that we “do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.” Furthermore, the Principles~~ The Social Principles state that “we affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity,” ~~between a man and a woman. And that,~~ “We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage.” Also, “we affirm the integrity of single persons, and we reject all social practices that discriminate or social attitudes that are prejudicial against persons because they are single.”

Rationale:

The Book of Discipline’s rules prohibiting ordination and continued service of all non-celibate homosexual persons are unreasonable, discriminatory, and contrary to our commitment to all persons in the name of Christ. Accordingly, we encourage General Conference to amend this paragraph.

¶310.

Petition Number: 61040-MH-¶310-G; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference.

Amend Footnote

Amend ¶ 310.2(d) footnote 3 by deleting from “In adopting the statements. . . .” to “affirms its high standards” and from “The General Conference has made it clear” to “because they are single” as follows:

3. ~~In adopting the statements in ¶¶ 304.2 and 310.2d on the moral and social responsibility of ordained ministers, the General Conference seeks to elevate the standards by calling for a more thoroughgoing moral commitment by the candidate and for a more careful and thorough examination of candidates by district committees and boards of the ministry. The legislation in no way implies that the use of tobacco is a morally indifferent question. In the light of the developing evidence against the use of tobacco, the burden of proof would be upon all users to show that their use of it is consistent with the highest ideals of the Christian life. Similarly, regarding beverage alcohol, the burden of proof would be upon users to show that their action is consistent with the ideals of excellence of mind, purity of body, and responsible social behavior.~~

~~Therefore, the changes here do not relax the traditional view concerning the use of tobacco and beverage alcohol by ordained ministers in The United Methodist Church. Rather they call for higher standards of self-discipline and habit formation in all personal and social relationships. They call for dimensions of moral commitment that go far beyond any specific practices which might be listed. (See Judicial Council Decision 318.)~~

~~The General Conference, in response to expressions throughout the Church regarding homosexuality and ordination, reaffirms the present language of the Discipline regarding the character and commitment of persons seeking ordination and affirms its high standards.~~

For more than 200 years candidates for ordination have been asked Wesley’s Questions, including “. . . Have they a clear, sound understanding; a right judgment in the things of God; a just conception of salvation by faith? . . .” (¶ 310). All candidates agree to make a complete dedication of themselves to the highest ideals of the Christian life and to this end agree “to exercise responsible self-control, by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationships, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God” (¶ 304.2).

The character and commitment of candidates for the ordained ministry is described or examined in six places in the Book of Discipline (¶¶ 304, 310.2, 324, 330, 333, and 335). These say in part: “Only those shall be elected to full membership who are of unquestionable moral character and genuine piety, sound in the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, and faithful in the discharge of their duties” (¶ 333).

The statement on ordination (¶ 304.2) states: “The Church expects those who seek ordination to make a complete dedication of themselves to the highest ideals of the Christian life . . . [and to] agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits. . . .”

There are eight crucial steps in the examination of candidates. They are:

(1) The self-examination of the individual seeking ordination as he or she responds to God’s call in personal commitment to Christ and his church.

(2) The decision of the committee on pastor-parish relations, which makes the first recommendation to the charge conference when a member seeks to become a candidate for ordained ministry.

(3) The decision of the charge conference, which must recommend the candidate.

(4) The decision of the district committee on ordained ministry, which must recommend the candidate to the conference Board of Ordained Ministry and, where applicable, the decision of the district conference.

(5) The decision of the Board of Ordained Ministry, which must recommend deacon’s ordination and provisional membership. See Judicial Council Decisions 513, 536, 542.

(6) The decision of the clergy members of the annual conference, who must elect candidates to provisional membership.

(7) The recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry for deacon’s or elder’s ordination and full membership.

(8) The election to deacon’s or elder’s ordination and full membership by the clergy members of the annual conference.

All clergy members of the annual conference are accountable as to character and effectiveness to the annual conference throughout their entire ministry.

~~The General Conference has made it clear in the “Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task” (Part II of the Discipline) that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are our guidelines. “United Methodists share with other Christians the conviction that Scripture is the primary source and criterion for Christian doctrine.”~~

~~In the Social Principles, the General Conference has said that we “do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.” Furthermore, the Principles state that “we~~

~~affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between a man and a woman. We believe that God's blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage." Also, "we affirm the integrity of single persons, and we reject all social practices that discriminate or social attitudes that are prejudicial against persons because they are single."~~

The General Conference affirms the wisdom of our heritage expressed in the disciplinary provisions relating to the character and commitment of ordained ministers. The United Methodist Church has moved away from prohibitions of specific acts, for such prohibitions can be endless. We affirm our trust in the covenant community and the process by which we ordain ministers.

In our covenant we are called to trust one another as we recommend, examine, and elect candidates for the ordained ministry and conference membership. See Judicial Council Decision 480.

Rationale:

Since 1972 The United Methodist Church has taken increasingly firmer positions opposing non-heterosexual orientations. Attempting to make all United Methodists conform to traditional beliefs has not decreased denominational tension. This petition attempts to relocate decision making to the appropriate level, i.e., annual conference and pastors, and ease tension.

¶310.2b2.

Petition Number: 60354-MH-¶310.2b2; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Translation and Cultural Accommodation for Candidates

Amend ¶ 310.2b)(2) and ¶ 666

¶ 310.2b)(2)

(2) a notarized statement . . . sexual misconduct, or child abuse.

The district committee on ordained ministry through the Board of Ordained Ministry shall seek ways to consider cultural and ethnic/racial realities and language translations as candidates in meeting meet these requirements, including interviews, psychological assessments, criminal background, and credit checks.

¶ 666. Add after current ¶ 666.3 and renumber following sub-points.

4. The committee, through the Board of Ordained Ministry, shall seek ways to make reasonable accommodations for cultural and ethnic/racial realities and language translations as candidates meet the requirements for candidacy, including interviews, psychological assessments, criminal background, and credit checks.

Rationale:

To honor the language and cultural realities of candidates who do not speak English as their first language and respond to the need for some candidates to need translation or other accommodation to successfully complete certain candidacy requirements.

¶310.2d.

Petition Number: 60625-MH-¶310.2d-G; Amerson, Philip A. - La Porte, IN, USA.

Candidacy and Certification for Licensed and Ordained Ministry

Amend ¶ 310.2.d:

¶ 303.2.d Candidacy and Certification for Licensed and Ordained Ministry

d) agree for the sake . . . and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God.³ ~~Where possible, t~~ The local church is encouraged to assist candidates with the expenses of candidacy;

Rationale:

Educational debt burdens too many clergy as they begin ministry. Every local church recommending candidates should commit to supporting those it recommends, no matter the circumstance. Prayers, encouragement and financial support should be unconditional, if the congregation truly supports candidates for ministry. The Dollars For Scholars (U. M. Higher Education . . .

¶310.2d.

Petition Number: 61043-MH-¶310.2d-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Candidacy

Amend ¶ 310.2(d) as follows:

. . . agree for the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness of the gospel, and in consideration of their influence as clergy, to make a complete dedication of themselves to the highest ideals of the Christian life as set forth in ¶¶ 103-105; 160-166.

To this end they shall agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, fidelity in ~~marriage~~ covenantal relationship and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God³. Where possible, the local church is encouraged to assist candidates with the expenses of candidacy;

¶313.2.

Petition Number: 60626-MH-¶313.2-G; Amerson, Philip A. - La Porte, IN, USA.

Continuation of Candidacy

Amend Discipline ¶ 313.2 :

¶ 313. Continuation of Candidacy—The progress . . .

1. The candidate . . .

2. The candidate is making satisfactory progress in his or her studies. A candidate preparing for ordained ministry who is enrolled as a student in a school, college, university, or school of theology recognized by the University Senate shall present annually to the district committee on ordained ministry an official transcript from the school the person is attending and provide a report as to whether his or her local church is supporting them spiritually and financially (see ¶ 246.8).

The transcript shall be considered by the district committee on ordained ministry as part of the evidence of his or her progress. The report of local church financial support may be used by the district superintendent to express gratitude for this support or encourage a local congregation improve its basic care for those it recommends.

Rationale:

Educational debt burdens too many clergy as they begin ministry. Every local church recommending candidates should commit to supporting those it recommends, no matter the circumstance. During early candidacy and ministerial education it is the District Committee that has a responsibility to support and encourage these candidates. The prayers, encouragement . . .

¶315.

Petition Number: 60184-MH-¶315-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

License for Pastoral Ministry

Amend ¶¶ 315.2c and 315.5

¶ 315.2c The studies for the license as a local pastor as prescribed and supervised by the ~~Division of Ordained Ministry~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry or one-third of their work for a Master of Divinity degree at a school of theology ~~listed by the University Senate~~ approved by the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry.

¶ 315.5 Licensed or ordained clergy from other denominations who have training equivalent to the studies for license as a local pastor prescribed by the ~~Division of Ordained Ministry~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry, but do not meet the educational requirements for provisional membership in the annual conference.

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to prescribe and supervise the studies for those seeking to be licensed for pastoral ministry in the respective annual conferences. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to . . .

¶315.

Petition Number: 60355-MH-¶315-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Three-Fourths Majority Vote – Licensing

Amend ¶ 315

¶ 315. License for Pastoral Ministry— . . . The Board of Ordained Ministry (¶ 635.2h) may recommend to the ~~executive~~ clergy session of the annual conference the licensing of those person who are: . . .

2.d) Been examined and recommended by a three-fourths majority vote of the district committee on ordained ministry (¶666.8); or . . .

...

6. In every case, those who are licensed shall have: . . .

b) Been approved by a three-fourths majority vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry (¶ 635.h); . . .

d) Received approval by a three-fourths majority vote of the clergy session.

Rationale:

To require a consistent three-fourths voting approval from the dCOM, BOM, and clergy session for the “milestone” candidacy, licensing, provisional membership, and full membership votes. Related ¶¶’s include 315; 322.1; 324; 330; and 335.

¶315.6c.

Petition Number: 60627-MH-¶315.6c-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Reduce Inappropriate Medical Disclosure and Discrimination – Licensed Ministry

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 315.6.c (License for Pastoral Ministry) as follows:

c) Provided the board with a satisfactory letter from a physician stating the individual’s good health and listing any medical restrictions or modifications as applicable. Disabilities and diagnoses are not to be construed as unfavorable health factors when a person with a disability or diagnosis is capable of meeting the professional standards and is able to render effective service as one licensed for pastoral ministry certificate of good health on a prescribed form from a physician approved by that board.

Rationale:

Replaces the health form with a letter from a physician, eliminating the high potential for confidential information to be disclosed in violation of the candidate’s privacy. Adds that disabilities / diagnoses are not grounds for lack of fitness for ministry, making the policy consistent with that for provisional members.

¶316.1.

Petition Number: 60485-MH-¶316.1-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Clarifying the Relation between Ordination and the Sacraments

Amend ¶ 316.1

¶ 316.1

. . . local pastors approved annually by the district committee on ordained ministry may be licensed by the bishop to perform all the duties of a pastor (¶ 340), including the presiding at celebration of the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion . . . while appointed to a particular charge or extension ministry. Presiding at the celebration of the sacraments involves taking responsibility to lead the gathered community in celebrating baptism and Holy Communion. For the purpose of these paragraphs . . .

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and the Nature of Ordination, Number 2 – Clarifying the Relation between Ordination and the Sacraments.

¶316.1.

Petition Number: 60628-MH-¶316.1-G; Lawton, George W. - Lakeside, MI, USA.

Duties of Pastor

Amend ¶ 316.1 by deleting the word “burial,” to read as follows:

¶ 316.1 Provisional elders approved annually by the Board of Ordained Ministry and local pastors approved annually by the district committee on ordained ministry may be licensed by the bishop to perform all the duties of a pastor (¶ 340), including the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion as well as the service of marriage (where state laws allow), ~~burial~~, confirmation, and membership reception . . . [The remaining words being unchanged.]

Rationale:

The requirement that Provisional Elders and licensed local pastors limit their officiating at funerals and memorial services for persons “people within or related to the community or ministry setting being served” (¶ 316.1) is unrealistic. Funerals and memorial services are an important way to maintain contact between the church and persons . . .

¶316.1.

Petition Number: 60651-MH-¶316.1-G; Miles, Rebekah L. - Dallas, TX, USA.

Appointments to Academic Settings

Amend ¶ 316.1 by adding two new sentences at the end of the existing 316.1:

. . . when approved by the bishop and the Board of Ordained Ministry. These extension ministries may include appointments as students in research doctoral programs that may lead to appointments in academic settings as instructors or professors in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church. These extension ministries may also include actual appointments as instructors or professors or administrators in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

This petition would encourage the strengthening of relationships between The United Methodist Church and the various schools, colleges, universities, and theological schools that are affiliated with the church as stipulated in the Discipline (Par. 1414.1). It would also bring ¶ 316.1

into conformity with §§ 343.1, 343.3, and 344.1 regarding appointments.

¶318.

Petition Number: 60185-MH-¶318-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Categories of Local Pastor

Amend §§ 318.1c (i), 318.1c (ii), 318.1c (iii), 318.2d (i), 318.2d (ii), 318.2d (iii), 318.3, 318.4

¶ 318.1 (c) who, unless they have completed Course of Study or other approved theological education, shall (i) ~~complete four courses per year in a Course of Study school, or (ii) shall~~ have made progress in the correspondence curriculum prescribed by the ~~General Board of Higher Education and Ministry~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry or (iii) (ii) be enrolled as a pre-theological or theological student in a college, university, or school of theology approved by the ~~University Senate~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry; (d) who, when they have completed the Course of Study, are involved in continuing education (¶ 351); (e) who shall not be enrolled as a full-time student in any school.

318.2d shall (i) ~~complete two courses per year in a Course of Study school, or (ii)~~ have made progress in the correspondence curriculum prescribed by the ~~General Board of Higher Education and Ministry~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry or (iii) (ii) be enrolled as a pre-theological or theological student in a college, university, or school of theology approved by the ~~University Senate~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry.

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to prescribe and supervise the studies for those seeking to be licensed for pastoral ministry in the respective annual conferences. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to . . .

¶318.1d.

Petition Number: 60486-MH-¶318.1d-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Recognize the Completion of a Master of Divinity as Education for Local Pastors

Amend ¶ 318.1(d)

(d) who, when they have completed the Course of Study or a Master of Divinity degree from a seminary listed by the University Senate, are involved in continuing education (¶ 351);

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VIII – Enhance Preparation of and Support for Local Pastors, Number 1 – Education and Training. Recognizes that some local pastors have completed a Master of Divinity degree instead of Course of Study.

¶318.2.

Petition Number: 60629-MH-¶318.2-G; Nollman, Richard - Robards, KY, USA.

Definition of Part-Time Local Pastor

Amend ¶ 318.2

Part-Time Local Pastors—Those eligible to be appointed as part-time local pastors are persons (a) who have met the provisions of 315; (b) who do not devote their entire time to the charge to which they are appointed; ~~or (c) do not receive in cash support per annum from all Church sources a sum equal to or larger than the minimum base compensation established by the annual conference for full-time local pastors; and (c) (d)~~ who, unless they have completed . . .

Rationale:

¶ 318.2 is used to establish a maximum pay for part-time local pastors. That is an incorrect understanding of the paragraph. It suffices to say that these pastors “do not devote their entire time to the charge.” This would create an accurate definition without the need for a monetary description . . .

¶318.5.

Petition Number: 60630-MH-¶318.5-G; Bi, Yiwen - Brentwood, TN, USA.

Local Pastor Voting Rights in Ordination Committee and Board

Amend ¶ 318.5

Local pastors may serve on any board, commission, or committee with voice and vote, except on matters of clergy character, qualifications, status, and ordination. However, local pastors who have completed the Course of Study may serve on the district Committee on Ordained Ministry with voice ~~and vote~~. Full-time local pastors who have completed the Course of Study may serve on the Board of Ordained Ministry with voice ~~and~~ vote.

This amendment calls for the amendment of ¶ 602.1.d to make them consistent with each another.

Amend ¶ 602.1.d

Full-time and part-time local pastors under appointment to a pastoral charge shall have the right to vote in the annual conference on all matters except constitutional amendments; election of delegates to the General and jurisdictional or central conferences and matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy. When local pastors are members of the conference Board of Ordained Ministry, they have the right to ~~vote~~ voice at clergy session on matters of ordination, character, and conference relation of clergy (¶ 634.1).

Rationale:

Local pastors on the rise is the trend of The United Methodist Church today and local pastors want to pursue larger voices and more rights. However, local pastors are not ordained and they have not gone through the ordination process. Only those who finish the ordination and truly understand the whole . . .

¶319.4.

Petition Number: 60487-MH-¶319.4-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Remove “Five-Year” from Course of Study Description

Amend ¶ 319.4; ¶ 322.1(3); ¶ 324.6c); ¶ 1421.3d)

¶ 319.4. A local pastor may choose to remain in a local relationship with the annual conference upon having completed the ~~five-year~~ Course of Study.

¶ 322.1(3) completed the ~~five-year~~ Course of Study for ~~ordained ministry~~ in addition to the studies for license . . .

¶ 324.6c) completed the ~~five-year~~ Course of Study for ~~ordained ministry~~, of which no more . . .

¶ 1421.3d) Prescribe a Course of Study for local pastors that include the studies for license for pastoral ministry and the ~~five-year~~ Course of Study curriculum . . .

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VIII – Enhance Preparation of and Support for Local Pastors, Number 1b – Remove the phrase “five-year” everywhere the Book of Discipline references Course of Study to create flexibility for these alternatives.

¶320.1.

Petition Number: 60631-MH-¶320.1-G; Smith, David - Lexington, OH, USA.

Retired Local Pastors

Amend ¶ 320.1 as follows:

1. Discontinuance of Local Pastors—Whenever a local pastor retires ~~or, they shall retain their license for pastoral ministry for service in the local church and maintain their relationship as retired clergy members of the annual conference.~~ Whenever a local pastor is no longer approved for appointment by the annual conference as required in ¶ 318, . . .

Rationale:

Currently upon retirement, a local pastor does not retain their license for pastoral ministry for service in the local church and their relationship with annual conference changes.

After serving The United Methodist Church faithfully a local pastor should be able to retain their license for pastoral ministry for service in . . .

¶322.1.

Petition Number: 60356-MH-¶322.1-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Three-fourths Majority Vote – Associate Membership

Amend ¶ 322.1

¶ 322. Requirements for Election as Associate Members—1. Local pastors may be elected to associate membership by a three-fourths majority vote of the clergy session members in full connection, upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, when they have met the following conditions. They shall have: (1) been recommended to the clergy session based on a three-fourths majority vote of the conference Board of Ordained Ministry; . . .

Rationale:

To require a consistent three-fourths voting approval from the dCOM, BOM, and clergy session for the “milestone” candidacy, licensing, provisional membership, and full membership votes. Related ¶¶’s include 315; 322.1; 324; 330; and 335.

¶322.1.

Petition Number: 60357-MH-¶322.1; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Associate Membership – Educational Requirements

Amend ¶ 322.1 (3)

¶ 322. Requirements for Election as Associate Members—

. . . (3) completed the five-year Course of Study for ~~ordained ministry~~ in addition to the studies for license as a local pastor, . . .

or received a Master of Divinity degree that includes the basic graduate theological studies from a school of theology listed by the University Senate; (4) completed a minimum of sixty semester hours toward the Bachelor of Arts or an equivalent degree in a college or university ~~listed~~ recognized by the University Senate; . . .

Rationale:

Adds the option for the Master of Divinity to satisfy some of the educational requirements for Associate Membership. Clarifies that the University Senate does not list undergraduate institutions for approval but does recognize certain accredited undergraduate institutions.

¶322.1.

Petition Number: 60715-MH-¶322.1-G; Miles, John - Jonesboro, AR, USA.

Delete Age Restrictions

Amend ¶ 322 as follows:

322. Requirements for Election as Associate Members—1. Local pastors may be elected to associate membership by vote of the clergy members in full connection, upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, when they have met the following conditions. They shall have: (1) ~~reached age forty;~~ (2) served four years as full time local pastors . . .

[The remaining items would be renumbered 2, 3, 4, etc.]

Rationale:

Some young people, for cultural/ethnic, financial, or family reasons, cannot relocate for seminary. Some innovative, entrepreneurial young people simply will not go through the elder/deacon tracks. Current age restrictions are arbitrary and limit our pastors and our church's mission. Election to Associate Membership shouldn't be limited by age.

¶322.4.

Petition Number: 60186-MH-¶322.4-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Associate Members

Amend ¶ 322.4

¶ 322.4 complete a minimum of sixty semester hours toward the Bachelor of Arts or an equivalent degree in a college or university ~~listed by the University Senate~~ approved by the Conference Board of Ministry.

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to make a determination of whether to approve undergraduate coursework for those seeking election as Associate Members. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to the training and . . .

¶323.

Petition Number: 60020-MH-¶323-G; Lawton, George W. - Three Oaks, MI, USA.

Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members

Delete ¶ 323 and substitute the following:

¶ 323. Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members –

1. In each annual conference in which local pastors and/or associate members are under appointment there shall be a Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members. All licensed local pastors and associate members shall be members of and participate in the Fellowship. The Fellowship is a covenant community within the church to provide mutual support, care for, and hold accountable its members for the sake of the life and mission of the church.

2. Purpose of the Fellowship –

a) To promote regular gatherings of its membership for continuing formation in relationship to Jesus Christ with a goal of encouraging the members to become the best pastors they can be.

b) To encourage continued study beyond the Course of Study.

c) To develop bonds of unity and common commitment to the mission and ministry of The United Methodist Church and the annual conference.

d) To enable the creation of inter-personal relationships which allow mutual support and trust.

3. Organization of a Fellowship –

a) The bishop shall convene and organize the Fellowship, with the support and assistance of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

b) Prior to each annual conference the Board of Ordained Ministry shall determine that there is a functioning Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members by reviewing the following items:

(1) The bylaws of the Fellowship.

(2) The names and contact information of the elected officers.

(3) A report, if available, from the chair of the Fellowship detailing the Fellowship's activities in meeting the goals outlined above.

(4) The Fellowship's financial needs so that the annual conference can provide necessary financial support through the Board of Ordained Ministry's budget.

c) If it is determined that there is not an active Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members in the annual conference, the registrar for local pastors or another person appointed by the Board of Ordained Ministry shall call a meeting of all local pastors and associate members at the annual conference session for the purpose of establishing the Fellowship in the conference.

d) It is the responsibility of the local pastors and associate members to establish and maintain the Fellowship by approving such bylaws as are needed, electing such officers as are called for in the bylaws and participating in such activities as the Fellowship may offer.

4. The chair of the Fellowship shall serve as a member of the Board of Ordained Ministry and its executive committee.

5. If the General Conference adopts legislation calling for some form of ordination for Licensed Local Pastors and Associate Members, the title of this section and all references to the Fellowship shall be changed to "Order of Local Pastors and Associate Members."

Rationale:

The organization and effectiveness of Annual Conference Fellowships of Local Pastors and Associate Members varies across the connection. Some conferences have vibrant, effective Fellowships and some have no effective Fellowship at all. The existing language in ¶ 323 is ineffective in providing sufficient oversight of this group. Though the bishop is . . .

¶323.

Petition Number: 60564-MH-¶323-G; Herring, Tom - Lynnville, TN, USA for National Fellowship of Associate Members and Local Pastors.

Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members

Amend ¶ 323. 1b and 2 as follows:

¶ 323.1 The specific and limited function is to:

a) . . .

b) encourage local pastors and associate members in continued study beyond the Course of Study and Advanced Course of Study;

c) . . .

2. The bishop shall convene the fellowship and the Board of Ordained Ministry shall coordinate its life and work . . . The board shall nominate from within the Fellowship membership and the Fellowship shall elect quadrennially a chairperson of the Fellowship during a gathered meeting of the annual session of the Fellowship conference who, in cooperation with and under the guidance of the bishop, will provide continuing leadership for the Fellowship. The elected Fellowship chairperson, full-time or part-time, shall be a member of the Board of Ordained Ministry and its executive committee as specified in ¶ 635.1a.

Activity . . .

Rationale:

Encourages Associate Members to continue education. Provides direction to Fellowship to convene for election of chairperson. Provides clarity between General Board of Higher Education and conferences as the GBHEM accepts part-time local pastors who have completed the Course of Study, to be chairperson of the Fellowship and serve on the . . .

¶324.

Petition Number: 60187-MH-¶324-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Provisional Membership

Amend ¶ 324

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership – A person shall be eligible for election to provisional membership in the annual conference by vote of the clergy session on recommendation of its Board of Ministry after meeting the following qualifications.

1. Candidacy Requirement: Each candidate shall have been a certified candidate for provisional membership for at least one year and no more than twelve years.

2. Service Requirements: Each candidate shall have demonstrated his or her gifts for ministries of service and leadership to the satisfaction of the district committee on ordained ministry as a condition for provisional membership.

3. Undergraduate Educational Requirements: A candidate for provisional membership shall have completed a bachelor's degree from a college or university recognized by the University Senate Conference Board of Ordained Ministry. Exceptions to the undergraduate degree requirements may be made by the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. ~~in some instances, for missional purposes, for persons who have a minimum of sixty semester hours of Bachelor of Arts credit and~~

~~(a) have been prevented from pursuit of the normal course of baccalaureate education;~~

~~(b) are members of a group whose cultural practices and training enhance insight and skills for effective ministry not available through conventional formal education, or~~

~~(c) have graduated with a bachelor's degree or its equivalent from a college not recognized by the University Senate and have completed one half of the studies of the Master of Divinity or equivalent first professional degree in a school of theology listed by the University Senate.~~

4. Graduate Requirements Educational Recommendations

a) Candidates for deacon or elder ~~shall~~ are recommended to have completed one-half of the basic graduate theological studies in the Christian faith. These courses may be included within or in addition to a seminary degree. These basic graduate theological studies ~~must~~ are recommended to include courses in Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/liturgy; and United Methodist doctrine, polity and history.

b) a candidate for ordination as an elder ~~shall~~ are recommended to have completed one half of the studies toward a Master of Divinity degree or its equivalent, including one half of the basic graduate theological studies from a seminary ~~listed by the University Senate~~ approved by the Conference Board of Ministry.

c) a candidate for ordination as a deacon ~~shall~~ are recommended to have:

1) completed one half of the studies of a master's degree from a United Methodist seminary or ~~one listed by the University Senate~~ one approved by the Conference Board of Ministry, or

2) received a master's degree in the area of the specialized ministry in which the candidate will serve

3) completed one half of the basic graduate theological studies, in a context which will provide formation as a United Methodist deacon in full connection within a cohesive program developed by the seminary and approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; ~~documented by a record of completion from that school.~~ approved by the Conference Board of Ministry.

5. ~~In some instances a candidate who is pursuing ordination to serve as a deacon in full connection may fulfill the academic requirements through the following professional certification alternate route:~~

~~a) shall have reached thirty-five years of age at the time to become a certified candidate;~~

~~b) completed a bachelor's degree, received professional certification or license in the area of ministry in which the candidate will serve, have completed a minimum of eight semester hours of graduate credit or equivalent quarter hours in the area of specialization, and have been recommended by the conference Board of Ordained Ministry;~~

~~c) have completed one-half of the basic graduate theological studies in the Christian faith. These courses may be included within or in addition to a seminary degree. These basic graduate theological studies must include courses in Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/liturgy; and United Methodist doctrine, polity and history, in a context which will provide a cohesive program developed by the seminary and approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, documented by a record of completion from that school.~~

6. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have:

~~a) reached forty years of age;~~

~~b) satisfied all requirements of Sections 1-3 and 7-14 of this paragraph.~~

~~c) completed the five-year Course of Study for ordained ministry, of which no more than one-half may be taken by correspondence or Internet; up to one-half of Course of Study may be online courses; and~~

~~d) an Advance Course of Study consisting of thirty-two semester hours of graduate theological study offered by a seminary recognized by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry Conference Board of Ordained Ministry that shall include United Methodist history, doctrine and polity.~~

7. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall require an official transcript of credits from each school before recognizing any of the applicant's educational claims. ~~In cases of doubt, the board may submit a transcript to the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.~~

8. Conference Boards of Ordained Ministry are encouraged to be in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to determine the requirements for election to provisional membership in the respective annual conferences. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to the training and credentialing of their . . .

¶324.

Petition Number: 60358-MH-¶324-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Three-fourths Majority Vote – Provisional Membership

Amend ¶ 324

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership—A person shall be eligible for election to provisional membership in the annual conference by a three-fourths majority vote of the clergy session on recommendation of its Board of Ordained Ministry after meeting the following qualifications . . .

Rationale:

To require a consistent three-fourths voting approval from the dCOM, BOM, and clergy session for the “milestone” candidacy, licensing, provisional membership, and full membership votes. Related ¶¶’s include 315; 322.1; 324; 330; and 335.

¶324.

Petition Number: 60360-MH-¶324; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Provisional Membership – Educational Requirements

Amend ¶ 324.4 and 324.5

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership

. . . 4. Graduate Requirement:

a) Candidates for deacon or elder shall have completed a minimum of one-half of the 27 semester hours of basic graduate theological studies in the Christian faith. . . .

5. In some instances a candidate who is pursuing ordination to serve as deacon in full connection may fulfill the academic requirements through the following professional certification alternate route: . . .

c) have completed a minimum of one half of the ~~minimum of twenty-four~~ twenty-seven semester hours of the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith. . . .

Rationale:

Clarifies that the required Basic Graduate Theological Studies are a minimum of 27 semester credit hours.

¶324.

Petition Number: 60507-MH-¶324-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process

Delete current ¶¶ 324, 325, 326, 327, 330, 333, 335, 336 and replace with this NEW Section VI.

Section VI. Provisional Membership

~~¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership—A person shall be eligible for election to provisional membership in the annual conference by vote of the clergy session on recommendation of its Board of Ordained Ministry after meeting the following qualifications.~~

~~1. Candidacy Requirement: Each candidate shall have been a certified candidate for provisional membership for at least one year and no more than twelve years.~~

~~2. Service Requirement: Each candidate shall have demonstrated his or her gifts for ministries of service and leadership to the satisfaction of the district committee on ordained ministry as a condition for provisional membership.~~

~~3. Undergraduate Requirement: A candidate for provisional membership shall have completed a bachelor’s degree from a college or university recognized by the University Senate. Exceptions to the undergraduate degree requirements may be made in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry in some instances, for missional purposes, for persons who have a minimum of sixty semester hours of Bachelor of Arts credit and:~~

~~a) have been prevented from pursuit of the normal course of baccalaureate education,~~

~~b) are members of a group whose cultural practices and training enhance insight and skills for effective ministry not available through conventional formal education, or~~

~~c) have graduated with a bachelor’s degree or its equivalent from a college not recognized by the University~~

Senate and have completed one half of the studies of the Master of Divinity or equivalent first professional degree in a school of theology listed by the University Senate.

4. Graduate Requirement:

a) Candidates for deacon or elder shall have completed one half of the basic graduate theological studies in the Christian faith. These courses may be included within or in addition to a seminary degree. These basic graduate theological studies must include courses in Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/ liturgy; and United Methodist doctrine, polity and history.

b) a candidate for ordination as an elder shall have completed one half of the studies toward a Master of Divinity degree or its equivalent, including one half of the basic graduate theological studies from a seminary listed by the University Senate.

e) a candidate for ordination as a deacon shall have:

(1) completed one half of the studies of a master's degree from a United Methodist seminary or one listed by the University Senate, or

(2) received a master's degree in the area of the specialized ministry in which the candidate will serve

(3) completed one half of the basic graduate theological studies, in a context which will provide formation as a United Methodist deacon in full connection within a cohesive program developed by the seminary and approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, documented by a record of completion from that school.

5. In some instances a candidate who is pursuing ordination to serve as deacon in full connection may fulfill the academic requirements through the following professional certification alternate route:

a) shall have reached thirty-five years of age at the time to become a certified candidate;

b) completed a bachelor's degree, received professional certification or license in the area of ministry in which the candidate will serve, have completed a minimum of eight semester hours of graduate credit or equivalent quarter hours in the area of specialization, and have been recommended by the conference Board of Ordained Ministry;

e) have completed one half of the minimum of twenty-four semester hours of the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith including the areas of: Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/ liturgy; and United Methodist doctrine, polity, and history, in a context which will provide a cohesive program and formation as a United Methodist deacon in full connection within a cohesive program developed by the seminary and approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, documented by a record of completion from that school.

6. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have:

a) reached forty years of age;

b) satisfied all requirements of Sections 1-3 and 7-14 of this paragraph.

e) completed the five-year Course of Study for ordained ministry, of which no more than one-half may be taken by correspondence or Internet; up to one-half of Course of Study may be online courses; and

d) an Advanced Course of Study consisting of thirty-two semester hours of graduate theological study offered by a seminary recognized by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry that shall include United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity.

7. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall require an official transcript of credits from each school before recognizing any of the applicant's educational claims. In case of doubt, the board may submit a transcript to the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

8. Each candidate shall present a satisfactory certificate of good health by a physician on the prescribed form. Disabilities are not to be construed as unfavorable health factors when a person with disability is capable of meeting the professional standards and is able to render effective service as a provisional member.

9. Each candidate shall respond to a written and oral doctrinal examination administered by the conference Board of Ordained Ministry. The examination shall cover the following:

a) Describe your personal experience of God and the understanding of God you derive from biblical, theological, and historical sources.

b) What is your understanding of evil as it exists in the world?

e) What is your understanding of humanity, and the human need for divine grace?

d) How do you interpret the statement Jesus Christ is Lord?

e) What is your conception of the activity of the Holy Spirit in personal faith, in the community of believers, and in responsible living in the world?

f) What is your understanding of the kingdom of God; the Resurrection; eternal life?

g) How do you intend to affirm, teach, and apply Part III of the Discipline (Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task) in your work in the ministry to which you have been called?

h) The United Methodist Church holds that the living core of the Christian faith was revealed in Scripture, illumined by tradition, vivified in personal experience, and confirmed by reason. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church?

i) Describe the nature and mission of the Church. What are its primary tasks today?

j) Discuss your understanding of the primary characteristics of United Methodist polity.

k) How do you perceive yourself, your gifts, your motives, your role, and your commitment as a provisional member and commissioned minister in The United Methodist Church?

l) Describe your understanding of diakonia, the servant ministry of the church, and the servant ministry of the provisional member.

m) What is the meaning of ordination in the context of the general ministry of the Church?

n) Describe your understanding of an inclusive church and ministry.

o) You have agreed as a candidate for the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness of the gospel, and in consideration of their influence as ministers, to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life, and to this end agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationships, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God. What is your understanding of this agreement?

p) Explain the role and significance of the sacraments in the ministry to which you have been called.

10. Each candidate shall have been recommended in writing to the conference Board of Ordained Ministry, based on a three-fourths majority vote of the district committee on ordained ministry.

11. Each candidate shall have a personal interview with the conference Board of Ordained Ministry to complete his or her candidacy.

12. Each candidate shall submit on a form provided by the Board of Ordained Ministry a notarized statement detailing any convictions for felony, or misdemeanor, or written accusations and its disposition of sexual misconduct or child abuse; or certifying that this candidate has not been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor or accused in writing of sexual misconduct or child abuse. The candidate also shall release required psychological reports, criminal background, credit checks and reports of child abuse.

13. Each candidate shall file with the board a written, concise, autobiographical statement (in duplicate on a prescribed form) regarding age, health, family status, Christian experience, call to ministry, educational record, formative Christian experiences, and plans for service in the Church.

14. Each candidate shall have been recommended in writing to the clergy session based on at least a two-thirds majority vote of the conference Board of Ordained Ministry.

¶ 325. Commissioning— Commissioning is the act of the church that publicly acknowledges God's call and the response, talents, gifts and training of the candidate. The church invokes the Holy Spirit as the candidate is commissioned to be a faithful servant leader among the people, to lead the church in service, to proclaim the Word of God and to equip others for ministry. Through commissioning, the church sends persons in leadership and service in the name of Jesus Christ and marks their entrance into a time of provisional membership as they prepare for ordination. Commissioned ministers are provisional clergy members of the annual conference and are accountable to the bishop and the clergy session for the conduct of their ministry. During the residency program the clergy session discerns their fitness for ordination and their effectiveness in ministry. After fulfilling all candidacy requirements and upon recommendation of the conference Board of Ordained Ministry, the clergy session shall vote on the provisional membership and commissioning of the candidates. The bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide credentials as a provisional member and a commissioned minister in the annual conference. The period of commissioned ministry is concluded when the provisional members are received as full members of the annual conference and ordained as either deacon or elder, or a decision is made not to proceed toward ordination and provisional membership is ended.

¶ 326. Service of Provisional Members— All persons who are provisional members shall be appointed by a bishop (¶ 425) and serve as a provisional member of the annual conference for a minimum of two years following the completion of education requirements for full connection. During the provisional period, arrangements shall be offered by the Board of Ordained Ministry for all provisional members to be involved in a residency curriculum that extends theological education by using covenant groups and mentoring to support the practice and work of their ministry as servant leaders, to contemplate the grounding of ordained ministry, and to understand covenant ministry in the life of the conference. Provisional members may be appointed to attend school, to extension ministry, or in appointments beyond the local church. Wherever they are appointed, the service of provisional members shall be evaluated by the district superintendent and the Board of Ordained Ministry in terms of the provisional member's ability to express and give leadership in servant ministry.

1. Provisional members planning to give their lives as deacons in full connection shall be in ministries of Word, Service, Compassion, and Justice in the local church or in an approved appointment beyond the local church. A provisional member preparing for ordination as a deacon shall be licensed for the practice of ministry during provisional membership to perform the duties of the ministry of the deacon as stated in ¶ 328 and be granted support as stated in ¶ 331.10.

2. Provisional members planning to give their lives as elders in full connection shall be in ministries of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service in the local church or in an approved extension ministry. A provisional member preparing for ordination as an elder shall be licensed for pastoral ministry (¶ 315).

3. Provisional members who are serving in extension ministries, enrolled in graduate degree programs, or appointments beyond the local church shall be accountable to the district superintendent and the Board of Ordained Ministry for the conduct of ministry, and for demonstrating their effectiveness in the ministry of the order to which they seek to be ordained. In all cases, they will also demonstrate their effectiveness in servant leadership in the local church to the satisfaction of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

4. Provisional members seeking to change their ordination track shall:

a) Write to the Board of Ordained Ministry and inform the district superintendent and bishop of their intention.

b) Interview with the Board of Ordained Ministry to articulate and clarify their call.

c) Fulfill academic and service requirements. Upon the recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry and by vote of the clergy session the person may be received into full connection with the annual conference and be ordained into the order to which they are transitioning.

¶ 327. Eligibility and Rights of Provisional Membership—Provisional members are on trial in preparation for membership in full connection in the annual conference as deacons or elders. They are on probation as to character, servant leadership, and effectiveness in ministry. The annual conference, through the clergy session, has jurisdiction over provisional members. Annually, the Board of Ordained Ministry shall review and evaluate their relationship and make recommendation to the clergy members in full connection regarding their continuance. No member shall be continued on provisional membership beyond the eighth regular session following their admission to provisional membership.

1. Provisional members who are preparing for deacon's or elder's orders may be ordained deacons or elders when they qualify for membership in full connection in the annual conference.

2. Provisional members shall have the right to vote in the annual conference on all matters except the following:

a) constitutional amendments;

b) election of delegates to the General and jurisdictional or central conferences

c) all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy. Provisional clergy members who have completed all of their educational requirements may vote to elect clergy delegates to General and jurisdictional or central conferences (see Judicial Council Decision 1181 and ¶ 35, Article IV).

3. Provisional members may serve on any board, commission, or committee of the annual conference except the Board of Ordained Ministry (¶ 635.1). They shall not be eligible for election as delegates to the General, central, or jurisdictional conferences.

4. Provisional members shall be amenable to the annual conference in the performance of their ministry and are subject to the provisions of the Book of Discipline in the performance of their duties. They shall be supervised by the district superintendent under whom they are appointed. They shall also be assigned a deacon or elder as mentor by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Provisional members preparing to become elders shall be eligible for appointment by meeting disciplinary provisions (¶ 315).

5. Provisional members in appointments beyond the local church shall relate themselves to the district superintendent in the area where their work is done. The district superintendent shall give them supervision and report annually to their Board of Ordained Ministry.

6. Discontinuance from Provisional Membership—Provisional members may request discontinuance of this relationship or may be discontinued by the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry. When provisional members in good standing withdraw to unite with another denomination or to terminate their membership in The United Methodist Church, their action shall be considered a request for discontinuance of their relationship and their credentials shall be surrendered to a district superintendent. In the case of discontinuance without consent, prior to any final recommendation, a provisional member will be advised of the right to a fair process hearing before the committee on conference relations of the Board of Ordained Ministry. A report of the action will be made to the full board for final action. The provisions of fair process (¶ 362.2) shall be observed and there shall be a review by the administrative review committee under ¶ 636 prior to hearing by the annual conference. When this relationship is discontinued, they shall no longer be permitted to exercise ministerial functions and shall return their credentials to the district superintendent for deposit with the secretary of the conference, and their membership shall be transferred by the district superintendent to the local church they designate after consultation with the pastor. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall file with the resident bishop and the secretary of the conference a permanent record of the circumstances relating to discontinuance as a provisional member as required in ¶ 635.3d. After discontinuance, provisional members may be classified and approved as local pastors in accordance with the provision of ¶ 316.

7. Provisional members may not be retired under the provisions of ¶ 358. Provisional members who have reached the mandatory retirement age shall be automatically discontinued. Provisional elders may be classified as retired local pastors under the provisions of ¶ 320.5.

¶ 330. Requirements for Ordination as Deacon and Admission to Full Connection— Provisional members who are applying for admission into full connection and who have been provisional members for at least two years following the completion of the educational requirements for ordination as a deacon specified in .3 below may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference by two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon recommendation by two-thirds vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have qualified as follows:

1. They shall have served under episcopal appointment in a ministry of service for at least two full annual conference years. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the annual conference may equate less than fulltime or nonsalaried service as meeting this qualification. Such equivalence is to be determined in light of the years of service involved, the quality of that service, the maturity of the applicant, and other relevant factors determined by the board. Supervision is to be:

(a) by the district superintendent, and

(b) by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The applicant's service must be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective according to written guidelines developed by the board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection. Laypersons directly involved in the applicant's servant ministry shall be involved by the board in the annual evaluation.

2. They shall have been previously elected as a provisional member.

3. They shall have met the following educational requirements:

(a) graduation with a Bachelor of Arts or equivalent degree from a college or university listed by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry;

(b) graduation with a Master of Divinity degree or a master's degree from a graduate theological school recognized by the University Senate, or a master's degree in an area of specialized ministry;

(c) or are candidates over the age of 35 with professional certification or license in their area of ministry including a minimum of eight semester hours of graduate academic credit. Educational requirements in every case shall include the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith, as outlined in ¶ 324.4(a).

4. They shall have responded to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The candidate shall have

(1) demonstrated the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form;

(2) satisfied the board regarding physical, mental, and emotional health;

(3) prepared and preached at least one written sermon on a biblical passage specified by the Board of Ordained Ministry or another act of proclamation of the Word appropriate to the candidate's ministry setting;

(4) presented a detailed plan and outline for teaching a Bible study;

(5) presented a project that demonstrates fruitfulness in carrying out the church's mission of "Making Disciples of Jesus Christ for the Transformation of the World." The candidate's reflections and the board's response shall be informed by the insights and guidelines of Part III of the Book of Discipline. The examination shall also focus upon the covenantal relationship of the applicant to God, to the Church, and to the Order of Deacon, as well as the understanding of diakonia, servant leadership, and the interrelatedness of the Church and the world. The applicant shall be able to articulate the call of God to the order of deacon and to relate that call to leadership within the ministry of all Christians, through the setting of their service, the local church, and the annual conference.

5. The following questions are guidelines for the preparation of the examination:

a) Theology

(1) Give examples of how the practice of ministry has affected your experience and understanding of:

(a) God

(b) Humanity

(c) The need for divine grace

(d) The Lordship of Jesus Christ

(e) The work of the Holy Spirit

(f) The meaning and significance of the Sacraments

(g) The kingdom of God

(h) Resurrection and eternal life

(2) How do you understand the following traditional evangelical doctrines: (a) repentance; (b) justification; (c) regeneration; (d) sanctification? What are the marks of the Christian life?

(3) How has the practice of ministry informed your understanding of the nature and mission of the Church? What are its primary challenges today?

(4) The United Methodist Church holds that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are sources and norms for belief and practice, but that the Bible is primary among them. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church, and how has your practice of ministry been affected by this understanding?

(5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?

b) Vocation

(1) How has the experience of ministry shaped your understanding of your vocation as an ordained deacon?

e) The Practice of Ministry

(1) Do you offer yourself to be appointed by the bishop to a service ministry?

(2) Describe and evaluate your personal gifts for ministry and how they have resulted in fruitful ministry. What would be your areas of strength and areas in which you need to be strengthened in order to be more fruitful in ministry?

(3) For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel, and in consideration of your influence as an ordained minister, are you willing to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life; and to this end will you agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to physical health, intentional intellectual development, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, integrity in all personal relationships, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge of the love of God?

(4) Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry to all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

(5) Will your regard all pastoral conversations of a confessional nature as a trust between the person concerned and God?

(6) Provide evidence of experience in peace and justice ministries.

d) Historic Examination for Admission into Full Connection and Ordination as Deacon—The bishop as chief pastor shall engage those seeking to be admitted in serious self-searching and prayer to prepare them for their examination before the conference. At the time of the examination, the bishop shall also explain to the conference the historic nature of the following questions and seek to interpret their spirit and intent. The questions are these and any others which may be thought necessary:

(1) Have you faith in Christ?

(2) Are you going on to perfection?

(3) Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?

(4) Are you earnestly striving after perfection in love?

(5) Are you resolved to devote yourself wholly to God and God's work?

(6) Do you know the General Rules of our Church?

(7) Will you keep the General Rules of our Church?

(8) Have you studied the doctrines of The United Methodist Church?

(9) After full examination do you believe that our doctrines are in harmony with the Holy Scriptures?

(10) Have you studied our form of Church discipline and polity?

(11) Do you approve our Church government and polity?

(12) Will you support and maintain them?

(13) Will you exercise the ministry of compassion?

(14) Will you diligently instruct the children in every place?

(15) Will you visit from house to house?

(16) Will you recommend fasting or abstinence, both by precept and example?

(17) Are you determined to employ all your time in the work of God?

(18) Are you in debt so as to embarrass you in your work?

(19) Will you observe the following directions?

(a) Be diligent. Never be unemployed. Never be triflingly employed. Never trifle away time; neither spend any more time at any one place than is strictly necessary.

(b) Be punctual. Do everything exactly at the time. And do not mend our rules, but keep them; not for wrath, but for conscience' sake.

6. A provisional member of the annual conference who has completed the requirements for deacon's orders and admission into full membership shall be eligible for election to full membership and ordination as deacon by a bishop. Following election, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of full membership in the annual conference, and following ordination, a certificate of ordination.

7. A deacon shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Deacons (see ¶ 415.6). The bishops shall be assisted by other deacons and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. Bishops in other communions may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating deacons and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate:

¶ 333. Elders in Full Connection—1. Elders in full connection with an annual conference by virtue of their election and ordination are bound in special covenant with all the ordained elders of the annual conference. In the keeping of this covenant they perform the ministerial duties and maintain the ministerial standards established by those in the covenant. They offer themselves without reserve to be appointed and to serve, after consultation, as the appointive authority may determine. They live with all other ordained ministers in mutual trust and concern and seek with them the sanctification of the fellowship. By entering into the covenant, they accept and subject themselves to the process of clergy discipline, including serving on committees on investigation, trial courts, or appellate committees. Only those shall be elected to full membership who are of unquestionable moral character and genuine piety, sound in the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, and faithful in the discharge of their duties.

2. A provisional member of the annual conference who has completed the requirements for Elder's Orders and admission into full membership shall be eligible for election to full membership and ordination as elder by a bishop. Following election, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of full membership in the annual conference, and following ordination, a certificate of ordination.

3. An elder shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Elders (see ¶ 415.6). The bishop shall be assisted by other elders and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. Bishops in other communions may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating elders and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

¶ 335. Requirements for Admission to Full Connection and Ordination as Elder—Provisional members who are candidates for full connection and ordination as elders and have been provisional members for at least two years may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference and approved for elder's ordination by two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon recommendation by two-thirds vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have qualified as follows. They shall have:

(1) served full-time under episcopal appointment for at least two full annual conference years following the completion of the educational requirements specified in (3)(b) below. Years of service in any ministry setting requiring the regular proclamation of the word, the administration of the sacraments, and the short or long-term ordering of the life of the community of faith may count toward the fulfillment of this requirement. Such ministry settings may include campus ministry, college and university chaplaincy, hospital and prison chaplaincy, military chaplaincy, overseas/mission work and other ministries so recognized by the Division of Ordained Ministry of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, an annual conference may equate less than full-time to the requirement of full-time service. Such equivalence is to be determined in light of the years of service involved, the quality of that service, the maturity of the applicant, and other relevant factors. Supervision is to be (a) personally assumed or delegated by the district superintendent, and (b) assumed by a mentor assigned by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Their service shall be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective according to written guidelines developed by the board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection. 16 In rare cases, the Board of Ordained Ministry may, by a two-thirds vote, approve years of service in an autonomous Methodist church as meeting this requirement if adequate supervision has been provided;

(2) been previously elected as provisional members;

(3) met the following educational requirements: (a) graduation with a Bachelor of Arts or equivalent degree from a college or university listed by the University Senate, or demonstrated competency equivalence through a process designed in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; (b) graduation with a Master of Divinity degree from a school of theology listed by the University Senate, or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; or (c) met the education requirements of ¶ 324.6 for local pastors; (d) educational requirements in every case shall include a minimum of two semester or three quarter hours in each of the fields of United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity, provided that a candidate may meet the requirements by undertaking an independent study program provided and administered by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (see ¶ 1421.3d);

(4) satisfied the board regarding physical, mental, and emotional health;

(5) prepared and preached at least one written sermon on a biblical passage specified by the Board of Ordained Ministry;

(6) presented a detailed plan and outline for teaching a Bible study;

(7) presented a project that demonstrates fruitfulness in carrying out the church's mission of "Making Disciples of Jesus Christ for the Transformation of the World";

(8) responded to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The candidate should demonstrate the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form. The candidate's reflections and the board's response should be informed by the insights and guidelines of Part III of the Discipline. The following questions are guidelines for the preparation of the examination:

a) Theology:

(1) Give examples of how the practice of ministry has affected your experience and understanding of:

(a) God

(b) Humanity

(c) The need for divine grace

(d) The Lordship of Jesus Christ

(e) The work of the Holy Spirit

(f) The meaning and significance of the sacraments

(g) The kingdom of God

(h) Resurrection and eternal life

(2) How do you understand the following traditional evangelical doctrines: (a) repentance; (b) justification; (c) regeneration; (d) sanctification? What are the marks of the Christian life?

(3) How has the practice of ministry informed your understanding of the nature and mission of the Church? What are its primary challenges today?

(4) The United Methodist Church holds that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are sources and norms for belief and practice, but that the Bible is primary among them. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church, and how has your practice of ministry been affected by this understanding?

(5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?

b) Vocation

(1) How has the experience of ministry shaped your understanding of your vocation as an ordained elder?

c) The Practice of Ministry

(1) How has the practice of ministry affected your understanding of the expectations and obligations of the itinerant system? Do you offer yourself without reserve to be appointed and to serve as the appointive authority may determine?

(2) Describe and evaluate your personal gifts for ministry and how they have resulted in fruitful ministry. What would be your areas of strength and areas in which you need to be strengthened in order to be more fruitful in ministry?

(3) For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel and in consideration of your influence as an ordained minister, are you willing to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life; and to this end will you agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to physical health, intentional intellectual development, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, integrity in all personal relationships, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God?

(4) Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry to all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

(5) Will you regard all pastoral conversations of a confessional nature as a trust between the person concerned and God?

(6) Provide evidence of experience in peace and justice ministries.

~~ADMISSION AND CONTINUANCE OF FULL MEMBERSHIP IN THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE~~

¶ 336. Historic Examination for Admission into Full Connection—The bishop as chief pastor shall engage those seeking to be admitted in serious self-searching and prayer to prepare them for their examination before the conference. At the time of the examination the bishop shall also explain to the conference the historic nature of the following questions and seek to interpret their spirit and intent. The questions are these and any others that may be thought necessary:

1. Have you faith in Christ?

2. Are you going on to perfection?

3. Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?

4. Are you earnestly striving after it?

5. Are you resolved to devote yourself wholly to God and his work?

6. Do you know the General Rules of our Church?

7. Will you keep them?

8. Have you studied the doctrines of The United Methodist Church?

9. After full examination, do you believe that our doctrines are in harmony with the Holy Scriptures?

10. Will you preach and maintain them?

11. Have you studied our form of Church discipline and polity?

12. Do you approve our Church government and polity?

13. Will you support and maintain them?

14. Will you diligently instruct the children in every place?

15. Will you visit from house to house?

16. Will you recommend fasting or abstinence, both by precept and example?

~~17. Are you determined to employ all your time in the work of God?~~

~~18. Are you in debt so as to embarrass you in your work?~~

~~19. Will you observe the following directions?~~

~~a) Be diligent. Never be unemployed. Never be triflingly employed. Never trifle away time; neither spend any more time at any one place than is strictly necessary.~~

~~b) Be punctual. Do everything exactly at the time. And do not mend our rules, but keep them; not for wrath, but for conscience' sake.~~

NEW Section VI. Ordination, Provisional, and Full Membership

NEW ¶ 324. Ordination is the empowering of the Holy Spirit for the ministry of deacon or elder and the authorization by the Church to carry out these ministries of service and leadership to advance the mission of the church. The United Methodist Church holds ordained deacons and elders accountable through provisional or full conference membership, participation in the work of their orders, and supervision and evaluation. Provisional members engage in a residency period of intentional formation and examination to prepare them for a lifelong commitment embodied in full membership.

The following paragraphs outline the processes by which United Methodist certified candidates or United Methodist local pastors are elected to provisional membership and ordained, and how the period of provisional membership may lead to full membership. For those transferring to The United Methodist Church from other Christian denominations, see ¶ 347.

¶ NEW 325. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership and Ordination—A person shall be eligible for election to provisional membership in the annual conference by vote of the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry after meeting the following qualifications.

1. District Committee on Ordained Ministry Requirements:

a. Candidacy Requirement: Each candidate shall be certified for at least one year and no more than twelve years.

b. Service Requirement: Each candidate shall demonstrate gifts for ministries of service and leadership to the satisfaction of the district committee on ordained ministry.

c. District Committee on Ordained Ministry Approval: Each candidate shall be recommended in writing to the Board of Ordained Ministry, upon a three-fourths majority vote of the district committee on ordained ministry.

2. Required Application Forms

a. Each candidate shall file with the Board of Ordained Ministry a written, concise, autobiographical form that includes information regarding age, health, family status, Christian experience, call to ministry, educational record, formative Christian experiences, and plans for service in the Church.

b. Each candidate shall submit on a form provided by the Board of Ordained Ministry a notarized statement detailing any convictions for felony, or misdemeanor, or written accusations and its disposition of sexual misconduct or child abuse; or certifying that this candidate has not been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor or accused in writing of sexual misconduct or child abuse. The candidate also shall release required psychological reports, criminal background check, credit checks, and reports of child abuse.

c. Each candidate shall present a satisfactory certificate of good health by a physician on the prescribed form. Disabilities are not to be construed as unfavorable health factors when a person with a disability is capable of meeting the professional standards and is able to render effective service.

3. Undergraduate Requirement: Each candidate shall have completed a bachelor's degree from a college or university recognized by the University Senate. Exceptions to the undergraduate degree requirements may be made in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry in some instances, for missional purposes, for persons who have a minimum of 60 semester hours of Bachelor of Arts credit and:

a. have been prevented from pursuit of the normal course of baccalaureate education,

b. are members of a group whose cultural practices and training enhance insight and skills for effective ministry not available through conventional formal education, or

4. Graduate Requirement:

a. Each candidate for ordination shall have completed the basic graduate theological studies in the Christian faith from a seminary listed by the University Senate. These courses may be included within or in addition to a seminary degree. These basic graduate theological studies shall include a minimum of 27 semester hours of courses in Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/liturgy; and United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity.

b. Each candidate for ordination as an elder shall also have completed a Master of Divinity degree or its equivalent, including the basic graduate theological studies from a seminary listed by the University Senate.

c. Each candidate for ordination as a deacon shall also have:

1) completed a master's degree from a seminary listed by the University Senate, or

2) completed a master's degree in the area of the specialized ministry in which the candidate will serve, and

3) completed the basic graduate theological studies, in a context which will provide formation as a United Methodist deacon within a cohesive program developed by the seminary and approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, documented by a record of completion from that school.

5. In some instances a candidate who is pursuing ordination as a deacon may have fulfilled the academic requirements through the following professional certification alternate route:

a. completed a bachelor's degree, and received professional certification or license in the area of ministry in which the candidate will serve, plus a minimum of eight semester hours of graduate credit or equivalent quarter hours in the area of specialization, and be recommended by the Board of Ordained Ministry; and

b. completed the minimum of 27 semester hours of basic graduate theological studies (§ 324.4a) in a seminary that is listed by the University Senate and provides a cohesive program for formation as a United Methodist deacon. This program must be approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, and documented by a record of completion from that school.

6. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have:

a. satisfied all the requirements of Sections 1-3, 7-11, and 13 of this paragraph.

b. completed the Course of Study, of which no more than one-half may be taken by correspondence or Internet; up to one-half of Course of Study courses may be online; and

c. completed an Advanced Course of Study consisting of 32 semester hours of graduate theological study offered by a seminary listed by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry that shall include United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity.

7. Each candidate shall provide an official transcript of credits from each school before any of the applicant's educational claims are recognized. The Board of Ordained Ministry may submit a transcript to the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry for consultation.

8. Each candidate shall respond to a written and oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The examination shall cover the following:

a. Describe your personal experience of God and the understanding of God you derive from biblical, theological, and historical sources.

b. What is your understanding of evil as it exists in the world?

c. What is your understanding of humanity, and the human need for divine grace?

d. How do you interpret the statement Jesus Christ is Lord?

e. What is your conception of the activity of the Holy Spirit in personal faith, in the community of believers, and in responsible living in the world?

f. What is your understanding of the kingdom of God; the Resurrection; eternal life?

g. How do you intend to affirm, teach, and apply Part III of the Discipline (Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task) in your work in the ministry to which you have been called?

h. The United Methodist Church holds that the living core of the Christian faith was revealed in Scripture, illumined by tradition, vivified in personal experience, and confirmed by reason. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church?

i. Describe the nature and mission of the Church. What are its primary tasks today?

j. Discuss your understanding of the primary characteristics of United Methodist polity.

k. How do you perceive yourself, your gifts, your motives, your role, and your commitment as a provisional member and ordained minister in The United Methodist Church?

l. Describe your understanding of diakonia, the servant ministry of the church, and the servant ministry of the provisional member.

m. What is the meaning of ordination in the context of the general ministry of the Church?

n. Describe your understanding of an inclusive church and ministry.

o. You have agreed as a candidate for the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness of the gospel, and in consideration of their influence as ministers, to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life, and to this end agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationship, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God. What is your understanding of this agreement?

p. Explain the role and significance of the sacraments in the ministry to which you have been called.

9. Each candidate shall have a personal interview with the Board of Ordained Ministry to complete candidacy.

10. Each candidate shall be recommended in writing by the Board of Ordained Ministry to the clergy session after a two-thirds majority vote of the board.

11. Each candidate recommend by the Board of Ordained Ministry shall be eligible for election to provisional membership and approval for ordination by a two-thirds majority vote of the clergy session.

12. A deacon shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Deacons (§ 415.6). The bishop shall be assisted by other deacons and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. Bishops in other communions may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating deacons and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

13. An elder shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Elders (§ 415.6). The bishop shall be assisted by other elders and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. Bishops in others communions may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating elders and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

14. Following election, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of provisional membership in the annual conference, and following ordination, a certificate of ordination.

¶ NEW 326. Residency—When candidates are ordained and elected into provisional membership, they enter a residency period developed by the Board of Ordained Ministry in consultation with the bishop and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. Throughout the residency, the church sends person in leadership and service in the name of Jesus Christ. Provisional members are accountable to the bishops and the clergy session for the conduct of their ministry.

During the residency period the clergy session discerns each provisional member's effectiveness in ministry and readiness for full membership. After fulfilling all residency requirements and upon a two-thirds majority recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the clergy session shall vote on the full membership of deacons and elders in provisional membership.

The period of resident ministry is concluded when the provisional members are received as full members of the annual conference by a two-thirds majority vote of the clergy session, or a decision is made not to proceed toward full membership.

¶NEW 327. Service of Provisional Members—All provisional members shall be appointed by a bishop (§ 425) and serve as a provisional members for a minimum of two years. During the provisional period, arrangements shall be offered by the Board of Ordained Ministry for all provisional members to be involved in a residency program that extends theological education by using covenant groups and mentoring to support the practice and work of their ministry as servant leaders, to contemplate the grounding of their ordained ministry, and to understand covenant ministry in the life of the conference. Provisional members may be appointed to attend school, to extension ministry, or to appointments beyond the local church. Wherever they are appointed, the service of provisional members shall be evaluated by the district superintendent and the Board of Ordained Ministry in terms of the provisional member's ability to express and give leadership in servant ministry.

1. Deacons in provisional membership shall be in ministries of Word, Service, Compassion, and Justice in the local church or in an approved appointment beyond the local church.

2. Elders in provisional membership shall be in ministries of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service in the local church or in an approved extension ministry.

3. Provisional members serving in extension ministries or appointments beyond the local church, or enrolled in graduate degree programs shall be accountable to the district superintendent and the Board of Ordained Ministry of the conference in which their membership resides and to a district superintendent in the annual conference where they serve, if different. They will be evaluated on the conduct of ministry and for their effectiveness in the ministry of the order in which they seek full membership. The district superintendent will provide an annual report to the Board of Ordained Ministry.

4. Provisional members seeking to change orders may do so following the provisions of § 309.2.

¶ NEW 328. Rights of Provisional Membership

1. Provisional members shall have the right to vote in the annual conference on all matters except the following:
 a. Constitutional amendments; and
 b. all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy.

2. Provisional members may vote to elect clergy delegates to General and jurisdictional or central conference (Judicial Council Decision 1181). They shall not be eligible for election as delegates to General, central, or jurisdictional conferences.

3. Provisional members may serve on any board, commission, or committee of the annual conference except the Board of Ordained Ministry or a district committee on ordained ministry.

4. Provisional members shall be assigned a clergy mentor who is a deacon or elder in full connection by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

¶ NEW 329. Discontinuance from Provisional Membership—

1. Provisional members may request discontinuance or may be discontinued by the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. Voluntary Discontinuance to Unite with Another Denomination—When provisional members in good standing withdraw to unite with another denomination or to terminate their membership in The United Methodist Church, their certificate of provisional membership, and their written request to withdraw shall be deposited with the conference secretary.

3. Voluntary Discontinuance from the Ordained Ministerial Office—Ordained provisional members in good standing who desire to leave their ministerial office and withdraw from the conference may be allowed to do so by the annual conference at its session. The member's certificates of ordination and provisional membership and their written request to withdraw shall be given to the district superintendent for deposit with the conference secretary. His or her membership may be transferred to a church which he or she designates, after consultation with the pastor.

4. Involuntary Discontinuance—In the case of discontinuation without consent, prior to any final recommendation, a provisional member will be advised of the right to a fair process hearing before the committee on conference relations of the Board of Ordained Ministry. A report of the action will be made to the full board for final action. The provisions of fair process (¶ 362.2) shall be observed and there shall be a review by the administrative review committee under ¶ 636 prior to hearing by the annual conference. When this relationship is discontinued, they shall no longer be permitted to exercise ministerial functions. Involuntarily discontinued provisional members shall surrender both their certificate of provisional membership and their certificate of ordination to the district superintendent for deposit with the secretary of the conference. Involuntary discontinuance shall be written on the face of the credentials. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall file with the resident bishop and the secretary of the conference a permanent record of the circumstances relating to discontinuance as a provisional member (¶ 635.3d).

5. No member shall be continued in provisional membership beyond the eighth regular annual conference session following their admission to provisional membership.

6. After discontinuance, provisional membership shall be transferred by the district superintendent to the charge conference the provisional member designates after consultation with the pastor. Provisional members may be classified and approved as local pastors in accordance with the provisions of ¶ 316.

7. Provisional members may not be retired under the provisions of ¶ 358. Provisional members who have reached the mandatory retirement age shall be automatically discontinued and provisional elders or provisional deacons may be classified as retired local pastors under the provisions of ¶ 320.5.

¶ NEW 330. Requirements for Admission to Full Connection—Provisional members who are applying for admission into full connection and who have been provisional members for at least two years may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference after they have been recommended by the Board of Ordained Ministry and elected by the clergy session. This process shall be informed by guidelines in Part III of the Book of Discipline and shall focus upon the covenantal ministry of all Christians and the particular ministry to which the person has been ordained. Qualification requirements are:

1. Membership requirement: Each candidate for full membership shall have been previously elected as a provisional member for at least two years and no more than eight years before election to full membership.

2. Service requirements:

a. Deacons—They shall have served under episcopal appointment in a ministry of service for at least two full annual conference years. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the annual conference may equate less than fulltime or non-salaried service as meeting this qualification. Such equivalence is to be determined in light of the years of service involved, the quality of that service, the maturity of the applicant, and other relevant factors determined by the board. Supervision is to be: (a) by the district superintendent, and (b) by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The applicant's service shall be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective according to written guidelines developed by the board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection. Laypersons directly involved in the applicant's servant ministry shall be involved by the board in the annual evaluation.

b. Elders—They shall have served full-time under episcopal appointment for at least two full annual conference years. Years of service in any ministry setting requiring the regular proclamation of the Word, the administration of the sacraments, and the short or long-term ordering of the life of the community of faith may count toward the fulfillment of this requirement. Such ministry settings may include collegiate ministry, college and university chaplaincy, hospital and prison chaplaincy, military chaplaincy, overseas/mission work and other ministries so recognized by the Division of Ordained Ministry. An annual conference may equate less than full-time to the requirement of full-time service. Such equivalence is to be determined in light of the years of service involved, the quality of that service, the maturity of the applicant, and other relevant factors. Supervision is to be (a) by the district superintendent, and (b) by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Their service shall be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective according to written guidelines developed by the board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection (Judicial Council Decision 555 and 719). In rare cases, the Board of Ordained Ministry may, by a two-thirds vote, approve years of service in an autonomous Methodist church as meeting this requirement if adequate supervision has been provided.

3. Educational Requirements: Prior to ordination and election to provisional membership, deacons and elders shall have already completed the educational requirements listed in ¶ 324.3-5. Local pastor candidates for ordination as elder and provisional membership shall have completed the requirements of ¶ 324.6. The educational requirements for election to full membership shall also include the successful completion of the residency formation requirements of the conference.

4. Effectiveness Requirements: The provisional member shall

a. demonstrate the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written forms;

b. satisfy the board regarding physical, mental, and emotional health;

c. prepare and preach at least one written sermon on a biblical passage specified by the Board of Ordained Ministry or another act of proclamation of the Word appropriate to the candidate's ministry setting;

d. present a detailed plan and outline for teaching a Bible study.

5. Doctrinal Examination: Each provisional member, in preparation for election to full membership, shall respond to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The following questions are guidelines for the preparation of the examination:

a. Theology

1) Give examples of how the practice of ministry has affected your experience and understanding of: (a) God; (b) Humanity; (c) The need for divine grace; (d) The Lordship of Jesus Christ; (e) The work of the Holy Spirit; (f) The meaning and significance of the Sacraments; (g) The kingdom of God; (h) Resurrection and eternal life.

2) How do you understand the following traditional evangelical doctrines: (a) Repentance; (b) Justification; (c) Regeneration; (d) Sanctification? What are the marks of the Christian life?

3) How has the practice of ministry informed your understanding of the nature and mission of the Church? What are its primary challenges today?

4) The United Methodist Church holds that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are sources and norms for belief and practice, but that the Bible is primary among them. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church, and how has your practice of ministry been affected by this understanding?

5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?

b. Vocation: How has the experience of ministry shaped your understanding of your vocation as an ordained deacon or ordained elder?

c. The Practice of Ministry

1) Deacons: Do you offer yourself to be appointed by the bishop to a service ministry?

2) Elders: How has the practice of ministry affected your understanding of the expectations and obligations of the itinerant system? Do you offer yourself without reserve to be appointed and to serve as the appointive authority may determine?

3) Describe and evaluate your personal gifts for ministry and how they have resulted in fruitful ministry. What would be your areas of strength and areas in which you need to be strengthened in order to be more fruitful in ministry?

4) For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel, and in consideration of your influence as an ordained minister, are you willing to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life; and to this end will you agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to physical health, intentional intellectual development, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, integrity in all personal relationship, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge of the love of God? (Judicial Council Decision 542)

5) Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry to all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

6) Will you regard all pastoral conversations of a confessional nature as a trust between the person concerned and God?

7) Provide evidence of experience in peace and justice ministries.

6. A provisional member who has completed the requirements for admission into full membership and been recommended by a two-thirds majority vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry may be elected into membership in full connection by a two-thirds majority vote of the clergy session. Following election, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of full membership in the annual conference.

¶ NEW 331. Historic Examination for Admission into Full Connection—The bishop as chief pastor shall engage those seeking to be admitted in serious self-searching and prayer to prepare them for their examination before the conference. At the time of the examination the bishop shall also explain to the conference the historic nature of the following questions and seek to interpret their spirit and intent. The questions are these and any others that may be thought necessary:

1. Have you faith in Christ?
2. Are you going on to perfection?
3. Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?
4. Are you earnestly striving after it?
5. Are you resolved to devote yourself wholly to God and his work?
6. Do you know the General Rules of our Church?
7. Will you keep them?
8. Have you studied the doctrines of The United Methodist Church?
9. After full examination, do you believe that our doctrines are in harmony with the Holy Scriptures?
10. Will you preach and maintain them?
11. Have you studied our form of Church discipline and polity?
12. Do you approve our Church government and polity?
13. Will you support and maintain them?
14. Will you diligently instruct the children in every place?
15. Will you visit from house to house?
16. Will you recommend fasting or abstinence, both by precept and example?
17. Are you determined to employ all your time in the work of God?
18. Are you in debt so as to embarrass you in your work?

19. Will you observe the following directions?

a) Be diligent. Never be unemployed. Never be triflingly employed. Never trifle away time; neither spend any more time at any one place than is strictly necessary.

b) Be punctual. Do everything exactly at the time. And do not mend our rules, but keep them; not for wrath, but for conscience' sake.

(Footnote: These are the questions that every Methodist preacher from the beginning has been required to answer upon becoming a full member of an annual conference. These questions were formulated by John Wesley and have been little changed throughout the years.)

Rationale:

Study of Ministry, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process. Note: The large number of paragraphs have been struck and reordered because showing amended text would be too confusing. Showing the text in full provides a clearer explanation of the proposed provisional, full membership process ¶324.

Petition Number: 60542-MH-¶324-G; Land, Robert A. - Huntington, IN, USA.

Affirmation of Core Christian Doctrine

Amend Discipline ¶ 324 by adding a new sub-section #10 after current sub-section #9 and renumbering subsequent sub-sections accordingly:

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership— . . .

10. Each candidate shall be asked directly, in writing or in an oral interview, if he or she personally believes in the factual truth of the following teachings of historic, ecumenical Christianity and of our United Methodist doctrinal standards (¶ 104):

- There is one God, eternally existent in three Persons;
- Jesus truly died on the cross as the perfect and all-sufficient sacrifice for the sins of the whole world;
- Subsequent to his death, Jesus truly, physically, bodily rose again from the dead;
- We are justified only through the merit of the Lord, Jesus Christ, and not through any righteousness of our own;
- The canonical books of the Old and New Testaments are the uniquely true rule and guide for our faith and practice; and
- True Christian discipleship means submitting to the lordship of Jesus Christ in every area of my life.

Opportunity shall be given for the candidate or evaluating members of the Board of Ordained Ministry to ask clarifying questions as either has need. But no candidate shall be eligible for election to provisional membership until the Board of Ordained Ministry has certified that this candidate has responded affirmatively to each of the teachings above.

Rationale:

Before our church entrusts individuals with such clergy status, eligibility for full ordination, and the perception that they represent our church, it is important to make sure that they not only can articulate their own personal theology, but that they are in agreement with at least some of the most . . .

¶324.

Petition Number: 60632-MH-¶324-G; Haworth, Glen - Fountain Valley, CA, USA.

Agreement with Doctrinal Standards

Amend Discipline ¶ 324 by adding a new sub-section #10 after current sub-section #9 and renumbering subsequent sub-sections accordingly:

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership— . . .

10. Each candidate shall be asked directly if there is any article of the Articles of Religion of The Methodist Church or of the Confession of Faith of The Evangelical United Brethren Church (¶ 104) that they cannot honestly affirm as their own personal belief.

Rationale:

If we are to have integrity in following our own church's doctrinal standards and improve trust in our denomination, it is important to ensure that candidates who seek the privilege of provisional membership be asked directly about their agreement with the historic, core doctrine they are entrusted to uphold.

¶324.

Petition Number: 60634-MH-¶324-G; Stephens, Darryl W. - Lancaster, PA, USA.

Enable Adaptive Challenge in Theological Education

Amend:

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership—A person shall be eligible for election to provisional membership in the annual conference by vote of the clergy session on recommendation of its Board of Ordained Ministry after meeting the following qualifications.

. . .

4. Graduate Requirement:

a) Candidates for deacon or elder shall have completed one-half of the minimum of twenty-four semester hours of the basic graduate theological studies in the Christian faith. ~~These courses may be included within or in addition to a seminary degree.~~ These basic graduate theological studies may be included within or in addition to a seminary degree and mustshall include ~~courses in~~ Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/liturgy; professional ethics for ministry; and United Methodist doctrine, polity and history. Seminaries may offer each of these areas of study in stand-alone courses or, in consultation with the University Senate, shall be allowed the flexibility to design cross-disciplinary curricular offerings covering the stated objectives, learning goals, and content areas of each area of study, as determined and communicated by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

b) a candidate for ordination as an elder . . .

5. In some instances a candidate . . .

a) shall have reached thirty-five years of age at the time to become a certified candidate;

b) completed a bachelor's degree, . . .

c) have completed one half ~~of the minimum of twenty-four semester hours~~ of the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith (¶ 324a) ~~including the areas of: Old Testament; New Testament; theology; church history; mission of the church in the world; evangelism; worship/liturgy; and United Methodist doctrine, polity, and history,~~ in a context which will provide a cohesive program and formation as a United Methodist deacon in full connection within a cohesive program developed by the seminary and approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, documented by a record of completion from that school.

. . .

Rationale:

To meet the ministry challenges of a rapidly changing missional landscape, seminaries must be allowed to create cross-disciplinary course offerings. This petition retains the required minimum of 24 semester hours in the basic graduate theological studies while allowing flexibility for innovative curricular design. It also requires study of ministerial ethics . . .

¶324.

Petition Number: 60635-MH-¶324-G; Teague, Walter Ray - La Grange, NC, USA.

Ordination Path for Associate Members

Add new sub-paragraph after ¶ 324.6 and renumber following sub-paragraphs.

Associate members may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have:

- a) reached forty-five years of age;
- b) have held the position of associate member for a minimum of three consecutive years. This would also include those who are associate members before the 2016 Discipline.
- c) satisfied all requirements of Sections 3, 7, 8 and 10-14 of this paragraph.
- d) completed an Advanced Course of Study consisting of thirty-two semester hours of graduate theological study that shall include United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity offered by a seminary recognized by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Rationale:

This new paragraph adds a path to ordained ministry that honors our Wesleyan traditions that people are called to ordained ministry at different times of their lives and by different paths. The election of associate members to provisional membership will provide ordination for more men and women.

The advantages for . . .

¶324.1.

Petition Number: 60359-MH-¶324.1; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Provisional Membership – Candidacy Requirement

Amend ¶ 324.1

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership

. . . 1. Candidacy Requirement: Each candidate shall have been a certified candidate ~~for provisional membership~~ for at least one year ~~and no more than twelve years~~. Those appointed as local pastors are clergy members of the annual conference and are no longer certified candidates (¶ 311) . . .

Rationale:

Clarifies that local pastors are clergy members of the annual conference and do not need to become a provisional member in fewer than 12 years. Twelve-year limit for certified candidacy is retained in ¶ 313.5.

¶324.5.

Petition Number: 60716-MH-¶324.5-G; Miles, John - Jonesboro, AR, USA.

Delete Age Restrictions for Deacons

Amend ¶ 324.5 as follows:

324.5 In some instances a candidate who is pursuing ordination to serve as deacon in full connection may fulfill the academic requirements through the following professional certification alternate route:

- a) ~~shall have reached thirty-five years of age at the time to become a certified candidate;~~
- b) completed a bachelor's degree . . .
- e) b) have completed one half of the minimum . . .

Rationale:

The professional certification alternate route is a good option for candidates for deacons' ordination regardless of age. The current age restrictions are arbitrary and limit our pastors and the fulfillment of our church's mission. The professional certification alternative shouldn't be limited by age.

¶324.6.

Petition Number: 60361-MH-¶324.6; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Local Pastor Election to Provisional Membership – Educational Requirements

Amend ¶ 324.6

¶ 324. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership

. . . 6. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership as elders when they have . . .

d) completed an Advanced Course of Study consisting of thirty-two semester hours of graduate theological study offered by a seminary recognized by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. The Advanced Course of Study that shall include the basic graduate theological studies (¶ 324.4a). ~~United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity.~~

Rationale:

Requires completion of an Advanced Course of Study that includes completion of the Basic Graduate Theological Studies in order for local pastors to be elected to provisional membership.

¶324.6a.

Petition Number: 60488-MH-¶324.6a-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.1 Similar Petition

Study of Ministry – Minimum Age for Local Pastor to Apply for Provisional Membership

Delete ¶ 324.6a) and renumber following sub-points accordingly

¶ 324.6. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have:

~~a) Reached forty years of age; . . .~~

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section V – Increasing Flexibility in Leadership Preparation, Number 1 – Remove the minimum age restriction for local pastors to apply for provisional membership.

¶324.6c.

Petition Number: 60362-MH-¶324.6c-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. 1 Similar Petition

Expand Course of Study Education

Amend ¶ 324.6c

6. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have . . .

c) completed the ~~five-year~~ Course of Study for ordained ministry; Course of Study requirements may be fulfilled as determined by GBHEM (¶ 1421.3d) by:

1. Completion of Course of Study of which no more than one-half may be taken by correspondence or Internet; up to one-half of Course of Study may be online courses; and

2. Completion of an equivalent program of study embedded in an undergraduate degree at a UM-related college or university.

Rationale:

Increases accessibility to Course of Study (COS) for local pastors to complete educational requirements toward provisional membership. Encourages partnership between COS and United Methodist-related colleges/universities. Allows for simultaneous completion of COS and a bachelor degree as a part of completing educational requirements for local pastors seeking provisional membership.

¶324.6d.

Petition Number: 60001-MH-¶324.6d-G; Paige, Peggy - Ingalls, MI, USA for UM Rural Advocates.

Advanced Course of Study

Amend ¶324.6d by addition as follows:

¶ 324.6 Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership and commissioning when they have:

a) . . . b) . . .

c) completed the five-year Course of Study for ordained ministry; . . . and

d) begun an Advanced Course of Study consisting of thirty-two semester hours of graduate theological study or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education

Rationale:

This change recognizes the service local pastors have already given to the church and allows them to begin their provisional time as they begin the next phase of the Advanced Course of Study. It would shorten the current 13 year process to a more equitable timeframe.

¶324.8.

Petition Number: 60016-MH-¶324.8-G; Yates, Leo Jr. - Severn, MD, USA for Commission on Disability Concerns of the Baltimore-Washington Annual Conference. Harper, Trey - Forest, MS, USA for Mississippi Annual Conference. Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference. Howe, Margaret - New Paltz, NY, USA for New York Annual Conference. Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. 1 Similar Petition

Candidates with Disabilities

Amend ¶324.8 as follows:

Each candidate shall present a satisfactory certificate of good health by a physician on the prescribed form. If a provisional candidate has one or more irremovable disabilities, those conditions shall have no bearing on the question of endorsing the candidate as an ordained elder in The United Methodist Church, with the decision based solely on the candidate having met the professional standards and is effective as a provisional member in ministry. Disabilities are not . . .

Rationale:

The current clause opens the door to prejudging disabled provisional members as unfit for ministry. The health examination includes matters irrelevant to effective ministry. Jesus upheld disabled persons as “clean.” John Wesley designed Methodism as an inclusive, not exclusive body of Christ with all and for all; so must we.

¶324.8.

Petition Number: 60208-MH-¶324.8-G; DeLarme, Shirley - Port Orchard, WA, USA for Pacific Northwest Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference.

Candidates with Disabilities

Amend ¶324.8

Each candidate shall present a satisfactory certificate of good health by a physician on the prescribed form. ~~Disabilities are not to be construed as unfavorable health factors when a person with disability~~ If a provisional candidate has one or more disabilities, those conditions shall have no bearing on the question of endorsing the candidate as an ordained elder or deacon in The United Methodist Church, with the decision based solely on whether the candidate is capable of meeting the professional standards and is able to render effective service as a provisional member.

Rationale:

The current clause opens the door to prejudging disabled provisional members as unfit for ministry. The health examination includes matters irrelevant to effective ministry. Jesus upheld disabled persons as “clean.” John Wesley designed Methodism as an inclusive, not exclusive body of Christ with all and for all; so must we.

¶324.8.

Petition Number: 60633-MH-¶324.8-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Reduce Inappropriate Medical Disclosure and Discrimination – Provisional Membership

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 324.8 (Provisional Membership) as follows:

8. Each candidate shall present a satisfactory letter from a physician stating the individual’s good health and listing any medical restrictions or modifications as applicable certificate of good health by a physician on the prescribed form. Disabilities and diagnoses are not to be construed as unfavorable health factors when a person with a disability or diagnosis is capable of meeting the professional standards and is able to render effective service as a provisional member.

Rationale:

Replaces the detailed health form with a letter from a physician, eliminating the high potential for confidential information on the health form to be disclosed in violation of the candidate’s privacy. This also clarifies that both disabilities and diagnoses are not grounds for lack of fitness for ministry.

¶324.9k.

Petition Number: 60363-MH-¶324.9k-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Provisional Membership – Doctrinal Exam

Amend ¶ 324.9 k)

k) Explain your understanding of the distinctive vocations of the order of elder and the order of deacon. How do you perceive yourself, your gifts, your motives, your role, and your commitment as a ~~provisional member and commissioned minister~~ provisional deacon or provisional elder in The United Methodist Church?

Rationale:

Strengthens this question by requiring all provisional member applicants to demonstrate they understand the difference between the orders of deacon and elder. Asks applicants to talk about their ministry in light of their understanding of the different orders and how they are called to serve in ordained ministry.

¶326.

Petition Number: 60188-MH-¶326-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Service of Provisional Members

Amend ¶ 326

¶ 326 Service of Provisional Members—All persons who are provisional members shall be appointed by a bishop (¶ 425) and serve as a provisional member of the annual conference ~~for a minimum of two years following~~

~~the completion of education requirements for full connection until they complete residency requirements of the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry and apply for full connection.~~

Rationale:

The petition would allow for provisional members to apply for full connection upon completion of requirements prescribed by the Conference Board of Ministry with no minimum service requirement.

¶326.

Petition Number: 60364-MH-¶326; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Provisional Membership – Annual Renewal of License

Amend ¶ 326.1 and 326.2 by addition

¶ 326.1 . . . and be granted support as stated in ¶ 331.10. Such authorization granted by the license may be renewed annually by the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

¶ 326.2 . . . shall be licensed for pastoral ministry (¶ 315). Such authorization granted by the license may be renewed annually by the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

Rationale:

Clarifies that the BOM and clergy session have the authority to make a recommendation and decision regarding the annual renewal of licensing for provisional members.

¶326.

Petition Number: 60652-MH-¶326-G; Miles, Rebekah L. - Dallas, TX, USA.

Appointments to Academic Settings

Amend ¶ 326 by addition as follows:

. . . Provisional members may be appointed to attend school, to extension ministry, or in appointments beyond the local church. Extension ministries may include appointments as students in research doctoral programs that may lead to appointments in academic settings as instructors or professors in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church. These extension ministries may also include actual appointments as instructors or professors or administrators in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church. Wherever they are appointed . . .

Rationale:

This petition would encourage the strengthening of relationships between The United Methodist Church and the various schools, colleges, universities, and theological schools that are affiliated with the church as stipulated in the Discipline (Par. 1414.1). It would also bring ¶ 326 into conformity with ¶¶ 343.1, 343.3, and 344.1 regarding appointments.

¶328.

Petition Number: 60489-MH-¶328-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry - Clarifying the Relation between Ordination and the Sacraments

Amend ¶ 328

¶ 328. The Ministry of a Deacon—From among the baptized, deacons are called by God to a lifetime of servant leadership, authorized by the Church, and ordained by a bishop. From the earliest days of the church, deacons were called and set apart for the ministry of love, justice, and service and for connecting the church with the most needy, neglected, and marginalized among the children of God. This ministry grows out of the Wesleyan passion for social holiness and ministry among the poor. It is the deacons, in both person and function, whose distinctive ministry is to embody, articulate, and lead the whole people of God in its servant ministry. Deacons fulfill servant ministry in the world and lead the Church in relating the gathered life of Christians to their ministries in the world, interrelating worship in the gathered community with service to God in the world. Deacons give leadership in the Church's life: in teaching and proclaiming the Word; in contributing to worship, ~~and~~ in assisting the elders in administering the sacraments of baptism and ~~the Lord's Supper~~ Holy Communion, or in presiding at the celebration of the sacraments when contextually appropriate and duly authorized; in forming and nurturing disciples; in conducting marriages and burying the dead; in embodying the church's mission to the world; and in leading congregations in interpreting the needs, concerns, and hopes of the world. For the sake of extending the mission and ministry of the Church, ~~a pastor-in-charge or district superintendent may request that~~ the bishop may grant local sacramental authority to the deacon to ~~administer~~ preside at the celebration of the sacraments. Presiding at the celebration of the sacraments involves taking responsibility to lead the gathered community in celebrating baptism and Holy Communion. As members of the Order of Deacon, all deacons are in covenant with all other deacons in the annual conference and shall participate in the life of their order. in the absence of an elder, within a deacon's primary appointment. It is the deacons, in both person and function, whose distinctive ministry is to embody, articulate, and lead the whole people of God in its servant ministry. From the earliest days of the church, deacons were called and set apart for the ministry of love, justice, and service; of connecting the church with the most needy, neglected, and marginalized among the children of God. This ministry grows out of the Wesleyan passion for social holiness and ministry among the poor.

Deacons lead the congregation in its servant ministry

...

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and the Nature of Ordination, Number 2 – Clarifying the Relation between ordination and the sacraments and Number 4 – Increasing flexibility for deacons to preside at the celebration of the sacraments.

¶328.

Petition Number: 60508-MH-¶328-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process - Deacons

Amend Section VII title before ¶ 328.
Section VII. The Ordained Deacon ~~in Full Connection~~

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and the Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping the Ordination Process. Removes the differences related to the ministries and responsibilities of ordained deacons in full connection or provisional connection.

¶328.

Petition Number: 60636-MH-¶328-G; Casperson, April - Delaware, OH, USA for West Ohio Annual Conference Order of Deacons.4 Similar Petitions

Deacon & Sacraments

Amend ¶ 328

... Deacons give leadership . . . and in assisting the elders in administering the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper; in forming and nurturing disciples; in conducting marriages and burying the dead' in embodying the church's mission to the world; and in leading congregations in interpreting the needs, concerns, and hopes of the world. For the sake of extending the mission and ministry of the church, ~~a pastor in charge or district superintendent may request that the bishop grant local sacramental authority to the deacon~~ may ~~to~~ administer the sacraments ~~in the absence of an elder, within a deacon's primary~~ and secondary appointment. It is the deacons, in both person and function, whose distinctive ministry is to embody, articulate, and lead the whole people of God in its servant ministry. . . .

Rationale:

Deacons lead the church in Word, Service, Compassion, and Justice and are ordained, theologically trained, and approved by Boards of Ordained Ministry. Therefore, by granting deacons sacramental authority within their primary appointment, the church extends the means of grace and its missional presence to both the community and the world.

¶328.

Petition Number: 60637-MH-¶328-G; Williams, George - Huntington, WV, USA.

Sacramental Authority of Deacons

Amend ¶ 328 as follows:

¶ 328. The Ministry of a Deacon—From among the baptized, deacons are called . . .

For the sake of extending the mission and ministry of the church, ~~a pastor in charge~~ an elder-in-charge or district superintendent may request that the bishop grant local sacramental authority to the deacon to administer the sacraments ~~in the absence of an elder, within a deacon's primary appointment.~~ within a deacon's primary appointment, or if the primary appointment is to a local church, in the absence of the elder-in-charge.

It is the deacons, in both person and function . . .

Rationale:

Deacons often lead worship in the absence of an elder in their primary appointments, or in the event of full-time appointment to a local church, in the absence of the pastor-in-charge, particularly non-traditional worship for missional purposes with unchurched groups. As part of this deacon-lead worship, deacons should have limited . . .

¶328.

Petition Number: 60638-MH-¶328-G; Marshall, Linda - Denver, CO, USA for Rocky Mountain Annual Conference Order of Deacons. 1 Similar Petition

Deacon & Sacraments

Amend ¶ 328, first paragraph:

. . . and in assisting the elders in administering the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper; in forming and nurturing disciples; in conducting marriages and burying the dead; in embodying the church's mission to the world; and in leading congregations in interpreting the needs, concerns, and hopes of the world. For the sake of extending the mission and ministry of the church, ~~a pastor in charge or district superintendent may request that the bishop grant local sacramental authority to the deacon~~ may to administer the sacraments in the absence of an elder, within a deacon's primary appointment. It is the deacons, in both person and function, whose distinctive ministry is to embody, articulate, and lead the whole people of God in its servant ministry.

Rationale:

Deacons are theologically trained, approved by Boards of Ordained Ministry, and ordained to lead the Church in ministries of Word, Service, Compassion, and Justice. By granting deacons sacramental authority within their primary appointment, the Church extends the means of grace and its missional presence to the community and the world.

¶329.3.

Petition Number: 60497-MH-¶329.3-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Deacons in Provisional Connection

Amend ¶ 329

¶ 329. Ministry, Authority, and Responsibilities of Deacons –

1. . . .
2. . . .

3. ~~As members of the Order of Deacons, all deacons in full connection are in covenant with all other such dea-~~

~~cons in the annual conference and shall participate in the life of their order.~~

3. The deacon in provisional connection shall have the rights of provisional membership as described in ¶ 327.

Rationale:

Study of Ministry, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process. Clarifies the membership rights for ordained deacons in provisional connection.

¶330.

Petition Number: 60189-MH-¶330-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Requirements for Deacons

Amend ¶¶ 330.1, 330.3 and 330.4

¶ 330.1 They shall have served under episcopal appointment in a ministry area of service. ~~for at least two full annual conference years.~~ Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the annual conference may equate less than fulltime or nonsalaried service as meeting this qualification. Such equivalence is to be determined in light of the years of service involved, the quality of that service, the maturity of the applicant, and other relevant factors determined by the board. Supervision is to be: (a) by the district superintendent, and (b) by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The applicant's service must be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective according to written guidelines developed by the board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection. Laypersons directly involved in the applicant's servant ministry ~~shall~~ may be involved by the board in the annual evaluation.

¶ 330.3 They shall have met the following educational requirements: (a) graduation with a Bachelor of Arts or equivalent degree from a college or university listed ~~by the University Senate or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry approved by the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry.~~ In unusual circumstances, exceptions to this requirement may be granted by the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry; (b) ~~graduation with a Master of Divinity degree or a master's degree from a graduate theological school recognized by the University Senate, or a master's degree in an area of specialized ministry;~~ (c) ~~or are candidates over the age of 35 with professional certification or license in their area of ministry including a minimum of~~ eight semester hours of graduate academic credit. Educational requirements in every case shall include the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith, as outlined in ¶324.4(a).

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to determine the requirements for ordination as a deacon and for election to full connection in the respective annual conferences. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to . . .

¶330.

Petition Number: 60366-MH-¶330-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Three-Fourths Majority Vote – Full Membership Deacons

Amend ¶ 330

¶ 330. Requirements for Ordination as Deacon and Admission to Full Connection—Provisional members who are applying for admission into full connection . . . may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference by ~~two-thirds~~ three-fourths majority vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon ~~two-thirds~~ three-fourths majority vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have qualified as follows: . . .

Rationale:

To require a consistent three-fourths voting approval from the dCOM, BOM, and clergy session for the “milestone” candidacy, licensing, provisional membership, and full membership votes. Related ¶¶’s include 315; 322.1; 324; 330; and 335.

¶330.3.

Petition Number: 60365-MH-¶330.3; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Educational Requirements for Deacons’ Ordination

Amend ¶ 330.3

¶ 330.3 Educational requirements in every case shall include the completion of the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith, as outlined in ¶ 324.4a.

Rationale:

Clarifies that the all of the basic graduate theological studies must be completed before a provisional member may be ordained. This is parallel to the petition for elders in ¶ 335 that clarifies that educational requirements must be completed before ordination and admission to full membership.

¶330.4.

Petition Number: 60367-MH-¶330.4-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Ordination Requirements – Deacons

Amend ¶ 330.4

¶ 330.4. ~~They shall have responded to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry.~~ The candidate shall have (1) ~~demonstrated the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form;~~ (2) satisfied the board regarding physical, mental, and emotional health; (3) ~~pre~~ prepared and preached at least one written sermon on a biblical passage specified by the Board of Ordained Ministry or another act of proclamation of the Word appropriate to the candidate’s ministry setting; (4) ~~presented a detailed plan and outline for teaching a Bible study;~~ (5) ~~presented a project that demonstrates fruitfulness in carrying out the church’s mission of “Making Disciples of Jesus Christ for the Transformation of the World;”~~ (6) responded to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The candidate shall demonstrate the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form.

(Insert Paragraph Break) The candidate’s reflections and the board’s response shall be informed by the insights and guidelines of Part III of the Book of Discipline . . .

Rationale:

Rewording to avoid implication that the phrase “The candidate’s reflections and the board’s response . . . the Book of Discipline” relates specifically to “presented a project that demonstrates fruitfulness. . . . for the Transformation of the World.” – a reading suggested by the current syntax. Rewording also makes ¶ 330.4 appropriately parallel to related ¶ 335.

¶330.5a

Petition Number: 60368-MH-¶330.5a-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Questions for Ordination Exam - Deacons

Delete ¶ 330.5 a) (5)

¶ 330.5 a) Theology . . .

(4) . . . been affected by this understanding? ~~(5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?~~

b) Vocation . . .

Rationale:

Question ¶ 330.5 a) (5) is redundant with ¶ 330.5 a) (f), so should be removed. Retain ¶ 330.05 a) (f).

¶330.5c4.

Petition Number: 60717-MH-¶330.5c4-G; McCart, Sharon Rae - Irvine, CA, USA for DisAbility Ministries Committee of The UMC - Global Health - GBGM.

Being in Ministry “with,” not Ministry “to”

Amend Discipline ¶ 330.5.c)(4)

Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry ~~to~~ with all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

Rationale:

This petition proposes simply to change the word “to” to “with,” reflecting that clergy members are partners in ministry with laypeople from all marginalized groups.

¶330.7.

Petition Number: 60232-MH-¶330.7-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Ecumenical Participation in Ordination Services for Deacons

Amend ¶ 330.7 as follows:

7. A deacon shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Deacons (see ¶ 415.6). The bishops shall be assisted by other deacons and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. ~~Bishops in other communions~~ Judicatory leaders from full communion partners and other communions shall participate in the ordination service and may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating deacons and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

Rationale:

Sharing in significant rituals of the church with full communion partners and other churches makes plain our commitment to seek to embody Jesus’ prayer “that they all may be one.”

¶331.

Petition Number: 60498-MH-¶331-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process - Deacons

Amend ¶ 331.

Delete the heading for Section VIII. Appointments of Deacons and Provisional Deacons to Various Ministries and move ¶ 331 to Section VII. The Ordained Deacon. Delete the phrase “provisional deacon” wherever it appears.

~~Section VIII. Appointments of Deacons and Provisional Deacons to Various Ministries~~

¶ 331. Appointment of Deacons and ~~Provisional Deacons~~ to Various Ministries—

1. Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ may be appointed to serve in the following settings:

. . .

2. Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ may be appointed to attend school.

3. Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ shall be appointed to settings that allow fulfillment of their call . . .

4. Deacons ~~and Provisional Deacons~~ Appointed Beyond the Local Church.

a) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ may be appointed to settings not connected . . . b) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ are amenable to the annual conference . . . When deacons ~~or provisional deacons~~ are appointed to a setting beyond the local church . . .

c) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ appointed to settings beyond the local church shall submit annually . . . Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ appointed to settings outside the annual conference in which they hold membership . . .

d) . . .

5. When deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ serve in an agency or setting beyond the local church, the bishop, after consultation with the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ and the pastor in charge, shall appoint the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ to a local congregation . . . In this ministry the deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ shall be accountable . . .

6. The appointment of deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ shall be made by the bishop. a) It may be initiated by the bishop or the district superintendent, the individual deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~, or the agency requesting the service of the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~.

b) It shall be clarified . . . the work for which deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ are appropriately prepared and authorized.

c) . . . In such event, the bishop shall consult with the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ and the Board of Ordained Ministry. The deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ shall then seek another appointment, . . .

d) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ at their own request or with their consent may be appointed to a nonsalaried position. . . . In such cases, the bishop will carefully review plans for expressing this appointed ministry and will consult with the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ about the well-being . . .

7. At the request of the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ and with the consent of the bishop and cabinet where conference membership is held, the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ may receive a less than full-time appointment under the following conditions:

a) The deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ shall present a written request . . .

b) Reappointment to less than full-time service shall be requested annually of the bishop by the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~.

c) The bishop may make an interim appointment to less than full-time service upon request of a deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~, . . .

8. Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~, with the approval . . .

9. Charge Conference Membership of Deacons ~~and Provisional Deacons~~.

a) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ who are appointed . . .

b) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ who are appointed to settings beyond the local church shall, . . . Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ serving in appointments outside the conference in which they hold membership shall, . . .

10. Support for deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ appointed by a bishop.

a) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ shall receive their support . . .

b) Deacons who are appointed to a local congregation, charge, or cooperative parish, . . . Provisional deacons Deacons in provisional membership who are appointed to a local congregation, charge, or cooperative parish shall receive a salary from the local church, charge, or cooperative parish (§ 625.2, .4) not less than the minimum established for ~~provisional~~ elders in provisional membership.

When deacons ~~or provisional deacons~~ are appointed to less than full-time ministry in a local congregation, charge or cooperative parish they shall receive a salary that is no less than the minimum salary for elders or ~~provisional~~ elders in provisional membership, prorated in one-quarter time increments (see ¶ 331.6d).

c) Deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ shall participate . . .

d) The above (§ 10 [a-c]) does not apply to a deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ appointed by a bishop to a nonsalaried position (§ 6 [d]).

e) Since deacons ~~and provisional deacons~~ are not guaranteed a place of employment in the Church, . . . Deacons ~~or provisional deacons~~ shall not be dismissed from a local church appointment without prior consultation between the deacon ~~or provisional deacon~~ and the Staff-Parish Relations Committee, . . .

Rationale:

Study of Ministry, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process. Clarifies that provisional and full membership deacons are all deacons and are afforded the same rights and responsibilities regarding appointments.

¶331.1.

Petition Number: 60653-MH-¶331.1-G; Miles, Rebekah L. - Dallas, TX, USA.

Appointments to Academic Settings

Amend ¶ 331.1 by addition as follows:

d) As students in research doctoral programs that may lead to appointments in academic settings as instructors or professors in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church;

e) As instructors or professors or administrators in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

This petition would encourage the strengthening of relationships between The United Methodist Church and the various schools, colleges, universities, and theological schools that are affiliated with the church as stipulated in the Discipline (¶ 1414.1). It would also bring ¶ 331.1 into conformity with ¶¶ 343.1, 343.3, and 344.1

¶331.4.

Petition Number: 60369-MH-¶331.4; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Endorsement for Deacons

Insert new sub-section b) after ¶ 331.4a) and renumber current b) – d) ¶ 331.4. b) Deacons or provisional deacons who are appointed beyond the local church may pursue endorsement by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry. The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry shall annually request the deacon or provisional deacon's bishop in the conference of membership to verify the appropriate employment of persons under its endorsement and request the bishop to reappoint.

Rationale:

The United Methodist Endorsing Agency is concerned that deacons and bishops are not aware that deacons may pursue ecclesiastical endorsement. This is one way to address that. This language is copied and adapted to follow the language related to extension ministries in ¶ 344.1b.

¶331.4d.

Petition Number: 60190-MH-¶331.4d-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Deacons and Provisional Deacons Appointed Beyond the Local Church

Amend ¶ 331.4(d)

~~(d)~~ If requested, The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the Division of Ordained Ministry, ~~in order to assist the Board of Ordained Ministry and cabinets, will provide guidelines for validating the appropriateness of appointment settings beyond the local church,~~ will be available for consultation with bishops, cabinets, and Boards of Ordained Ministry to assist in validating the appropriateness of appointment settings beyond the local church.

Rationale:

The petition allows for the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry, bishops, and cabinets to be able to consult with The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the Division of Ordained Ministry should the appropriateness of a ministry setting beyond the local church need to be validated.

¶332.

Petition Number: 60499-MH-¶332-G; Hagiya, Grant J.

- Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Elders

Amend ¶ 332

Section IX. The Ordained Elder ~~in Full Connection~~

¶ 332. Ministry of an Elder—

1. Elders are ordained ministers who, by God's grace, have completed their formal preparation and have been commissioned and served as a provisional member, have been found by the Church to be of sound learning, of and Christian character, possessing the necessary gifts and evidence of God's grace, and whose call by God to ordination has been confirmed by the Church. Elders are ordained to a lifetime ministry of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service. for offering themselves in a ministry of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service. They offer themselves without reserve to be appointed and to serve, after consultation, as the appointive authority may determine.

2. By the authority given in their ordination and election to provisional membership, elders they are authorized to preach and teach the Word of God, to provide pastoral care and counsel, to administer the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion, and to order the life of the Church for service in mission and ministry within the bounds of their appointment. After completing the residency period and being elected into full membership, they are authorized to offer these ministries throughout the worldwide United Methodist connection. Elders in full connection also undertake and subject themselves to the process of clergy discipline, including serving on committees on investigation, trial courts, or appellate committees.

3. The sacramental leadership of the elder is to administer the sacraments. The sacraments and their administration are gifts of God's spirit. Administering the sacraments includes presiding and preparing the community for full participation in the sacraments, both ritually and in their daily live. Administering the sacraments also includes the responsibility to ensure the availability of the sacraments to all people.

4. The servant leadership of the elder, in both parish and extension ministries, is expressed by leading the people of God in worship and prayer, by leading persons to faith in Jesus Christ, by exercising pastoral supervision, and by ordering the Church in mission in the world.

5. As members of the Order of Elder, all elders are in covenant with all other elders in the annual conference and shall participate in the life of their order.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and the Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping the Ordination Process. This petition outlines the ministry of an elder – whether that person is in provisional or full connection to the annual conference and clarifies the definition of administering the sacraments.

¶333.3.

Petition Number: 60233-MH-¶333.3-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Ecumenical Participation in Ordination Services for Elders

Amend ¶ 333.3 as follows:

3. An elder shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Elders (see ¶ 415.6). The bishop shall be assisted by other elders and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. ~~Bishops in other communions~~ Judicatory leaders from full communion partners and other communions shall participate in the ordination service and may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating elders and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

Rationale:

Sharing in significant rituals of the church with full communion partners and other churches makes plain our commitment to seek to embody Jesus' prayer "that they all may be one."

¶334.

Petition Number: 60500-MH-¶334-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Authority of Elders

Amend ¶ 334

¶ 334. Ministry, Authority, and Responsibilities of an Elder in Full Connection—An elder in full connection is authorized to give spiritual and temporal servant leadership in the Church in the following manner:

1. Elders in full connection shall have the rights of voice and to vote on all matters in the annual conference where membership is held except in the election of lay delegates to the general and jurisdictional or central conferences (¶ 602.1a). ~~Elders and deacons and shall share with deacons~~ in full connection share responsibility for all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy. This responsibility shall not be limited by the recommendation or lack of recommendation by the Board of Ordained Ministry, notwithstanding provisions which grant to the Board of Ordained Ministry the right of recommendation.

2. Elders in full connection ~~They~~ shall be eligible to hold office in the annual conference and to be elected delegates to the general and jurisdictional or central conferences under the provision of the Constitution (¶ 35, Article IV).

3. Every effective elder in full connection who is in good standing shall be continued under appointment by the bishop provided that if the elder is appointed to serve in an affiliated relationship in a missionary conference (¶ 586) and that appointment is terminated by the bishop who presides in the missionary conference, then the responsibility for meeting this obligation rests with the bishop of the conference of which the elder is a member.

~~2 4. There are professional responsibilities (¶ 340) that elders are expected to fulfill and that represent a fundamental part of their accountability and a primary basis of their continued eligibility for annual appointment. These shall include: Elders shall fulfill the following professional responsibilities (¶340) as a fundamental part of their accountability and a primary basis of their continued eligibility for good standing in the annual conference, and therefore, for annual appointment.~~

a) Continuing availability for appointment.

b) Annual participation in a process of evaluation with committees on pastor-parish relations or comparable authority as well as annual participation in a process of evaluation with the district superintendent or comparable authority.

c) Evidence of continuing effectiveness reflected in annual evaluations by the pastor-parish relations committee and by the district superintendent or comparable authorities

d) Growth in professional competence and effectiveness through continuing education and formation. The Board of Ordained Ministry may set the minimum standards and specific guidelines for continuing education and formation for conference members;

e) Willingness to assume supervisory and mentoring responsibilities within the connection.

3 5. When an elder's effectiveness the effectiveness of an elder in full connection is in question, the bishop shall complete the following procedure:

a) Identify the concerns. These can include an elder's failed professional responsibilities or vocational ineffectiveness.

b) Hold supervisory conversations with the elder in full connection to that identifies identify the concerns, and collaboratively designs collaboratively with the elder—a corrective plan of action including benchmarks and timelines for evaluation.

c) Upon evaluation, determine that the plan of action has not been carried out or produced fruit that gives a realistic expectation of future effectiveness.

~~4. d)~~ If an elder fails to demonstrate vocational competence or effectiveness (§ 340) as defined by the annual conference through the Board of Ordained Ministry and cabinet, then the bishop may begin the administrative location process as outlined in § 360.

~~5. 6. Clergy Elders in full connection~~ who are retired, on medical leave, or on sabbatical leave may at their own initiative apply to the conference Board of Ordained Ministry for affiliate membership in the annual conference where they reside. By a two-thirds vote of the executive session, such ~~clergy elders~~ may be received with rights and privileges, including service on conference boards, agencies, task forces, and committees, with voice but without vote. Voting membership shall be retained in the ~~clergy member's elder's~~ home annual conference for the duration of affiliate member relationship. Such persons may serve on the board, agency, task force or committee of only one annual conference at any one time.

7. The elder in provisional connection shall have the rights of provisional membership as described in § 327.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process. This petition focuses on the rights and responsibilities of elders in full connection.

¶334.1

Petition Number: 60524-MH-¶334.1-G; Brooks, Lonnie D. - Anchorage, AK, USA.

End Guaranteed Appointment for Elders

Amend §§ 334.1 and 337.1 as follows:

¶ 334.1. . . . Every effective elder in full connection who is in good standing ~~shall may~~ be continued under appointment by the bishop as determined by the bishop under the consultation provisions of § 426, provided that if the elder is appointed to serve in an affiliated relationship in a missionary conference (§ 586) and that appointment is terminated by the bishop who presides in the missionary conference, then the responsibility for meeting ~~this~~ any obligation that might obtain under this provision rests with the bishop of the conference of which the elder is a member.

. . .

¶ 337. General Provisions—1. All elders in full connection who are in good standing in an annual conference ~~shall may~~ be continued under appointment by the bishop as determined by the bishop under the consultation provisions of § 426, unless they are granted a sabbatical leave, a medical leave (§ 357), family leave, a leave of absence, retirement, or have failed to meet the requirements for continued eligibility (§ 334.2, .3), provided that if the elder is appointed to serve in an affiliated relationship in a missionary conference (§ 586.4.b) and that appointment is terminated by the bishop who presides in the missionary conference, then the responsibility for meeting ~~this~~ any obligation that might obtain under this provision rests with the bishop of the conference of which the elder is a member.

. . .

Include the following provision in the adoption of the proposed changes:

These changes will be effective if and when the Council of Bishops certifies the adoption of the amendment of the Constitution as proposed by the Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders in its petition entitled “Security of Appointment in the Constitution.”

Rationale:

A more complex proposal to end guaranteed appointment for elders was approved on a Consent Calendar at General Conference 2012, but was declared unconstitutional. If General Conference 2016 approves the AACLL petition to change the Constitution, that obstacle will be removed and this proposal may move forward.

¶334.1.

Petition Number: 60865-MH-¶334.1-G; Mhone, Daniel - Blantyre, Malawi.

Delete Good Standing

Amend § 334.1 as follows:

1. Elders in full connection shall have the right to vote on all matters in the annual conference except in the election of lay delegates to the General and jurisdictional or central conferences (§ 602.1 a) and shall share with deacons in full connection responsibility for all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy. This responsibility shall be limited by recommendation or lack of recommendation by the Board of Ordained

Ministry, notwithstanding provisions which grant to the Board of Ordained Ministry the right of recommendation.¹³ They shall be eligible to hold office in the annual conference and to be elected delegates to the general and jurisdictional or central conferences under the provision of the constitution (§ 35, Article IV). Every effective elder in full connection ~~who is in good standing~~ shall be continued under appointment by the bishop provided that if the elder is appointed to serve in an affiliated relationship in a Missionary Conference (Paragraph 586) and the appointment is terminated by the Bishop who presides in the missionary conference, then the responsibility for meeting this obligation rests with the bishop of the conference of which the elder is a member.¹⁴

Rationale:

This deletion will allow continued bishops appointment to be based on the effectiveness of an elder in The United Methodist Church and not on good standing, which is a phrase that is vague and does not spell out what “good standing” means. At the same time the phrase is analogous ¶335.

Petition Number: 60191-MH-¶335-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Requirements for Admission to Full Connection and Ordination as an Elder

Amend ¶ 335

Provisional members who are candidates for full connection and ordination as elders have been provisional members ~~for at least two years~~ may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference and approved for elder’s ordination by two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon recommendation by two-thirds vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have qualified as follows. They shall have: (1) served full-time under episcopal appointment ~~for at least two full annual conference years~~ following the completion of the educational requirements specified in (3) (b) below. Years of service in any ministry setting requiring the regular proclamation of the word, the administration of the sacraments, and the short or long-term ordering of the life of the community of faith may count toward fulfillment of this requirement. Such ministry settings may include campus ministry, college and university chaplaincy, overseas/mission work and other ministries so recognized by the ~~Division of Ordained~~ ~~Ministry of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, an annual conference may equate less than full-time to the requirement of full-time service.

~~Such equivalency is to be determined in light of the years of service involved, the quality of that service, the maturity of the applicant, and other relevant factors.~~ Supervision is to be (a) personally assumed or delegated by the district superintendent, and (b) assumed by a mentor assigned by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Their service shall be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective ~~according to written guidelines developed by the board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection.~~ In rare cases, the The Board of Ordained Ministry may, by a two-thirds vote, approve years of service in an autonomous Methodist church as meeting this requirement if adequate supervision has been provided; (2) been previously elected as provisional members; (3) met the following educational requirements ~~(a) graduation with a Bachelor of Arts or equivalent degree from a college or university listed by the University Senate, or demonstrated competency equivalency through a process designed in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry;~~ (b) graduation with a Master of Divinity degree from a school of theology listed by the University Senate, or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry; or (c) met the education requirements of ¶324.6 for local pastors, ~~(d) educational requirements in every case shall include a minimum of two semester or three quarter hours in each of the fields of United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity, provided that a candidate may meet the requirements by undertaking an independent study program provided and administered by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (see ¶1421.3d); as specified by the~~ Conference Board of Ordained Ministry, (4) satisfied the board regarding physical, mental, and emotional health; (5) prepared and preached at least one written sermon on a biblical passage specified by the Board of Ordained Ministry; (6) presented a detailed plan and outline for teaching a Bible study; (7) presented a project that demonstrates fruitfulness in carrying out the church’s mission of “Making Disciples of Jesus Christ for the Transformation of the World”; (8) responded to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The candidate should demonstrate the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form . . .

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to determine the requirements for ordination as an elder and for election to full connection in the respective annual conferences. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to . . .

¶335.

Petition Number: 60370-MH-¶335-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Three-Fourths Majority Vote – Full Membership Elders

Amend ¶ 335

¶ 335. Requirements for Admission to Full Connection and Ordination as Elder—Provisional members who are candidates for full connection and ordination as elders . . . approved for elder’s ordination by ~~two-thirds~~ three-fourths majority vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon recommendation by ~~two-thirds~~ three-fourths majority vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have qualified as follows: . . .

Rationale:

To require a consistent three-fourths voting approval from the dCOM, BOM, and clergy session for the “milestone” candidacy, licensing, provisional membership, and full membership votes. Related ¶¶’s include 315; 322.1; 324; 330; and 335.

¶335.

Petition Number: 60650-MH-¶335-G; Hardt, Philip F. - Glendale, NY, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Ability to Teach the Faith

Amend Discipline ¶ 335, Requirements for Admission to Full Connection and Ordination as Elder, by adding new language as follows:

¶335. . . . (8) responded to a written or oral doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The candidate should demonstrate the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form. The candidate’s reflections and the board’s response should be informed by the insights and guidelines of Part III of the Discipline. The board shall evaluate the candidate’s examination on the basis of the candidate’s ability to articulately teach our Church’s doctrine, affirm it as his or her own, and refute common objections to our doctrine. The following questions are guidelines for the preparation of the examination:

) Theology.

. . .

(6) Identify and respond to objections some may have to the following parts of our church’s doctrinal standards (¶ 104):

(a) the existence of God;

(b) the eternal divinity of Jesus Christ;

(c) original sin;

(d) the impossibility of us being justified before God on account of our own righteousness;

(e) the sufficiency of Christ’s sacrifice on the cross for our sins;

Rationale:

Before we ordain individuals to a lifetime ministry involving teaching the word and administering the sacraments, it is important to go beyond asking about their subjective experiences or personal beliefs and carefully examine how well they can affirm, teach, and defend our Church’s faith.

¶335.3b.

Petition Number: 60203-MH-¶335.3b-G; Hall, Russell - Tomball, TX, USA for Texas Annual Conference.

Educational Requirements for Elders graduation with a Master of Divinity degree from a school of theology listed by the University Senate, or its equivalent as determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, or an annual conference Board of Ordained Ministry.

Amend ¶ 335.3.b

Rationale:

The addition allows annual conference boards’ flexibility to approve seminaries which are not currently on the University Senate list, respecting local needs and conditions, particularly with respect to minority candidates or those whose formal education may have been outside of the United States.

¶335.8c4.

Petition Number: 60718-MH-¶335.8c4-G; McCart, Sharon Rae - Irvine, CA, USA for DisAbility Ministries Committee of The UMC - Global Health - GBGM.

Being in Ministry “with,” not Ministry “to”

Amend Discipline ¶ 335.8.c(4)

Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry ~~to~~ with all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

Rationale:

This petition proposes simply to change the word “to” to “with,” reflecting that clergy members are partners in ministry with laypeople from all marginalized groups.

¶335.a.

Petition Number: 60371-MH-¶335.a-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Questions for Ordination Exam - Elders

Delete ¶ 335 a) (5)

¶ 335 a) Theology . . .

(4) . . . been affected by this understanding?

~~(5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?~~

b) Vocation . . .

Rationale:

Question ¶ 335 a) (5) is redundant with ¶ 335 a) (1) (f), so should be removed. Retain ¶ 335 a) (1) (f).

¶335.d.

Petition Number: 60372-MH-¶335.d; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Educational Requirements for Elders' Ordination

Amend ¶ 335 (d)

¶ 335. Requirements for Admission to Full Connection and Ordination as Elder—

. . . (d) educational requirements in every case shall include completion of the basic graduate theological studies of the Christian faith as outlined in ¶ 324.4 (a), a minimum of two semester or three quarter hours in each of the fields of United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity, provided that a candidate may meet the requirements of United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity by undertaking an independent study program provided and administered by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (see ¶1421.3d); satisfied the board . . .

Rationale:

Clarifies that candidates for elders' orders must complete the basic graduate theological studies as a part of their educational requirements for ordination and that United Methodist history, doctrine and polity classes may be taken in addition to degree work.

¶337.3.

Petition Number: 60373-MH-¶337.3-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Remove Deacons from Description of Extension Ministry

Amend ¶ 337.3 and 337.3b)

¶ 337.3. Elders ~~and deacons~~, associate members, provisional ~~members~~ elders, and persons licensed for pastoral ministry may be appointed . . .

~~b) Deacons in provisional membership and full connection may be appointed to appointments beyond the local church that extend the witness and service of Christ's love and justice in a ministry to both the community and the church. This ministry connects community and church and equips all Christians to fulfill their own calls to Christian service. See ¶¶ 326, 328, 329, 331 for specific information about these ministries.~~

Rationale:

¶337.3 relates to appointments of elders, not deacons. ¶331, is the distinct paragraph for appointments of deacons, and that paragraph includes appointments beyond the local church.

¶337.3.

Petition Number: 60654-MH-¶337.3-G; Miles, Rebekah L. - Dallas, TX, USA.

Appointments to Academic Settings

Amend ¶ 337.3 by addition

[The new language would be inserted between the current 337.3b and the current 337.3c to become a new 337.3c, with the current 337.3c renumbered to become 337.3d.]

c) Elders may be appointed to extension ministries that include appointments as students in research doctoral programs that may lead to appointments in academic settings as instructors or professors in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church. Elders may also be appointed to extension ministries, including service as instructors or professors or administrators in colleges, universities, and theological schools affiliated with The United Methodist Church.

e) ~~d)~~ All persons in such appointments . . .

Rationale:

This petition would encourage the strengthening of relationships between The United Methodist Church and the various schools, colleges, universities, and theological schools that are affiliated with the Church as stipulated in the Discipline (§ 1414.1). It would also bring § 337.3 into conformity with §§ 343.1, 343.3, and 344.1

¶338.2.

Petition Number: 60126-MH-¶338.2-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Self-imposed Itineracy Limits

Amend § 338.2 as follows:

At the initiative of the bishop and cabinet ~~or~~, at his or her request, or when he or she has declared in writing that itineracy is limited due to temporary family constraints, an elder, provisional elder, or associate member may receive a less than full-time appointment under the conditions stipulated in this paragraph . . .

Rationale:

Clergy sometimes place limits on their availability for itineracy due to a spouse's employment, the need to keep children in a certain school, or similar family considerations. When the clergyperson declares that such family constraints limit his or her availability to itinerate, this amendment would allow the bishop to . . .

¶338.2.

Petition Number: 60374-MH-¶338.2-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Less than Full-time Appointment

Amend § 338.2

¶ 338.2. Less Than Full-Time Service—On occasion, less than full-time service is requested by or required of an elder, provisional elder, or associate member. A clergy member may be appointed in one-quarter, one-half, or three-quarter time increments by the bishop to less than full-time service without loss of essential rights or membership in the annual conference. Division of Ordained Ministry-endorsed appointments beyond the local church may be for less than full-time service. At the initiative of the bishop and cabinet, or at his or her request, an elder, provisional elder, or associate member, may receive a less than full-time appointment under the conditions stipulat-

~~ed in this paragraph.21 Less than full-time service shall mean that a specified amount of time less than full-time agreed upon by the bishop and the cabinet, the clergy member, and the annual conference Board of Ordained Ministry is devoted to the work of ministry in the field of labor to which the person is appointed by the bishop. At the initiative of the bishop and cabinet or at his or her own initiative, a clergy member may be appointed in one-quarter, one-half, or three-quarter time increments by the bishop to less than full-time service without loss of essential rights or membership in the annual conference. Division of Ordained Ministry-endorsed appointments beyond the local church may be for less than full-time service.~~

a) Appointment to less than full-time service is not a guarantee, but may be made by the bishop, ~~provided that the following conditions are met~~ under the following circumstances:

(1) Limited Itineracy—Less than full-time service may be granted—but is not guaranteed—when the elder, provisional elder, or associate member has declared in writing that itineracy is limited due to temporary constraints. The clergy member shall present that written declaration to the bishop and the chairperson of the Board of Ordained Ministry prior to the annual conference session at which the appointment is made.

(2) Self-Initiated—~~a)~~ The ~~ordained~~ elder, provisional elder, or associate member seeking less than full-time service ~~should~~ shall present a written request to the bishop and the chairperson of the Board of Ordained Ministry at least 90 days prior to the annual conference session at which the appointment is made. Exceptions to the 90-day deadline shall be approved by the cabinet and the executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

(3) Bishop-Initiated—~~b)~~ For missional purposes, ~~the~~ bishop may appoint an ~~ordained~~ elder, provisional ~~member~~ elder, or an associate member to less than full-time service. The clergyperson shall be notified at least 90 days prior to ~~the annual conference at which the appointment shall be made~~ final termination of the current appointment. Special attention shall be given to ensure that the values of open itineracy are preserved.

b) Provisions for Less Than Full-Time Appointment

(1) Following appropriate consultation, as established in §§ 338 and 425-429, and upon joint recommendation of the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry, the less than full-time category shall be confirmed by a two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference.

~~d)~~ (2) Reappointment to less than full-time service shall be ~~requested by the ordained elder, provisional elder, or associate member and~~ approved annually by the bishop and cabinet and shall not be granted for more than a total of eight years, except by a three-fourths vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference.

e) ~~(3) Ordained elders~~ Elders, provisional elders, and associate members who receive appointment at less than full-time service remain within the itineracy and, as such, remain available, upon consultation with the bishop and cabinet, for appointment to full-time service. A written request to return to full-time appointment shall be made to the bishop and cabinet at least six months prior to the annual conference session at which the appointment is to be made.

f) (4) The bishop may make ad interim appointments at less than full-time service upon request of the ~~ordained~~ elder, provisional elder, or associate member following consultation as specified in ¶¶ 424-428 and upon recommendation of the cabinet and executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the same to be acted upon by the next regular session of the annual conference.²²

Rationale:

Provides an option for limited itineracy due to temporary constraints of the clergy. Additionally, allows for flexibility in appoint-making due to missional circumstances.

¶338.4.

Petition Number: 60192-MH-¶338.4-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

The Itinerant System

Amend ¶ 338.4

Associate members, provisional members, or full members may be appointed to attend any school, college, or theological seminary ~~listed by the University Senate approved by the Conference Board of Ministry~~, or participate in a program of clinical pastoral education in a setting accredited by the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education or another accrediting agency approved by ~~GB-HEM~~ the Conference Board of Ministry.

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to approve appointments to attend any school, college, or theological seminary or any program of clinical pastoral education. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to the training . . .

¶339.

Petition Number: 60375-MH-¶339-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Categories and Definition of Pastor

Amend ¶ 339

¶ 339. Definition of a Pastor—A pastor is an ordained elder, ~~provisional~~ probationary deacon (according to 1992 Book of Discipline), associate member, provisional elder, or ~~licensed person~~ local pastor approved by vote of the clergy session ~~members in full connection~~ . . .

Rationale:

Clarifies the categories of ministry that serve as pastors and are defined that way by the church. Broadens definition to include associate members and provisional elders. Deletes redundant words regarding the clergy session (¶ 605.7) and clarifies this is a vote of the clergy session.

¶340.

Petition Number: 60490-MH-¶340-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Clarifying the Relation between Ordination and the Sacraments

Amend ¶ 340

¶ 340. Responsibilities and Duties of Elders and Licensed Pastors—

1. General Responsibilities and Duties: The responsibilities of elders are derived from the authority given in ordination. Elders have a fourfold ministry of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service. Licensed pastors share with the elders the responsibilities and duties of a pastor for this fourfold ministry, within the context of their appointment, and thus serve in the local church and in extension ministries in witness and service of Christ’s love and justice. Elders Both are authorized to preach and teach the Word, to provide pastoral care and counsel, to administer the sacraments, and to order the life of the church for service in mission and ministry as pastors, superintendents, and bishops. They serve in the local church, in extension ministries, and other settings in witness and service of Christ’s love and justice.

a. Authority in ministries of the Word—Elders in provisional membership and licensed pastors are authorized to offer ministries of the Word within the bounds of their appointment. Elders in full connection are authorized to offer ministries of the Word across the worldwide United Methodist connection.

b. Authority to administer and preside at the celebration of the sacraments—Elders are authorized to administer the sacraments (§ 332.3). Licensed pastors are authorized to preside at the celebration of the sacraments within the context of their appointments.

c. Authority to order the life of the church—Elders are authorized to order the life of the church for service in mission and ministry. Licensed pastors are authorized to order the life of the church within the bounds of their appointments and, as the Discipline provides, in roles of servant leadership within the annual conference. Elders in full connection are also authorized to order the life of the church by serving as superintendents or bishops.

2. Licensed pastors share with the elders the responsibilities and duties of a pastor for this fourfold ministry, within the context of their appointment. Specific Responsibilities and Duties—

...

b) Sacrament: (1) To administer or preside at the celebration of the sacraments of baptism and the Supper of the Lord Holy Communion according to Christ's ordinance.

...

b) (e) To work with deacons to select and train deacons and lay members to serve the consecrated communion elements to persons absent from worship when Communion is celebrated.

b) (2) To encourage the private and congregational use of the other means of grace, including but not limited to those specified by the Wesleys in the General Rules: The public worship of God, the ministry of the Word whether read or expounded, family and private prayer, searching the Scriptures, and fasting or abstinence.

...

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and the Nature of Ordination, Number 2 – Clarifying the Relation between Ordination and the Sacraments.

¶340.2a3a.

Petition Number: 60639-MH-¶340.2a3a-G; Wofford, James C. - Henderson, KY, USA. 2 Similar Petitions

Marriage Within the UMC

Amend ¶ 340.2.a.(3)(a) as follows:

To perform the marriage ceremony after due counsel with the parties involved and in accordance with ~~the laws of the state and~~ the rules of The United Methodist Church. The decision to perform the ceremony shall be the right and responsibility of the pastor. The pastor will not serve as a legal signatory of a state marriage license; rather the pastor of The United Methodist Church would issue a Church Covenant of Marriage Certificate and enter the marriage information into the local church data base for posterity.

Rationale:

We affirm that marriage in The United Methodist Church should mirror the relationship between Christ and the Church. With the definition of marriage in question among various state and federal laws as well as governmental entities, the Church needs to clarify its spiritual authority regarding the covenant of marriage. With . . .

¶340.2c.

Petition Number: 60640-MH-¶340.2c-G; Marden, Bonnie - Chelmsford, MA, USA.

Financial Accountability

Amend ¶ 340.2.c.(2)(c):

To provide leadership for the funding ministry of the congregation. To ensure membership care including compliance with charitable giving documentation requirements and to provide appropriate pastoral care, the pastor, in cooperation with the financial secretary, shall have access to and responsibility for professional stewardship of congregational giving records.

Rationale:

Giving is part of our membership covenant with God and the Church, which deserves careful stewardship by pastors and financial secretaries. Pastoral leadership for member care, congregational vitality, and mission capacity improves significantly when congregations include the pastor in stewardship of donor relationships and share knowledge about congregational resources.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60787-MH-¶341.6-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 999 Similar Petitions

Deletion

Delete ¶341.6.

~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall~~

~~not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches.~~

Rationale:

UM clergy should not be required, but authorized to officiate services of Christian marriage for all prepared couples, regardless of sexual orientation. Current prohibition places some UM clergy in positions of violating their ministerial integrity, Christian conscience, pastoral calling, denying same gender couples opportunities to be married in their churches.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60788-MH-¶341.6-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table. Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan Annual Conference. Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference. 7 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Remove Prohibition

Amend ¶ 341.6 as indicated following:

¶341.6. Ceremonies that celebrate ~~homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches~~ marriages between two persons committed to one another as provided in ¶ 161.B may be conducted by United Methodist pastors and other persons authorized in the Book of Discipline only upon following the process provided in ¶ 340.2.a)(3)(a).

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60789-MH-¶341.6-G; Perez, Lyssette N. - Rockaway, NJ, USA for UMC of the Rockaways Reconciling Ministries Team.

Unauthorized Conduct

¶341.6. ~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches.~~ In those locations where same-sex marriage is legal, pastors and local churches are authorized to conduct such ceremonies consistent with their conscience and stated beliefs. No pastor can be forced to conduct such ceremonies against her/his conscience and beliefs. And no local church can be forced to conduct such ceremonies if against their stated beliefs as officially approved by the appropriate governing body.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60790-MH-¶341.6-G; Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference.

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶341.6 of the Book of Discipline by adding to the existing text as follows:

¶341.6. Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches, except where authorized by vote of the annual conference where the clergyperson is appointed or the church is located; or by a two-thirds vote of the church conference where the clergyperson is appointed.

Rationale:

Our Social Principles implore us “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” and commit us “to be in ministry for and with all persons.” Many pastors and congregations believe that such ministry includes offering blessings of committed same-sex relationships, and where legal, same-sex marriage.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60791-MH-¶341.6-G; Barker, Jill - Washington, DC, USA.

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶ 341.6:

¶341.6 Unauthorized Conduct Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches. Notwithstanding the foregoing, in those civil jurisdictions where homosexual couples have been granted the right to marriage or civil union, ceremonies celebrating those marriages or unions may be conducted in our churches and by our ministers, the decision being the right and responsibility of the pastor.

Rationale:

In a democratic society civil authorities define the civil rights of citizens. We are a global church and recognize that secular laws regarding marriage differ. These differences impact our church. This moderate approach allows pastors the option to perform ceremonies where it is legal should they choose to do so.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60792-MH-¶341.6-G; Tyler, Linda S. - Conway, AR, USA.4 Similar Petitions

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶ 341.6:

~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches. A clergy person may, but is not required to, perform a wedding ceremony or civil union ceremony for same-gender persons whose marriage or civil union is allowed by law in the secular jurisdiction where the ceremony is conducted.~~

Rationale:

This amendment deletes the language of the current ¶ 341.6 and replaces it with language that permits a clergy person to perform a same-gender wedding ceremony if the marriage or civil union is permitted in the jurisdiction where the ceremony is conducted.

¶341.6. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60906-MH-¶341.6-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶ 341.6 as follows:

~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches; except in jurisdictions or central conferences that have determined that the celebration of homosexual unions and/or performance of same-sex wedding ceremonies may be conducted by ministers in that jurisdiction or central conference and/or may occur in churches within that jurisdiction or central conference.~~

Notwithstanding the foregoing, an individual minister shall not be required to celebrate homosexual unions or perform same-sex wedding ceremonies merely because the minister is serving a church located in a jurisdiction or central conference that has permitted the celebration of homosexual unions or the performance of same-sex wedding ceremonies by ministers within that jurisdiction or central conference.

Rationale:

Deep divisions with respect to whether ministers should be permitted to conduct ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions and same-sex weddings or whether such ceremonies should be permitted in church facilities are clearly demonstrated by the increasing number of incidents of ecclesial disobedience resulting in public trials and diversion of resources . . .

¶341.7.

Petition Number: 60649-MH-¶341.7-G; Case, Riley B. - Kokomo, IN, USA.

Re-baptism

Delete the first sentence of ¶ 341.7

7. ~~No pastor shall re-baptize.~~ The practice of re-baptism does not . . .

Rationale:

As stated a pastor is liable to charges for “re-baptizing.” There are too many gray areas as to what constitutes a valid baptism to begin with. Best to live with ambiguity.

¶342.

Petition Number: 60501-MH-¶342-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Support for Elders

Amend ¶ 342

~~¶ 342. Support for Elders in Full Connection Appointed to Pastoral Charges—To strengthen the effectiveness of the connectional system, assumption of the obligations of the itinerant ministry required upon admission to the traveling connection places upon the Church a counter obligation to provide adequate support for the entire ministry of the Church.~~ The Church has an obligation to support the itinerant ministry as a means of strengthening the effectiveness of our connectional system (¶ 620). The Church shall provide, and the ordained minister is entitled to receive, not less than the equitable compensation established by the annual conference for clergy members according to provisions of ¶ 625.3.

1. ~~Support for Elders in Full Connection Appointed to Pastoral Charges Who Render Full-Time Service~~—Each elder ~~in full connection of an annual conference~~ who is in good standing and who is appointed to full-time service under the provision of ¶ 338.1 shall have a claim upon the conference Equitable Compensation Fund and a right to receive not less than base compensation established by the annual conference for persons in full-time service.

2. Support for ~~Ordained~~ Elders Appointed to Pastoral Charges Who Render Less than Full-Time Service—Each elder ~~in full connection~~ who is in good standing and who is appointed by the bishop to less than full-time service under the provisions of ¶ 338.2 shall have a claim upon the conference Equitable Compensation Fund in one-quarter increments according to the guidelines established by the annual conference commission on equitable compensation.

3. Notwithstanding anything herein to the contrary, the benefits provided to ~~ordained ministers~~ elders, in addition to the cash compensation, under the benefit programs administered by the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits may be different for ~~ordained ministers~~ elders serving full-time as pastors to local charges and for ~~ordained ministers~~ elders serving other types of appointments.

4. No pastor shall be entitled to any claim for unpaid base compensation against any church or charge served after pastoral connection with the church or charge has ceased.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process. This petition focuses on the support for elders.

¶344.1.

Petition Number: 60641-MH-¶344.1-G; Baumgardner, Karl - Fountain Valley, CA, USA.

Campus Ministry

Amend Discipline ¶ 344.1 by adding a new sub-section e) as follows:

¶ 344. Provisions for Appointment to Extension Ministries— . . .

1. Categories of Appointment— . . .

a) . . .

b) . . .

c) . . .

d) . . .

e) All clergy newly appointed to positions primarily focused on campus ministry shall affirm to their bishop that during their service in campus ministry, they will teach students that celibacy in singleness and fidelity in marriage are God’s good boundaries for sexual behavior.

Rationale:

The focus here is NOT on homosexuality. With the media, peer pressure, culture, and the flesh ridiculing and opposing our Christian values, if not even our ministers will encourage our students to appreciate and follow God’s good standards for sexual self-control, who else will do so?

¶346.1.

Petition Number: 60655-MH-¶346.1-G; Bartlett, Laura Jaquith - Eagle Creek, OR, USA.

Add Affiliate Charge Conference Requirement in Home Annual Conference

Amend ¶ 346.1 by adding a sentence as follows:

1. Ordained Clergy or Provisional Members from Other Annual Conferences and Other Methodist Denominations—With approval and consent . . . Such appointments are renewable annually. Clergy in such appointments shall maintain an affiliate charge conference relationship with a local church in their home annual conference. Furthermore, it shall be the responsibility . . .

Rationale:

Clergy appointed to other annual conferences often lose a sense of connection and accountability with their home annual conference. Maintaining an affiliate charge conference relationship helps provide clear lines of accountability and communication with the annual conference where the clergy person remains amenable for his/her ministerial conduct, membership, and ordination.

¶347.

Petition Number: 60376-MH-¶347-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Alignment of Transfer Process from Other Denominations

Amend ¶ 347 by inserting current ¶ 348.2 after current ¶ 347.5 and then deleting ¶ 348

¶ 347. . . .

. . . 6. After the orders of an ordained minister of another church shall have been duly recognized, and the minister has been approved for full membership, the certificates of ordination by said church shall be returned to the minister with the following inscription written plainly on the back:

These orders are recognized by the _____ Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church, this _____ day of _____, _____ [year].

_____, President
_____, Secretary

The ordained minister also will be furnished with a certificate of recognition of orders signed by the bishop.

~~¶ 348. Recognition of Orders of Clergy from Other Denomination—1. Clergy from other denominations may have their orders recognized by the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference after examination of their credentials by the bishop and Board of Ordained Ministry. Prior to admission to membership in the annual conference, such recognition of orders may be given upon recommendation of the bishop and Board of Ordained Ministry.~~

~~2. When the orders of an ordained minister of another church shall have been duly recognized, the certificates of ordination by said church shall be returned to the minister with the following inscription written plainly on the back:~~

~~These orders are recognized by the _____ Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church, this _____ day of _____, _____ [year].~~

~~_____, President
_____, Secretary~~

~~The ordained minister also will be furnished with a certificate of recognition of orders signed by the bishop.~~

Rationale:

Recognition of orders indicates a clergy person has transferred membership to the UMC. Clergy who aren't transferring serve under ¶ 346 without having orders recognized. This petition clarifies that due process is followed by making recognition of orders the last step in the transfer process as outlined in ¶ 347.

¶347.1.

Petition Number: 60193-MH-¶347.1-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Transfers

Amend ¶ 347.1

1. From Other Annual Conferences – Ordained clergy or provisional members from other annual conferences of The United Methodist Church may be received by transfer into provisional or full membership with the consent of the bishops involved. ~~Consultation with the chairperson or executive committee of the Board of Ordained Min-~~ ~~istry shall be held prior to the transfer. Recommendation by the executive committee of the Board of Ministry and approval of the clergy session shall take place prior to the transfer.~~

Rationale:

The petition requires approval of the request to transfer a clergy person from another annual conference into provisional or full membership by the Executive Committee of the Conference Board of Ministry and the clergy session of the annual conference, keeping in line with ¶ 33 Article II of the 2012 Book . . .

¶347.1.

Petition Number: 61010-MH-¶347.1-G; Ritter, Chris - Geneseo, IL, USA.

Organic Jurisdictional Solution – Transfer of Clergy

Amend: ¶ 347. Transfers—1. From Other Annual Conferences—Ordained clergy or provisional members from other annual conferences of The United Methodist Church may be received by transfer into provisional or full membership with the consent of the bishops involved. If an ordained clergy or provisional member registers a moral objection to the clergy standards of the jurisdictional conference of which their annual conference of membership is a part, consent of the supervising bishop shall not be required for transfer to an annual conference of another jurisdiction, provided that this moral objection is registered in writing within six months of the close of the jurisdictional conference. Consultation with the chairperson or executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry shall be held prior to the transfer.

Rationale:

This is one piece of a larger legislative agenda to achieve amicable unity in The UMC through the “Organic Jurisdictional Solution.” This item allows clergy to transfer to a conference of another jurisdiction without interference should a violation of conscience exist with the clergy standards of their jurisdiction. See jurisdictional-solution.org.

¶347.3a.

Petition Number: 60642-MH-¶347.3a-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Reduce Inappropriate Medical Disclosure and Discrimination – Transfers

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 347.3.a (Transfers From Other Denominations) as follows:

3. *From Other Denominations—*a) On recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the clergy members in full connection may recognize the orders of ordained clergy from other denominations and receive them as provisional members or local pastors. They shall present their credentials for examination by the bishop and Board of Ordained Ministry and give assurance of their Christian faith and experience. They shall give evidence of their agreement with and willingness to support and maintain United Methodist doctrine, discipline, and polity and present a satisfactory letter from a physician, as described in ¶ 324.8 certificate of good health on the prescribed form from a physician approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

Rationale:

Replaces the health form with a letter from a physician, eliminating the high potential for confidential information to be disclosed in violation of the individual's privacy. Refers back to disability/diagnosis non-discrimination for those seeking provisional membership, making the policy more consistent.

¶347.5.

Petition Number: 60719-MH-¶347.5-G; Smith, Jeremy - Portland, OR, USA.

Retention of AC Authority in Recognizing Ordination

Amend ¶ 347.5 as follows:

Transfers from Other Denominations.

5. Ordained clergy seeking admission into an annual conference on credentials from another denomination who have previously withdrawn from membership in the effective relation in an annual conference of The United Methodist Church or one of its legal predecessors shall not be admitted or readmitted without the consent of receiving a recommendation from the annual conference from which they withdrew or its legal successor, or the annual conference of which the major portion of their former conference is a part, such consent recommendation to be granted upon recommendation of sent from its Board of Ordained Ministry within 180 days of the request.

Rationale:

Annual conferences have sole authority on ordination. The entirety of Section XII prescribes authority to the annual conference and presiding bishop. To require cross-conference approval for ordination negates that authority. Changing “consent” to “recommendation” retains both annual conference authority and prudent investigation.

¶349.

Petition Number: 60492-MH-¶349-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Add Group Mentoring for Local Pastors

Amend ¶ 349.3 and 4

¶ 349.3. ~~The conference Board of Ordained Ministry may assign one mentor to work either with one individual or with a group of local pastors and/or provisional members. Local pastors and provisional members will be assigned to a clergy mentoring group, wherever possible, or to a clergy mentor by the Board of Ordained Ministry.~~ Persons transferring from other denominations will also be assigned a clergy mentor (¶ 347.3.b).

4. Clergy mentoring begins when a person receives an appointment as a local pastor or as a ~~commissioned minister entering provisional service~~ provisional member.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VII – Leadership Support and Development Through Pathways for Thriving in Ordained Ministry, Number 2b – Add group mentoring for local pastors.

¶349.1.

Petition Number: 60491-MH-¶349.1-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Add Group Mentoring between Certification of Candidacy and Provisional Membership

Amend ¶ 349.1

¶ 349.1a) . . . with the vocational discernment coordinator (wherever named) and the district superintendent (¶ 310). ~~Candidacy mentors will work with the candidate until that candidate begins serving in an appointive ministry as a local pastor or a commissioned minister. Candidates will be assigned to a candidacy mentor or mentoring groups to meet with until they begin serving as a local pastor or provisional member.~~

¶ 349.1b) Clergy mentors are clergy in full connection, associate members, or full-time local pastors who have completed the Course of Study trained to provide ongoing oversight and counsel with local pastors and with provisional members ~~pursuing ordained ministry.~~

Rationale:

Study of Ministry Report, Section VII – Leadership Support and Development Through Pathways for Thriving in Ordained Ministry, Number 2a – Add group mentoring during the period between certification of candidacy and provisional membership.

¶349.1b.

Petition Number: 60643-MH-¶349.1b-G; Gharky, Dale - Mogadore, OH, USA.

PTLP as Mentor

Amend ¶ 349.1b:

Clergy mentors are clergy in full connection, associate members, ~~or~~ full-time, or part-time local pastors who have completed the Course of Study . . .

Rationale:

Local pastors come from all walks of life, with a plethora of skills and educational backgrounds. The Call to Ministry for a part-time local pastor does not negate any secular training, and in most cases, while continuing to be bi-vocational, the part-time local pastor has a wealth of life experience . . .

¶350.

Petition Number: 60493-MH-¶350-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Periodic Clergy Assessments

Amend ¶ 350

Section XIV. Evaluation for Continuing Formation for Full Members and Local Pastors

¶ 350. Evaluation—Evaluation is a continuous process for formation in servant ministry and servant leadership that must take place in a spirit of understanding and acceptance. Evaluation serves as a process for ~~pastors~~ clergy to assess their effectiveness in ministry and to discern God’s call to continue in ordained ministry.
1. For clergy serving local churches, the ~~The~~ district superintendent, in consultation with the pastor-parish relations committee, will evaluate annually ~~the pastors~~² each cler-gy’s effectiveness for ministry (¶¶ 334.2c, 419, 635.2o, r), using criteria, processes, and training developed by the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry. The ~~pastors~~ clergy in local churches shall participate annually in an evaluation with the committee on pastor-parish relations ~~for use in to enhance~~ an ongoing effective ministry and ~~for to identifying~~ continuing education needs and plans (¶ 258.2g[5]), using criteria, processes, and training developed by the Board of Ordained Ministry and the cabinet. The process of evaluation shall include self-assessment and appropriate metrics, and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry will offer models to guide cabinets and Board of Ordained Ministry in the evaluation process.

2. Deacons in appointments beyond the local church and elders and local pastors ~~Clergy serving~~ in appointments to extension ministries will undergo annual evaluation by their immediate supervisors, engage in annual self-evaluation, and include copies of these evaluations in the annual report submitted to their bishop, district superintendent, and the Board of Ordained Ministry (¶ 344.2a). ~~When possible, they~~ They shall have ~~a~~ an annual conversation with their district superintendent about their ministry.

3. Every clergyperson shall also engage in a six-month process of personal and professional assessment and development every eight years. The process will be designed and implemented by the cabinet and Board of Ordained Ministry for each annual conference in consultation with the Chairs of the Orders of Deacon and Elders and Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members. The process shall include both a formal review and an in-depth renewal opportunity, such as a retreat or series of coaching and mentoring sessions.

a. The formal review shall include a self-evaluation, metrics appropriate to the ministry settings to which clergy are appointed, observations of trends from the previous eight years, and reviews or interviews with people close to the ministry of the clergy being reviewed.

b. The in-depth renewal opportunity shall be designed by the cabinet and Board of Ordained Ministry in a form appropriate to the conference. The renewal opportunities shall include a combination of elements, such as: time apart for prayer and reflection, reflection with a covenant group, meetings with a coach, celebration of ministry milestones, and discernment of future ministry challenges and opportunities. When deemed important to help in the evaluation process, psychological assessments may be requested by the cabinet or Board of Ordained Ministry.

c. The district superintendent shall review the portfolio and provide the initial report of the eighth year review of effectiveness. When recommended by the district superintendent, a meeting with the bishop and members of the cabinet may be held.

d. Each annual conference shall develop and initiate a plan for such assessment by January 1, 2020.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VII – Leadership Support and Development Through Pathways for Thriving in Ordained Ministry, Number 3 – Periodic clergy assessments.

¶351.

Petition Number: 60494-MH-¶351-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Strengthen the Requirement for Lifelong Learning and Coaching

Amend ¶ 351.1, 2, 4, and 6

¶ 351.1. . . . This shall include carefully developed personal programs of study augmented periodically by involvement in organized educational and spiritual growth activities. These practices embody the Wesleyan emphasis on lifelong growth in faith, fostered by personal spiritual practices and participation in covenant communities. Each annual conference, through the Chairs of the Clergy Orders and Fellowship or other leaders designated by the bishop, shall provide spiritual enrichment opportunities and covenant groups for deacons, elders, and local pastors.

2. A clergy member’s continuing education and spiritual growth program ~~should~~ shall include ~~such~~ professional formation leaves at least one week each year and at least one month during one year of every quadrennium . . .

3. . . .

4. . . . (e) for others in extension ministries or appointments beyond the local church, with the appropriate persons in their agency.

5. . . .

6. Clergy in extension ministries and appointments beyond the local church shall give evidence . . .

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VII – Leadership Support and Development Through Pathways for Thriving in Ordained Ministry, Number 1 – Strengthen the requirement for lifelong learning and coaching.

¶351.3.

Petition Number: 60720-MH-¶351.3-G; Dice, Nelson-Clarke - Ocean City, NJ, USA.

Continuing Education and Spiritual Growth for Clergy

Amend ¶ 351.3

A clergy member may request a formational and spiritual growth leave of up to six months while continuing to hold an appointment in the local church. Such leaves are available to clergy members who have held full-time appointments for at least six years. Such a leave shall be with the approval of the committee on pastor-parish relations, the church council, and the district superintendent. Annual conferences are encouraged to assist with pulpit supply and temporary support for such leaves.

At least one clergy member annually within a district shall be granted a formational and spiritual growth leave of up to one year while continuing to hold an appointment in the local church. Such leaves are available to associate members or clergy members who have held full-time appointments for at least six years, or in a less than full-time appointment equivalent for six consecutive full-time years. Such a leave shall be with the approval of the charge conference, the committee on pastor-parish relations, the church council, and the district director of lay servant ministries, the district superintendent, and the bishop. Annual conferences, district lay servant ministries, and clergy members shall assist with pulpit supply and temporary support for such leaves.

Rationale:

If a clergy member would benefit from a leave while under appointment, the proposed addition directs a district superintendent to choose at least one clergy member to honor the Sabbath year rest annually without the loss of clergy housing, pay or benefits; and adds only minimal cost to the local . . .

¶354.

Petition Number: 60377-MH-¶354; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Renewal of Transitional Leave

Amend ¶ 354.2 and 354.3

¶ 354. 2. A voluntary leave of absence may be taken for a variety of reasons: . . .

c) Transitional Leave . . .

(2) A provisional ~~member or full member elder, or an associate member, or full member elder~~ needs to transition from an extension ministry to another appointment, or from a local church appointment to an extension ministry appointment.

During transitional leave, the clergyperson . . .

3. Written request . . . ~~This relationship~~ Personal leave and family leave shall be approved annually upon written request of the clergy member and personal or family leave shall not be granted for more than five years in succession, except by a two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection. Transitional leave shall not be renewed beyond a twelve-month period. ~~The Voluntary~~ leave shall be counted as a part of the eight-year limit for provisional members (§ 327).

Rationale:

Transitional leave is a temporary voluntary leave of absence that allows for elders, provisional elders, or associate members to transition between extension ministries and/or local church ministries.

¶354.

Petition Number: 60379-MH-¶354-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Provisions for Administrative Location During Voluntary Leave of Absence

Amend ¶ 354.9 and 354.12

¶ 354.9. Those on voluntary leave of absence shall be held amenable to the annual conference for their conduct and the performance of their ministry. In case of failure to report to the Board of Ordained Ministry, the ~~complaint procedures may be invoked~~ (¶ 363). provisions for administrative location (¶ 360) may be invoked.

¶ 354.12. When clergy members on voluntary leave of absence . . . the provisions of administrative location (~~¶359)43~~ (¶ 360) ~~or the complaint procedures of~~ ¶ 363 may be invoked.

Rationale:

Voluntary Leave of Absence is a choice and not the result of a complaint process. This petition changes the possible steps available from a complaint process to an administrative process when clergy on Voluntary Leave of Absence fail to report or request an extension of leave.

¶354.3.

Petition Number: 60644-MH-¶354.3-G; Marks, Chamberlyn K. - Wake Forest, NC, USA.

Family Leave

Amend ¶ 354.3 as follows:

¶354.3 . . . The leave shall not be counted as a part of the eight-year limit for provisional members (¶ 327) on family leave but shall be counted for provisional members on personal and transitional leave.

Rationale:

Family Leave (¶ 354) and Maternity or Paternity Leave (¶ 356) demonstrate the church's commitment to supporting clergy families, and the creation of the Young Clergy Initiative in 2012 shows the church's need for young clergy. This change would allow young clergy to care for their ordination. The . . .

¶354.4.

Petition Number: 60378-MH-¶354.4-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Process for an ad interim Voluntary Leave of Absence

Amend ¶ 354.4

¶ 354.4. Between sessions of the annual conference, voluntary leave of absence may be granted or terminated by the executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry after consultation with and approval by the bishop and district superintendents. ~~, with the approval of the bishop and district superintendents, by the executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry.~~ This interim action shall be subject to the approval of the clergy session of ~~members in full connection with~~ the annual conference at its next session.

Rationale:

Clarifies that the authority for granting an ad interim status change resides with the executive committee of the BOM after they have consulted with the bishop and cabinet.

¶355.

Petition Number: 60380-MH-¶355-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Involuntary Leave of Absence

Amend ¶ 355

¶ 355. Involuntary Leave of Absence—

... 2. a) A written ~~or~~ and signed complaint is not resolved through the supervisory (¶ 363.1b, c), complaint (¶ 363.1e), or trial process . . .

3. ~~e~~) Should there be complaints or charges pending at the time of a request for involuntary leave of absence, . . .

3 ~~4~~. Involuntary leave of absence shall be approved . . .

4 ~~5~~. Between sessions of the annual conference, the bishop and cabinet may request that an involuntary leave of absence may be granted or terminated (¶ 364), with the approval of the bishop and cabinet, by the executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry. . . .

Rationale:

Aligns definition of complaint with ¶363. Clarifies process for ad interim beginning or termination of Involuntary Leave of Absence.

¶357.

Petition Number: 60656-MH-¶357-G; Bartlett, Laura Jaquith - Eagle Creek, OR, USA.

Add Charge Conference Requirement for Medical Leave

¶357. Medical leave Due to Medical and Disabling Conditions that Prevent Performance of Ministerial Duties.

Create a new Point 3; renumber the current Points 3, 4, and 5 to become 4, 5, and 6. The new Point 3 would read:

3. After consultation and with the written consent of the pastor in charge, and with the approval of the district superintendent and the staff-parish relations committee of a local church, clergy members on medical leave shall designate a charge conference within the bounds of the annual conference in which they hold membership, to which they shall relate and submit an annual report. Clergy members on medical leave remain amenable to the annual conference for their conduct and ordination.

Rationale:

This is the only clergy status that doesn't require a charge conference relationship. Although annual conferences can require such a relationship, it is difficult to enforce without Disciplinary authority. A system of accountability and connection is especially crucial for these clergy on medical leave, who often feel useless and abandoned.

¶358.6.

Petition Number: 60502-MH-¶358.6-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Appointments in Retirement

Amend ¶ 358.6

6. ~~Appointment of Retired Ordained Ministers Deacon or Elder in Full Connection—A Retired ordained minister deacons or elders in full connection shall be eligible to receive an appointment when requested by the bishop and cabinet. A retired ordained minister~~ When appointed to a pastoral charge they shall have neither a claim upon minimum compensation from the Commission on Equitable Compensation or similar conference agency, nor further pension credit . . .

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process. This petition focuses on appointments in retirement.

¶358.7.

Petition Number: 60645-MH-¶358.7-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Reduce Inappropriate Medical Disclosure and Discrimination – Retirement Reinstatement

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 358.7.2 (Return to Effective Relationship [from Retirement]) as follows:

(2) a satisfactory letter from a physician, as described in ¶ 324.8 ~~certificate of good health on the prescribed form from a physician approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry. . .~~

Rationale:

Replaces the health form with a letter from a physician, eliminating the high potential for confidential information to be disclosed in violation of the individual's privacy. Refers back to disability/diagnosis non-discrimination for those seeking provisional membership, making the policy more consistent.

¶359.3.

Petition Number: 60503-MH-¶359.3-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Honorable Location

Amend ¶ 359.3

3. ~~Ordained ministers~~ Those on honorable location may request the annual conference to grant them the status of honorable location-retired . . .

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process.

¶360.4.

Petition Number: 60504-MH-¶360.4-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Administrative Location

Amend ¶ 360.4

4. ~~Ordained ministers~~ Those on administrative location may request the annual conference to grant them the status of administrative location-retired.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process.

¶361.

Petition Number: 60505-MH-¶361-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Withdrawal of Members in Full Connection

Amend ¶ 361

¶ 361. Withdrawal—

1. Withdrawal to Unite with Another Denomination—When ordained members in good standing who are in full connection withdraw to unite with another denomination or to terminate their membership in the denomination, . . .

2. Withdrawal from the Ordained Ministerial Office—~~Ordained m~~Members in full connection of an annual conference who are in good standing ~~who~~ and desire to leave their ministerial office and withdraw from the conference may be allowed to do so by the annual conference at its session. The ~~ordained minister's~~ member's certifications of ordination and conference membership, and their written request to withdraw, . . .

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process.

¶361.

Petition Number: 60648-MH-¶361-G; Dragonette, Karin - Reynoldsburg, OH, USA. 10 Similar Petitions

Clergy Pension Preserved

Add new subparagraph to ¶ 361:

¶ 361.5. Pension Status—When an ordained member withdraws from the ordained office or from the denomination for any reason, the withdrawing clergy person shall be entitled to the full pension credit they have earned up to the time of withdrawal, including all years of service and all funds deposited in their name, whether personal contributions or funds contributed by a salary-paying unit, and including all past and future earnings and appreciation.

Rationale:

A covenant enforced only by legal strictures cannot have the moral force or spiritual cohesiveness required for true unity in Christ or the church. Our covenant must not be enforced only by trust clauses and pension programs, but by a willingness to walk together and live by the covenant in agreement . . .

¶362.1.

Petition Number: 60657-MH-¶362.1-G; Griffith, Thomas - Temple City, CA, USA.

Management of Just Resolution Agreements of Administrative Complaints

Amend ¶ 362.1 as follows:

362.1 Conference Relations Committee—Each annual conference Board of Ordained Ministry shall establish a conference relations committee of at least three persons to hear requests for discontinuance of provisional members, involuntary leave of absence, administrative location, involuntary retirement, proposed ratification of administrative just resolution agreements (¶ 363.1c), or other such matters as may be referred to them by the Board of Ordained Ministry (§ 635), district superintendents and former district superintendents shall not serve on the conference relations committee.

Rationale:

Assigns primary responsibility for consideration of Just Resolution Agreements of Administrative Complaints to the Conference Relations Committee, resolving confusion on how such Agreements are to be processed within the Board of Ordained Ministry. Asks that members of this committee be persons who have never been involved in clergy personnel management.

¶363.1.

Petition Number: 60381-MH-¶363.1; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Thirty-Day Extension Applies Throughout Complaint Procedures

Amend ¶ 363.1 and 363.1e)

¶ 363.1 . . .

When and if the stage changes, those persons will continue to be informed in writing of the new process in a timely fashion. All original time limitations in the process outlined in this paragraph, except suspension, may be extended for one 30-day period upon the consent of the complainant and the respondent.

a) Supervision . . .

e) Referral of a Complaint . . .

(2) Refer the matter to the counsel for the church as a complaint.

~~All original time limitations may be extended for on 30-day period upon the consent of the complainant and the respondent.~~

Rationale:

Moves to statement about a 30-day extension to the introduction of this paragraph in order to clarify that a 30-day extension can be applied throughout the process and not simply during the referral of complaint stage.

¶363.1. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60803-MH-¶363.1-G; Lomperis, John S.A. - Valparaiso, IN, USA.

Automatic Penalties

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 363.1 by adding after ¶ 363.1a a new section, ¶ 363.1b, and relettering the following sections accordingly:

b) Automatic Penalty for Acknowledged Same-Sex Unions—other provisions of the Book of Discipline notwithstanding, when the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergyperson having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1b) within the preceding six years, this separate process shall be followed:

(1) Upon receiving the formal complaint, the bishop or the bishop's designee shall, within a timely manner, directly request the person against whom the complaint was made for a brief written statement simply confirming or denying if he or she did in fact conduct or perform the Disciplinarily prohibited ceremony in question. In any meetings related to this process, both the person against whom the complaint and the person making the complaint may choose another person to accompany him or her with the right to voice.

(2) Throughout this process, the complaint shall be treated as an allegation or allegations until the person against whom the complaint was made delivers written confirmation of having conducted or performed the alleged prohibited ceremony or until thirty days have passed since he or she received the bishop's request for confirmation or denial, and has chosen to give no answer.

(3) If the person against whom the complaint was made provides a written response to the bishop's initial request other than confirming having committing the chargeable offense in question, then the ordinary supervisory response as outlined beginning in ¶363.1c below shall be followed as outlined below.

(4) If the clergyperson against whom the complaint was made either admits to have conducted or performed the Disciplinarily prohibited ceremony in question, or chooses not to deliver a response within thirty days of receiving the request for confirmation or denial of the offense, then he or she shall be considered guilty of having broken covenant with The United Methodist Church.

(5) If the clergyperson's file indicates that that he or she has previously been penalized according to this process, then the penalty the bishop imposes shall be termination of the conference membership and revocation of the credentials of conference membership, commissioning, ordination, or consecration of the clergyperson. Otherwise, the bishop shall suspend the guilty party from all ministerial functions, and from any appointment to a local church, general agency, or cabinet-level position, without salary, for a period of no less than one year.

(6) The precise length of this suspension shall be at the bishop's discretion, provided that it shall not be less than one full year and not more than three full years. There shall be no right to appeal such a penalty. A record of this penalty shall be placed in the clergy person's file.

(7) Sixty days before the conclusion of such a suspension, the bishop shall contact the suspended clergy person, either directly or through a designee, to request a written statement promising to not conduct or perform any such ceremonies in the future as long as doing so remains a chargeable offense under our Church's communal covenant as expressed in our Book of Discipline. If the suspended clergy person fails to make such a written promise, the bishop shall at the conclusion of the suspension period permanently terminate his or her clergy status.

(5) All of the process as outlined above shall be carried out in a timely manner, with attention to communication to all parties in the process. At the determination of the bishop, persons with qualifications and experience in assessment, intervention, or healing may be selected to assist in this process. The bishop also may consult with the committee on pastor-parish relations for pastors, the district committee on superintendency for district superintendents, appropriate personnel committee, or other persons who may be helpful.

(6) When this special process for the specific offense of conducting a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or performing a same-sex wedding ceremony is initiated, the bishop shall notify the chairperson of the Board of Ordained Ministry that a complaint has been filed, of the clergy person named, of the general nature of the complaint, of each response of the person against whom the complaint was made to the requests noted above, and with a summary the bishop's own subsequent actions in implementing this process.

Rationale:

This efficiently lessens our reliance on trials for covenant accountability. It prevents a single minister from holding an entire conference hostage with a needless, costly trial. There is only one chargeable offense for which there is such a disruptive minority movement to shatter the integrity of our connectional covenant.

¶363.1a.

Petition Number: 60382-MH-¶363.1a-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Definition of Complaint

Amend ¶ 363.1a)

¶ 363. Complaint Procedures—1. . . .

a) Supervision—In the course of the ordinary fulfillment of the superintending role, the bishop or district superintendent may receive or initiate complaints about the ~~performance-conduct~~ or character of a clergy person (¶ 2702.1). ~~A complaint is a written and signed statement claiming misconduct or unsatisfactory performance of ministerial duties.~~

Rationale:

Clarifies that complaints are based on specific conduct of a clergy person and not on general ineffective job performance. Removes the definition of complaint from sub-paragraph a) since the correct definition is written and retained in ¶ 363.1.

¶363.1c. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60804-MH-¶363.1c-G; Dietz, Peter - Thornton, PA, USA for Bethlehem UMC Social Action Committee. 3 Similar Petitions

Just Resolution

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 363.1(c) as follows:

c) Just Resolution—The supervisory response may include a process that seeks a just resolution in which the parties are assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s), in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties.⁶⁹ If the bishop chooses to initiate a mediated attempt to produce a just resolution, then the bishop, the person filing the complaint, the respondent, and other appropriate persons shall enter into a written agreement outlining the process, including any agreements on confidentiality. A process seeking a just resolution may begin at any time in the supervisory, complaint, or trial process. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergy person having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the clergy person against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any final just resolution of the complaint must include this clergy person being suspended without pay, for no less than one full year, from all ministerial duties and functions, including membership, staff position, or formal leadership role in any district, annual conference, or general church board, agency, committee, commission, council, or office, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including any terms and conditions, shall be signed by the parties and the parties shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. A just resolution agreed to by all parties shall be a final disposition of the related complaint.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

¶363.1d.

Petition Number: 60383-MH-¶363.1d; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Provision for Thirty-Day Extension of Suspension

Amend ¶ 363.1 d)

d) Suspension—

. . . may suspend the person from all clergy responsibilities, but not from an appointment, for a period not to exceed ninety days. With the agreement of the executive committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the bishop may extend the suspension for only one additional period not to exceed thirty days. . . .

Rationale:

At times additional days are needed in order to resolve a complaint, move a complaint forward, or complete fair process procedures for a requested status change. This extension allows for some flexibility while still requiring timely processing of a complaint.

¶363.1e.

Petition Number: 60547-MH-¶363.1e-G; Fordham, Rita R. - Dalton, GA, USA for Abundant Life Sunday School Class - Dalton First UMC. 1 Similar Petition

Limit Dismissal of Complaints

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 363.1(e) as follows:

e) Referral of a Complaint—Upon receiving a written and signed complaint, the bishop shall, within 90 days, carry out the supervisory response process. If within 90 days after the receipt of the complaint resolution is not achieved: the bishop shall either:

(1) Dismiss the complaint with the consent of the cabinet giving the reasons therefore in writing, a copy of which shall be placed in the clergyperson’s file, and another copy of which shall be sent to the complainant; or

(2) Refer the matter to the counsel for the church as a complaint.

The bishop may not dismiss the complaint without the consent of the complainant if the complainant has presented the bishop with credible evidence that a chargeable offense (¶ 2702.1) has actually been committed, within the time period covered by the statute of limitations (¶ 2702.4), by the person against whom the complaint was made, except in cases in which a previously filed complaint for the same specific alleged offense(s) has already been or is currently being properly processed, and the complainant has presented no credible evidence that this chargeable offense has been repeated. All original time limitations may be extended for one 30-day period upon the consent of the complainant and the respondent.

Rationale:

It is manifestly unjust and an affront to our members to dismiss a complaint when there has been a clear violation of a General Conference ruling. This petition provides an avenue of justice for possible victims of clergy wrongdoing without removing any protections for the rights of the accused.

¶365.

Petition Number: 60506-MH-¶365-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – Reshaping Ordination Process – Readmission to Provisional Membership

Amend ¶ 365

¶ 365. Readmission to Provisional Membership—Persons who have been discontinued as provisional members under the provisions of ¶ 327.6 from an annual conference of The United Methodist Church or one of its legal predecessors may be readmitted by the annual conference in which they held previously such membership. . . . When reinstated by vote of the clergy members in full connection, their provisional membership in the conference shall be restored, they shall serve a minimum of two years of provisional membership according to ¶ 326 prior to ~~ordination, and they shall be authorized by licensing and/or commissioning to perform those ministerial functions for~~ which they are qualified being received as members in full connection.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section VI – Leadership and Nature of Ordination, Number 3 – Reshaping Ordination Process.

¶366.3.

Petition Number: 60384-MH-¶366.3; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Readmission after Honorable or Administrative Location

Amend ¶ 366.3

¶ 366. Readmission after Honorable or Administrative Location . . .

3. A satisfactory certificate of good health on the prescribed form from a physician approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The Board of Ordained Ministry ~~should~~ shall require psychological evaluation.

Rationale:

Changes the psychological evaluation from a suggestion to a requirement when a clergy person is applying for readmission after Honorable or Administrative Location.

¶366.3.

Petition Number: 60646-MH-¶366.3-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Reduce Inappropriate Medical Disclosure and Discrimination – Honorable/ Administrative Location

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 366.3 (Readmission after Honorable or Administrative Location) as follows:

3. A satisfactory letter from a physician, as described in ¶ 324.8 ~~certificate of good health on the prescribed form from a physician approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry~~. The Board of Ordained Ministry should require psychological evaluation.

Rationale:

Replaces the health form with a letter from a physician, eliminating the high potential for confidential information to be disclosed in violation of the individual's privacy. Refers back to disability/diagnosis non-discrimination for those seeking provisional membership, making the policy more consistent.

¶369.5.

Petition Number: 60647-MH-¶369.5-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Reduce Inappropriate Medical Disclosure and Discrimination – Involuntary Retirement

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 369.5 (Readmission after Involuntary Retirement) as follows:

5. Presentation of satisfactory letter from a physician, as described in ¶ 324.8 ~~certificate of good health on the prescribed form from a physician approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry~~. . .

Rationale:

Replaces the health form with a letter from a physician, eliminating the high potential for confidential information to be disclosed in violation of the individual's privacy. Refers back to disability/diagnosis non-discrimination for those seeking provisional membership, making the policy more consistent.

¶370.1.

Petition Number: 60385-MH-¶370.1-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Remove “Under Appointment” from Local Pastor Description

Amend ¶ 370.1

¶ 370. 1. The annual conference is the basic body of The United Methodist Church. The clergy membership of an annual conference shall consist of deacons and elders in full connection (¶¶ 329, 333), provisional members (¶ 327), associate members, affiliate members (¶¶ 344.4, 586.4), and local pastors ~~under fulltime and part-time appointment to a pastoral charge~~ (¶ 317) . . .

[The same change is necessary in ¶¶2, 142, and 602.1. Petitions are submitted for each of these changes.]

Rationale:

“under appointment” is redundant because one must be under appointment in order to be categorized as a local pastor.

¶400.

Petition Number: 60623-MH-¶400-G; Littlefield, Clarence L. - Shiner, TX, USA.

Requests to Reconsider Pending Pastoral Appointments

Amend the Book of Discipline by adding a new paragraph, ¶ 430, after current Discipline ¶ 429 and renumbering subsequent paragraphs accordingly:

¶ 430. Requests for Reconsideration—If both a pastor currently appointed to a charge and a two-thirds vote of the committee on pastor-parish relations for this charge, as well as the pastor in charge (if the appointee in question is not the pastor in charge), are in agreement that the pending appointment of the pastor away from the charge is not in the best interests of the congregation(s), they may jointly file a written request for reconsideration with the bishop. The request may note any perceived deficiencies in administering the process of consultation and appointment making (¶¶ 426-428); the Discipline's direction to “work toward longer tenures in order to facilitate more effective ministry” (¶ 429); or any other factors that lead them to believe that the pastor's renewed appointment in his or her present pastoral charge is in the best interests of the mission and ministry of the charge and the conference. The written request and any supporting documentation should be presented to the bishop within twenty-one (21) days after the announcement of the appointment decision (¶ 428.10), and the initially announced appointment will not become final until the bishop responds in writing to the pastor and the committee(s) on pastor-parish relations. In the response, the bishop should either grant the request or provide a written explanation of the reasons the request is being denied. In reaching a decision on the request, the bishop and/or members of the cabinet may meet with the pastor and committee on pastor-parish relations as needed. The bishop and the cabinet should take the possibility of such requests for reconsideration as well as the possibility of their being granted into account when scheduling the initial appointment announcements.

Rationale:

Sometimes the appointment process does not work well, but there is currently no official recourse for a pastor and congregation in mutual agreement on continuing their association. Adding an appeal procedure, even one likely to be used sparingly, also provides an incentive to do the process well initially.

¶404.

Petition Number: 60556-MH-¶404-G; Kilpatrick, Joe W. - Tucker, GA, USA for Open Door Sunday School Class - Tucker First UMC.

Standing Committee Report

Amend ¶ 404 by the addition of a sub-paragraph 1.(c) as follows:

¶ 404. Provisions for Episcopal Areas—

1. In central conferences, the number of bishops shall be determined on the basis of missional potential . . .

c) File a report of a quadrennial analysis of the number of central conference bishops with each General Conference and with the Council of Bishops, allowing for responses from the bishops in the central conferences. The report shall include an explanation of any significant variations in the number of bishops in central conferences from the formula for jurisdictions established in ¶ 404.2.

Rationale:

This is a justice issue. Major variations exist. Let's keep the reasons for such variations before leadership to ensure consistent treatment and fair expectations of all. In the USA, a formula strictly applies church membership, while the number of bishops in the central conferences applies subjective judgements.

There are huge . . .

¶404.

Petition Number: 60619-MH-¶404-G; Marden, Bonnie - Chelmsford, MA, USA.

Provisions for Episcopal Areas

Amend ¶ 404 as follows:

¶ 404.1 ~~In central conferences,~~ The number of bishops shall be determined on the basis of missional potential, as approved by the General Conference on recommendation of the ~~Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters~~ appropriate College of Bishops. Before recommending changes in the number of episcopal areas, the ~~Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters~~ College of Bishops shall . . .

Add ¶ 404.1. a, ~~(4) and~~ missional capacity of the episcopal areas to support the mission work, administrative functions and financial responsibilities of the episcopal area.

Delete 404.2 a-c.

Rationale:

Each part of our global connection needs leadership systems appropriate to their region. Colleges have disciplinary authority to set area boundaries and fiduciary responsibility to ensure missional and financial capacity. Denominational growth is occurring in areas without this formula, membership by itself is not an indicator of missional capacity.

¶404.

Petition Number: 60620-MH-¶404-G; Marden, Bonnie - Chelmsford, MA, USA.

Provisions for Episcopal Areas

Amend ¶ 404 as follows:

¶ 404.1 ~~In central conferences~~; The number of bishops shall be determined on the basis of missional potential, as approved by the General Conference on recommendation of the ~~Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters~~ Central or Jurisdictional Conference. Before recommending changes in the number of episcopal areas, the ~~Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters~~ central or jurisdictional conference shall . . .

Add ¶ 404.1. a, (4) and missional capacity of the episcopal areas to support the mission work, administrative functions and financial responsibilities of the episcopal area.

Delete 404.2 a-c.

Rationale:

Transitioning to a global church, each part of our connection needs leadership systems appropriate to their region. Jurisdictions have Disciplinary authority to set area boundaries based on Constitutional ¶ 40, pending review for constitutionality.

¶404.2.

Petition Number: 60043-MH-¶404.2; Hopkins, John - North Canton, OH, USA for North Central Jurisdiction.

Jurisdictional Membership Count

To amend by addition Par. 404.2 (a) and (b) to read: In the jurisdictions, the number of bishops shall be determined by the number of chartered church members and members of unchartered new faith communities on the following basis: a) Each jurisdiction having 300,000 church members or fewer shall be entitled to five bishops and each jurisdiction having more than 300,000 church members shall be entitled to one additional bishop for each additional 300,000 church members or major fraction thereof.

b) If the number of chartered church members and members of unchartered new faith communities in a jurisdiction shall have decreased by at least ten percent below the number of church members which had previously entitled the jurisdiction to its number of bishops, then the number of bishops to which it shall be entitled shall be determined on the basis of missional needs, as approved by the General Conference on the recommendation of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy . . .

¶404.2.

Petition Number: 60616-MH-¶404.2-G; Prage, Linda A. - Thorntown, IN, USA for Thorntown UMC Council.

Number of Bishops

Amend ¶ 404.2 as follows:

¶ 404. Provisions for Episcopal Areas—

1. In central conferences, the number of bishops . . .

2. In the jurisdictions, the number of bishops shall be determined on the following basis:

a) ~~Each jurisdiction having 300,000 church members or fewer shall be entitled to five bishops and each jurisdiction having more than 300,000 church members shall be entitled to one additional bishop for each additional 300,000 church members or major fraction thereof. Each annual conference having at least 90,000 professing members shall be entitled to its own resident bishop, while smaller annual conferences shall share a bishop. The maximum number of bishops in a jurisdiction shall be determined by this formula, also considering the missional needs and financial resources of the jurisdiction, upon the recommendation of the Interjurisdictional committee on episcopacy and the final approval of General Conference. (The changes to this paragraph would take effect for the 2020 General and jurisdictional conferences.)~~

~~b) If the number of church members in a jurisdiction shall have decreased by at least ten percent below the number of church members which had previously entitled the jurisdiction to its number of bishops, then the number of bishops to which it shall be entitled shall be determined on the basis of missional needs, as approved by the General Conference on the recommendation of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy, provided however that said jurisdiction shall be entitled to no less than the number of bishops to which it would be entitled under subparagraph a) above. It shall be the responsibility of the affected jurisdiction, through its Committee on Episcopacy, to request consideration of its missional need for an exception, and in the absence of such a request, there shall be no obligation on the part of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy to consider such an exception nor to make any report on such an exception to General Conference. In no case shall there be any constraint on General Conference's power to act in the absence of such a recommendation or to reject any recommendation that might be received. (Effective at the close of General Conference 2012)~~

~~c) b) If a jurisdiction, as a result of the provisions of this paragraph, shall have the number of bishops to which it had previously been entitled reduced, then the reduction in the number of bishops to which it is entitled shall be~~ effective as of September 1 of the calendar year in which said reduction has been determined by the General Conference.

Rationale:

There is a wide disparity in the number of members and churches served by each bishop. The numbers currently range from 36,000 to 365,000 served by one bishop in the U.S. This minimum requirement will narrow that disparity and provide a clearer formula for determining the number of bishops.

¶404.2.

Petition Number: 60617-MH-¶404.2-G; Marden, Bonnie - Chelmsford, MA, USA.

Provisions for Episcopal Areas

Delete current ¶ 404.2a-c and replace with the following:

The number of bishops shall be determined on a new formula of metrics that shall be determined by the Connec-tional Table for presentation to the 2020 General Conference. It is suggested that such new metrics would consider more than official membership statistics, but could include vital congregations, worship attendance, new faith communities, and financial metrics such as payment of general Church apportionments. Until these new metrics are created, there will be no changes in the number of episcopal areas in any jurisdiction.

Rationale:

Focusing U.S. leadership on membership creates unhealthy competition and fear, further reducing capacity and vision. Leadership assignments should be correlated with other criteria (see ¶ 404.1) Since there are a number of new metrics available from the Vital Congregations study, these should be used to determine episcopal areas in a jurisdiction.

¶404.2a.

Petition Number: 60546-MH-¶404.2a-G; Fordham, Rita R. - Dalton, GA, USA for Abundant Life Sunday School Class - Dalton First UMC. 4 Similar Petitions

Formula for Distribution of Bishops

Amend ¶ 404.2a) as follows:

¶ 404. Provisions for Episcopal Areas-

2. In the jurisdictions, the number of bishops shall be determined on the following basis:

a) ~~Each jurisdiction having 300,000 church members or fewer shall be entitled to five bishops and each jurisdiction having more than 300,000 church members shall be entitled to one additional bishop for each additional 300,000 church members or major fraction thereof.~~

The General Conference may make changes to the number of bishops in each jurisdiction, considering the respective missional needs and financial resources of the jurisdictions as well as the episcopal needs of the whole Church. No jurisdiction shall be entitled to more bishops than a maximum of one bishop for every whole multiple of 70,000 church members or fewer bishops than a minimum of one bishop for every whole multi-ple of 210,000 church members. It is recommended that any financial savings from a reduction in the number of jurisdictional bishops be used to support additional bishops if needed in the central conferences. Beginning on September 1, 2016, the following shall be the distribution of jurisdictional bishops to remain in place until an ad-justment is mandated by General Conference action or by the provisions of this paragraph: North Central—9, Northeastern—8, South Central—10, Southeastern—13, and Western—4.

Rationale:

As a basic matter of justice and good financial stewardship, this would partially correct the current dramatic imbalances in the distribution of bishops. But it still allows for great flexibility and adjustments in allocating bishops for missional needs. The vast majority of US conferences have more than 70,000 members.

¶404.2a.

Petition Number: 60554-MH-¶404.2a-G; Kilpatrick, Joe W. - Tucker, GA, USA for Open Door Sunday School Class - Tucker First UMC.

Formula for Bishops

Amend ¶ 404.2a) as follows:

¶ 404. Provisions for Episcopal Areas—

...

2. In the jurisdictions, the number of bishops shall be determined on the following basis:

a) Each jurisdiction having ~~300,000~~ 250,000 church members or fewer shall be entitled to ~~five~~ four bishops and each jurisdiction having more than ~~300,000~~ 250,000 church members shall be entitled to one additional bishop for each additional ~~300,000~~ 250,000 church members or major fraction thereof. Any jurisdiction may have fewer than the number of bishops to which it is entitled under this formula, if so recommended by that jurisdiction's Committee on Episcopacy.

Rationale:

The current formula creates vast differences in the amount of proportionate episcopal leadership to which different jurisdictions are allotted. This revision would make the formula significantly fairer and more financially responsible, without imposing dramatic changes.

¶404.2b.

Petition Number: 60044-MH-¶404.2b; Hopkins, John - North Canton, OH, USA for North Central Jurisdiction.

Timing of GCFA Report to Jurisdictions

To amend by addition: Par. 404.2b) If the number of church members in a jurisdiction shall have decreased by at least ten percent below the number of church members which had previously entitled the jurisdiction to its number of bishops, GCFA will report to the jurisdiction no later than two years before General Conference. ~~Then~~ The number of bishops to which it shall be entitled shall be determined on the basis of missional needs, as approved by the General Conference on the recommendation of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy . . .

¶404.2c.

Petition Number: 60618-MH-¶404.2c-G; Marden, Bonnie - Chelmsford, MA, USA.

Provisions for Episcopal Areas

Amend ¶ 404.2c as follows:

. . . Sept 1 of the ~~calendar year in which said reduction has been determined by the General Conference~~ first year of the next quadrennium.

Rationale:

While the shorter time frame may seek to reduce costs, reactive change is costly and undermines vision and mission capacity. Change management is vital to healthy transitions which requires time for spiritual, relational and organizational adjustments.

¶405.2.

Petition Number: 60179-MH-¶405.2-G; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference.

Holy Conferencing for Episcopal Election

Amend ¶ 405.2 by addition of a new subparagraph without deleting any existing text in the current paragraph as follows:

Prior to casting an episcopal ballot for more than one candidate, the presiding bishop is to remind the delegates, "In the Wesleyan tradition of Holy Conferencing, please do not intentionally vote for non-candidates for strategic purposes."

Rationale:

This petition encourages Holy Conferencing over political strategy in the election of bishops. The last 3 quadrennia have seen a significant change in climate in the South Central Jurisdictional Conference with these important elections.

¶405.2.

Petition Number: 60180-MH-¶405.2; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference.

Limit of Bishops from One AC

Amend ¶ 405.2 by the addition of a new subparagraph without deleting any existing text in the paragraph as follows:

There shall be no more than 2 active bishops elected from any one annual conference serving in a jurisdiction at any given time.

Rationale:

There need to be checks and balances to prevent the majority of bishops in a Jurisdiction from being elected from only a few annual conferences, as is the case currently in the South Central Jurisdiction.

¶405.2a.

Petition Number: 60178-MH-¶405.2a-G; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference.

Geographical & Cultural Values for Episcopal Election

Amend ¶ 405.2 (a) as follows:

Jurisdictional and central conference delegates, in electing bishops, shall give due consideration to the inclusiveness of The United Methodist Church with respect to sex, race, geography, cultural values, and national origin. In addition . . .

Rationale:

In addition to consideration for sex and gender diversity, there needs to be consideration for geographic and cultural diversity in the election of bishops.

¶406.

Petition Number: 60519-MH-¶406-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

Remove Episcopal Term Restriction

Amend ¶ 406 as indicated following:

¶ 406. Assignment Process—1. Jurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy—The jurisdictional committee on episcopacy, after consultation with the College of Bishops, shall recommend the assignment of the bishops to their respective residences for final action by the jurisdictional conference; it shall not reach any conclusion concerning residential assignments until all elections of bishops for that session are completed and all bishops have been consulted. A bishop may be recommended for reassignment to the same residence ~~for a third quadrennium.~~

Rationale:

Current language is interpreted as restrictive, but the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy should be free to recommend assignments of bishops based upon missional priorities, conference needs, and needs of the bishops. If the committee determines that a bishop is providing effective leadership, a change shouldn't be forced by Discipline restriction.

¶408.1.

Petition Number: 60127-MH-¶408.1-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Special Assignments

Amend ¶ 408.1d as follows:

If, however, the retired bishop accepts any one of the following assignments of churchwide responsibility, the General Council on Finance and Administration, after consultation with the Council of Bishops, shall set a level of compensation not to exceed a maximum determined by the General Conference on recommendation of the General Council on Finance and Administration, with the compensation cost borne by the Episcopal Fund: (1) assignment of a special nature with direct relationship and accountability to the Council of Bishops, or

(2) assignment to a general agency or United Methodist Church-related institution of higher education. ~~Only the difference between the compensation as established and the continuing pension shall be paid from the Episcopal Fund.~~ Assignment of retired bishops to United Methodist Church-related institutions of higher education must be at the initiative of the institutions, with service not to exceed the mandatory retirement ages of the institutions.

If a bishop is assigned to a general agency or United Methodist Church-related institution of higher education, that agency or United Methodist Church-related institution of higher education ~~shall participate by payment of~~ will pay 50 percent of the difference between the compensation herein established by GCFA for the position by GCFA and the pension of the bishop.

Rationale:

Offsetting compensation in the situation described by this paragraph by pension amounts unfairly penalizes bishops with long service to The United Methodist, by reducing compensation for a current assignment for benefits already earned for past service to the connection. Making these revisions ensures that unreasonably low compensation for the assignment . . .

¶408.1.

Petition Number: 60531-MH-¶408.1-G; Erbele, W. Terence - Ketchikan, AK, USA for Alaska UM Conference.

Episcopal Retirement Age

Amend ¶ 408.1 as follows:

¶ 408.1. Mandatory Retirement—a) A bishop shall be retired on August 31 next following the regular session of the jurisdictional conference if the bishop's sixty-~~eight~~ ninth birthday has been reached on or before July 1 of the year in which the jurisdictional conference is held.

b) A bishop in a central conference shall be retired at a date no later than one year following the adjournment of General Conference, if the bishop's sixty-~~eight~~ ninth birthday is reached on or before the opening day of his or her scheduled conference ~~effective on January 1, 2016.~~ These changes shall be effective at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Medical advances coupled with improvements in our understanding of health, wellness, and fitness maintenance programs have extended life expectancy along with the time one can expect to be effective in ministry and mission. This should be recognized by increasing the age of retirement for bishops. This removes the arbitrary nature . . .

¶408.1b.

Petition Number: 60974-MH-¶408.1b-G; 'Owan, Kasap Tshibang - Mulungwishi, Democratic Republic of Congo.

Mandatory Retirement of CC Bishops

Amend ¶ 408.1b as follows:

. . . at a date no later than ~~one year~~ three months following the adjournment of General Conference 2016, if the bishop's . . .

Rationale:

This ¶ 408, b, does not help the Central Conferences, particularly that of the Congo as well as all of Africa, because it is not clear and it is confusing saying: "A bishop of the Conference will be retired 'at a date no later than one year following the adjournment . . .'"

¶408.3.

Petition Number: 60915-MH-¶408.3-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Jurisdictional Administrative Process

¶ 408.3 Involuntary Retirement--a) A bishop may be placed in the retired relation regardless of age by a two-thirds vote of the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy if, after not less than a thirty-day notice in writing is given to the affected bishop and hearing held, such a relationship is found by said committee to be in the best interest of the bishop and/or the Church. This action may or may not be taken because of the performance of the bishop, and the reason for the action must be clearly stated in the report of the committee. (Effective at the close of General Conference 2012.) ~~Appeal from this action may be made to the Judicial Council with the notice provisions being applicable as set forth in ¶2716. The provisions of ¶ 362.2 for fair process in administrative hearings shall apply to this administrative process. Written notice also should be given to the chairperson of the jurisdictional/central conference administrative review committee (¶ 538/543.22).~~

¶408.3.

Petition Number: 60916-MH-¶408.3-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Jurisdictional Administrative Process

And upon adoption of changes to ¶ 50 (Petition 60912) apply the following implementing Disciplinary changes:

¶ 408.3 c) By a two-thirds vote of those present and voting, the members of the Council of Bishops may place any bishop in the retired relation with or without their consent and irrespective of their age if such a relation is recommended by the council relations committee. The procedures for fair process in administrative hearings shall be followed in any involuntary retirement procedure (¶ 422.5). Written notice also should be given to the chairperson of the administrative review committee (¶ 422.6).

Rationale:

Judicial Decision 1230 makes use of ¶ 408.3.a impractical as it gives practically a near judicial standard to an administrative process. This legislation brings this administrative process in line with other administrative processes in the Book of Discipline and provides jurisdictional oversight prior to an administrative appeal to the Judicial Council.

¶410.

Petition Number: 60913-MH-¶410-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Jurisdictional Administrative Process

Upon adoption of changes to ¶ 50 (Petition 60912) apply the following implementing Disciplinary changes:

¶ 410.5 Involuntary Leave of Absence--a) By a two-thirds vote of those present and voting, the members of the Council of Bishops may place any bishop in an involuntary leave status if such a relation is recommended by the council relations committee. The procedures for fair process in administrative hearings shall be followed in any involuntary retirement procedure (¶ 422.5). Written notice also should be given to the chairperson of the administrative review committee (¶ 422.6).

b) Involuntary leave of absence shall be approved annually by the Council of Bishops after review and recommendation of the council relations committee.

c) During the period for which the leave is granted, the bishop shall be released from all episcopal responsibilities, and another bishop chosen by the executive committee of the Council of Bishops shall preside in the episcopal area. Salary and other benefits shall be continued through the Episcopal Fund.

¶410.4.

Petition Number: 60128-MH-¶410.4-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Medical Leave

Amend ¶ 410.4 as follows:

Bishops who by reason of impaired health are temporarily unable to perform full work ~~may be released by the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy from the obligation to travel through the connection at large~~ may be granted a leave of absence for a justifiable reason for not more than six months in consultation with the area committee on episcopacy and with the approval of the College of Bishops, the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy, and the executive committee of the Council of Bishops. During the period for which the leave is granted, the bishop shall be released from all episcopal responsibilities, and another bishop chosen by the executive committee of the Council of Bishops shall preside in the episcopal area. They may choose a place of residence, and the Council of Bishops shall be at liberty to assign them to such work as they may be able to perform. Salary and other benefits shall be continued through the Episcopal Fund. If after the six-month time period is over the bishop is still unable to perform full work due to impaired health, disability benefits through the benefit program provided to the bishop should be applied for.

Rationale:

¶410.4 uses outdated language that was applicable during a time when a bishop traveled throughout the connection at large. Now that an effective bishop has an assignment to a specific episcopal area it is necessary to make provisions under ¶410 to indicate how the episcopal area is to be cared . . .

¶413.

Petition Number: 60129-MH-¶413-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Immunity from Prosecution

Add a new subparagraph to ¶ 413 as follows:

6. Immunity from Prosecution – In order to preserve the integrity of the Church’s complaint process and ensure full participation in it at all times, the college of bishops, the supervisory response team, the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy, witnesses, advocates, and all others who participate in the complaint process regarding a bishop shall have immunity from prosecution of complaints brought against them related to their role in a particular complaint process, unless they have committed a chargeable offense in conscious and knowing bad faith. The complainant/plaintiff in any proceeding against any such person relating to their role in a particular complaint process shall have the burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence, that such person’s actions constituted a chargeable offense committed knowingly in bad faith. The immunity set forth in this provision shall extend to civil court proceedings, to the fullest extent permissible by the civil laws.

Rationale:

The paragraph does not expressly provide for immunity of those involved in the process similar to ¶¶ 362.3 and 2701.4d.

¶413.

Petition Number: 60919-MH-¶413-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Revision of the Episcopal Complaint Process

Make the following revisions to ¶ 413.

¶ 413. Complaints Against Bishops—1. Episcopal leadership . . .

2. Any complaint concerning the effectiveness, competence, or one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702 shall be submitted to the president of the College Council of Bishops ~~in that jurisdictional or central conference~~. If the complaint concerns the president, it shall be submitted to the secretary of the College Council of Bishops. A complaint is a written statement claiming misconduct, unsatisfactory performance of ministerial duties, or one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702.9

3. After receiving a complaint as provided in ¶ 413.2, the president ~~and the secretary~~ of the College Council of Bishops, or the secretary ~~and another member~~ of the college council if the complaint concerns the president ~~(or the president and another member of the college if the complaint concerns the secretary)~~, shall, within ten days, consult the chair of the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy who shall appoint from the committee one professing member and one clergy member who are not from the same episcopal area; who are not from the episcopal area that the bishop under complaint was elected from or has been assigned to; and who are not of the same gender, to carry out the supervisory process (¶ 413.3b-d).¹⁰

a) When deemed appropriate to protect the well-being of the complainant, the Church and/or bishop, the ~~College~~ executive committee of the Council of Bishops, in consultation with the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy, may suspend the bishop from all episcopal responsibilities for a period not to exceed sixty days. During the suspension, salary, housing, and benefits will continue.

b) The supervisory response is pastoral and administrative and shall be directed toward a just resolution. It is not a part of any judicial process. The supervisory response should be carried out in a confidential manner and should be completed within 120 days. There may be an extension of 120 days if ~~the supervising bishop and the two jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee members appointed to the supervisory process shall determine that an extension will be productive. There may be a second extension of 120 days by the mutual written consent of the supervisory bishop, members of the jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee appointed to the supervisory process, the complainant and the bishop under complaint.~~

The ~~supervising bishop~~ episcopacy committee members shall regularly advise all parties of the status of the process and shall notify all parties within seven days after a determination is made that the supervisory response will not lead to a resolution of the matter.

No verbatim record shall be made and legal counsel shall not be present, although the bishop against whom the complaint was made and the complainant both may choose another person to accompany him or her, with the right to voice. At the determination of the president (secretary), persons with qualifications and experience in assessment, intervention, or healing may be selected to assist in the supervisory responses. Others may be consulted as well.

c) The supervisory response may include a process seeking a just resolution in which the parties are assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s) in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. (See ¶ 363.1b, c.) The appropriate persons, including the ~~president of the College of Bishops, or the secretary if the complaint concerns the president~~ episcopacy committee members, complainant, and respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining such assisted process, including an agreement as to what aspects of the process merit confidentiality. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the parties and the parties shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. The existence and status of a complaint and the specific allegation(s) (ineffectiveness, incompetence, inability to perform the work, or a specific chargeable offense) shall not be considered confidential information. Because bishops have enhanced responsibilities and power as leaders, the general terms of the resolution shall be made public. Such written statement of resolution shall be given to the ~~person in charge of that stage of the process~~ jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee for further action consistent with the agreement.

d) If the supervisory response results in the resolution of the matter, the ~~bishop in charge of the supervisory response~~ president (secretary) of the Council of Bishops and the two episcopacy committee members appointed to the supervisory process (¶ 413.3) shall monitor the fulfillment of the terms of the resolution. If the supervisory response does not result in resolution of the matter, the president or secretary of the ~~College Council of Bishops~~ may shall refer the matter as an Administrative Complaint (¶ 413.3e) or a Judicial Complaint (¶ 2704.1).

e) Administrative Complaint—If the complaint is based on allegations of incompetence, ineffectiveness, or unwillingness or inability to perform episcopal duties, the president ~~and~~ or secretary of the ~~College Council of Bishops (or the two members of the college who are handling the complaint)~~ shall refer the complaint to the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy.¹¹ The committee may recommend involuntary retirement (¶ 408.3), disability leave (¶ 410.4), remedial measures, other appropriate action, or it may dismiss the complaint. The provisions of ¶ 362.2 for fair process in administrative hearings shall apply to this administrative process.

f) Judicial Complaint—~~When the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy deems the matter serious enough and when one or more offenses listed in ¶ 2702 are involved, the committee may refer the complaint back to the president and or secretary of the College Council of Bishops (or the two members of the college who are handling the complaint) for shall referral refer it as a judicial complaint to the jurisdictional or central conference committee on investigation according to the provisions of ¶ 2704.1. The provisions of ¶ 362.2 for fair process in administrative hearings shall apply to this administrative process.~~

4. Any actions of the jurisdictional . . .

5. Each jurisdiction shall develop . . .

Rationale:

This legislation brings harmony and clarity called for in Judicial Decision 1275. In summary, the Judicial Council notes that there are portions of ¶ 413 that lack clarity and which, in fact, give contradictory processes. . . . There would be value if a future General Conference harmonized this paragraph.

¶413.

Petition Number: 61027-MH-¶413-G; Dragonette, Karin - Reynoldsburg, OH, USA.

Revision of Episcopal Complaint Process

Make the following revisions to ¶ 413.

¶ 413. Complaints Against Bishops—1. Episcopal leadership . . .

2. Any complaint concerning the effectiveness, competence, or one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702 shall be submitted to the president of the College Council of Bishops in that jurisdictional or central conference. If the complaint concerns the president, it shall be submitted to the secretary of the College Council of Bishops. A complaint is a written statement claiming misconduct, unsatisfactory performance of ministerial duties, or one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702.⁹

3. After receiving a complaint as provided in ¶ 413.2, the president ~~and the secretary~~ of the College Council of Bishops, or the secretary ~~and another member~~ of the college council if the complaint concerns the president (~~or the president and another member of the college if the complaint concerns the secretary~~), shall, within 10 days, consult the chair of the ~~jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy~~ Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy (ICE) who shall appoint from the committee one professing member and one clergy member who are not from the same episcopal area; who are not from the episcopal area that the bishop under complaint was elected from or has been assigned to; and who are not of the same gender, who shall convene the executive committee of the ICE to carry out the supervisory process (¶ 413.3b-d).¹⁰ In addition, the council president or secretary shall notify the appropriate jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy.

a) When deemed appropriate to protect the well-being of the complainant, the Church and/or bishop, the ~~College executive committee of the Council~~ of Bishops, in consultation with the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy, may suspend the bishop from all episcopal responsibilities for a period not to exceed sixty days. During the suspension, salary, housing and benefits will continue.

b) The supervisory response is pastoral and administrative and shall be directed toward a just resolution. It is not a part of any judicial process. The supervisory response should be carried out in a confidential manner and should be completed within 120 days. There may be an extension of 120 days if ~~the supervising bishop and the two jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee members appointed to the supervisory process the~~

~~executive committee of the ICE and the respondent shall determine that an extension will be productive. There may be a second extension of 120 days by the mutual written consent of the supervisory bishop, members of the jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee appointed to the supervisory process, the complainant and the bishop under complaint.~~

The ~~supervising bishop~~ ICE executive committee chair shall regularly advise all parties of the status of the process and shall notify all parties within 7 days after a determination is made that the supervisory response will not lead to a resolution of the matter.

No verbatim record shall be made and legal counsel shall not be present, although the bishop against whom the complaint was made and the complainant both may choose another person to accompany him or her, with the right to voice. At the determination of the ~~president (secretary)~~ ICE chair, persons with qualifications and experience in assessment, intervention, or healing may be selected to assist in the supervisory responses. Others may be consulted as well.

c) The supervisory response may include a process seeking a just resolution in which the parties are assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s) in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. (See ¶ 363.1b, c.) The appropriate persons, including the president of the College of Bishops, or the secretary if the complaint concerns the president ICE executive committee members, complainant, and respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining such assisted process, including an agreement as to what aspects of the process merit confidentiality. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the parties and the parties shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. Such written statement of resolution shall be given to the ~~person in charge of that stage of the process~~ Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy and the appropriate jurisdictional or central conference episcopacy committee for further action consistent with the agreement.

d) If the supervisory response results in the resolution of the matter, the ~~bishop in charge of the supervisory response~~ president (secretary) of the Council of Bishops and the two episcopacy committee members appointed to the supervisory process (¶ 413.3) ICE executive committee and the appropriate jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy shall monitor the fulfillment of the terms of the resolution. If the supervisory response does not result in resolution of the matter, the president or secretary of the College Council of Bishops ~~may~~ shall refer the matter as an Administrative Complaint (¶ 413.3e) or a Judicial Complaint (¶ 2704.1).

e) Administrative Complaint—If the complaint is based on allegations of incompetence, ineffectiveness, or unwillingness or inability to perform episcopal duties, the president ~~and or~~ secretary of the ~~College Council of Bishops (or the two members of the college who are handling the complaint)~~ shall refer the complaint to the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy.¹¹ The committee may recommend involuntary retirement (§ 408.3), disability leave (§ 410.4), remedial measures, other appropriate action, or it may dismiss the complaint. The provisions of § 362.2 for fair process in administrative hearings shall apply to this administrative process.

f) Judicial Complaint—~~When the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy deems the matter serious enough and when one or more offenses listed in § 2702 are involved, the committee may refer the complaint back to the president and or secretary of the College Council of Bishops (or the two members of the college who are handling the complaint) for shall referral refer it as a judicial complaint to the jurisdictional or central conference committee on investigation according to the provisions of § 2704.1. The provisions of § 362.2 for fair process in administrative hearings shall apply to this administrative process.~~

4. Any actions of the Interjurisdictional Committee or jurisdictional or central conference committee taken on a complaint shall be reported to the next session of the jurisdictional or central conference.

5. Each jurisdiction or central conference shall develop a protocol for the caring of lay, clergy and staff determined to be affected by the processing of the complaint.

Rationale:

These changes enhance the accountability of bishops and increase consistency by lodging the accountability function in the global Church. They lodge all responsibility for handling complaints to clergy and laity who are not bishops, removing any conflicts of interest involved. The changes also add clarity and definition to the process.

¶413.3.

Petition Number: 60130-MH-¶413.3-$-G; Kumar, A. Moses Rathan - Nashville, TN, USA for General Council on Finance and Administration.

Complaints Against Bishops

Amend § 413.3d as follows:

(i) If the supervisory response results in the resolution of the matter, the bishop in charge of the supervisory response and the two episcopacy committee members appointed to the supervisory process (§ 413.3) shall monitor the fulfillment of the terms of the resolution. If the supervisory response does not result in resolution of the matter, the president or secretary of the College of Bishops may either dismiss the complaint with the consent of the College of Bishops and the committee on episcopacy, giving the reasons therefore in writing, a copy of which shall be placed in the bishop's file, refer the matter to the committee on episcopacy as an administrative complaint pursuant to § 413.3e, or refer the matter to counsel for the Church pursuant to § 2704.1 to prepare a complaint to forward to the committee on investigation refer the matter as an Administrative Complaint (§ 413.3e) or a Judicial Complaint (§ 2704.1).

(ii) If within 180 days of the receipt of the complaint by the president or secretary of the College of Bishops (as specified in § 413.2), the supervisory response does not result in the resolution of the matter, and the president or secretary of the College of Bishops has not referred the matter as either an administrative or judicial complaint, then the matter will move to:

(1) In the case of a bishop from one of the central conferences, a panel of three bishops, one from each continent, as selected by the Council of Bishops, or

(2) In the case of a bishop from one of the jurisdictional conferences, a panel of five bishops, one from each jurisdictional conference, as selected by the Council of Bishops, who shall then continue the supervisory response process and, within 180 days, either dismiss or refer the complaint, as required above.

(iii) All costs associated with actions taken pursuant to paragraph (ii), above, will be paid by the Episcopal Fund.

Rationale:

This change ensures timely processing of complaints against bishops, in a manner that is consistent with established review processes and that minimizes extra costs.

¶413.3c. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60805-MH-¶413.3c-G; Dietz, Peter - Thornton, PA, USA for Bethlehem UMC Social Action Committee. 3 Similar Petitions

Complaints Against Bishops

Amend Book of Discipline § 413.3c) as follows:

¶ 413. Complaints Against Bishops

...

3. The supervisory response may include a process seeking a just resolution in which the parties are assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s) in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. (See ¶ 363.1*b, c.*) The appropriate persons, including the president of the College of Bishops, or the secretary if the complaint concerns the president, should enter into a written agreement outlining such process, including an agreement as to confidentiality. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the parties and the parties shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. Such written statement of resolution shall be given to the person in charge of that stage of the process for further action consistent with the agreement. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a bishop having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the bishop against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the supervising bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any final just resolution of the complaint must include this bishop being suspended without salary, for no less than one full year, from all episcopal and ministerial duties and functions, including membership or formal leadership role in any general church board, agency, committee, or commission, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

¶413.3d.

Petition Number: 60520-MH-¶413.3d-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

COB to Process Complaints

Amend ¶ 413.3.d) as indicated.

¶ 413.3.d) If the supervisory response results in the resolution of the matter, the bishop in charge of the supervisory response and the two episcopacy committee members appointed to the supervisory process (¶ 413.3) shall monitor the fulfillment of the terms of the resolution. If the supervisory response does not result in resolution of the matter, the president or secretary of the College of Bishops may refer the matter as an Administrative Complaint (¶ 413.3[e]) or a Judicial Complaint (¶ 2704.1). If within 180 days of the receipt of the complaint by the president of the College of Bishops, or the secretary and one other bishop as provided in ¶ 413.2, the supervisory response does not result in resolution of the matter, and the president or secretary of the College of Bishops has not referred the matter as either an Administrative Complaint or a Judicial Complaint, then the matter will move to the Council of Bishops where the president of the Council of Bishops, or the secretary of the Council of Bishops if the president is the respondent, will pursue the matter following the process herein provided for jurisdictional and central conference Colleges of Bishops.

Rationale:

If a jurisdictional or central conference College of Bishops is unable to process to completion a complaint against one of its bishops, then the matter ought to move to the Council of Bishops for processing.

¶414.2.

Petition Number: 60621-MH-¶414.2-G; Curtis, J. Torrey - Weatherford, OK, USA for First UMC Council - Weatherford, OK.

Spiritual Directors for Bishops

Amend ¶ 414.2 Leadership —Spiritual and Temporal as follows:

2. To strengthen the local church, giving spiritual leadership to both laity and clergy; and to build relationships with people of local congregations of the area. As witness to his or her own need for continuing growth and guidance in the life of the Spirit, each effective bishop shall have a spiritual director of his or her own choosing with the cost for this director borne by the bishop’s annual conference(s). Every active bishop is expected to meet with his or her spiritual director at least four times a year and is strongly encouraged to meet monthly. The bishop shall report annually to the episcopacy committee of the annual conference(s) the number of meetings held with his or her spiritual director, but the content of the meetings is to be held confidential and inviolable.

Add a new subparagraph (h) to ¶ 637.3 as follows:

3. The functions of the conference committee on episcopacy shall be . . .

h) To receive the bishop's annual report of the number of meetings with the bishop's spiritual director.

Rationale:

Since the Day of Pentecost the Church has been formed and informed by the Spirit. From very early times followers of Jesus have sought support and guidance from recognized spiritually perceptive persons. Spiritual direction is a continuous tradition in the Anglican communion from which Methodism sprang. The leader of the . . .

¶415.4.

Petition Number: 60529-MH-¶415.4-G; Erbele, W. Terence - Ketchikan, AK, USA for Alaska UM Conference.

Mission District

Amend paragraph ¶ 415.4 as indicated following:

¶ 415.4. To form the districts after consultation with the district superintendents and after the number of the same has been determined by vote of the annual conference. Any district may be designated to be a mission district, and the district superintendent of that district, or his or her designee, shall be the agent in charge of the mission status, nature, and goals of the district. If there is a district missionary organization, or if funds for the district are anticipated from a conference organization, those bodies shall also be asked to approve the method of organization for a mission district. A mission district may be designated when any of the following conditions exist: 1) Membership opportunities and resources are limited and not likely to result in regular status for an extended period of time. 2) A strategic demographic, cultural, or language opportunity for serving a limited population is present. 3) It is expected that long-term sustaining funding from sources outside the district will be necessary to enable the district to exist. 4) The district is geographically located in a remote location from other districts of the annual conference. When any of these conditions exist, the bishop, in consultation with the congregational development area of the annual conference, may designate any district a mission district. The mission district may be organized in the same manner and have the same rights and powers as any district.

Rationale:

In some jurisdictions—Southeastern and Western—there are missionary conferences that might better be organized as districts; this change will make that possible without removing the mission status of such entities. What the full implication is of being a mission district would be left to the annual conferences to determine.

¶415.6.

Petition Number: 60386-MH-¶415.6-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Remove Consecration of Diaconal Ministers

Amend ¶ 415.6 by deletion

¶ 415. Presidential Duties—6. To consecrate bishops; to ordain elders and deacons; ~~to consecrate diaconal ministers~~, to commission deaconesses, home missionaries and missionaries; . . .

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church no longer consecrates diaconal ministers.

¶416.5.

Petition Number: 60194-MH-¶416.5-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

Transfers

Add the following to ¶ 416.5

5. To transfer, upon the request of the receiving bishop, with the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the Conference Board of Ministry and an affirmative vote of the clergy session, clergy member(s) of one annual conference to another, provided said member(s) agree to said transfer . . .

Rationale:

The petition requires approval of the request to transfer a clergyperson from another annual conference into provisional or full membership by the Executive Committee of the Conference Board of Ministry and the clergy session of the annual conference, keeping in line with ¶ 33 Article II of the 2012 Book . . .

¶416.6.

Petition Number: 60197-MH-¶416.6-G; Epler, Neil C. - Montgomery, AL, USA for Alabama - West Florida Annual Conference.

AC BOM Approves Education

Amend ¶ 416.6

6. To appoint associate members, provisional members, or full members to attend any school, college, or theological seminary ~~listed by the University Senate approved by the Conference Board of Ministry~~, or to participate in a program of clinical pastoral education in a setting accredited by the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education or another accrediting agency ~~approved by GBHEM~~. Such appointments are not to be considered as extension ministry appointments.

Rationale:

The petition would allow for the Conference Board of Ministry to approve appointments to attend any school, college, or theological seminary or any program of clinical pastoral education. The change would allow for a contextual approach to ministry, providing each annual conference with flexibility as it relates to the training . . .

¶416.7.

Petition Number: 60060-MH-¶416.7-G; Patterson, Cynthia - Cuyahoga Falls, OH, USA for East Ohio Annual Conference.

Supervisory Files

ADD the following sentence to ¶ 416.7:

¶ 416. Working with Ordained, Licensed, Consecrated, and Commissioned Personnel

7. To keep and maintain appropriate supervisory records on all district superintendents and other records on ministerial personnel as determined by the bishop or required by the Discipline or action of the annual conference. When a district superintendent is no longer appointed to the cabinet, the bishop shall give that person’s supervisory file to the superintendent of record. Supervisory records shall be kept under guidelines approved by the General Council on Finance and Administration. The supervisory records maintained by the bishop are not the personnel records of the annual conference. Clergy shall have the right to review their Supervisory File annually, so that clergy will have total knowledge of its contents. Clergy shall have the right to include written challenges to the file’s contents and address issues requiring professional growth.

Rationale:

Currently files are maintained without the contents being revealed to the clergy until an issue of supervision requires the intervention of the Bishop, District Superintendent, or Board of Ordained Ministry. An annual review of the clergy person’s Supervisory File will assist in identifying issues requiring attention prior to the need . . .

¶418.

Petition Number: 60622-MH-¶418-G; Pridgeon, Jeremy - Wetumpka, AL, USA.

Deletion

Delete ¶ 418.

Rationale:

Artificial and arbitrary time limits imposed by the Discipline impede superintendents developing the relationships necessary to affect systemic change in a large organization or area, such as a district. Eliminating the term limit ensures effective superintendents continue to serve an area to help fulfill the mission of the church.

¶422.

Petition Number: 60914-MH-¶422-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Jurisdictional Administrative Process

Upon adoption of changes to ¶ 50 (Petition 60912) apply the following implementing disciplinary changes:

¶ 422.2. The Council of Bishops is thus the collegial and corporate expression of episcopal leadership in the Church and through the Church into the world. The Church expects the Council of Bishops to speak to the Church and from the Church to the world and to give leadership in the quest for Christian unity and interreligious relationships. The Council of Bishops is also a body in which its individual members are held accountable for their work, both as general superintendents and as presidents and residents in episcopal areas.

¶ 422.5. The Council of Bishops shall establish from its membership a Council Relations Committee of at least three persons to hear requests for involuntary leave of absence, involuntary retirement, or other such matters as may be referred to it by the Council of Bishops.

a) When there is a recommendation for an involuntary status change or other matter to be referred to the Council Relations Committee, the Council Relations Committee shall conduct an administrative hearing following the provisions of fair process. The Council of Bishops shall designate the person to present the recommendation to the committee. The respondent shall be given an opportunity to address the recommendation in person, in writing, and with the assistance of a clergyperson in full connection, and who shall have voice. Once the committee has heard the person designated to represent the recommendation, the respondent, and others as determined by the chairperson of the committee, it shall report its decision to the Council of Bishops. The Council of Bishops may affirm or reverse the decision of the committee.

b) Fair Process Hearings--As a part of the holy covenant that exists within the membership and organization of The United Methodist Church, the following procedures are presented for the protection of the rights of individuals and for the protection of the Church in administrative hearings. The process set forth in this paragraph shall be followed whenever the Council Relations Committee meets to process an administrative request by the Council of Bishops.

1) In any administrative proceeding the representative of the Council of Bishops and the respondent (the person against whom involuntary action is directed) shall have a right to be heard before any final action is taken.

2) Notice of any hearing shall advise the respondent of the reason for the proposed procedures with sufficient detail to allow the respondent to prepare a response. Notice shall be given not less than twenty days prior to the hearing.

3) The respondent shall have a right to be accompanied to any hearing by a clergyperson in full connections, in accordance with the appropriate disciplinary provisions. The clergyperson accompanying the respondent shall have the right to voice.

4) In any administrative hearing, under no circumstances shall one party, in the absence of the other party, discuss substantive issues with members of the pending hearing body. Questions of procedure may be raised with the presiding officer of the hearing body.

5) The respondent shall have access, at least seven days prior to the hearing, all records relied upon in the determination of the outcome of the administrative process.

6) In the event that a respondent fails to appear for supervisory interviews, refuses mail, refuses to communicate personally with the bishop, or otherwise fails to respond to supervisory requests or requests from official administrative committees, such actions or inactions shall not be used as an excuse to avoid or delay any Church processes, and such processes may continue without the participation of such individual.

¶ 422.6 The Council of Bishops shall establish from its membership an Administrative Review Committee of at least three persons who are not members of the executive committee or the council relations committee. Its only purpose shall be to ensure that the disciplinary procedures for any involuntary action recommended by the council relations committee are properly followed. The entire administrative process leading to the action for change of status of the bishop shall be reviewed by the administrative review committee, and it shall report its findings to the Council of Bishops prior to any action by the Council of Bishops. The administrative review committee shall notify the parties of the review process. The administrative fair process hearing procedures (¶ 422.5) should be followed by the administrative review committee. Prior to its report, if the committee determines that any error has occurred, it may recommend to the appropriate person or body that action be taken promptly to remedy the error, decide the error is harmless, or take other action.

¶431.1.

Petition Number: 60234-MH-¶431.1-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Full Communion Relationships

Delete current ¶ 431.1 and replace with the following:
¶ 431.1. Full Communion Relationships

a) The Council of Bishops shall have the authority to enter into ecumenical agreements with other Christian bodies. However, all proposed denominational level agreements of formal “full communion” relationships and permanent membership in ecumenical organizations must be approved and ratified by General Conference, before coming into effect.

b) A formal “full communion” relationship is one that exists between two or more Christian churches that: (1) recognize each other as constituent members of the one, holy, catholic and apostolic church, the body of Christ, as described in the Holy Scriptures and confessed in the church’s historic creeds; (2) recognize the authenticity of each other’s sacraments and welcome one another to partake in the Eucharist, (3) affirm the authenticity of each church’s Christian ministry, and (4) recognize the validity of each other’s offices of ministry.

c) A formal “full communion” relationship commits the churches to working together as partners in mission toward fuller visible unity.

d) A formal “full communion” relationship is entered into in order to: (1) actively commit the participants to working together as partners in mission and co-laborers in the ministry of Christ Jesus, and (2) as a visible witness to the unity of Christians in sharing the love of God among all peoples and throughout Creation.

e) A formal “full communion” relationship does not mean there are no differences or distinctions between churches; but does mean that these differences are not church dividing.

f) It is understood and affirmed that informal relationships exist with other Christians at all levels throughout the church; these relationships are manifested in creative and dynamic ways and the Body of Christ is enriched by the initiative and leadership that takes place at many levels. Formal “full communion” relationships entered into by General Conference build upon the faithful unity of Christians in local communities and throughout God’s Creation that bring the compassion, love, and witness into the lives of a multitude of persons. Formal and informal relationships among Christians are integral to authentic Christian ministry.

g) No membership in an ecumenical organization, statement or policy of an ecumenical organization of which The United Methodist Church is a part, or formal “full communion” agreement shall be construed as modifying, interpreting, or changing the doctrinal and disciplinary standards of The United Methodist Church.

h) When a “full communion” relationship has been approved by General Conference, it will remain in effect until an action by the General Conference is taken to change it.

Rationale:

Discussions with full communion partners makes clear the desire to affirm both formal relationships and the validity of informal relationships that broaden and deepen United Methodist ecumenical relations.

¶433.2.

Petition Number: 60235-MH-¶433.2-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Joint Committee on Pan Methodist Commission - Full Communion

Amend ¶ 433.2 as follows:

2. Pan-Methodist Commission—Given the relationship...

~~a) To fulfill the vision of full communion among its member churches, there shall be a Joint Committee on Pan-Methodist Commission Full Communion. The committee shall serve the following functions:~~

- ~~(1) Coordinate the implementation of action taken by the six churches to achieve full communion;~~
- ~~(2) Assist joint planning for mission;~~
- ~~(3) Facilitate consultation and common decision making through appropriate channels in fundamental matters that the churches may face together in the future;~~

- ~~(4) Report regularly and appropriately to each church~~
- ~~b) The United Methodist membership of this committee shall be the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops, the president of OCUIR, if the president is not also the ecumenical officer, and one lay and one clergy member of OCUIR elected by OCUIR. If the president of OCUIR is also the ecumenical officer, then the vice president of OCUIR shall be a member of the committee.~~

The commission may develop . . .

Rationale:

Since the Pan Methodist Commission (¶ 433.2) is coordinating the implementation of the provisions of the full communion agreement, there is no need for the Joint Committee described in ¶ 433.2a and ¶ 433.2b.

¶437.

Petition Number: 60236-MH-¶437-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

OCUIR Purpose

Delete current ¶ 437 and replace with the following:

¶ 437 In pursuit of its responsibilities and in order to deepen and expand the ecumenical and interreligious ministries of The United Methodist Church, the Council of Bishops shall receive the input and support of the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships.

Rationale:

Since the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relations has been established, the original language calling for its creation is not needed.

¶437.

Petition Number: 60951-MH-¶437-G; Oliphint, Clayton - Richardson, TX, USA.

Plan UMC Revised - OCUIR

To adjust the format of OCUIR Amend ¶¶ 437 and 438 as follows:

¶ 437. In pursuit of its ecumenical and interreligious responsibilities the Council of Bishops shall create an Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (OCUIR) effective upon adjournment of General Conference 20126. The purpose of the OCUIR will be to deepen and expand the ecumenical and interreligious ministries of The United Methodist Church.

¶ 438. Membership—Members of the OCUIR shall be elected by the Council of Bishops as follows:

1. The OCUIR shall be composed of ~~two~~ episcopal members as determined by the Council of Bishops, ~~including and it shall be chaired by the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops. One of the episcopal members shall be from a central conference~~

2. ~~One person from each jurisdiction, one person from the central conferences in Africa, one person from the central conferences in Europe, and one person from the central conference in The Philippines. The bishop who is not the ecumenical officer shall be counted as one of these eight persons. Each jurisdictional or central conference will nominate two candidates and the Council of Bishops will elect seven members from this pool of nominees.~~

3. It is recommended that the Council of Bishops ensure that the United Methodist membership persons be inclusive of ethnic representation, youth, young adults, and women, with a goal of 50 percent ~~laity~~.

4. ~~Two members with voice and vote from our Full Communion Ecumenical Partners~~ In addition the following twenty-one (21) persons shall be members of the OCUIR: a) Members from each jurisdiction, based on the following formula: North Central—2, Northeastern—2, South Central—3, Southeastern—5, and Western—1. Each jurisdictional conference will nominate three times the number candidates as it has members allocated, and the Council of Bishops will elect these members from this pool of candidates.

b) Seven (7) members who are not bishops from the central conferences. Europe and the Philippines shall together be allocated one (1) member that shall alternate between the two areas from quadrennium to quadrennium with the remainder of six (6) members to be allocated among the three (3) African central conferences on a rotating basis as determined by the Council of Bishops.

c) One (1) member from one of the other churches in Churches Uniting in Christ.

d) At least 50 percent of the members of OCUIR who are not bishops shall be lay, and other recommendations for inclusivity as provided in ¶ 705.3.d) shall apply to the selection of members.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

¶438.

Petition Number: 60237-MH-¶438-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

OCUIR Membership

Amend ¶ 438 as follows:

¶ 438. Membership—Members of the OCUIR Steering Committee shall be elected by the Council of Bishops as follows:

1. The OCUIR . . .

2. One person . . . Each jurisdictional or central conference will nominate two candidates and the Council of Bishops will elect ~~seven~~ members from this pool of nominees.

3. It is recommended that the Council of Bishops ensure that the United Methodist membership persons be inclusive of ethnic representation, youth, young adults, and women, with a ~~goal of 50 percent~~ minimum of five laity.

4. Two members . . .

5. The chairperson and secretary of the Council of Bishops Leadership Team on Ecumenical and Interreligious Relations, or its successor group, shall be non-voting members of the OCUIR Steering Committee.

Rationale:

These changes will provide greater flexibility to the COB in selecting members of the Steering Committee and will strengthen the relationship between the COB and the Steering Committee.

¶440.

Petition Number: 60238-MH-¶440-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

OCUIR Funding

Amend ¶ 440 as follows:

~~Beginning no later than January 1, 2017, f~~ Funding for the ecumenical and interreligious ministries of the Church shall be provided by the Council of Bishops in one or more clearly identified line items ~~of in~~ the Episcopal Fund ~~to be clearly identified in its~~ budget request to General Conference.

Rationale:

Since funding for the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relations has already been provided by the Episcopal Fund this quadrennium, the provision stating an effective date is not needed.

¶442.

Petition Number: 60239-MH-¶442-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Deletion

Delete ¶ 442.

Rationale:

Instead of adding paragraphs to form implementation committees in the Book of Discipline each time a full communion relationship has been approved, future full communion resolutions will authorize the Council of Bishops to name an implementation committee in consultation with the leadership of the other full communion church(es).

¶500.

Petition Number: 60917-MH-¶500-G; Wilson, John R. - PA, USA for Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference.

Jurisdictional Administrative Process

Add a new paragraph following the existing ¶ 537:

¶ 538 Administrative Review Committee—The Jurisdictional Conference shall establish from its membership an Administrative Review Committee of at least three persons who are not members of the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy. Its only purpose shall be to ensure that the disciplinary procedures for any involuntary action recommended by the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy are properly followed. The entire administrative process leading to the action for change of status of the bishop shall be reviewed by the administrative review committee, and it shall report its findings to the jurisdictional committee on episcopacy and the jurisdictional conference prior to any action by those bodies. The administrative review committee shall notify the parties of the review process. The administrative fair process hearing procedures (¶ 362.2) should be followed by the administrative review committee. Prior to its report, if the committee determines that any error has occurred, it may recommend to the appropriate person or body that action be taken promptly to remedy the error, decide the error is harmless, or take other action.

¶535.

Petition Number: 61012-MH-¶535; Ritter, Chris - Geneseo, IL, USA.

Organic Jurisdictional Solution – Committee or Ordained Ministry

Amend: ¶ 535: Committee on Ordained Ministry—The duties of this committee may include: providing information on supply and demand and encouraging mobility across conference lines; to create a forum to deal with matters of enlistment and recruitment; to create dialogue with seminaries serving the jurisdiction; to enable ethnic ministries in the jurisdictions; to recommend to the jurisdictional conference any changes and adaptations to ¶ 304.3, ¶ 341.6, ¶ 2702.(a-b) of the Book of Discipline in keeping with the special conditions and the mission of the church of that jurisdiction. Pursuant to ¶ 525, these recommendations must be adopted by a two-thirds majority of the jurisdictional conference and become effective January 1 following the session of jurisdictional conference unless otherwise specified.

Rationale:

This is one piece of a larger legislative agenda to achieve amicable unity in The UMC through the “Organic Jurisdictional Solution.” This item charges the jurisdictional committee on ordained ministry with recommending adaptations of the clergy standards to the jurisdictional conference. See jurisdictionalsolution.org.

¶600.

Petition Number: 60582-MH-¶600-G; Wofford, James C. - Henderson, KY, USA. 2 Similar Petitions

District Committee on Marital Covenants

Add a new paragraph after ¶ 672 as follows:

District Committee on Marital Covenants—There shall be a District Committee on Marital Covenants.

1. Membership—The committee shall be composed of no less than eight members, composed of no less than four laypersons and four clergy, including the district superintendent. There shall be at least two laywomen and two laymen. Attention needs to be given to including racial and ethnic diversity.

2. Selection—The members shall be selected in such a manner as may be determined by the district conference or, where there is no district conference, by the district superintendent and district lay leader. The district committee shall be authorized to co-opt persons as advisory members who have expertise in areas of special need.

3. Purpose—The purpose of the district committee on marital covenants is to provide resources for pastors and churches regarding marriage covenant wellness.

a) The committee may provide resources for premarital preparation aimed at training persons on both the relational dynamics and covenant responsibilities of Christian marriage.

b) The committee may provide resources that seek to strengthen existing marriages.

c) The committee shall provide a process for those whose marriages have been blessed and recognized by The United Methodist Church but are seeking to dissolve the marital covenant.

(1) The primary goal of the process will be to encourage reconciliation in order to honor the covenant vows and provide healing for the relationship.

(2) In the regrettable circumstance where reconciliation is not deemed possible, the committee or its duly appointed representatives may examine the circumstances and grant a certificate of divorce that dissolves the recognized union by The United Methodist Church. The divorce will be recorded in the local church where the marriage was officially recognized. The committee will bear no responsibility in determining the legal division of property or parental rights. Persons who have received a certificate of divorce and no longer hold a legal status of marriage by the state or any other religious body may be remarried within The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

This petition is contingent upon passage of the petition: Covenant of Marriage within The United Methodist Church (amending ¶340.2.a.3.a). Offering an official Church Covenant of Marriage Certificate would necessitate an official means, when necessary, to dissolve such covenants. The committee's primary goal, however, would be to reconcile and strengthen marriages.

¶634.

Petition Number: 60965-MH-¶634-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

Permissiveness in AC Structure - CBHECM

For the purpose of empowering the annual conferences to determine their own agenda and structure amend ¶ 634 as follows:

¶ 634. Conference Board of Higher Education and Campus Ministry—1. There ~~shall~~ may be in each annual conference a board of higher education and campus ministry or other structure to provide for these functions and maintain the connectional relationships. The number of members shall be determined by the annual conference, including representation from appropriate constituencies.

¶635.2.

Petition Number: 60183-MH-¶635.2-G; Bartlett, Laura Jaquith - Eagle Creek, OR, USA for Oregon-Idaho Annual Conference.

Changes to Board of Ordained Ministry

Throughout the text of the entire 2012 Book of Discipline, replace the title “Board of Ordained Ministry” with “Board of Ministerial Leadership.”

Throughout the text of the entire 2012 Book of Discipline, replace the title “District Committee on Ordained Ministry” with “District Committee on Ministerial Leadership.”

Amend Paragraph 635 as follows:

¶ 635.2 (a) To assume the primary responsibility for the enlistment and recruitment of ~~ordained-ecery~~ ministerial leadership for our churches and other ministry settings by working in consultation with the cabinet and the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry to study and interpret the ~~ecery~~ ordained, licensed, certified, and assigned ministerial leadership needs and resources of the annual conference, with due regard to the inclusive nature of the Church. It shall, with the assistance of the local church committee on pastor-parish relations, conference agencies, and every ordained, ~~minister~~ licensed, certified, and assigned leader of the conference, enlist women and men of all races and ethnic origins for ~~the ordained ministry~~ as a vocation and guide those persons in the process of education, training, ~~and ordination~~ and discernment of the most appropriate path for their ministry, recommending colleges and schools of theology listed by the University Senate, licensing school, and other approved educational opportunities. Persons recruited should have an understanding of and appreciation for persons of different racial and ethnic heritages.

¶ 635.2 (o) To provide support services for all those in ministerial leadership, including ordained, licensed, certified, and assigned, to provide ~~the ordained minister's~~ career development, including personal and career counseling, continuing education, formation in servant leadership and continuing spiritual growth in Christ, assistance in preparation for retirement, and all matters pertaining to clergy morale. In providing such support, the board in cooperation with the cabinet, shall give training and guidance to each local committee on pastor-parish relations regarding its work and role.

¶ 635.2 (p) To work with and support the Order of Deacon, ~~and the Order of Elder, and the Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members~~ (see ¶ 323), including receiving reports, offering financial support, and coordinating ~~the Orders' these groups' activities~~ activity with the continuing formation offerings of the board. The board may delegate continuing formation responsibility of the ~~Orders groups~~ by mutual agreement, with final approval, evaluation, and budgeting remaining with the board.

~~635.2 (q) (p. 462) To work with and Support the Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members (see ¶ 323), including receiving reports, offering financial support, and coordinating their continuing formation.~~

635.2 (r) To provide a means of evaluating the effectiveness of ~~ordained ministers~~ ministerial leaders in the annual conference (¶¶ 604.4,350). Suggested guidelines will be provided by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, Division of Ordained Ministry. In cooperation with the cabinet, the board shall develop standards of effectiveness for ~~clergy~~ ministerial leaders, whether ordained, licensed, certified, or assigned, serving as pastors of congregations in that annual conference.

Rationale:

The Board of Ordained Ministry bears responsibility for ordained, licensed, and certified church leaders. As the nature of “church” changes and we seek new models for ministry in our communities, we need to be holistic in developing and deploying integrated and diverse “ministerial leadership” into our communities.

¶642.1.

Petition Number: 60967-MH-¶642.1-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

Permissiveness in AC Structure - CCUIC

For the purpose of empowering the annual conferences to determine their own agenda and structure amend ¶ 642 as follows:

¶ 642. 1. Each annual conference ~~shall~~ may create appropriate structures related to Christian unity and inter-religious relationships to provide for these functions and maintain the connectional relationships with the Council of Bishops The annual conference structure will report each year to the conference in such manner as the conference may direct. The responsibilities of this annual conference structure may be assigned to an existing or newly created multifunctional agency.

¶666.1.

Petition Number: 60390-MH-¶666.1-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

DS Role on DCOM

Amend ¶ 666.1

¶ 666—There shall be a district committee on ordained ministry . . .

1. . . .The committee shall be ~~comprised~~ composed of . . . ; the district superintendent, ~~who may serve as the executive secretary~~ who shall not be the chairperson and . . .

Rationale:

Makes clear that the district superintendent shall not serve as the chair of the district committee on ordained ministry.

¶666.10.

Petition Number: 60495-MH-¶666.10-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Study of Ministry – District Committee on Lay Servant Ministries to Review Certified Lay Ministry Candidates

Amend ¶ 666.10

10. The committee or the district committee on lay servant ministries (¶ 668.4) shall examine all persons who apply in writing to be certified as lay ministers. When there is evidence that their gifts, evidence of God’s grace and usefulness, warrant and that they are qualified under ¶ 271, and on recommendation of their charge conference, the committee shall recommend their certification or recertification. The district committee or the district committee on lay servant ministries shall report annually to the annual conference through the annual conference Board of Ordained Ministry a roster of all persons certified as lay ministers.

Rationale:

See Study of Ministry Report, Section X – Clarifying the Status of the Certified Lay Minister, Number 1 – The district Committee on Lay Servant Ministries (¶ 668) should be charged to review certified lay ministry candidates.

¶1408.2.

Petition Number: 60955-MH-¶1408.2-G; Oliphint, Clayton - Richardson, TX, USA.

Plan UMC Revised - Scholarships

For purposes of promoting cooperation in the promotion and awarding of higher education scholarship programs among the agencies of the Church, the following action is taken:

Modify existing ¶¶ 1110.3, 1313.1.d), 1408.2, and 1419 as follows:

¶ 1110.3. The board shall have authority to cooperate with other agencies of the Church, with defined organizations, and with ecumenical agencies to promote the ministry of Christian education. The agency shall collaborate with other United Methodist scholarship giving agencies and foundations to develop and maintain a common web portal that will include links to each agency and foundation scholarship program, with information about general criteria and guidelines for applications.

¶ 1313.1.d) Resourcing leadership training programs and administering scholarships, including the World Communion Scholarship Program. The agency shall collaborate with other United Methodist scholarship giving agencies and foundations to develop and maintain a common web portal that will include links to each agency and foundation scholarship program, with information about general criteria and guidelines for applications.

¶ 1408.2. Offices—The board, in implementing the objectives (¶¶ 1403, 1405), shall have authority to establish and maintain the following offices: (a) Interpretation; and (b) Loans and Scholarships. The agency shall collaborate with other United Methodist scholarship giving agencies and foundations to develop and maintain a common web portal that will include links to each agency and foundation scholarship program, with information about general criteria and guidelines for applications.

¶ 1419. The United Methodist Higher Education Foundation is incorporated in the State of Tennessee as a nonprofit, charitable organization with permanent ties to the Division of Higher Education, which elects its board of trustees. The general purpose of the foundation is to foster the growth and development of institutions of higher education by encouraging persons and corporations to provide financial support and by acting as a foundation for such support. The foundation is also authorized to serve as a trustee and administrator of gifts and bequests designated by donors to specific institutions. The foundation shall collaborate with other United Methodist scholarship giving agencies and foundations to develop and maintain a common web portal that will include links to each agency and foundation scholarship program, with information about general criteria and guidelines for applications.

This legislation, or any portion of it approved by General Conference, shall take effect at the close of General Conference 2016.

Rationale:

Plan UMC, adopted by GC12 with a favorable margin of 59.6%, received overwhelming approval of its concepts. The Judicial Council ruled it to be unconstitutional, and despite the Council's statement that it was unsalvageable, its ruling was narrowly based on two points. Both have been corrected in this revision.

¶1414.2.

Petition Number: 60228-MH-¶1414.2-G; Cook, Beth Ann - Columbus, IN, USA.

Membership of University Senate

AMEND ¶ 1414.2 by DELETING the entire section and ADDING the following in its place:

1414.2 The senate shall be composed of twenty-five voting members who, at the time of their election, shall be members of The United Methodist Church and who, by reason of professional background or education, are qualified for the work of evaluating educational institutions. Election is for the quadrennium, except in cases where conflict of interest arises as a result of change in employment. Of the twenty-five members, nine shall be nominated by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, eight shall be nominated by the Council of Bishops, and eight shall be nominated by the National Association of Schools and Colleges of The United Methodist Church. At the same daily session at which the above nominations are announced, additional nominations may be made from the floor but at no other time. The members shall be elected by the General Conference and by majority vote, with any replacement members made necessary by death or resignation being elected by the Council of Bishops from the remaining nominees. Of the members nominated by each group, and of the total elected by the General Conference, no more than one-third shall be professionally affiliated with a United Methodist-related educational institution. Care should be taken that women, racial and ethnic persons, and representatives from the United Methodist-related Black colleges and graduate theological seminaries are members of the Senate. The general secretary of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the associate general secretaries of the Divisions of Higher Education and Ordained Ministry of that board shall serve as ex officio members of the senate, with voice but without vote. There shall be one staff representative on the senate from the General Board of Global Ministries, with voice but without vote, named by the general secretary of the General Board of Global Ministries. The senate, at its originating meeting each quadrennium, shall elect as its president a member not professionally affiliated with a United Methodist-related educational institution

Rationale:

A current majority of the University Senate voting members are chief executives of United Methodist-related educational institutions. This gives at least the appearance of conflict of interest. It also benefits our Annual Conference to have as many approved quality, diverse theological schools as possible in our area.

¶1414.2.

Petition Number: 60669-MH-¶1414.2-G; Hardt, Philip F. - Glendale, NY, USA.

University Senate Support for Doctrinal Standards

Amend ¶ 1414.2 as follows:

UNIVERSITY SENATE

¶ 1414. Organization and Membership—1. The University Senate . . .

2. The senate shall be composed . . .

Members elected by the General Conference . . . named by the general secretary of the General Board of Global Ministries.

Before officially becoming a member of the University Senate, each individual elected or appointed to the University Senate must send a written statement to the general secretary of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry affirming that they are in personal agreement with the Methodist Articles of Religion and the Confession of Faith of the Evangelical United Brethren Church (¶ 104). Those nominating persons for potential membership in the University Senate have a responsibility to make this requirement known to nominees. Any vacancy occurring as a result of this requirement shall be replaced for the interim period prior to the next General Conference by the Council of Bishops appointing an individual in the appropriate category, in compliance with other relevant disciplinary provisions.

3. The associate general secretary . . .

4. After consultation . . .

Rationale:

While we need not require that all University Senate members always be ordained clergy, it is important to make sure that those charged with oversight of UMC seminary education are themselves supportive of the core of our Church's doctrinal standards. Such minimal, common-sense accountability would improve trust within our Church.

¶1417.2.

Petition Number: 60731-MH-¶1417.2-G; Case, Riley B. - Kokomo, IN, USA.

AC Support for Non-United Methodist Seminaries

Add a second paragraph to ¶1417.2 as follows:

2. The senate shall also prepare annually a list of approved schools, colleges, universities, and graduate theological seminaries for use by annual conference boards of ordained ministry in determining candidate educational eligibility for admission into full connection.

In determining the list of approved seminaries, the senate shall recognize the input of annual conference boards of ordained ministry, bishops, and cabinets. Because some conferences have missional needs that are unique to them which can best be served by a relationship with local non-United Methodist seminaries, a resolution signed by the conference Board of Ordained Ministry, the bishop and the bishop's cabinet, for approval of a seminary within the bounds of the annual conference to train candidates related to the annual conference, shall qualify the seminary for the approved list for that conference only. Only seminaries with ATS accreditation shall be considered.

Rationale:

Conferences often have a history with local seminaries that a general Church committee does not have and should be free to offer conference approval for such seminaries for missional purposes.

¶1419.

Petition Number: 60530-MH-¶1419-G; Erbele, W. Terence - Ketchikan, AK, USA for Alaska UM Conference.

Scholarship Administration

Amend ¶ 1419 as indicated following:

¶ 1419. The United Methodist Higher Education Foundation is incorporated in the State of Tennessee as a nonprofit, charitable organization with permanent ties to the Division of Higher Education, which elects its board of trustees. The general purpose of the foundation is to foster the growth and development of institutions of higher education by encouraging persons and corporations to provide financial support and by acting as a foundation for such support. The foundation is also authorized to serve as a trustee and administrator of gifts and bequests designated by donors to specific institutions, provided that any and all scholarships offered by or through the United Methodist Higher Education Foundation shall be administered by the Office of Loans and Scholarships of the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (c.f. ¶ 1408.2).

Rationale:

The permanent ties of UMHEF to GBHEM ought to be extended to empowering the Office of Loans and Scholarships to administer UMHEF scholarships to eliminate redundancy of structure and effort as well as to facilitate access of applicants to United Methodist scholarships.

¶1421.3.

Petition Number: 60589-MH-¶1421.3-G; Pridgeon, Jeremy - Wetumpka, AL, USA.

Theological Education

Amend ¶ 1421.3 a) b) c) and d)

3. Theological Education—The Division shall:

a) develop and maintain ~~the~~ educational programs ~~and standards~~ for those who are ordained as deacons and elders, licensed as local pastors, and certified for specialized ministries in The United Methodist Church and shall disseminate the programs ~~approved courses and standards~~ to appropriate oversight bodies and boards.

b) Certify the course offerings in United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity as specified in ¶ 335.(3) and provide the University Senate and boards of ordained ministry with a list of the courses approved.

c) ~~Prescribe~~ Provide guides for a theological studies program ~~which will include basic graduate theological studies~~ for those preparing for ordination as a Deacon and Elder, an advanced course of studies program for local pastors preparing for ordination as an Elder, and a curriculum of studies for those seeking certification in areas of specialized ministry.

d) ~~Prescribe~~ Provide a Course of Study program for local pastors that includes the studies for license for pastoral ministry and the five-year Course of Study curriculum. All work in the Course of Study shall be taken in programs approved by the Division of Ordained Ministry. Upon approval of the Conference Board of Ordained Ministry, a candidate may complete up to one-half of the work through online courses developed by the Division of Ordained Ministry.

Rationale:

The petition is submitted to harmonize with legislative proposals related to the 300 paragraphs of the Book of Discipline that were submitted by the 2015 session of the Alabama-West Florida Conference to the 2016 General Conference.

¶1421.3.

Petition Number: 60670-MH-¶1421.3-G; Case, Riley B. - Kokomo, IN, USA.

Duties and Responsibilities of the Division of Ordained Ministry

Add a new subparagraph 1421.3 (d) and renumber the succeeding subparagraphs:

¶ 1421.3 (d). Monitor the community life of the theological schools of The United Methodist Church to encourage theological diversity and openness of mind and spirit to the various perspectives that fall within the boundaries of Part II of the Discipline. This shall include but not be limited to the various forms of evangelical and charismatic perspectives.

¶1422.

Petition Number: 60024-MH-¶1422-G; Fuller, Dan - Port Crane, NY, USA.

Doctrinal Guidance for Seminarians

Amend Discipline ¶1422 by ADDING sentences as follows:

SCHOOLS OF THEOLOGY OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

¶ 1422. Goals—1. ...

2. ...

3. Schools of Theology of The United Methodist Church Located in the U.S.A.—a) . . .

b) . . .

c) In fulfilling their task of preparing persons for effective service for Christ and the church, The United Methodist schools of theology located in the USA shall acquaint students with the current polity, theology and programs of The United Methodist Church and shall offer practical experience in administration, evangelism, stewardship, and other areas which will prepare them for effective Christian ministry in a multicultural society. Each school of theology, in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, Division of Ordained Ministry, shall provide the courses in United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity specified in ¶ 335. (3) and seek to form persons for ministry in the Wesleyan tradition. Such coursework in United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity shall include intentional safe space for students to honestly explore whether they are truly in personal agreement with the Doctrinal Standards of The United Methodist Church or if they would instead have more integrity by pursuing ministry in another church whose beliefs more closely match their own.

d) Any institution seeking affiliation with The United Methodist Church for the preparation of candidates for ordination must first present its plan to the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, Division of Ordained Ministry for approval and recommendation to the University Senate, which alone can grant affiliation and listing as a United Methodist school of theology. A select number of non-United Methodist schools of theology may be granted approval for the preparation of candidates for ordination under the criteria of the University Senate. The University Senate shall review the curriculum offered by such non-United Methodist schools in United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity to ensure that it includes include intentional safe space for students to honestly explore whether they are truly in personal agreement with the Doctrinal Standards of The United Methodist Church (§104) or if they would instead have more integrity by pursuing ministry in another church whose beliefs more closely match their own.

- 4. . . .
- 5. . . .

Rationale:

For many United Methodist seminarians, such courses are an especially significant time for their personally determining if they are really on board with our Wesleyan doctrine. It is most compassionate for all involved to help these important questions and decisions get addressed not too late in the ordination process.

¶1422.3

Petition Number: 60557-MH-¶1422.3-G; Kreinop, Kim - Columbus, IN, USA for Ogilville UMC.

Seminary Focus

Amend ¶ 1422.3 by adding a new sub-section c and re-lettering the subsequent subsections accordingly:

- ¶ 1422. Goals—1. . . .
- 2. . . .
- 3. Schools of Theology of The United Methodist Church Located in the U.S.A.—a) Schools of theology of The United Methodist Church located in the U.S.A. exist to serve The United Methodist Church, primarily in the United States, but with concern for the witness of the church around the world. In addition to their commitment to United Methodism, they also serve students of other denominations in witness to United Methodism’s ecumenical relationships. . . .

- b) . . .
- c) As Christian institutions serving the ecumenical body of Christ in general and The United Methodist Church in particular, these schools of theology shall not shall offer any course work, degree program, or formal certificate explicitly designed for training religious leaders of non-Christian faith communities, if they are to remain eligible to receive financial support for their current operating expenses through the Ministerial Education Fund.
- c d*) . . .
- d e*) . . .

Rationale:

We seek good relations with our non-Christian neighbors. But it is counter-productive for our own seminaries, which we fund, to directly promote the spread of religions that reject the Gospel message. We do not demand that Islamic madrassahs offer Christian training for our clergy.

¶1422.3.

Petition Number: 60587-MH-¶1422.3-G; Watts, Joel L. - Charleston, WV, USA.

Doctrinal Commitment by Seminary Faculty

Amend ¶ 1422.3 by adding a new sub-section d and re-lettering the subsequent subsection accordingly:

- ¶ 1422. Goals—1. . . .
- 2. . . .
- 3. Schools of Theology of The United Methodist Church Located in the U.S.A.—a) . . .
- b) . . .
- c) . . .
- d) All full-time faculty hired by any United Methodist school of theology in the U.S.A. must, before they can begin their responsibilities at the school, sign a statement affirming their personal agreement with and commitment to the basic, ecumenical Christian doctrine of Articles I, II, and IV of the Methodist Articles of Religion and/or of Articles I, II, and III of the Confession of Faith of The Evangelical United Brethren Church (§104). Exceptions may be made for faculty members from Eastern Christian traditions who can affirm their agreement with and commitment to the aforementioned doctrine other than disputed language pertaining to the Holy Spirit’s procession from the Son as well as the Father. United Methodist schools of theology may waive this requirement for select faculty hires, provided that no more than three of its full-time faculty at any given time will have been hired under such a waiver. Beyond these two exceptions, a United Methodist school of theology may choose to exercise the option to not comply with this provision, in which case it must notify the University Senate and forfeit 25 percent of its Ministerial Education funding. In such cases, the forfeited funds shall be redistributed among the remaining eligible schools of theology on a basis proportional to how other Ministerial Education funding was allocated between these schools. The University Senate shall monitor compliance. (To provide ample time for preparation and compliance, this legislation shall take not take effect until two years from the closing date of the 2016 General Conference.)

~~d~~ e) . . .

4. . . .

5. . . .

Rationale:

In a world of spiritual confusion, it is vital for the sake of our mission, faithfulness, and stewardship to encourage our own seminaries to have firm commitments to historic Christianity. The doctrine cited is ecumenically unifying for Trinitarian Christians. This petition still provides ample flexibility and choice for implementation.

¶1422.3.

Petition Number: 60590-MH-¶1422.3-G; Land, Robert A. - Huntington, IN, USA.

Christian Faculty

Amend ¶ 1422.3 by adding a new sub-section b and re-lettering the subsequent subsections accordingly:

¶ 1422. Goals—1. . . .

2. . . .

3. Schools of Theology of The United Methodist Church Located in the U.S.A.—a) . . .

b) After January 1, 2018, all persons newly hired for full-time faculty or full-time staff positions at those of these schools of theology that are not part of a wider university shall be required, as a condition of being offered the position, to affirm that they are committed Christians who are part of a local Trinitarian Christian church, and that after beginning employment at the school they would remain committed to the historic Christian faith and to being part of a local Trinitarian Christian church. If a United Methodist school of theology believes it is important for its institutional mission to be granted an exception for a particular faculty position, then the school may petition the University Senate to be granted an exception. The University Senate shall respond to such requests within a reasonably prompt time period and shall not grant any such requests if it would result in more than 10 percent of the school's full-time faculty being individuals hired under this exception provision.

c) . . .

~~c~~ d) . . .

~~d~~ e) . . .

Rationale:

It is important for our seminaries to have clear identities as unapologetically Christian institutions, providing a spiritually supportive Christian environment for students. The late activation date would prevent this from affecting any current faculty or staff, or any search processes that have already started.

¶1422.3.

Petition Number: 60671-MH-¶1422.3-G; Abraham, William - Dallas, TX, USA.

UM Ethos in Schools of Theology

Amend ¶ 1422.3 with the addition of a new “d”

d) All search committees for new faculty members, deans, or presidents of United Methodist Schools of Theology will have in their membership the resident Bishop of the area or a representative appointed by the resident Bishop.

~~d~~ e) Any institution seeking affiliation . . .

Rationale:

Fewer United Methodists are being hired at many United Methodist Schools of Theology. Thus, United Methodist schools are rapidly losing their identity, making it more difficult to shape pastors in a Wesleyan ethos. Moreover, there are now fewer schools where United Methodist scholars can be formed to further the intellectual . . .

¶1422.3c.

Petition Number: 60025-MH-¶1422.3c-G; Fuller, Dan - Port Crane, NY, USA.1 Similar Petition

Doctrinal Review of UM Seminaries

Amend Discipline ¶1422.3c by ADDING a sentence as follows:

SCHOOLS OF THEOLOGY OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

¶ 1422.

3. Schools of Theology of The United Methodist Church Located in the U.S.A.—a) . . .

b) . . .

c) In fulfilling their task of preparing persons for effective service for Christ and the church, The United Methodist schools of theology located in the USA shall acquaint students with the current polity, theology and programs of The United Methodist Church and shall offer practical experience in administration, evangelism, stewardship, and other areas which will prepare them for effective Christian ministry in a multicultural society. Each school of theology, in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, Division of Ordained Ministry, shall provide the courses in United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity specified in ¶ 335.(3) and seek to form persons for ministry in the Wesleyan tradition. The University Senate shall offer quadrennial evaluations of how well each United Methodist school of theology defends, promotes, and teaches the doctrinal standards of The United Methodist Church (¶104).

...

Rationale:

For us to maintain our valuable, distinctive Wesleyan identity and heritage, it is vital to examine how well our own schools of theology are doing in helping people understand our United Methodist theology and in training clergy to teach it to others.

¶1422.3d.

Petition Number: 60585-MH-¶1422.3d-G; Fisher, Christopher L. - Schuylkill Haven, PA, USA. 1 Similar Petition

UM Studies at Non-UM Seminaries

Amend ¶ 1422.3. (d) as follows:

¶ 1422.3.d) Any institution . . . A select number of non-United Methodist schools of theology may be granted approval for the preparation of candidates for ordination under the criteria of the University Senate. If approved, these schools may offer United Methodist denominational studies courses in history, doctrine, and polity specified in ¶ 335.(3)(d), provided they are taught by an ordained United Methodist elder who is approved to teach those courses by the annual conference Board of Ordained Ministry of the geographical region within which the school lies.

Rationale:

Current University Senate policy only allows official UM schools of theology to provide required UM Studies courses. This policy ignores the availability of well qualified UM elders with academic credentials living near approved non-UM seminaries, who may offer UM studies with integrity at those schools and provide ongoing mentoring relationships . . .

¶1422.3d.

Petition Number: 60586-MH-¶1422.3d-G; Fisher, Christopher L. - Schuylkill Haven, PA, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Online Course at Non-UM Seminaries

Amend ¶ 1422.3. d) as follows:

¶ 1422.3.d) Any institution seeking affiliation . . . A select number of non-United Methodist schools of theology may be granted approval for the preparation of candidates for ordination under the criteria of the University Senate. These schools of theology may offer their own online courses to candidates if approved by the standard academic credentialing bodies, subject to the same University Senate policy governing online courses at the official United Methodist schools of theology.

Rationale:

Online courses are rapidly becoming a standard teaching method at most academic institution in the United States. Current University Senate policy only recognizes as valid online courses offered at the official UM schools of theology. If a non-UM school has otherwise passed muster with the University Senate, and has also . . .

Proposed Non-Disciplinary Legislation

Petition 60509.

Petition Number: 60509-MH-NonDis-$-G; Hagiya, Grant J. - Des Moines, WA, USA for Study of Ministry Commission.

Create 2017-2020 Study of Ministry Commission

General Conference has endorsed a Study of Ministry Commission most quadrennia since the creation of The United Methodist Church in 1968. The Church needs focused study and recommendations on the nature and structure of ministry in the ever-changing context of our world that is volatile, uncertain, complex, and ambiguous. We propose that the Church continue its concentrated study on ministry for the worldwide Church during the 2017-2020 quadrennium.

We recommend a team of 15-18 members. The new commission should be broadly representative in ethnicity, age, geographic area, ministry orders, laity, and theological perspective, and its members should have specific experience and skill sets related to ministry (e.g. Boards of Ordained Ministry, Cabinets, theological education, agencies, and local churches). At least one-fourth—but no more than one-third—of the 2017-2020 commission will be members from the 2013-2016 Study of Ministry Commission. There shall also be at least one central conference member from Africa, one from Europe, and one from the Philippines. We advocate especially for the representation and inclusion of younger clergy. The Council of Bishops, in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, will select the commission's members and leadership. The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and Discipleship Ministries will assign staff from their agencies to resource and carry out the Commission's work. These agencies will provide funding for their staff's participation.

The 2016 General Conference will appropriate funds sufficient for the Study of Ministry Commission to meet eight times during 2017-2020, with funding administered through the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

The commission's work will respond to the Church's needs, and will partner with key entities, such as the Council of Bishops, the Committee on Faith and Order, United Methodist seminaries, and Boards of Ordained Ministry. The commission should engage in deep reflection on the nature of ministry, explore innovations that further our Church's mission, and project possibilities of our future with a probing curiosity.

Given the uncertainty of legislation at General Conference, we propose that the commission have some flexibility to sort through changes made or not made at the 2016 General Conference in order to respond with clarity and coherence to the needs of the Church. This includes considering questions related to the authority of licensed and ordained clergy to determine for whom they will perform marriage services, as well as the ordination of persons in committed same-sex relationships or marriages.

We propose the following issues for continued exploration, grounded in the reports of this and previous commissions:

1. Articulate a theology of ordained ministry for The United Methodist Church in consultation with the Committee on Faith and Order;
2. Explore and clarify the relationship between the ministry structures in the 2016 Book of Discipline and a possible General Book of Discipline. The Commission for the Study of Ministry should provide guidance and language in the development of text for the General Book of Discipline, Chapter Two—"The Ministry of the Ordained"—and Chapter Three—"The Superintendency." Members of the Commission for the Study of the Ministry shall be on the writing committee for the General Book of Discipline;
3. Further examine the formation and education of clergy, working toward a systemic model that embraces both Master of Divinity and Course of Study work, and continues into provisional membership and the early years of ministry. The commission should also reflect on the possibility of allowing annual conference Boards of Ordained Ministry to consider persons for ordination who have completed advanced degrees (beyond the bachelor's degree) in fields relevant to ministry when those degrees are integrated with basic graduate theological studies at an approved seminary;
4. Examine funding sources and patterns for theological and ministry education and formation;
5. Explore student debt accumulated by United Methodist seminary graduates and ways to reduce costs.

Petition 60598.

Petition Number: 60598-MH-NonDis-G; Kersey, Betsy - Cleveland, TN, USA for Varnell-Day Sunday School Class - Broad St. UMC - Cleveland, TN. 1 Similar Petition

Ecumenical Funding

The 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church hereby instructs the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (OCUIR) to work in the next quadrennium to prevent apportioned general funds of The United Methodist Church from constituting a dramatically disproportionately large portion of the denominational income of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA (NCCCUSA) in the future. The General Conference further instructs the OCUIR to take reasonable steps to ensure that in any given year, the percentage of the NCCCUSA's denominational income that comes from general funds of The United Methodist Church is never more than two times the percentage of American church members of NCCCUSA member communions who are United Methodists.

Rationale:

We value our ecumenical relations. But at times the UMC has given over one-third of this US body's denominational income, despite United Methodists making up a much smaller portion of American members of NCCCUSA communions. With many of our own congregational and conference budgets tightening, such fiscal responsibility is needed.

Petition 60863.

Petition Number: 60863-MH-NonDis-G; Jeter, Narcie - Gainesville, FL, USA for UM Campus Ministry Association.

Collegiate Ministry as Valid Appointment

Bishops and district superintendents will give full consideration and recognition of collegiate ministry settings and service as valid appointments for provisional members. (§ 326.2)

Boards of Ordained Ministry will give full consideration and recognition of collegiate ministry appointments counting towards full connection and ordination as deacon or elder. (§ 330, § 335)

Rationale:

Collegiate ministry requires called, gifted, trained, equipped, and supported collegiate ministers, who order the life of these unique extension ministries. Ministries that provide opportunities for the regular proclamation of the word, the administration of the sacraments, and the ordering of the life of the community for service in mission and . . .

Petition 60872.

Petition Number: 60872-MH-NonDis; Galvan, Elias - USA for Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic Latino Americans.

UM Hispanic Latino Scholarship Fund

The 2012 General Conference approved action for the "United Methodist Hispanic/Latino Scholarship Fund" will continue in the 2017-2020 quadrennium to permit the completion of the work underway with the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry (NPHLM), General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) and the Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic American (MARCHA).

Rationale:

The 2012 General Conference authorized the National Plan for Hispanic/Latino Ministry (NPHLM)—in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) and the Methodist Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic/Latino American (MARCHA)—to develop a plan and raise funds for the creation of a "United Methodist Hispanic/Latino . . .

Petition 60934.

Petition Number: 60934-MH-NonDis-G; Furr, Steve - Jackson, AL, USA for Association of Annual Conference Lay Leaders.

Study of Number of UM Seminaries

The General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) is directed throughout the coming quadrennium to conduct a study of our thirteen official seminaries and University Senate approved schools of theology to determine what the best model is for serving the needs of the Church, particularly focusing on whether or not there is redundancy in the system that does not serve us well and whether or not the Church would be better served with fewer seminaries or if it would be beneficial for seminaries to be directed to merge. If GBHEM finds that there are more seminaries than are needed or desirable to fulfill the mission of the Church, then GBHEM is directed to recommend the manner in which the number of seminaries ought to be reduced or merged.

GBHEM is to conduct its study of the options for carrying out this mandate in cooperation with the thirteen UM seminaries, with the Association of United Methodist Theological Schools, the University Senate, and with the General Council on Finance and Administration. Other interested parties may be consulted and otherwise engaged in the study at the sole discretion of GBHEM.

GBHEM is directed to present to the 2020 General Conference a report on the results of its study, including recommendations for achieving elimination of any redundancies, with a special view toward whether or not there should be a discontinuance or merger of any of the existing thirteen seminaries.

Rationale:

It is highly probable that thirteen is not a sustainable number of UM seminaries. A study needs to be conducted to determine whether or not that is the case and, if so, which ones ought to be discontinued and in what manner.

Petition 60509.

Petition Number: 60976-MH-NonDis-G; 'Owan, Kasap Tshibang - Mulungwishi, Democratic Republic of Congo.

Africa University Vice-Chancellor

. . . we suggest a rotation of the vice-chancellor just as of the chancellor, because Africa University is a university of the Church.

Rationale:

Given that Africa University is a university of The United Methodist Church;

Given that it is a university of all the African Central Conferences;

Given that it is financed by the General Conference of The United Methodist Church;

Given that it is a private university, not of the State . . .

Proposed Resolutions

R2001.

Petition Number: 60340-MH-R2001-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Christian Education

Amend and Readopt Resolution 2001 as follows:

WHEREAS, every elder . . .

WHEREAS, the early . . .

WHEREAS, question number fourteen of the Historic Examination for Admission into Full Connection is "Will you diligently instruct the children in every place?" (2012 Discipline, ¶ 336); ~~but yet, two-thirds of our baptized children leave the church because they are not rooted in the traditions of The United Methodist Church, as acknowledged by the Council of Bishops' Episcopal Initiative on Children and Poverty;~~ and

~~WHEREAS, the document "Our Shared Dream: The Beloved Community" emphasizes the bishops' vision of building Beloved Community, including a deep commitment to children, and their seven "Vision Pathways" includes reaching and transforming "the lives of new generations of children" and "teaching the Wesleyan model of reaching and forming disciples of Jesus Christ," and the "Provocative Propositions" of the general agencies and commissions includes preparing leadership for the church; and the bishops' Call to Action lists four ways to move forward on the vision, including to "Reach and Care for the Children" and to "Live the United Methodist Way";~~

WHEREAS, the Social Principles . . .

Therefore, be it resolved, that the ~~2008~~ 2016 General Conference affirm the imperative to engage in the work of Christian education and direct United Methodist seminaries and colleges, collegiate ministries, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, the General Board of Discipleship, The United Methodist Publishing House, annual conferences, and local churches to assess and expand how they advance the work of Christian education in the church. This includes promoting the professional, ~~and~~ para-professional, and undergraduate certification in camp/retreat ministry, children's ministry, Christian education, collegiate ministry, evangelism, ministry with the poor, ministry with people with disabilities, music ministry, ministry with older adults, spiritual formation, urban ministry, and youth ministry, and, where appropriate, monitoring all approved seminary M.Div. programs to ensure that future leaders are being trained in the ministries of Christian education.

ADOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #2001, 2008 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶¶ 161 and 162.

R2002.

Petition Number: 60341-MH-R2002-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Deletion

Delete Resolution 2002 - Faith Communities on Campus.

R2003.

Petition Number: 60342-MH-R2003-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Deletion

Delete Resolution 2003 - Support Campus Ministers.

R3103

Petition Number: 60005-MH-R3103-G; Paige, Peggy - Ingalls, MI, USA for UM Rural Advocates. 1 Similar Petition

Facilitation of Cooperative Ministry

Amend and readopt Resolution 3103 as follows:

3103. Facilitation of Cooperative Ministry Throughout the Church

WHEREAS, cooperative forms of ministry have proven to enhance the ministries of laity, certified lay ministers, and to provide greater support and peer accountability among clergy, and to further connectional awareness and increased resourcing from the connectional church; and

WHEREAS, cooperative ministry is an intentional style of team ministry that enables groups of congregations and their pastors and laity ~~in a defined geographic area, as United Methodists and ecumenically,~~ and networking groups of church and community persons focused around a common passionate missional interest to work together in ministries of nurture, outreach, and witness for the purpose of making disciples for the transformation of the world; working toward the elimination of poverty, and engaging congregations in missional outreach in the local and global community;

Therefore, be it resolved, that cooperative ministry be supported by: affirmed and undergirded by:

1. all boards and agencies of The United Methodist Church by collaborating around issues concerning cooperative ministry, i.e. training, resourcing, and financial and technical assistance, etc.; matters concerning cooperative ministries;

2. ~~bishops and cabinets fulfilling the requirements of The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church regarding cooperative ministries, i.e., training, consultation, deployment of personnel, etc.~~

3 2. bishops and cabinets giving priority to cooperative ministries in the appointment making process, including ecumenically cooperative ministries;

4. ~~seminaries including training and field experiences for students to learn skills of working in team settings;~~

5. ~~courses of study for local pastors, including training and field experience;~~

6 3. cabinets, conference staff, and other conference leaders of congregational development, parish and community development, etc., to give giving special attention to cooperative work in rural, urban, declining, growing, stable, racial/ethnic, multicultural, and both large and small membership charges and churches;

7. ~~cabinets and other annual conference leaders encouraging cooperative projects, ministries and parishes as means of reaching out and starting new congregations in apartment complexes, mobile home parks, recreational areas, prisons, retirement homes, unincorporated sections of communities, etc.~~

Rationale:

Affirming cooperative parish ministry--church based, community-based and mission-based cooperatives--as proven viable and effective means of working at offering Christ and making disciples for the transformation of the world—would further energize those persons who are called to this cause. The responsibilities of the cabinet and conference leaders . . .

R3141.

Petition Number: 60242-MH-R3141-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Called to Be Neighbors and Witnesses: Guidelines for Interreligious Relationships

Delete current Resolution 3141 and replace with the following:

3141. Called to Be Neighbors and Witnesses: Guidelines for Interreligious Relationships

The emergence of religiously diverse societies and the new dynamics in old religious communities prompt many faith communities to reconsider how they relate to one another and to prevailing secular ideologies representing a great opportunity for learning and an enhanced understanding of our common concerns.

Called to Be Neighbors

The vision of a “worldwide community of communities” commends itself to many Christians as a way of being together with persons of different religious convictions in a pluralistic world. Ultimately, this is to shift the question from, “To which church do we belong?” to “Have we participated in promoting the work of the Holy Spirit?” That suggests that we United Methodist Christians, not just individually, but corporately, are called to be neighbors with other faith communities, and to work with them to create a human community, a set of relationships between people at once interdependent and free, in which there is love, mutual respect, and justice.

Called to Be Witnesses

Jesus issued his famous missionary mandate, “Therefore, go and make disciples of all nations.” (Matthew 28:19) Thus, we are called to bridge geographic, sociological, racial, or cultural boundaries. We are to proclaim and witness to the God who has bound humanity together in care for one another, regardless of our differences.

As we reflect on our faith and in our witness to and encounter with our diverse neighbors, we rediscover that God is also Creator of all humankind, the “one God and Father of all, who is Lord of all, works through all, and is in all” (Ephesians 4:6 GNT).

Dialogue: A Way to Be Neighbors

Dialogue is the intentional engagement with persons who hold other faith perspectives for purposes of mutual understanding, cooperation, and transformation. A positive foundation from which to connect with persons in other faith communities is recognition of the gifts they bring. Engaging in dialogue with positive expectation offers the sharing of mutually beneficial spiritual gifts and overcoming past hostilities. Each religious community’s faith offers a positive way to resolve conflict and offers resources for building community. Dialogue seeks to provide an environment allowing differences, affirms the positives, and brings a deeper relationship.

Dialogue: A Way to Witness

Dialogue can lead to a relationship of mutual acceptance, openness, and respect. True and effective dialogue requires Christians be truly open to persons of other faith communities about each other's convictions on life, truth, salvation and witness. Dialogue leads to the understanding and receiving of each other's wisdom.

Dialogue creates relationships of mutual understanding, openness, and respect. We leave to the Holy Spirit the outcome of our mutual openness. A large part of our task, and foundational to interreligious dialogue and cooperation, is to learn to discern the Spirit's work.

We must be obedient to our own call to witness and be loving and neighborly to persons of other faith communities. In dialogue, these deeply held truths encounter each other in witness and love, so that greater wisdom and understanding of truth may emerge that benefits all parties.

Neighbors and Witnesses: Into the New Millennium

The command to love one's neighbors and the call to witness to Jesus Christ to all people are inseparably linked. The profound challenge this represents for United Methodist Christians can be seen most sharply in the many diverse religious movements and to the religious nones.

The calling to be witnesses and neighbors to all people, is based on the biblical caution not to bear false witness (Matthew 19:18) and the admonition to live at peace with all people (Hebrews 12:14). Love of neighbor and witness to Christ are the two primary attitudes United Methodist Christians must affirm in their relationship with persons of other faiths and those without a religious tradition.

United Methodist Christians enter a new millennium full of challenges and opportunities. We seek to learn how the Holy Spirit works among all peoples of the world, especially among those in other religious traditions and to those without a religious tradition.

Guidelines for Interreligious Relationships

These guidelines will assist United Methodists to be faithful to their call to witness and the call to be neighbors with persons of other faith communities.

1. Identify the various faith communities and familiarize your congregation with them.

2. Initiate dialogues with different faith communities, remaining sensitive to areas of historic tension. Be open to the possibilities for deepened understanding and new insight.

3. Work with persons of other faith communities to resolve economic, social, cultural and political problems in the community.

4. Plan community celebrations with an interreligious perspective together with persons of other faith traditions.

5. Develop new models of community building that strengthen relationships and allow people to dwell together in harmony while honoring the integrity of their differences.

Intent

The intent in developing interreligious relationships is not to amalgamate all faiths into one religion. In dialogue, we mutually seek insight into the wisdom of other traditions and we hope to overcome our fears and misapprehensions.

United Methodist Christians are neighbors with persons whose religious commitments are different from our own. We open ourselves to dialogue and engagement with persons of other faith communities and to other Christians whose understandings, cultures, and practices may be different from our own.

This interreligious engagement challenges United Methodist Christians to think in new ways about our place in the broader human community, about our mission, evangelism, and service. Our prayer is that the lives of all in each place will be enriched by the differences of others, that a new sense of community may emerge, and that others may receive the gift of God in Christ, while we receive the gifts which have been given them.

ADOPTED 1980

REVISED AND ADOPTED 2000

REVISED AND READOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #3142, 2008 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #89, 2004 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #79, 2000 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶162B

Rationale:

Resolution 3142 is scheduled to expire in 2016. Since it is still highly relevant, the resolution has been shortened and resubmitted to the 2016 General Conference. The essence of the original resolution has been preserved.

R3161.

Petition Number: 60343-MH-R3161-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Education: The Gift of Hope

Amend and Readopt Resolution 3161:

3161. Education: The Gift of Hope

WHEREAS, John Wesley . . .

WHEREAS, this commitment continues as United Methodist individuals, congregations, colleges, ~~campus~~ collegiate ministries, and other groups become involved in local education in their communities; and

WHEREAS, these efforts . . .

WHEREAS, United Methodists . . . resolve the threats to quality education; and

~~WHEREAS, the 1996 General Conference of The United Methodist Church received Education: The Gift of Hope, a study of the historic and current United Methodist concern for education, and urged every local church to use the study to understand our historic educational concern and to become enlivened in educational partnerships in the local community; and~~

~~WHEREAS, the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry has revised Education: The Gift of Hope, to address concerns about drugs and violence in our schools and to further remind United Methodists of the Wesleyan challenge to become involved in local efforts in education;~~

~~Therefore, be it resolved, that every local United Methodist congregation is encouraged to study Education: The Gift of Hope to learn of our heritage and concern; and~~

~~Be it further resolved, that each local congregation develop a strategy for being in partnership with local United Methodist-related educational institutions and collegiate ministries, other educators, community leaders, and students in providing a positive, safe, helpful, and hopeful environment in which students can live and learn and grow into principled Christian leaders.~~

ADOPTED 1996

AMENDED AND READOPTED 2000

AMENDED AND READOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #3161, 2008 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #98, 2004 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #87, 2000 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶ 162 C, D.

R3394.

Petition Number: 60011-MH-R3394-G; Paige, Peggy - Ingalls, MI, USA for UM Rural Advocates.

Support for All Who Minister in Rural Settings

Amend and readopt Resolution 3394 as follows:

3394. Support for All Who Minister in Rural Settings

WHEREAS, rural churches and communities provide unique settings for ministry; and

WHEREAS, this uniqueness calls for specially gifted people, both laity and clergy, who desire to serve in rural communities;

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church is called upon to affirm the value and worth of all those who minister in rural settings, to celebrate their gifts and grace, and to recognize their witness within The United Methodist Church.

~~Further, be it Rresolved~~, that The United Methodist Church is called upon to give particular recognition to licensed local pastors, laypersons assigned, certified lay ministers, deacons, lay missionaries, and church and community workers who have been appointed, assigned or have personally chosen to work in rural communities.

Further, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church is called upon to support these persons in ways that promote more effective ministry.

Further, be it resolved, that annual conferences and districts are called upon to explore with these individuals their unique gifts as they relate to service in rural areas, to identify those with gifts particularly suited to rural ministry, and to encourage such uniquely gifted persons to pursue ministry in rural settings.

Finally, be it resolved, that annual conferences are called upon to establish support structures that provide for:

- enhancement of pastoral family life,
- resources for maintaining pastoral well-being, including adequate health care,
- structures and technology that encourage connect- edness and accountability to the larger church, and
- creative ways to address geographic dynamics.

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church needs to continue to support all persons (laity and clergy) who have chosen to minister in rural settings.

R4033.

Petition Number: 60344-MH-R4033; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

The Black College Fund

Amend and Readopt Resolution 4033:

4033. The Black College Fund

WHEREAS, since 1866 when Rust College was established to address the educational needs of freed slaves, and over the next ~~142~~ 150 years, the mission to empower African Americans through education continued with the founding of Bennett College ~~for Women~~, Bethune-Cookman University . . .

Be it further resolved, that the General Conference reaffirms its commitment to the Black College Fund and expresses its intention to continue the Black College Fund as an apportioned item for the ~~2009-2012~~ 2017-2020 and 2021-2024 quadrennium quadrennia.

ADOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #4033, 2008 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶ 163.

R6001.

Petition Number: 60348-MH-R6001-$-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Africa University

Amend and Readopt Resolution 6001:

6001. Africa University

WHEREAS, the Africa University . . .

WHEREAS, the official groundbreaking for the university occurred on site in Old Mutare in 1991, and Africa University opened in 1992 with two faculties (schools) and forty students representing six nations on the African continent; and

WHEREAS, Africa University's enrollment reached a significant milestone in ~~2006~~ 2014 with its student population reaching ~~1,123~~ 1,474 representing ~~22~~ 23 African nations; and

WHEREAS, Africa University is committed to the education of African women with young women comprising 53.5 percent of the student population in 2014; and

WHEREAS, the number of faculties has grown from the initial two in 1992 to ~~nine~~ now six, plus the Institute of Peace, Leadership, and Governance; ~~in 2006~~; and

WHEREAS, ~~in February 2003, Africa University launched its Institute of Peace, Leadership and Governance with an initial enrollment of 15 students, each of whom will earn a master's degree in Peace and Governance (MPG); and~~

WHEREAS, ~~2,317~~ more than 5,000 Africa University alumni have been deployed across the African continent in fulfillment of the University's mission to train new leaders for the nations of Africa—new leaders like Walter Manyangawirwa, who was in the first graduating class at Africa University and who is now ~~a leader in the field of study of fungi, viruses, bacteria, and other plant diseases on the Africa University faculty and is one of Africa's few doctoral-level entomologists~~; and

WHEREAS, Africa University is the only private institution of higher learning on the African continent that ~~may fly the international flag of the United Nations~~; and

WHEREAS, Africa University has been called "... one of the great success stories of Christian missions in the world today" by Millard Fuller, founder and president of Habitat for Humanity International; and

WHEREAS, in the year that The United Methodist Church is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the ordination of women, the gender ratio in the student body is 53 percent female and 47 percent male; and

WHEREAS, Bishop Daniel Wandabula of Uganda was elected to the episcopacy on 28 May 2006 during a meeting of the denomination's Africa Central Conference on the Africa University Campus in Zimbabwe; and

WHEREAS, the support and enthusiasm . . .

WHEREAS, ~~the South Carolina Annual Conference calls upon~~ each local church is called upon to pay the full Africa University apportioned line item and give generously to the Africa University Endowment Fund;

Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Conference affirms . . .

Be it further resolved, that the ~~2008~~ 2016 General Conference make Africa University a priority and allocate an apportionment of $10 million over a four-year period and an additional $10 million to be raised through World Service Special Gifts to continue development, construction, and endowment of Africa University as outlined in the planning process determined by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the Africa University Board of Directors.

ADOPTED 2004

REVISED AND READOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #6001, 2008 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #304, 2004 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #284, 2000 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶ 165A.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60061-MH-R9999-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Full Communion Resolution - UMC & Uniting Church of Sweden

Add a new Resolution:

Resolution to Affirm and Implement a Full Communion Relationship between The Uniting Church of Sweden and The United Methodist Church

The Uniting Church of Sweden and The United Methodist Church agree that in their legislative bodies there shall be one vote to accept or reject, without separate amendment, the resolution that follows. If adopted by both churches, each church agrees to take the following measures to establish a relationship of full communion:

WHEREAS, Jesus Christ calls us to unity so that the world may believe; and

WHEREAS, The Uniting Church of Sweden and The United Methodist Church are united in the wish to deepen our witness and work together for the sharing of the love of Christ in the world and its communities,

Therefore, be it resolved that The Uniting Church of Sweden and The United Methodist Church hereby:

1. recognize each other as constituent members of the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic church, the body of Christ, as described in the Holy Scriptures and confessed in the church's historic creeds;

2. recognize the authenticity of each other's sacraments and welcome one another to partake in the Eucharist;

3. affirm the authenticity of each church's Christian ministry;

4. recognize the validity of each other's offices of ministry.

5. actively commit to working together as partners in mission and co-laborers in the ministry of Christ Jesus, and as a visible witness to the unity of Christians in sharing the love of God among all peoples and throughout Creation.

To facilitate growing into this relationship of full communion, the two churches will appoint a coordinating committee with members from the Uniting Church of Sweden and from the Northern Europe Central Conference.

This agreement will take effect upon an affirmative vote by the General Conference and a concurring vote by the Uniting Church of Sweden.

See Social Principles, ¶ 162.

Rationale:

This full communion relationship with The Uniting Church of Sweden will affirm the relationship with this newly formed denomination with churches that were formerly United Methodist congregations.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60229-MH-R9999-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

UM Guiding Principles for Christian-Jewish Relations

add a new Resolution:

United Methodist Guiding Principles for Christian-Jewish Relations

In order to increase our understanding of and with peoples of other living faith traditions, of ourselves as followers of Jesus Christ, and of God and God's truth, The United Methodist Church encourages dialogue and experiences with those of other faiths. For important and unique reasons, including a treasury of shared Scripture and an ancient heritage that belong to us in common but that also contain our dividedness, we look particularly for such opportunities with Jews. United Methodist participation in Christian-Jewish dialogue and relationships is based on the following understandings:

1. There is one living God, in whom both Jews and Christians believe.

While the Jewish and Christian traditions understand and express their faith in the same God in significantly different ways, we believe with Paul that God, who was in Christ reconciling the world to God's own self (2 Corinthians 5:18-19), is none other than the God of Israel, maker of heaven and earth. Above all else, Christians and Jews are bonded in our joyful and faithful response to the one God, living our faith as each understands God's call.

2. Jesus was a devout Jew, as were many of his first followers.

We know that understanding our Christian faith begins by recognizing and appreciating this seminal fact. Neither the ministry of Jesus and his apostles nor the worship and thought of the early church can be understood apart from the Jewish tradition, culture, and worship of the first century. Further, we believe that God's revelation in Jesus Christ is unintelligible apart from the story of what God did in the life of the people of Israel.

Because Christianity is firmly rooted in biblical Judaism, we understand that knowledge of these roots is essential to our faith. As expressed in a statement from the Consultation on the Church and Jewish People of the World Council of Churches: "We give thanks to God for the spiritual treasure we share with the Jewish people: faith in the living God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; knowledge of the name of God and of the commandments; the prophetic proclamation of judgment and grace; the Hebrew Scriptures; and the hope of the coming Kingdom. In all these, we find common roots in biblical revelation and see spiritual ties that bind us to the Jewish people."²

3. Judaism and Christianity are living and dynamic religious movements that have continued to evolve since the time of Jesus, often in interaction with each other and with God's continual self-disclosure in the world.

Christians often have little understanding of the history of Judaism as it has developed since the lifetime of Jesus. As a World Council of Churches publication points out: "Bible-reading and worshiping Christians often believe that they 'know Judaism' since they have the Old Testament, the records of Jesus' debates with Jewish teachers and the early Christian reflections on the Judaism of their times. . . . This attitude is often reinforced by lack of knowledge about the history of Jewish life and thought through the 1,900 years since the parting of the ways of Judaism and Christianity."⁶

As Christians, it is important for us to recognize that Judaism has developed vital new traditions. This evolving tradition has given the Jewish people profound spiritual resources for creative life through the centuries. We increase our understanding when we learn about the rich variety of contemporary Jewish faith practice, theological interpretation, and worship, and discover directly through dialogue how Jews understand their own history, tradition, and faithful living.

4. Christians and Jews are bound to God through biblical covenants that are eternally valid.

As Christians, we stand firm in our belief that Jesus was sent by God as the Christ to redeem all people and that in Christ the biblical covenant has been made radically new. While church tradition has taught that Christianity superseded Judaism as the "new Israel," we do not believe that earlier covenantal relationships have been invalidated or that God has abandoned Jewish partners in covenant.

We believe that just as God is steadfastly faithful to the biblical covenant in Jesus Christ, likewise God is steadfastly faithful to the biblical covenant with the Jewish people, and no covenantal relationship is invalidated by the other. Further, we are mysteriously bound to one another through our covenantal relationships with the one God and Creator of us all. The covenant God established with the Jewish people through Abraham, Moses, and others continues because it is an eternal covenant. Paul proclaims that the gift and call of God to the Jews is irrevocable (Romans 11:29). Thus, we believe that the Jewish people continue in covenantal relationship with God.

5. As Christians, we are clearly called to witness to the gospel of Jesus Christ in every age and place. At the same time, we believe that God has continued, and continues today, to work through Judaism and the Jewish people.

Essential to the Christian faith is the call to proclaim the good news of Jesus Christ to all people. Through the announcement of the gospel in word and work comes the opportunity for others to glimpse the glory of God, which we have found through Jesus Christ. Yet we also understand that the issues of the evangelization of persons of other faiths, and of Jews in particular, are often sensitive and difficult.

We acknowledge that a lack of clarity on the meaning of evangelism in the context of Christian-Jewish relations is distressing to our Jewish neighbors. In the 1997 joint commentary on Building New Bridges in Hope, Jewish scholar Leon Klenicki said.

The question considered by this principle is very crucial in the relationship of Christians and Jews. It reminds us of the word 'evangelism' which brings great uneasiness to Jewish hearts. Through the centuries, evangelism has been a way by which Christians tried to convert and persecute Jews in the Western world. As Jews, we need to understand the exact meaning of evangelism.

We acknowledge that as United Methodist Christians our mission is to make disciples of Jesus Christ. This mission invites us to bear witness to Christ's light. In this context, The United Methodist Church neither makes the Jews a unique focus of our witness-bearing, nor excludes Jews from our longing that all persons may of their own volition believe in Jesus Christ our Savior and Lord. We affirm our responsibility to offer the gospel of Jesus Christ to all in witness that is respectful of the culture and religious convictions of others. Even as we offer our own faith, we remain open to learn from and be enriched by those who have faith experiences different from our own.

We bear our Christian witness in state of humility since we cannot know fully the way in which God's Spirit will work, nor can we know in whom the Spirit will be made manifest. We have always proclaimed that God spoke through the prophets of Israel and Judah and that Jesus spoke and acted in the tradition of those prophets. "God's grace is active everywhere, at all times, carrying out this purpose as revealed in the Bible. It is expressed in God's covenant with Abraham and Sarah, in the Exodus of Israel from Egypt, and in the ministry of the prophets" (Book of Discipline ¶ 121).

We believe that God has not abandoned God's covenant with the Jews. We are indebted to our Jewish forebearers through whom the Scriptures of the Old Testament have come to us and through whom the one true God has been revealed in the world. Therefore, we reject any and all forms of evangelism which are coercive in their nature, violent in their means, or anti-Semitic in their intent.

It is our belief that Jews and Christians are coworkers and companion pilgrims who have made the God of Israel known throughout the world. Through common service and action, we jointly proclaim the God we know. Together through study and prayer, we can learn how the God we believe to be the same God speaks and calls us continually into closer relationship with one another, as well as with God.

6. As Christians, we are called into dialogue with our Jewish neighbors.

Christians and Jews hold a great deal of Scripture, history, and culture in common. And yet, we also share

2,000 painful years of anti-Semitism and the persecution of Jews by Christians. These two apparently discordant facts move Christians to seek common experiences with Jews, and especially to invite them into dialogue to explore the meaning of our kinship and our differences. Our intention is to learn about the faith of one another and to build bridges of understanding.

While for Christians, dialogue will always include testimony to God's saving acts in Jesus Christ, it will include in equal measure listening to and respecting the understanding of Jews as they strive to live in obedience and faithfulness to God and as they understand the conditions of their faith.

Productive interfaith dialogue requires focused, sustained conversation based on willingness to recognize and probe genuine differences while also seeking that which is held in common. We are called to openness so that we may learn how God is speaking through our dialogue partners. As stated in the World Council of Churches' "Guidelines on Dialogue": "One of the functions of dialogue is to allow participants to describe and witness to their faith on their own terms. . . . Participants seek to hear each other in order to better understand each other's faith, hopes, insights, and concerns."² Fruitful and respectful dialogue is centered in a mutual spirit of humility, trust, openness to new understanding, and commitment to reconciliation and the healing of the painful wounds of our history.

7. As followers of Jesus Christ, we deeply repent of the complicity of the church and the participation of many Christians in the long history of persecution of the Jewish people.

The Christian church has a profound obligation to correct historical and theological teachings that have led to false and pejorative perceptions of Judaism and contributed to persecution and hatred of Jews. It is our responsibility as Christians to oppose anti-Semitism whenever and wherever it occurs.

We recognize with profound sorrow that repeatedly and often in the last 2,000 years, the worship, preaching, and teaching of the Christian church has allowed and sometimes even incited and directed persecution against Jews. The church today carries grave responsibility to counter the evil done by Christians to Jews in the Crusades, the Inquisition, the pogroms, and the Holocaust carried out often in the name of Jesus Christ.

Historically and today, both the selective use and the misuse of Scripture have fostered negative attitudes toward and actions against Jews. Use of New Testament passages that blame "the Jews" for the crucifixion of Jesus have throughout history been the basis of many acts of discrimination against Jews, frequently involving physical violence. There is no doubt that traditional and often officially sanctioned and promulgated Christian teachings, including the uncritical use of anti-Jewish New Testament writings, have caused untold misery and form the basis of modern anti-Semitism.

Misinterpretations and misunderstanding of historical and contemporary Judaism continue, including the mistaken belief that Judaism is a religion solely of law and judgment while Christianity is a religion of love and grace. The characterizations of God in the Hebrew Bible (called the Old Testament by Christians) are rich and diverse; strong images of a caring, compassionate, and loving deity are dominant for Jews as well as for Christians. Further, there are parallels between New Testament Christian understandings of the "spirit of the law" and contemporaneous theological developments in first-century Jewish theology.

The church has an obligation to correct erroneous and harmful past teachings and to ensure that the use of Scripture, as well as the preparation, selection, and use of liturgical and educational resources, does not perpetuate misleading interpretations and misunderstanding of Judaism.

Finally, it is essential for Christians to oppose forcefully anti-Jewish acts and rhetoric that persist in the present time in many places. We must be zealous in challenging overt and subtle anti-Semitic stereotypes and bigoted attitudes that ultimately made the Holocaust possible, and which stubbornly and insidiously continue today. These lingering patterns are a call to Christians for ever-new educational efforts and continued vigilance, so that we, remembering and honoring the cries of the tortured and the dead, can claim with Jews around the world to be faithful to the post-Holocaust cry of "Never Again."

8. As Christians, we share a call with Jews to work for justice, compassion, and peace in the world in anticipation of the fulfillment of God's reign.

Together, Jews and Christians honor the commandment to love God with all our heart, soul, and might. It is our task to join in common opposition to those forces—nation, race, power, money—that clamor for ultimate allegiance. Together, we honor the commandment to love neighbor as self. It is our task to work in common for those things that are part of God's work of reconciliation. Together, we affirm the sacredness of all persons and the obligation of stewardship for all God has created.

Jews still await the messianic reign of God foretold by the prophets. Christians proclaim the good news that in Jesus Christ, "the kingdom of God is at hand"; yet we, as Christians, also wait in hope for the consummation of God's redemptive work. Together, Jews and Christians long for and anticipate the fulfillment of God's reign. Together, we are "partners in waiting." In our waiting, we are called to witness and to work for God's reign together.

9. As United Methodist Christians, we are deeply affected by the anguish and suffering that continue for many people who live in the Middle East region that includes modern Israel.

We commit ourselves through prayer and advocacy to bring about justice and peace for those of every faith.

Within The United Methodist Church, we struggle with our understanding of the complexity and the painfulness of the controversies in which Christians, Jews, and Muslims are involved in the Middle East. The issues include disputed political questions of sovereignty and control, and concerns over human rights and justice. We recognize the theological significance of the Holy Land as central to the worship, historical traditions, hope, and identity of the Jewish people. We are mindful of this land's historic and contemporary importance for Christians and Muslims. We are committed to the security, safety, and well-being of Jews and Palestinians in the Middle East, to respect for the legitimacy of the state of Israel, to justice and sovereignty for the Palestinian people, and peace for all who live in the region.

As we join with others of many religious communities in wrestling with these issues and searching for solutions, we seek to work together with other Christians, Jews, and Muslims to honor the religious significance of this land and to bring about healthy, sustainable life, justice, and peace.

Conclusion

Using the foregoing foundation and principles, The United Methodist Church encourages dialogue with Jews at all levels of the church, including and especially local congregations. It is also hoped that there will be many other concrete expressions of Jewish-Christian relationships, such as participating in special occasions of interfaith observance, and joint acts of common service and programs of social transformation. These offer great opportunity to Christians and Jews to build relationships and together work for justice and peace (shalom) in our communities and in the world, serving humanity as God intends.

1. "The Churches and the Jewish People, Towards a New Understanding," adopted at Sigtuna, Sweden, by the Consultation on the Church and the Jewish People, sponsored by the World Council of Churches, 1988.

2. Bridge in Hope, Jewish-Christian Dialogue, adopted by the General Conference of The United Methodist Church, 1972.

3. The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, 2012, Doctrinal Standards, Our Theological Task; page 88

4. Ibid

5. "The Churches and the Jewish people . . ."

6. "Ecumenical Considerations on Jewish-Christian Dialogue, 1993." World Council of Churches, paragraph 1.6.

7. "Guidelines on Dialogue," adopted at London Colney, England, by the Consultation on the Church and the Jewish People of the Unit on Dialogue and People of Living Faiths and Ideologies, World Council of Churches, 1981, paragraph 3.4.

Two previous resolutions blended together:

ADOPTED 1996

READOPTED 2004

RESOLUTION #3147, 2008 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #88, 2004 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #78, 2000 Book of Resolutions

ADOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #3146, 2012 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTIONn #3148, 2008 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶ 162.

Rationale:

Previous resolutions which have expired have been blended together to form this highly relevant Resolution.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60230-MH-R9999-G; McKinney, Sarah E.H. - Summerfield, NC, USA for Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships - Council of Bishops.

Resolution to Affirm and Implement a Full Communion Relationship between with the Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces) and The UMC

Add a new Resolution:

Resolution to Affirm and Implement a Full Communion Relationship between with the Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces) and The United Methodist Church

The Moravian Church (Northern & Southern Provinces) and The United Methodist Church agree that in their legislative bodies there shall be one vote to accept or reject, without separate amendment, the resolution that follows. If adopted by these churches, each church agrees to take the following measures to establish a relationship of full communion:

WHEREAS, Jesus Christ calls us to unity so that the world may believe; and

WHEREAS, The Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces) and The United Methodist Church find that we have deep historic ties and many parallels in the life and ministries of our two churches, and that we are united in the wish to deepen our witness and work together for the sharing of the love of Christ in the world and its communities:

Therefore, be it resolved, that The Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces) and The United Methodist Church hereby:

1. Affirm that a relationship of full communion exists between our churches and that we commit ourselves to working actively and faithfully together.

2. For the purposes of this relationship, full communion is understood to entail

2.1. recognizing and valuing the diverse gifts present in each church;

2.2. respecting each other as part of the one holy catholic and apostolic church as affirmed in the Apostles' Creed and the Nicene Creed;

2.3. committing each church to cooperate in common ministries of evangelism, witness, and service;

2.4. recognizing the validity of each other's sacramental life and ministerial orders, allowing for the transfer of membership between churches as within each church and the orderly exchange of clergy (subject to the regulations of church order and practice of each church); and

2.5. committing each church to continue to work for the unity of the church, recognizing that this relationship of full communion is but a step toward the unity to which we are called.

3. To facilitate growing into this relationship of full communion, the two churches appoint a coordinating committee consisting of no fewer than three representatives each (that is, three representatives of The United Methodist Church and three representatives of the Moravian Church (Northern and Southern Provinces)). This committee shall make policy recommendations to the two churches to aid in the reception of the relationship and shall explore opportunities for common ministries of evangelism, witness, and service. Both The United Methodist Church and the Moravian Church, Northern and Southern Provinces, commit to urging Central Conferences of The United Methodist Church and other provinces of the Unitas Fratrum to explore formal relationships of full communion, especially in Africa and Europe, where these do not already exist.

This agreement will take effect upon an affirmative vote by the General Conference and concurring votes of approval by the synods of the Northern and Southern Provinces of the Moravian Church.

See Social Principles, ¶ 162.

Rationale:

This full communion relationship with the Moravian Church, Northern and Southern Provinces, is the affirmation of a longstanding relationship between Methodist and Moravian traditions.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60350-MH-R9999-G; Cape, Kim - Nashville, TN, USA for General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

Collegiate Ministry as Priority of the Church

Add New Resolution Collegiate Ministry as Priority of the Church.

WHEREAS, collegiate ministry is a term that fully includes campus ministries (Wesley Foundations and the like), college/university chaplains, ecumenical ministries, and church-based ministry with college students; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministry is the missional expression of The UMC on the college and university campuses of the world; and

WHEREAS, these campuses, many of them cities unto themselves, require their own unique faith communities; and

WHEREAS, those communities require called, gifted, trained, equipped, and supported collegiate ministers, who order the life of these unique ministries; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministries actively offer the good news of Jesus Christ and the opportunity to belong to an authentic Christian community on every university and college campus; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministries provide substantive opportunities for students to become growing, serving, learning, and leading disciples of Jesus Christ in the United Methodist tradition; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministries are communities that are intentionally and radically open, welcoming, and inclusive to all people, seeking to be communities that authentically reflect the diversity and unity of the kingdom of God; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministries help all students hear God's call to serve and lead in the church and world, including both lay vocations and ordained ministry in the Church; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministries are incubators for new and effective ways for doing ministry as United Methodists, particularly with young adults; and

WHEREAS, collegiate ministries embody hope for the future of The United Methodist Church, as we raise up a new generation of disciples of Jesus Christ, for the transformation of the world;

Therefore be it resolved, that every annual conference shall make collegiate ministry a priority; the bishops and appointive cabinets take seriously the recruitment, appointment, and certification of missionally minded, called, gifted, trained, equipped, and supported collegiate ministers; and conferences develop necessary funding to ensure the effectiveness of these ministries;

And be it further resolved, that every annual conference have a fully functioning Board of Higher Education and Collegiate Ministry (§ 634) that shall fulfill its role in supporting, funding, and evaluating the effectiveness of each collegiate ministry.

See Social Principles, §§ 161 and 162.

R9999. [For Group Discernment Process (p. 1187)]

Petition Number: 60866-MH-R9999-G; Brooks, Lonnie D. - Anchorage, AK, USA.

Same Sex Marriage in United Methodist Churches

Insert into the Book of Resolutions a new resolution as follows:

ON DEALING WITH SAME SEX MARRIAGE IN UNITED METHODIST CHURCHES

WHEREAS, The Supreme Court of the United States of America has decided that same-sex marriages are to be permitted in all states and territories of the United States, and

WHEREAS, in officiating at weddings in the United States United Methodist clergy are serving in a dual role as agents of the state as well as representative ministers of the Church, and

WHEREAS, there will be instances in which a United Methodist cleric feels compelled by his or her conscientious commitment to principles of the gospel either to offer to officiate at such a wedding or to decline to do so, and

WHEREAS, in some of those instances the local church in which the cleric serves will not be in unanimous support of the position of the pastor, and

WHEREAS, authority in The United Methodist Church rests primarily with each pastor to decide which wedding to perform or not to perform, as provided in § 340.2.a)(3)(a) of the 2012 Book of Discipline, which authority is neither compromised nor conditioned by the legal authority of any jurisdiction in the United States, including the Supreme Court (§ 2506.1), and

WHEREAS, each pastor serves each United Methodist church under the appointment of a bishop (§ 54), and

WHEREAS, the appointing bishop is required to enter into consultation with the pastor proposed for appointment and with the charge to which he or she is proposed to be appointed, which consultation is not merely notification (§ 426);

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church encourages each United Methodist church and the clergy members who serve those churches to work together to resolve through holy conferencing any differences of opinion about whether same sex weddings or holy union ceremonies ought to be conducted in the church. Holy conferencing is to be understood as it has been described by Bishop Sally Dyck in her seminal work, Eight Principles of Holy Conferencing: A Study Guide for Churches and Groups (https://www.minnesotaumc.org/assets/uploads/documents/Holy_Conferencing_Study_Guide_2012.pdf, accessed on 08Jun15), and

Be it further resolved, that The United Methodist Church urges bishops and their cabinets to work with local church staff/parish relations committees so that together in the appointment process they may take into account the concerns of the served community, the parish, and the pastors in relationship to same-sex weddings and holy union ceremonies as is required for all other issues with which we must deal as members of the human family of God in matching the gifts, grace, and calling of the pastor to the needs, culture, and condition of the charge.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60926-MH-R9999-G; Lomperis, John S.A. - Valparaiso, IN, USA.

Confronting Twenty-First-Century Anti-Semitism

Add a new resolution to the Book of Resolutions as follows:

Confronting Twenty-First-Century Anti-Semitism

Anti-Semitism—the targeting persons of Jewish faith and/or heritage for hatred, violence, or mistreatment—is a continuing social evil that has been called one of the oldest forms of group hatred.

The United Methodist Church strongly opposes anti-Semitism and any other form of racism. In Resolution #3125: Holocaust Memorial Day (Yom HaShoah) and Resolution #3146: Strengthening Bridges in the 2012 Book of Resolutions, our Church has expressed its general goodwill toward our Jewish friends and neighbors.

Upsetting developments in recent years make it important for The United Methodist Church to again speak out at this time.

Theological Foundation

The United Methodist Church emphatically rejects anti-Semitism and racism. At the basis of this stance is the truth that all women and men are lovingly created in the very image of God (Genesis 1:26-27), and that all people share a common, God-given ancestry and humanity (Acts 17:26). As Christians, we recognize the inescapable Jewish foundations of our faith, and affirm the continuing importance of the Hebrew Scriptures for our Church.

We also recognize with profound sadness the tragic history over the centuries of Christian violence, hatred, and mistreatment directed against Jewish people, and our ongoing collective responsibility to rebuild bridges of mutual trust, peace, and understanding with the Jewish community today.

Disturbing Developments

The United Methodist Church acknowledges and views with alarm outrageous incidents and disturbing trends of anti-Semitism in recent years.

In November 2014, speakers at a Berlin, Germany gathering of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) reported that anti-Semitism is globally increasing, with spikes seen at times of greater conflict and tension in the Middle East. A recent survey conducted by the EU Fundamental Rights agency found that 25 percent of Jewish respondents in eight countries had been victims of an anti-Semitic incident within the past year (Lisa Palmieri-Billig, "OSCE Conference in Berlin announces increase in anti-Semitism," Vatican Insider, 17 November 2014; available from: <<http://vaticaninsider.lastampa.it/en/world-news/detail/articolo/osce-berlino-berlin-berlin-37555/>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

The April cover story of the respected American magazine, The Atlantic, provocatively asked "Is It Time for the Jews to Leave Europe?" citing anti-Semitic bullying and street harassment in parts of England, France, Sweden, and Hungary, widespread anti-Semitic sentiment in Greece, statistics showing Jews disproportionately being the victims of racism-driven assaults in multiple European countries, and open talk and action among Jewish people in various parts of Europe toward leaving the continent (Jeffrey Goldberg, "Is It Time for the Jews to Leave Europe?" The Atlantic, April 2015; available from: <<http://www.theatlantic.com/magazine/archive/2015/04/is-it-time-for-the-jews-to-leave-europe/386279/>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

Among the recent episodes of targeting Jewish people and institutions in Europe:

• On March 19, 2012, in Toulouse, France, a gunman murdered three children and a teacher at a Jewish School (David Chazan, "Toulouse school shootings traumatise French Jews," BBC News, 22 March 2012; available from:

<<http://www.bbc.com/news/world-europe-17456582>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

• On May 24, 2014, a gunman opened fire in the Brussels Jewish Museum in Belgium, murdering four people, including an Israeli couple (Julia Fioretti, "Brussels Jewish Museum opens its doors four months after shooting," Reuters, 14 September 2014; available from: <<http://www.reuters.com/article/2014/09/14/us-belgium-shooting-museum-idUSKBN0H90DP20140914>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

• In France, anti-Semitic incidents in the summer of 2014 included the burning of a kosher grocery and a Jewish-owned pharmacy in Sarcelles, as well as a Paris synagogue being besieged by a mob that was heard chanting "Death to Jews" (Celestine Bohlen, "Gaza Conflict Seen as Providing Cover for Anti-Semitic Attacks in France," The New York Times, 28 July 2014; available from: <http://www.nytimes.com/2014/07/29/world/europe/gaza-conflict-seen-sparking-anti-semitic-attacks-in-france.html?_r=0>; accessed 13 October 2015).

• Rallies critical of Israel in the summer of 2014 in Germany and elsewhere featured such hateful slogans as "Death to Jews," and "Hamas, Hamas, Jews to the Gas" (Jeffrey Goldberg, "Does Human Rights Watch Understand the Nature of Prejudice?" The Atlantic, 21 September 2014; available from <<http://www.theatlantic.com/international/archive/2014/09/does-human-rights-watches-kenneth-roth-understand-the-nature-of-prejudice/380556/>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

• In November 2014, a city council member affiliated with the "Die Rechte" political party, which has been described as neo-Nazi, requested a census and a list of the home addresses of all Jews in Dortmund, Germany, which for many eerily echoed that country's Nazi past (Allan Hall, "Nazis demand Jews' addresses: Extreme political party in Germany evoke chilling memories of people-hunting in 1930s," Daily Mail, 14 November 2014; available from: <<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2835488/Nazis-demand-Jews-addresses-Extreme-political-party-Germany-evoke-chilling-memories-people-hunting-1930s.html>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

• On January 9, 2015, a gunman attacked a kosher supermarket in Paris, France taking hostages, four of whom were ultimately killed (Vivienne Walt, "Paris Jews Reel After Deadly Kosher-Supermarket Attack," Time, 11 January 2015; available from: <<http://time.com/3663060/paris-terror-attack-jews-kosher-supermarket-siege/>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

• In Denmark, a gunman went on a February 14-15, 2015 rampage that wounded several people and killed two, including a security guard at a Copenhagen synagogue (Griff Witte and Karla Adam, "Danish attacks echo France,” Washington Post, 16 February 2015; available from: <https://www.washingtonpost.com/world/danish-police-kill-copenhagen-shooting-suspect/2015/02/15/8bed7a70-b50a-11e4-9423-f3d0a1e-c335c_story.html>; accessed 13 October 2015).

- Ugly anti-Semitic incidents have erupted around European professional soccer matches, some of which were caught on video, including some fans chanting such hateful slogans as “Hamas, Hamas, Jews to the gas” and “Kill, Kill the Jews” (Michael E. Miller, “Nazi chants at Dutch soccer game expose an ugly blot on ‘the beautiful game,’” Washington Post, 10 April 2015; available from: <<http://www.washingtonpost.com/news/morning-mix/wp/2015/04/10/nazi-chants-at-dutch-soccer-game-expose-an-ugly-blot-on-the-beautiful-game/>>; accessed 13 October 2015);

But the problem is not limited to Europe.

In the United States, anti-Semitism is not nearly as much of a “thing of the past” as many Americans would like to believe. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand (D-New York) and the American Jewish Committee hosted a 2015 Capitol Hill briefing decrying “The Rise of Anti-Semitism in the United States and on College Campuses,” at which speakers cited Federal Bureau of Investigation statistics showing that over 60 percent of victims of crimes driven by religious hatred were Jewish (“Senator Gillibrand, AJC Hold Congressional Briefing on Rising Anti-Semitism.; American Jewish Committee, 18 June 2015; available from: <<http://www.ajc.org/site/apps/nlnet/content3.aspx?c=7oJILSPwFfJSG&b=9286319&ct=14736621&no toc=1>>; accessed 13 October 2015). The Anti-Defamation League reported that anti-Semitic incidents (assault, vandalism, and harassment) increased by 21 percent in the United States in the year 2014 (“Audit: In 2014 Anti-Semitic Incidents Rose 21 Percent Across The U.S. In A ‘Particularly Violent Year for Jews,’” Anti-Defamation League, 30 March 2015; available from <<http://www.adl.org/press-center/press-releases/anti-semitism-usa/adl-audit-in-2014-anti-semitic-incident.html#.Vh2f8yt0uT8>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

In South Africa, in early 2015, Durban University of Technology’s Students Representative Council formally called for the expulsion of, in words attributed to its secretary, “Jewish students, especially those who do not support the Palestinian struggle”—a call thankfully rejected by the university administration (Mpathi Nxumalo, “DUT Jewish call outrage,” Daily News [Durban, South Africa], 11 February 2015; available from: <<http://www.iol.co.za/dailynews/news/dut-jewish-call-outrage-1.1816334>>; accessed 13 October 2015).

In many majority-Muslim nations, Jews and other minorities face systemic discrimination and exclusion.

A 2014 survey by the Anti-Defamation League of 100 nations, in which 85.9 percent of the world’s population lives, found the Middle East and North Africa to be the world region with by far the widest prevalence of negative attitudes toward Jewish people, while finding much anti-Semitism in every major region of the globe (“ADL Global 100: An Index of Anti-Semitism,” Anti-Defamation League; available from: <<http://global100.adl.org/public/ADL-Global-100-Executive-Summary.pdf>>; accessed 13 October 2015). On its website, www.palwatch.org <<http://www.palwatch.org>>, Palestinian Media Watch—whose work has been publicly appreciated by people of diverse political beliefs, including left-leaning U.S. political leader and prominent United Methodist laywoman Hillary Clinton (“What They’re Saying About Us: Senator Hillary Clinton and PMW in joint press conference introducing report on Palestinian schoolbooks,” Palestinian Media Watch, 8 February 2007; available from: <http://www.palwatch.org/main.aspx?fi=92&doc_id=101>; accessed 13 October 2015)—has documented numerous number of examples of Palestinian media sources going far beyond criticism of the Israeli government to very broadly direct hatred, dehumanization, and lethal violence against Jews.

The above represents a far from comprehensive overview of the hatred, violence, and marginalization directed against Jewish persons around the world today.

Relation to Middle East Conflict

It is important to be careful in how we talk about the relationship of anti-Semitism to the Arab-Israeli conflict. In seeking to understand root causes of any hatred or violence, we must take care to avoid blaming the victim or rationalizing the wrong decisions of perpetrators. We also reject oversimplifying rhetoric that calls all criticisms of actions of the Israeli government anti-Semitic. The Israeli government, like any other government in the world, is led by fallible human beings who need prophetic challenge at times. But it would also be morally irresponsible and intellectually dishonest to ignore the fact that some criticism of and opposition to Israel is truly anti-Semitic.

We believe it is helpful to consider the following as actions and rhetoric that cross the line from criticisms of Israeli government actions that are within the realm of legitimate disagreement to immoral anti-Semitism:

- Careless echoing of historic anti-Semitic rhetoric, stereotypes, or conspiracy theories in criticisms of Israelis;
- Singling out Israel, the world’s lone Jewish state, for condemnation, isolation, punishment, or de-legitimization, according to a harsher standard than is used with other nations;
- Legitimizing, approving, or participating in indiscriminate violence against Jews and/or Israelis;

• Callous dismissal of Israeli concerns about the violence that claims and threatens Jewish lives; or

• Any sort of “collective punishment” or collective blame against all Jews or all Israelis.

The United Methodist Church’s Response

In the face of such threats and attacks against our Jewish friends and neighbors, The United Methodist Church must not be silent. We call on our members to:

1. Express their sincere, deep solidarity to their Jewish friends and neighbors in the face of the evil of anti-Semitism;

2. Find and support the efforts of others in combating anti-Semitism in and beyond their communities.

3. Share copies of this resolution with members of their local churches.

We further call on the General Board of Church and Society, the General Board of Global Ministries, and the Office of Christian Unity and Inter-Religious Relationships to seek out appropriate opportunities to:

1. Support efforts of others who are actively fighting anti-Semitism around the world;

2. Promote education about the Holocaust (including encouraging visits to Holocaust museums), about Christi-anity’s sad history of mistreating Jewish people, and about the ongoing problem of anti-Semitism today;

3. Respectfully challenge our ecumenical partners and others with whom we have cooperated if and when they have crossed a line in their political advocacy related to Middle East issues;

4. Share copies of this resolution with leading, representative Jewish organizations, and invite their advice for how The United Methodist Church can be a better ally against anti-Semitism.

Finally, we call on governments around the world to be proactive in working against anti-Semitism, and particularly to protect people from any threat of hateful violence.

Rationale:

At a time when much of the Jewish community is feeling threatened and under attack, it is important for our Church to speak out against these disturbing new developments and to assure our Jewish friends and neighbors that we stand strongly in solidarity with them against all anti-Semitism.

Petitions Identified for the Proposed Group Discernment Process

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Volume 2

Nashville, Tennessee

These petitions have been identified for the Group Discernment Process under proposed Rule 44 by the Commission on the General Conference (ADCA Volume 1, pages 93-95). They also appear earlier in the ADCA among the petitions for their respective legislative committees, which would act on them if they were not identified for the Group Discernment Process (see ADCA Volume 2, Sections 1 and 2). They are printed here as a group in the order in which they occur earlier in the ADCA.

Proposed Amendments to the Book of Discipline, Resolutions, and Non-Disciplinary Legislation

¶165.D.

Petition Number: 60795-CA-¶165.D-G; Craig, J. Ann - New Paltz, NY, USA.

Justice and Law

Insert sub-paragraph in ¶165.D “Justice and Law” after the first sub-paragraph and before the sub-paragraph beginning “Believing that international justice requires . . . “:

As lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people have worked for civil liberties around the world, awareness of persecution is growing. In more than 70 countries, homosexuality is punishable by prison or execution. Murders of transgender people in the United States are at an all-time high. All United Methodist general board and agencies, central conferences, annual conferences, and local churches are urged to speak out to stop violence against lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people, and to work against laws that would silence, imprison, or execute people based on sexual orientation or gender identity, or based on their support of the rights and human dignity of sexual minorities.

Rationale:

In Acts 8:26-40, the Ethiopian eunuch was first to convert to Christianity. In Matthew 19:12, Jesus includes eunuchs in the kingdom. Today, in 70 countries, the Ethiopian eunuch could be jailed based on perceived sexual orientation or gender identity. Churches must defend the lives of LGBT persons like they are . . .

R5062.

Petition Number: 60895-CA-R5062-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Military Service Regardless of Sexual Orientation

Readopt Resolution 5062 with the following deletions:

...
~~The United States of America, a nation built on equal rights, presently denies the right of professing homosexuals to actively serve their country, forcing men and women who are gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgender to assume a “don’t ask, don’t tell” position when enlisting into military service. This situation is discriminatory, unethical, and regrettable; therefore, we We affirm the stance that the US military service should not exclude persons from service solely on the basis of sexual orientation or gender identity.~~

Rationale:

In light of the end of “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” in the U.S. armed forces, reaffirming Resolution 5062 with these changes directs our prayerful instruction beyond the United States to all countries.

¶161.B.

Petition Number: 60783-CB-¶161.B-G; Cramer, Phil
- Nashville, TN, USA for Belmont UMC. 999 Similar Petitions

Definition of Marriage

Amend ¶ 161.B of the 2012 Book of Discipline as follows:

¶ 161 . . .

B) Marriage—We affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between two persons, who have traditionally been a man and a woman. We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for different sexes ~~women than for men~~ in marriage. ~~We support laws in civil society that define marriage as the union of one man and one woman.~~

Rationale:

reference to marriage as being between a man and a woman should be deleted since it implies that those who are committed to other forms of a monogamous marriage are excluded because of their status and are not affirmed as persons of sacred worth.

¶161.B.

Petition Number: 60784-CB-¶161.B-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table. Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan Annual Conference. Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference. 7 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Marriage

Amend ¶ 161.B as follows:

B) Marriage—We affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between two people who are married to each other ~~a man and a woman~~. We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, which is traditionally between one man and one woman, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage. We support laws in civil society that define marriage as the union of one man and one woman.

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶161.B.

Petition Number: 60785-CB-¶161.B-G; Nakanishi, Lianne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 73 Similar Petitions

Marriage

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 161 B as follows:

We affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between two persons ~~a man and a woman~~. We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men in marriage. We support laws in civil society that define marriage as a union of two persons. ~~one man and one woman~~.

Rationale:

U.S. Supreme Court declared marriage equality legal in all 50 States. UM same-sex couples are driven from the church as they turn to other churches or secular ceremonies in local courthouses. All persons, regardless of age, gender, sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured.

¶161.B.

Petition Number: 60786-CB-¶161.B-G; Neely, Cindy - Lenexa, KS, USA. 15 Similar Petitions

Equality in Marriage

Amend ¶161.B as follows:

Marriage—We affirm the sanctity of the marriage covenant that is expressed in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity between two persons ~~a man and a woman~~. We believe that God’s blessing rests upon such marriage, whether or not there are children of the union. We affirm the equality and mutual responsibility of both partners within the marriage covenant, and ~~We reject social norms that assume different standards for women than for men. in marriage.~~ We support laws in civil society that define marriage as a union of two persons. ~~one man and one woman~~.

Rationale:

The sanctity of marriage is rooted in love, mutual support, personal commitment, and shared fidelity. Sanctity of marriage is in no way tied to the sex of the marriage partners. All committed couples should have equal access to services of Christian marriage officiated by their pastors, held in their sanctuaries.

¶161.E.

Petition Number: 60793-CB-¶161.E-G; Tooley, Mark - Alexandria, VA, USA.

Gender

Add to the end of ¶ 161.E:

We affirm God's gift of male and female and grieve the anguish leading to gender confusion and attempts at gender change. Loving and godly counsel should emphasize the sacredness of the human body.

¶161.E.

Petition Number: 60882-CB-¶161.E-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Sexual Orientation

Amend ¶ 161.E with the addition of the indicated text:

. . . We understand our gender diversity and sexual orientation to be a gift from God, intended to add to the rich variety of human experience and perspective; and we guard against attitudes and traditions that would use this good gift to leave members of one sex more vulnerable in relationships than members of another.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60818-CB-¶161.F-G; Messick, Debbie - Oldhams, VA, USA for Ebenezer UMC Council - Oldhams, VA. 71 Similar Petitions

Human Sexuality

Retain the language in ¶ 161.F as it is currently written in the Book of Discipline 2012.

Rationale:

We strongly support the current statement in our Discipline as it is in agreement with God's Scriptures, i.e., Leviticus 18:22, Deuteronomy 4:2, Hebrews 10:26. We believe in following all of God's word and strongly oppose making changes to accommodate the increasingly liberal views in society today.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60819-CB-¶161.F-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 20 Similar Petitions

Human Sexuality

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 161.F as follows:

We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, ~~or~~ sexual orientation, or gender identity are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

A fully welcoming UMC is a testament to God's gift of persons of all sexual orientations and gender identities allowing all UM's to offer prayers, presence, gifts, service, witness to further Christ's mission. We welcome, know, love one another as Christ has accepted us, so God may be glorified.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60820-CB-¶161.F-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table.

Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan Annual Conference. 9 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F as follows:

¶ 161.F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God’s good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. The United Methodist Church ~~historically has not condoned~~ ~~does not condone~~ the practice of homosexuality and ~~has considered~~ ~~considers~~ this practice incompatible with Christian teaching. We affirm that God’s grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60821-CB-¶161.F-G; Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. McVicker, Elizabeth - Cheyenne, WY, USA for Rocky Mountain Annual Conference. 73 Similar Petitions

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161 F of the Book of Discipline as follows:

¶161 F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God’s good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God’s grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church has historically welcomed into membership “all persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition” per Article IV of the Constitution.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60822-CB-¶161.F-G; DiPaulo, Joseph - Radnor, PA, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend the second paragraph of ¶ 161.F with an addition as follows:

...

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage. God's design for human sexuality is grounded in creation itself. This is well expressed in the UM marriage ritual: "The covenant of marriage was established by God, who created us male and female for each other." Scripture also depicts the marriage covenant as representing the relationship between Christ and "his bride," the church.

Rationale:

These changes reflect historic biblical teaching as affirmed by the ongoing tradition of the worldwide Christian Church for 2,000 years and provides a biblical foundation in the orders of creation for the "incompatibility" clause of the Discipline.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60823-CB-¶161.F-G; Lawrence, Jan - Oakton, VA, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F :

¶ 161.F Human Sexuality

We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only within the covenant of monogamous ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. People of all sexual orienta-

tions and gender identities are members of The United Methodist Church. We urge our churches to welcome them equally. We recognize the rights of families created by same-gender marriage as equal to the rights of all other families. We urge our churches to recognize the same-gender families who attend as equal to other families in the church and to be in ministry with and to those families. Children and youth from those families should be treated no differently than children and youth from heterosexual families. We encourage churches in conferences where homosexuality is a criminal offense to offer support to individuals and families impacted by those laws and to stand in opposition to persecution of individuals or those who love them. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

The definition of family has evolved over the history of humankind. Our role as the church is to nurture and support those families, even when some struggle to accept the evolving definition. This version deletes all language condemning homosexuality, creating equality for all families and individuals within the Methodist

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60824-CB-¶161.F-G; Elrod, Laura - Little Rock, AR, USA for First UMC of Little Rock, AR.

Human Sexuality

Amend the Book of Discipline, 2012 ¶ 161.F Human Sexuality as follows:

BOD 2012 ¶ 161.F Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only within the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, ~~or~~ gender identity are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ Though faithful United Methodists remain in disagreement regarding our understanding of homosexuality, we affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

Disagreements on human sexuality among United Methodists will continue as discussions continue. Removal of this inflammatory language will help facilitate removal of animus during holy conferencing and acknowledge that we "agree to disagree."

The current statement no longer reflects the beliefs of all United Methodists.

Since adoption of the current . . .

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60825-CB-¶161.F-G; Cramer, Phil - Nashville, TN, USA for Belmont UMC. 999 Similar Petitions

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F of the 2012 Book of Discipline as follows:

¶ 161

F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage, which has traditionally been between a man and a woman

...

Rationale:

Reference to "heterosexual" marriage should be deleted since it implies that persons committed to other forms of a monogamous marriage are excluded because of their status and are not affirmed as persons of sacred worth.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60826-CB-¶161.F-G; Hay, Kari S. - Oslo, Norway for Bjoelsen UMC Council. 2 Similar Petitions

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F) Human sexuality:

We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons.

We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

~~Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage.~~ We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

This change will allow, not force, official ceremonies which bless and celebrate homosexual unions. It will allow clergy to follow their theological conviction, faith, and conscience regarding the concept of love and righteousness for all human beings.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60827-CB-¶161.F-G; Miles, Rebekah L. - Dallas, TX, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F as follows:

We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, most Christian churches through history have affirmed sexual relations are affirmed only within the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage. A growing number of Christians affirm both monogamous heterosexual and monogamous same-sex marriage. We recognize that many faithful Christians disagree, and we commit to disagree with respect and love.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

The current language is unnecessarily harsh and narrow. It hinders our mission to make disciples for the transformation of the world and makes us sound like ogres. When the language was passed, a small fraction of the U.S. population supported same-sex marriage. Now support is pushing 60 percent including among Christians.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60828-CB-¶161.F-G; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference.

Human Sexuality

Amend the third paragraph of ¶ 161.F as follows:

...

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ While a significant majority of United Methodists continue to hold the long-standing belief that homosexual practice is incompatible with Christian teaching, we acknowledge and respect differences of opinion of human sexuality. We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

Rationale:

Since 1972 The United Methodist Church has taken increasingly firmer positions opposing non-heterosexual orientations. Attempting to make all United Methodists conform to traditional beliefs has not decreased denominational tension. This petition attempts to relocate decision making to the appropriate level, i.e., annual conference and pastors, and ease tension.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60829-CB-¶161.F-G; Perez, Lyssette N. - Rockaway, NJ, USA for UMC of the Rockaways Reconciling Ministries Team.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F as follows:

F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms . . .

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need to ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ United Methodists are of two minds when it comes to the practice of homosexuality, even as we continue in dialogue with each other. Some sincerely believe that this practice is incompatible with Christian teaching. Others equally sincerely believe that homosexuals, as well as heterosexuals, are children of God who have access to God's good gift of sexuality to all persons subject to the same criteria of love, loyalty, and faithfulness. With no firm consensus on this matter, United Methodists are urged, regardless of their position, to continue this dialogue, approaching it in earnest prayer and rigorous study as we are called to do regarding the issue of sexuality itself. In those locations where same-sex marriage is legal, pastors and local churches are free to conduct such ceremonies consistent with their conscience and stated beliefs. No pastor can be forced to conduct such ceremonies against her or his conscience and beliefs. And no local church can be forced to conduct such ceremonies if against their stated beliefs as officially approved by the appropriate governing body. We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60830-CB-¶161.F-G; Girrell, Rebecca - Lebanon, NH, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 161.F as follows:

F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible, healthy, and consensual stewardship of this sacred gift.

[DELETE the remainder of paragraph 161.F.]

Rationale:

A principle should be a statement of what we believe (not what we deplore), and something on which The UMC can largely agree. Rather than debate the remainder of the paragraph, this names what we can affirm. Additions of consent and health sum up the major remaining concerns.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60831-CB-¶161.F-G; Watts, Bill - Uniontown, OH, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend the Book of Discipline, ¶ 161.F as follows:

F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all people persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all people persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All people persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all people persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All people persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all people persons.

Rationale:

The current position of The UMC is in direct opposition to a basic Wesleyan tenet that we are to "Do no harm" because individuals, families, and the Church have been hurt continuously by the current stance of The UMC. The current language in the Book of Discipline is judgmental, condemnatory . . .

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60832-CB-¶161.F-G; Hallenbeck, Ralph - Honaker, VA, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161 F of The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church as follows:

We affirm that sexuality . . . education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

As The United Methodist Church we reject any effort within the educational system to normalize sexual lifestyles that are in contrast to the traditional teachings of the Church. For this reason, no student of a public or private institution of learning, who is likewise a member or participant of a United Methodist congregation, should be compelled by an instructor or school administrator, to be instructed in the teaching of homosexuality as moral, natural, good, and just way of life and that no student be compelled to read any book or publication of any kind portraying homosexuality as a moral, natural, good, and just way of life. We support an educational policy that requires parental notification and consent prior to any unit, lesson, or presentation in which the issue of homosexuality is presented in the classroom.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth . . .

Rationale:

Whereas ¶ 613 and ¶ 806.9 of (2012) Discipline clearly state that The UMC funds shall not be used to promote the acceptance of homosexuality, it is therefore logically consistent that we would also disapprove of the indoctrination of students within the educational system. We ought to be concerned that children and youth . . .

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60833-CB-¶161.F-G; Sims, Mary Jo - Deer Park, MD, USA for Baltimore-Washington Annual Conference. Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference. Reaves, Susan - King George, VA, USA for Virginia Annual Conference. 999 Similar Petitions

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F as follows:

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all . . .

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60834-CB-¶161.F-G; Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference.

Human Sexuality

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 161.F as follows:

¶ 161.F) Human Sexuality—We affirm . . .

Although all . . .

We deplore . . .

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. The United Methodist Church ~~historically has not condoned~~ ~~does not condone~~ the practice of homosexuality and ~~has considered~~ ~~considers~~ this practice incompatible with Christian teaching. We affirm that God's grace is available to all . . .

Rationale:

This resolution supports a resolution that the Connectional Table intends to offer at the General Conference in 2016 as they work to provide a pragmatic alternative for the General Conference that reflects the importance of grace for our denomination and seeks to open up spaces where grace can abound. According . . .

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60835-CB-¶161.F-G; Hall, Russell - Tomball, TX, USA for Texas Annual Conference.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161 F:

~~We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift. Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage.~~

~~We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of~~ children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults:

~~We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching. We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.~~

Substitute the following:

By the design of God, human sexuality is a gift intended to bless the lives of all those who are created in the image of God. The gift of our sexuality, however, is one that requires careful stewardship and exercise. In our historic understanding of the Scriptures, sexual relations are to be affirmed only when practiced within the legal and spiritual covenant of a loving and monogamous marriage between one man and one woman.

We reject all expressions of sexual behavior that do not recognize the sacred worth of each individual, or that seek to exploit, abuse, objectify, or degrade others, particularly any who may be unable to defend themselves. We similarly grieve at the destructive impact of promiscuity, infidelity, bigamy, multiple or serial marriages, pornography, human trafficking, and all attempts to commercialize the gift of human sexuality within our societies.

We affirm that God's grace is available to all and we commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons. Toward that end, we similarly exhort those within our families and churches not to reject or condemn any individuals based upon their gender, sexual identity or orientation, and we call upon our congregations to be welcoming to every individual who stands in need of the grace of God.

Rationale:

The current statement from 1972 includes language some find abrasive, singling out one segment while failing to reflect broader issues around human sexuality. The revision maintains our position but is more gracious in tone. It recognizes the historic UMC stance, while acknowledging that people of faith may hold other views.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60836-CB-¶161.F-G; Lambrecht, Thomas A. - The Woodlands, TX, USA.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161 F as follows:

~~We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift. Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage.~~

~~We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.~~

~~We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching. We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.~~

By the design of God, human sexuality is a gift intended to bless the lives of all persons. The gift of our sexuality, however, is one that requires careful stewardship and exercise. In our historic understanding of the Scriptures, sexual relations are to be affirmed only when practiced within the legal and spiritual covenant of a loving and monogamous marriage between one man and one woman. Therefore, we believe that sex before marriage, adultery, polygamy, and same-sex relations are contrary to God's design and do not lead to human flourishing.

We reject all expressions of sexual behavior that do not recognize the sacred worth of each individual, or that seek to exploit, abuse, objectify, or degrade others, particularly any who may be unable to defend themselves. We similarly grieve at the destructive impact of promiscuity, infidelity, bigamy, multiple or serial marriages, pornography, human trafficking, and all attempts to commercialize the gift of human sexuality within our societies.

We affirm that God's grace is available to all and we commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons. Toward that end, we similarly exhort those within our families and churches not to reject or condemn any individuals based upon their gender, sexual identity or orientation, and we call upon our congregations to be welcoming to every individual, as all stand in need of the grace of God.

Rationale:

The current statement singles out one segment while failing to reflect broader issues around human sexuality. The revision maintains our position but is more gracious in tone. It clearly states the historic UMC stance, consistent with Scripture and tradition, while framing our teaching in a broader context.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60883-CB-¶161.F-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F by the deletion and addition of the indicated text:

We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift. We recognize that sexuality is a good gift of God, and we believe persons may be fully human only when that gift is acknowledged and affirmed by themselves, the Church, and society. We call all persons to disciplines that lead to the fulfillment of themselves, others, and society in the stewardship of this gift. Medical, theological, and humanistic disciplines should combine in a determined effort to understand human sexuality more completely.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60903-CB-¶161.F-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F as follows:

~~Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.~~

~~Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage.~~

~~We deplore all forms of commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.~~

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching. We affirm that God's grace is available to all.~~

Rationale:

Bring The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church into a greater consistency with God's love for us, as expressed in the Bible and experienced by our receipt of His grace; to help us in our struggle to love God with the completeness called for in the Bible;

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60944-CB-¶161.F-G; Howe, Margaret - New Paltz, NY, USA for New York Annual Conference.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F) Human Sexuality as follows:

~~We affirm that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.~~

~~Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, heterosexual marriage.~~

~~We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.~~

~~We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching. We affirm that God's grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to re-~~

~~ject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons. (See Judicial Council Decision 702.)~~

As a part of the body of Christ, we affirm all people are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. We affirm human sexuality as God's good gift to all persons. We affirm it as an intrinsic part of our personhood, and as a rich, complex element of human life.

Our faith tradition spells out the importance of a comprehensive approach to human sexuality that relies on an examination of scriptural principles, an application of the tenets of Wesleyan theology, and a prophetic witness to God's grace in a broken world. We believe that each of these sources mandates welcome to all God's people within the life of the church.

We call all people to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift of human sexuality. We reject all forms of commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of relationships merely for sexual gratification.

We commit our life together to the eradication of homophobia and heterosexism. We implore church members, clergy, and congregations not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members or their families and friends.

All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence and all forms of discrimination. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for effective protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children.

We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons. We are called to create safe spaces for people, young and old, to discuss concerns related to human sexuality and healthy human relationships. We support the provision of age-appropriate, comprehensive sexuality education for children, youths, and adults. All persons deserve the ministry of the Church in their struggle for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self.

Rationale:

We affirm all people are of sacred worth, created in the image of God. We affirm human sexuality as God's good gift to all persons. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

¶161.F.

Petition Number: 60977-CB-¶161.F-G; Sterling, Jeffrey D. - Allison Park, PA, USA for Northeast Jurisdiction Committee on Ministry.

Human Sexuality

Amend ¶ 161.F as marked below:

F) Human Sexuality—We affirm . . .

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms . . .

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God’s grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

The United Methodist Church has understood the “practice” of homosexuality as “incompatible with Christian teachings,” and has not permitted “self-avowed, practicing homosexuals” to be candidates for ministry, nor has it permitted its clergy to perform same-sex unions or churches to host these ceremonies.

During the same period, a significant portion of The United Methodist Church has questioned the official position of the church.

Because of this continuing theological and ethical conversation concerning homosexuality, The United Methodist Church allows freedom in the decisions of annual conferences regarding candidacy for ministry; freedom of clergy regarding the performance of same-sex unions; and freedom of local churches regarding hosting of same-sex marriages or unions.

Rationale:

This legislation enables ministry with LGBTQ persons, while allowing each clergy person, church, and annual conference freedom to abide by decisions of conscience.

¶161.F

Petition Number: 61041-CB-¶161.F-G; Wiley, David E. III - Allendale, NJ, USA for Greater New Jersey Annual Conference.

Human Sexuality

BOD 2012 ¶ 161.F) Human Sexuality—We affirm that sexuality is God’s good gift to all persons. We call everyone to responsible stewardship of this sacred gift.

Although all persons are sexual beings whether or not they are married, sexual relations are affirmed only with the covenant of monogamous, ~~heterosexual~~ marriage.

We deplore all forms of the commercialization, abuse, and exploitation of sex. We call for strict global enforcement of laws prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children and for adequate protection, guidance, and counseling for abused children. All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, ~~or~~ sexual orientation, or gender identity are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence. The Church should support the family in providing age-appropriate education regarding sexuality to children, youth, and adults.

We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God. All persons need the ministry of the Church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self. ~~The United Methodist Church does not condone the practice of homosexuality and considers this practice incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ We affirm that God’s grace is available to all. We will seek to live together in Christian community, welcoming, forgiving, and loving one another, as Christ has loved and accepted us. We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn anyone and commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons.

¶161.I

Petition Number: 60884-CB-¶161.I-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Sexual Harassment

Amend ¶ 161.I with the addition and deletion of the indicated text:

We believe human sexuality is God’s good gift. One abuse of this good gift is sexual harassment. We define sexual harassment as any unwanted sexual comment, advance, or demand, either verbal or physical, that is reasonably perceived by the recipient as demeaning, intimidating, or coercive. Sexual harassment must be understood as an exploitation of a power relationship rather than as an exclusively sexual issue. Sexual harassment includes, but is not limited to, the creation of a hostile or abusive working environment resulting from discrimination on the basis of gender, gender identity, or sexual orientation.

Contrary to the nurturing community, sexual harassment creates improper, coercive, and abusive conditions wherever it occurs in society. Sexual harassment undermines the social goal of equal opportunity and ~~the a~~ climate of mutual respect ~~between men and women~~. Unwanted sexual attention is wrong and discriminatory. Sexual harassment interferes with the moral mission of the Church.

¶161.L.

Petition Number: 60885-CB-¶161.L-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Adoption

Amend ¶ 161.L by the addition of the indicated text:

Children are a gift from God . . . We affirm and support the adoptive parent(s)' desire to rear an adopted child as they would a biological child, regardless of the sexual orientation of the adoptive parent(s). When circumstances warrant adoption . . .

¶161.N.

Petition Number: 60794-CB-¶161.N-G; Lawrence, Jan - Oakton, VA, USA.

Suicide

Amend ¶161.N:

¶161.N Suicide

We believe that suicide is not the way a human life should end. Often suicide is the result of untreated depression, or untreated pain and suffering. The church has an obligation to see that all persons have access to needed pastoral and medical care and therapy in those circumstances that lead to loss of self-worth, suicidal despair, and/or the desire to seek physician-assisted suicide.

The suicide rate among youth continues to grow, particularly among LGBT youth, who are five times more likely to attempt suicide. It is essential that the church minister to at-risk youth in our congregations and in our communities, providing the love, care, acceptance, and encouragement essential to health and well-being.

We encourage the church to provide education to address the biblical, theological, social, and ethical issues related to death and dying, including suicide. United Methodist theological seminary courses should also focus on issues of death and dying, including suicide.

Rationale:

Our role as the church is to love and nurture our youth into adulthood and beyond. Many LGBT youth consider suicide because of the struggle the church has in welcoming and accepting them. They feel ostracized and it can be particularly harmful for those with a solid foundation of growing

¶162.B.

Petition Number: 60853-CB-¶162.B-G; Tooley, Mark - Alexandria, VA, USA.

Protections for Religious Believers and Others

Add to end of ¶ 162.B: We also affirm the legal rights of religious believers and communities, with others in society, to espouse traditional marriage and chastity.

¶162.J.

Petition Number: 60777-CB-¶162.J-G; Bonner, Jane L. - Thornton, PA, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Equal Rights

Amend Discipline ¶162.J as follows:

J) Equal Rights Regardless of Sexual Orientation or Sexual Identity—Certain basic human rights and civil liberties are due all persons; no one should be denied them due to sexual orientation or sexual identity. We are committed to supporting those rights and liberties for all persons, regardless of sexual orientation. We see a clear issue of simple justice in protecting the rightful claims where people have shared material resources, pensions, guardian relationships, mutual powers of attorney, and other such lawful claims typically attendant to contractual relationships that involve shared contributions, responsibilities, and liabilities, and equal protection before the law. Moreover, we ~~support efforts to stop violence and other forms of coercion against all persons, regardless of sexual orientation~~ are committed to opposing and speaking out against any form of violence, coercion, ridicule, stigmatization or marginalization directed toward individuals who self-identify as either homosexual or former homosexual or as LGBT or ex-gay.

Rationale:

Society increasingly ignores and disdains individuals who leave a homosexual orientation or LGBT identity. The United Methodist Church should recognize their real life experiences and offer them encouragement and compassion in their discipleship. This can be done without endorsing any particular program or organization or expressing antipathy toward anyone else.

¶162.J.

Petition Number: 60778-CB-¶162.J-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 1 Similar Petition

Equal Rights

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 162.J as follows:

Certain basic human rights and civil liberties are due all persons. We are committed to supporting those rights and liberties for all persons, regardless of sexual orientation. We see a clear issue of simple justice in protecting the rightful claims where people have shared material resources, pensions, guardian relationships, mutual powers of attorney, civil marriage, civil unions, and other such lawful claims typically attendant to contractual relationships that involve shared contributions, responsibilities, and liabilities, and equal protection before the law. Moreover, we support efforts to stop violence and other forms of coercion against all persons, regardless of sexual orientation.

Rationale:

It is now time for The United Methodist Church to fully embrace and accept members of the denomination regardless of sexual orientation or gender identity.

¶162.J.

Petition Number: 60886-CB-¶162.J-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Criminalization of Homosexuality

Amend ¶ 162.J by the addition of the indicated text:

Certain basic human rights . . . Moreover, we support efforts to stop violence and other forms of coercion against all persons, regardless of sexual orientation. We reject laws that criminalize homosexuality.

¶162.J.

Petition Number: 60887-CB-¶162.J-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Right to Marry

Amend ¶ 162.J by the addition of the indicated text: Certain basic human rights and civil liberties, including the right to marry, are due all persons.

R2021.

Petition Number: 60892-CB-R2021-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Adoption in a Global Context

Readopt Resolution 2021 with the following bullet point added:

- encourage adoptive parents . . .
- support regulations . . .
- support regulations and policies that enable all qualified persons, regardless of sexual orientation or marital status, to become adoptive parents;
- promote conditions . . .

R2041.

Petition Number: 60801-CB-R2041-G; Russell, Earlene - Palmerton, PA, USA.

Prohibit Homosexual Marriage

Amendment to be added after last paragraph of Resolution 2041

Whereas a sociological view on homosexuality sets human affectionate sexual love above the law of God; this is not in accordance with Jesus' teaching that love is the law. Jesus' teaching on love does not include what the Bible views as immoral sexual acts. To attempt to bring honor to any act that the Bible teaches is immoral would be to set the act against the law.

WHEREAS, in Matthew 22:37-40 Jesus taught that love sums up the law;

Whereas, in Matthew 5:17-20 Jesus assures he has not come to abolish the law or the prophets;

Whereas, in Matthew 5:17-19 Jesus asserts that every minute requirement of the law is valid and will be fulfilled, and that any violation of any one of the most insignificant of these requirements involves the infringement of the whole law;

Whereas, the apostles taught and preached against sexual acts that are against biblical law;

Whereas, in 2 Corinthians 11:1-15 Paul warns against false apostles infiltrating the church. He advises that leaders of the church not be deceived as Eve was by the ser-pent's cunning, and not to let their minds be somehow led astray from sincere and pure devotion to Christ:

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church in its commitment to uphold biblical law shall not allow pastors to perform marriage ceremonies for homosexual couples, to do so would be condoning an act that is socially accepted as love but breaks God's law.

R2041.

Petition Number: 60891-CB-R2041-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Church to Be in Ministry to Persons of All Sexual Orientations

Readopt Resolution 2021 with the following addition:

. . . (“Teen Sexual Identity and Suicide Risk,” 2004 and 2008 Book of Resolutions). Because ~~the~~ teachings and actions of Jesus demonstrated radical inclusion of those rejected by mainstream society, we are called to renew our commitment to become faithful witnesses to the gospel, not alone to the ends of the earth, but also the depths of our common life and work (Preamble to the Social Principles) . . .

R2041.

Petition Number: 60897-CB-R2041-G; Henry-Crowe, Susan - Washington, DC, USA for General Board of Church and Society.

Church to Be in Ministry to Persons of All Sexual Orientations

Amend Resolution 2041.

Replace first paragraph:

We affirm our belief in the infinite worth and value of each individual because all are human beings created by God and loved through and by Jesus Christ, and we affirm all persons as equally valuable in the sight of God (Preamble to Social Principles). Baptism is God's gift of unmerited grace through the Holy Spirit and marks the entrance of persons into the church and its ministries of love, justice, and service (§ 305, Book of Discipline) We affirm that through baptism God has made us members of one body of Christ so that all who follow Jesus have spiritual gifts to share for the common good (1 Corinthians 12:4-27). In addressing the nurturing function of Christian fellowship, our United Methodist Social Principles assert that human sexuality is a complex gift of which we have limited understanding (§ 161F). “We affirm that all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God, and that all persons need the ministry and guidance of the church in their struggles for human fulfillment, as well as the spiritual and emotional care of a fellowship that enables reconciling relationships with God, with others, and with self” (§ 161F). “The inherent dignity of human beings is the foundation of all human rights. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that ‘all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights,’ and ‘governments are bound to protect them.’ The declaration specifies that everyone is entitled to equal protection under the law, and that everyone has the right to security of the person and to protection against violence or bodily harm” (“Affirmation of Human Rights of All People,” Statement by the Board of Directors of the General Board of Church and Society of The United Methodist Church, March 1, 2014).

Create new second paragraph with amendments:

Those seeking a deeper understanding of their ~~An individual confronting his or her own minority~~ sexual orientation and/or ~~that of a close family member, friend, or associate~~ other persons often experiences isolation, confusion, and fear and violence at a time when they he or she needs information, guidance, and support (“Teens at Risk,” 2000 ~~Book of Resolutions~~); and we recognize that teens dealing with questions about sexual orientation are at a greater risk for suicide and violence perpetrated against them (“Teen Sexual Identity and Suicide Risk,” 2004 and 2008 ~~Book of Resolutions~~). The teachings and actions of Jesus demonstrated radical inclusion of those rejected by mainstream society, we are called to renew our commitment to become faithful witnesses to the gospel, not alone to the ends of the earth, but also the depths of our common life and work (Preamble to the Social Principles).

Insert in last paragraph, second sentence:

Such ministry and openness may include: welcoming sexual minorities, their friends, and families into our churches and demonstrating our faith in a loving God; a willingness to listen and open our hearts to their stories and struggles in our churches, districts, annual conferences, and General Conference; encouraging study and dialogue around issues of sexuality; advocating for policies that protect the human rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender persons; and praying for all those who are in pain and discord over our Christian response to this controversial issue.

Rationale:

Revisions enhance current language by strengthening theological foundation for study, prayer and advocacy.

R2042.

Petition Number: 60893-CB-R2042-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Readopt Resolution

Readopt Resolution 2042.

R2042.

Petition Number: 60899-CB-R2042-G; Henry-Crowe, Susan - Washington, DC, USA for General Board of Church and Society.

Opposition to Homophobia and Heterosexism

Delete current Resolution 2042 and replace with the following:

Suggested new title: Opposition to Sexual Prejudice, Homophobia, and Heterosexism

The United Methodist Church affirms that “all persons are individuals of sacred worth, created in the image of God” (¶161F, Human Sexuality, The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, 2012); and,

The United Methodist Church states, “Certain basic human rights and civil liberties are due all persons,” and as a church is “committed to supporting those rights and liberties for all persons, regardless of sexual orientation” (¶ 162J, Equal Rights Regardless of Sexual Orientation, The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, 2012); and,

The United Methodist Church is committed to the eradication of sexism (#3443, 2012 Book of Resolutions); and,

Sexual prejudice (Sexual prejudice, A commonly used definition from Spring Reference Online [2014]: “Sexual prejudice encompasses all negative attitudes and assumptions directed toward an individual or group based on sexual orientation.”) is an attitude of negativity toward persons due to their sexual orientation, sexual identity, or gender expression; and,

Homophobia (Homophobia, A commonly used definition from the American Heritage Dictionary (1992): “Fear, hatred, or mistrust of lesbians and gay men.”) is holding and maintaining prejudicial and fearful attitudes toward individuals perceived to be nonheterosexual, regardless of the victim’s actual sexual orientation or sexual identity; or gender expression; and

Heterosexism (Heterosexism, A commonly used definition from the American Heritage Dictionary (2014): “Discrimination or prejudice against lesbians, gay men, or bisexuals by heterosexual people.”) is a self-justifying system of attitudes and behavior based on sexual prejudice that:

1. perpetuates stereotypical categories of what is essentially “masculine” and what is essentially “feminine”;

2. provides a privileged status for people who identify as culturally defined heterosexuals; and

3. discriminates against persons who, regardless of their sexual orientation, sexual identity, or gender expression do not appear to fit within the particular category defined as appropriate for their gender; and

Sexual prejudice homophobia and heterosexism are manifestations of sexism in general in that they foster stereotypes based on arbitrary distinctions of gender categories; and,

Actions rooted in sexual prejudice, homophobia, and heterosexism, including violence, threats, ridicule, humiliation, discrimination, isolation, rejection, and legislation break down the body of Christ and are damaging to persons of all sexual orientations and identities; and

The United Methodist Church is a worldwide faith community that has the unique opportunity to speak to matters of sexual prejudice, homophobia, and heterosexism globally.

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church strengthen its advocacy globally of the eradication of sexism by opposing all forms of violence or discrimination based on gender, gender identity and expression, or sexual orientation; and

Be it further resolved, that the General Board of Church and Society provide resources and materials aimed at educating members of the local churches about the reality, issues, and effects of sexual prejudice, homophobia and heterosexism and the need for a worldwide Christian witness against these facets of marginalization and rejection.

ADOPTED 2008

Resolution #2043, 2008 Book of Resolutions

Rationale:

Revisions enhance resolution with updated terminology and understanding of the manifestations of bias.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60841-CB-R9999-G; Schoeni, Elizabeth A. - Prairie Village, KS, USA. 28 Similar Petitions

Reducing Harm for LGBTQ Children and Youth

Add New Resolution as Follows:

WHEREAS, research indicates that gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender teens who experience high levels of rejection at home are more likely to attempt suicide, are at higher risk for depression, are more likely to use illegal drugs, and are more likely to be at high risk for HIV and sexually transmitted diseases; and

WHEREAS, as many as 40 percent of homeless youth identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender, many of whom are on the streets either because their families shut them out of their homes or because they feel unsafe and/or unwanted in their family home; and

WHEREAS, according to the Social Principles of The United Methodist Church, “We implore families and churches not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends. We commit ourselves to be in ministry for and with all persons”(¶ 161 F); and

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church has affirmed its commitment to be in ministry to persons of all sexual orientations, and points out that “an individual confronting his or her own minority sexual orientation and/or that of a close family member, friend, or associate often experiences isolation, confusion, and fear when he or she needs information, guidance, and support, and we recognize that teens dealing with questions about sexual orientation are at a greater risk for suicide” (#2041, 2012 Book of Resolutions); and

WHEREAS, The United Methodist Church has also affirmed its opposition to homophobia and heterosexism, and its opposition to “all forms of violence or discrimination based on gender, gender identity, sexual practice, or sexual orientation” (#2042, 2012 Book of Resolutions); and

WHEREAS, while our church holds diverse opinions regarding sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression, we share a commitment to do no harm, to do all the good we can, and to love God; and

WHEREAS, it is not necessary for parents to agree with their children in order to demonstrate love,

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that The United Methodist Church seeks to educate families about how to respond with love to their youth whose sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression may not conform to their family’s expectations. This response includes affirming the value and sacred worth of their youth, maintaining safe spaces and not severing ties with their youth, and demonstrating respect for their youth; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that, where possible, United Methodist Churches will work with local schools to encourage and support educational opportunities, best practices for creating safe spaces, policies for reducing bullying, and to support youth who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender, or who question their sexual orientation or gender identity.

Rationale:

Although there are diverse opinions about theology and polity in the UMC, notably regarding sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression, we are committed to doing no harm and doing all the good we can through reducing homelessness, risk, and harm to children and youth.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60845-CB-R9999-G; Tooley, Mark - Alexandria, VA, USA.

Holiness and the Human Body

The Christian Church, including Methodism, has always upheld the sacredness of the human body as the temple of the Holy Spirit, to be resurrected eternally. Methodism has been blessed with a particular focus on upholding the holiness of the human body, advocating spiritual disciplines faithful to that holiness in gratitude to God and in witness to the world.

In Romans 12:1-2, the apostle Paul offers this counsel:

“I urge you therefore, brothers, by the mercies of God, to offer your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and pleasing to God, your spiritual worship. Do not conform yourself to this age but be transformed by the renewal of your mind, that you may discern what is the will of God, what is good and pleasing and perfect.”

Modern secularism rejects the holiness of the human body and its ultimate ownership by God, instead commodifying the human body as merely the property of the autonomous individual subject to personal choice. This confusion over the divine purpose of the human body has tragically created much destructive confusion for persons outside and inside the church. As United Methodists, we should point to a better way, reminding a confused world of God’s magnificent, loving intent for the human body.

Based on Creation and on the Incarnation and Resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, Christianity affirms the intrinsic goodness of the human body. God created our first parents as bodily beings. “Male and female he created them” (Genesis 1.27). The two sexes of male and female are wonderful gifts of God, blessed for distinct and complementary purposes.

God’s purpose for human sexuality is for loving mutual giving and receiving in open self-surrender between husband and wife in lifelong commitment and openness to children. Other forms of sexual contact, outside natural marriage, while romanticized by the world, are outside God’s caring and wise desire for loving lifelong marriage between male and female. Chastity, which means fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, emblemizes the goodness of God's creation and the integrity of unity among human mind, body, and heart.

Maleness and femaleness, realized through the human body, are particular gifts of God that cannot be reimagined or reconfigured through alternative identities or surgical procedures. In sexuality and other physical expressions, the human body reveals what is invisible in God's creation. It is a physical sign of each person's unique identity as an image of God and is a sacrament of how God acts. So the human body should never become an object of use for self-gratification or for the exploitation of others.

As the temple of God, the human body should not be exploited, manipulated, mutilated, or disfigured. Instead, it should be nurtured, protected, and honored, with modesty and gratitude. In pursuit of holiness of body and spirit, Methodists have traditionally abjured intoxicants and recreational narcotics, have encouraged exercise and healthy diet, have urged modest apparel that is not costly or showy, and have opposed salacious media and pornography, along with prostitution, as gross distortions of God's purposes for the human body.

Methodists have also traditionally encouraged policies in political life that honor and protect the human body for the common good. Public policies in society that undermine natural marriage, that mock chastity, that claim that gender is self-selected and that sex-change procedures should be publicly subsidized and acclaimed, that legalize and legitimate prostitution, that abet pornography, or encourage legalization and easy use of dangerous narcotics, are at variance with Methodism's historic and noble concern for social holiness and social justice.

The church's high regard for God's gift of the human body, if effectively modeled among its own members and transmitted effectively to wider society, will help contribute to human flourishing, strengthen marriages and families, protect children, empower the poor, contribute to public health, liberate victims of sexual trafficking, and break destructive addictions to alcohol, drugs, and pornography, among other benefits.

Methodism's unique legacy of emphasis on personal and social holiness ideally equip it to advocate renewed appreciation for the holiness of the human body amid a secular society that both deifies and exploits the human body. All outlets of United Methodism, from the local church to general agencies, are encouraged to provide resources on God's purposes for the human body, to equip church members with instruction on holy living, and to advocate public policies that protect the human body for the good of all.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60898-CB-R9999-G; Henry-Crowe, Susan - Washington, DC, USA for General Board of Church and Society.

Rights of All Persons

New Resolution - Rights of All Persons

The Social Principles of The United Methodist Church affirm: All persons, regardless of age, gender, marital status, or sexual orientation, are entitled to have their human and civil rights ensured and to be protected against violence (2012 United Methodist Book of Discipline ¶ 161F).

The Constitution of the Church declares that all persons are of sacred worth and goes on to specify that no person shall be excluded from the Church on the basis of "race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition" (Article IV).

It is particularly disturbing when religious values are used to justify persecution of select groups. Christians proclaim that all people are God's children deserving the protection of their human and civil rights. Around the world, however, political and religious institutions have targeted lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons for discrimination in housing, employment, health care, and access to redress for such discrimination.

The rights and privileges a society bestows upon or withholds from those it comprises indicate the relative esteem in which that society holds particular persons and groups of persons. We affirm all persons as equally valuable in the sight of God. We therefore work toward societies in which each person's value is recognized, maintained, and strengthened (2012 United Methodist Book of Discipline ¶ 162).

Therefore, all United Methodists are called upon:

1. to refrain from signing petitions and to vote against measures that advocate the denial of basic human and civil rights to anyone;
2. to educate congregation and community alike about the position of the United Methodist Discipline on civil rights and its broad applications;
3. to stand against any political or physical acts that deny human and civil rights and the sacred worth of all persons;
4. to advocate for initiatives throughout the world that would prohibit job and housing discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity; and
5. to advocate for initiatives that provide for extra penalties for crimes expressly committed for the purpose of harming someone based solely on their age, race, color, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender, or disability.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Board of Church and Society develop education tools designed to provide for open and healthy dialogue and understanding of sexuality in the world with the specific goal of protecting the human and civil rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender persons.

We do this as part of our Christian witness and ministry. Never let it be said that United Methodists were silent during this attack on the rights of all.

Rationale:

This resolution was originally adopted in 1996. It expired because it was not acted upon by 2012 General Conference.

¶16.

Petition Number: 60798-CO-¶16-C-G; Anthony, Tod - Lakin, KS, USA.

Uphold God's Word as Primary

A. Add a new sub-paragraph to Article IV after ¶ 16: 1. To uphold God's word as primary for salvation in faith and practice according to the Bible, our doctrinal standards, the restrictive rules, John Wesley's emphasis on the Bible, our candidacy requirements and the ordination vows. Therefore, any petition attempting to change our present stance on sexuality, homosexuality, or marriage is to be tabled indefinitely and the Council of Bishops is to determine the boundaries for all United Methodists to function accordingly.

B. Delete all the present numbers in ¶ 16 Article IV from † through †6 and increase their numerical value by one, so † becomes ‡, ‡ becomes 3, and so on until †6 becomes 17.

Rationale:

A. The U.S. Supreme Court recently expanded the definition of marriage to include homosexual couples based upon peoples' rights to liberty and the pursuit of happiness;

B. We United Methodists have been discerning, discussing, debating and deciding on issues of sexuality over the past thirty years at General Conference;

C. . . .

¶1101.

Petition Number: 60800-DI-¶1101-G; Tooley, Mark - Alexandria, VA, USA.

BOD Responsibilities

Add to the final paragraph:

¶ 1101. The General Board of Discipleship shall prioritize resources that strengthen marriage and families, including Christian teaching about marriage as the lifelong union of husband and wife, and sexual ethics, emphasizing fidelity and chastity.

Petition 60797.

Petition Number: 60797-DI-NonDis-!-G; Bonner, Jane L. - Thornton, PA, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Resources

The General Conference instructs The General Board of Discipleship to develop and share on its website a list of books and other recommended resources that clearly affirm our Church's moral standards for sexual behavior, as found in the Social Principles and other relevant sections of the Book of Discipline. These resources should offer helpful Christian guidance to pastors, congregations, campus ministries, and laypeople so they can effectively and compassionately minister to self-identified members of the LGBTQ community, persons who seek help for dealing with their unwanted same-sex attraction, individuals who do not understand or who do not personally follow our church's moral standards for sexual behavior, and teens at risk for suicide for any reason, including (but not limited to) reasons related to their sexuality. These recommended resources shall not promote approval of extra-marital sex, homosexual practice, or pornography. Rather, these recommended resources shall offer guidance for how to be in ministry with and for all people, within the boundaries of our church's theological, biblical, and moral commitments.

Rationale:

Our church has affirmed biblical standards for sexual behavior while also saying we want to be in ministry with our neighbors who are same-sex-attracted or who neither agree with nor follow our moral standards for sexual behavior. Guidance on how to balance these effectively, without sacrificing either, is urgently needed.

R2121.

Petition Number: 60894-DI-R2121-!-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Teen Sexual Identity and Suicide Risk

Readopt Resolution 2121 with the following additions and deletions:

In the year 2003 at least 700,000 high school students will attempt suicide—one in every 13 high school students in the United States. According to the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, suicide rates among adults have steadied or even declined over the past few decades but teenage suicide rates have tripled.

Suicide is the second leading cause of death among people ages 10 to 24.¹ One out of six students nationwide (grades 9-12) seriously considered suicide in the past year.² LGB youth are four times more likely, and questioning youth are three times more likely, to attempt suicide as their straight peers.³ A nationally representative study of adolescents in grades 7-12 found that lesbian, gay, and bisexual youth were more than twice as likely to have attempted suicide as their heterosexual peers.⁴ LGB youth who come from highly rejecting families are 8.4 times as likely to have attempted suicide as LGB peers who reported no or low levels of family rejection.⁵ Each episode of LGBT victimization, such as physical or verbal harassment or abuse, increases the likelihood of self-harming behavior by 2.5 times on average.⁶ Nearly half of transgender people have seriously thought about taking their lives, and one quarter report having made a serious attempt.⁷

A 2011¹⁹⁸⁹ U.S. Department of Health and Human Services study found that teens dealing with issues of sexual identity are ~~three two~~ to ~~four three~~ times more likely to attempt suicide than are other youth.

The United Methodist Church, in Social Principles ¶ 162.JH (2004) (2012), states: Certain basic human rights and civil liberties are due all persons. We are committed to supporting those rights and liberties for ~~homosexual persons~~ all persons, regardless of sexual orientation.

The General Conference shall ~~will~~ establish and fund a task group which will:

•-1) Publish, in laypeople's terms, a summary of current research on ~~homosexual~~ youth at risk for suicide ~~because of their sexual orientation or gender identity~~;

•-2) Work with organizations currently doing research on these issues;

•-3) Provide a directory of agencies working on issues of teen suicide among youth dealing with issues of sexual identity;

•-4) ~~Publish a~~ The General Board of Discipleship shall maintain an online resource for congregations and families which provides accurate information, recommendations for programs, and pastoral guidance.

•-5) General Board of Discipleship, General Board of Church and Society, General Board of Higher Education and Ministry, and the United Methodist Women shall ~~m~~Make recommendations for legislative actions within

The United Methodist Church to the 2020 General Conference;

•-6) Make recommendations for programs for youth through congregations, districts, conferences, mission agencies, United Methodist Women, United Methodist Men and other organizational bodies of The United Methodist Church.

•-7) ~~The General Board of Discipleship shall r~~Report to the ~~2008~~ 2020 General Conference on its findings and work.

Citations:

1 CDC, NCIPC. Web-based Injury Statistics Query and Reporting System (WISQARS) [online]. (2010) [2013 Aug. 1]. Available from: www.cdc.gov/ncipc/wisqars.

2 CDC. (2011). Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance – United States, 2011. Atlanta, GA: U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

3 CDC. (2011). Sexual Identity, Sex of Sexual Contacts, and Health-Risk Behaviors Among Students in Grades 9-12: Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance. Atlanta, GA: U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

4 Russell ST, Joyner K. Adolescent sexual orientation and suicide risk: Evidence from a national study. American Journal of Public Health 2001;91:1276–1281.

5 Family Acceptance Project™. (2009). Family rejection as a predictor of negative health outcomes in white and Latino lesbian, gay, and bisexual young adults. Pediatrics. 123(1), 346-52.

6 IMPACT. (2010). Mental health disorders, psychological distress, and suicidality in a diverse sample of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender youths. American Journal of Public Health. 100(12), 2426-32.

7 Grossman, A.H. & D'Augelli, A.R. (2007). Transgender Youth and Life-Threatening Behaviors. Suicide and Life-Threatening Behaviors.37(5), 527-37.

Adopted 2004~~readopted 2008, 2016~~resolution #158, 2004 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶¶ 161F and N.

--

Supporting Material

corresponding to items in the numbered list in the resolution:

1) List of summary statements, primary and secondary research materials, and organizations engaged in researching this issue (such as Trevor Project and It Gets Better Project), published online with hyperlinks.

a. Budget estimate:

i. General Board of Discipleship, 10hrs of staff time, estimated cost $250.

b. Publication online locations:

i. General Board of Discipleship

ii. General Board of Church and Society

- iii. Cokesbury.com – as a free resource
- 4) Develop a digital, downloadable, resource.
- a. Budget estimate:
- i. General Board of Discipleship
1. Initial development, $5,000.
 2. Updating at six-month intervals for three years, $750
- a. 6 updates × 5hrs staff time × $25/hr = $750
- 7) Report to the 2020 General Conference on its findings and work
- a. Budget estimate:
- i. General Board of Discipleship
1. $5,000
- Total Amount Requested: $11,000.

R2121.

Petition Number: 60896-DI-R2121-G; Olson, Harriett Jane - New York, NY, USA for United Methodist Women.

Teen Sexual Identity and Suicide Risk

2121. Teen Sexual Identity and Suicide Risk

~~In the year 2003 at least 700,000 high school students will attempt suicide—Each year, one in every 13 fifteen high school students in the United States attempts suicide. According to the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, suicide rates is the third leading cause of death among young people. The World Health Organization estimates that adults have steadied or even declined over the past few decades but teenage suicide is the second leading cause of death among young people ages 15-29 globally. rates have tripled.~~

~~A 1989 2011 U.S. Department of Health and Human Services study found that teens dealing with issues of sexual identity are two to three far more likely to attempt suicide than other youth. Females are twice as likely to attempt suicide while males are up to six times more likely to attempt taking their lives. suicide than are other youth.~~

The United Methodist Church, in Social Principles ¶ 162 <<https://www.umofficialresources.com/reader/9781426766213/>>~~HJ (2004)2012~~, states: “Certain basic human rights and civil liberties are due all persons. We are committed to supporting those rights and liberties for all homosexual persons, regardless of sexual orientation.”

United Methodist Women and the Division on Ministries with Young People requests that the General Conference empower the Division on Ministries with Young People to:

~~The General Conference will establish and fund a task group which will:~~

- Publish, in laypeople’s terms, a summary of current US and global research on homosexual lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, questioning (LGBTQ) youth who are at risk for suicide;

- Work with organizations currently doing research on these issues;

- Provide a directory of agencies working on issues of teen suicide among youth dealing with issues of sexual identity;

- Expand resources Publish a resource for congregations and families which provides accurate information, recommendations for programs, and pastoral guidance.

- Make recommendations for legislative actions within The United Methodist Church;

- Make recommendations for programs for youth through congregations, districts, conferences, mission agencies, United Methodist Women, United Methodist Men, and other organizational bodies of The United Methodist Church.

- ~~Report to the 2008 General Conference on its findings and work:~~

ADOPTED 2004

READOPTED 2008

RESOLUTION #2122, 2008 Book of Resolutions

RESOLUTION #158, 2004 Book of Resolutions

See Social Principles, ¶ 161 <<https://www.umofficialresources.com/reader/9781426766213/>>F, N.

¶613.19.

Petition Number: 60774-FA-¶613.19-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. Wiley, David E. III - Allendale, NJ, USA for Greater New Jersey Annual Conference. 1 Similar Petition

Use of Church Funds

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 613.19 as follows:

To ensure that no annual conference board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall ~~give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The UMC “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” (¶ 161.F).~~ The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. This restriction shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, nor shall it preclude funding for dialogs or educational events where the Church’s official position is fairly and equally represented.

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church continues to work toward inclusion and justice for all God's people and Holy conferencing and education are valued processes for United Methodists to discuss current issues before the membership. Language in conflict with the life and teachings of Jesus Christ to be eliminated.

¶613.19.

Petition Number: 60776-FA-¶613.19-G; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference. Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference. 999 Similar Petitions

Deletion

Delete ¶ 613.19.

~~To ensure that no annual conference board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of the UMC "not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends" (¶161.F). The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. This restriction shall not limit the Church's ministry in response to the HIV epidemic, nor shall it preclude funding for dialogs or educational events where the Church's official position is fairly and equally represented.~~

Rationale:

Since 1972 The United Methodist Church has taken increasingly firmer positions opposing non-heterosexual orientations. Attempting to make all United Methodists conform to traditional beliefs has not decreased denominational tension. This petition attempts to relocate decision making to the appropriate level, i.e. annual conference and pastors, and ease tension.

¶806.9.

Petition Number: 60770-FA-¶806.9-G; Stanovsky, Elaine - Greenwood Village, CO, USA for General Board of Discipleship.

Continue Funding the Church's Response to the HIV Epidemic

Amend ¶ 806.9 as follows:

~~It shall be responsible for ensuring that no board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give~~

~~United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church "not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends" (¶ 161F). The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures.¹⁸ It shall not limit the Church's ministry in response to the HIV epidemic.~~

Rationale:

Releases fear/restraint to enter constructive conversations toward providing equal rights and justice for all United Methodists. The UMC can develop proactive theological responses to the LGBTQ community, preventing despair and hopelessness of those alienated by our theological stance on sexuality.

¶806.9.

Petition Number: 60771-FA-¶806.9-G; Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. 999 Similar Petitions

Remove Language

Delete ¶ 806.9.

~~¶ 806.9 It shall be responsible for ensuring that no board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church "not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends" (¶161.F). The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. It shall not limit the Church's ministry in response to the HIV epidemic.~~

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church has historically welcomed into membership "all persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition" per Article IV of the Constitution.

¶806.9.

Petition Number: 60772-FA-¶806.9-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. 71 Similar Petitions

Foster Holy Conferencing in UM Organizations

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 806.9 as follows:

It shall be responsible for ensuring that no board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall ~~give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or~~ violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” (§ 161.F). ~~The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures. It shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic.~~

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church continues to work toward inclusion and justice for all God’s people. Holy conferencing and education are valued processes for United Methodists to discuss current issues before the membership.

¶806.9.

Petition Number: 60775-FA-¶806.9-G; Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. Wiley, David E. III - Allendale, NJ, USA for Greater New Jersey Annual Conference. 1 Similar Petition

Use of Church Funds

Amend ¶ 806.9 as follows:

9. It shall be responsible for ensuring that no board, agency, committee, commission, or council shall ~~give United Methodist funds to any gay caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote the acceptance of homosexuality or~~ violate the expressed commitment of The United Methodist Church “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” (§ 161.F). ~~The council shall have the right to stop such expenditures.~~ It shall not limit the Church’s ministry in response to the HIV epidemic.

Rationale:

Holy conferencing and education are valued processes for United Methodists to discuss current issues before the membership. The requested deletion allows for, but does not require duly elected, employed, or appointed annual conference boards, agencies, commissions, and councils to resource the Church as is their charge.

¶304.3.

Petition Number: 60779-FO-¶304.3-G; Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. 999 Similar Petitions

Deletion

Delete ¶ 304.3.

¶ 304.3 ~~While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching. Therefore self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.~~

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church has historically welcomed into membership “all persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition” per Article IV of the Constitution.

¶304.3.

Petition Number: 60780-FO-¶304.3-G; Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference. Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 80 Similar Petitions

Qualifications for Ordination

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 304.3 as follows:

While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. ~~The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching. Therefore self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.~~

Rationale:

All clergy are called to maintain the highest standards of holy living. Individuals of all sexual orientations and gender identities are fully competent, possessing the gifts and graces necessary to carry out the duties of ordained ministry in the UMC. The UMC continues working toward inclusion and justice for all God’s people.

¶304.3.

Petition Number: 60781-FO-¶304.3-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table. Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan

Annual Conference. Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference.
7 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Qualifications for Ordination

Amend ¶ 304.3 as indicated following:

¶ 304.3. While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. The practice of homosexuality is considered by many to be incompatible with Christian teaching. ~~Therefore self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.~~ Therefore, authority for discerning suitability for ordination continues to rest with the annual conference as provided in ¶ 33 of the Constitution, following candidacy procedures as provided in the Book of Discipline, and authority for making appointments continues to rest with the bishop after a consultative process to determine the suitability of such an appointment.

...

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶304.3.

Petition Number: 60799-FO-¶304.3-G; Liceaga, Carlos A. - Newport News, VA, USA.

Qualifications for Ordination

Amend ¶ 304. Qualifications for Ordination—

...

3. While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all of the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. The practice of fornication, adultery, or homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching. Therefore fornicators, adulterers, or self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

While the practice of homosexuality is a sin, so is fornication and adultery. They should be treated equally. Yet we seem to be elevating active homosexuality to a special sin category. Sin is sin, yet we often look the other way when we see people having sex outside of marriage.

¶304.3.

Petition Number: 60907-FO-¶304.3-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Qualifications for Ordination

Amend ¶ 304.3 as follows:

While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. ~~The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching.~~ Therefore self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church: except in jurisdictions or central conferences that have determined that self-avowed practicing homosexuals may be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.

¶304.3

Petition Number: 61042-FO-¶304.3-G; LaTurneau, Clayton - West Bloomfield, MI, USA.

Qualifications for Ordination

3. While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. The practice of homosexuality is a sin. It is incompatible with Christian teaching. Therefore self-avowed practicing homosexuals¹ are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.²

¶4.

Petition Number: 60741-GA-¶4-C-G; Chumley, Madeline L. - Dallas, TX, USA for UM Young People's Legislative Assembly.

Inclusiveness of Gender and Sexual Orientation

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 4 as follows:

¶ 4. Article IV. Inclusiveness of the Church The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one Body in Christ. The United Methodist Church acknowledges that all persons are of sacred worth. All persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status,⁴ ~~or~~ economic condition, gender, or sexual orientation shall be eligible to attend its worship services, participate in its programs, receive the sacraments, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, and upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection.⁵ In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the Church shall be structured so as to exclude any member or any constituent body of the Church because of race, color, national origin, status ~~or~~ economic condition, gender, or sexual orientation.

Rationale:

As Christians and followers of God's word, it is our duty to love and accept all of God's children. Therefore, the official church stance should explicitly state that The United Methodist Church does not discriminate based on sexual orientation.

¶4.

Petition Number: 60742-GA-¶4-C-G; Cramer, Phil - Nashville, TN, USA for Belmont UMC. 999 Similar Petitions

Definition of Status

Amend ¶ 4 as follows:

¶ 4. Article IV. Inclusiveness of the Church—The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one body in Christ. The United Methodist Church acknowledges that all persons are of sacred worth. All persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition, shall be eligible to attend its worship services, participate in its programs, receive the sacraments, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, and upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection. In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the Church shall be structured so as to exclude any member or any constituent body of the Church because of race, color, national origin, status—including but not limited to, gender, marital status, sexual orientation, age, ability, or disability—or economic condition. (Footnotes omitted.)

Rationale:

The Judicial Council has held that only the General Conference may define the word "status" in ¶ 4 of the Constitution. The proposed amendment will provide a definition of status that encourages inclusiveness as envisioned by the General Conference when status was added to ¶ 4.

¶4.

Petition Number: 60881-GA-¶4-C-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Inclusiveness

Amend ¶ 4 by the addition of the indicated text:

The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one Body in Christ. The United Methodist Church acknowledges that all persons are of sacred worth. All persons without regard to race, color, national origin, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, disability, status,⁴ or economic condition, shall be eligible to attend its worship services, participate in its programs, receive the sacraments, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, and upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection.⁵ In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the Church shall be structured so as to exclude any member or any constituent body of the Church because of race, color, national origin, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, disability, status or economic condition.⁶

¶4.

Petition Number: 60943-GA-¶4-C-G; Howe, Margaret - New Paltz, NY, USA for New York Annual Conference.

Inclusiveness

¶ 4. Article IV. Inclusiveness of the Church—The United Methodist Church is a part of the church universal, which is one body in Christ. The United Methodist Church acknowledges that all persons are of sacred worth. All persons without regard to race, color, national origin, status, ~~or~~ economic condition, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression shall be eligible to attend its worship services, participate in its programs and ministries, receive the sacraments, and participate in the rites of the church, upon baptism be admitted as baptized members, ~~and~~ upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith, become professing members in any local church in the connection, and, upon recommendation of the appropriate body as defined by the Discipline, serve as appointed clergy. In The United Methodist Church no conference or other organizational unit of the church shall be structured or act so as to exclude any member or constituent body of the church because of race, color, national origin, status, or economic condition, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression.

Rationale:

Lesbians, gays, bisexuals, transgender, and intersex persons are not inherently immoral and their ministries within our communities of faith make us a vital and vibrant church. This Constitutional amendment to the Discipline will enable The United Methodist Church to truly live out the mission to make disciples of Jesus ¶2701.5.

Petition Number: 60806-JA-¶2701.5-G; Dietz, Peter - Thornton, PA, USA for Bethlehem UMC Social Action Committee. 3 Similar Petitions

Just Resolution

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 2701.5 as follows:

¶ 2701.5. A Just Resolution in Judicial Proceedings—A just resolution is one that focuses on repairing any harm to people and communities, achieving real accountability by making things right in so far as possible and bringing healing to all the parties. Special attention should be given to ensuring that cultural, racial, ethnic, age, and gender contexts are valued throughout the process in terms of their understandings of fairness, justice, and restoration. During the just resolution process, the parties may be assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s), in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. Processes that seek a just resolution are encouraged at any time, including through the judicial proceedings. After the referral of a matter as a judicial complaint from counsel for the church to the committee on investigation, if a process seeking a just resolution is used, the appropriate persons, including the counsel for the Church and the counsel for the respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining such process, including any agreement on confidentiality. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergy person having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the clergy person against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the supervising bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any just resolution of the complaint achieved at any stage of the process must include this clergy person being suspended without pay, for no less than one full year, from all ministerial duties and functions, including membership, staff position, or formal leadership role in any district, annual conference, or general church board, agency, committee, commission, or office, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the disciplinary disclosures required for possible readmission.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

¶2702.

Petition Number: 60766-JA-¶2702-G; Malone, Donald M. - Washington, DC, USA.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1.(b) as follows:

(b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual who is not within a monogamous same-sex marriage; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;

Add a new subparagraph 2. after ¶ 2702.1. as follows:

2. A clergy member of an annual conference, local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be the subject of an Administrative Fair Process proceeding (excluding ¶ 363.1. e) (2)) when a complaint under ¶ 363 is filed with the person’s bishop charging the person with (a) being a self-avowed practicing homosexual within a monogamous same-sex marriage; (b) conducting ceremonies that celebrate same-sex unions; or (c) performing same-sex wedding ceremonies.

If the disposition of the complaint is consideration of an appointment to another charge, the charge's pastor-parish relations committee shall be informed of the complaint and consulted before there is a final decision to make the appointment.

Renumber the remaining subparagraphs of ¶ 2702.

Amend the first sentence of the last textual paragraph of ¶ 363.1. to read as follows:

A complaint is a written and signed statement claiming misconduct as defined in ¶ 2702.1. or ¶ 2702.2.

Rationale:

As explained at www.obeyjesusnow.com/analysis, <http://www.obeyjesusnow.com/analysis> our Church wrongfully opposes monogamous same-sex marriages between loving homosexuals. If the opposition continues, we should at least "stop the trials." This petition will substitute an existing supervisory discipline, ending bad publicity from trials without eliminating provisions prohibiting performing of same-sex unions or weddings, ¶2702.1.

Petition Number: 60762-JA-¶2702.1-G; Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference. Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan Annual Conference. Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference. 74 Similar Petitions

Removing Practice of Homosexuality From List of Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1 as follows:

A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4) with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a heterosexual marriage; (b) ~~practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;~~ (c) crime; (d) disobedience...

Rationale:

Since 1972, The United Methodist Church has taken increasingly firmer positions opposing non-heterosexual orientations. Attempting to make all United Methodists conform to traditional beliefs has not decreased denominational tension. This petition attempts to relocate decision making to the appropriate level, i.e. annual conference and pastors, and ease tension.

¶2702.1.

Petition Number: 60763-JA-¶2702.1-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table. 8 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1 as indicated following:

¶ 2702. 1. A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 369), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4) with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a heterosexual marriage; (b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies; (c) crime; (d) disobedience to the order . . .

...

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶2702.1.

Petition Number: 60764-JA-¶2702.1-G; Cramer, Phil - Nashville, TN, USA for Belmont UMC. 999 Similar Petitions

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1 of the Book of Discipline as follows:

¶ 2702 Chargeable Offenses and the Statute of Limitations

1. A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor, 14 clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4)* with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a marriage; (b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings,¹⁵ ~~including but not limited to being a self-avowed practicing homosexual, or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions, or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies,~~ (c) crime; (d) disobedience to the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church, (e) dissemination of doctrines contrary to the established standards of doctrine of The United Methodist Church, (f) relationships and/or behavior that undermines the ministry of another pastor;¹⁶ (g) child abuse, (h) sexual abuse;¹⁷ (i) sexual misconduct or (j) harassment, including, but not limited to racial and/or sexual harassment; or (k) racial or gender discrimination. Notwithstanding the foregoing, a bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor,¹⁴ clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister that refuses to perform a homosexual marriage shall not commit a chargeable offense.

Rationale:

Chargeable offenses of being a self-avowed practicing homosexual, conducting ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions and performing same-sex wedding ceremonies contradict the Constitutional prohibition against excluding persons based on status and the Social Principles affirmation that all persons are individuals of sacred worth. Declining to perform homosexual marriage is not a . . .

¶2702.1.

Petition Number: 60765-JA-¶2702.1-G; Frech, Cheryl - Norman, OK, USA for St. Stephen's UMC Administrative Council.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1:

A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 369), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4)* with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality ~~including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a heterosexual marriage,~~ (b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompati~~ble with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual, or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions, or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies,~~ (b) crime; (c) disobedience to the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church; (d) dissemination of doctrines contrary to the established standards of doctrine The United Methodist Church; (e) relationships and/or behavior that undermines the ministry of another pastor, (f) child abuse;  (g) sexual abuse; (h) sexual misconduct or (i) harassment, including, but not limited to racial and/or sexual harassment, or (j) racial or gender discrimination.

Rationale:

The United Methodist Church affirms "that sexuality is God's good gift to all persons" (¶ 161F), yet requires clergy to discriminate against same-gender couples in loving and committed relationships seeking marriage in their church. This change makes ¶ 2702.1 compatible with ¶ 2702.3 and reduces discrimination.

¶2702.1.

Petition Number: 60904-JA-¶2702.1-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1 as follows:

A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 370), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4)* with one or more of the following offenses: (a) immorality including but not limited to, not being celibate in singleness or not faithful in a ~~heterosexual marriage~~ covenantal relationship; (b) ~~practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual, or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions, or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies,;~~ (e) (b) crime; (d) (c) disobedience to the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church; (e) (d) dissemination of doctrines contrary to the established standards of doctrine of The United Methodist Church; (f) (e) relationships and/or behavior that undermines the ministry of another pastor; (g) (f) child abuse; (h) (g) sexual abuse; (i) (h) sexual misconduct or (j) (i) harassment, including, but not limited to racial and/or sexual harassment; or (k) (j) racial or gender discrimination."

¶2702.1b.

Petition Number: 60767-JA-¶2702.1b-G; Hay, Kari S. - OsloNorway for Bjoelsen UMC Council. 2 Similar Petitions

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1:

A bishop, clergy member of an annual conference (¶ 369), local pastor, clergy on honorable or administrative location, or diaconal minister may be tried when charged (subject to the statute of limitations in ¶ 2702.4)* with one or more of the following offenses: (. . .)

(b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, ~~including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;~~

...

Rationale:

Clergy are divided on ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions. We want every clergy to have the freedom to act on his or her own faith, theological conviction, and conscience, without fearing negative consequences. We as a Church embrace diversity and respect different opinions, including clergy practicing differently.

¶2702.1b.

Petition Number: 60888-JA-¶2702.1b-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1(b) by deleting and replacing the current text with:

(b) ~~practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings,¹⁵ including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies;~~ waging war;

¶2702.1b.

Petition Number: 60890-JA-¶2702.1b-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1(b) by adding to the current text:

(b) practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings,¹⁵ including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies; or waging war;

¶2702.1b.

Petition Number: 60905-JA-¶2702.1b-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1(b) as follows:

. . . practices declared by The United Methodist Church to be incompatible with Christian teachings, including but not limited to: being a self-avowed practicing homosexual; or conducting ceremonies which celebrate homosexual unions; or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies in jurisdictions or central conferences that have not determined, pursuant to ¶ 341.6, that the celebration of homosexual unions and/or the performance of same-sex wedding ceremonies may be conducted by ministers and/or in churches in that jurisdiction or central conference; . . .

Rationale:

Deep divisions with respect to whether ministers should be permitted to conduct ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions and same-sex weddings or whether such ceremonies should be permitted in church facilities are clearly demonstrated by the increasing number of incidents of ecclesial disobedience resulting in public trials and diversion of resources . . .

¶2702.1k.

Petition Number: 60889-JA-¶2702.1k-G; Mumme, Michael C. - Austin, TX, USA for First UMC of Austin Administrative Board.

Chargeable Offenses

Amend ¶ 2702.1(k) by deletion and addition as follows:

(k) ~~racial or gender~~ discrimination based on race, gender, gender identity, or sexual orientation.

¶2706.5c.

Petition Number: 60808-JA-¶2706.5c-G; Dorsey, Mason
- Pembroke Pines, FL, USA.

Consequences

Add new paragraph:

¶ 2706.5.c.4

In cases where the respondent is charged with conducting a ceremony that celebrates a homosexual union or where the respondent is charged with performing a same-sex wedding the following consequences shall be applied following a process for just resolution:

a) if the respondent is a bishop, that clergy person will return to his or her annual conference from which he or she was elected bishop for appointment upon completion of a 6-month suspension with all access to salary, continuing education funds, reimbursement funds, health insurance, and pension payments withheld. Furthermore, should this former bishop conduct future celebrations of homosexual unions or perform same-sex wedding ceremonies and be found guilty of such either by a just resolution process or church trial, the following consequences will be given:

First offense—six (6) months suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for six (6) months, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that six (6) months, but the clergy person may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the Church

Second offense—immediate surrender of elder’s orders to the resident bishop and termination of affiliation with the annual conference. If appropriate the clergy person may receive a settlement of pension benefits but not payment of retiree health insurance nor conference-provided housing offered to retirees in good standing.

b) if the respondent is an elder, deacon, or commissioned elder or commissioned deacon: First offense—sixty (60) days suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for sixty (60) days, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that sixty (60) days, but the clergy person may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Second offense—six (6) months suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for six (6) months, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that six (6) months, but the clergy person may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Third offense—immediate surrender of elder’s orders to the clergy person’s district superintendent and termination of affiliation with the annual conference. If appropriate the clergy person may receive a settlement of pension benefits but not payment of retiree health insurance nor conference provided housing offered to retirees in good standing.

c) Should the resident bishop fail to uphold the courses of punishment for a respondent found guilty of celebrating homosexual unions or performing a same-sex marriage, that clergy person shall be referred to the president or secretary of the College of Bishops for either a just resolution process or a church trial. Should the resident bishop be found guilty of not upholding the consequences for a respondent who conducts a ceremony that celebrates a homosexual union or a respondent who performs a same-sex marriage, that bishop will be removed from office and will return to his or her annual conference for appointment.

Rationale:

The process for just resolution is vaguely understood in the General Church and is very undefined. Since great conflict arises every time there is a just resolution of a complaint involving a clergy person leading a ceremony involving a homosexual couple, this would provide a uniform policy across the church. . .

¶2706.5c3.

Petition Number: 60807-JA-¶2706.5c3-G; Dietz, Peter - Thornton, PA, USA for Bethlehem UMC Social Action Committee. 3 Similar Petitions

Just Resolution

Amend the Book of Discipline ¶ 2706.5c(3) as follows:

(3) Upon recommendation of the counsel for the Church and the counsel for the respondent, the committee may refer the matter to the resident bishop as deemed appropriate for a process seeking a just resolution. The bishop shall institute such a process and may use the assistance of a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s). Such referral will not constitute a dismissal or double jeopardy under ¶ 2701.5. The appropriate persons, including the counsel for the Church and counsel for the respondent, should enter into a written agreement outlining the process, including any agreements on confidentiality. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergy person having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (§ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the clergy person against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any final just resolution of the complaint must include this clergy person being suspended without pay, for no less than one full year, from all ministerial duties and functions, including membership, staff position, or formal leadership role in any district, annual conference, or general church board, agency, committee, commission, council, or office, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church. If resolution is achieved, a written statement, affirming such resolution, including any terms and conditions, shall be signed by the same persons who signed the written agreement outlining the process, and they shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. If the resolution results in a change of ministerial status, the disclosure agreement shall not prevent the Disciplinary disclosures required for readmission. The written statement affirming such resolution shall be given to the bishop for further action(s) to implement the agreement, if any. If the process does not result in resolution, the matter shall be returned to the committee.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

¶2711.3.

Petition Number: 60809-JA-¶2711.3-G; Dorsey, Mason - Pembroke Pines, FL, USA.

Consequences

Add new paragraph:

¶ 2711.3.2

In cases where the respondent is charged with conducting a ceremony that celebrates a homosexual union or where the respondent is charged with performing a same-sex wedding the following consequences shall be applied following a church trial:

a) if the respondent is a bishop, that clergy person will return to his or her annual conference from which he or she was elected bishop for appointment upon completion of a six (6)-month suspension with all access to salary, continuing education funds, reimbursement funds, health insurance and pension payments withheld. Furthermore, should this former bishop conduct future celebrations of homosexual unions or perform same-sex wedding ceremonies and be found guilty of such either by a just resolution process or church trial, the following consequences will be given:

First offense—six (6) months suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for six (6) months, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that six (6) months, but the clergy person may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Second offense—immediate surrender of elders’ orders to the resident bishop and termination of affiliation with the annual conference. If appropriate the clergy person may receive a settlement of pension benefits but not payment of retiree health insurance nor conference provided housing offered to retirees in good standing.

b) if the respondent is an elder, deacon or commissioned elder or commissioned deacon, First offense—sixty (60) days suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for sixty (60) days, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that sixty (60) days, but the clergy person may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Second offense—six (6) months suspension from ministerial duties, suspension of salary for six (6) months, withholding reimbursement account and continuing education fund access during that 6 months, but the clergy person may receive the benefits of parsonage/housing allowance, health insurance payment by the church, and pension payments by the church

Third offense—immediate surrender of elders’ orders to the clergy person’s district superintendent and termination of affiliation with the annual conference. If appropriate the clergy person may receive a settlement of pension benefits but not payment of retiree health insurance nor conference provided housing offered to retirees in good standing.

c) Should the resident bishop fail to uphold the courses of punishment for a respondent found guilty of celebrating homosexual unions or performing a same-sex marriage, that clergy person shall be referred to the president or secretary of the College of Bishops for either a just resolution process or a church trial. Should the resident bishop be found guilty of not upholding the consequences for a respondent who conducts a ceremony that celebrates a homosexual union or a respondent who performs a same-sex marriage, that bishop will be removed from office and will return to his or her annual conference for appointment.

Rationale:

Since great conflict arises every time there is a church trial of a complaint involving a clergyperson leading a ceremony involving a homosexual couple, this would provide a uniform policy across the Church that is understood by all and adhered to by all thus minimizing this conflict. It also . . .

¶27113.

Petition Number: 60810-JA-¶2711.3-G; Dragonette, Karin - Reynoldsburg, OH, USA.

Mandatory Penalty

¶ 2711. Power of the Trial Court

3. Penalties—If the Trial Results in Conviction. Further testimony may be heard and arguments by counsel presented regarding what the penalty should be. The trial court shall determine the penalty, which shall require a vote of at least seven members. The trial court shall have the power to remove the respondent from professing membership, terminate the conference membership and/or revoke the credentials of conference membership and/or ordination or consecration of the respondent, suspend the respondent from the exercise of the functions of office, or to fix a lesser penalty. Except, where the conviction is for conducting ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions, or performing same-sex wedding ceremonies under ¶ 2702.1(b) or (d), the trial court does not have the power to and may not fix a penalty less than the following:

a) First (1st) offense—One (1) year’s suspension without pay.

b) Second (2nd) offense—Not less than termination of conference membership and revocation of credentials of licensing, ordination, or consecration.

The penalty fixed by the trial court shall take effect immediately unless otherwise indicated by the trial court.

Rationale:

Assigning a penalty of less than a suspension for a first offense or less than termination of conference membership and/or revocation of conference membership and ordination or consecration in such circumstances encourages open defiance of the order and discipline of The United Methodist Church.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60796-JA-R9999-G; Lawrence, Jan - Oakton, VA, USA for Foundry UMC - Washington, D.C.

Support of LGBT Persons

Add Resolution to the Book of Resolutions:

WHEREAS, the Constitution of The United Methodist Church requires that at least some parts of The United Methodist Church are fully welcoming and affirming of God’s love to all lesbians, gays, bisexual and transgendered (LGBT) persons so as to stop the use of Christianity as an excuse for bullying and violence toward gender and sexual minorities; and

WHEREAS, our United Methodist connection calls us to treat well-intentioned, well-reasoned differences of opinion with mutual respect (as this resolution proposes) rather than insisting upon a verdict or single position that rejects one side or the other; and

WHEREAS, the Book of Discipline reflects John Wesley’s understanding that “everyone must follow the dictates of his own conscience; NOW

THEREFORE LET IT BE RESOLVED THAT THE MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH 2016, be strongly encouraged to:

1. Support LGBT lay members who marry and to consider refraining from filing complaints against pastors who perform marriages between gender and sexual minorities, and

2. Consider refraining from using United Methodist resources to investigate or enforce a ban on marriages between same gender and sexual minorities, or for church trials, or for otherwise disciplining clergy that perform same-sex marriages; and

3. Consider refraining from using United Methodist resources to investigate the gender or sexual orientation of a minister or candidate for ministry, and consider refraining from using United Methodist resources to enforce a ban on the certification of an LGBT candidate for ministry, or the ban on ordination of an LGBT minister; and

Be it further resolved that the GENERAL CONFERENCE 2016 implores all members of The United Methodist Church Connection to:

1. Be in ministry with all people, regardless of their economic status, race, age, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, disability, or immigration status.

2. Endorse proposed changes to the Book of Discipline and Social Principles that permit matters concerning LGBT persons to be discerned by individual members, congregations, pastors, bishops, committees and conferences through biblical obedience with the aid of the Holy Spirit and at the discretion of the individual members, pastors, congregations, bishops, conferences, and committees; and

3. Endorse proposed changes to the Book of Discipline and Social Principles that permit those that disagree with one another with respect to homosexuality and LGBT persons to remain inside The United Methodist Church connection, including, at a minimum, deletion of the excluding language in Social Principle ¶161.F; eliminating the ban on same-sex marriages, Book of Discipline ¶341.6; eliminating the restriction on expenditure of funds, Book of Discipline ¶613.9; eliminating performing same-gender weddings as a chargeable offense, Book of Discipline ¶2702.1; eliminating the definition of marriage as between a man and a woman, Book of Discipline ¶161.B; and eliminating the ban on ordination of homosexuals or LGBT persons, Book of Discipline ¶304.3.

¶2500.

Petition Number: 60811-LC-¶2500-G; Dragonette, Karin - Reynoldsburg, OH, USA. 1 Similar Petition

Disaffiliation

Add new paragraph

¶ 2548. Surrender of Charter of Local Church and Disaffiliation For Reasons Of Conscience—A local church may surrender its charter from The United Methodist Church and disaffiliate based on the local church's declaration that it is in irreconcilable conflict for reasons of conscience with the provisions of The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church on the practice of homosexuality and the blessing of homosexual unions. Such disaffiliation shall require:

- a) A minimum of ninety (90) days of study and discernment by the congregation
- b) The affirmative vote of two-thirds (66.7 percent) of the church's professing members present and voting at a duly called church conference
- c) Other provisions of the Book of Discipline shall not be a bar to such disaffiliation

Upon such surrender and disaffiliation, the local church shall be released from the provisions of ¶ 2501 and shall retain full rights to its property and funds, provided that any debts upon such property and any other debts payable by that local church are assumed by that local church. In the event of such proposed action, the bishop, the cabinet, annual conference board of trustees, and other appropriate individuals of The United Methodist Church shall facilitate the orderly and timely administration of this process.

[Renumber following paragraphs from existing ¶¶ 2548-2551.]

Rationale:

A covenant enforced only by legal strictures cannot have the moral force or spiritual cohesiveness required for true unity in Christ or the church. Our covenant must not be enforced only trust clauses and pension programs, but by a willingness to walk together and live by the covenant in agreement . . .

¶2500.

Petition Number: 60812-LC-¶2500-G; Graves, Russ - Melbourne, FL, USA. 9 Similar Petitions

Disaffiliation

Add new ¶ 2548 as follows:

¶ 2548. Surrender of Charter of Local Church and Disaffiliation for Reasons of Conscience—Because of the current deep conflict over the church's position on the practice of homosexuality and the blessing of homosexual unions, a local church may surrender its charter from The United Methodist Church and disaffiliate based upon the local church's declaration that for reasons of conscience, witness, or mission it can better serve Christ and his kingdom by not being affiliated with The United Methodist Church and its annual conference. Such disaffiliation shall require:

- a) A minimum of ninety (90) days of study and discernment by the congregation
- b) The affirmative vote of two-thirds (66.7 percent) of the church's professing members present and voting at a duly called church conference
- c) Repayment to the annual conference any money invested by the conference in that local church through grants or loans during the previous five (5) years. The amount to be repaid shall include any payments made to the local church's clergy by the annual conference, such as salary support, but shall not include subsidies to provide health insurance.
- d) Payment to the annual conference of its current year's apportionments in full and an additional sum equal to two times the current year's apportionments
- e) Other provisions of the Book of Discipline shall not be a bar to such disaffiliation.

Upon such surrender and disaffiliation, the local church shall be released from the provisions of ¶ 2501 and shall retain full rights to its property and funds, provided that any debts upon such property and any other debts payable by that local church are assumed by that local church. In the event of such proposed disaffiliation, the bishop, the cabinet, annual conference board of trustees, and other appropriate individuals of The United Methodist Church shall facilitate the orderly and timely administration of this process.

[Renumber following paragraphs from existing ¶¶ 2548-2551.]

Rationale:

Despite efforts to preserve unity in the Church, irreconcilable differences persist regarding the practice of homosexuality. The Church needs to value the consciences of our people and provide an honorable way for those whose consciences are violated to disaffiliate without the loss of property and in a ministry-affirming way. For . . .

¶20.

Petition Number: 60802-MH-¶20-C-G; Lomperis, John S.A. - Valparaiso, IN, USA.

Automatic Penalties

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 20 as follows:

¶ 20. Article IV.—The General Conference shall not do away with the privileges of our clergy of right to trial by a committee and of an appeal; neither shall it do away with the privileges of our members of right to trial before the church, or by a committee, and of an appeal. 14 This shall not apply to cases of clergy who admit to their bishop, or to the bishop supervising a directly relevant complaint against them, of having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or performed a same-sex wedding ceremony. In such cases, automatic penalties shall be imposed.

Rationale:

Currently, a small minority of covenant-breaking clergy have been abusing our lengthy accountability system to use the threat of the costs of church trials to avoid serious accountability for this one offense. This would allow for a more effective, efficient, and ultimately less painful process than trials.

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60787-MH-¶341.6-G; Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference. Jensen, Diane - Ft. Calhoun, NE, USA for Great Plains Annual Conference. Nakanishi, Leanne - Pasadena, CA, USA for California-Pacific Annual Conference. Ryder, Jack E. - LaGrange Park, IL, USA for Northern Illinois Annual Conference. 999 Similar Petitions

Deletion

Delete ¶341.6.

~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches.~~

Rationale:

UM clergy should not be required, but authorized to officiate services of Christian marriage for all prepared couples, regardless of sexual orientation. Current prohibition places some UM clergy in positions of violating their ministerial integrity, Christian conscience, pastoral calling, denying same gender couples opportunities to be married in their churches.

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60788-MH-¶341.6-G; Barker, Amy Valdez - Chicago, IL, USA for Connectional Table. Buchner, Gregory L. - Grand Rapids, MI, USA for West Michigan Annual Conference. Sachen, Kristin L. - Nevada City, CA, USA for California-Nevada Annual Conference. 7 Similar Petitions

A Third Way - Remove Prohibition

Amend ¶ 341.6 as indicated following:

¶341.6. Ceremonies that celebrate ~~homosexual unions~~ marriages between two persons committed to one another as provided in ¶161.B may be conducted by United Methodist pastors and other persons authorized in the Book of Discipline only upon following the process provided in ¶340.2.a)(3)(a).

Rationale:

This change ends Church trials over homosexuality, and it retains the authority of the annual conference to discern suitability for ordination. Bishops retain authority for appointments. Clergy and local churches will continue to have the right of consultation in appointment-making processes. Clergy will determine whom to marry to whom.

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60789-MH-¶341.6-G; Perez, Lyssette N. - Rockaway, NJ, USA for UMC of the Rockaways Reconciling Ministries Team.

Unauthorized Conduct

¶341.6. ~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be~~

~~conducted in our churches. In those locations where same-sex marriage is legal, pastors and local churches are authorized to conduct such ceremonies consistent with their conscience and stated beliefs. No pastor can be forced to conduct such ceremonies against her/his conscience and beliefs. And no local church can be forced to conduct such ceremonies if against their stated beliefs as officially approved by the appropriate governing body.~~

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60790-MH-¶341.6-G; Beard, Janet - Minneapolis, MN, USA for Minnesota Annual Conference.

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶341.6 of the Book of Discipline by adding to the existing text as follows:

¶341.6. Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches, except where authorized by vote of the annual conference where the clergy person is appointed or the church is located; or by a two-thirds vote of the church conference where the clergy person is appointed.

Rationale:

Our Social Principles implore us “not to reject or condemn lesbian and gay members and friends” and commit us “to be in ministry for and with all persons.” Many pastors and congregations believe that such ministry includes offering blessings of committed same-sex relationships, and where legal, same-sex marriage.

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60791-MH-¶341.6-G; Barker, Jill - Washington, DC, USA.

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶ 341.6:

¶341.6 Unauthorized Conduct Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches. Notwithstanding the foregoing, in those civil jurisdictions where homosexual couples have been granted the right to marriage or civil union, ceremonies celebrating those marriages or unions may be conducted in our churches and by our ministers, the decision being the right and responsibility of the pastor.

Rationale:

In a democratic society civil authorities define the civil rights of citizens. We are a global church and recognize that secular laws regarding marriage differ. These differences impact our church. This moderate approach allows pastors the option to perform ceremonies where it is legal should they choose to do so.

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60792-MH-¶341.6-G; Tyler, Linda S. - Conway, AR, USA. 4 Similar Petitions

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶ 341.6:

~~Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches. A clergy person may, but is not required to, perform a wedding ceremony or civil union ceremony for same-gender persons whose marriage or civil union is allowed by law in the secular jurisdiction where the ceremony is conducted.~~

Rationale:

This amendment deletes the language of the current ¶ 341.6 and replaces it with language that permits a clergy person to perform a same-gender wedding ceremony if the marriage or civil union is permitted in the jurisdiction where the ceremony is conducted.

¶341.6.

Petition Number: 60906-MH-¶341.6-G; Hodge, Jeff - Syracuse, NY, USA for Upper New York Annual Conference.

Unauthorized Conduct

Amend ¶ 341.6 as follows:

Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches; except in jurisdictions or central conferences that have determined that the celebration of homosexual unions and/or performance of same-sex wedding ceremonies may be conducted by ministers in that jurisdiction or central conference and/or may occur in churches within that jurisdiction or central conference.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, an individual minister shall not be required to celebrate homosexual unions or perform same-sex wedding ceremonies merely because the minister is serving a church located in a jurisdiction or central conference that has permitted the celebration of homosexual unions or the performance of same-sex wedding ceremonies by ministers within that jurisdiction or central conference.

Rationale:

Deep divisions with respect to whether ministers should be permitted to conduct ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions and same-sex weddings or whether such ceremonies should be permitted in church facilities are clearly demonstrated by the increasing number of incidents of ecclesial disobedience resulting in public trials and diversion of resources ¶363.1.

Petition Number: 60803-MH-¶363.1-G; Lomperis, John S.A. - Valparaiso, IN, USA.

Automatic Penalties

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 363.1 by adding after ¶ 363.1a a new section, ¶ 363.1b, and relettering the following sections accordingly:

b) Automatic Penalty for Acknowledged Same-Sex Unions—other provisions of the Book of Discipline notwithstanding, when the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergy person having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1b) within the preceding six years, this separate process shall be followed:

(1) Upon receiving the formal complaint, the bishop or the bishop's designee shall, within a timely manner, directly request the person against whom the complaint was made for a brief written statement simply confirming or denying if he or she did in fact conduct or perform the Disciplinary prohibited ceremony in question. In any meetings related to this process, both the person against whom the complaint and the person making the complaint may choose another person to accompany him or her with the right to voice.

(2) Throughout this process, the complaint shall be treated as an allegation or allegations until the person against whom the complaint was made delivers written confirmation of having conducted or performed the alleged prohibited ceremony or until thirty days have passed since he or she received the bishop's request for confirmation or denial, and has chosen to give no answer.

(3) If the person against whom the complaint was made provides a written response to the bishop's initial request other than confirming having committing the chargeable offense in question, then the ordinary supervisory response as outlined beginning in ¶363.1c below shall be followed as outlined below.

(4) If the clergy person against whom the complaint was made either admits to have conducted or performed the Disciplinary prohibited ceremony in question, or chooses not to deliver a response within thirty days of receiving the request for confirmation or denial of the offense, then he or she shall be considered guilty of having broken covenant with The United Methodist Church.

(5) If the clergy person's file indicates that that he or she has previously been penalized according to this process, then the penalty the bishop imposes shall be termination of the conference membership and revocation of the credentials of conference membership, commissioning, ordination, or consecration of the clergy person. Otherwise, the bishop shall suspend the guilty party from all ministerial functions, and from any appointment to a local church, general agency, or cabinet-level position, without salary, for a period of no less than one year.

(6) The precise length of this suspension shall be at the bishop's discretion, provided that it shall not be less than one full year and not more than three full years. There shall be no right to appeal such a penalty. A record of this penalty shall be placed in the clergy person's file.

(7) Sixty days before the conclusion of such a suspension, the bishop shall contact the suspended clergy person, either directly or through a designee, to request a written statement promising to not conduct or perform any such ceremonies in the future as long as doing so remains a chargeable offense under our Church's communal covenant as expressed in our Book of Discipline. If the suspended clergy person fails to make such a written promise, the bishop shall at the conclusion of the suspension period permanently terminate his or her clergy status.

(5) All of the process as outlined above shall be carried out in a timely manner, with attention to communication to all parties in the process. At the determination of the bishop, persons with qualifications and experience in assessment, intervention, or healing may be selected to assist in this process. The bishop also may consult with the committee on pastor-parish relations for pastors, the district committee on superintendency for district superintendents, appropriate personnel committee, or other persons who may be helpful.

(6) When this special process for the specific offense of conducting a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or performing a same-sex wedding ceremony is initiated, the bishop shall notify the chairperson of the Board of Ordained Ministry that a complaint has been filed, of the clergy person named, of the general nature of the complaint, of each response of the person against whom the complaint was made to the requests noted above, and with a summary the bishop's own subsequent actions in implementing this process.

Rationale:

This efficiently lessens our reliance on trials for covenant accountability. It prevents a single minister from holding an entire conference hostage with a needless, costly trial. There is only one chargeable offense for which there is such a disruptive minority movement to shatter the integrity of our connectional covenant.

¶363.1c.

Petition Number: 60804-MH-¶363.1c-G; Dietz, Peter - Thornton, PA, USA for Bethlehem UMC Social Action Committee. 3 Similar Petitions

Just Resolution

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 363.1(c) as follows:

c) Just Resolution—The supervisory response may include a process that seeks a just resolution in which the parties are assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s), in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties.⁶⁹ If the bishop chooses to initiate a mediated attempt to produce a just resolution, then the bishop, the person filing the complaint, the respondent, and other appropriate persons shall enter into a written agreement outlining the process, including any agreements on confidentiality. A process seeking a just resolution may begin at any time in the supervisory, complaint, or trial process. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a clergy person having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the clergy person against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any final just resolution of the complaint must include this clergy person being suspended without pay, for no less than one full year, from all ministerial duties and functions, including membership, staff position, or formal leadership role in any district, annual conference, or general church board, agency, committee, commission, council, or office, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including any terms and conditions, shall be signed by the parties and the parties shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. A just resolution agreed to by all parties shall be a final disposition of the related complaint.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

¶413.3c.

Petition Number: 60805-MH-¶413.3c-G; Dietz, Peter - Thornton, PA, USA for Bethlehem UMC Social Action Committee. 3 Similar Petitions

Complaints Against Bishops

Amend Book of Discipline ¶ 413.3c) as follows:

¶ 413. Complaints Against Bishops

. . .

3. The supervisory response may include a process seeking a just resolution in which the parties are assisted by a trained, impartial third party facilitator(s) or mediator(s) in reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties. (See ¶ 363.1b, c.) The appropriate persons, including the president of the College of Bishops, or the secretary if the complaint concerns the president, should enter into a written agreement outlining such process, including an agreement as to confidentiality. If resolution is achieved, a written statement of resolution, including terms and conditions, shall be signed by the parties and the parties shall agree on any matters to be disclosed to third parties. Such written statement of resolution shall be given to the person in charge of that stage of the process for further action consistent with the agreement. When the complaint is based upon allegation of the specific misconduct of a bishop having conducted a ceremony celebrating a homosexual union or having performed a same-sex wedding ceremony (¶ 2702.1[b]) within the statute of limitations, and the bishop against whom the complaint was made acknowledges to the supervising bishop, within the course of the process seeking a just resolution, that he or she did in fact conduct or perform the ceremony in question, then any final just resolution of the complaint must include this bishop being suspended without salary, for no less than one full year, from all episcopal and ministerial duties and functions, including membership or formal leadership role in any general church board, agency, committee, or commission, for a period of prayerful reflection on his or her willingness to continue committing to his or her covenantal vows to God and to The United Methodist Church.

Rationale:

This is the only offense for which there has been a recent, widespread pattern of the “just resolution” process being abused to effectively allow for open breaking of our moral, biblical, compassionate Disciplinary standards with which some bishops personally disagree. Preserves clergy right to trial without needing trials for accountability.

R9999.

Petition Number: 60866-MH-R9999-G; Brooks, Lonnie D. - Anchorage, AK, USA.

Same Sex Marriage in United Methodist Churches

Insert into the Book of Resolutions a new resolution as follows:

ON DEALING WITH SAME SEX MARRIAGE IN UNITED METHODIST CHURCHES

WHEREAS, The Supreme Court of the United States of America has decided that same-sex marriages are to be permitted in all states and territories of the United States, and

WHEREAS, in officiating at weddings in the United States United Methodist clergy are serving in a dual role as agents of the state as well as representative ministers of the Church, and

WHEREAS, there will be instances in which a United Methodist cleric feels compelled by his or her conscientious commitment to principles of the gospel either to offer to officiate at such a wedding or to decline to do so, and

WHEREAS, in some of those instances the local church in which the cleric serves will not be in unanimous support of the position of the pastor, and

WHEREAS, authority in The United Methodist Church rests primarily with each pastor to decide which wedding to perform or not to perform, as provided in ¶ 340.2.a(3)(a) of the 2012 Book of Discipline, which authority is neither compromised nor conditioned by the legal authority of any jurisdiction in the United States, including the Supreme Court (¶ 2506.1), and

WHEREAS, each pastor serves each United Methodist church under the appointment of a bishop (¶ 54), and

WHEREAS, the appointing bishop is required to enter into consultation with the pastor proposed for appointment and with the charge to which he or she is proposed to be appointed, which consultation is not merely notification (¶ 426);

Therefore, be it resolved, that The United Methodist Church encourages each United Methodist church and the clergy members who serve those churches to work together to resolve through holy conferencing any differences of opinion about whether same sex weddings or holy union ceremonies ought to be conducted in the church. Holy conferencing is to be understood as it has been described by Bishop Sally Dyck in her seminal work, Eight Principles of Holy Conferencing: A Study Guide for Churches and Groups (https://www.minnesotaumc.org/assets/uploads/documents/Holy_Conferencing_Study_Guide_2012.pdf, accessed on 08Jun15), and

Be it further resolved, that The United Methodist Church urges bishops and their cabinets to work with local church staff/parish relations committees so that together in the appointment process they may take into account the concerns of the served community, the parish, and the pastors in relationship to same-sex weddings and holy union ceremonies as is required for all other issues with which we must deal as members of the human family of God in matching the gifts, grace, and calling of the pastor to the needs, culture, and condition of the charge.

A Prayer from United Theological Seminary, Dayton, OH, USA

May General Conference 2016 be Spirit led, United in Christ!

Guiados pelo Espírito, Unidos em Cristo!

Pinangungunahan ng Espiritu, Nagkakaisa kay Kristo!

성령의 임재와 예수그리스도안의 연합!

¡Guiado por el Espíritu, Unido en Cristo!

Waongozwa na Roho, Umoja katika Kristu!

Guidés par l' Esprit, Unis en Christ!

Geist geleitet, Vereint in Christus!

Thánh Linh Dẫn dắt, Hiệp nhất trong Đấng Christ!

Learn more about United at General Conference!

For details please visit:

www.united.edu/general-conference-2016

United Theological Seminary • 4501 Denlinger Road • Dayton, Ohio 45426 united Theological Seminary

www.united.edu

844.GO.TO.ATS asbury.to/degrees asbury.to/visit asburyseminary.edu

"In the final analysis, our mission is... about the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ and joining the Living God in His mission in the world. We are living into a challenge which God put into my heart many years ago: 'Attempt something so big, that unless God intervenes, it is bound to fail.'"

Dr. Timothy C. Tennent
President, Asbury Theological Seminary

Download your FREE ebook Called, from Asbury Seminary.
Visit: asbury.to/GC

ATTEMPT SOMETHING BIG

Are you CALLED to join
God in His mission?

ASBURY theological SEMINARY

THE WHOLE BIBLE FOR THE WHOLE WORLD

Kentucky • Orlando • Memphis • Online

*It's time to talk about holiness.
It's time to talk about love.
It's time to talk about awakenings.*

A GREATER AWAKENING OF HOLY LOVE.
THAT'S WHAT WE'RE ABOUT.

BOOKS
RESOURCES
SEVEN MINUTE SEMINARIES
THE SEEDBED DAILY TEXT VIDEOS
PODCASTS

Resourcing people, communities, and movements to love the whole world with the whole gospel.

seedbed.com

NEW ROOM

Band Together.

REGIONAL GATHERINGS

Houston, TX
February 18

Indianapolis, IN March 3

Atlanta, GA
April 7

CONFERENCE

Franklin, TN
September 21-23

newroomconference.com

The FOUNDATION for EVANGELISM

Partnering with ministry innovators to equip Generations of Christ Followers – clergy and laity – who have a passion for evangelism.

P.O. Box 985, Lake Junaluska, NC 28745 | 828-454-6800 • 800-737-8333
www.FoundationForEvangelism.org

I am making a GLOBAL IMPACT

The Permanent Fund provides a enduring source of funding for the ministries of The United Methodist Church. Your estate gift truly does change the world for generations.

Learn How to Outlive Your Life

(615) 369-2382

umcddevelopmentcenter.org

The Permanent Fund for
The United Methodist Church

for My Wife's sake.

76 Years Supporting Health & Welfare Ministries

UMA

UNITED METHODIST ASSOCIATION

The United Methodist Association transforms lives by promoting, inspiring, empowering and recognizing excellence in healing and caring ministries.

www.OurUMA.org

BEKINS®

THIS IS MOVING.

» The official United Methodist Church movers.

Contact Dave Belford at Crown Moving & Storage, interstate agent for Bekins Van Lines, Inc.

800.248.7960, ext. 369 | Bekins.com

This is moving.™

©2015 Bekins® and This is moving. are registered trademarks of Bekins Van Lines, Inc.
MC 770031 | USDOT 2256609

Thank You to the People of
The United Methodist Church

BELIEVE IN GOOD.

ILIFF — SCHOOL of THEOLOGY — DENVER

ILIFF.EDU

For more than 100 years, Candler School of Theology at Emory University has been preparing real people to make a real difference in the real world. Here, more than 10,000 students have been shaped into Christian leaders who put faith and love into action, transforming the world in the name of Jesus Christ. Offering 17 degrees, including a new online Doctor of Ministry. Join us at candler.emory.edu.

PUT THE UMPH

IN YOUR NEXT EVENT

TRIUMPH
expo & events inc.

Proud to be the official decorator and a sponsor for the United Methodist Church General Conference 2016

Connect with us!

@TriumphExpo
 /TriumphExpo
www.triumphexpo.com
 (206) 431-1010

FROM MUSKIE TO MONET

Minneapolis is the perfect blend of natural beauty and urban sophistication. No other American city has a chain of lakes, the mighty Mississippi, and 200 miles of trails within the city limits – literally steps from a vibrant arts and music scene, as well as museums among the finest in the nation.

FIND OUT MORE AT
minneapolis.org

stock up on LEADERSHIP ESSENTIALS

Becoming a Disciple: A Lifelong Venture, Adolf Hansen.
9781501805042. ~~$14.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.04

The Gratitude Path: Leading Your Church to Generosity, by Kent Millard.
9781630883195. ~~$14.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.04

NEW! Earn All You Can: Getting Rich for Good, Donald R. House.
9781501808401. ~~$16.99~~; Cokesbury Price $11.38

NEW! Pastoral Care: Telling the Stories of Our Lives, Karen D. Scheib.
9781426766473. ~~$35.99~~; Cokesbury Price $24.11

NEW! Pastor, Revised Edition: The Theology and Practice of Ordained Ministry, William H. Willimon.
9781501804908. ~~$29.99~~; Cokesbury Price $20.09

NEW! The Necessary Nine: Things Effective Pastors Do Differently, Bob Farr and Kay Kotan.
9781501804960. ~~$14.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.04

NEW! Generosity Rising: Lead a Stewardship Revolution in Your Church, Scott McKenzie.
9781630883171. ~~$15.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.71

NEW! The Misfit Mission: How to Change the World with Surprises, Interruptions, and All the Wrong People, Scott Chrostek.
9781501806087. ~~$19.99~~; Cokesbury Price $13.39

Published by
Abingdon Press

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

ADCA28

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

Quality Products.
Exceptional Service.
Lifelong Relationships.
Since 1972

THEBUSCENTER

A TRADITION IN TRANSPORTATION SINCE 1972

NASHVILLE BIRMINGHAM ATLANTA

800.322.4024

Books to Build Better Leaders

NEW! The Rebirth of African Orthodoxy: Return to Foundations, Thomas C. Oden. Examines lost roots of classic African Christian teaching. Coming in April. 9781501819094. $24.99; Cokesbury Price $16.74

Celebrating God's Love: Living Into Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships, Donald E. Messer. Essays by United Methodists from around the world offer a framework for reflection and study. 9781501809507. $14.99; Cokesbury Price $10.04

The Sky Is Falling, the Church Is Dying, and Other False Alarms, Ted A. Campbell. Is the mainline church threatened, or do our traditions hold the keys to faith's relevance in the future? 9781426785948. $13.99; Cokesbury Price $9.37

NEW! A Christian Justice for the Common Good, Tex Sample. Brings a unique, scriptural understanding of social justice to bear on the ills of society. Coming in May. 9781501814266. $17.99; Cokesbury Price $12.05

NEW! Apocalyptic Literature in the New Testament, Greg Carey. Considers how we have viewed the end and its influence on how we live. Coming in June. 9781426771958. $29.99; Cokesbury Price $20.09

NEW! The Holy Spirit, Stanley Hauerwas and William H. Willimon. Gain understanding about the Trinity and how the work of the Holy Spirit is beyond "inspirational." 9781426778636. $13.99; Cokesbury Price $9.37

NEW! Creation: The Apple of God's Eye, Justo L. González; William H. Willimon, editor. Shows how the doctrine of Creation helps us address our concerns. 9781426785955. $13.99; Cokesbury Price $9.37

Published by
 Abingdon Press™

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

ADCA 27

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
 Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOLUME 2, SECTION 3
REMEMBERING THE SAND CREEK MASSACRE:
A HISTORICAL REVIEW OF METHODIST INVOLVEMENT,
INFLUENCE, AND RESPONSE

REMEMBERING THE SAND CREEK MASSACRE

A Historical Review of Methodist Involvement, Influence, and Response

by

Gary L. Roberts

Contents

Preface	1239
Acknowledgments	1241
Maps	1243
Introduction	1245
Chapter I: Which Way? Whose Way?	1249
Chapter II: The Road to Dominion	1261
Chapter III: The Bitter Conundrum	1271
Chapter IV: Methodists and the American Indian	1279
Chapter V: John Milton Chivington: The Fighting Parson	1291
Chapter VI: John Evans, M.D.: Entrepreneur and Philanthropist	1303
Chapter VII: Colorado's "Indian Problem"	1313
Chapter VIII: The Path to Sand Creek	1327
Chapter IX: Protest and Recrimination	1341
Chapter X: Methodists, Sand Creek, and the "Indian Question"	1353
Chapter XI: Chivington and Evans: The Later Years	1371
Chapter XII: The Balance Sheet	1387
Photographs	1404

Preface

Opening Words

At dawn on the morning of November 29, 1864, the United States Cavalry savagely attacked Cheyenne and Arapaho people who they knew were camped peacefully along the Big Sandy River in the Colorado Territory. Nearly 200 people, including many women and children, were killed. The two men most responsible for the attack were powerful, respected leaders in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Despite public outcry and a congressional investigation declaring the battle a “massacre,” the church defended their actions and never punished them.

Nearly 150 years later, tribal descendants of survivors of the Sand Creek Massacre invited United Methodist descendants of the Methodist Episcopal Church to learn their history and the devastating role of the Church in displacing and killing Cheyenne and Arapaho people. JuDee Anderson, leader of the Committee on Native American Ministries at First United Methodist Church of Sheridan, Wyoming, working with tribal representatives, wrote a petition that was adopted by the 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church, titled, “1864 Sand Creek Massacre.” It called for “full disclosure of the involvement and influence in the Sand Creek Massacre of John M. Chivington, Territorial Governor John Evans, the Methodist Church as an institution, and other prominent social, political and religious leaders of the time.”

The Council of Bishops’ Justice and Reconciliation Leadership Team, chaired by Bishop Mike McKee, named a Joint Advisory Committee of Cheyenne and Arapaho descendants and United Methodist leaders to oversee the project. Meetings began with a prayer and a meal. Gathering with honor and care, each member helped guide the project through deep conversation.

Dr. Gary L. Roberts, a respected historian of the American West and the Sand Creek Massacre, was the researcher and writer of the report. Dr. Roberts is a friend of Sand Creek descendants and is also a member of Tifton United Methodist Church in Tifton, Georgia. No one could better research this history and present it to the Church than Dr. Roberts, building a bridge between two communities that he knows and loves. Dr. Alfred Day, General Secretary of the General Commission on Archives and History, provided research and administrative support to the project.

The Joint Advisory Committee offers the results of Dr. Roberts’ work to the Council of Bishops, which presents it to the Church as, Remembering the Sand Creek Massacre: A Historical Review of Methodist Involvement, Influence, and Response, a report to the 2016 General Conference of The United Methodist Church.

As you read the bitter accounts of the attack, we invite you to remember and honor the victims of the Sand Creek Massacre and all who have suffered and died across many lands at the hands of Christians who brought death when they should have cared for life. There is no way to undo the harm done at Sand Creek. We hope that facing the truth of the past will open a path of understanding and healing among Cheyenne, Arapaho, and Methodist people.

This report tells of Methodists who turned away from the “way of life” of Jesus Christ. It shows how the Bible, Christian teaching, and a desire to “save souls,” when not guided by love of God and neighbor, can crush people and cultures. With this report we ask the Church these urgent and haunting questions:

- How could followers of Jesus act without care for human life and dignity?
- How does The United Methodist Church today teach followers of Jesus Christ to love and respect all people?
- How does it work to heal the generational trauma resulting from this and other acts of atrocity against Native Peoples?

Elaine JW Stanovsky

Bishop of the Mountain Sky Area of The United Methodist Church

Joint Advisory Committee

Otto Braided Hair, Jr.	Committee Co-chair and Northern Cheyenne Descendants' Representative
Elaine JW Stanovsky	Committee Co-chair and Bishop of the Mountain Sky Area
Joe Big Medicine	Southern Cheyenne Descendants' Representative
Gail J. Ridgely	Northern Arapaho Descendants' Representative
Henry Little Bird	Southern Arapaho Descendants' Representative
Sally Dyck	Bishop of the Chicago Area
Alfred T. Day III	United Methodist General Commission on Archives and History
Steve Sidorak	United Methodist Office on Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships

Observers—Consultants

David Halaas	Historian and Author
JuDee Anderson	First United Methodist Church, Sheridan, Wyoming
Robert Williams	Former General Secretary, General Commission on Archives and History
Mike McKee	Bishop of the Dallas Area and Chair of the Justice and Reconciliation Leadership Team of the Council of Bishops

1864 Sand Creek Massacre

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church hereby fully recognizes the Northern Cheyenne Tribe of Montana, and the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma, and the Northern Arapaho of Wyoming as the Federally recognized Tribes as stated in the 1865 Treaty of Little Arkansas with the U.S. Government, as the official representatives concerning the Sand Creek Massacre.

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church through the Council of Bishops and the appropriate boards and agencies shall consult on and support efforts pertaining to preservation, repatriations, healing, awareness, research, education and reparations with the Northern Cheyenne Tribe of Montana, Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma, and the Northern Arapaho Tribe of Wyoming and their official Tribal Representatives for the November 29, 1864 Sand Creek Massacre.

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church through the Council of Bishops and The General Commission on Archives and History shall authorize research by a joint team including an independent body and provide full disclosure of the involvement and influence in the Sand Creek Massacre of John M. Chivington, Territorial Governor John Evans, the Methodist Church as an institution, and other prominent social, political and religious leaders of the time, and shall report back to the 2016 General Conference.

The United Methodist Church shall support and participate in the return to the "Tribes" any Native artifacts or remains related to the Sand Creek Massacre.

Acknowledgments

A report such as this is peculiarly dependent upon the cooperation of many people. While it takes the form of history, its focus has been determined by the purpose of the study as set forth in Petition 20760, Sand Creek Massacre (20767-IC-Non-Dis), passed at the 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church in Tampa, Florida. Conclusions were not predetermined, however. The sole intent has been to seek a balanced understanding of the responsibilities of John M. Chivington, John Evans, the Methodist Episcopal Church, and other agencies and persons in the Sand Creek tragedy. After fifty years of research on the Sand Creek Massacre, I cannot pretend that I began this project without opinions about what happened and why, but my previous understanding has been seasoned both by inquiry into new areas of research and by consideration of perspectives different from my own.

Preparing this report stretched my experience and required that I look to other sources, different ways of seeing (a term much used herein), and the confluence of ethics and actions, cause and effect, intent and result. I was not unmindful of the moral issues involved in the Sand Creek story. I've wrestled with them for a long time, but during the course of this project I found myself in unfamiliar territory at times, attempting to grasp—clumsily, I suspect—views and understandings beyond my former frame of reference. I have been humbled by the process of preparing this report, and I am keenly aware of questions not yet answered to my satisfaction. The issues are so basic and yet so profound that they have at times challenged all of my assumptions and called into question deeply held beliefs. Confronting them was painful at times, yet essential to the task.

That is why the insights of others have proven so important to this effort. I have been able to pursue the topic freely without pressure so that the report could be truly an independent evaluation, but I have needed and received advice from a wide range of people. Most importantly, the Joint Committee created by the Council of Bishops and co-chaired by Bishop Elaine J. W. Stanovsky, of the Mountain Sky Episcopal Area, and Otto Braided Hair, Northern Cheyenne Sand Creek Descendants representative, has assured the independence of the evaluation, while providing guidance and advice that have proven invaluable. The advice, given both by the committee in extended sessions, and by individual members of the committee in private communications, has directed me to considerations I might otherwise have missed and provided me with insights that have strengthened the report in those areas where my knowledge and expertise have been weakest. I have been the beneficiary of the committee's counsel, criticism, and affirmation, for which I am extremely grateful.

I cannot exaggerate the importance of Laird and Colleen Cometsevah to my research on Sand Creek. I met them first in 1978. While sitting in the kitchen of their home in Clinton, Oklahoma, I listened and learned as they talked quietly about Sand Creek along with Walter Roe Hamilton, Ruby Bushyhead, and Terry Wilson of the Southern Cheyennes. Later in the 1990s, I met the late Steve Brady of the Northern Cheyennes, who became a mentor and friend. Since then, I had the privilege of knowing Lee Lone Bear, Northern Cheyenne; Eugene Ridgely, Northern Arapaho; and other Cheyenne and Arapaho people, who are now deceased. All of them contributed to my understanding of Sand Creek long before this project began. In addition to the official tribal representatives of the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma, Joe Big Medicine, Cheyenne; and Henry Little Bird, Arapaho; Gail Ridgely of the Northern Arapahos from the Wind River Reservation in Wyoming; and Otto Braided Hair of the Northern Cheyenne Tribe in Montana (previously acknowledged), who provided insight and advice throughout the development of this project, I am grateful for the contributions to this report of Anthony A. "Al" Addison, Willard Gould, Ben Ridgely, Crawford L. White, Sr., Nelson P. White, Jacqueline White, Northern Arapahos; Vanessa Braided Hair, Steve Brady, Jr., Norma Gourneau, Kaden Jeray (Walks Nice), Reginald Killsnight, Richard Littlebear, Mildred Red Cherries, Holda Roundstone, William Tall Bull, and Phillip White Man, Northern Cheyennes; Max Bear, Eugene Black Bear, and Karen Little Coyote, Southern Cheyennes; and Dale Hamilton, Southern Arapaho.

During the course of the preparation of this report, I have also had the generous advice of fellow historians, including David F. Halaas, former Colorado State Historian, consultant to the Northern Cheyenne Tribe, and friend of many years; Tom Meier, historian, consultant to the Northern Arapahos, and always thoughtful advisor; Ari Kelman, author of A Misplaced Massacre: Struggling Over the Memory of Sand Creek, whose award-winning book enlarged my perspective; Elliott West, author of The Contested Plains, whose original thought pushed me to consider new ideas; Henrietta Mann, Southern Cheyenne historian and educator, whose quiet insight demands respect and reflection; Jeff C. Campbell, meticulous investigator of Sand Creek, author of a number of publications for the Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site, and friend; Craig Moore, Sand Creek National Historic Site Ranger and dedicated student of Southern Cheyenne and Arapaho genealogy; Gordon S. Chappell, Pacific Great Basin Support Office, National Park Service, who shared his important Joseph A. Cramer Letters with me; and Darius Salter, author of a forthcoming biography of Bishop Matthew Simpson. I am also grateful to the members of the John Evans Study Committee, Northwestern University, and of the John Evans Study Committee, University of Denver, whose reports provided critical insights and helped prepare the way for this work.

Similarly, the staff of the Mountain Sky Episcopal Area and the Rocky Mountain Conference, under the leadership of Bishop Stanovsky, was indefatigable in its support at every stage of the process. Nancy Cox, Executive Administrative Assistant to Bishop Stanovsky, and Youngsook Charlene Kang, Director of Mission and Ministry of the Rocky Mountain Conference, were generous and helpful. Other United Methodist leaders who provided support and advice included Stephen J. Sidorak, Jr., Ecumenical Staff Officer, Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships of the Council of Bishops; Mary Ann Swenson, United Methodist Bishop, Ecumenical Officer, Council of Bishops; Mike McKee, United Methodist Bishop, Justice and Reconciliation Leadership Team; and Sally Dyck, United Methodist Bishop.

A special acknowledgment must be made to Ju-Dee Anderson and the United Methodist Church Native American Ministry at Sheridan, Wyoming, who in consultation with Steve Brady and Otto Braided Hair of the Northern Cheyenne Tribe, initiated Petition 20760, 1864 Sand Creek Massacre (20760-IC-Non-Dis), which was passed on April 20, 2012, at General Conference in Tampa, Florida.

This report owes a huge debt to the General Commission on Archives and History of The United Methodist Church at Drew University, Madison, New Jersey. The project began during the tenure of Robert J. Williams, as General Secretary of the GCAH, and continued under his successor, Alfred T. Day, III. Both have been tireless in their support and efforts on behalf of the committee's assignment. L. Dale Patterson, Archivist and Records Administrator, and Christopher J. Anderson, Head of Special Collections and Archives of the GCAH, and their staff, helped acquaint me with Methodist resources and collections.

Appreciation is also expressed to the staffs of the Methodist Archives, Iliff School of Theology, Denver, Colorado; Kansas Area United Methodist Archives; Baker University, Baldwin City, Kansas; Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site, Eads, Colorado; History Colorado, Denver, Colorado; Western History Collections, Denver Public Library, Denver, Colorado; Manuscript Division, Kansas State Historical Society, Topeka, Kansas; Huntington Library, San Marino, California; Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, California; Oklahoma Historical Society, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Yale Collection of Western Americana, Beinecke Library, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut; Manuscript Division, the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.; and the National Archives and Records Administration, Washington, D.C.

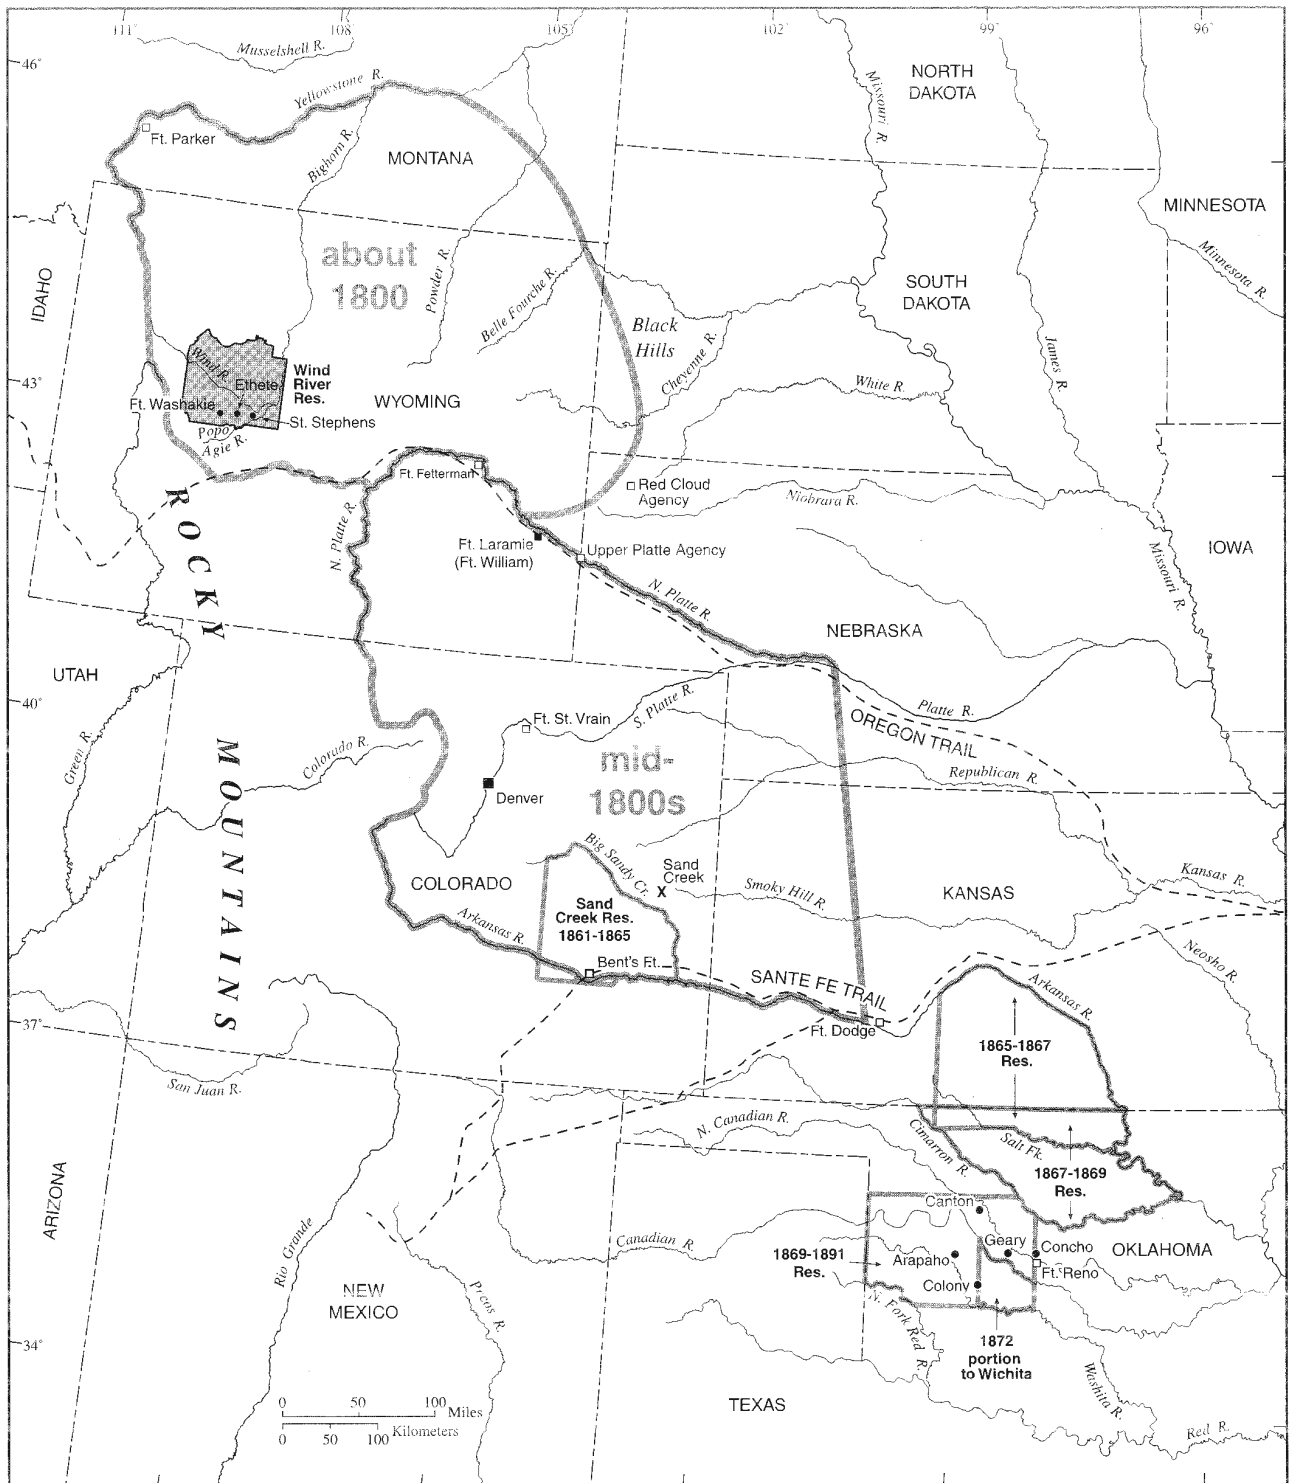

Although they played no direct role in the preparation of this report, I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge the part played in my understanding of Sand Creek by Raymond G. Carey, late professor of history at the University of Denver, and Michael Straight, deceased author of A Very Small Remnant, a novel about Sand Creek, who together taught me many years ago about the importance of balance in history by their own extended and tempered correspondence on the subject, which they generously shared with me. Similarly, Robert M. Utley, Howard Roberts Lamar, the late Richard Maxwell Brown, the late Arrell M. Gibson, and the late Francis Paul Prucha, both in their published works and in their patient advice on a more personal level, provided inspiration and examples while teaching me to revere the study of history as a special mission to understand the human condition in a spirit of humility.

I can only hope that I have honored the trust of all of those who contributed to this effort, as well as the Council of Bishops, while acknowledging my own responsibility, as primary author, for any mistakes and failures that may be found herein.

Gary L. Roberts

This map shows the territories, migrations, and reservations of the Cheyennes, as well as 19th-century battle sites and 21st-century towns. From Handbook of North American Indians, 13/2, ed. Raymond J. DeMallie (Washington, DC: Smithsonian, 2001), fig. 1, p. 864. Used by permission.

This map shows the location of Arapaho territory about 1800, Cheyenne and Arapaho territory in the mid-1800s, and reservations. From Handbook of North American Indians, 13/2, ed. Raymond J. DeMaillie (Washington, DC: Smithsonian, 2001), fig. 1, p. 841. Used by permission.

Introduction

At the time, the Sand Creek Massacre was a small affair, hardly more than a skirmish when compared to the great campaigns in Georgia, Tennessee, and Virginia that were moving toward climax that bleak November of 1864. Fewer than 250 souls perished at Sand Creek, a meager tally in light of the carnage of Chickamauga and Petersburg. By any reasonable measure, Sand Creek was hardly more than a footnote in the Civil War. And yet, for all of that the Sand Creek affair seized public attention in the winter of 1864-1865 and generated a controversy that still excites heated debate, more than 150 years later. The issues underscored by that day's bloody work were no less important than the momentous questions roused in the public mind by Sherman's "March to the Sea."

The Sand Creek Massacre touched questions more elemental than burned-out plantation houses and homeless civilians. If "war is hell" as Sherman proclaimed, at Sand Creek demonic forces seemed unloosed so completely that humanity itself was the casualty. That was the charge that drew public attention to the Colorado frontier in 1865. That was the claim that spawned two congressional hearings and a military commission. Westerners vociferously and passionately denied the accusations. Reformers seized the charges as evidence of the failure of American Indian policy. Sand Creek launched a war that was not truly over for fifteen years. In the first year alone, it cost the United States government $50,000,000.

An American tragedy occurred there that remains a symbol of a conflict between what Americans believe themselves to be and the reality of what happened to Native peoples in the creation of the nation. Methodists have a special stake in this particular story. The governor whose policies led the Cheyennes and Arapahos to Sand Creek was a prominent Methodist layman. The commanding officer who ordered the attack on the Sand Creek village was a Methodist minister. Perhaps those were merely coincidences, but the question also remains of how the Church itself responded to what happened at Sand Creek. Was it also somehow culpable in what happened?

Since 1992, The United Methodist Church has attempted to address these questions in response to initiatives by Indian peoples and concerned Methodists. By apology and acts of repentance, the Church has sought to respond, culminating at the 2012 General Conference with a major "Service of Repentance for the Healing of Relationships with Indigenous Peoples" and a call for conferences and churches to build relationships with indigenous peoples. This was, and has been since, a major initiative for many churches and conferences. But there was yet a concern voiced by Cheyenne and Arapaho people that the Church had still not addressed questions of responsibility that matter to them. In response to these concerns, on April 20, 2012, at General Conference in Tampa, Florida, Petition 20760, 1864 Sand Creek Massacre (20767-IC-Non-Dis) was passed by final vote as follows:

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church hereby fully recognizes the Northern Cheyenne Tribe of Montana, and the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma, and the Northern Arapaho Tribe of Wyoming as the federally recognized Tribes as stated in the Treaty of the Little Arkansas with U.S. Government, as the official representatives concerning the Sand Creek Massacre.

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church through the Council of Bishops and the appropriate boards and agencies shall consult on and support efforts pertaining to preservation, repatriations, healing, awareness, research, education and reparations with the Northern Cheyenne Tribe of Montana, the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma, and the Northern Arapaho Tribe of Wyoming and their official Tribal Representatives for the November 29, 1864, Sand Creek Massacre.

The 2012 General Conference of The United Methodist Church through the Council of Bishops and The General Commission on Archives and History shall authorize research by a joint team including an independent body and provide full disclosure of the involvement and influence in the Sand Creek Massacre of John M. Chivington, Territorial Governor John Evans, the Methodist Church as an institution, and other prominent social, political and religious leaders of the time, and shall report back to the 2016 General Conference.

The United Methodist Church shall support and participate in the return to the "Tribes" of any Native artifacts or remains related to the Sand Creek Massacre.

Pursuant to paragraph three of this petition, a Joint Committee was organized consisting of ministers, laymen, historians, and tribal representatives of the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma, the Northern Arapaho Tribe in Wyoming, and the Northern Cheyenne Tribe in Montana. In order to insure that the study was truly “independent,” the committee chose a historian to write the report investigating the involvement of John M. Chivington, John Evans, the Methodist Church, and other prominent social, political, and religious leaders in the Sand Creek Massacre. The committee worked in consultation with the author in defining the scope of the report, concerns, and questions to be considered.

In crafting a report, it has been necessary not only to review the lives of Colonel Chivington and John Evans and the role played by the Methodist Episcopal Church, but also to consider a range of related and critical topics including the historical roots of the Sand Creek Massacre, the approach of the Church to American Indians over time, the differences in the ways of seeing in Euro-American culture and Native cultures, the forces at work in what has been called the “westward expansion” of Anglo-Americans in North America, the changing conditions of the nineteenth century, federal policy and law relating to Native Americans, and the responses of both white society and Cheyenne and Arapaho people to Sand Creek.

The basic method has been historical, but care has been taken to consider other ways of approaching the past since history is by definition a Western concept. Every effort was made to make the report balanced and fair in the belief that the results would be more accurate and convincing without the corroding influences of presentism (using the values of the present to judge the past) and legalism (making a predetermined case). There have been some surprises in the process that any other approach might well have missed, and the broad context within which the report was written has proven to be critical to the conclusions drawn.

It should be pointed out that language itself can be a problem. Certain terms are pejorative almost by definition. The use of terms such as “squaw,” “buck,” “papoose,” “red skins,” and “savage” are confined to quoted materials, primarily from recollections and historical documents. Such terms are demeaning and convey contempt and/or disrespect that the committee wished to avoid. Other expressions, such as “Indian fighter,” “friendlies,” and “hostiles” have also been used with care and are usually used with quotation marks. A few terms such as “raiders” or “raiding” can also be problematic, although within a military context, the word “raid” refers to a legitimate and specific form of military tactic. The committee has sought to avoid all evidence of pejorative language, except where it appears in historical documents and recollections and/or when it is used to convey the attitudes and values of the people and times under study.

A more difficult area of concern has been usage relating to proper identifications for the original inhabitants of the Western Hemisphere. This has generated debate even among the modern descendants of the original inhabitants. The term “Indian” has been used since the days of Columbus, deriving from the term “los Indios,” but there have been arguments whether the term derived from a mistaken belief that the inhabitants Columbus encountered were from the Asia subcontinent or from a reference by Columbus that identified the inhabitants as “En Dios,” in God, or “una gente in Dios,” the people in God. The debate is largely a twentieth-century debate about the most respectful and appropriate term. For a time “Indian” fell from favor because it was a generalized term that groups many different peoples together within a single identifying category. It also was linked to Anglo-American usage that treated all Indians the same by means of a single narrowly defined image.

The term “Native American” was first used by the United States government as a category referring to the original inhabitants of the United States. Other terms such as “indigenous peoples” and “first Americans” were used by historians and anthropologists. In the 1960s with the growth of Native protests, the American Indian Movement (A. I. M.) took one position. In the 1970s, with the growth of academic programs on traditional cultures, the term “Native American Studies” became more commonplace. The issue was largely an internal one. Some leaders, like Russell Means, plainly declared, “I am an American Indian!” Others favored the usage of Native American. A few terms, like “Amerind,” found little traction outside limited academic circles.

The methodology followed here uses a combination of these expressions, all intended to be respectful. Whenever possible, specific tribal names are used. Within discussions surrounding particular tribes, after initial identification, the term “tribes” is used to avoid pedantic language. “Indigenous peoples,” “American Indians,” and “Indians” are used to describe collective groups involving multiple tribes or generalized policies. “The Indian” is also used to refer to the collective image that characterized white policy and popular image. “Indians” in the plural is the form most commonly used by North American tribal people themselves.

“Native,” always capitalized here, is used both as a noun and as an adjective, consistent with common usage in a large selection of recent works by both white and American Indian authors. The term “native American,” without the capital “N,” rarely used, would refer to any person born in the Western Hemisphere, or more particularly in the United States. “Indigenous people” refers to the original inhabitants of lands colonized by European nations. In preparing this report, care was taken to follow patterns of common usage from the most reliable sources rather than to take sides in any of the particular controversies over usage, which appears to have lost some of their former passion.

Another area that requires a special note at the outset is terminology relating to the Methodist Episcopal Church. First of all, there were many Methodist newspapers published in the nineteenth century. Most of them included as part of their title the words Christian Advocate. Examples would include the New York Christian Advocate, the Central Christian Advocate, the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the Western Christian Advocate, the Pacific Christian Advocate, and many more. The journal of each General Conference was labeled the Daily Christian Advocate. Wherever the term is used herein, the reference is to a Methodist Episcopal Church newspaper. It was said that most Methodists regarded their Christian Advocate as “the fifth gospel.”

Preachers included exhorters, who were often laymen, deacons, who were ordained, and elders, who were ordained for pastoral service. The Church was divided into conferences and districts. Each district had a “presiding elder,” the equivalent to the modern “district superintendent.” “Connection” was a formal recognition of a minister’s relationship with a particular district. “Itinerancy,” a vital concept in the early church, referred to the practice of moving from one church to another either as a “circuit rider” or as a “pastor.” A “traveling connection” referred to a person who was enabled by a district to follow an itinerant ministry without being assigned to a particular church. If a minister left the ministry, either temporarily or permanently, the conference would declare him to be “located.” “Location” could be at a minister’s own request or by decision of the conference. All of these terms are used in describing the activities of John M. Chivington and the Church at large.

The Sand Creek Massacre was tragedy in the truest sense, raw, visceral, brutal, but with hints of heroism and even nobility in its blood-red story. It is also shockingly common, proving how unexceptional—and hence more terrifying—those events and the men who lived them were. Paradoxically, though, it did have profound effects not associated with other similar events. It became an emblem of the failure of Indian policy and a fulcrum of debate for decades. Even now, coming to grips with the Sand Creek Massacre involves hard questions and unsatisfactory answers not only about what happened but also about why. It stirs ancient questions about the best and worst in every person, questions older than history, questions as relevant as today’s headlines.

Chapter I

Which Way? Whose Way?

For the vast majority of Methodists, and of all who share the Euro-American tradition, the Sand Creek Massacre is a historical tragedy from the distant past, an unfortunate reminder of a dark side of American history best forgotten or acknowledged as an embarrassing example of past error in dealing with Native Americans. Even those who recognize its significance and its injustice see it in historical terms, perhaps important, but like Andersonville or the Homestead Strike or the Haymarket Riots or Ludlow or Selma, something to learn from and move on in the pursuit of the Great Values that are supposed to define the United States as a nation. The important thing is to acknowledge past error in the hope that it may inform the future and prevent such things from happening again.

Historians are concerned with what happened, why it happened, who was responsible, what can be learned from its study, and what it tells us about the past and about ways of looking at the past. Over time, Sand Creek has been justified and condemned with legalistic precision, based upon the written records that survived from that time, supplemented by archaeological findings and oral recollections. Historians explore conditions, chronology, motives, character, political and economic interests, and values. The need for historians, especially the best of them, is to learn and to explain, not caring what the truth is, but “concerned only with finding it,” as Father Francis Paul Prucha expressed it. Significantly, Prucha did not claim truth is easy to find or that new tools and perspectives will not throw new light on it. “Finding it,” after all, is a quest subject to fresh insights and new evidence. The Sand Creek Massacre is a “historical problem” to be solved and learned from.¹

For Cheyennes and Arapahos, on the other hand, the Sand Creek Massacre is an enduring trauma, not history, not even past, certainly not something that can be forgotten with an embarrassed apology. To the Cheyennes and Arapahos in Oklahoma, Wyoming, and Montana, Sand Creek is profoundly personal. It is not an event they read about in books. They know the names of those who died there and of those who survived because they are family members. They grew up hearing the stories of what happened at Sand Creek from elders and relatives and pass them on after the manner in which they were told to them.

Sand Creek is also linked to enduring grievances, to promises made but never kept, to apologies offered that proved hollow and gratuitous. For Cheyennes and Arapahos, the site of the Sand Creek Massacre is a holy place, made holy by the blood of their ancestors. The betrayal that occurred there is different. It was there that trust was finally broken. In every negotiation between the Cheyennes and Arapahos and the federal government since 1864, the Sand Creek Massacre has been an ongoing presence, always there as an obstacle to trust even on issues seemingly distant—to whites, at least—from that long ago moment in time.²

The Cheyenne and Arapaho search for meaning is pursued in other ways. They listen to the old ones, remembering them in the ways they first heard them. They walk the ground at Sand Creek. They believe that the souls of the dead often remained in the places where they died. They hear the cries of women and children, the thunder of horses, the din of battle. They pray that they will be led to the places and to remnants that may survive of what happened there. They look for sacred signs. They take these things and use them in their quest to understand what happened. In these ways and others they gain insights.

Many historians have difficulty with this approach because it does not conform to the norms of traditional historical method. William T. Hagan wrote in his review of Father Peter John Powell’s People of the Sacred Mountain: A History of the Northern Cheyenne Chiefs and Warrior Societies, 1830-1879, that Powell’s narrative “presents without question a succession of miracles and other evidences of divine intervention as determining the course of Cheyenne history” that academic historians would discount or view with suspicion.³ While raising questions about Powell’s methodology, John Moore, an anthropologist who studied the Cheyennes extensively, wrote of Powell’s book in yet another review, “One looks in vain . . . for a more common-sense evaluation of military tactics.”⁴ In other words, though not “academically sound,” the Cheyennes and Arapahos contribute a vital perspective on what happened.

The problem is that many of those trained as historians, anthropologists, and archaeologists find that Indian explanations of what happened are based upon supernatural causes and oral traditions that are unacceptable as explanations within the rational formats of Western thought. The most common response has been to dismiss Native understandings entirely. They appear to the Western mind to be superstition or myth, and, thus, not entitled to consideration as history. At the very least, such accounts are viewed as “unreliable” or “ahistorical.” In 1865, the Minneconjou Sioux chief, Lone Horn, who warned U.S. government treaty commissioners of the dangers of building a road into Sioux country, told them: “if you white people go through our country, I fear as to those young men among us who have no father and mother to restrain them; I fear they will have trouble with your white people back here, who have no ears.”⁵ In the recorded exchanges between whites and Plains Indians, the persistent reference to whites “having no ears” is a theme repeated over and over again. At the simplest level, this expression conveyed the idea that whites would not listen. Quick to judge and certain of superior understanding of what happened, settlers, soldiers, policy makers, missionaries, and historians have routinely discounted Indian accounts as having little or no value.⁶

But this poses a problem. Robert F. Berkhofer, Jr. argues that the task of the historian is not to judge according to one’s own understanding of what is right and wrong or by one’s own conclusions about past mistakes. He says, rather, that anyone who wishes to learn what happened must seek “to understand the past in terms of the actors’ conceptions of their situations.”⁷ In other words, to leave out any side’s view of what happened is certain to distort or corrupt conclusions. Differing value systems and ways of seeing must be taken into account. This is a challenging proposition because it requires becoming comfortable with mind-sets different from one’s own. It is not an invitation to be uncritical but, rather, to expand the critical search into areas or points of view that may have been neglected or misunderstood. John C. Ewers insisted that it was not the purpose of the historian of Indian-white relations to be “kind to either party in this historic confrontation.” Rather, he said, “I do think he should study this very complex theme in both breadth and depth, consulting and weighing all the sources he can find, so that he can be fair to both sides.”⁸

In practice, most authors and readers prefer simple answers. Much of the literature on Sand Creek focuses on whether Sand Creek was a massacre or not. Far too many accounts amount to briefs for one side or the other. Authors set out to prove that Sand Creek was a massacre or that it was not. Unfortunately, either can be done simply by excluding the testimony that does not support the point of view being offered. Another approach, used most often by activists and reformers, complicates the “good guys”/“bad guys” approach through the use of presentism.⁹ Presentism involves making judgments about past events based upon present-day standards, in effect blaming those in the past for not anticipating all of the moral and political changes since the time of the event. Frequently, presentism serves a political agenda, although in some cases it merely involves naïve assumptions that values are constant.¹⁰

For a long time historians took what might be called an “end justifies the means” approach that argued that the conquest of Native America was not only inevitable but beneficial. The advancing American frontier opened the way for civilization and for the American values of democracy, economic opportunity, and human rights. Even before Frederick Jackson Turner drafted the model of this view, it was expressed in many works of history and in commentaries by government officials and religious leaders.¹¹ A more complex, yet often misleading development began in the twentieth century, with what has been called by some the “victim ideology.” This view depicts the relationship between European colonizers and indigenous populations as “one long undifferentiated tragedy inflicted on innocent—and passive—victims.”¹²

Debates over the latter view have spawned “Native American studies,” “American genocide studies,” and “settler colonialism studies,” all of which have added new perspectives and have value as much in the questions they raise as in the conclusions they reach.¹³ They have served well to raise awareness of the mistreatment of American Indians over the centuries, but some of them have ill-served Indians by portraying them as helpless victims. Such a view demeans the power of various Native cultures by distorting their adaptability, their capacity to resist, their values, their diplomatic and military skills, and the genius of many of their leaders. A case can be made that Anglo-Americans were unable to defeat Native Americans without adopting their tactics because their own tactics were “inadequate to the task.” It is true that Indians were frequently shocked by the ferocity of white warfare, but many tribes were able to hold the invaders at bay for far longer than the chroniclers of one massacre after another allow.¹⁴

As Jared Diamond notes, “The reason not to mistreat indigenous people . . . is that it is unjust to mistreat them.” It is not necessary to build a false narrative to make the case. “The rights of indigenous people should be asserted on moral grounds,” Diamond adds, “not by making untrue claims susceptible to refutation.”¹⁵ To argue that Native tribes effectively resisted white intrusion into the trans-Appalachian region for more than half a century through a remarkable combination of adjustments, adaptations, negotiations, intertribal alliances, and open warfare, does not justify the slaughter of the Conestogas or the Massacre at Gnadenhutten or Bad Axe. Nor, for that matter, does acknowledging intertribal warfare, the use of torture, or practices like scalping and mutilation of the dead by some tribes justify or ameliorate the mistreatment of Native Americans. It is hardly fair to warrior peoples, whose descendants still take pride in their military traditions, to portray them as passive.

What is most notable, in spite of the invasion of America, the subjugation of Indian peoples, and the abuse that accompanied and followed the conquest, was the survival of Native peoples in all of their diversity. Indigenous tribes were, indeed victims of forces beyond their control including Eurocentric ideas, attitudes, cultural forms, and technologies that influenced policy and conflict in ways that eventually overwhelmed them, but they were neither helpless nor guiltless in response. Some of the cultural changes were unintentional, but not all of them were unwelcome. Indians accepted, even welcomed, white technology, learned from white ways and ideas, and some, at least, saw the Europeans as benefactors and allies.

In the long run, what made the difference was not strategy and tactics, technology, will, or race. To think otherwise is to underestimate Native intelligence and Native capacity to adapt. Ultimately, the real issue was power. White America was able to work its will over time by sheer numbers and literally steam-driven organization that overwhelmed the independence and rate of response of traditional societies. Land, attitude, world view, and technology were all less important than population growth and political and economic organization. It was not the superiority of "civilization" over "savagery" nor racism over inclusion that ultimately determined the outcome, but the power to conquer over the power to resist.¹⁶

Something more must be understood. The misunderstanding and disrespect that lay at the heart of the process was more than a simple division into good and evil. Something more complicated, and yet simpler, was involved, something central to the shared humanity of victims and victimizers. Herman Melville wrote in a review of Francis Parkman's The California and Oregon Trail, "We are all of us—Anglo-Saxons, Dyaks, and Indians—sprung from one head, and made in one image. And if we regret this brotherhood now, we shall be forced to join hands hereafter. A misfortune is not a fault; and good luck is not meritorious. The savage is born a savage; and the civilized being but inherits his civilization, nothing more."¹⁷

A common core of beliefs and values, a shared humanity, things which all people regardless of culture hold dear are part of the human condition as well as cultural differences. What, then, kept good men, white and red, from opening these resources? The easy answers are words like greed and prejudice and hatred, but beyond those flaws, something more subtle was always at work, fostering misunderstanding and abuse, suspicion and distrust, something that is fundamental to understanding tragedies like the Sand Creek Massacre. Not every culture sees the world in the same way.

Every people in the human family have thought itself special. The Egyptians, the Persians, the Greeks, the Romans, the Mongols, the Spanish, the British, the French, the Maya, the Aztecs, and all of the builders of empires across the centuries on every continent have proclaimed it so. The indigenous peoples of Africa, Asia, the Americas, and the islands of the Pacific were no less certain of it. The etymology of Native American tribal names reveals a remarkable consistency of using terms such as "the People," "Human Beings," "Called Out People," "the Chosen Ones," and similar expressions to identify particular groups as special and set apart from others. Cheyennes and Arapahos were not exceptions to the general premise.¹⁸

This should not be surprising. Human beings judge themselves and others by what they know. They view their own ways as the standard against which outsiders are measured. They assume a superiority of their groups based upon a collection of habits, customs, and beliefs and on their relationships with nature and with God. All manner of things may change around them from the way they live their lives to the places where they live, but most cling to a belief that theirs is the better way. This has been true of conquerors and conquered, of rulers and slaves, of nation states and tribes.

The myths and histories of the human experience are also replete with prophecies and admonitions that each people should remain separate and honor the ways of their fathers. Warnings abound of the consequences of forgetting the past. The near universality of such traditional stories is more than a historical relic. Over time these views have been changed and modified to accommodate different parts of the human family, new experiences, and different ways of relating to others. Historical events, environmental changes, spiritual understandings, and cultural myths have altered group perceptions and led, at least in theory, to notions of mutual respect and universal human rights. But such understandings, when they have come, have been the result of slow, and often painful, processes, in which misunderstandings and lack of mutual respect have sustained conflict and lingering distrust, even after the desire for harmony has been accepted in principle.

This process has been complicated by differing ways of seeing on the part of different groups. What has been determinative in the relationship of groups, however, has not been the superiority of one way of seeing over another, of a right way over a wrong way, but rather by the simple rule of power, of the capacity of one group to impose its will upon others. What is less well understood is that even the most oppressive forms of power rarely, if ever, eradicate other ways of seeing.

One way of seeing may eventually overwhelm others, economically, politically, militarily, even religiously; but the way of seeing, including its traditional values and world view, usually survives even in the face of change. Four hundred years and more of conflict between the European powers (and their offspring in American nation states) and the indigenous peoples of the Western hemisphere changed the face of what was called “the New World,” but it did not change the essentials of Native ways of seeing. It changed much, to be sure, and it would be foolhardy to claim that American Indians or their Euro-American conquerors have not changed their cultural mind-sets over time. The ability to adapt is strong, but it rarely takes the form of capitulation. Different ways of seeing remain and continue to affect relationships between diverse groups.¹⁹

The way of seeing of the Euro-American world—what is usually called “Western Civilization”—rests upon a linear view of life. Time moves chronologically along a line inexorably from beginning to end. This view implies an irreversibility of events and leads to the central concept of progress, with all of its rational, empirical, scientific, technological, and historical assumptions. Progress, like time, is linear, moving along a line through phases, passages from primitive to civilized. This view of life is analytic in nature, based on accumulating knowledge, understanding parts, dividing culture, and assigning value to discrete elements. Refining, inventing, plotting new strategies, seeking proofs are the methods of reason.

Westerners assumed an evolutionary world view long before the theory of evolution was ever advanced as a key to biological change. Civilized status is measured according to where human groups fit upon a series of scales, from hunter-gatherers to complex modern economies, from stone tools to the use of metals to modern science using many forms of energy and technology, from families to bands to tribes to kingdoms to nation states. The position of various human groups seems self-evident by this model. Science, philosophy, art, medicine, history, economics, ethics are similarly measured, then separated and dissected independently, boxed apart from each other into “disciplines.”

Within each box, the linear measure moves from simple to complex with the complex usually being the more sophisticated form, meaning the “superior” form. It is an eminently practical system that allows a reasoned establishment of order. It assumes the “Great Chain of Being” that was embraced by the ancient Greeks and reaffirmed in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries—a hierarchical view of the universe based upon science, progress, improvement, and order, from the most basic elements upward to God. Its analytic character has created skepticism, suspicion of the metaphysical and the spiritual, and an air of superiority that makes it dismissive of other ways of seeing. Ironically, even religious forms are frequently empty of spirituality and wonder, given over instead to rules, dogmas, and rituals that flush away the core principles of faith.²⁰

In the Western way of seeing, reality is man-centered and time-centered; reality is explored—historically, scientifically, and religiously—in terms of the human experience over time. History is essential to this process. This way of seeing is concerned not merely with what happens to man or what man does, but also with what the human experience means. It is not enough to know that something happened. Humans must understand how it happened and why. Western religion and Western science have adopted the historical model as a basis of belief and of order. Christianity rests on a linear movement through time from Creation to the End of Time. It follows a chronological model, with lengthy genealogies, important events, and prophecies based upon the movement of time. Reason and analysis, even when couched in grand departures, are framed in the human-centered view of existence. Nature is something to be used by humans. Land, animals, plants, and every other form are to be subdued, overcome, and dominated. Uncontrolled land is wilderness, beautiful perhaps, but also foreboding, threatening, dangerous, somehow wasted in its natural state, something that must be “tamed.”²¹

By contrast, the American Indian way of seeing is cyclic rather than linear. Its model is not a line, but a circle, not the Great Chain of Being, but the Great Harmony, encompassing life in a transcendent cycle, not an irrevers-ible line. Its forms are metaphysical and focused upon where and how humans fit within the circle. Both the past and the future are but aspects of the present, and every creature within Creation has place and spirit, even including the animals that provide meat, the land that sustains them, the rocks, and the rivers. Nature sustains humanity, and humanity repays nature in a celebration of life. Thus, reality is nature-centered. It is Creation (the earth and the universe beyond and all of the creatures, great and small, animal and plant, stone and sand and loam, rivers and lakes, and oceans, mountains and plains, sun, moon, and stars) that is central. Humans are merely a part of the grand design; all things are equally important. There is an essential interrelatedness of all Creation. Faith, morality, and ethics are about understanding the right ways of maintaining the unity of all things because that unity is the Great Good intended by the All-Father.²²

The Southern Cheyenne historian Henrietta Mann explains that “Cheyenne history is a continuum of sacred experiences rooted into the American landscape. . . . Their continuity as a people requires that they maintain their way of life. Specifically, they must maintain their traditions, beliefs, spiritual life, and through their ceremonies, maintain their sacred mission to keep the earth alive.”²³ “To keep the earth alive.” That is an important concept, a purpose quite different from progress. The purpose is to stay alive and vital within the natural order, not to improve. Life is sacred, with features that transmit the central meaning of existence. Circumstances may change, but essential patterns do not. In the Native way of seeing, the behavior, the form, the spiritual power that were real at the Creation are renewed and time itself is repudiated and annulled in a cycle like that of the seasons. Seasons may change but the order of things remains within the Great Circle.

Reality is defined by space and place. Understanding this may help explain the profound attachment to the land so central to white-Indian conflict both in the past and the present. Space is about the wholeness of things, the four directions, sky and earth, the Great Harmony, the Medicine Wheel, and Indian ceremonies are about restoring the wholeness of what has become chaotic or corrupted in order to assure a renewal of the true way and correct imbalances and brokenness in the circle. Place involves both sacred landmarks, such as Bear Butte in the Black Hills of South Dakota for the Cheyennes, and environments where particular peoples are supposed to be. The latter does not imply a single fixed spot, but rather that place where the people can thrive. Place is not a possession. It was here in the past and will be here in the future. Like animals and plants, people may move from one location to another, as the migrations of the various tribes clearly show, but finding place is essential to the unity. Being out of place destroys the unity and life of the people in the same way that moving grass from the plains to the desert would kill the grass.

Joseph Epes Brown wrote, “Events or processes transmitted through oral traditions tend to be recounted neither in terms of time past or time future in a lineal sense. Indeed most languages have no such tenses to express this. They speak rather of a perennial reality of the now.”²⁴ What matters is the experience. There is no need to explain or question because experience has its own voice. History is not remembered as chronology. It is recounted in stories that recall important ideas and places, traumatic events like the loss of the Sacred Arrows to the Pawnees or the Sand Creek Massacre for the Cheyennes, great men and women, and moments that define who the Cheyennes and Arapahos are (as one example). In the telling of these stories, dates are not given beyond expressions like “a long time ago,” “when my great-grandfather was a boy,” or “in the time before the white soldiers came.” This form of historical consciousness is concerned with the place the events described have among the people and the role the accounts still play in their lives.²⁵

Of course, as Vine DeLoria, Jr., pointed out, over time, under the pressures of life changes brought about by contact with whites and the experience of the reservation system, government schools, and efforts to understand what was happening to them, Indian people absorbed some of the thinking of Western civilization. De Loria wrote, “We face the future immediately, and while we can be aware of the sound basis for primitive beliefs and customs, we can never return to them or take them up, expecting them to save us.” What he hoped for was that the Native way of seeing could be understood, its essence preserved, and incorporated into “a more comprehensive and intelligent view of the world.”²⁶ In fact, contact with the Western way of seeing has certainly modified some thinking and led to adaptations as a matter of survival, but the Native way of seeing remains vital in the decisions and mind-sets of today’s Indian people.

The Native way was never static or obtuse. In fact, it has always been characterized by sensitivity and awareness. Vigilance and responsibility are what keep the world alive. Refining, inventing, and plotting new strategies may be facts of life, but when circumstances intrude with new wonders and challenges, they must be dealt with within the ancient, primal context. In this system there is little place for dominion. In order for it to function there is little place for the Western strategy of dividing culture or assigning value to discrete elements. Rather, the Native Way unifies the various aspects of culture and experience into a single whole.

Oglala writer Ed McGaa explains that in the Great Circle of Life, each person is driven by “a living circle of energy,” built upon character, background, knowledge, and experience.²⁷ It is the natural way. American Indian historian Donald L. Fixico, of Shawnee, Sac and Fox, Muscogee Creek, and Seminole ancestry, explains:

Nothing is transfixed. Nothing is secure or stable or permanent, and Indian people have accepted this situation. We want to believe that nothing has changed, but the reality is that all things change, even the story that we remember being told, but as long as the fabric of the truths of a story are retained, then we can accept it.²⁸

Some entities are more powerful than others according to their strengths, and some are unknown; but Native people respect all entities because of their power to influence people. Balance is the object of life, Fixico argues, including balance within one’s self, within the family, within the community, with external communities, including other tribes and the spiritual world, and with the environment and universe. He cites Mary Roberts’s view that “implicitly contrasting Indians with whites, the Indian mind is not literal, specific, scientific—it is philosophical, vague, and poetic.”²⁹

Westerners may think, then, that the Indian way of seeing is naïve. Historians, government agents, and religious leaders have frequently thought so and dismissed the Indian way as “childish” or “primitive.” It is not. In fact, it may well be better attuned to the essence of life than the self-absorbed, computerized, insensate world that characterizes the West. It is grounded in the balance that Fixico describes and, in this way, attuned to the world in ways that the Western way of seeing left behind long ago on its linear scale.

Calvin Martin, who decades ago, pointed out the dangers of the Western view of history, with its essential ethnocentrism, argued that historians must cultivate the “metaphysics of the Native American lifeway” and underscored the importance of including the “cosmological perspective” of the Native way of seeing. That means, practically, that it is important to give Native Americans their own “historic voice.” The cyclic view of life does not run along a scale of time in the way that Western thought does. It focuses rather on perpetual renewal, a constant reaffirmation of Creation. This view is “eternal, cyclical, endlessly repetitive, powered by Nature and cosmogonic.”³⁰ History for Native peoples is “sacred history,” constantly linked to “the primordial unity from which it issued.” In this view there is no need for “progress” in the way that the Euro-American view insists upon. The Cheyennes see themselves directly involved in Creation, “not just for their own sake, their own welfare, but for the welfare of creation in whose uterus they thrive.”³¹ For them, the land was life—not property or a place of residence. It was the connection to all things that matter. The indigenous way was fully capable of adaptation, but not for the sake of change. The biological core remained. Much that whites did, including the introduction of Western ideas and beliefs, broke the links with Nature or separated the people from its forces.

The point of this discourse is not to argue for the superiority of one way of seeing over the other but merely to underscore that there are different ways of seeing. Understanding this means that people must learn to communicate effectively across cultural lines. The different ways of seeing must be understood and valued before words like “peace” and “reconciliation” can have meaning, purpose, or hope of reality. Other distinctions are important. A way of seeing reflects a centralized perspective on the nature of life developed and sustained over time. The linear approach of Western civilization is the product of thought and values and experience. It shaped the thinking of most of Europe and of the colonizing societies of the Western hemisphere and of other Eurocentric expansion. The cyclic way of seeing among Native Americans shaped their response to the invaders in terms of their thought and values and experience.

Culture may also vary within a particular way of seeing. Cheyennes, Arapahos, Navajos, Apaches, Creeks, Cherokees, Crows, Shoshonis, Lakotas, Ojibwa, Iroquois, Pequots, Delawares, and many other groups share the circular view of life; but they differ too. Culture differentiates. It provides the sources of identity. It is combative and defensive when challenged by others with other cultural values. Similarly, although they share a linear way of seeing, Spanish, French, Italian, English, German, and other Europeans represent different cultures that vary in emphasis, language, and experience. Indeed, cultures may vary within a single linguistic or national group. This means, practically, that within both the linear and cyclic ways of seeing, many different cultures emerged, approaching life within a particular way of seeing in essentially the same way, but experiencing life differently and having different traditions, spiritual forms, and languages as a result.

Often overlooked is yet another critical consideration, which may best be defined as mind-set. Although the essential way of seeing remains consistent, mind-set changes based upon thought and experience. The mind-set of the Renaissance differed from the mind-set of the Age of Revolution and from that of the Age of Industrialization or of the Post-Industrial Age. Moreover, within any historical period, the mind-set may vary by nation or even within nations. The same must be said for changes of mind-set between and among North American Indian tribes. It must not be assumed that the Native mind-set was the same from the settlement of the English colonies through the allotment of tribal lands following the Dawes Act to the present. Even within particular tribes mind-sets may vary although the culture and the way of seeing are shared.

This may seem esoteric, which is evidence within itself of the difficulty of understanding and resolving cross-cultural differences, whether historical in nature or concerned with current policies and interaction. This is more complicated than the simple “clash of cultures” model that has been posited as an explanation of Indian-white relations in American history. Neither is it a matter of embracing multiculturalism. At the simplest level it is recognizing that there are different ways of seeing, different cultures, and different mind-sets. It involves not merely trying to understand the “other” way of seeing but of realizing that there are multiple ways of seeing cultures and mind-sets, not only at the time that events occur but also at the times they are studied. What has generally been called “white-Indian” relations was never a simple, bifurcated conflict with only two points of view; it was a dynamic and changing process dependent upon a variety of factors, affected by time, place, and perspective. There have been consistent patterns of behavior and thought, but to simplify the conflict to a generalized “them” and “us” conflict distorts what happened.

Father Francis Paul Prucha, perhaps the leading authority on American Indian policy, reminds those approaching the field that they not only face the challenge of understanding differing ways of seeing, but also of realizing that mind-sets change over time as well. “It is customary,” he writes, “to insist that we grasp something of the world view of the Indian cultures (because we instinctively know they are different from our own), and we try not to judge one culture by the norms of another. What is often forgotten is that we must also understand past white societies and not assume that the 1830s [for example] can be understood by the norms and values of the 1970s [or of the 2010s].”³² Confronting the past ought, at the very least, to generate new sensitivities and responses to the ideas and problems that the past left previous generations, rather than the application of present understanding alone.

In 1866, General Samuel Ryan Curtis, who commanded the Department of Kansas at the time of the Sand Creek Massacre, witnessed a sun dance. He wrote, “The scene closed leaving on my memory a picture of terrible superstition and sanguinary barbarity such as I hope never to witness.” He described “this scandalous devotion” to the Northwestern Christian Advocate, adding that it “seems a reproach against the mission efforts of our age and people.”³³ By way of contrast, Native observers were not so much shocked by the principles of Christianity or the teachings of Christ, as they were by the squabbling of missionary groups among themselves and the failure of Christians to live up to the principles they taught. The inconsistency was incomprehensible to them. James West, a contemporary Cheyenne, goes so far as to suggest that theology is a “non-Indian concept” standing in sharp contrast to “a spiritual way of life” as practiced by Native peoples.³⁴

From the beginning, Anglo-Americans assumed a superior attitude toward the indigenous people they encountered. At times, they accommodated Indians in order to survive or simply from curiosity, but they also measured themselves against the Indians, and, given their technological superiority at arms and industry, and their “true faith,” they quickly began to see themselves as a new breed of men, as free of Europe as they were privy to the bounty of the New World. They were “new,” whether living in commonwealths of faith or building farms and plantations and towns. They had opportunities they had scarcely imagined before. Richard Slotkin points to Melville’s Captain Ahab in Moby Dick as “an allegorical representation of the American world quest: he is obsessed, compelling, unstoppable, completely wrapped up in his own rhetorical justification and his sense of cosmic symbolism.” This “new American” came at the expense of indigenous people not only through the bloody wars that “regenerated” the American vision but also through the arrogant assumption of the superiority of white ways.³⁵

In 1899, George Bird Grinnell, an early student of Cheyenne culture and history, wrote of the reformers of the past who tried to help but instead furthered the damage to Indian people:

The sincerity and earnestness of a majority of such philanthropists cannot be doubted, but in all their reasoning about Indians there has been one point of weakness: They had no personal knowledge of the inner life of the people they were trying to help. Their theories appear to have assumed that Indians are precisely like white men, except that their minds are blank and plastic, ready to receive any impression that may be inscribed on them. These friends of the Indian had little acquaintance with Indian character; they did not appreciate the human nature of the people. They did not know that their minds were already occupied by a multitude of notions and beliefs that were firmly fixed there, rooted and ground by an inheritance of a thousand years. Still less did they comprehend the Indian's intense conservatism, the tenacity with which he clings to the beliefs which have been handed down to him by uncounted generations.³⁶

The reason was the inbred cultural arrogance of the linear way of seeing, the conviction that the only salvation for American Indians lay in recognizing and accepting the superiority of the "white man's way." Some white Americans openly wondered about it. Walt Whitman, in Leaves of Grass, pondered, "The friendly and flowing savage. . . . Who is he? Is he waiting for civilization or past it and mastering it?"³⁷ And Henry David Thoreau believed that white men and red were complements, that "the Indian remembered what the white man had forgotten, spoke what the white man could no longer comprehend," as Edwin S. Fussell puts it. Thoreau mused, "One revelation has been made to the Indian, another to the white man. I have much to learn of the Indian, nothing of the missionary. I am not sure but all that would tempt me to teach the Indian my religion would be his promise to teach me his."³⁸

Such reflections were thought to be romantic pap by the majority of white Americans for most of American history. They were more likely to agree with the esteemed Bishop James Andrew of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who proclaimed in 1854: ". . . our grand aim is to lead the young [Indians] into an entire abandonment of the language, and whatever is distinctively Indian; for after all the sentimentalism of poets and tourists, there is very little which belongs to the original savage character that is worth retaining."³⁹ So it was that many of those whites with the tenderest of hearts and the best of intentions were incapable of seeing beyond their own ancient way or of comprehending what Whitman and Thoreau sensed—questions that were closer to understanding than even the poets themselves realized. Indeed, in the end they would set aside their insights uneasily in favor of their ingrained understanding of progress and civilization.⁴⁰

In 1919, A. McG. Beede, an Episcopal missionary on the Standing Rock Reservation in North Dakota, reported that the Sioux and Chippewa had little problem understanding "the modern scientific attitude" or grasping, even enjoying, the ideas and processes of chemistry and physics. He tested his ideas among the Chippewa and Cree for eight months. He wrote: "But Rising Sun (one of his students), speaking the conclusion of all, pronounced 'the scientific view' inadequate. Not bad or untrue, but inadequate to explain, among many other things, how man is to find and know a road along which he wishes and chooses to make this said progress unless the Great Manitoo by his spirit guides the mind of man, keeping human beings just and generous and hospitable."⁴¹

The irony seems to be that for all of its accomplishments and "progress" the Western way of seeing is less open to alternative points of view than the cyclic way. Native Americans learned more of the Western way than Europeans learned of the Native way. The reason seems to be that the linear way of seeing, for all of its talk about science and reason, is more rigid and dogmatic. Vine Deloria, Jr., suggested that "In the Indian world, experience is not limited by mental considerations and assumptions regarding the universe. For the non-Indian the teachings of a lifetime come thundering down. Such things do not occur in time and space. Reality is basically physical. . . . Reality in a certain sense is what you allow your mind to accept, not what you experience. And a host of other beliefs rush in to cover up, confuse, and eventually eliminate the experience itself."⁴²

"Domination and inequities of power and wealth are perennial facts of human society," writes Edward W. Said, whose broad exploration of the interaction of cultures worldwide, provides insights both into different ways of seeing and into ways that cultures are able to come together. He sought in comparative studies of imperialism and Native responses keys to understanding and arresting the continuing conflicts around the world between the architects of colonialism and their descendants and indigenous peoples and their descendants. He pointed out an almost universal tendency to blame the victims of colonialism for their treatment and subsequent woes, which, he suggested, is usually a guilt-driven response to perceptions inconsistent with what nations want to believe about themselves. But he also warned that "blaming the Europeans sweepingly for the misfortunes of the present is not much of an alternative. What we need to do is to look at these matters as a network of interdependent histories that it would be inaccurate and senseless to repress, useful and interesting to understand."⁴³

Said argued something that should be obvious. Dominant cultures telling their Native “wards” that their societies are backward or savage or primitive or trying to convince them of the “good” that conquest and civilization have done for them, will not convince indigenous groups that it is true. “Even if you prevail over them, they are not going to concede to you your essential superiority or your right to rule them despite your evident wealth and power.” Even without the big, empty spaces, expanding frontiers, or new settlements that marked colonial expansion in the United States during the nineteenth century, social relationships remain “a dimly perceived, basically uninterpreted and uncomprehended fabric.” Selfish and narrow interests—patriotism, chauvinism, ethnic, religious, and racial hatreds—remain remorselessly present and prevent the cultural gaps from being crossed or even understood.

The need, he argued, is not so much for “learning about other cultures,” which he finds vague and inane as a goal, but rather for studying “the map of interactions” between cultures. In order to have an informed, explicit understanding of the relationships “it is a useful preparation to look at what still remains” of colonialism’s impact.⁴⁴ The residue of history in the present will provide insights into the issues that limit our understanding of the past. Said suggested that understanding present divisions may help illuminate the complex histories of conquerors and conquered created by the phenomena of “discovery” and “conquest.” He advocated exploring present cultural interactions as a tool for better understanding the past by means of an appreciation of current cultural differences and ways of seeing. This is about opening the mind to a wider range of ideas, concepts, values, and beliefs, as a foundation that may provide keys to a clearer understanding of past relationships, conflicts, and particular events like the Sand Creek Massacre.⁴⁵

If different cultures can identify present obstacles and understand them through dialogue that opens doors and breaks down ingrained prejudices and grievances, the past will be easier to understand at several levels including the reality that present mind-sets and past mind-sets are almost certainly different. Said concluded:

No one can deny the persisting continuities of long traditions, sustained habitations, national languages, and cultural geographies, but there seems no reason except fear and prejudice to keep insisting on their separation and distinctiveness, as if that was all human life was about. Survival in fact is about the connections between things; in Eliot’s phrase, reality cannot be deprived of the “other echoes [that] inhabit the garden.” It is more rewarding—and more difficult—to think concretely and sympathetically, contrapuntally, about others than only about “us.” But this also means not trying to rule others, not trying to classify them or put them in hierarchies, above all, not constantly reiterating how “our” culture or country is number one (or not number one, for that matter).

What is required, then, in order to understand a particular event like the Sand Creek Massacre is to explore the larger context of what happened in terms of all of the parties involved and the differences in their ways of seeing to learn why it happened and the levels of responsibility of the individuals involved and of the impact it had upon cultures and history. Only then can Sand Creek be understood and its moral consequences appreciated across the gaps that continue to exist and the mistakes that continue to be made.

Notes: Chapter I

1. Francis Paul Prucha, “Doing Indian History,” Indian Policy in the United States: Historical Essays (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1981), p. 11.
2. Ari Kelman, The Misplaced Massacre: Struggling Over the Memory of Sand Creek (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2013), provides a masterful explanation of the enduring presence of Sand Creek in relationships between the Cheyennes and Arapahos and the U.S. Government. Gary Leland Roberts, “Sand Creek: Tragedy and Symbol” (unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, University of Oklahoma, 1984), provides a more traditional review of the influence of Sand Creek on federal Indian policy.
3. Quoted in Raymond G. DeMallie, “‘These Have No Ears’: Narrative and the Ethnohistorical Method,” Ethnohistory, 40 (Fall 1993): 535n. DeMallie, himself, p. 526, called Powell’s book, “the most thoroughly consistent, culturally grounded interpretation of the history of an American Indian group ever written. To me, its publication serves as a watershed; it points the way to alternative narrative modes.” Richard White, “Using the Past: History and Native American Studies,” Studying Native America: Problems and Prospects. Edited by Russell Thornton (Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1998), pp. 225-226, offers a more critical review of Powell’s methodology, insisting that, employing DeMallie’s own proposition that the historian must replicate the world view of the participants without embracing it.” He asks, “. . . would we not expect him to disavow and critique it and deny him credibility?”—p. 226. DeMallie had argued in “These Have No Ears,” pp. 516-525, that the challenge of ethnohistory is to bring two different types of historical data together “to construct a fuller picture of the past.” White suggests that this would produce a third perspective of historical events—“that of the ethnohistorian.” White, “Using the Past,” p. 225.
4. Quoted in DeMallie, “These Have No Ears,” p. 535.
5. Ibid., pp. 520-521.

6. Kate Bighead, a Cheyenne woman present at Custer's Last Stand, told Dr. Thomas B. Marquis that two Southern Cheyenne women present at the Little Big Horn who knew George Armstrong Custer from his days on the Southern Plains, punctured Custer's ear drums with sewing awls after his death because "he had not heard what our chiefs in the South said when he smoked the pipe with them. They told him then that if ever afterward he should break that peace promise and should fight the Cheyennes the Everywhere Spirit surely would cause him to be killed." Kate Bighead's account, originally published by Marquis as a pamphlet in 1933, is most accessible in Paul Andrew Hutton, The Custer Reader (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2004), pp. 366-374. Some historians consider this account to be apocryphal, but it is plausible considering the use of the metaphor by the Lakota and the Cheyennes.

7. Robert F. Berkhofer, Jr., Salvation and the Savage: An Analysis of Protestant Missions and American Indian Response, 1787-1862 (New York: Atheneum, 1972), p. xvii.

8. John C. Ewers, "When Red and White Men Met," Western Historical Quarterly, 2 (1971): 150. Prucha, "Doing Indian History," p. 11, added that the goal of finding the truth cannot be set aside, "no matter how we all fall short of it." He cautioned against being "too much concerned about making points for one side of a controversy or another." Expanding perspectives and considering other ways of seeing are ways to ensure a fairer analysis.

9. For an excellent, but somewhat dated, review of the historiography of Sand Creek see Michael Sievers, "The Sands of Sand Creek Historiography," Colorado Magazine, 49 (1972): 116-143. Efforts to justify Sand Creek and make Chivington and Evans into "good guys," began in the reminiscences of early Coloradans and in more general works such as J. P. Dunn, Massacres of the Mountains (New York: Harper & Brothers, 1886); Reginald S. Craig, The Fighting Parson: The Biography of Colonel John M. Chivington (Los Angeles: Westernlore Press, 1959); William R. Dunn, "I Stand by Sand Creek": A Defense of Colonel John M. Chivington and the Third Colorado Cavalry (Ft. Collins, CO: The Old Army Press, 1985); and Gregory F. Michno, Battle at Sand Creek: The Military Perspective (El Segundo, CA: Upton and Sons, 2004). This represents only a sampling of the Chivington-as-good-guy literature that portrays Sand Creek as a battle rather than as a massacre. By reason of its purposes, reform literature has provided the best examples of works written to "prove" the bad guys' approach to Sand Creek, beginning with Helen Hunt Jackson: A Century of Dishonor (Boston: Roberts Brothers, 1886). Dee Brown, Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee (New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1970); David E. Stannard, American Holocaust: The Conquest of the New World (New York: Oxford University Press, 1992); and Ward Churchill, A Little Matter of Genocide: Holocaust and Denial in the Americas 1492 to the Present (San Francisco, City Lights Books, 1997) reflect a similar approach. What these works share are predetermined agendas to make the case that Sand Creek was or was not a massacre. The list for both could be greatly enlarged, especially if popular works and periodical literature were included. Stan Hoig, The Sand Creek Massacre (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1961) was a good-faith attempt to understand Sand Creek and remains a good place to start for readers who want a simple, straightforward introduction to the subject. Fortunately, a number of historians and writers have sought to "understand" Sand Creek rather than to "build a case" for or against Sand Creek as a massacre. Kelman, Misplaced Massacre, previously cited, represents a recent example of this effort. Others will be referenced within the notes of this report.

10. David Hackett Fischer, Historians' Fallacies: Toward a Logic of Historical Thought (New York: Harper Torchbooks, 1970). Lynn Hunt, "Against Presentism," <https://www.historians.org/on-publications-and-directories/perspectives-on-history/may-2002/against-presentism>, is a brief summary of the problem of presentism. She defines presentism as "interpreting the past in terms of present concerns." This, she argues, "usually leads us to find ourselves morally superior" to earlier generations. "Our forebears constantly fail to measure up to our present-day standards." What it involves is imposing present values on earlier times in order to demonstrate their failures, most often in moral and political terms. This practice should not be confused with the important function of revising history in light of new sources, changes in perspective, or the questions asked of history, which do, in fact, change over time. This report, for example, was mandated to answer particular questions about the responsibilities of John Chivington, John Evans, and the Methodist Church for the Sand Creek Massacre. It was not written to prove a particular view, one way or another. Rather, the object is to determine culpability. Particular conclusions were not mandated. This is an important distinction. The present may determine the questions asked; it should not determine the answers.

11. Frederick Jackson Turner's works are widely accessible. His essays "The Significance of History" (1891) and "The Significance of the Frontier in American History" are particularly important. These and other works may be found in Frederick Jackson Turner, The Frontier in American History. Edited by Wilbur R. Jacobs (Tucson: University of Arizona Press, 1986).

12. James Belich, Replenishing the Earth: The Settler Revolution and the Rise of the Anglo World, 1783-1939 (New York: Oxford University Press, 2009), p. 552. See also Jurgen Osterhammel, The Transformation of the World: A Global History of the Nineteenth Century. Translated by Patrick Camiller (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2014), pp. 370-374.

13. Useful anthologies include, but are not limited to, such works as Thornton, Studying Native America; Calvin Martin, editor, The American Indian and the Problem of History (New York: Oxford University Press, 1987); M. Annette Jaimes, editor, The State of Native America: Genocide, Colonization, and Resistance (Boston: South End Press, 1992); Devon A. Mihesuah, editor, Natives and Academics: Researching and Writing about American Indians (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1998); Andrew Woolford, Jeff Benvenuto, and Alexander Laban Hinton, editors, Colonial Genocide in Indigenous North America (Durham, NC: Duke University Press, 2014). Churchill, Stannard, and Belich, and the many works of Vine DeLoria, Jr., are all important. Lisa Ford, Settler Sovereignty: Jurisdiction and Indigenous People in America and Australia, 1788-1836 (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2010), also suggests the nature of new directions.

14. Lawrence H. Keeley, War Before Civilization: The Myth of the Peaceful Savage (New York: Oxford University Press, 1996), pp. 71-81, offers a particularly cogent argument for the effectiveness of indigenous warfare against Euro-American military forces.

15. Jared Diamond, The World Until Yesterday: What Can We Learn from Traditional Societies? (New York: Viking Press, 2012), pp. 153-154.
16. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 181-182.
17. Herman Melville's review of Francis Parkman's The California and Oregon Trail, appeared in The Literary World, IV (1849): 291. This quote is also found in Roy Harvey Pearce, Savagism and Civilization: A Study of the Indian and the American Mind (Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 1965), p. 251.
18. Among North American tribes who used some variation of "the people" as their original tribal identity (as opposed to the names they may be remembered by the historical names listed here) would be the Abenaki, the Chippewa, the Ojibwa, the Ingalik, the Cherokee, the Tanania, the Navajo, the Kiowa, the Illini, the Innui, the Inuit, the Delaware, the Menominee, the Klamath, the Apache, the Utes, the Mandan, the Comanche, the Hidatsa, the Yurok, the Arikara, the Cayuse, the Tonkawa, in addition to both the Cheyenne and the Arapaho. Similar usage is found in the etymological identifications of peoples around the world. Elliott West, The Contested Plains: Indians, Goldseekers, and the Rush to Colorado (Manhattan: University Press of Kansas, 1998), p. 76, writing about the Cheyennes; and Jeffrey Ostler, The Plains Sioux and U.S. Colonialism from Lewis and Clark to Wounded Knee (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2004), p. 27, writing about the Plains Sioux, illustrate the point.
19. These themes are explored in Donald L. Fixico, The American Indian Mind in a Linear World: American Indian Studies and Traditional Knowledge (New York: Routledge, 2003); Donald L. Fixico, Call for Change: The Medicine Way of American Indian History, Ethos, and Reality (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2013); and Joseph Campbell, The Power of Myth (New York: Doubleday & Co., 1988).
20. William G. McNeill, The Rise of the West. Second Edition (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1991) is a good place to start in understanding the development of the Western way of seeing. See also J. B. Bury, The Idea of Progress: An Inquiry into Its Origin and Growth (London: Macmillan and Company, 1920); Robert Nisbet, History of the Idea of Progress (New York: Basic Books, 1980); Christopher Lasch, The True and Only Heaven: Progress and Its Critics (New York: W. W. Norton, 1991). Arthur O. Lovejoy, The Great Chain of Being: A Study of the History of an Idea (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1964), remains the standard study of the concept. Robert A. Williams, Jr., Savage Anxieties: The Invention of Western Civilization (New York: Palgrave MacMillan, 2012), offers an American Indian Perspective on the topic. Also helpful is Robert F. Berkhofer, Jr., The White Man's Indian: Images of the American Indian from Columbus to the Present (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1978).
21. This presentation is a synthesis of ideas drawn from Robert A. Williams, The American Indian in Western Legal Thought: The Discourses of Conquest (New York: Oxford University Press, 1990); Lovejoy, The Great Chain of Being; Fixico, American Indian Mind and Call for Change; Martin, "The Metaphysics of Writing Indian-White History"; Vine DeLoria, Jr., Spirit & Reason: The Vine DeLoria, Jr., Reader (Golden, CO: Fulcrum Publishing, 1999) and The Metaphysics of Modern Existence (Golden, CO: Fulcrum Publishing, 2012); and Charles L. Woodard, Ancestral Voices: Conversations with N. Scott Momaday (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1989).
22. DeLoria, Spirit and Reason, pp. 290-353; Fixico, American Indian Mind, pp. 3-27.
23. Henrietta Whiteman (Mann), "White Buffalo Woman," in Martin, ed., Problem of History, p. 169.
24. Joseph Epes Brown, The Spiritual Legacy of the American Indian: Commemorative Edition with Letters While Living with Black Elk. Edited by Marina Brown Weatherly, Elenita Brown, and Michael Drew Fitzgerald (Bloomington, IN: World Wisdom, Inc., 2007), p. 37.
25. Fixico, Call for Change, pp. 164-170.
26. Quoted in David E. Wilkins, "Afterword," De Loria, Metaphysics, pp. 288-289.
27. Fixico, American Indian Mind, p. 42.
28. Ibid., p. 44.
29. Quoted in ibid., p. 56.
30. Martin, "Epilogue: Time and the American Indian," Problem of History, p. 194.
31. Ibid., p. 206.
32. Prucha, "Doing Indian History," pp. 8-10.
33. Northwestern Christian Advocate, July 25, 1866.
34. James L. West, "Indian Spirituality: Another Vision," Native and Christian: Indigenous Voices on Religious Identity in the United States and Canada. Edited by James Treat (New York: Routledge, 1996), pp. 30-31.
35. Edward W. Said, Culture and Imperialism (New York: Random House, 1993), pp. 288-289; Richard Slotkin, Regeneration Through Violence: The Mythology of the American Frontier, 1600-1860 (Middletown, CT: Wesleyan University Press, 1973), pp. 538-561.
36. George Bird Grinnell, "The Indian on the Reservation," Atlantic Monthly, LXXIII (February 1899): 258-259.
37. Walt Whitman, Leaves of Grass. 150th Anniversary Edition, edited by David S. Reynolds. (New York: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 32. Whitman used the word "savage" to equate the Indian with Nature (as had some earlier Enlightenment thinkers), rather than branding him untutored, ignorant, or cruel. See also, Calvin Luther Martin, The Way of the Human Being (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1999), especially his preface, where he proclaims his thoughtful reflections to be a response to "Perceptive people [who] have been asking the same questions and drawing the same conclusions since the sixteenth century" (p. ix).
38. Henry David Thoreau, The Maine Woods, 1864 (New York: Harper & Row, 1982), pp. 247-249; Edward Fussell, Frontier: American Literature and the American West (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2015), p. 342. See also, Robert F. Sayre, Thoreau and the American Indian (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1987), passim.

39. Ninth Annual Report, Southern Missionary Society, 1854, p. 123, quoted in Frederick A. Norwood, "Strangers in a Strange Land: Removal of the Wyandot Indians," Methodist History, 13 (April 1975): 59.

40. See Sayre, Thoreau and the Indian; Roy Harvey Pearce, Savagism and Civilization: A Study of the Indian and the American Mind (Baltimore, Johns Hopkins Press, 1965), pp. 147-150.

41. Quoted in DeLoria, Spirit and Reason, p. 43.

42. DeLoria, Jr., Metaphysics, p. 5.

43. Said, Culture and Imperialism, pp. 19-21.

44. Ibid., p. 20.

45. Ibid., p. 336.

Chapter II

The Road to Dominion

Western civilization drew its way of seeing from a variety of cultures ranging west from the Fertile Crescent along the north rim of the Mediterranean basin. What brought them together into a European world view was the emergence of a new religious faith during the first century A.D. The sect known as “Christians” found its identity in the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, a first-century Judean prophet, who appeared during the reign of the Roman emperor Tiberius. It began simply enough, as a body of believers, inspired by an evangelical zeal to spread the teachings of Christ to others. This zealous effort led to the creation of the Christian church and the formalization of faith into an institution of religion. As the church spread west, its message was influenced by Greco-Roman ideas, philosophy, science, art, and government. The existence of the Roman Empire, its roads, its economy, its centralized power, and its military might, extended Christian influence until Christianity became the state religion of the Roman Empire itself.¹

From the Old Testament, Christianity drew three powerful ideas. The first was a commission to “subdue” the earth: “Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth” (Genesis 1:28 KJV). Second, Christians believed that they inherited the Israelites’ claim to a “promised land”: “Now the LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house, unto a land that I will shew thee: And I will make of thee a great nation . . .” (Genesis 12:1-2a KJV). Third, Christians believed they were God’s “chosen people”: “For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God has chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth” (Deuteronomy 7:6 KJV).

Christians also embraced the evangelical command of Jesus to convert “all nations” to the Christian faith: “Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen” (Matthew 28:19-20 KJV).

This combination of doctrines—the command to subdue the earth, belief in the promised land, Christian status as a chosen people, and the admonition to convert “all nations”—empowered the church, and as Christians grew from a persecuted few to purveyors of a universal gospel, the link with the political and military strength of the Roman Empire and its successor kingdoms made the church the most potent force in Europe for a thousand years. The church’s institutionalization and the rise of the papacy resulted in a mass of new rules and doctrines, many of which had their roots in the Greek and Roman past as well as in biblical texts. Greek and Roman philosophy, science, and law shaped the linear view, and it, in turn, was embraced by the church. Over time, the church gained a virtual supremacy in Europe, sustained by a system of order it imposed.²

One other factor figured into the European system—a continuing series of wars. The history of the Fertile Crescent and of the movement west through Greece and Rome and eventually into the rest of Europe over the centuries involved ongoing conflict. Some of the troubles were wars between empires or for the control of empires. But also, from the time of the Greeks, there was always a brutal “other” to be overcome. Whether Persians, Gauls, Huns, Mongols, Tartars, Moors, Picts, Saxons, Saracens, Vikings, Celts, or others from the fringes of “civilization,” these peoples were regarded as “savages” by the Greeks and Romans and by the successor Christian kingdoms even into the modern era. The savage other was always there with cultures to be rooted out and land to be taken. Race came late to the rationale of conquest. Savagery was the obstacle to be overcome.³

The conflicts of the Roman Empire led to the exclusion of savages from the conventions of war. The label of “savage” identified non-Christian outsiders deemed so bloodthirsty and dangerous that any tactic could be justified against them. They were, quite simply, “beyond the protection of any humane convention.” During the Principate (27 B.C. to A.D. 284) and the later Roman Empire as well, these “others” were regarded as “extranei” and subject to conquest as a right of self-defense and as an extension of civilization.⁴ The concept of the savage was sustained and extended with the blessings of the papacy in the centuries that followed. During the Middle Ages, the fragile Christian kingdoms were threatened by successions of attacks from the north and the east. These warrior invasions were noted for their ruthless style of warfare. They also represented nomadic and raiding cultures beyond the pale of Christianity and with little regard for its precepts. The conflict with the invaders was viewed as nothing less than a struggle between civilization and barbarism, between Christianity and heathenism.

Significantly, this led to an elaborate legal rationale justifying the conquest of non-Christian enemies, created largely by the church. The Church Universal was the great unifying force in Europe, in the face of confused, unstable, conflicted, and troubled political kingdoms. It spoke with one voice for all Christians. As more and more of the western tribes of Europe were converted, as the Norman invasion of Britain was consolidated, and as Europeans stalled the Saracen invasion from North Africa, the idea of a “frontierless jurisdiction” over the Christian body politic made more sense to rulers of the still fragile European kingdoms.⁵

By the time of Pope Urban II, a legal frame was in place to justify the jurisdiction of the church over all Christians and the extension of the boundaries of Christian control. This provided the foundation for the concept of “holy war” and the justification for Pope Urban II’s call for a crusade to “liberate” Jerusalem from the Saracens, “an alien people, a race completely foreign to God, ‘a generation of false aims, of a spirit that broke faith with God,’ [which] has invaded Christian territory and has devastated this territory with pillage, fire, and the sword.”⁶

Here was yet another manifestation of the “savage other,” and during the years between Urban II’s call for crusade in 1095 through the crusades that followed and into the papacy of Innocent IV (1243-1254), the legal rights of pagan peoples were debated at length both in traditional hierocratic and in humanistic terms. Pope Innocent would provide the complex legal synthesis and extend it beyond holy war. Innocent argued that all humans, Christian and infidel, were subject to the Pope’s duty to “protect their spiritual well-being.” He held that there was “only one right way of life” and concluded that the irrational behaviors of heathens required that armies join missionaries in the work of conversion. Here was the justification of the “right of conquest” by Christian nations. The Christian Europeans’ view of reason and truth was binding on all people, everywhere.⁷

This was, in the words of Robert A. Williams, Jr., “the perfect instrument of empire.”⁸ It would not end arguments over the “rights of infidels,” but it would provide a legal framework for conquest of lands beyond the Euro-Christian world. There were practical, nonreligious reasons that made its embrace more attractive. The evolution of Europe’s nation states in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries coincided with an increased crisis of resources. Europe was consuming itself. While its population was growing, many important resources were dwindling, including land, timber, food, and fisheries, as well as gold, silver, and other commodities needed for defense and power. Urbanization, pollution, and deforestation were also becoming serious problems. Columbus’s “accidental discovery” of a “New World,” seemed to be the answer for men armed with “the right of conquest,” the admonition “to subdue the earth,” the duty to convert nonbelievers into Christians, and the conviction that their ways were superior to the “others” they confronted in the new lands.⁹

During the papacy of Eugenius IV, in response to legal questions raised by Portugal, the Romanus Pontiflex was drafted. It created a “juristic synthesis” of “colonizing discourse” since Innocent IV. The 1453-1454 version of Romanus Pontiflex, issued by Pope Nicholas V, was the most precise version, amounting to a “license of conquest” for Portugal in Africa. In 1493, Pope Alexander VI issued two papal bulls. The first granted to the crowns of Castille and Aragon in Spain all lands discovered west of the Azores excluding lands previously occupied by other “Christian nations.” The second, issued in response to concerns raised by Portugal, clarified the division of lands between Spain and Portugal and confirmed the rule of law that the people of “discovered” lands were subject to the guardianship of the discoverers.¹⁰

While not acknowledged specifically in the papal bulls, other European nations pushed their own rights of conquest in the “New World” using the general principles laid out in the papal discourse. There would be conflicts over claims, but European nations almost universally disregarded the rights of indigenous peoples and came over time to modify the primary descriptor of the right of conquest by European nations to the right of conquest by Christian nations. As a leading nineteenth-century authority concluded: “It thus became a maxim of policy and law that the right of the native Indians was subordinate to that of the first Christian discoverer, whose paramount claim excluded that of every other civilized nation, and gradually extinguished that of the natives.”¹¹ Thus the “Doctrine of Discovery” was accepted as the unquestioned right of Christian nations by European powers in the sixteenth century.

The Doctrine of Discovery would be used to justify the conquest of the “New World” by the European powers and became the central tenet of secular law as well. By the time that the United States of America was formed in 1776, it was a fundamental premise of every European legal system and survived into the new legal structure of American system as well. Countries might vary in the way the doctrine was applied—the English insisting on treaties of cession, for example—but all regarded it as a “right” of Christian powers and superior in weight to any Native claims to the land. It would prove particularly important to the “settler colonialism” of the new United States as a foundational principle of westward expansion.

But the English had added something else by the time of the English Civil War—a deeply embedded sense of Anglo-Saxon superiority. The English were, as one historian writes, “awestruck by their own achievements” and committed to “alleged group virtues” that included notions of law and liberty that set them apart even within Europe. They came to see their world as “normative.” England had dealt with the “savage others” of its own domain—the highlanders of northern Scotland, the Irish, and the Welsh—at times brutally and in ways that fixed patterns for dealing with the “others” they would confront in North America.¹²

The English systematically sought to root out cultural differences—the elimination of traditional Gaelic languages, outlawing everything from kilts to bagpipes, from painted faces to Catholicism. Scottish highlanders were considered savages, and Irishmen were even herded onto reservations (called plantations), and in their wars of conquest, the English slaughtered them with impunity. In the 1641 campaign in Ireland, Sir Charles Coote, an English general, was celebrated “When he (by good advise)/ Didd kill the Nitts, that they may not grow lice.” The slogan was commonplace in the Irish conflict and would resonate over time in English and Anglo-American wars against American Indians, to gain prominence again during the Sand Creek controversy. Oliver Cromwell justified the butchery of 3,500 men, women, and children at Drogheda in 1649 as “merely righteous execution on barbaric and treacherous savages.”¹³

As late as the 1730s, when General James Edward Oglethorpe amassed a military expedition to face the Spanish in Florida, he described a force composed of “White people [,] Indians and highlanders,” indicating an ongoing view of highland Scots as savages.¹⁴ The highlanders and Scots-Irish, who had little use for the English to begin with, usually pushed past the coastal settlements and cleared fields into the forests and the American highlands of the Appalachians. There many of them developed a kinship with Native peoples. Both were treated as tribal peoples. Both were regarded as barbarians. Both had been driven out of their home country. By the time of the Seven Years War, Scottish names were prominent in the leadership of the Creeks and Cherokees, and Scots played a prominent role in trade between Indians and the English.¹⁵

With the Glorious Revolution, England emerged as a country with constitutional government, economic prosperity, scientific and technological leadership that prepared them for a dominant place in the new world order. They also touted “the rights of Englishmen” as their great achievement. Their naval control of the Atlantic Ocean protected the establishment of colonies significantly different from those of other European nations. “Settler colonialism” was perhaps the key component of English success.¹⁶ Empire involves the control of other people by conquest; settlement involves the reproduction of one society in a new place through long-range migration. Settlers created a largely uncontrolled dynamic once the coastal colonies were established and the indigenous peoples along the coast killed or driven into the interior. With no effective control by England or within the colonies themselves, the new settlers moved west in increasing numbers.¹⁷

What drew them was the land—all that land, empty by any standard that made sense to white settlers who wanted a piece of their own more than anything else. Land stood at the center of their value system. It defined free men, set them apart from servants, peasants, and vagabonds, and enabled them to participate in government. Even in the nineteenth century, most landless Americans were not that far from European roots. Their ancestors had been drawn to America, not so much for gold or even faith, as for land. Land was freedom. It gave settlers place, identity, independence, and freedom, all things they would never have known had they stayed in England or Scotland or Ireland. Their children and grandchildren embraced those values and viewed them as rights.

Of course, the settlers knew there were men on the land already, but individually each of them felt that of all those millions of acres, he could claim a few and do no harm. It was not a Doctrine of Discovery that drove the settlers, but, ironically, the same forces that fed their understanding of liberty and of rights, those rudimentary drives to be free of restraint and able to make their own way. The indigenous people they met were simply one more “natural barrier” between them and their dreams of owning land and being free. While governments, both in London and in the colonial capitals, were concerned about laws based on the Doctrine of Discovery to control and justify the usurpation of Native lands, settlers followed a consistent pattern of preemption even when it put them at odds with their own governments.¹⁸

Richard Slotkin, in his trilogy of books on the myth of the frontier, particularly his first, Regeneration Through Violence, argues that the defining experience of American history was the ongoing conflict between settlers and Natives. The Indian wars, he says, created a view of Americans as “a new race of people, independent of the sin-darkened heritage of man, seeking a totally new and original relationship to pure nature as hunters, explorers, pioneers and seekers.” This rhetorical self-justification imagined an ongoing regeneration of the American character with the “winning” of each successive frontier.¹⁹ This would seem to be sustained by Frederick Jackson Turner’s classic essay, “The Frontier in American History.” Although assailed by historians and social scientists in recent decades as a misleading explanation of what happened, Turner’s essay and Slotkin’s explanation do provide insight into how Euro-Americans perceived themselves as creators of a new and better society, as chosen people in a promised land.²⁰

From the time of the Enlightenment, European philosophers, religious leaders, and politicians felt a need to justify their treatment of indigenous peoples and even to be “fair.” From Voltaire to Jefferson, humanists embraced the humanity of American Indians and the possibility of their “improvement.”²¹ But even the most sympathetic Euro-Americans were limited by their linear way of seeing, which placed the “savages” on the linear scale between barbarism and civilization. The redemption of indigenous peoples lay in transition from their native state to the “superior” ways of white culture. In this process Christianity and civilization were linked inextricably so that one seemed impossible without the other. Linked to this conclusion was the assumption that whites would expand and Natives would give way.²²

The process was never neat, not merely because whites were divided on how best to treat Indians, but also because Indians were divided on how best to respond. What never existed was a single approach on either side, since both the linear and cyclic ways of seeing allowed for multiple visions of what should happen and how. White attitudes and actions were more predictable, Native responses more complex and varied. Resistance, war, alliances, accommodation, trade, and acculturation marked Native reaction to white intrusion. American Indians were far more resilient and innovative than most interpretations allow—and certainly more so than whites.²³

Indeed the “Indians as victims” approach seriously underestimates the vitality and power of Native responses. It ignores the cultural changes triggered by the presence of Europeans and Euro-Americans even before direct contact, many of which were embraced, even welcomed, by the tribes. It implies a Native passivity that totally distorts the capacity to resist as well as the more basic role of war in pre-contact times. During the wars between England and Spain, and more clearly, in the colonial wars between England and France, Indians demonstrated military, diplomatic, and economic skills far too often overlooked, so potent in fact, that they slowed the process of dispossession considerably. The conflict was never simply a matter of “them” and “us.” Rather than some static and helpless presence, Natives artfully adapted their relations with Euro-Americans, fought among themselves for advantage, as well as survival, and forged multitribal alliances.²⁴

It is beyond the scope of this report to recount all of the conflicts of the English colonies in America, all of the varied responses of Native peoples, or the debate over the treatment of Indians by contemporaries. Suffice it to say, that the image of indigenous people as savages and white perceptions of their rights to the land were reinforced by the colonial experience. It is important to add that original inhabitants of the land responded to the invasion of their country in varied ways and that tribes that never saw a white man during the colonial period were changed by events they could not yet imagine. In Europe and America, a debate occurred over what was moral and right in dealing with indigenous people, often growing in intensity and fervor the closer to the conflict the dialogue occurred. There were men like Benjamin Church, an experienced “Indian fighter,” who tried to stop the slaughter of Indian women and children at the Great Swamp Fight of 1676, only to be overridden by Puritan divines who assured the colonists that they were acting within the will of God and others who threatened to kill Church if he did not cease his efforts. Others on that occasion “were much in doubt and afterwards inquired whether burning their enemies alive would be consistent with humanity and the benevolent principles of the gospel.”²⁵

The eighteenth century witnessed a broader conflict as a consequence of increased emigration into Indian country and of wars between the English, on the one hand, and the French and Spanish on the other. From the western reaches of New York, south along the backbone of the Appalachians through Pennsylvania and Kentucky, to the frontier reaches of Georgia and Florida, Native Americans were drawn into the international struggle for hegemony over North America. During this process, Indian tribes often acted as the spearhead of European offensives on the frontier. Other groups avoided the conflicts as they were able, but still fell victim to white violence. In effect, tribes made their choices according to what seemed to be in their own best interests. This included new pan-Indian ideologies and identity.²⁶

The onset of the Seven Years War in 1754, when Indians allied with the French launched assaults on the Middle Colonies, the fear and prejudices of the settlers deepened and the idea of coexistence, which had existed in some quarters, virtually vanished. Popular accounts that emphasized indiscriminate slaughter of men, women, and children, scalping, torture, and mutilation as the “savage” norm of Indian warfare gained general acceptance and provided justification for “war in kind” by whites.

Episodes like the slaughter of the peaceful Conestogas by the Paxton Boys proved unmistakably that American colonists were quite as capable of savagery as any other group of humans on the continent. It proved to be the case, however, that not all whites were ready for this inhumanity. Quakers uncharacteristically armed themselves and moved into Philadelphia when word spread that the Paxton Boys were planning to kill Indians there, although the Quakers, thinking them to be the Paxton Boys, almost fired upon German settlers who were marching to help protect the Indians as well. Benjamin Franklin, who was never a great advocate of Indian rights, felt compelled to write a pamphlet condemning the Conestoga affair.²⁷

With the end of the British, French, and Indian War in 1763, the British, realizing the potential for chaos in the lands to the west, made a futile attempt to control the preemption of lands by passing the Proclamation of 1763. It intended to bar settlers from Indian lands west of the Appalachians until and unless lands were ceded by treaty. It failed, and instead became the first step on the road to the American Revolution.²⁸ No Parliament across the ocean, nor any colonial government, could stanch the settler invasion, and so the “war in the dooryard” continued. In 1776, when he drafted the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson would list as one of the colonies’ grievances against the king that “He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.”

The American Revolution proved bloody in the West as the British organized tribal alliances for assaults on American settlements and the Americans bought into the view that all Indians were ruthless savages more deeply. Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Hamilton, the British commander at Detroit offered bounties for the scalps of colonials. At one council, when Hamilton urged Native allies to kill Americans and threatened to withhold supplies if they did not, Half King, a Delaware chief, questioned him about the charge: “Father, only men in arms—not women and children?” Hamilton replied, “All, all! Kill all! Nits make lice!”²⁹

George Rogers Clark, Hamilton’s chief adversary, openly admitted his hatred for all Indians. In 1779, General John Sullivan moved against the Iroquois after making the toast, “Civilization or death to all American savages!”³⁰ Even after the war, the deepness of the animosity toward Indians was underscored when, in March 1782, militiamen tomahawked to death ninety-six unresisting Indian Christians at Gnadenhutzen, Pennsylvania. It was a depraved action that finally drew criticism from many white Pennsylvanians.³¹ Nonetheless, even humanitarians began to question whether Indians could be civilized. The most brutal imagery of Indian savagery was more widely accepted than ever.

So, the end of the American Revolution did not bring peace on the frontier, but rather created greater doubt that there was a way to resolve the great cultural gulf between whites and Native inhabitants. Reformers like David Schuyler Bogart argued that prejudice was key to the troubles with Indians, but suggested that “to exterminate Prejudice from the mind appears to be next to an impossibility.”³² Unfortunately, he proved to be right. And the literary genre most influential in shaping white attitudes embraced the view of implacable and unchangeable savagery as the “nature” of Indians. The Western linear way of seeing limited the capacity of even the most favorably disposed white observers to imagine that the gulf between Native and whites could be bridged. Lost entirely was the evidence of Native adaptability culturally, economically, and politically. Also lost were the tribal differences in culture and response, in favor of a collective “Indian.” Regardless of tribe or disposition, all Native peoples were personified as “Indians,” which was synonymous with carnage, brutality, and evil.³³

During the years under the Articles of Confederation, neither the central government (if it could be called that) nor the state governments were able to control the push of settlers into “the Middle Ground” beyond the Appalachians or to suppress Native resistance. In fact, the most dramatic feature of those years was the continuing variety, vitality, and compromise of Indian resistance and accommodation. At the very moment that many reformers were dismissing the possibility of change, Indian adaptation, collaboration, and acculturation were growing. The possibility of compromise—that middle ground—was even stronger. But, tribes and alliances refused to acknowledge defeat, while white obstinacy and the continuing flow of settlers insured ongoing conflict.³⁴

The situation was exacerbated by a flood of settlers into the trans-Appalachian West in a great arc from Kentucky into the Ohio country, west to the Mississippi, and north to Canada. This vast region became the “dark and bloody ground” that consolidated what Peter Silver has called the “anti-Indian sublime,” a rhetoric of conquest expressed in a vast popular literature that defined Native character, behavior, and warfare as savage in the worst possible extremes. Silver argues that the anti-Indian fervor reflected

... the priorities of the increasing numbers of people who lived on the receding border of Indian country. Anti-Indianism’s rise was the result not of a realistic calculation of the national interest but of a vacuum of policies and power at the federal level. Amid popular demands that vacuum came to be filled by dreams of Indian treachery and American suffering—dreams that always returned to the prospect of new lands, and even new republics in the Ohio country.³⁵

The chaos of the 1780s combined with the impotence of government at every level to control events persuaded a growing number of government leaders that the management of Indian affairs had to be centrally located at the national level and that a more humane and rational approach had to be found. In 1787, Henry Knox, Secretary of War, under both the Articles of Confederation and during Washington’s presidency under the new Constitution, warned the country that unless something was done, the treatment of American Indians would “fix a stain on the national reputation of America.”³⁶

One of the goals of the Continental Congress was to provide a model for the distribution of land in the Ohio country. Reports and laws related to this process also revealed a change of tone. The Northwest Ordinance of 1787 promised that “The utmost good faith shall always be observed towards the Indians, their lands and property shall never be taken from them without their consent; and in their property, rights and liberty, they never shall be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars authorised by Congress, but laws founded in justice and humanity shall from time to time be made, for preventing wrongs being done to them, and for preserving peace and friendship with them. . . .”³⁷

In July 1788, Secretary Knox railed against “the white inhabitants who have so flagitiously stained the American name.” Knox came to the conclusion that “agreements based on the right of conquest did not work and that adherence to such a policy would continually endanger the peace of the frontier.”³⁸ He sought a fair treaty system, and argued in 1789, “The Indians being the prior occupants possess the right of the soil. It cannot be taken from them unless by their free consent, or by the right of conquest in case of a just war. To dispossess them on any other principle, would be a gross violation of the fundamental laws of nature, and of that distributive justice which is the glory of a nation.”³⁹ He advocated a return to the British approach of purchasing “the right of the soil” from the Indians.

President Washington embraced Knox’s approach, and in the Trade and Intercourse Act of 1790 sought to prevent preemption of Indian lands. Knox and Washington were doubtlessly sincere in their desire both to treat Indians fairly and to prevent white preemption of Indian land, but their language within the laws emphasized the Indians’ “right of occupancy” rather than ownership. Despite the concerns of Knox, however, the assumption of the Doctrine of Discovery adhered in their texts as well and would be reflected in the policies of Thomas Jefferson, himself an outspoken advocate of means to preserve Indian rights and American integrity.⁴⁰ There was throughout a sense of inevitability in the minds of authorities whose plans focused more on making dispossession less painful—and more legally sound—than on ending it altogether.

Men like Knox, Washington, and Jefferson were disturbed by the unrestrained preemption of western lands that seemed impossible to control. Washington described the settlers invading Indian lands as “a parcel of banditti whose actions are a disgrace to human nature.” They were called “savages . . . our own white Indians,” “semi-savages,” and “the most abandoned, malicious, deceitful, plundering, horse-thieving rascals on the continent . . . the most vile and abandoned criminals.” The West had become “a grand reservoir for the scum of the Atlantic states.”⁴¹

Two problems complicated the task of dealing with the settler migration. The first was that it was impossible to control. Whatever the designs of the government for an ordered and “legal” process, the numbers swelled so that by 1800, whites outnumbered Indians in the Ohio country eight to one.⁴² The invasion simply could not be stopped.

The other problem was the plain fact that, while government officials and policy makers deplored the preemption, their ultimate goal was secure title to Indian lands. The means of securing the land was deplorable, but the end was something they really desired.⁴³

Remarkably, though, despite the settler migrations into the Northwest Territory, Indians sustained their resistance with remarkable success, holding their ground by a variety of strategies until the end of the War of 1812. The efforts of Tenkwatawa and Tecumseh, the charismatic Shawnee brothers who sought to forge a multitribal alliance, again brought the possibility of a genuine pan-Indian resistance. But Tenkwatawa, the Shawnee prophet, lost credibility after the Battle of Tippecanoe. Tecumseh tried to rebuild the alliance, but his death at the Battle of Thames in 1813 was more the result of British incompetence than of Native failure. His dream died with him. Resistance did not end there, however. Not until after the Massacre at Bad Axe in 1832 in the Black Hawk War, did all resistance collapse.⁴⁴ Only then could the process of removal west be completed. That meant that the tribes of the Northwest had resisted American expansion for close to seventy years. With removal largely accomplished by 1840, it had taken two hundred forty years for the Anglo-American conquest of North America to reach the Mississippi River.⁴⁵

The transition to a policy of removal began during Thomas Jefferson's administration. The idea was simple enough. Indians should be relocated on lands beyond the press of white settlement. It was given a great boost in 1823 with the Supreme Court decision in Johnson v. McIntosh. In this landmark decision, the Doctrine of Discovery was affirmed as the cornerstone of American law insofar as Native rights were concerned. Chief Justice John Marshall held that the European nation "discovering" land in the New World had exclusive rights to claim Indian lands. Indigenous people had no superior, natural law-based claims to American soil. The acceptance of the Doctrine of Discovery was a crucial factor in American law for dealing with indigenous peoples.⁴⁶

Marshall attempted to back away from some of his conclusions in Johnson v. McIntosh in the later cases of the Cherokee Nation v. Georgia and Worcester v. Georgia where he sought to limit the powers of removal. In Worcester, Marshall backed away from the Doctrine of Discovery, arguing that the "right given by discovery" was not absolute. He said that "It gave exclusive right to purchase, but did not found that right on a denial of the right of the possessor to sell." Viewed in this manner, the rights of individuals and states were limited but not the rights of Native tribes. Jackson ignored this ruling, specifically declaring Worcester to be wrong, and in the cases of Mitchell v. United States (1835) and United States v. Fernandez (1836), the original formulation in McIntosh was reaffirmed.⁴⁷ As a result the controlling legal perspective in American Indian law remains the view fostered in Johnson v. McIntosh. It remains to this day the basis of American law with respect to Indian peoples. Native Americans had no unqualified sovereignty over their lands or status as independent nations. The tribes were "domestic dependent nations." In other words, American Indians were proclaimed by the court to be the wards of the United States government.

The treaty system would continue, in spite of Andrew Jackson's opposition to it, but what were negotiated were rights of occupancy, not sovereignty. Thus, the Western way of seeing came to control everything in American law. Alexis de Toqueville, the wise French observer of American life, remarked that the conduct of the United States toward its indigenous people "was inspired by the most chaste affection for legal formalities." What was missing, he noted, was "good faith." As a result, "It is impossible to destroy men with more respect to the laws of humanity."⁴⁸

Notes: Chapter II

1. The literature is vast. For the purposes of this report, three works provided important insights: John McManners, editor, The Oxford Illustrated History of Christianity (New York: Oxford University Press, 1990), pp. 21-340; Jane Burbank and Frederick Cooper, Empires in World History: Power and the Politics of Difference (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2010), pp. 61-92, and Karen Armstrong, Fields of Blood: Religion and the History of Violence (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2014), pp. 103-261. The latter two have the added benefit of comparative analysis between Western ideas, beliefs, and empires and other world religions and empires.
2. McManners, History of Christianity, pp. 21-232; Williams, Savage Anxieties, pp. 11-138; Williams, American Indian in Western Legal Thought, pp. 13-58.
3. Armstrong, Fields of Blood, pp. 131-261; Burbank and Cooper, Empires, pp. 23-116.
4. David Harry Miller and William W. Savage, Jr., "Ethnic Stereotypes and the Frontier: A Comparative Study of Roman and American Experience," The Frontier: Comparative Studies. Edited by David Harry Miller and Jerome Steffen (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1977), pp. 109-137. See also Williams, Savage Anxieties, pp. 33-180; and William Winthrop, Military Law and Precedents. Second Edition (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1920), pp. 903-1039.
5. Williams, American Indian in Western Legal Thought, pp. 15-18.

6. Ibid., pp. 32-47; Armstrong, Fields of Blood, pp. 210-216.
7. Williams, American Indian in Western Legal Thought, pp. 47-50.
8. Ibid., pp. 4-8.
9. Jason W. Moore, "The Crisis of Feudalism: An Environmental History," Organization and Environment, 15 (September 2002): 301-322.
10. Williams, American Indian in Western Legal Thought, pp. 71-81.
11. Ibid., pp. 59-108; Steven T. Newcomb, Pagans in the Promised Land: Decoding the Doctrine of Christian Discovery (Golden, CO: Fulcrum Publishing, 2008), pp. 23-50, 122-124; Lindsay G. Robertson, Conquest by Law: How the Discovery of America Dispossessed Indigenous Peoples of Their Lands (New York: Oxford University Press, 2005), pp. 98-100.
12. Reginald Horsman, Race and Manifest Destiny: The Origins of American Racial Anglo-Saxonism (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1981), pp. 7-24; Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 4-9.
13. David Beers Quinn, The Elizabethans and the Irish (New York: Cornell University Press, 1966); Nicholas P. Canny, "The Ideology of English Colonization: From Ireland to America," William and Mary Quarterly, Third Series, 30 (1973): 575-598; D. M. R. Esom, The Curse of Cromwell: A History of the Ironside Conquest of Ireland, 1649-53 (Totowa, NJ: Rowman and Littlefield, 1971), pp. 102-114; Katie Kane, "Nits Make Lice: Drogheda, Sand Creek, and the Poetics of Colonial Extermination," Cultural Critique, 42 (Spring 1999): 81-103; William Edward Hartpole Lecky, A History of Ireland in the Eighteenth Century. 5 Volumes (London: Longmans, Green, 1892): I, 84-85.
14. Colin G. Calloway, White People, Indians, and Highlanders: Tribal Peoples and Colonial Encounters in Scotland and America (New York: Oxford University Press, 2008), p. xi.
15. Ibid., pp. 43-146, 257-272.
16. See Edmund S. Morgan, Inventing the People: The Rise of Popular Sovereignty in England and America (New York: W. W. Norton & Company, 1988). Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 6-8.
17. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 153-169. See also, Walter L. Hixson, American Settler Colonialism: A History (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013), pp. 45-85.
18. Michael L. Johnson, Hunger for the Wild, America's Obsession with the Untamed West (Manhattan: University Press of Kansas), pp. 17-109.
19. Slotkin, Regeneration, p. 557; Said, Culture and Imperialism, p. 288. See also Richard Slotkin, The Fatal Environment: The Myth of the Frontier in the Age of Industrialization, 1800-1890 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1994), and Gunfighter Nation: The Myth of the Frontier in Twentieth Century America (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1998).
20. Frederick Jackson Turner wrote in his essay, "The Significance of History," that "Each age writes the history of the past anew with reference to the conditions uppermost in its own times." He would not have been surprised, then, that with time, his more famous treatise on "The Significance of the Frontier in American History," would be challenged. His views on the nature of the frontier and its importance as a central feature of American development were increasingly criticized in the twentieth century, culminating perhaps with the publication of Patricia Nelson Limerick, Clyde A. Milner II, and Charles E. Rankin, editors, Trails: Toward a New Western History (Manhattan: University Press of Kansas, 1991). These essays challenged Turner's emphasis on the "frontier" as opposed to the "West" as a basis for studying the American West. But in dismissing Turner as "timeworn" and "quaint and mythical," the advocates of the "New Western History" misjudged Turner's importance to understanding the way in which the process of westward movement was conceived by earlier Americans. William Cronon, in his "Revisiting the Vanishing Frontier: The Legacy of Frederick Jackson Turner," Western Historical Quarterly, 18 (April 1987): 157-176, argued that Turner still is critical to understanding the process of settlement and contended that studying process is a different task than studying region. This was a vital insight that he enlarged upon in later essays. Also critical for understanding Turner's enduring legacy is Allan G. Bogue, Frederick Jackson Turner: Strange Roads Going Down (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1998). See especially pp. 457-464.

21. Bernard W. Sheehan, Seeds of Extinction: Jeffersonian Philanthropy and the American Indian (W. W. Norton & Company, 1973), offers an in-depth look at the Enlightenment view of Thomas Jefferson and its origin in the writings of others. Anthony F. C. Wallace, Jefferson and the Indians: The Tragic Fate of the First Americans (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1999), is a thoughtful and more critical view of Jefferson. Berkhofer, White Man's Indian, pp. 12-49, provides a convenient summary. Williams, Savage Anxieties, pp. 197-217, is also critical.

22. Martin E. Marty, Protestantism in the United States: Righteous Empire. Second Edition (Charles Scribner's Sons, 1986), pp. 13-20. See also Berkhofer, White Man's Indian, pp. 113-152.

23. This assessment is based upon a review of a number of sources that have taken the time to explore the interactions of white and Native cultures beyond a mere recounting of events in search of a more balanced view of the processes involved. Some of the more important sources are James Axtell, Beyond 1492: Encounters in Colonial North America (New York: Oxford University Press, 1992); James Axtell, The Invasion Within: The Contest of Cultures in Colonial North America (New York: Oxford University Press, 1985); Michael Witgen, An Infinity of Nations: How the Native New World Shaped Early North America (Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2012); Gregory Evans Dowd, A Spirited Resistance: The North American Indian Struggle for Unity (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University, 1992); Daniel K. Richter, Facing East from Indian Country: A Native History of Early America (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2001); Kathleen Du Val, The Native Ground: Indians and Colonists in the Heart of the Continent (Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2006); Richard White, The Middle Ground: Indians, Empires, and Republics in the Great Lakes Region, 1650-1815. Twentieth Anniversary Edition (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2011); Alan Taylor, The Divided Ground: Indians, Settlers, and the Northern Borderland of the American Revolution (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2006); Robert M. Owens, Red Dreams, White Nightmares: Pan-Indian Alliances in the Anglo-American

- Mind, 1763-1815* (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2015); Brady J. Crytzer, Guyasuta and the Fall of Indian America (Yardley, PA: Westholme Publishing, 2013). The list is not complete, and all of the books listed are recent efforts to bring greater balance to understanding the conflict between Native and Intruder cultures. They do not represent a seamless interpretation of the process, but they do reflect a shared awareness of the importance of understanding the multidimensional character of the conflict.
24. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, p. 552-558, explores the issue from the perspective of “settler colonialism.” All of the works cited in note 23 elaborate on this question. Burbank and Cooper, Empires, pp. 257-267, offers an interesting assessment, based upon comparisons with other colonial and imperial efforts internationally. Keeley, War Before Civilization, is perceptive as well.
25. Benjamin Church, The History of King Philip’s War. . . Edited by Samuel G. Drake. Second Edition (Exeter, NH: J. & B. Williams, 1840), pp. 41-46; Slotkin, Regeneration, pp. 162-178, 188. William Christie MacLeod, The American Indian Frontier (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1928), p. 239.
26. White, Middle Ground, passim.
27. Brooke Hindle, “The March of the Paxton Boys, William and Mary Quarterly. Third Series, III (October 1946): 461-486; Wilbur R. Jacobs, editor, The Paxton Riots and the Frontier Theory (Chicago: Rand McNally & Company, 1967); Winthrop D. Jordan, White Over Black: American Attitudes Toward the Negro, 1550-1812 (New York: W. W. Norton Company, 1977), pp. 275-278. A more recent and important treatment is Peter Silver, Our Savage Neighbors: How Indian War Transformed Early America (New York: W. W. Norton Company, 2008), pp. 175-190, 202-208.
28. Wilcomb E. Washburn, Red Man’s Land—White Man’s Law: A Study of the Past and Present Status of the American Indian (New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1971), pp. 49-50.
29. John P. Brown, Old Frontiers (Kingsport, TN: Southern Publishers, 1938), p. 288n.
30. Quoted in Pearce, Savagism and Civilization, p. 55. A recent study of the new United States’ conflict with American Indians during the American Revolution is Barbara Alice Mann, George Washington’s War on Native America (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2008).
31. Silver, Savage Neighbors, pp. 265-276; Sheehan, Seeds of Extinction, pp. 187-188.
32. Silver, Savage Neighbors, p. 293.
33. How the image was crafted, and why, is detailed well in ibid., which makes Silver’s book especially important. See also Berkhofer, White Man’s Way, pp. 3-31, and Pearce, Savagism and Civilization, pp. 51-168. Pearce sums up the problem (p. 242) this way: “Civilization had created a savage, so as to kill him. Idea had begotten image, so as to kill it. The need was to go beyond image and idea to the man.”
34. White, Middle Ground, pp. 315-517; Dowd, Spirited Resistance, pp. 90-190; Owens, Red Dreams, pp. 71-172.
35. Silver, Savage Neighbors, p. 291.
36. Quoted in ibid., p. 291.
37. The Northwest Ordinance of 1787 as quoted in Francis Paul Prucha, The Great Father: The United States Government and the American Indian. Two Volumes (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1984): I, 47.
38. Francis Paul Prucha, American Indian Policy in the Formative Years: The Indian Trade and Intercourse Acts, 1790-1834 (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1962), p. 40.
39. Report of Henry Knox on White Outrages, July 18, 1788, and Report of Henry Knox on the Northwestern Indians, June 15, 1789, in Francis Paul Prucha, editor, Documents of United States Indian Policy (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1975), pp. 11-12, 12-13.
40. Prucha, Policy in the Formative Years, pp. 40-50. See also Sheehan, Seeds of Extinction, pp. 119-275, and Reginald Horsman, Expansion and American Indian Policy, 1783-1812 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1992), pp. 95-96. Recent works are more critical of the policies of Washington and Jefferson. See, for example, Gary Clayton Anderson, Ethnic Cleansing and the Indian: The Crime That Should Haunt America (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2015), pp. 87-127; Anthony F. C. Wallace, Jefferson and the Indians: The Tragic Fate of the First Americans (Cambridge: Belknap Press, 1999), pp. 206-240, 335-340. Finally, Colin G. Calloway, The Victory with No Name: The Native American Defeat of the First American Army (New York: Oxford University Press, 2015) is a fascinating account of the defeat of General Arthur St. Clair in 1791, possibly the worst defeat experienced by an American army at the hands of Native Americans.
41. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, p. 146.
42. Roger L. Nichols, Warrior Nations: The United States and Indian Peoples (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2013), p. 35.
43. Prucha, Policy in the Formative Years, pp. 186-187.
44. Alan Taylor, The Civil War of 1812: American Citizens, British Subjects, Irish Rebels & Indian Allies (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2010) offers a good introduction to events related to the Indian-British-American conflict. Dowd, Spirited Resistance, pp. 123-190, is also valuable. For later conflicts, see Patrick J. Jung, The Black Hawk War of 1832 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2007), and Kerry A. Trask, Black Hawk: The Battle for the Heart of America (New York: Henry Holt and Company, 2006).
45. Osterhammel, Transformation of the World, p. 340.
46. Williams, American Indian in Western Legal Thought, pp. 308-317; Newcomb, Pagans, pp. 73-136. The first book devoted entirely to Johnson v. McIntosh is Lindsay G. Robertson, Conquest by Law: How the Discovery of America Dispossessed Indigenous Peoples of Their Lands (New York: Oxford University Press, 2005). Stuart Banner, How Indians Lost Their Land: Law and Power on the Frontier (Cambridge: Belknap Press, 2005), also draws heavily on the case, as does Walter R. Echo-Hawk, In the Light of Justice: The Rise of Human Rights in Native America and the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (Golden, CO: Fulcrum Publishing, 2013) and Eric Kades, "History and Interpretation of the Great Case of Johnson v. McIntosh," Law and History Review, 19 (2001): 67-117. Also found as Faculty Publications. Paper 50. <http://scholarship.law.wm.edu/facpubs/50>. Curiously, earlier works on federal Indian policy put less emphasis on Johnson. Prucha, Great Father, for example, affords half a page to the case (I, 113), emphasizing Marshall's statement that the right of occupancy could bar forcible removal. Marshall said, "It has never been contended that the Indian title amounted to nothing. Their right of possession has never been questioned." Charles Warren, The Supreme Court in United States History. Two Volumes. Revised Edition (Boston: Little, Brown, and Company, 1926): I, 730, states that McIntosh "had settled the question of the nature of Indian title to the soil, and had held that the fee to lands in this country vested in the British government, by discovery, according to the acknowledged law of civilized nations; that it passed to the United States by the Revolution; and that the Indian tribe had a right of occupancy only."

47. Robertson, Conquest by Law, pp. 125-144. It should be noted that Marshall dissented in Mitchel and had left the court by the time of Fernandez. For a different perspective, see David E. Wilkins, "Johnson v. M'Intosh Revisited: Through the eyes of Mitchel v. United States," American Indian Law Review, 19 (1994): 159-181. See also, Williams, American Indian in Western Legal Thought, pp. 314-317; Prucha, Great Father, I, 208-213; Warren Supreme Court, I, 729-779; and Report of the John Evans Study Committee, University of Denver, pp. 23-26.

48. Alexis de Toqueville, Democracy in America. Translated by George Lawrence and edited by J. P. Mayer (New York: Doubleday & Company, 1969), p. 339.

Chapter III

The Bitter Conundrum

At heart, the violent process between white men and red that unfolded in the United States was less about race, or even savagery, than it was about land. Savagery was an image generated by the need to rationalize the taking of the land. Legal forms that justified “the Right of Conquest” provided the means that supported the American claim that taking the land was a “right.” John Quincy Adams presented a surprisingly consistent view of white attitudes in 1820, when he wrote, “But what is the right of a huntsman of the forest of a thousand miles, over which he has accidentally ranged in quest of prey?” This sentence alone contained many assumptions about the differences between Anglo-Americans and Indians and their relative values. But he drove home the point by asking, “Shall the exuberant bosom of the common mother, amply adequate to the nourishment of millions, be claimed exclusively by a few hundreds of her offspring?”¹

This would be a consistent view, reiterated over and over again in the nineteenth century. Land not “used” for agriculture or other development of natural resources, land not “settled” and opened for “development” and the growth of towns and roads and civilization could rightly be taken for such “higher” purposes. Progress could not and should not be held back to maintain reserves for “savages” and their backward ways. John Marshall insisted that despite his own views of the natural rights of Indians based upon the “abstract principles of justice,” the Doctrine of Discovery was the law of the land. He wrote, “However extravagant the pretension of converting the discovery of an inhabited country into conquest may appear; if the principle has been asserted in the first instance, and afterwards sustained; if a country has been acquired and held under it; if the property of the great mass of the community originates in it, it becomes the law of the land, and cannot be rejected by Courts of Justice.”²

The acquisition of the Louisiana Purchase by treaty between France and the United States in 1803, without the participation of any of the tribes who actually occupied the lands, underscored the legal presumptions of whites—the right to cede by France and the right to acquire by the United States without the consent of Native inhabitants was unquestioned. With that vast new mass of land claimed by international treaty, the United States looked beyond the Mississippi River and found a basis for a policy of removal of tribes east of the river to new “homes” in the West. At the beginning, this seemed to be a workable alternative to the only choices given to Indians—resist and die or assimilate and disappear.³

Even that was a chimera of wishful thinking. Alexis de Toqueville saw through it even before the policy makers had completed the task of removal:

From whatever angle one regards the destinies of the North American natives, one sees nothing but irremediable ills; if they remain savages, they are driven along before the march of progress; if they try to become civilized, contact with more-civilized people delivers them over to oppression and misery. If they go on wandering in the wilderness, they perish; if they attempt to settle, they perish just the same. They cannot gain enlightenment except with European help, and the approach of the Europeans corrupts them and drives them back toward barbarism. So long as they are left in their solitudes, they refuse to change their mores, and there is no time left to do this, when at last they are constrained to desire it.⁴

Even Toqueville’s rhetoric, though sympathetic to the Indians, was choked with the assumptions of the linear way of seeing and the judgments about indigenous people that came with it. The entire debate was infused by an ethnocentric world view already more than a thousand years old, embedded in Western thought and government like DNA. To have found anyone within Western society who did not accept the assumptions of the higher claim of the United States to the land would have been virtually impossible, even among the most sincere and dedicated reformers, including those who deplored the “forcible civilization schemes” of the government and the civilization plans of the reformers. In fairness, policy makers consistently sought ways to make the process easier. They sought an “alternative to extinction.”⁵ But they could find no way that did not involve the forced enculturation of Indians. The challenge was to do so fairly. Their linear way of seeing limited them to their own notions of progress.

They could not escape their conviction that the Indians’ only hope was to embrace the principles of civilization. This meant changing their ways of life consistent with white views of work, language, values, and religion. Federal policy took shape in the hands of men schooled in the principles of the Enlightenment. They believed in the common origin of all men, in a certain natural equality, and in the perfectability of men. They did not argue for an innate racial inferiority. They believed, rather, that human beings passed naturally through stages from savagism to barbarism to civilization. They rejected the notion that Indians were locked into a permanent savage state. They believed that as the environment changes, cultures change, until at last, civilization would be the logical inheritance of all men. And they saw themselves as agents of that process.

What mattered, then, was where particular societies fit on the linear scale of civilization. The goal of policy had to be to promote the civilization of the tribes. Trade, the introduction of agriculture, the promotion of private property ownership, education, and Christianization would be the instruments of change because the yeoman freeholder was the foundation of civilization as they understood it. Not only did the ideals of the Enlightenment and of Protestant Christianity support this position, but the emergence of scientific racism in the nineteenth century reinforced it and strengthened its rationale.⁶

By then, other alternatives were impossible. Even if policy makers could have closed the West to all settlement and avoided all trade and social interchange with the Indians, creating a vast enclave where the natives could live without contact, too much had already happened for such a plan to work. First, it would have been inconsistent with white Americans' vision of progress. Civilizing Indians was, for them, a positive goal. Moreover, although some of the tribes were only then encountering whites in person, changes had already taken place within their societies as the result of white presence in North America that could not be undone. The only way to have insured a different outcome was for the Europeans to have stayed in Europe. So the well-intended, well-meaning plans to protect Indian rights and lives were doomed to failure by a mind-set that could not escape its assumptions.⁷

The good intentions of policy makers were consistent over time in their commitment to the transition of Indians to a new way of life based upon the "Great Values." The policy makers and reformers underestimated the task, but they gave little thought to whether or not it was right. Their Eurocentric world view and their ethnocentric view of indigenous people blinded them to the reasons policies failed and to the arrogance of their belief that Native cultures were the great impediments to a satisfactory solution to the "Indian question."

Anglo-Americans seemed incapable of recognizing the value of cultures and beliefs other than their own. In the language of Protestant Christianity, Indians had to be "born again" as civilized men, not through some instantaneous conversion but through a guided transition to a new way of life. The intent of reformers was benevolent; they did not see themselves as the agents of extermination but of salvation. Their ability to confront the issues was trapped by their world view. Indeed, from their point of view, they were offering Indians their most precious gifts—salvation and civilization.⁸

Even if, by some miracle, an alternative could have been found by policy makers and reformers, its prospects for success would have been almost nil. The federal government never proposed extermination as official policy. Policy makers could not have comprehended the implications of the modern concept of "ethnic cleansing" given their nineteenth-century mind-set.⁹ They passed Trade and Intercourse Acts to manage relationships. They passed laws against the preemption of Indian lands. They stationed troops along overland routes to act as a barrier between emigrants and Indians. The primary reasons these efforts to control the process failed had little to do with policy.

The first reason was that whatever differences existed between those who sought a fair Indian policy and those who demanded swift military conquest, the vast majority of Americans shared a view of Indians as backward, uncivilized, and heathen. The differences between them related to how "backward Natives" should be treated. Some thought they were redeemable; some thought they were beyond redemption. Some thought they could be saved through education and Christianity; some thought they were hopelessly savage and should be treated like wild animals. Some thought they could be helped; some thought they were beyond help. Some placed their faith in forced assimilation; some favored extinction as the only sure solution. But, at base, white Americans saw Indians as less than themselves by almost any measure they used.

Most Americans' views of American Indians were not based upon a consciously developed ideology. They did not need scientific proofs of racial inferiority, although they might use "scientific racism" or rely on popular beliefs as means of justifying their prejudices. They simply assumed that they knew what Indians were like, a priori. Indians were far behind on the scale of progress. They wore skins, not waistcoats and gowns. They did not have written languages. They had superstitions, not religion. They painted their faces, tortured, murdered, plundered, and killed innocent women and children. These characterizations provided the justification for extermination. Reformers did not so much debunk the assumptions as see them as things to be changed. But the core view of both rested on the same mythical foundations. Condescension, paternalism, and racial superiority were the common responses, however sincere the desire to help might be or maniacal the blood lust became.¹⁰

Another more practical obstacle stood in the way. Territorial expansion was a tenet of national policy. Although the laws and treaties were filled with assurances that Indian rights would be protected, the greater goal was the continued growth of the country. The whole debate over Indian policy was about the best way to deal with Indians on the path to national development. No one assumed a static state or a permanent "Indian country." This became more evident as decades passed and political conditions changed. The populist shift toward Andrew Jackson's common man gave new influence to the westering settlers. "The doctrines of agrarian democracy . . . held that the social cement of the republic must be the self-interest of its citizens," Richard Slotkin suggests. "In economic terms, this meant that each citizen must be possessed of sufficient property to guarantee the subsistence of himself and his family, or must at least have a credible prospect of attaining that level of economic independence through his labor."¹¹ The myth of the frontiersman thus shifted from the troublemakers of which Washington lamented and emerged as the archetype of the New American. With this view came a fear that the closing of the frontier would pose a serious threat to American democracy itself.

America was changing in other ways as well. With the growth of eastern cities, the settlement of the cis-Mississippi territories so recently the scene of wars with eastern tribes, the development of a new manufacturing economy, and continuing population growth, the conviction that expansion must continue was reinforced. Railroads and new forms of industry also loomed on the horizon. "Manifest Destiny" was already embraced in practice even before John O'Sullivan proclaimed "the right of our manifest destiny to overspread and possess the whole of the continent that Providence has given us for the development of the great experiment of liberty and federated self-government entrusted to us."¹²

While the ideological assumptions and political purposes of Manifest Destiny were questioned by many, the notion of an America that stretched from sea to sea was assumed by people of many persuasions. Indeed, the growing sectionalism that eventually led to a Civil War focused less on slavery in the beginning than on opening lands west of the Mississippi to settlement. In the beginning, the debate over slavery focused on white issues and their effect on white men. "Popular Sovereignty," "Free Soil," and "the dignity of labor," were all code phrases in the debate over national expansion as certainly as they were expressions of positions on slavery.

The primary reason for the failure of policy in its efforts to respect and protect Indian rights over and over again was not so much ideological, philosophical, or mythological. It lay, instead, in the sheer numbers of American settlers. Whatever the methods devised, policy makers could not deliver on Jefferson's promise that Indian lands would never be "invaded or disturbed" without the consent of the tribes. While lawmakers and bureaucrats debated, settlers moved west. Once settlers decided that a place was worth having, there was no stopping them. And when land was overrun and baptized with blood, the army moved in and new treaties were made, as unenforceable as the ones before them until, at last, settlers understood that Indian policy was impotent, however well-intentioned it was. What happened seemed inexorable, inevitable, as certain as the seasons.

The United States was developing a "collective identity" for the first time that carried with it an ideology of "an existing territorial state" and "a missionary sense of cultural superiority." The social order was rigid and divided at the same time. Both in its new populism and new oligarchy, the new order was presented not as political theory but as experiential reality. Making this possible required a system of order for all of the national territory. The Northwest Ordinance provided the model. Jurgen Osterhammel argues that the new system "translated sovereignty claims into property issues, territorial interests into economic interests, and in doing so bound together public and private interests in the acquisition of land."¹³ Then, ironically, the "democratization" of the United States led to more aggressive policies toward indigenous people.

The result was a mind-set, amounting to a national consensus concerning who the Indian was. The choice of the singular term "Indian" was deliberate. It indicated the box that Native Americans of all tribes, predilections, and cultures had been dumped into. It was easier to deal with one image than face the reality of diversity among indigenous peoples. White Americans might disagree on the questions of how the Indian should be treated, of whether he could be "saved," or which policies ought to be followed. Some were generous and hopeful and mindful of dearly held values. Some were ready to exterminate the "encircling foe." Some simply expected the Indian to vanish over time. Some embraced such things as the “New American School,” phrenology, craniology, and the Bible, in finding justifications for their views.¹⁴ But almost without exception, Americans saw the “Indian” as a “problem,” innately inferior, that stood in the way of progress and destiny and had only two choices—change or die. The savage other remained intact. Few lessons had been learned; many prejudices had been reinforced. And the national self-awareness guaranteed that little would change.

Half a continent away tribes like the Cheyennes and Arapahos were not aware of—or prepared to understand—the implications of these changes for them. So far, they had been spared the direct pressure that other people had experienced. Their lives had already been altered by the presence of Europeans as the result of pressures on them from other tribes closer to whites. From their homes near the Great Lakes, they dispersed westward for more than a century before they reached the area of the Black Hills. They had been masters of evasion, adaptation, alliances, and change. By the time they acquired horses and abandoned their horticultural past, the Cheyennes were more properly a nation rather than a tribe. They had been brought together and given unity by social organization, a political system of remarkable design and foresight, common moral principles, and spiritual institutions.¹⁵

This achievement was largely the work of the prophet Sweet Medicine, the great culture-hero of the Tsistsistas. Some say that the prophet lived among them four lifetimes, teaching them what they must do and how they must live, but he was a real person and a political genius.¹⁶ At Noaha-vose, or Bear Butte (near present-day Sturgis, South Dakota), Sweet Medicine received Mahuts, the Four Sacred Arrows, and with them the means of unifying the nation. Noaha-vose was the Cheyennes’ Sinai, Sweet Medicine their Moses. Sweet Medicine saw the potential dangers of the new horse culture insofar as social and political unity was concerned. The various manhao (residence bands) would be scattered for much of the year, which would increase the possibility of division and weakness. To prevent this, he created the Council of Forty-Four, including the chiefs of the various manhao and four Old Man Chiefs who would make decisions for the nation. These chiefs were often called “peace chiefs,” and their emblems of office were pipes, pipe bags, and a single eagle feather, pointing right, in their hair.¹⁷

Sweet Medicine also created the military societies as a means of binding the manhao together. Membership in the societies came from all of the different residence groups. These soldier societies maintained discipline at tribal gatherings, ceremonies, and hunts, watched over the people, and provided the fighting forces. By recognizing the authority of soldier chiefs in matters of war, the tribal—or national unity—was strengthened. No soldier chief could be a member of the Council of Forty-Four, so that a division of authority existed, designed to maintain unity.¹⁸ This structure was also held together by the four Sacred Arrows, two of which were “man arrows” to kill their enemies and two of which were “buffalo arrows” to provide the resources to sustain the people, and by the Sun Dance.

At some point in their movements the Tsistsistas encountered a related group, the Suthaio. The Suthaio brought with them the Sacred Buffalo Hat, given to them by the holy man, Erect Horn. It had powers for the Suthaio, similar to those of the Sacred Arrows for the Tsistsistas. In time the two groups were consolidated to form the Cheyennes, the Suthaio were admitted to the council as one of the manhao, and the sacred objects and rites of both were absorbed by all. In this way, the Cheyennes followed a new life consistent with the ways of Maheo, the All-Father.¹⁹

The nineteenth century found the Cheyennes closely allied with the Arapahos who preceded them into the area and who were skilled traders who knew the lands and tribes to the south. What attracted both were the great grasslands of the high plains. They also renewed their association with the Lakota, even then extending themselves on the Northern Plains.²⁰ Together, the Lakota, Cheyennes, and Arapahos forged a powerful alliance, securing a region from the Missouri River to the headwaters of the Smoky Hill and Republican Rivers. This coalition also established economic and military dominance over common foes—the Crows, the Utes, and the Pawnees.²¹

The Cheyennes and Arapahos extended the influence south. The Arapahos crossed the North Platte early in the new century, and soon most of the Cheyennes were located between the North Platte and the South Platte, although some remained more closely aligned with the Lakota in the north. In 1820, good hunting between the South Platte and the Arkansas, and new sources of white trade goods on the Arkansas, drew the Cheyennes further south.²² Their presence was strong enough that the Kiowas retreated below the Arkansas under pressure. The arrival of the Bent brothers (William and Charles) and Ceran St. Vrain on the Arkansas in the 1820s strengthened the Cheyenne and Arapaho hold on trade, and victories over the Kiowa and Comanche led eventually to a grand council in 1840 in which a peace was made that was never broken. That meant that the plains from West Texas to the Canadian line were dominated by a single coalition.²³

Then, with the Cheyennes and Arapahos at the pinnacle of their power, everything changed. The 1840s saw increased migration on the overland routes west, accelerated at the end of the decade by the land cessions of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, followed almost at once by the discovery of gold in California. Suddenly, the Santa Fe Trail and the Overland Trail were filled with tens of thousands of settlers. In a matter of ten years, the essentials of the horse culture were seriously threatened. In the 1830s, travelers wrote about the tree-lined creeks and rivers; in the 1850s, travelers complained that there was not enough wood to build fires. Without the watershed provided by trees, water dried up. Grass was overgrazed and dry so that forage for horse herds and wild game became scarce. The overland routes were not roads or trails, but swaths of land sometimes miles wide that changed the lay of the land and interrupted the migration of the buffalo. In a remarkably short time, three hundred thousand settlers took up residence in California. Oregon was filling up. Few of the settlers were stopping on the Great Plains, but many were advancing west in Kansas. Just “passing through” devastated the environment.²⁴

In 1851, the United States government called a great treaty council at Fort Laramie. Some of the tribes were intimidated by the Lakota-Cheyenne-Arapaho combine and did not attend. A few others left. But the great problem lay in the treaty itself. It was not a traditional treaty of cession. Its primary purpose was to define the ranges of the various tribes, so that the government would be able to treat in the future with particular tribes for particular lands. Since the plains culture was not based upon land ownership, but upon control of lands that shifted with herd movements and military pressures, this was an almost impossible thing for the tribes to understand. To make matters worse, the tribes were asked to select single leaders to speak for them. This too was outside the tribes’ experience.

Nevertheless, the treaty makers got what they wanted with mountains of “gifts” and promises of lasting peace. The government created a paper demarcation of power on the plains. For example, the lands between the North Platte and the Arkansas were recognized as the domain of the Cheyennes and Arapahos, in spite of the continuing presence of other tribes, from Lakota on shared lands below the Platte to Kiowas who still hunted along the Arkansas in the South. Utes, Shoshoni, Pawnees, and Crows also ventured onto these lands from east and west in search of horses and buffalo. Nor did the treaty take into account the

Cheyennes who ranged as far north as the Powder River country.²⁵

Perhaps inevitably the settler migrations led to conflicts with the tribes, particularly the Lakota and Cheyennes. The Cheyennes managed to stay clear of the troubles until 1856-1857, when a series of incidents led to a military expedition against them commanded by Colonel Edwin V. Sumner. At Solomon’s Fork, the army routed the Cheyennes.²⁶ Badly shaken, those from the northern manhao fell back to the secluded reaches in the north, while the southern manhao, more directly in the path of settlement, moved closer to the Arkansas and sought accommodation. An internal schism was developing within the nation, still largely unrecognized.

Then, gold was discovered in Colorado. Within a year, 100,000 settlers poured onto the central plains, along the Platte River route and even through the center of Cheyenne lands along what would become known as the Smoky Hill Trail. These settlers were not passing through. They saw their fortunes on the Front Range of the Rockies, in the very heart of Cheyenne and Arapaho land. Weakly, the government pointed out that the lands being preempted were on unceded Indian land. And still the settlers came.²⁷

Notes: Chapter III

1. Quoted in Thomas F. Gossett, Race: The History of an Idea in America (New York: Schocken Books, 1965), p. 230. In his last speech to Congress, December 2, 1828, Adams observed, “We have been far more successful in the acquisition of their lands than in imparting to them the principles or inspiring them with the spirit of civilization.” He lamented that they were forming communities as “rivals of sovereignty” apart from the Union. He said, “This state of things requires that a remedy should be provided—a remedy which, while it shall do justice to those unfortunate children of nature, may secure to the members of our confederation their rights of sovereignty and of soil.” Quoted in Prucha, Policy in the Formative Years, p. 233.
2. Johnson and Graham’s Lessee v. William McIntosh (1823), quoted in Prucha, Documents of Indian Policy, pp. 34-35.
3. Sheehan, Seeds of Extinction, pp. 245-250.
4. Toqueville, Democracy in America, pp. 338-339.
5. Michael Paul Rogin, Fathers & Children: Andrew Jackson and the Subjugation of the American Indian (New York: Vintage Books, 1975), pp. 113-248; Ronald N. Satz, American Indian Policy in the Jacksonian Era (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1975), passim; Robert A. Trennert, Jr., Alternative to Extinction: Federal Indian Policy and the Beginnings of the Reservation System, 1846-51 (Philadelphia: Temple University Press, 1975), pp. 1-60; Brian W. Dippie, The Vanishing American and U.S. Indian Policy (Middletown, CT: Wesleyan University Press, 1982), pp. 3-55; and Horsman, Race and Manifest Destiny, pp. 81-138, 189-207, provide a good overview of the variety of thought.

6. Philip Borden, "Found Cumbering the Soil: Manifest Destiny and the Indian in the Nineteenth Century," The Great Fear: Race in the Mind of America. Edited by Gary B. Nash and Richard Weiss (New York: Holt, Rinehart, and Winston, 1970), pp. 71-97; William Stanton, The Leopard's Spots, Scientific Attitudes Toward Race in America, 1815-59 (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1960), passim. Prucha has argued that the influence of scientific racism was "practically nil" in the conscious shaping of Indian policy; likely, "scientific" ideas were imposed as a justification for views already held. See Francis Paul Prucha, "Scientific Racism and Indian Policy," in Prucha, Indian Policy, pp. 180-197. Craig Steven Wilder, Ebony & Ivy: Race, Slavery, and the Troubled History of America's Universities (New York: Bloomsbury Press, 2013), explores the ways in which academics fed the ideology of racism, although he mentions American Indians only in passing. See also, Horsman, Race and Manifest Destiny, pp. 139-157, and Gossett, Race: The History of an Idea, pp. 144-252.

7. Tom Dunlay, Kit Carson & the Indians (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2000), pp. 436-439. Robert Winston Mardock, The Reformers and the American Indian (Columbia: University of Missouri Press, 1971), while focused primarily on the post-Civil War period, is also particularly useful.

8. This is a critical point. Reformers and religious leaders thought of salvation and civilization as the greatest gifts that they could offer to indigenous peoples. The ideas were not malicious by design, and they found it difficult to see them as anything other than benefits.

9. Anderson, Ethnic Cleansing, is the most recent and extended explication of the concept. Tinker, Missionary Conquest, pp. 5-6, uses the term "cultural genocide" which he defines "as the effective destruction of a people by systematically or systemically (intentionally or unintentionally in order to achieve other goals) destroying, eroding, or undermining the integrity of the culture and system of values that defines a people and gives them life."

10. Silver, Savage Neighbors, explains the patterns as well as anyone, although it is narrowly focused on the second half of the eighteenth century.

11. Slotkin, Fatal Environment, p. 110.

12. Brenda Wineapple, Ecstatic Nation: Confidence, Crisis, and Compromise, 1848-1877 (New York: Harper Collins, 2013), pp. 506-528; Slotkin, Fatal Environment, pp. 110-118; Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 224-250.

13. Said, Culture and Imperialism, pp. xxv, 289; Osterhammel, Transformation of the World, pp. 105, 371-373; Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 85-86, 166-168.

14. Elliott West, "Reconstructing Race," The Essential West: Collected Essays (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2012), pp. 100-126; Prucha, "Racism and Policy," pp. 180-197; Horsman, Race and Destiny, pp. 116-157.

15. Elliott West, "Called-Out People: The Cheyennes and the Central Plains," Essential West, pp. 57-77, is critical as an introduction to the Cheyennes before plunging into the extensive ethnological and historical literature on the Cheyennes. The most important works include, George Bird Grinnell, The Cheyenne Indians: Their History and Life Way. Two Volumes (New York: Cooper Square Publishers, 1962), and The Fighting Cheyennes (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1915); Peter John Powell, Sweet Medicine: The Continuing Role of the Sacred Arrows, the Sun Dance, and the Sacred Buffalo Hat in Northern Cheyenne History. Two Volumes (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1969) and People of the Sacred Mountain: A History of the Northern Cheyenne Chiefs and Warrior Societies, 1830-1879, with an Epilogue, 1969-1974. Two Volumes (New York: Harper & Row, 1981; John H. Moore, The Cheyenne Nation: A Social and Demographic History (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1987); Karl N. Llewellyn and E. Adamson Hoebel, The Cheyenne Way: Conflict and Case Law in Primitive Jurisprudence (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1941); E. Adamson Hoebel, The Cheyennes: Indians of the Great Plains. Second Edition (New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1978); Donald J. Berthrong, The Southern Cheyennes (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1963).

16. Grinnell, Cheyenne Indians, II, 345-381; Moore, Cheyenne Nation, pp. 313-317; Powell, Sweet Medicine, II, 433-471.

17. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 44-45." See also Llewellyn and Hoebel, Cheyenne Way, pp. 67-98.

18. Karen D. Petersen, "Cheyenne Soldier Societies," Plains Anthropologist, 9 (1964): 146-172; Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 45-47.

19. Hoebel, Cheyennes, pp. 14-25.

20. Herein, the term "Lakota" is used to describe the division of the Plains Sioux with whom the Cheyennes were most closely involved. The use of the terms "Sioux," "Lakota," and "Dakota," can be confusing. The term "Sioux" derives from an Ottawa description, translated by the French as "Nadouessioux," which was simplified to Sioux, to describe the people of the Seven Council Fires, Oceti Sakowin. Within the Seven Fires, the people referred to themselves as "Lakota" or "Dakota," different dialects of a word indicating friendship. The Lakota-speaking Oglalas and Brules and the Dakota-speaking Yanktonai and Yanktons were the first to move west and embrace the horse and buffalo culture. Over time, other Lakota, including Minneconjou and Saones crossed the Missouri as well. The Sans Arc, the Hunkpapa, the Two Kettles, and the Blackfeet (not the Algonquian tribe of the same name), were all subgroups of the Saones. Together these groups comprised the Plains Sioux. This brief summary is drawn from a more extended account in Ostler, The Plains Sioux and U.S. Colonialism, pp. 21-26.

21. Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 70-73; Richard White, "The Winning of the West: The Expansion of the Western Sioux in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries," Journal of American History, LXV (1978): 319-331.

22. Berthrong, Southern Cheyennes, pp. 17-24.

23. David Lavendar, Bent's Fort (New York: Doubleday & Company, 1954), pp. 141-154; Anne F. Hyde, Empires, Nations, and Families: A New History of the North American West, 1800-1860 (New York: Harper-Collins Books, 2011), pp. 151-170; David Fridtjof

- Halaas and Andrew E. Masich, Halfbreed: The Remarkable True Story of George Bent—Caught Between the Worlds of the Indian and the White Man (Cambridge, MA: Da Capo Press, 2004), pp. 1-66.
24. Elliott West, "Land," The Way to the West: Essays on the Central Plains (Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 1995), pp. 13-50.
25. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 62-66; Berthrong, Southern Cheyennes, pp. 118-123. Especially interesting are the reports prepared by A. B. Chambers and B. Gratz Brown for the St. Louis Missouri Republican, September 26, October 1, 2, 5, 29, November 2, 9, 30, 1851.
26. William Y. Chalfant, Cheyennes and Horse Soldiers: The 1857 Expedition and the Battle of Solomon's Fork (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1989).
27. West, Contested Plains, pp. 115-235.

Chapter IV

Methodists and the American Indian

American Methodism and the United States of America grew up together, nor was it just a matter of chronological parallels. Their common roots were in England, but both colonial Methodists and Anglo-colonial government were transformed by experience in ways that maintained vital connections to the past, yet took surprising directions in both beliefs and forms that eventually led to important separations in thought and action.

John Wesley was the inspiration and theologian for Methodism both in England, where he lived all but two years of his life, and in America; but his personal experience in America, while profoundly important in his own spiritual development, was not what he expected. He and his brother Charles sailed for Georgia, in 1735, at the invitation of the colony's founder, James Edward Oglethorpe, who wished him to serve as minister to the colonists and as missionary to the Indians. "My chief motive for going is the hope of saving my own soul," he wrote. "I hope to learn the true sense of the gospel of Christ by preaching it to the heathen."¹ The journey to Georgia proved to be a personal test of faith for Wesley. He met but never preached a single sermon to the "Georgian Indians." From the reports of others, he described them as "being none of them able to give any rational account of themselves." He wrote:

They are inured to hardship of all kinds, and surprisingly patient of pain. But as they have no letters, so they have no religion, no laws, no civil government. Nor have they any kings or princes, properly speaking, their "micos" or headmen having no power either to command or punish, no man obeying them any farther than he pleases. So that everyone doth what is right in his own eyes; and if it appears wrong to his neighbor thee person aggrieved usually steals on the other unawares, and shoots him, scalps him, or cuts off his ears; having only two short rules of proceeding—to do what he will, and what he can.

They are likewise all, except (perhaps) the Choc-taws, gluttons, drunkards, thieves, dissemblers, liars. They are implacable, unmerciful; murderers of fathers, murderers of mothers, murderers of their own children. . . .

Wesley described several different tribes and their various "qualities." Of the Creeks, he noted, "They are more exquisite dissemblers than the rest of their countrymen. They know not what friendship or gratitude means. They show no inclination to learn anything, but least of all Christianity, being full as opinated [sic] of their own parts and wisdom as either modern Chinese or ancient Roman."² He made these judgments and more not by observation but by conversation with others who "knew" the various tribes. His mission "to preach to the heathen" was still-born, and his personal life was so tortured that he returned to England in 1737, more uncertain of his faith than when he left. "I went to convert the Indians," he would write, "but, O! who shall convert me!"³

The experience proved transformative for him and for the church. George Whitefield, a friend of the Wesleys, who arrived in Georgia simultaneously with their departure, was much kinder to him, than John Wesley was to himself. Whitefield proclaimed Wesley's contribution to America "inexpressible."⁴ He returned to England briefly himself, where he led revivals and drew the wrath of many Anglicans, with his simple admonition, "Ye must be born again." He returned to the colonies in 1739 to begin a year-long crusade, beginning the "Great Awakening" that changed the religious culture of much of Colonial North America.⁵ In the meantime, Wesley worked to refine his own understanding of the gospel and to establish within the Anglican Church, his Methodist societies.

Despite the growth of Methodism in both England and the colonies, its message was designed for white men, both churched and unchurchd, and the eighteenth century passed with no direct Methodist mission to American Indians. The Church did struggle over the increasing conflict between homeland and colonies. In spite of his disagreements with the Church of England, Wesley insisted that kings ruled by divine right and that Christians should be loyal to the king as well as to the church. After the Seven Years War, as resistance mounted against English rule in the colonies, Wesley insisted that Methodists should remain loyal to their king. Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, that Thomas Jefferson would claim to be "unalienable rights," were to Wesley the gifts of God.⁶

For a time, Methodism faltered in some areas because of the tension between loyalty to governing authority as preached by Wesley and other English Methodists, including the elders sent from England to minister to American churches, and the revolutionary mind-set of many of their congregations. Wesley himself was conflicted initially about what should be done. He argued with English leaders that the colonists had a just cause while insisting that “Those who fear God, honour the King.” He feared that the republicanism taking shape in America would “unhinge all government . . . and plunge every nation into anarchy.” He spoke of American “sin” and English “righteousness” in the American Revolution.⁷

The tension between the Enlightenment thought of John Locke and Adam Smith that influenced John Wesley and the enthusiasm of the revivalism more common in America, contributed to internal divisions. Thomas Rankin, Wesley’s chief assistant in America, and Francis Asbury, the leading spokesman for Methodism in America, both had British sympathies. Asbury understood the American cause, but he saw politics as a distraction from the mission of the church.⁸ Neutrality became a trademark for Methodism, and some members were persecuted by their neighbors because of it. With the end of the Revolution, American Methodists took bold new steps. In 1784, they formed the Methodist Episcopal Church, separate from John Wesley and the British Methodists.⁹

The new American Methodists adopted a system of circuits for ministry and created annual conferences to pass the rules by which the Church would be governed. One of Francis Asbury’s remarkable achievements as the leader of American Methodism was to maintain its commitment to organization and leadership—and to method—while also embracing enthusiasm and the direct intervention of the Spirit.¹⁰ This mixture of elitism and populism ironically created a tension that proved to be the key to Methodist success. The Church combined personal piety and practicality that thrived through camp meetings and circuit riders and sustained itself by close organization and control. One mechanism was “the class meeting.” Class meetings were small group meetings that met regularly, not for Bible study but “to watch over one another in love.” Through this process, particularly in areas without regular pastors, the class meetings raised funds and monitored the members’ spiritual growth and conduct.¹¹ It became another powerful tool in the growth of the Church. This admixture of revivalism, class meetings, and organization would prove critical as the Methodist Episcopal Church moved west with the nation.¹²

In 1787, John Wesley confessed to Francis Asbury his continuing “concern” for “the progeny of Shem” (Wesley’s reference to American Indians) who seemed “quite forgotten.” He wrote, “Does it not seem as if God had designated all the Indian nations not for reformation, but destruction? How many millions of them have already died in their sins! Will neither God nor man have compassion upon these outcasts of men?” He lamented that it was impossible for mere men to help the Indians, but he asked, “Is it too hard for God?” He urged Asbury to “Pray ye likewise [to] the Lord of the harvest, and he will send out more labourers into His harvest. . . .”¹³ But the attitude of American Methodists remained one largely of indifference.

At the end of the Revolution, more than 100,000 white settlers lived west of the Appalachians in that great arc of territory still the heart of the contest between the new nation and the Native tribes resisting its advance. There, in that great mass of settlers, was the future of Methodism and the settlers’ hope of salvation. The settlers gave little thought to Native rights, nor the Methodists to Native souls. Methodist ministers shared the experiences of the settlers and often expressed the same views about the dangers and character of American Indians. Methodists embraced the idea that westward migration was inevitable. They believed that Anglo-Americans would develop the new lands and, eventually, civilize its indigenous inhabitants. And they saw great hope for the social development of the West in the Christian tradition.¹⁴

When the American Methodist movement was organized as a church at the Christmas Conference at Baltimore in 1784, a question was raised about Section I of the first Discipline: “What may we reasonably believe to be God’s Design in raising up the Preachers called Methodists?” The answer was, “To reform the Continent, and to spread scriptural holiness over these Lands.”¹⁵ The brash egalitarianism of Methodist circuit riders saw all persons, of every class, under the condemnation of God without redemption. That included American Indians. The circuit riders who formed the majority of the Methodist preachers focused on social evils rather than ethics or principles, and even those who were more conversant in the underlying theological principles did not challenge the basic institutions of the times.¹⁶

Methodism was a systematic, disciplined faith, based on Bible reading, attention to the inner life as well as moral behavior; but in the beginning their individualistic beliefs held that if men’s souls were saved, social change would follow. The object, then, was to change individuals. Specific social reforms were not emphasized. Questions of public morality were matters of individual moral regeneration, not political action.¹⁷ “The Methodists preached a message of the common man and used the common man to preach it.”¹⁸ Most were, as one author puts it, both “untutored” and “uncultured.”¹⁹ While this had advantages in gaining the acceptance of their congregations at revivals and meeting houses, it also meant, practically, that Methodist circuit riders shared both the experiences and at least some of the prejudices of the settlers. They were itinerants, which meant that they did not put down roots, but they did relate to the hardships and the viewpoints of settlers. And that included their views of the Indians.²⁰

Thomas Hinde, an influential Methodist preacher in the Ohio country, praised western Methodists for their role in the “violent contest” with the Indians. At the same time, he condemned white settlers responsible for atrocities against the Indians. He saw a great link between civilization and conversion, “even among our American Indians.” He wrote, “Dost thou not know the order of grace and of providence? The ‘best wine is kept to the last.’ Here are displays of heaven’s favours. And when the glad tidings of ‘great joy’ which shall be sounded through all the earth shall have passed this great theater, it will return in swelling waves of glory from the west to the east.”²¹ As Jeffrey Williams notes, the nation was critical to God’s plan: “Christianity followed the spread of the pioneers to create a new empire bathed in vital religion.”²²

There was, though, a great fear that grew over time and helped to spark the Second Great Awakening. It was the danger of primitivism—a fear that westering settlers might sink into barbarism, that the wilderness would drag them down into the savagery they despised in the Indians. The belief was based on a simple premise. Once whites left the more settled areas and entered into “unorganized” country, they also left behind the social, political, economic, and moral institutions that provided order. Effectively returned to a state of nature, settlers tended to depend upon themselves. Violence, disorder, and moral decline were consequences.²³

This view was broadly shared by a number of denominations, and it remained a central concern well into the nineteenth century. As a result, the chief concern of missions on the moving frontier was for white settlers. Horace Bushnell, prominent minister and educator, summarized the view as late as 1847. He argued, forthrightly, citing the example of Micah, from the Old Testament that “emigration, or a new settlement of the social state, involves a tendency to social decline.” He described a “wild race of nomads roaming over the vast western territories of our land—a race without education, law, manners, or religion,” but he was not speaking of Native Americans. A society, he said could not take its roots with it. The old roots of “local love” and “historic feeling” were left behind. Education faltered. As their tastes grew wild, “their resentments will grow violent and their enjoyments coarse. The salutary restraints of society being to a great extent, removed . . . they are likely even to look upon the indulgence of low vices and brutal pleasures, as the necessary garnish of their life of adventure.”

He continued:

Still we are rolling on from east to west, plunging into the wilderness, scouring across the great inland deserts and mountains to plant our habitations on the western ocean. Here again the natural tendencies of emigration toward barbarism, or social decline, are displayed, in signs that cannot be mistaken. The struggle through which we have passed, is continually repeating itself, under new modifications. We see the same experiment involving similar jeopardies; and we draw out of our own experiences warnings to make us anxious, and encouragements to make us hopeful for our country—a double argument of fear and hope, to make us doubly faithful in our Christian efforts for its welfare.²⁴

Bushnell singled out Methodists, as having “a ministry admirably adapted, as regards their mode of action, to the new west—a kind of light artillery that God has organized, to pursue and overtake the fugitives that flee into the wilderness from his presence.”²⁵ He not only praised their evangelism, but noted, as well, their enthusiasm for building colleges to sustain knowledge and learning. This mission against barbarism, he predicted, would lead to a time when “knowledge, virtue and religion, blending their dignity and their healthful power, have filled our great country with a manly and happy race of people, and the bands of a complete Christian commonwealth are seen to span the continent.”²⁶ This report, published by the American Home Missionary Society, did not mention indigenous peoples, but it does provide insight into the priorities of evangelical Christians, priorities that were plainly political as well as religious.

On March 3, 1819, the Congress of the United States passed the “Civilization Bill” designed to prevent “the further decline and final extinction of the Indian tribes” and to introduce among the tribes “habits and arts of civilization.” The law included an appropriation of $10,000 for the creation of schools.²⁷ On April 5, 1819, the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized, and the Society applied for funds to support schools. In 1820, the Methodist General Conference authorized the “establishment of Indian schools” pursuant to the recommendation of the Missionary Society.²⁸ The effort met with limited success. The more centrally organized Baptists and Presbyterians had an advantage over the Methodists’ diverse organization. Consistently, the annual reports of various conferences revealed that conference missionary societies either failed to report to the Missionary Society or to the conferences.²⁹

Several initiatives did take place in the 1820s, the most successful being among the Wyandots in the Ohio country, and those among the Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, and Creeks in the Southeast. Efforts were also made among the Shawnees, Delawares, Potawatomis, Mohawks, Oneidas, and a few others. Methodists took pride in their efforts among “the terror of our day” as they classed Native people.³⁰ The approach was clearly assimilationist in design. The strategy included teaching piety and hard work, teaching “useful arts,” redefining the roles of the sexes, teaching reading and writing, modifying culture by cutting men’s hair, requiring them to wear Western clothing, changing their names, teaching the value of property directed ultimately to private ownership of land. No effort was made to understand Native ways, values, or beliefs; and Methodists had an added burden since their Indian ministries relied upon the same itinerant system as other congregations. This meant that ministers rarely remained with any group long enough to develop real empathy with them had they been so inclined.³¹

Interestingly, the mission among the Wyandots had been started on the Upper Sandusky in 1814-1815, by a man of mixed African and Indian ancestry named John Stewart. His biggest supporter among the Wyandots was William Walker, Sr., a white man who had been kidnapped by Delawares in Virginia at the age of eleven. He had married the daughter of a French trader and a Wyandot woman. Stewart struggled for a time, but in February 1817, he preached a sermon on the Last Judgment so eloquently that the Wyandots reacted like settlers at a camp meeting. Several chiefs and numerous others were converted on the spot.³² Stewart was not licensed to preach as a Methodist until 1818, when the Ohio Conference officially approved a mission to the Wyandots. Bishop William McKendree was so impressed with Stewart’s efforts that he collected funds to purchase a farm near the Wyandots for Stewart and his family.³³ He was soon joined by Moses Heckle as the result of Wyandot entreaties. In 1819, James Montgomery was appointed the first official missionary to the Indians.³⁴

In 1821, James B. Finley followed and provided strong leadership. Most importantly, he had the support of many of the Wyandot leaders who believed Christianity and education offered them the best way to survive in the midst of white settlement. Finley eventually became a sub-agent to the Wyandots as well as a missionary. In 1825, the War Department promised the Wyandots, “Brother, your Great Father will never use force to drive you from your lands,” but pressure for removal was already strong. Finley fought for his charges, but he came to see that his efforts would fail. Later, he would write, “Who can stop the march of the white population? Neither mountains, deserts, seas, rivers, nor poles. To talk, therefore of giving the Indian a country where he will be delivered from the advances and impositions of the lowest and worst class of our citizens, is chimerical.”³⁵

Finley did face opposition from traditionalists, but it was less prominent than in the days of John Stewart when the chief John Hicks had told Stewart:

I, for one, feel myself called upon to rise in the defense of the religion of my fathers. . . . No, my friend, your disclaiming so violently against the modes of worshipping the Great Spirit, is in my opinion, not calculated to benefit us as a nation; we are willing to receive good advice from you, but we are not willing to have the customs and institutions which have been kept sacred by our fathers, thus assailed and abused.³⁶

The Wyandot experience proved to be a model that Methodists cited to prove their success. T. Scott Miyakawa has suggested that “the sympathy such frontier Methodists as McKendree and Finley had for the Indians stands out in sharp relief against the widespread western prejudice. The denomination as a whole pioneered in its concern for the Indians, and this interest was another influence on its growing social awareness.”³⁷ His claim for the denomination seems generous in light of what happened. Men like Stewart, McKendree, and Finley proved exceptional, although there were other serious efforts, the most successful being missions in the Southeast, among tribes with significant groups that had chosen the way of acculturation already.³⁸

Perhaps the most ambitious missionary initiative by the Methodist Church came in 1832 when the General Conference charged the bishops “to extend, with all practicable dispatch, the aboriginal missions on our western and northwestern frontiers.”³⁹ The specific region in question was the Oregon country, and the initiative was reported to be in response to four Flathead Indians, visiting “St. Louis, in search of the white man’s God.”⁴⁰ In July 1833, Jason Lee was appointed missionary to the Flatheads, although it soon became apparent that the mission field had far more tribes to contend with than the Flatheads alone. Lee was also disillusioned that the Indians did not seem to have the enthusiasm of the small party that visited St. Louis, but, rather, that both Indians and white traders in the region opposed the efforts. Only a remnant of the Flatheads remained, as the result of conflict with the Blackfoot. Lee was persistent, however. He established a mission at Willamette north of present-day Salem, Oregon, and proposed a patient plan to choose two men without families to “throw themselves into the nation,” live among them, learn their language, and preach the gospel until the way opened to introduce schools, agriculture, and “the arts of civilized life.”⁴¹

By 1838, the mission had been enlarged and its scope widened. Other missionaries had arrived as well, including Presbyterians Marcus Whitman and Henry H. Spalding who worked among the Cayuse and Nez Perce.⁴² They were determined in their labors, although Lee noted that both “Mr. W & Mr. S use highhanded measures with their people, and when they deserve it let them feel the lash.”⁴³ Lee even felt that perhaps he had been too lax in his methods. Lee’s requests for more assistance led some to criticize the mission as a cover for a plan of colonization. The church insisted that its only mission was the salvation of souls; but a party of fifty-one persons departed for Oregon in September 1839, the largest single missionary group from the United States up to that time.⁴⁴

The Oregon mission’s work was further complicated by the arrival of a French Canadian Catholic mission from Quebec and an increasing number of white settlers. What finally caused the greatest challenge to Lee’s mission was financial. Lee was replaced in 1843. Two years later the Christian Advocate announced the liquidation of the secular work of the Oregon Mission.⁴⁵ Lee’s work would continue to be criticized as more colonial in nature than evangelical. He himself wrote, “That the Indians are a scattered, periled, and deserted race, I am more and more convinced; for it does seem that unless the God of heaven undertake their cause, they must perish from off the face of the Earth, and their name be blotted out from under heaven. God grant that a remnant may be saved, as trophies of the Gospel of Christ, and a seed to serve him.”⁴⁶

In 1847, Marcus Whitman and his wife, Narcissa, who had never won the confidence of the people they were sent to serve because of their high-handed and paternalistic ways, were killed along with twelve others by Cayuse, who also carried off five men, eight women, and thirty-four children as captives.⁴⁷ This would be the beginning of a dark time in Oregon. Although the chiefs responsible turned themselves in and were subsequently hanged, the missionary bubble had burst, and many white settlers in the region openly demanded extermination.⁴⁸

Mission strategy was already changing by then for Methodists. The Removal Act had accomplished its purpose. In 1844, the General Conference established the Indian Mission Conference, the first conference designed specifically for Indians and allowing for Native preachers.⁴⁹ Three districts were created: the Cherokee, the Choctaw, and the “Kansas River.” The bulk of the conference was located in the newly created Indian Territory, prepared for the removal of the “Civilized Tribes” of the Southeast and for other smaller groups.⁵⁰

The exception was the Kansas River District, which crammed an amalgamation of tribes into a small space—Shawnee, Delaware, Peoria, Kickapoo, Pottawatomie, and, eventually Wyandot—located in an area marked by the forks of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers in the northeast corner of what would become Kansas Territory. Here was evidence not only of the church’s assimilationist policies but of the federal government’s goals as well. Far from being “removed” from contact with whites, these tribes were at the jumping off point for white expansion beyond the Mississippi. The Delawares had signed forty-five treaties with the federal government (averaging one every two years) by the time they assumed their pittance of land in Kansas. Both the government and Methodists saw what to them seemed the best of situations—the total dismantling of the tribes and their reservations in favor of allotment of lands to individuals.⁵¹

This appeared to be possible because these eastern tribes had been changing dramatically. Among the Wyandots, for example, people were still divided over religion and traditional ways. The Methodists had the strongest hand, but the Jesuits still had a following and traditionalists fought to hold on to the old ways. Some compromise was made by the development of new tribal institutions alongside the continuation of dances, ceremonies, and other traditions. Over time, even before the ascendancy of the Methodists among them, their system evolved from their former culture in which women played a larger role, to one based loosely on the American system. By the time the Wyandots were well settled, the number of tribal members of mixed ancestry had greatly increased, and the majority of people had acculturated to the point where they dressed, lived, and even spoke like whites.⁵²

In 1844, the same year that the General Conference established the Indian Mission Conference, the Methodist Episcopal Church split over slavery. Although there was no formal secession, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had a decided advantage among the tribes of the Indian Territory and gradually dominated the Cherokee and Choctaw Districts. With strong connections in Arkansas, and especially in Missouri, they also maintained an interest in the Kansas River District. This meant that missionaries from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church competed for followers in the Kansas River District. Their disputes reflected the troubled conflict on the Missouri-Kansas line. Several of the tribes, including Wyandots, had members who owned slaves, and by the 1850s there were two separate meeting houses on Wyandot lands.⁵³

By 1853, the Wyandots, most of whom were also strong Unionists, had considered allowing whites to lease land on their reserve and holding an election for a delegate to the United States Congress. On July 26, 1853, a gathering of Wyandots, government employees, and white traders chose William Walker, Jr., the dominant figure in Wyandot leadership, as the provisional governor for the Territory of Nebraska.⁵⁴ In 1855, six Wyandot chiefs signed a treaty that dissolved the Wyandot tribal organization and provided for allotment of their lands. Five of the six chiefs had promoted the organization of the Territory of Kansas. Not all of the Wyandots accepted this arrangement. Some left Kansas and traveled to Canada closer to their traditional homeland; others moved to the Indian Territory and the embrace of the Methodist Church, South. Those who remained in Kansas and accepted allotment became American citizens, effectively accomplishing the goals of both the federal government and of Methodists.⁵⁵

In the Oregon country, matters continued to deteriorate following the murders of the Whitmans. The Rogue River War, as it came to be called, was a particularly vicious affair that by 1855 was marked largely by citizen militias bent on extermination and plunder of Indian lands.⁵⁶ General John E. Wool, the commander of the U.S. Army's Department of the Pacific, denounced both the governors of Washington and Oregon for their ruthless war against the Oregon tribes. The conflict escalated until General Wool reported, "It has become a contest of extermination by both whites and Indians."⁵⁷ During this bloodbath, the most consistent voice in defense of the Indians was an Englishman named John Beeson. Beeson converted to Methodism at the age of fourteen, although his connection to the Methodist Episcopal Church, if any, is unclear. He immigrated to the United States in 1832 and settled in Illinois. He took up the abolitionist cause, and his farm soon became a station on the Underground Railroad. Eventually, though, he moved to Oregon in 1853 and into the middle of a particularly virulent struggle between settlers and Indians.

On October 7, 1855, in response to rebuffs from the military officers who blamed whites for most of the problems, a gathering of settlers collected in Jacksonville, Oregon, to plan the extermination of the Indians in the Rogue valley. The gathering occurred at the Quarterly Meeting of the Methodist Church. After a lengthy discourse on settler grievances and justifications for extermination, the presiding officer asked if anyone wished to speak on a religious subject. Beeson quietly stood and asked all of those present to reject the idea of extermination. As Christians, he told them, they must be the servants of justice and humanity not vengeance. His appeal met with a cold response. Not one person supported him, and the next day the killing began. Beeson said later that he believed that had the ministers, especially the presiding elder, spoken up, the outcome might have been different. He also recalled that one man told him afterward that he was led into the killings "by the preachers."⁵⁸

Beeson became such a vocal defender of the tribes that Oregon's newspapers refused to print his letters (including the Methodist papers, the Pacific Christian Advocate and the California Christian Advocate, both of which thought his views too controversial). His correspondence to other territories and states was intercepted and destroyed, and his life was threatened. His home was burned, and he left Oregon with a military escort to prevent his murder.⁵⁹

A month after he left, the Oregon City Argus finally published an article in which Beeson admonished Oregon's settlers to treat Indians fairly, to "do good, love truth, be just and fair to all, exalt the RIGHT, though every ism fail."⁶⁰ In 1857, he published A Plea for the Indians. In it, he quoted from the report of the Missions Committee at General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1856:

So far as the moral condition of the Indians is concerned, it will answer our present purpose to say, that they are wretched heathen, in the lowest depths of moral degradation.

But it is also true that there remains to be seen among them but slight traces of the moral benefit which, it was hoped, these astonishing sacrifices and labors [of the missionaries] would confer. They are almost, if not quite, as degraded and destitute of every thing embraced in morality, civilization, and religion, as they were when the first Missionary to this land found them in their nakedness, their ignorance, and their pollution.⁶¹

Beeson was plain: “And this is a Report of that Civilization that has depraved them [the Indians] with its vices, and maddened them with its crimes—of that Religion that has invaded their dominions, robbed them of their lands, made them outlaws in their own country, hunted them in their own woods, murdered them on their own hearthstones, violated their homes, and thrust the plow into their sepulchers, until its very corn becomes a vampire, and sucks up the sacred ashes of their Fathers’ Graves.”⁶² He chided the churches for insulting the tribes’ self-respect and religion. He blasted them for sanctioning outrages, violating justice, and failing to understand the gospel they claimed to preach. He wrote:

There must then be some radical error in their treatment; and this becomes the more certain when we consider that simple moral means, combined with the arts and graces of a true Christian life, under ordinary circumstances, never fail to develop and refine them. Taking all these circumstances into consideration, I would respectfully suggest a thorough reorganization, and entire change of forces. Let them, at least, have a religion that will not insult their common sense, by presenting itself with Whisky and Creeds in one hand, and Bibles and Bowie-knives in the other.⁶³

Beeson made his point plain in the introduction of his second edition:

I have not objected to Christianity, but CREEDS; for I believe that if the pure and holy principles taught by Jesus Christ were presented to the Indians, not in forms and theories only, but in deed and spirit—in the combined power of truth and life—they would grow up into Christianity by the natural determination of a strong veneration, and a fine sense of the Beautiful and True. But, on the other hand, is it not unreasonable to expect that they should renounce the Faith of their Fathers, which they cherish with the utmost tenacity, for unintelligible doctrines, about which Christians themselves are not agreed? The reflective mind of the Indian associates the faults and the faith of the White Man with the wrongs perpetrated upon himself. He sees Drunkenness, Debauchery, and wasting diseases follow in his path, and Tribes that were before comparatively pure, healthy, and happy, perishing from the face of the Earth; and he inevitably casts the blame on Christianity itself; for with him Religion is the strongest motive-power of nations and of men.⁶⁴

He asked his readers “how we ourselves should feel if a more powerful people should take possession of our country, spread themselves in overwhelming numbers over our cities and villages, devouring our substance and treating us with contempt, and at the same time requiring us to forsake our religion, demolish our churches, tear down our school-houses, and adopt a faith which we could not comprehend, and ceremonies and habits we could not approve?”⁶⁵ Doubtlessly, modern critics could, by present-minded analysis, point to errors or prejudice in Beeson’s own presumptions; but he was neither sanctimonious nor condescending in his tone. He singled out Methodists in his criticism both because of his own Methodist roots and because he thought them the most active in missions in the Oregon country that he knew. What he failed to understand, however, was the mind-set of the Church.

By the 1850s, Methodists had lost the simple innocence of the gospel and even of the doctrines of grace and sanctification. Wesley had linked obedience to God to loyalty to the king, so it was not a giant leap. But Methodism’s great surge had come during the move westward among the people who accepted the anti-Indian sublime. Methodists, like other Americans, acted toward them on the basis of this image of the savage and never attempted to know them or to learn what they thought, knew, believed, valued, or felt. The country’s growth blended with biblical notions of “chosen people” and “the promised land,” to make the “savage other” even more alien to the principles of the Church. What emerged was a “civic theology” that linked Anglo civilization and Christian evangelization. Unlike the Methodists of the Revolutionary era, Methodists were now fully in the political arena. Loyalty to the Union was a religious duty, and Christianization was essential to civilization.⁶⁶

As one recent writer notes, “These changes allowed Methodists to become major players in defining the national interest and to announce their willingness to violently defend those interests as part of God’s battle against evil.”⁶⁷ Ministers might debate whether Indians had to be converted in order to be civilized or civilized in order to be converted, but they were linked in the conviction that both were essential to the salvation of the Indian.⁶⁸ And so the worst images of the Indian as savage were accepted by ministers as naturally as by scalp-taking frontiersmen. From Francis Asbury to James Finley to dozens and more of ministers and Christian Advocate writers, Methodists celebrated the settlers’ use of violence against American Indians as necessary and heroic.

There is no doubt that some within the church were tempered by compassion, but even they were tainted by the assumption that Native cultures had to be eradicated by one way or the other. They might prefer assimilation, but they accepted violence as a possible alternative. The language that made this view clear appeared as frequently in Methodist publications as in popular magazines.⁶⁹ There were dissenters like Samuel Doughty and Stephen Olin, who argued that God had given America to the Indians, only to have it taken away by war and “the contaminating vices of civilized life, unaccompanied by a single safeguard or one redeeming principle, which education and religion have invented to counteract their destructive influences.”⁷⁰

Ironically, William H. Goode, the indefatigable agent of Methodist missions to Indians and to white settlers in the West for nearly twenty years was uniquely optimistic. During his lifetime, he worked to create new districts and conferences from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains, served Indian missions from the Indian Territory and Kansas, along the Arkansas and the Platte Rivers, and oversaw the organization of the Rocky Mountain District of the Kansas-Nebraska Conference in 1859 and 1860. In 1860, following his visits to the Colorado Territory, he wrote, “The work of Indian missions is a great and glorious work. Actual results establish this, despite all the hindrances that have intervened.”⁷¹

Goode saw with clarity that the problem was not an “Indian problem” but a moral problem. It appeared, he wrote, that the Indian was “fading away,” but he believed that the cause was the white man’s “oppression, his cruelty, his contaminating vices.” He wrote flatly, “It is vain to plead Anglo-Saxon destiny; it is impious, thus incidentally to claim Divine sanction to violence and wrong.” More than most of his contemporaries, Reverend Goode saw the dilemma. The tribes had been uprooted again and again and moved to “new” homes:

But scarcely are they settled in their new homes, till the avarice and cupidity of our people are directed to the new lands assigned them. The treaties have conveyed the right to the soil in perpetuity. Terms have been used to express to their minds, in the strongest manner possible, the completeness of their title, and the assurance that they should never again be disturbed. They are told that in their new home they shall have “all the land, and all the trees, and all the stone, and all the buffaloes, and all the elks, and all the deer, as long as the sun shines, and leaves grow on the trees, and water runs down hill.” But in a little time they are forced or persuaded into new treaties, and another removal, and subjected anew to the same hardships and exposure.⁷²

His diagnosis was at once penetrating and caring, but his solutions were already shopworn. He favored allotment in severalty, abandonment of the annuity system in favor of funds “applied to useful public objects within the tribes,” education, strict enforcement of treaty provisions, high standards for agents, and “when a sufficient number of tribes is prepared for the measure,” the creation of a separate, independent state within the Union. Some of these ideas were new, but they remained within the essential framework of policy that assumed acculturation was the only answer. It could hardly have been otherwise.

He was, after all, an evangelical Christian who had spent his ministry spreading the gospel as the great hope of humankind. His caring was rooted in his belief that the answer for Indians and for whites lay in the same solution—“Patient continuance in well doing.” As he contemplated conditions on the overland routes and in the Rocky Mountain settlements he had recently visited, he knew that his dream would not be possible without continuing attention to the white settlements in new territories. He saw more clearly than most the problems faced by white settlers and believed that they had to have the mentoring of the Church. The gospel was the grand solution for him because he trusted it beyond all else as a corrective to men’s treatment of one another. For him it was the greatest gift, the common denominator that could fill the “mighty chasm” between the races.⁷³

Like John Beeson, there was no arrogance in Goode’s message. Nor could he be called naïve; he had served too long over too wide a ground. No one was more experienced than he. Had there been more men like William Goode, the way might have been opened to a broader understanding and more creative solutions to ameliorate if not to alter the mind-set of the times. It was too much to be hoped for because the forces against them were too great. But Goode was an exception. The truth was that “It cannot be fairly claimed that the Church had an Indian mission program. Although the Missionary Society nominally sponsored the missions, it exercised no real supervision over them.”⁷⁴

Despite Goode’s confident hope, missions to the Indians ceased to have the priority they once did, except in the Indian Territory, oddly enough. The Church at large was pessimistic and despondent of any success in serving the Indians. It was moving away from the traditional view of itinerancy that Goode saw as a key to success. More importantly, Methodists were struggling on a larger stage, or so they believed, in a contest that would again link their faith and their patriotism. The Civil War loomed. In the 1850s, Methodists were redefining themselves according to middle class values that emphasized a character of “restraint, sobriety, and self-control.” Piety, domesticity, manners, dignity, temperance, education, public service, and generosity were now more important in defining the Christian way than they had been even a few years before.⁷⁵ This amounted to a step away from the enthusiasm of the camp meeting and charismatic expression. The Civil War helped to redefine the connection between patriotism and faith, as concern for Native peoples slipped further from view.

As the Church became more political, its social concerns were essentially focused on the white community and constrained by the ideology of the United States as the promised land and Americans as a chosen people. Even the slavery question was a white issue concerned with white society's view of itself. Slaves and blacks at large existed within the context of whites' views of themselves and linked to questions of morality and economic growth. By contrast, Indians were not only a people outside of white culture—still the savage other—but also an obstacle to America's Manifest Destiny.

Notes: Chapter IV

1. David Hempton, Methodism: Empire of the Spirit (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2005), pp. 1-85.
2. December 2, 1737, Journal 1, W. Reginald Ward and Richard P. Heitzenrater, editors, The Works of John Wesley (Nashville: Abingdon Press, 1988): I: 201-204.
3. January 24, 1738, Journal 1, Ward and Heitzenrater, Works of Wesley, I, 210-211; J. Ralph Randolph, "John Wesley and the American Indian: A Study in Disillusionment," Methodist History, X (1972): 3-11.
4. "John Wesley's Big Impact on America," Christianity.com. <http://www.christianity.com/church/church-history/timeline/1701-1800/john-big-impact-on-america-11630220.html>. For a deeper analysis see Thomas S. Kidd, George Whitefield: America's Spiritual Founding Father (New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2014).
5. Thomas S. Kidd, The Great Awakening: The Roots of Evangelical Christianity in Colonial America (New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2009), pp. 38-83.
6. Hempton, Methodism, pp. 33-99.
7. Ibid.; Jeffrey Williams, Religion and Violence in Early American Methodism: Taking the Kingdom by Force (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 2010), pp. 41-67; Russell E. Richey, Kenneth E. Rowe, and Jean Miller Schmidt, American Methodism: A Compact History (Nashville, TN: Abingdon Press, 2012), pp. 9-25.
8. Charles W. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil: Methodists and the Making of America (New York: Doubleday & Company, 1971), pp. 53-67; Hempton, Methodism, pp. 92-93, 100-101.
9. Richey, et al., American Methodism, pp. 18-34.
10. Hempton, Methodism, pp. 7, 101.
11. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 69-77; Kevin M. Watson, The Class Meeting (Wilmore, KY: Seedbed Publishing, 2014), pp. 19-31, 35-51.
12. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 95-117;
13. Quoted in Bruce David Forbes, "'And Obey God, ETC.': Methodism and American Indians," Methodist History, 23 (October 1984): 4.
14. Wade Crawford Barclay, History of Methodist Missions. Six Volumes (New York: The Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church, 1949): I, 164-212.
15. Russell E. Richey, Kenneth E. Rowe, and Jean Miller Schmidt, editors, The Methodist Experience in America: A Sourcebook. Two Volumes (Nashville, TN: Abingdon Press, 2000): 82.
16. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 69-137.
17. Richard Carwardine, "Methodists, Politics, and the Coming of the Civil War," Church History, 69 (September 2000): 579-580.
18. Richard Cameron, quoted in Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, p. 79.
19. Ibid.
20. See, as examples, Jacob Young, Autobiography of a Pioneer (Cincinnati: Cranston & Curtis, 1857), p. 246, and James B. Finley, Life Among the Indians (Cincinnati: Cranston & Curtis, 1857?), p. 59. Even Bishop Asbury's Journal was full of references that reflected settler fears and attitudes. Frederick A. Norwood, "The Invisible American—Methodism and the Indian," Methodist History, 8 (January 1970): 4-6.
21. Williams, Religion and Violence, pp. 110-114.
22. Ibid., p. 114.
23. Barclay, Methodist Missions, I, 164-258; Gary L. Roberts, "Violence and the Frontier Tradition," Kansas and the West: Bicentennial Essays in Honor of Nyle H. Miller. Edited by Forrest R. Blackburn, et al. (Topeka: Kansas State Historical Society, 1976), pp. 96-111.
24. Horace Bushnell, Barbarism, the First Danger: A Discourse for Home Missions (New York: American Home Missionary Society, 1847), p. 4.
25. Ibid., pp. 16-17.
26. Ibid., p. 81.
27. Prucha, Indian Policy, p. 222.
28. Barclay, Methodist Missions, II, 112.
29. Ibid., I, 112-115.
30. Williams, Religion and Violence, p. 115. For a more detailed

- look at the missionary efforts of the Methodist Church, see Barclay, Methodist Missions, II, 112-169.
31. Barclay, Methodist Missions, II, 262-274.
32. Mary Stockwell, The Other Trail of Tears: The Removal of the Ohio Indians (Yardley, PA: Westholme Publishing, 2014), pp. 109-110.
33. T. Scott Miyakawa, Protestants and Pioneers: Individualism and Conformity on the American Frontier (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1964), p. 193.
34. Barclay, Methodist Missions, I, 203; Forbes, "And Obey God," pp. 6-7.
35. Frederick A. Norwood, "Strangers in a Strange Land: Removal of the Wyandot Indians," Methodist History, 13 (April 1975): 46-49; Norwood, "The Invisible Indian," pp. 7-9.
36. Quoted in, Forbes, "And Obey God," p. 18. Stockwell, Other Trail of Tears, pp. 120-123, that the majority of Wyandots found a new kind of peace and satisfaction in the new ways.
37. Miyakawa, Protestants and Pioneers, p. 193.
38. Stockwell, Other Trail of Tears, pp. 110-114.
39. Barclay, Methodist Missions, II, 201.
40. Ibid., II, 202-204.
41. Ibid., II, 200-262; Robert J. Loewenberg, Equality on the Oregon Frontier: Jason Lee and the Methodist Mission, 1834-43 (Seattle: University of Washington Press, 1976). See also Forbes, "And Obey God," pp. 12-14.
42. Barclay, Methodist Missions, II, 223.
43. Ibid.
44. Ibid., II, 224-229.
45. Ibid., II, 254. Berkhofer, Salvation and the Savage, p. 177, said of Lee's Oregon Mission that it "was as dramatic as it was insignificant from the viewpoint of Indian missionary history."
46. Ibid., II, 262.
47. Alvin N. Josephy, The Nez Perce Indians and the Opening of the Northwest (New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 1965), pp. 247-255; Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 155-173.
48. Hixson, American Settler Colonialism, pp. 133-134. See also Cameron Addis, "The Whitman Massacre: Religion and Manifest Destiny on the Columbia Plateau, 1809-1858," Journal of the Early Republic, 25 (2005), pp. 221-258, and Gray H. Whaley, Oregon and the Collapse of Illahee: U.S. Empire and the Transformation of an Indigenous World, 1792-1859 (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2010).
49. Barclay, Methodist Missions, II, 171-200.
50. Ibid.
51. Ibid., II, 172-183.
52. Norwood, "Strangers in a Strange Land," pp. 46-55; Stockwell, Other Trail of Tears, pp. 308-320.
53. Perl W. Morgan, editor, History of Wyandotte County Kansas and Its People (Chicago: The Lewis Publishing Company, 1911), pp. 343-348; Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 343-346.
54. William Elsey Connelley, editor, The Provisional Government of Nebraska Territory and the Journals of William Walker, Provisional Governor of Nebraska Territory (Lincoln: Nebraska State Historical Society, 1899). See also three articles by Connelley, "Religious Conceptions of the Modern Hurons," "Wyandot and Shawnee Indian Lands in Wyandotte County, Kansas," and "Kansas City, Kansas: Its Place in the History of the State," Kansas Historical Collections. Seventeen Volumes (Topeka: Kansas State Historical Society, 1881-1928): XV, 92-191.
55. John P. Bowes, Exiles and Pioneers: Eastern Indians in the Trans-Mississippi West (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2007), pp. 201-218.
56. Stephen Dow Beckham, Requiem for a People: The Rogue Indians and the Frontiersmen (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1978), pp. 147-167; E. A. Schwartz, The Rogue River Indian War and Its Aftermath (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1997).
57. Robert M. Utley, Frontiersmen in Blue: The United States Army and the Indian, 1848-1865 (New York: Macmillan Company, 1967), p. 183.
58. John Beeson, A Plea for the Indians with Facts and Features of the Late War in Oregon (New York: John Beeson, 1857), pp. 46-48; Beckham, Requiem for a People, p. 152.
59. Beeson, Plea for the Indians, pp. 76-98; Frederick A. Norwood, "Two Contrasting Views of the Indians: Methodist Involvement in the Indian Troubles in Oregon and Washington," Church History, 49 (1980): 178-187.
60. Oregon City Argus, June 28, 1856.
61. Beeson, Plea for the Indians, pp. 100-101.
62. Ibid., p. 101.
63. Ibid.
64. Bert Webber, John Beeson's Plea for the Indians: His Lone Cry in the Wilderness for Indian Rights (Medford, OR: Webb Research Group, 1994), pp. 35-36.
65. Beeson, Plea for the Indians, p. 113.
66. Williams, Religion and Violence, pp. 95-130.
67. Ibid., p. 121. See also Christopher Rein, "'Our First Duty Was to God and Our Next to Our Country: Religion, Violence, and the Sand Creek Massacre,'" Great Plains Quarterly, 34 (2014).

68. Berkhofer, Salvation and the Savage, pp. 4-7, addresses this issue broadly. He cites articles from the Christian Advocate (New York), July 18, 1828, December 19, 1828, and the Annual Report of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 1839, p. 4, as examples of the conversion-first point of view, and the Missionary Society's annual reports for 1850, 1851, 1854, and 1856, advocating the civilization-first side. It appears that the Missionary Society's view became more cynical over time. Other sources cited herein provide additional evidence of the debate.

69. Ibid., pp. 121-130. See Norwood, "Contrasting Views," for the sharp contrast of views even within the Methodist Church. Beeson's writings made a special point of contrasting his own views with those of the Methodists in Oregon. He was amazed that the Church did not rally to support him. Eventually, his disappointment with Methodists led him to become a Quaker.

70. Williams, Religion and Violence, pp. 124-125.

71. William H. Goode, Outposts of Zion: With Linnings of Mission Life (Cincinnati: Poe and Hitchcock, 1863), p. 452.

72. Ibid., p. 453.

73. Ibid., pp. 453-464.

74. Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 363.

75. Hempton, Methodism, pp. 187-209; Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 185-230; Williams, Religion and Violence, pp. 143-160; Richard Carwardine, "Methodist Ministers and the Second Party System," Perspectives on American Methodism: Interpretive Essays. Edited by Russell E. Richey, Kenneth Rowe, and Jean Miller Schmidt (Nashville, TN: Kingswood Books, 1993), pp. 159-177, Richard Carwardine, "Methodists, Politics, and the Coming of the Civil War," Church History, 69 (2000): 578-609, and Donald B. Marti, "Rich Methodists: The Rise and Consequences of Lay Philanthropy in the Mid-Nineteenth Century," Richey, et al, Perspectives, pp. 265-276.

Chapter V

John Milton Chivington: The Fighting Parson

John Milton Chivington was a son of the settler invasion into the trans-Appalachian west from Virginia through Kentucky and into the Ohio country. His parents were Irish and Scottish, part of the Gaelic backbone of migration into the great arc of Middle Ground at the center of Indian resistance to American expansion. His father, Isaac Chivington, was born on August 15, 1790, some say in Virginia, others in Kentucky or Gallipolis, Ohio.¹

Among the earliest settlers of Warren County, Ohio, was William Runyon, a Scot, who emigrated from New Jersey to Harrison County, Virginia, where he started a family. Runyon lost everything to Indians “who attacked and burned his dwelling in Virginia.” Runyon moved on through Kentucky to Ohio, where he settled in Harlan Township in 1805, the year Ohio became a state.² Chivington’s mother, Jane Runyon, was Runyon’s daughter, born in Virginia between 1791 and 1795. Her father acquired land northeast of Cincinnati, and became a leading citizen. Isaac Chivington and Jane Runyon were married in Ohio on April 18, 1810, and purchased two sections of timbered land in Warren County, northeast of Cincinnati. They had their first son, Lewis, in 1811.³

Isaac was a big man, six feet, six inches tall, who cleared timber for sale, but his struggle for the land involved more than lumber. Tenkwatawa and Tecumseh, the Shawnee brothers who dreamed of a pan-Indian coalition to reclaim Native lands and independence, posed a threat to peace in the Ohio country. In 1811, a force under General William Henry Harrison struck Prophetstown at Tippecanoe, while Tecumseh was in the south seeking allies. Afterward, Tenkwatawa, the Shawnee Prophet, was largely discredited among the tribes, and Tecumseh struggled to rebuild his alliances. Reluctantly, he joined the British in the War of 1812, where he proved himself to be a skilled leader. He was largely responsible for the capture of Detroit on August 16, 1812, but his fainthearted British allies proved undependable.⁴

In the year that followed, General William Henry Harrison began to build a second Northwestern Army. Tecumseh again proved his mettle against the Americans at Fort Meigs, but his British counterpart timidly withdrew, providing Harrison more time to build his army. Isaac Chivington was one of the volunteers who joined; another was William Runyon.⁵ On October 5, 1813, Harrison attacked the combined force of British and Indian troops. Quickly abandoned by the British, Tecumseh desperately drew Harrison’s men into a swamp and forced the Americans into hand-to-hand conflict. It was a wise move, but Harrison’s troops seriously outnumbered the Indian coalition. Tecumseh was killed, and his followers were scattered.⁶

The Battle of Thames broke the back of Native resistance in the Northwest, and Isaac soon returned home to his wife and son. A daughter, named Sarah, was born a year or so later. John Milton Chivington was born on January 27, 1821, and Isaac Watts Chivington followed on August 18, 1824.⁷ When he was thirteen, Lewis joined his father cutting timber, but he had little time to learn the family business. Isaac Chivington died on December 18, 1825, leaving his wife and family dependent on the fourteen-year-old Lewis.⁸

Little is known of John Chivington’s youth. His mother, of stern Presbyterian stock, was, by all accounts, a formidable woman. She held the family together after her husband’s death. She had some education, naming her two younger sons after English poet John Milton, and Isaac Watts, the “Father of English Hymnody” and religious nonconformist. She saw to her children’s religious instruction with access to both Presbyterian and Methodist churches in nearby Lebanon.⁹ John and Isaac worked with their older brother cutting and rafting timber for a time, but John left the family fold before he reached eighteen. He worked as an apprentice carpenter and supplemented his income as a prize fighter in the river towns. He ventured into Indiana in the 1830s, and while he was there, living in Milton, he met and married Martha Rowleson on July 24, 1839.¹⁰

In 1842, or perhaps during the winter of 1843-44 when “a most remarkable revival” took place at Zoar Church, the oldest Methodist Church in Hamilton Township, Ohio, John Chivington was converted. The revival preachers were named Fife and Smith, and their powers as revivalists were “unrivaled.” More than two hundred souls were converted, marking the beginning of Zoar Church’s greatest growth.¹¹ According to family tradition, Chivington began to study under the tutelage of a Methodist bishop at Cincinnati shortly thereafter until Chivington satisfied himself that he could “give a reason for every particle of faith that is in me.”¹² Bishop Joshua Soule had moved to Lebanon in 1825, it is true, but Chivington’s connection to a bishop has not yet been confirmed.¹³

His mentor was more likely the Reverend Michael Marley, a well-known and respected minister. “Michael Marley was a well-made, hardy man of good size,” a contemporary wrote of him. He remembered:

I think I have never known the man who could go into the depths of theology equal to Michael Marley, and he was a student until the end of his life. He would remind one of a man stationed at divergent roads in the wilderness, all unsafe but one, and a departure would hazard life, and it was his business to set them in the safe way. He was able to resolve apparent conflicting passages of Scripture . . . thus clearly bringing out and presenting truth; and, when in his strength, he had great ability to force and apply his logical conclusions.¹⁴

It is easy to see Marley’s style in Chivington’s later sermons, explaining the righteous way, then pointing out the dangers of other ways, sending out “in a thrilling, warning voice, showing the dreadful results, reaching out through countless ages, so as to alarm the fears of the guilty.”¹⁵

According to at least one source, Michael Marley, the presiding elder, licensed Chivington to preach at Zoar Church in September 1844. The source adds, “Three years later the same Quarterly Conference recommended him to the Annual Conference, 1847.” The record remains obscure, but Chivington began his work there as a lay preacher or “exhorter” at the very least.¹⁶ In 1846, he took another important step in his life. Members of his mother’s family, the Runyons, were Masons, and he was a founding member of Butlerville Lodge No. 135, F. & A. M. in 1846.¹⁷ He was successful enough in his church work that in 1847, he was recommended to the annual conference on probation. In 1848, Chivington was admitted to the Illinois Conference, Quincy District, at Payson, on a trial basis. The following year, still on trial, he transferred to the Missouri Conference and LaGrange Mission. In 1850, he was admitted to full connection, elected a deacon, but not ordained, and moved to Shelbyville Mission. In 1851, he was ordained a deacon at the St. Joseph Mission in the Missouri Conference.¹⁸ In 1852, he was ordained an elder in the Missouri and Arkansas Conference, serving the Savannah and St. Joseph Mission in the Platte Mission District. In 1853, he was assigned to the more demanding Wyandotte, Delaware, and Shawnee Indian Mission at present day Kansas City.¹⁹

He arrived in the fall of 1853, during an increasingly troubled time. Wyandot politics by then was enmeshed with national politics, territorial expansion, and slavery. The Wyandots were themselves divided. There were even two Methodist churches in the jurisdiction. William Walker was himself a slaveowner, and in May 1854, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would authorize its own Kansas Mission Conference.²⁰ On September 6, 1853, George W. Manypenny, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, visited the Wyandots to discuss the possibilities of the allotment of Wyandot lands, and, on September 14, Colonel John Charles Fremont, preparing for yet another exploratory mission in the West, camped at the Methodist mission while he outfitted the expedition and hired Delaware scouts.²¹ Chivington likely did not arrive until Manypenny and Fremont had left, but on September 27, Reverend Daniel Dofflemeyer, representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, returned as a missionary to the Wyandots. Chivington tried to cultivate the support of the governing elite, led by William Walker, Jr., but the situation was still troubled. Curiously, Chivington’s name is scarcely mentioned in the historical record during his tenure. His name does not appear once in Walker’s Journals.²²

With the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act on January 4, 1854, the situation changed yet again, and the Methodist Church recognized a need to move into the new territories quickly. William H. Goode, a venerated and experienced minister, was selected to visit the country and determine the need for missionaries in the region. Early in July 1854, Goode reached the Mission in Kansas. He was intrigued by the Wyandots because of their apparent acculturation, but left them on July 7, in company with Reverend Chivington to explore the area further. On July 9, Goode preached the first sermon to white settlers in the region at a log cabin at Hickory Point on the Santa Fe Road with Chivington and Reverend Still in attendance. He would return to the Wyandot lands later for a brief visit.²³

Not long after Goode’s departure, Chivington organized the Wyandot Lodge of Masons under the dispensation of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, on August 11, 1854, at the home of Matthew Walker, the brother of William Walker, Jr. With eight members in attendance, most of them Wyandots, Chivington was named Worshipful Master.²⁴ This action confirmed where he stood in the tribal disputes, and subsequent actions made it clear that one of the keys to Goode’s interest was the movement of the tribe toward full assimilation.

In September, Goode would report in a letter to the Western Christian Advocate, “Our Wyandotte Mission is prospering under the fearless and faithful labours of Rev. J. M. Chivington. I should think it would take several United States agents to drive him from the field. . . .” This acknowledgment is the only real notice of Chivington's work among the Wyandots.²⁵ By then, Chivington was secretary of the Missouri Conference and had been assigned to Hedding Chapel and City Mission at St. Louis, in the St. Louis Mission District.²⁶ Goode apparently thought Chivington was ready for a regular church appointment because he recommended that Chivington "be given work on one of the regular fields under his [Goode's] care." Accordingly, Chivington was named the presiding elder of the Platte Mission District of the Missouri Conference.²⁷

Missouri was deeply divided over the slavery question, and northern Methodists, by their zeal against slavery and for the free soil verdict advanced by the Kansas-Nebraska Act, were openly blamed as provocateurs because of their open partisanship. As a result, pro-slavers increasingly singled out Methodists as targets. The Church in Missouri and Kansas was seen as a weapon of the anti-slavery movement. In addition to the "Border Ruffians," who routinely crossed into Kansas, voted in elections, but did not settle there, Missouri pro-slavers organized secret societies called "Blue Lodges" or "Self-Defensives." As "Bleeding Kansas" earned its name, the Methodist Episcopal Church in Missouri became a target. Beatings, shootings, tar-and-feathering, and the destruction of the property of ministers became commonplace. Reverend L. B. Dennis had property, including horses, stolen and destroyed by Southern partisans. The Central Christian Advocate blamed the Methodist Episcopal Church South and other Southern churches for creating the climate that precipitated the violence.²⁸

Platte County, Missouri, Chivington's new home, was a hotbed of controversy over the slavery question, and he faced his first major test as a minister because of it. In the summer of 1854, B. F. Stringfellow organized the Platte County Self-Defensive Association. Like other similar groups, they wore "a wisp of hemp" on their coat lapels as an identifying mark and used the "sound of the goose" as their password.²⁹ Their first goal was to protect slavery in Missouri, and they regarded any anti-slavery sentiment as abolitionism. On April 15, 1855, a mob gathered in Parkville to threaten Methodist ministers promoting abolition. The Parkville Industrial Luminary, whose editor, G. S. Park, had spoken out against the Association, was burned and the press dumped into the river. Park, who was out of town at the time, was given three weeks to settle his affairs. Three Methodist ministers were singled out by name. Two of them, Christian Morris, pastor at Hillboro, and a Reverend Allen, left the state. Who the third person was is not clear.³⁰ A report in the New York Times noted that "It was decided by the meeting that no Methodist preacher should preach in the County on pain of being tarred and feathered for the first offense and hanged for the second."

In July 1854, at the quarterly meeting of the Platte Mission District, a mob of eighty men appeared, "carrying tar and feathers and hemp along with them." The Times reported, "The excitement is great. These humble and pious ministers of religion will be driven out, and utter lawlessness prevail."³¹ Chivington's outspoken efforts "to organize the Methodist Church for the Republican Party" made him a target. Now, confronted by the "Self-Defensives," Chivington challenged the mob. One account says that he took off his coat and threatened to whip anyone who wanted to fight after he had finished his sermon, while a more popular view held that when he took the pulpit, he drew two pistols from his coat, laid them on the pulpit alongside his Bible, and announced that "by the grace of God and these two revolvers, I am going to preach here today."³² Jesse Haire said the effect was clear: "Thay [sic] allways [sic] afterwards let him alone."³³

Perhaps. Or perhaps the Church transferred him to the position of pastor of the Omaha Methodist Episcopal Church of the new Kansas-Nebraska Conference in 1856 because of threats against his life and concerns of friends, including a congressman, that he would be killed. In any case, it was hardly a major promotion.³⁴ When he arrived in Omaha, his church had six members. Nevertheless, he carried with him a fresh confidence. He was imposing both in physical form and in ministerial voice. He dominated other men by sheer personality and charisma. In his first Thanksgiving service to his new congregation, he told them "that he could not see what, in the least, any of those present had to be thankful for."³⁵

Moving into the mainstream of the Church, he took his tasks seriously and pushed for a stronger position within the Church as well as being outspoken for a free Nebraska and the Republican Party. He was named presiding elder of the Omaha district.³⁶ He worked to improve schools, reduce crime, and, on September 20, 1857, he was involved with the formation of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Nebraska, serving as Grand Chaplain.³⁷ He was named to the Board of Stewards of the Conference, but "by vote of conference, was excused from serving," possibly because of his duties as presiding elder.³⁸ He was plainly active in a number of ways, but, a contemporary recalled, "Mr. Chivington was not as steady in his demeanor as becomes a man called of God to the work of the ministry, giving his ministerial friends regret and even trouble in their efforts to sustain his reputation."³⁹

In 1858, he was transferred to the Nebraska City Conference as presiding elder. At the time Kearny City and Nebraska City were locked in a fight to control the county, and Nebraska City itself was scarcely settled. Family sources say that when he arrived he found the local church taken over by a saloon. Chivington reportedly smashed liquor barrels and reclaimed the church.⁴⁰ He continued his crusade, assisted by his brother Isaac Chivington, who was also a Methodist minister.⁴¹ At the first quarterly meeting at Table Rock in Pawnee County, John Chivington prayed “that the Lord would send the people here and make them so poor that they could not get away.”⁴²

In March 1858, the presiding elder attended a quarterly meeting at Bellevue City, and preached a sermon while there. Something of a theme was emerging. He said forthrightly, “Some one [sic] has informed me, that there has been a minister here, who did not preach hell fire and damnation, and I think he gained and [sic] unenviable reputation. Such a minister as that, who will stand up and preach a mutilated gospel, is a greater sinner than any one [sic] in this audience.”⁴³ He also reportedly denounced the minister to the conference ministers after the preacher in question, the Reverend Mr. Goss, left for the east, “but coward like, he [Chivington] did not dare to ‘face the music,’ and make the charges openly to Mr. G. but like a valiant man, when that gentleman is absent from Nebraska, and it is not possible for him to defend himself, Mr. Chivington marches up with the boldness of a lion, and plies the blow.”⁴⁴ The Bellevue Gazette defended Goss, saying that “instead of trying to impress his hearers with merely how they could escape hell, he labored to teach them that they should do right from an intrinsic [sic] love of right, and that a future reward would be a legitimate result.” The editor noted, “Such a gospel as Mr. Chivington proposes to preach, may suit the tastes and feelings of the hog and hominy eaters of Missouri, but we hardly think it will go down with the intelligent people in Nebraska.”⁴⁵

The attack on Chivington prompted a defense in a letter to the editor by “A FRIEND,” who argued that it was Chivington’s right as presiding elder to warn his congregations against “erroneous sentiments.” The editor responded that Chivington could have and should have spoken to Goss in private rather than publicly announcing that “he preaches infidelity.”⁴⁶ This prompted another editorial defending Chivington in the Omaha Nebraskian.⁴⁷ Chivington was off to an auspicious beginning in the Nebraska City district. By the time he left Nebraska for Colorado, he was regarded by many as “a public speaker and sound theologian.” The Nebraska Advertiser proclaimed, “We cannot but regard him as a man of extraordinary natural abilities, destined to make his mark in the religious world.”⁴⁸

In 1859, at the annual conference, he chaired the Committee on Slavery. Its report declared “that as God has made of one blood all nations of men, we recognize in every human being the offspring of the common Father and admit the universal brotherhood of man.”⁴⁹ He was by then a leader in the conference, even if still controversial. He had a growing family and a reputation as a preacher in the style of Peter Cartwright.⁵⁰

At the annual conference of 1860, held in Leavenworth, Kansas, John M. Chivington was appointed presiding elder of the new Rocky Mountain District of the Kansas-Nebraska Conference.⁵¹ He and his family left for Denver on April 23, 1860. The Nebraska City People’s Press bid them farewell with this observation: “Mr. C. is particularly fitted by his energetic and persevering character, and his experience among border men, for the post which has been assigned to him by the Conference. He carries with him the best wishes of a large portion of the people of this Territory . . . who have learned to respect and esteem him for his manly character in society, and his zeal and activity in his spiritual calling.”⁵²

The discovery of gold in the Rocky Mountains in 1858 sent a flood of 100,000 settlers into unceded Indian lands in little more than a year, every one of them hoping to strike it rich. Armed with fresh ideas of squatter sovereignty so recently affirmed in Kansas and Nebraska, they set about quickly trying to establish government in the mountains. Legally a part of Kansas, the mining camps on the Front Range all violated existing law. Some of the settlers even attempted to establish “The Territory of Jefferson.” Not until February 4, 1861 was Colorado Territory formally established, but in the interim, the mining camps managed to avoid some of the worst displays of boom town life in their demand for law and order. They even managed to coexist in relative quiet with the Arapahos who lived in the area of Denver and other camps. Their laws paid little attention to the Indians, however.⁵³

The first Methodist service in the camps was apparently conducted by George W. Fisher, a lay pastor, on November 21, 1858, in a log cabin owned by two gamblers. Fisher conducted other services in Denver and Central City that winter.⁵⁴ At the Kansas-Nebraska Annual Conference in 1859, Bishop Levi Scott selected two ministers as missionaries to the camps. The first was William H. Goode, who had been the point man for the development of churches in Kansas and Nebraska. He was joined in the mission by the Reverend Jacob Adriance, a young minister who had known Chivington in Nebraska.⁵⁵ Adriance was truly the “Father of Colorado Methodism.” They reached Denver on June 28, 1859, and conducted a series of meetings in Denver, Central City, Golden, Auraria, and Boulder. Adriance’s diaries attest to his commitment and provide a guide to his work during 1859, and Goode wrote regular letters about the progress of the ministry to papers in Kansas. Chivington departed for the camps from Nebraska City on April 23, 1860. Adriance was in Nebraska at the time and hoped to travel west with him, but he arrived too late, on May 8, the same day that Chivington reached Denver.⁵⁶

Chivington made a strong impression on the citizenry. He preached his first sermon, on the Sunday after he arrived, at the Masonic Hall in Denver.⁵⁷ Adriance reached Denver on June 16 and camped near the Chivingtons, spending most of the day visiting with his new presiding elder. The following day, he attended Chivington’s service in the morning and Joseph T. Canon’s in the evening.⁵⁸ Adriance was assigned to Boulder and Golden City, and Canon to Mountain City. Chivington secured the services of Reverend A. P. Allen as a “supply” at Denver. Together, they set about their work. At the first quarterly meeting at Mountain City, described by Chivington as “one of the most extraordinary ever held in this, or any other country,” he claimed that more than a thousand people took the Lord’s Supper.⁵⁹

Chivington’s style appealed not only to the miners, but to the rowdies and sports as well. Miners dropped their picks and shovels, and gamblers put down their cards and dice to hear him preach. Jesse Haire wrote, “Hundreds on the Mountain side stand listening to his eloquence, who have not listened to a sermon in their natural lives except when they were boys.”⁶⁰ Chivington and his colleagues visited the various camps, preaching with fervor everywhere they went and dealt with every kind of citizen. In November, he rented a building on the south side of McGaa Street, and the Rocky Mountain News announced that he was canvassing for subscriptions to build a brick church.⁶¹

He made a strong impression at the annual meeting of the Kansas Conference in March 1861, looming over everyone in sight, wearing a wolf-skin cloak decorated with wolf tails from his shoulders to the hem of his “Rocky Mountain mantle.” “His intellect is strong and well trained for his work,” a correspondent wrote. “He could readily take two ordinary men, one in each hand, and knock their heads together, were he assaulted or disposed to engage in such achievement.”⁶² The six-foot, four-and-one-half inch tall Chivington was “just the man for this country,” Haire observed.⁶³

On April 12, 1861, Confederate forces fired on Fort Sumter in South Carolina. En route back to Denver from annual conference, Chivington was injured in a stage-coach accident.⁶⁴ He reached Denver on April 27, the day after a Union rally, to find the city divided much as Missouri had been in his days there. On the following Sunday, Chivington preached. He recalled that in his sermon, he quoted Stephen Douglas, “There be but two parties—patriots and traitors,” which he claimed caused a “decided sensation in the audience.” He could later claim that 1861 was the “busiest year” of his life, and it may well have been.⁶⁵

In addition to preaching the gospel and the Union cause, he was also promoting freemasonry, organizing new lodges, and becoming the first Grand Master of Colorado.⁶⁶ Moreover, even before William Gilpin, the first governor of Colorado Territory, arrived in May, efforts were being made to organize troops, a movement that Chivington supported. Rebuffed by Secretary of War Simon Cameron, Governor Gilpin took it upon himself to organize a regiment on his own authority. He cited Colorado’s defenseless condition, the withdrawal of regular army troops on the overland routes, and the substantial number of Confederate sympathizers in the Territory as reasons. He went so far as to claim that sixty-four thousand Indians were gathering on the Arkansas River in league with the Georgia miners and other Confederate supporters. He was also worried by the declining economy and the exodus of settlers returning east.⁶⁷

During the summer and fall of 1861, recruitment for the First Colorado Volunteer Regiment proceeded. John Potts Slough, a lawyer and temperamental partisan who hailed from the same part of Ohio as Chivington, and Samuel F. Tappan, a Massachusetts abolitionist who had been active in Kansas politics, led the effort and won respectively the rank of colonel and lieutenant colonel for their efforts.⁶⁸ Chivington was also active in recruitment, which brought him to a critical juncture in his life. Gilpin offered him the position of regimental chaplain, but Chivington refused the position. “I feel compelled to strike a blow in person for the destruction of human slavery,” he told the governor, “and to help in some measure to make this a truly free country. Therefore, I must respectfully decline an appointment as a non-combatant officer, and at the same time urgently request a fighting commission instead.”⁶⁹

By his own account, Chivington spent much of 1861 preaching on Saturdays and Sundays and drilling troops as the regimental major during the rest of the week. He “soon became the regiment’s most influential officer,” according to Irving Howbert, whose father was a Methodist minister.⁷⁰ Susan Ashley described “a parson in military clothes who preached a rousing patriotic sermon” in her recollections.⁷¹ Chivington preached the funeral of a soldier, and he told the congregation that he was “an American citizen before I became a minister, and that if the Church had required me to renounce any of my rights of manhood or American citizenship before I could become her minister, I should have very respectfully declined.”⁷²

Bound in Union blue with brass buttons, Chivington was impossible to ignore. In August 1861, the Denver Colorado Republican and Rocky Mountain Herald, reported that Chivington was in the mountains recruiting, adding, “We are glad to record Elder Chivington as Major in the army—we expect he will make as good a soldier in the field as in the pulpit and hard to beat—Roll up, all ye soldiers of the cross, and join the army under Major Chivington to defend the Union.”⁷³ On February 19, 1862, the Rocky Mountain News reported, “Major Chivington has been treating himself to a most rich and elegant new uniform, hat, sword, etc, in the newest and nicest regulation style. He has also purchased a superb mounted saddle for his mammoth horse, ‘Bucephalus,’ which saddle is the most richly gotten up institution of its kind we have ever seen in this country.”

He was also a storm center. When the local sutler had a flag made for the First Colorado regiment, he gave it “to our big preacher for him to present it to the regiment when on parade [sic]. So he waved it in the air [air] and it was a large one.”⁷⁴ Already he was behaving as if he were the regimental commander. Colonel Slough favored guerilla tactics, while Chivington insisted on close order drill. This dispute divided the officers. Slough’s lack of control and Chivington’s insubordination naturally caused problems in the ranks. During the sustained inactivity of 1861, the divisions threatened the regiment. Two companies refused to be mustered as infantry and left camp supported by their officers. Most returned, but Slough incarcerated many of them and cashiered the officers. By December, 1861, idle troops were causing problems with local civilians. Chivington was the chief beneficiary of the situation.⁷⁵

In January 1862, word reached Denver that a Confederate army under General Henry H. Sibley was mobilizing in New Mexico with the prospect of invading Colorado.

When Colorado authorities did not send troops at once, members of the First and many citizens blamed the inactivity on Acting Governor Lewis Ledyard Weld and Colonel Slough. An officer (or officers) wrote an inflammatory letter to the Rocky Mountain News signed “Union” that accused Slough of preferring to “be a living coward to a dead hero” and urged that the soldiers “demand to be led into battle.” The author closed by suggesting that they “Let the Major [Chivington] lead you on and success is certain.” Slough was infuriated and threatened to arrest William N. Byers, the editor of the News, if he did not reveal the author’s name. Byers gave Slough the letter, and even though the identity of the person responsible for the letter could not be determined, Slough ordered Captain Jacob Downing, a brash young attorney close to Chivington, confined to his quarters.⁷⁶

By the time the First Colorado Regiment prepared to move out of Denver for New Mexico on February 22, 1862, in freezing weather, the regiment was more seriously divided than ever. Downing’s company refused to comply with marching orders until forced out by two other companies on Slough’s order. At that point, Downing, who was still under house arrest, was ordered to report to Slough. Slough confronted him directly, asking him if he had written the letter to the News. Downing denied it, and Slough ordered him to take command of his company. Within minutes the column moved out.⁷⁷ The troubles did not end there.

On February 28, Company I refused to move out when ordered because it had only two wagons, while other companies had three. The hotheaded Slough got into an argument with the company commander, Lieutenant Charles Kerber. When Kerber defied him, Slough called upon Captain Edward W. Wynkoop and Company A to disarm Company I. Kerber then ordered his company to load their weapons. At that point, Slough ordered Major Scott J. Anthony and Company E to assist Wynkoop and pointed his own revolver at Kerber. When a soldier in Kerber’s company threatened to kill Slough, violence seemed certain. Then, Slough abruptly wheeled about and ordered Chivington to move the troops out. Chivington smoothed the matter over by simply pointing out that the regiment was short a wagon and that the situation would be remedied as quickly as possible. Again, Chivington emerged the winner.⁷⁸

Later Slough and Chivington got into an argument over drilling the troops. When Chivington appealed directly to the troops, Slough screamed that Chivington could “take ’em and go to hell with ’em.”⁷⁹ From that moment, the regiment was virtually two separate units. It was a disorganized rabble that arrived at Fort Union, where more shenanigans followed. An officer was shot by a well-liked sergeant, who was later executed.⁸⁰ When Colonel Slough decided to defy his orders to remain at Fort Union and advance against the approaching Texans, the First was “scattered from Dan to Beersheba, burying plunder, drinking, fighting, and carousing with Mexican women at the Lome, a small Sodom five or six miles from Union. There were dozens of us too drunk to know friends from foe, consequently most provokingly troublesome.”⁸¹

Faced with a fight, however, the Coloradans showed surprising sand. On March 26, in defiance of his own orders not to engage the enemy, Major Chivington bravely attacked the Confederate advance guard at Apache Canyon. Chivington was praised for his performance that day, but others expressed the view that the regiment seemed to have “no head; no one to go ahead and give orders” and gave the glory to Captain Samuel Cook for the charge that won the day.⁸² When Chivington did not return on March 26, Slough wrote that half his regiment had “gone off to hell with a crazy preacher who thinks he is Napoleon Bonaparte.”⁸³

When he learned of Chivington’s success at Apache Canyon, however, Slough moved to take advantage of the edge the fight had given his command. He split the regiment into two units. Slough would face the rebel advance at Pigeon’s Ranch, while Chivington would move west in hopes of striking the Confederate rear. Slough had a hard fight and had to fall back. Chivington’s forces stumbled onto Sibley’s supply train in Johnson’s Canyon, a thousand feet below his troops. After extended discussions with his officers, Chivington ordered an attack down the precipice and took the supply train by surprise. The destruction of the Confederate supply train at Johnson’s Ranch forced the withdrawal of Sibley’s forces and ended the New Mexico invasion.⁸⁴

In the wake of victory, Slough resigned his commission as commander, ostensibly to protest an order from General Canby to fall back to Fort Union. Slough scarcely had time to express indignation, before a petition of officers secured “Old Chiv” a promotion over the head of Lieutenant Colonel Tappan.⁸⁵ Chivington saw his first action as regimental commander at Peralta and took command of the Military District of Southern New Mexico at Fort Craig, where his regiment continued to enjoy a bad reputation for its conduct and lack of discipline.⁸⁶ Chivington’s mind was elsewhere. On April 30, 1862, he wrote to the new governor, John Evans, urging him to use his influence to have the First Regiment returned to Colorado. If something were not done, he wrote, at least two companies of Colorado Volunteers would be attached to a New Mexico regiment and “have the deep mortification of belonging to and having to associate with a set of Blanked thieves, Greasers and Base Cowards.” He yearned for an enemy “worthy of our steel.”⁸⁷

Chivington had already made some changes. He had requested “location” from the Kansas Conference of the Methodist Church. Not everyone had been pleased with his dual role as presiding elder and military commander. When the annual conference opened in Wyandotte that spring, the Reverend W. A. Kenney, presented the request, and the Conference acted: “Bro. Chivington [was] granted a location at his own request. The certificate of location was placed in the hand of a com[mittee],—consisting of the P. E. of the R. M. Dist, and Preachers in charge of Denver & Central City—Who are required to examine his acts—including his Book Debt, and if satisfactory pass over to him his certificate of location.”⁸⁸

Reverend Kenney died before he could return to Denver. On May 2, 1862, the Reverend Hugh D. Fisher of Leavenworth wrote a letter to a local paper, praising Chivington for his “heroic conduct” in New Mexico. He also announced that his brother, William H. Fisher had accompanied Baxter C. Dennis, Colorado’s new presiding elder, to continue the work of the Church in Colorado. He finished his letter with this: “We believe the Cross of Christ should be elevated on the tops of the mountains; and just beneath it, only a little lower, should flaunt in the breezes of Heaven, the glorious Stars and Stripes.”⁸⁹ At the same time, the Atchison Union offered praise for Chivington:

We happen to know that same Chivington; he is one of the Peter Cartwright school of Methodist preachers. All our old friends in Northeast Missouri will remember Chivington, of Shelbyville in earlier days. It will be gratifying to them to know that the man who so fearlessly fought the devil out in them brush, is now fighting him on the Plains, in the mountain gorges of Colorado, and New Mexico. He was brave in peace while carrying the cross of Christ, and now the stars and stripes. “Honor to whom honor is due.”⁹⁰

Such stories had their effect on Chivington. He now saw his road to glory in the army. On June 25, he wrote to Reverend Hugh Fisher asking him to use his influence with Senators Lane and Pomeroy of Kansas to help him secure a brigadier’s star. “Having gone into this war,” he confided to his friend, “I want to make the most of it.” He added, “If I can get this appointment now, after the war

I can go to Congress or [the] U.S. Senate easy.”⁹¹ It was a telling letter. Virtually everyone in Colorado expected Chivington to be awarded the commission.

When the regiment was finally ordered to return to Colorado, Chivington hurried back to Denver ahead of the regiment and without escort, as Colorado’s hero. On August 7, 1862, Chivington departed for Washington, to plead his case for promotion, carrying with him letters of endorsement from Governor Evans and Hiram Pitt Bennet, Colorado’s delegate to Congress, as well as a resolution from the Colorado legislature.⁹² The Rocky Mountain News said that he hoped to have his regiment transferred to General John Pope’s division, and expressed the hope that he would return with a brigadier general’s commission.⁹³

According to Chivington’s recollections, he met with Secretary of War Edwin McMasters Stanton, who offered him an appointment to train troops in the District of Columbia. He said that he responded, “I would rather command the First Cavalry of Colorado than to command the best brigade in the Army of the Potomac.”⁹⁴ Perhaps, but he was still pushing the issue of a brigadier’s commission. On October 31, writing from Chicago, Governor Evans again urged the appointment, this time directly to Abraham Lincoln: “I have known the Colonel well for years, first as a leading Methodist preacher, and since as a thoroughly loyal, bold, brave and judicious commander.”⁹⁵

Chivington did secure permission to mount the First Colorado Regiment as cavalry, and he told Lieutenant Colonel Tappan that he expected to be promoted and given command of the Military District of Colorado.⁹⁶ Tappan thought his chances were good. On November 8, the Atchison Weekly Champion and Advocate reported that Chivington had departed Atchison the previous night “to take charge of the troops in Colorado, which, according to the division made by Gen Curtis, commander of the department, comprises the 11th district. The number of troops in Colorado is now nearly 3,000, and should there be a general Indian war, which is yet feared by men on the border, his position will be one of great importance and weighty responsibility.” The paper added that if any more brigadier generals were needed, Colonel Chivington should be one of the first appointed. He arrived by stage in Denver on November 19, 1862.⁹⁷

On December 24, 1862, John Evans again pushed for the appointment in a letter to Lincoln, arguing that Colorado “is entitled to this.”⁹⁸ In January 1863, President Lincoln presented a list of nominations for military promotions to the United States Senate. On the list of promotions to brigadier general was “J. M. Chivington.” Unfortunately, the nominations arrived “too late for confirmation by the Senate.”⁹⁹ The only brigadier approved from Colorado was John P. Slough, which infuriated Chivington and displeased many Coloradans.¹⁰⁰ Slough was by then the military governor at Alexandria, Virginia, and a favorite of Secretary of War Stanton. Chivington did not give up, however.

As late as December 1863, he was still pleading with Bishop Matthew Simpson to press his promotion. “If I could get this promotion it would very materially [sic] help our plans out here of which I have no doubt Gov Evans has informed you. We Work in harmony. Can you get it?”¹⁰¹ Even Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper in New York pled his case, writing that he was entitled to a star by virtue of “his rank and services, tried courage and ability.” The article closed with this portrait: “[A]s a fighting preacher, he will ornament and dignify the position. Tall, powerfully athletic, a giant in size, the very embodiment of physical energy and mental vigor. His flashing eye and voice of unusual depth and power, are striking characteristics of the man. These qualities, combined with his being a strict disciplinarian, make him unusually fitted for high command.”¹⁰²

But Chivington did not get his star. One important reason was a letter written by General Slough to Secretary of War Stanton in September 1863. Slough reminded Stanton that he had recommended Chivington for promotion months before, but wished “to place myself right by withdrawing my recommendation.” He then told Stanton that the former chief justice of Colorado had informed him that Chivington and others had conspired to have him assassinated en route to New Mexico. This, together with newspaper accounts from New Mexico claiming that Chivington had taken undue credit for the destruction of the Confederate supply train at Johnson’s ranch, and a series of quarrels between Chivington and several officers in the First Colorado Cavalry, doomed his hopes for a general’s shoulder straps.¹⁰³

Notes: Chapter V

1. Reginald S. Craig, The Fighting Parson: The Biography of Colonel John M. Chivington (Los Angeles: Westernlore Press, 1959), p. 21; “Death of Brother J. M. Chivington, First M. W. Grand Master of Masons in Colorado,” The Square and Compass (October 1894), p. 214; Gordon R. Merrick, “Chivington—Before Colorado,” Paper presented at Research Lodge of Colorado, October 31, 1960; John Speer, “Sketch of John Milton Chivington: Report of an Interview with Mrs. John M. Chivington,” Miscellaneous John M. Chivington Collection, Kansas State Historical Collection, Topeka, Kansas;

- Clarence A. Lyman, "The Truth About Colonel John M. Chivington," unpublished manuscript (Denver: Division of State Archives and Public Records, 1956); Roberts, "Sand Creek: Tragedy and Symbol," p. 116. Lyman was married to the granddaughter of John Chivington, and his manuscript is a mass of stories collected from family members and presented in a novelesque fashion. See Benjamin Draper, Interview with Clarence Augustus Lyman, July 30, 1957. Clarence A. Lyman Collection, Western History Collection, Denver Public Library, Denver, Colorado. Craig was a great-grandson of Chivington and an attorney. His biography is largely a brief defending Chivington. He relied heavily on Lyman. The best overview of Chivington's life is Lori Cox-Paul, "John M. Chivington, The 'Reverend Colonel' 'Marry-Your-Daughter' 'Sand Creek Massacre,'" Nebraska History, 88 (2007): 126-137, 142-147.
2. Josiah Morrow, The History of Warren County . . . (Chicago: W. H. Beers & Company, 1882), p. 681.
 3. Ibid. The marriage of Isaac Chivington and Jane Runyon is confirmed by License No. 451, Book 1, p. 57.
 4. David R. Edmunds, The Shawnee Prophet (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1983); Adam Jortner, The Gods of Prophets-town: The Battle of Prophetstown and the Holy War for the American Frontier (New York: Oxford University Press, 2011).
 5. Morrow, Warren County, p. 681; Merrick, "Chivington—Before Colorado." Runyon's service is better documented than Chivington's, but the consistency of the sources makes it probable that Chivington served as well.
 6. John Sugden, Tecumseh, a Life (New York: Macmillan and Company, 1999); Robert M. Owens, Mr. Jefferson's Hammer: William Henry Harrison and the Origins of American Indian Policy (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2007).
 7. No birth records exist for Warren County before 1867. See Roberta Palmer, Deputy Clerk, Probate Court of Warren County to Raymond G. Carey, September 9, 1960, Raymond G. Carey Collection, University of Denver, Denver, Colorado. Date of birth is based upon obituaries at the time of Chivington's death and other sources. See also, Raymond E. Dale, "Otoe County Pioneers: A Biographical Dictionary," Nebraska State Historical Society, pp. 490-495. For a more detailed view of John's brother Isaac, see George E. Utterback, "Portrait of a Master Mason . . . Isaac Chivington, Mason and Man of God," The Indiana Freemason, 38 (1960): 4-5, 27-29, 32.
 8. Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 127. At the time Isaac's estate was settled, it appears that an administrator or guardian was named. Docket of Estates, No. O, p. 308, includes an allowance for Jane Chivington's first year's support and a copy of her receipt. More importantly, p. 316 includes a record of the guardianship for the Lewis Chivington estate, including the names of the four Chivington children. Apparently, James Hill, an early settler from Virginia, a justice of the peace, and a friend of the Runyon family acted as guardian. A document transferring property from Isaac and Jane Chivington to Benjamin Whitacre is found in the Deed Record, Volume 12, p. 109, Probate Court of Warren County, Ohio, Lebanon, Ohio. See also Morrow, Warren County, p. 681.
 9. Raymond G. Carey, "The Tragic Trustee," University of Denver Magazine, 2 (1965): 9.
 10. Lyman, "Truth About Chivington," pp. 19-30, provides an apocryphal account of his purse fighting career. Just when he moved to Indiana is unclear. Chivington was married in Milton, Indiana. Jordan Dodd, Indiana Marriages to 1850 [data base on-line] (Provo, UT: Ancestry.com Operations, Inc., 1997).
 11. Morrow, Warren County, p. 623.
 12. Lyman, "Truth About Chivington," pp. 31-32.
 13. Morrow, Warren County, p. 425.
 14. The History of Champaign County, Ohio (Chicago: W. H. Bean & Company, 1881), p. 416.
 15. Ibid., p. 418.
 16. Most accounts have followed the lead of Nolie Mumey, "John Milton Chivington: The Misunderstood Man," Denver Westerners Monthly Roundup, XII (1956): 5-16, and Craig, Fighting Parson, p. 28, in launching his career as an elder at Zoar Church in the Goshen District. His guardian, James Hill, was one of the founders of Zoar Church, and it was the most vibrant Methodist church in the county. Kenneth E. Metcalf, "The Beginnings of Methodism in Colorado." Unpublished Ph.D. dissertation (Denver: Iliff School of Theology, 1958), p. 259, makes the connection to Marley. In April 1856, at his first Methodist Conference in Omaha, Nebraska, Chivington said that he was converted in 1842 and "had served eleven years in the ministry," which would place his length of service as a minister within half a year of the September 1844 date. See J. Sterling Morton and Albert Watkins, Illustrated History of Nebraska. Volume II (Lincoln, NB: Jacob North & Company, 1907): 196n.
 17. Morrow, Warren County, p. 679. Merrick, "Chivington—Before Colorado," p. 1.
 18. Minutes of the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the Years 1846-1851 (New York: Carlton & Porter, 1856): IV, 279, 281, 389, 392, 398, 508, 510, 650, 652.
 19. Annual Conference Minutes, V, 128, 130, 312.
 20. Bowes, Exiles and Pioneers, pp. 201-218; Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 344-345; Connelley, Provisional Government of Nebraska and Walker Journals, passim; Perl W. Morgan, History of Wyandotte County, Kansas and Its People. Two volumes (Chicago: Lewis Publishing Company, 1911); Martha Caldwell, Annals of Shawnee Methodist Mission and Indian Manual Labor School (Topeka: Kansas State Historical Society, 1939), pp. 75-84.
 21. Caldwell, Annals of Shawnee Mission, pp. 76-77; Solomon Nunes Carvalho, Incidents of Travel and Adventure in the Far West with Colonel Fremont's Last Expedition (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1858), pp. 29-33.
 22. Caldwell, Annals of Shawnee Mission, p. 77; Connelley, Provisional Government of Nebraska and Walker Journals, pp. 370-406. Walker had known Dofflemeyer earlier. He mentions attending services preached by several pastors, including Dofflemeyer, but no reference is made to Chivington.

23. Goode, Outposts of Zion, pp. 249-256, 307-310; Mrs. E. F. Hollibaugh, Biographical History of Cloud County (n. p. 1903), p. 22; Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 344-345.
24. John T. Dormois, Francis M. Coleman, and Alan W. Farley, Centennial Wyandotte Lodge No. 3, A. F. & A. M., Kansas City, Kansas (Kansas City, KS: Wyandotte Lodge No.3, 1954), pp. 8-15.
25. Goode to Western Christian Advocate, reprinted in the Missionary Advocate, October 7, 1854, quoted in Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 344-345. Goode, Outposts of Zion, pp. 249-256, recalled his visit, mentioning that Chivington was "in possession of the mission farm, then the property of our Church." He also recounts with Chivington and one or two others to the station on the Wakarusa. Dr. Abraham Still was the minister at the Wakarusa. Goode was very impressed with John H. Dennis, who replaced Chivington. Dennis was in bad health, but wrote regularly to the Northwestern Christian Advocate about conditions in Kansas. He died in August 1856. See Northwestern Christian Advocate, September 3, 1856.
26. Annual Conference Minutes, 1854, III, 478, 480.
27. Annual Conference Minutes, 1855, III, 661; James Haynes, History of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Omaha and Suburbs (Omaha, NE: Omaha Printing Company, 1895), p. 44.
28. Carwardine, "Methodists and Politics," p. 603.
29. Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 145n; Nichole Etcheson, Bleeding Kansas: Contested Liberty in the Civil War Era (Manhattan: University Press of Kansas, 2004), pp. 34-47.
30. William McClung Paxton, Annals of Platte County, Missouri From its Exploration Down to June 1, 1897 (Kansas City, MO: n. p., 1897), pp. 198-200; History of Clay and Platte County, Missouri (St. Louis, MO: National Historical Company, 1885), pp. 642-644; Mary J. Klem, "Missouri in the Kansas Troubles," Proceedings of the Mississippi Valley Historical Association, XI (1919): 393-412; Etcheson, Bleeding Kansas, pp. 34-47.
31. New York Times, April 23, July 19, 1855, quoted in Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 145n; Speer, "Sketch of Chivington," giving the account of J. H. Herzinger; entry for May, 1859, p. 12. Journals of Jesse Spurgeon Haire, 1859-1897, Five Volumes, Ohio Historical Society, excerpted by Jeff C. Campbell, 2010.
32. Speer, "Sketch of Chivington,"
33. Haire Journal, p. 12.
34. "Death of Bro. Chivington," Square and Compass, p. 214; Morton and Watkins, History of Nebraska, II, 196n.
35. A. T. Andreas, History of the State of Nebraska (Chicago: Western Historical Company, 1882), p. 726.
36. Annual Conference Minutes, VI (1856), 169, 174; VII (1857) 282; Minutes of the First Session of the Kansas & Nebraska Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church Held at Lawrence, Kansas Territory, October 23-25, A. D. 1856 (Omaha City: Nebraskan Book and Job Office, 1856), pp. 1-3; Minutes of the Kansas & Nebraska Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Held at Nebraska City, N. T., April 16th, 1857 (Topeka, KS: Ross Brothers—Printers, 1857), p. 10.
37. Morton and Watkins, History of Nebraska, II, 196n; Cox-Paul, "Chivington," pp. 129, 146n; Raymond E. Dale, "Otoe County Pioneers: A Biographical Dictionary," Nebraska State Historical Society (typescript), p. 492; Dormois, et al., Wyandotte Lodge No. 3, p.13.
38. 1857 Kansas-Nebraska Annual Conference, pp. 3-4.
39. David Marquette, A History of Nebraska Methodism: First Half-Century, 1854-1904 (Cincinnati: Western Methodist Book Concern Press, 1904), pp. 57-58.
40. Lyman, "Truth About Chivington," pp. 64-65.
41. Dale, "Otoe County Pioneers," pp. 490-492; Cox-Paul, "Chivington," 129-130; W. B. Wetherell, "History of the Reverends John M. Chivington and Isaac Chivington in Their Relationship to the Early Methodist Episcopal Church in Kansas and Nebraska, 1856-1870," unpublished manuscript at Nebraska Methodist Historical Society, Nebraska Wesleyan University, Lincoln, NE.
42. Ibid., 492; Morton and Watkins, History of Nebraska, II, 197.
43. Bellevue (City) Gazette, March 25, 1858.
44. Ibid.
45. Ibid.
46. Ibid., April 1, 1858.
47. Omaha Nebraskan, quoted in ibid., April 8, 1858, with response from the Gazette's editor.
48. Brownville Nebraska Advertiser, June 2, 1859.
49. Journals of the Kansas-Nebraska Conference, Fourth Session, April 14-18, 1859, insert after, p. 12, Methodist Historical Library, Baker University, Baldwin City, Kansas.
50. Chivington was compared to Peter Cartwright on more than one occasion. Cartwright was a no-nonsense revivalist of the old school with a simple message and a special affinity for the frontier settlers. Williams, Religion and Violence, 140-143. See also Peter Cartwright, The Autobiography of Peter Cartwright, the Backwoods Preacher. Edited by W. P. Strickland (New York: Carlton and Porter, 1857), reprinted by Abingdon Press, 1986.
51. Minutes of the Kansas and Nebraska Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Fifth Session, Held in Leavenworth City, K. T. March 1860 (Leavenworth: The Herald Book and Job Office, 1860), p. 10.
52. Nebraska City People's Press, April 24, 1860.
53. West, Contested Plains, pp. 97-183; Isaac Haight Beardsley, Echoes from Peak and Plain, or Tales of Life, War, Travel and Colorado Methodism (Cincinnati: Curtis and Jennings, 1898), pp. 217-223; Howard Roberts Lamar, The Far Southwest, 1846-1912: A

- Territorial History* (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1966), pp. 205-225.
54. John M. Chivington, "Footprints of Methodist Itinerants in Colorado," Rocky Mountain Christian Advocate, September 26, 1889; John M. Chivington "The Prospective (Retrospective)," 1884, Bancroft Library Collections, University of California, Berkeley, California; Goode, Outposts of Zion, pp. 391-404.
55. Goode, Outposts of Zion, pp. 399-451. This portion of Goode's book consists of a series of letters written on the 1859 visit to Colorado. Another important source on the beginnings of Methodism in Colorado is J. L. Dyer, The Snow-Shoe Itinerant: An Autobiography of the Rev. John L. Dyer (Cincinnati: Cranston & Stowe, 1890), pp. 117-147.
56. Jacob Adriance Diaries, 1860, Box 2/FF2 (See especially entries for May 8, June 16, 17, July 4, 15, September 1, 1860), Western History/Genealogy Department, Denver Public Library, Denver, Colorado.
57. Chivington, "Footprints," September 26, 1889; Chivington, "Prospective;" Metcalf, "Beginnings of Methodism," pp. 65-80.
58. Adriance, Diaries, June 16, 17, 1860.
59. Chivington, "Footprints," September 26, 1889; Denver Weekly Rocky Mountain News, June 27, 1860.
60. Haire Journal, November 10, 1860.
61. Weekly Rocky Mountain News (WRMN), November 6, 1860.
62. Central Christian Advocate, April 10, 1861, quoted in Duane A. Smith, "Colorado's Joshua: John Chivington's Forgotten Years, 1860-1861," Methodist History 29 (1991): 164-165.
63. Haire Journal, November 10, 1860.
64. Weekly Rocky Mountain News, May 1, 1861.
65. Chivington, "Footprints," October 24, 1889.
66. Square and Compass, October 1894, p. 215; Dormois et al., Wyandotte Lodge No. 3, pp. 8-15.
67. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 109-112.
68. Ibid., pp. 112-115.
69. John M. Chivington, "The Pet Lambs," Denver Republican, April 30, 1890. There are several other versions of this statement, but the essence is the same.
70. Irving Howbert, Memories of a Lifetime in the Pike's Peak Region (New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1925), p. 136.
71. Susan M. Ashley, "Reminiscences of Colorado in the Early 'Sixties,'" Colorado Magazine, XIII (1936): 225.
72. Denver Colorado Republican and Rocky Mountain Herald, August 18, 1861.
73. Chivington, "Footprints," October 24, 1889.
74. Haire Journal, March 1862.
75. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 120-121; Flint Whitlock, Distant Bugles, Distant Drums: The Union Response to the Confederate Invasion of New Mexico (Niwot: University Press of Colorado, 2006), pp. 62-70; Don E. Alberts, The Battle of Glorieta: Union Victory in the West (College Station: Texas A & M. University Press, 1998), pp. 22-35; Ovando J. Hollister, Boldly They Rode: A History of the First Colorado Regiment of Volunteers (Lakewood, CO: The Golden Press, 1949), pp. 29-44. Hollister's book was originally published in 1863. After the New Mexico Campaign, Hollister and Frank Hall edited the Black Hawk Daily Mining Journal through 1865. It remains one of the critical sources on the First Colorado's expedition to New Mexico.
76. Whitlock, Distant Bugles, pp. 95-96. See also WRMN, February 7, 8, 1862.
77. Whitlock, Distant Bugles, p. 143; Alberts, Glorieta, pp. 29-30; William Clarke Whitford, Colorado Volunteers in the Civil War: The New Mexico Campaign in 1862 (Denver: State Historical Society of Colorado, 1906), pp. 75-76.
78. Chivington, "Pet Lambs," April 30, 1890; Chivington, "Prospective." In the latter, Chivington places the date of this incident on February 27, 1862. It is also a shorter and less dramatic recounting, with Lt. Col. Samuel F. Tappan ordered to move the troops forward, whereas in the former, he was the officer Slough ordered to move the troops out. Chivington's accounts should be used with caution because of some discrepancies and exaggerations that appear in his recollections when compared to other accounts.
79. Nolie Mumey, "John Milton Chivington: The Misunderstood Man," Denver Westerners Monthly Roundup, XII (1956): 131.
80. Chivington, "Pet Lambs." Durias A. Philbrook was shot by firing squad, April 8, 1862, according to Regimental Order Book, First Colorado Volunteers, General Order 26, April 4, 1862, p. 27, Adjutant General's Office, National Archives and Record Administration, Record Group 94. Haire Journal, March 1862, provides a detailed account of the Philbrook matter. It is also covered in Hollister, Boldly They Rode, pp. 45-46. See also Weekly Rocky Mountain News, March 27, 1862. Philbrook was placed under arrest and tried later. Chivington presided over the court martial.
81. Hollister, Boldly They Rode, pp. 55-56.
82. For detailed accounts of the fight at Apache Canyon, see Whitlock, Distant Bugles, pp. 173-180, 184-185n; Alberts, Glorieta, pp. 44-68; Thomas S. Edrington and John Taylor, The Battle of Glorieta Pass: A Gettysburg in the West, March 26-28, 1862 (Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 1998), pp. 41-56; Whitford, Colorado Volunteers, pp. 85-97; Ray C. Colton, The Civil War in the Western Territories: Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, and Utah (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1959), pp. 50-56; Hollister, Boldly They Rode, pp. 62-67.
83. James C. Enochs, "A Clash of Ambition: The Tappan-Chivington Feud," Montana, The Magazine of Western History, 15 (1965): 59.

84. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 127-129; Edrington and Taylor, Battle of Glorieta, pp. 89-100; Alberts, Glorieta, pp. 128-138. Chivington's reputation as a soldier rested largely on the actions at Apache Canyon and Johnson's Ranch. They assured his reputation as the "hero of Glorieta," but both would become the subject of public controversy in the months that followed.
85. Arthur Wright, "Colonel John P. Slough and the New Mexico Campaign," Colorado Magazine, XXXIX (1962): 89-105, reviews the relationship between Slough and the New Mexico commanders in depth. Also helpful is Enochs, "Clash of Ambition," pp. 63-64.
86. Letters and manuscript materials of J. M. Chivington, J. P. Slough, S. F. Tappan, E. W. Wynkoop, 1861-1869, Microfilm, History Colorado, Denver. See also Jeff C. Campbell, The John Milton Chivington Record, June 2, 1813-October 4, 1894: Sand Creek Massacre, Background Booklet # 3 (Eads, CO: Kiowa County Pres, 2007), pp. 13-18, for other pertinent documents.
87. Chivington to John Evans, April 30, 1862, Regimental Letter Book, First Colorado Volunteers, pp. 35, 37.
88. Handwritten Minutes, Kansas Conference, 1862, Methodist Historical Library, Baker University, Baldwin Kansas.
89. Leavenworth Daily Conserative, May 2, 1862.
90. Atchison (KS) Union, quoted in Denver Weekly Rocky Mountain News, May 28, 1862.
91. Chivington to Fisher, June 25, 1862, John M. Chivington Collection, Western History/Genealogy Department, Denver Public Library, Denver, Colorado.
92. See copies in Commission Branch, Letters Received, C-737-CB, AGO, RG 94, NARA.
93. Denver Weekly Rocky Mountain News, August 6, 1862.
94. Chivington, "Pet Lambs." This has an apocryphal ring to it, as does much Chivington wrote in his recollections.
95. Evans to Lincoln, October 31, 1862, Commission Branch, Letters Received, C-1056-CB-1863, AGO, RG 94, NARA.
96. Chivington to Tappan, October 7, 23, 1862, Letters and Manuscripts written by Chivington, Tappan, et al.; Tappan to Jesse Henry Leavenworth, October 28, 1862, Samuel F. Tappan Compiled Military Service Records, AGO, RG 94, NARA.
97. WRMN, November 20, 1862.
98. Evans to Lincoln, December 24, 1862, Commission Branch, Letters Received, C-1056-CB-1863, AGO, RG 94, NARA.
99. Daily National Intelligencer (Washington, DC), January 26, 1863.
100. Gary L. Roberts, Death Comes for the Chief Justice: The Slough-Rynerson Quarrel and Political Violence in New Mexico (Boulder: University Press of Colorado, 1990), pp. 24-25.
101. Chivington to Simpson, December 30, 1863, File 2127-4:45, J. M. Chivington (1863), Matthew Simpson Papers, General Commission on Archives and History, United Methodist Church, Drew University, Madison, New Jersey.
102. Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper (New York, NY), December 19, 1863.
103. Slough to Stanton, September 13, 1863, Commission Branch, Letters Received, S-700-CB-1863, AGO, RG 94, NARA. See also Tappan to Slough, December 28, 1862; Tappan to Chivington, January 23, 1863; Slough to Tappan, February 6, 1863, Chivington, Tappan, et al.

Chapter VI

John Evans, M. D.: Entrepreneur and Philanthropist

John Evans, like John Chivington, was born in Ohio. In fact, both of them were born in Warren County, scarcely ten miles apart, although no evidence suggests that they ever knew each other there. Evans was born on March 9, 1814, in a log cabin near Waynesville, to David and Rachel Evans, a Quaker couple, as the first of eleven children.¹ His father, like most of his neighbors, was a farmer, but he was dissatisfied with the meager income he received for it, so he went to work for his father as a tool-maker in his augur shop. Later, he opened a general store in Waynesville, although he continued to make tools and farm on the side. David Evans prospered as his family grew.²

Young John was educated in Quaker schools and did well. He was a member of the Franklin Society (later the Waynesville Literary Club) as a follower of the traveling speaker, C. P. Bronson, who offered his own system of elocution that young Evans found liberating.³ Unlike the young John Chivington, he did not have to work. He said later that he was “lazy” as a boy.⁴ In August 1834, he entered the Hicksite academy in Richmond, Indiana. He responded well to his studies there, but after a single term, his father insisted that he return home to the farm. David Evans and his son battled for months over John’s determination to continue his education. His father was especially opposed to John’s interest in medicine, but he finally agreed to allow him to attend the Gwynedd Boarding School in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.⁵

Gwynedd was disappointing to him. The curriculum was far from challenging, and while he enjoyed learning, John needed something more. He still wanted to be a doctor, which led to more arguments with his father, who finally agreed that he could study medicine but at his own expense. The experience of visiting cities like Baltimore and Philadelphia, along with the disappointment at Gwynedd also led him to doubts about his faith. “I am almost no Quaker,” he wrote to his cousin and friend, Benjamin Evans.⁶ On January 1, 1836, John enrolled in Clermont Academy on the outskirts of Philadelphia, where he entered into the life of a student, both as a dedicated scholar and as a young man exploring the worldly wonders that Philadelphia had to offer. He also had growing interests in both investment and politics, and his choice of the Whigs as a party in the latter reflected his views of the former.⁷

He entered Cincinnati College’s medical school in the fall of 1836. In 1837, Evans began courting Hannah Canby, the daughter of a Warren County physician named Joseph Canby.⁸ They were soon engaged. He graduated on March 3, 1838.⁹ Times were hard for a while, as he sought a place to practice and satisfy his fiancée’s desire to remain close to her family. Eventually, he was married to Hannah Canby, in December 1838, and began a practice in Attica, Indiana, in July 1839.¹⁰ Evans continued to struggle financially, and his disenchantment with his Quaker faith continued to deepen.

It was during this time that he first heard Bishop Matthew Simpson preach. Simpson was the president of Asbury University in Indiana at the time. “Bishop Simpson was an eloquent preacher then,” Evans recalled. “He is the first man that ever made my head swim in talking. He carried his eloquence up to a climax and I had to look around to see where I was.”¹¹ Evans attended another Simpson meeting the next night. Soon afterward, he was invited to attend the Love Feast of the quarterly meeting. “[I]t made such an impression on my mind that I joined the church and have been a Methodist ever since.” It was the beginning of a lifelong friendship between Evans and Simpson.¹² They also had a common interest in education. Simpson was an early advocate of the establishment of colleges to educate Methodists in order to preserve Methodism itself. This was a step away from the previous generation’s reliance upon God’s grace rather than “book learning.”¹³

Indeed, Evans and Simpson epitomized the changes that were overtaking the Methodist Church at the time. In the days of Francis Asbury, Methodists had been essentially apolitical. They saw themselves as “citizens of Zion” and harbored an antipathy toward Calvinist ideas that merged state and church after the manner of the Puritans. Many Methodists saw politics as the author of social and religious discord.¹⁴ By the 1820s, Methodist ideology (as opposed to theology) was changing. At its center was the conjunction of the Second Great Awakening and the Second Party system. The emergence of Jacksonian Democracy, with its emphasis on the rise of the common man, universal white male suffrage, equality of opportunity, and individual enterprise, fit well with the frontier populism and revivalism of the Second Great Awakening.¹⁵ Both also fed the ideas of Americans as a chosen people, a covenant between God and the United States in a new promised land, and a belief that religion was essential to national prosperity. What emerged was a growing view among Methodists and other evangelical denominations that one historian has called “Christian republicanism.”¹⁶

This new ideology seemed liberating and consistent with core beliefs. It also provided context for public issues like Westward expansion, Indian removal, slavery, and sectionalism. Initially, the new Democratic Party profited most, especially among the settlers who made up the congregations and mission fields of Methodist itinerants. In fact, revivalism contributed a model for political campaigns in both form and language. A consequence of these developments was that “moral suasion proved demonstrably insufficient” in dealing with the social challenges of the “new America.”¹⁷ This led both churchmen and laymen to a reexamination of the role of government in the management of social issues like Sabbath breaking, dueling, drinking, care for the sick and needy, and family abuse, along with questions like Roman Catholic immigration, land policy, and Indian removal. Methodist women also grew more vocal in the new political environment, pushing petitions to criminalize seduction, regulate asylums and prisons, change property laws, oppose Indian removal, restrict slavery, and prohibit alcohol sales. They were not yet pushing for suffrage, but they assumed a much larger role in promoting social justice.¹⁸

Methodism had thrived among the poor and was looked down upon by Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and other denominations as the refuge of backward laymen and ignorant and ill-prepared ministers. Indeed some Methodists saw in their common roots a unique virtue that they continue to extol. They even criticized some denominations—Quakers, for example—for becoming too “respectable.” But the perception itself gradually changed, largely as the result of two developments. The first derived from the Methodist emphasis on order and a leadership that valued education. The other was a growing number of successful Methodist laymen, many of whom could point to and take pride in their common origins, who were anxious to contribute to the Church. One indication of the change was the growing number of Methodists who joined the Whig Party. The Whigs appealed to upwardly mobile Methodist laymen with the party’s emphasis on self-control, self-discipline, economic improvement, and respectability.

John Evans was the perfect example of the economically successful Methodist layman with an interest in success and community. Evans, like Chivington, joined the Masons, receiving the degree of Master Mason at Attica Lodge No. 18, on July 16, 1844. When he moved to Indianapolis, he became the Indianapolis Lodge’s first Worshipful Master. He would also join the Knights Templar in May 1848.¹⁹ At that point, the North Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church still discouraged such affiliations, especially for ministers.²⁰ But Evans’s persona by then was becoming clear. He was a public man, well-liked by those who knew him, a joiner, a successful businessman who enjoyed “speculative investments.” He was the model of the “new” businessman emerging in the United States during the 1840s.²¹

His philanthropic impulses also became clear in Indiana. While at Attica, Evans began to write articles on the importance of public institutions for the insane. He and his partner, Isaac Fisher, drafted a memorial in late 1841, asking that a hospital for the insane be established by the state legislature.²² The issue floundered for several years, in part because of the dilatory tactics of Governor Samuel Bigger. In 1842, Bigger handed his opposition a very large cudgel, when the Presbyterian governor announced that there was “not a Methodist in America with sufficient learning to fill a professor’s chair.”²³ This united Methodists against him and, led by Bishop Simpson, they beat Bigger in the 1843 election, even though many of them had to leave the Whig Party (at least for that election) to do it. Bigger had threatened that if Methodists abandoned him, the Whigs would “blow their college and church to Hell.”²⁴

That did not happen. In December 1843, Evans presented a plan for financing construction of his hospital. On January 15, 1844, Evans’s proposal was voted into law. In 1846, John Evans was named the first superintendent of the Indiana Hospital for the Insane to supervise its construction and develop its policies. He was also teaching at Chicago’s Rush Medical College. He did not intend for his position as superintendent to be permanent, and in 1848, he resigned, although he continued to serve on its board. The long fight did, however, gain for him a wide reputation as a leader in the treatment of the insane.²⁵ More importantly, as his biographer, Harry Kelsey points out, it gave him a taste for the challenge of such contests, which seemed more important than their successful completion. Once successful, he needed a new cause.²⁶

Simpson also learned much from his experience in Indiana. First, he had learned that his causes could be advanced in the political arena. Thereafter, he built political connections, courted influential politicians, and garnered support for his causes. He was a power to be reckoned with in Indiana. Second, he realized that there were influential laymen who were willing to share their wealth with the church and with its ministers, men such as him. They offered their hospitality, endowments, lecture fees, and financial advice. He saw this as a logical progression. God was blessing men for their diligence, and they, in turn, were sharing their success with the Church.²⁷

Simpson made full use of this series of blessings. He grew increasingly anti-slavery in his views and was soon embroiled in the conflict within the Methodist Episcopal Church on the subject, especially after the 1844 General Conference, which saw the Church split over the question. He rose quickly in influence, and in 1848 was chosen as editor of the Western Christian Advocate at Cincinnati. This gave him a forum for his views, and, although he avoided most of the controversy that characterized other Advocates, he was able to extend his vision. But when the Fugitive Slave Law was passed in 1850, his strong stand against it drew a vitriolic reaction over his meddling in political matters. Within the church, he was praised for “the nerve to dare to do right.”²⁸

In 1852, he was elected bishop at General Conference and moved to Pittsburgh. The appointment enlarged his influence still more. He traveled widely and was criticized for his “liberal” views on church structures and the introduction of pews in them. In 1855, he persuaded wealthy laymen in Pittsburgh to build Christ Church, which was the first edifice of its kind and size for any Methodist congregation in the United States. Not only was it an imposing structure, but also it led to the introduction of pews and changes in worship form and style. In return, wealthy laymen gained more influence within the congregation. In 1856, Simpson clearly believed that the Church had to change and that it had to move toward an educated ministry. He was opposed by men like Peter Cartwright, who complained about “these velvet-mouthed and downy D. D.’s” and believed that the new trends insulted the itinerant circuit riders who had built Methodism in the first place.²⁹

Evans was also looking for new opportunities. His work in Chicago was still linked to the field of medicine. He wrote articles for medical journals, developed a reputation as a good professor, invented a medical device called an “obstetrical extractor,” using silk bands, which he claimed was superior to metal forceps, and edited a medical journal. He was one of the founders of the Chicago Medical Society. He was involved in the creation of female wards at the Illinois General Hospital. After a major cholera outbreak in 1849, he argued in a medical paper that contagion caused the spread of epidemics.³⁰ It was an impressive resumé. Then, he suffered a personal tragedy. His wife, Hannah, died on October 9, 1850. She was buried in Attica, Indiana, alongside three of her children.³¹ Evans was devastated. For months, he seemed inconsolable, but by 1852, he had recovered sufficiently to renew his medical and business endeavors.

Evans was an early investor in Chicago real estate, and he soon gave up the medical profession to pursue his business interests. He invested in a bank, served on Chicago’s city council, and realized Chicago’s potential as a trading center.³² Increasingly, though, he was drawn to railroads. In 1852, he was one of the key organizers of the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad, which would eventually become a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad system. As a member of the Chicago city council, he was able to allow the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad to enter the city and to secure right-of-way to the Indiana line. He sold stock for mortgages along the right of way, secured bonds with the mortgages, and sold them on the New York market.³³ He was learning the system fast. On August 18, 1853, he also married again, this time to Margaret Gray, the daughter of a prominent Maine lawyer, shipowner, and shipbuilder, who was also an ardent Methodist.³⁴

Another part of Evans’s ongoing education was his connection to the Methodist Episcopal Church. His friend, Bishop Simpson, saw education as a critical part of ethical development.³⁵ As early as 1850, Evans and Orrington Lunt, with the encouragement of Bishop Simpson, began to make plans for a university in the Chicago area. It took them five years to see results, but in 1855, Northwestern University became a reality, “under the patronage of the M. E. Church.” Evans chose a site outside the city, which became Evanston, Illinois. He was also a major investor in the town’s real estate. The university was soon joined by the Garrett Biblical Institute. Evans built a fine home adjacent to the campus and added another important accomplishment to his record.³⁶

Evans continued his labors on behalf of Northwestern University and his philanthropic enterprises, but he had grander plans. He saw the railroad as the great key to American development, and looked for opportunities. In 1857, he became involved in a scheme to build a new town in Nebraska at the juncture of the Platte River and the Missouri River. This was the point that the Burlington Railroad, a land grant company formed before the Civil War, intended to cross the Missouri and to extend westward. Evans’s group secured two sections of land for his future city. The new town, named Oreapolis, would be modeled after Evanston but on a grander scale. He wanted an edge over other towns that hoped to be doorways to the West. Oreapolis would be a cultural center, as well as the point of origin for the transcontinental railroad, already being much discussed by businessmen and congressmen.³⁷ He envisioned a university, a seminary, and a Bible institute as part of the plan, and, as had become his pattern, he enlisted the support of the Methodist Church. One of the people who represented the Kansas-Nebraska Conference in the planning was the Reverend John M. Chivington.³⁸

In 1858, when gold was discovered in the Rocky Mountains, Evans revealed his dream to his second wife, in a way that provided insight not only into his design but also into his reason for being interested in Colorado. He told her that he would build a road “that will be a great thoroughfare to the gold regions” and the Pacific Ocean beyond. Oreapolis would be a great city without doubt.³⁹ But time was not on his side. The Civil War seemed inevitable, and while Evans persisted in pushing the Oreapolis plan as a key to accessing the gold fields, the project simply did not have the backing it needed to succeed. He made a vain attempt to secure support from the Chicago Board of Trade for a “Chicago to Pikes Peak Express,” to connect Chicago with “the Mines” of the Rockies, hoping that the Express would be a precursor for a later railroad.⁴⁰ Later, he lent his efforts to a project to complete a railroad from Cedar Rapids to the Missouri River. This plan also failed, but on March 20, 1860, when the legislature in the State of Maine incorporated “The People’s Pacific Railroad Company,” John Evans of Illinois was named “commissioner.”⁴¹

The Oreapolis dream died, but Evans continued to consider ways to build a railway west from Plattsmouth or Omaha on a central route through the heart of the plains, as the most direct route for a transcontinental railroad. On a practical level, these experiences introduced Evans to a number of important Nebraskans, including a young man named Samuel Elbert, who would later become his close associate, his son-in-law, and lifelong friend. More importantly, Evans was drawn into the larger plans for a transcontinental railroad. One of his connections was Samuel Ryan Curtis, an Iowa congressman, who had worked earlier with the Lyons and Iowa Central Railroad, which had been taken over by the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. In 1859, Curtis was serving on the House Select Committee on the Pacific Railway. Curtis was a capable and practical man who would play a large role in John Evans’s life.⁴² In March 1860, Theodore Judah, representing a group of railroad enthusiasts from as far away as California, approached Curtis, who drafted a bill for a transcontinental railroad, leaving open the question of routes and surveys for later decision. The bill failed, but the issue was very much alive.⁴³ And Evans was in on the ground floor.

One recent scholar observed that “John Evans’s career exhibits an almost miraculous convergence of religious obligation and capital accumulation.”⁴⁴ A third pillar was added to Evans’s structure by the Republican Party. Like Simpson, Evans had shifted his political connection to the new party. His friendship with Bishop Simpson deepened in 1859, when Evans persuaded him to settle in Evanston. Simpson had been extremely ill in the winter of 1857-1858, and Evans sought to move him closer than the bishop’s Pittsburgh home, which he felt delayed his recovery. Later that year, Simpson accepted the position as president of Garrett Biblical Institute in Evanston.⁴⁵ Evans now had direct access to Simpson as “neighbor, counselor, and leader.”⁴⁶ The move was fortuitous for Evans, not merely for his wisdom and faith, but for his political and economic connections.

In the first place, Simpson’s theology was simple and appealing to a practical man like John Evans. He was solid on the key precepts of Methodist principles, among which he emphasized, first, active and positive social engagement, and, second, self-discipline as a proper form of religious practice.⁴⁷ Furthermore, Simpson had become the master lobbyist for the Methodist Church. He moved through the halls of Congress and the offices of business leaders and politicians with a smooth and forceful style that made him welcome.⁴⁸ He and Evans had embraced the Republican Party, with its commitments to free soil, free men, and business expansion. Evans was an early opponent of slavery and worked very hard during his years in Chicago to build the Illinois Republican Party. He supported Lincoln, but he does not appear to have had close connections with him prior to Lincoln’s election as president in 1860.⁴⁹ Simpson, however, was in the thick of it, with access to Lincoln’s ear. He was determined to make Lincoln aware of the power and the presence of Methodists as his supporters and to have their voice heard.⁵⁰

John Evans was not chosen as a delegate for the Republican National Convention in 1860, but his friend and fellow Methodist, Samuel Elbert, was a member of the Nebraska delegation. Elbert and several members of the Nebraska legislature initiated an effort to secure the governorship of Nebraska for Evans. Bishop Simpson then intervened through Senator Henry S. Lane of Indiana and Senator James Harlan of Iowa to urge Evans’s appointment. Simpson also wrote Lincoln directly. In March, the New York Herald even announced that Evans had been chosen for the post; but at the end of the month they were disappointed to learn that Dr. William Jayne had received the appointment. At a later date, Lincoln claimed that he had never received the request of the Nebraska legislature.⁵¹

Simpson complained bitterly to Lincoln. In October 1861, Lincoln offered Evans the governorship of Washington, but he turned it down. Washington was too far away from Evans's businesses and, more importantly, from his designs for a railroad through the central plains and the development of the mining region.⁵² In November, Evans used another route to inch himself a little closer to success when he boldly challenged a pro-slavery letter to the Chicago Journal. In what one historian has called "one of the most significant developments in the emancipation struggle," Evans declared that in all matters the federal government should favor freedom over slavery. This drew him into a public argument with Democrat Walter B. Scates, an eminent Illinois judge. In his newspaper exchange, Evans argued that in fighting the war, all means should be used, including the confiscation of slave property.⁵³

Fresh from this bold exchange, Evans went to Washington, D.C. seeking support for a federal armory in Chicago. While he was there, he learned that Governor William Gilpin would likely be removed as governor of Colorado. He approached Senator Harlan about the matter. Harlan, Lyman Trumbull, and others urged Lincoln to name Evans to replace Gilpin. Lincoln nominated Evans for the post. He was approved by the Senate, and Lincoln signed the commission on March 26, 1862. John Evans soon headed west.⁵⁴

Quite apart from the war enveloping the country, the United States was changing by 1862. It was the kind of change that divided as well as united. While committed to an ideology of unity, the country was rediscovering a class system that they had only recently set aside for Jacksonian Democracy. Most likely, it was inevitable. As men looked at cities like Chicago and St. Louis and Cincinnati in the West, and watched the growth of industry and commerce, it was hard to hold on to the idea of the West in the same way. A middle-class society was evolving with emphasis on sobriety, self-control, individual initiative, refinement, manners, and success.⁵⁵ The times also witnessed the spread of social clubs and values that foretold the Victorian era. Ohio and Illinois and Indiana were no longer the West of settlers and conflict. They were the home of farms and towns and restraint. And through the fields, railroads were changing the landscape and the way that men made a living. Commerce and industry drove the economy.

That did something to men, even to their ideas about their "Manifest Destiny." It became more than a theory. It took on the character of fact. It generated pride. It seemed obvious that there was an Anglo superiority proven by the cities that sprang up, the fields that spread over the land that had been forested, the schools that grew, and the economy that boomed. They sought to explain it with science, affirm it with ideology and myth, and justify it with religion. Americans were the chosen ones, the mountains and plains of America, the promised land. Even before the war ended, it was a confident America that looked to the future, although the war itself obscured the changes for a time.

It had all been told by Methodist exhorters who saw in the gospel that the "wilderness shall bloom like a rose," but by the eve of the Civil War the old divisions within the church seemed sharper somehow. Thomas Hinde had presented the vision of the West that many of the common folk still embraced, so different from the threat of barbarism:

Here the slanderous tongue does not reach him. The watchings against the devices of a subtle enemy are past. Here all have sufficient employ in attention to their own concerns. . . . Here in tranquility he reviews his life; reflects on the fleeting moments of infancy, childhood, and youth, gathers up the fragments of past experience, and solemnly lays the whole to heart. In humble devotion with his companion and children, he falls to his knees, morning and evening before the Almighty Being that created him, and adores his God. . . . He in fact begins to live anew.⁵⁶

Such views still resonated among common men who saw themselves as "conquering the world for Christ." In fact the new middle-class values of much of the Methodist Church seemed threatening to many. Men like Peter Cartwright called the church to reliance on the simplicity that resulted from personal experience with God. The pursuit of refinement and education was dangerous, he claimed, declaring, "I do firmly believe that if the ministers of the present day had more of the unction or baptismal fire of the Holy Ghost promoting their ministerial efforts, we should succeed much better than we do, and be more successful in winning souls to Christ than we do."⁵⁷ The new middle-class values were changing from the revivalist, camp meeting enthusiasm of the past to a more staid expression without emotional or bodily intensity.

In some respects, this debate was not new. Methodism had from the beginning struggled with its populist determination to reach the untutored masses in contrast to its organizational forms and elite leadership. It fought through battles over everything from education to pews, from meeting houses and arbors to stained glass churches, from the necessity of the physical experiences associated with camp meetings and revivals to conversion through the “still small voice” or other, more passive expressions of conversions, for some as easy as a simple act of repentance. It is perhaps dangerous to generalize, but in general, as far as church members were concerned, the differences between the Peter Cartwrights and the Matthew Simpsons of the denomination were matters of social class.

John Evans represented the rising middle class of Methodism, linked arm in arm with the promise of worldly success through economic opportunities in business. As the recent Report of the John Evans Study Committee at Northwestern University has pointed out, Evans’s “unfailing dedication to the Methodist Church over the decades consisted mainly of dutiful activity rather than profound reflection. His conversion did not so much change his behavior as convince him that working hard and fostering beneficial social institutions affirmed a person’s spiritual development and gave worldly evidence of grace.”⁵⁸ Practically, that meant that ends were more important than means, works more important than ethics.

The good that men do will live after them was a concept that Evans embraced, but the evidence of “good” lay in the things built—churches, colleges, universities, and hospitals. Railroads were a part of that list, too, because railroads would hasten the growth of civilization and the transformation of the wilderness into a garden. For him, as for many white Americans, this affirmed the connection between Christianity and civilization. They were inseparable. One could not exist without the other. Building railroads was a way to spread both and to bring a peace upon the land that would justify whatever it took to make it happen. The transformation already achieved by the westward movement carried with it a sense of entitlement to the lands still “unsettled.”

Indeed, “By 1860 Methodists had adopted a ‘Calvinist’ understanding of political responsibilities, viewing the state as a moral being and believing Christians as active citizens had to take responsibility for ensuring the highest standards of virtue flourished in civic life.”⁵⁹ This was a far cry from Francis Asbury’s insistence that “Our Kingdom is not of this world.” Moreover, “Of all Methodists, it was the triumphalist Republicans—nourished by a post-millennialist creed that celebrated conscience, obedience to a higher law, and a strong sense of social responsibility—who had traveled furthest from the outlook of their church’s first, apolitical generation to identifying the arrival of the kingdom of God with the success of a particular political party.”⁶⁰

The “higher” claims of civilization and Christianity therefore justified extreme measures to enable them to overcome all resistance. Methodism, especially after the Civil War began, increasingly linked Christianity and patriotism—the cross and the flag, in that order. Bishop Simpson began in 1860 to deliver a series of sermons in which he called upon the faithful to embrace the cause of Union at arms.⁶¹ On April 21, 1861, the Christian Advocate and Journal declared, “Hath not he who placed Moses in Mount Sinai to utter law over the wilderness, placed us on this continent to shout the Gospel over two oceans? Will he suffer the mission to be confounded? Hath not he who bound us in one language, laws, and religion, also riveted our states together by the mountains and cemented them by the streams?”⁶²

Here were all of the components of the ancient Right of Conquest—a chosen people in the promised land, fighting a just war. Once Simpson proclaimed, “I would say it with all reverence, God cannot do without America.”⁶³ Ironically, in addition to linking patriotism and faith, Simpson achieved a new respectability for Methodists, under the aegis and principles of the rising middle class with all of the attendant values it proclaimed. In 1854, Bishop Simpson had written for the Annual Report of the Methodist Episcopal Church Missionary Society, “Providence has clearly designed this country as a land of Protestants; and God has prepared us to receive the nations of the world by the vigour and purity of our civil and religious institutions and by the successive and vast extensions of our territory” [italics added].⁶⁴ This was a view that John Evans could embrace with enthusiasm and the reason why “John Evans’s career exhibits an almost miraculous convergence of religious obligation and capital accumulation.”⁶⁵

When John Evans stood on the balcony of the Tremont House in Denver, Colorado Territory, on May 16, 1862, and spoke to the crowd that had come to welcome him as their new governor, he blamed all of their economic woes on the lack of a railroad and spoke to them about Colorado’s opportunities and future prospects. He spoke of the territory’s prospects as a mining center and the future for farming in the Platte River valley. He had reason to be optimistic. He knew that the Homestead Act would be passed in a matter of days (passed on May 20, 1862) and the Pacific Railway Act would soon become law (July 1, 1862). His speech also revealed something else.⁶⁶

John Evans had not come to Colorado as the result of political ambition. His vision was much larger than governing a territory with the small population Colorado had in 1862. The “go-backs” were numerous with the prospects of more if economic conditions did not change. Evans was there to fulfill the dream he had nourished since before Oreapolis. He was there to secure a Colorado route for the transcontinental railroad, to make Denver into a great city and Colorado into a prosperous territory, decidedly Republican and worthy of statehood. These goals were worthy, and he gave little serious weight to such “impediments” as Native rights to the land. His goals were not merely economic; they were, by the reasoning of the time, divinely justified.

The Pacific Railway Act provided that the government would extinguish Indian land rights in order to create a right-of-way two hundred feet wide through new territories including Colorado. For each mile of track built, the government promised 6,400 acres of land (10 square miles) adjacent to the track. An estimated 20,000,000 acres of public land and $60,000,000 in loans were at stake along the various proposed routes. The primary author of the act was Samuel Ryan Curtis, who had resigned his seat in Congress to join the Union Army. In 1862, he was commanding troops in Kansas and Missouri.⁶⁷

What Evans found when he arrived in the territory was hardly encouraging, but he was determined to secure the transcontinental route for Colorado. He went right to work, determined to make Berthoud Pass the doorway to the Pacific. It was, he said, “designed by the Great Master Mechanic.”⁶⁸ The Surveyor General, F. M. Case, took a decidedly different view, arguing that the grade was far too steep and that a three-and-a-half-mile-long tunnel would have to be built.⁶⁹ But Evans did not give up. He had been named as one of the 158 commissioners of the Union Pacific Railroad (as had General Curtis), and he soon left, on April 18, 1862, to attend the meeting of the Board of Incorporators in Chicago, where he argued for the Colorado route through Berthoud Pass. He returned to Colorado without the endorsement he had hoped for but still determined. His reason for being in Colorado was abundantly clear, and for him and for most of his fellows, supported by conscience, social responsibility, and a higher law.⁷⁰

Notes: Chapter VI

1. Harry Kelsey, Frontier Capitalist: The Life of John Evans (Denver: State Historical Society of Colorado and Pruett Publishing Company, 1969), 2. The best brief account of the life of John Evans before he moved to Colorado appears in Northwestern Evans Report, pp. 11-18. It is brief, but insightful.

2. Ibid., pp. 1-4.

3. Ibid., pp. 6-7.

4. John Evans Dictations and Related Biographical Material, Bancroft MS, P-L 329, Fol. IV, 12, Bancroft Collection, Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, California.

5. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 9-14.

6. John Evans to Benjamin Evans, January 6, 1836, John Evans Collection, History Colorado, Denver, Colorado.

7. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 14-16.

8. Ibid., pp. 20-29.

9. Ibid., p. 23.

10. Ibid., pp. 28, 246n.

11. Evans Dictations, P-L 329.

12. Ibid. Matthew Simpson was one of the most influential bishops of the nineteenth century. An Ohioan like Evans, he did not start his life with the expectation of writing and speaking. He was a frail child, but he did develop a strong interest in reading. With the encouragement of his mother, he also became absorbed in religious ideas. In 1830, still in delicate health, he decided to study medicine, completing his studies and acquiring his license as a physician in 1833, another reason that Evans would be attracted to him. Shortly thereafter, he was licensed as an “exhorter” in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Initially, his poor health proved to be an impediment to licensing as a minister, but, without ever having preached, he was recommended by the quarterly conference to the Pittsburg Annual Conference. George R. Crooks, The Life of Bishop Matthew Simpson of the Methodist Episcopal Church (New York: Harper & Brothers, 1891), pp. 11-30. Because of his health, he was disinclined to follow an itinerant ministry, but over time, his obvious strengths as a preacher and as a theologian served him well within the Church. Preaching, he believed, was for the common people, persuasion its goal, and extemporaneous discourse the most effective method. Ministers, he believed, were a “connecting link” between the rich and the poor. In 1839, he became president of Indiana Asbury University (now DePauw University). In 1848, he was named editor of the Western Christian Advocate, and in 1852, he was elected bishop. By then he was a tremendously influential leader in the Church, especially in the Midwest.

13. Robert Donald Clark, The Life of Matthew Simpson (New York: Macmillan Company, 1956), p. 72.

14. Carwardine, “Methodists and Politics,” pp. 579-580; Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 185-217.

15. An important work for understanding the impact of evangelical Christianity in the first half of the nineteenth century, see Nathan O. Hatch, The Democratization of American Christianity (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1989), pp. 17-189; and Martin E. Marty, Protestantism in the United States: Righteous Empire. Second Edition (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1986), pp. 13-29, 39-96, 126-134.

16. Carwardine, "Methodists and Politics," pp. 580-581.

17. Ibid., pp. 583-584.

18. Ibid., pp. 585-586; Marty, Righteous Empire, pp. 86-95, 97-106; Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 185-200; Williams, Religion and Violence, pp. 131-160.

19. Kelsey, John Evans, p. 33.

20. Ibid. This concern about Methodists being affiliated with fraternal organizations is especially interesting in light of John Chivington's Masonic connections. Although, there were anti-Masonic elements within the Methodist Church, the primary reason for its concern seems to have been less about animus against Masons than about worries that such connections would divide the attentions of members, and especially ministers, in ways that would negatively affect their service to the Church.

21. See Alfred Chandler, The Visible Hand: The Managerial Revolution in American Business (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1977), and Charles Perrow, Organizing America: Wealth, Power, and the Origins of Corporate Capitalism (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2002).

22. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 35-36.

23. Robert D. Clark, The Life of Matthew Simpson (New York: The Macmillan Company, 1956), pp. 106-109.

24. Ibid., p. 109.

25. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 40-47, 49-55.

26. Ibid., p. 47.

27. Clark, Life of Simpson, pp. 110-118.

28. Ibid., pp. 146-160.

29. Ibid., pp. 189-193; Marti, "Rich Methodists," pp. 266-267.

30. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 56-60.

31. Ibid., p. 68.

32. Northwestern Evans Report, pp. 13-14.

33. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 72-74.

34. Helen Cannon, "First Ladies of Colorado—Margaret Gray Evans (Governor John Evans, 1862-1865)," Colorado Magazine, XXXIX (1962): 18-28.

35. A former student recalled that Simpson's motto was "Read and know. Think and be wise." Crooks, Simpson, p. 166. Crooks explored Simpson's view of education at length. Recalling Simpson's inaugural at Asbury of Indiana, Crooks noted, at p. 171, that he argued that "he proceeds to argue that individual character depends on the kind of education received, and that national character depends upon the same cause, and so gathers up a cumulative argument which must have made a great impression upon the assembly."

36. Northwestern Evans Report, pp. 14-16; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 81-94; Darius Salter, "The Sand Creek Massacre: Matthew Simpson and the Broken Arrow of Patronage," Methodist History, 52 (2014): 209-211.

37. John Evans, Oreapolis, Nebraska Territory: Its Institutions, Advantages in Site, etc., etc. Plan of the Co., for Building Up the Town, Inducements Offered to Emigrants to Settle There. Bonus for Manufacturers, Tradesmen, etc. (Chicago: Press and Tribune, 1859); Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 104-108; Evans Dictations, P-L-329; John Evans to Margaret Evans, April 20, June 12, 1859, Evans Collection.

38. Minutes, Kansas-Nebraska Annual Conference, 1859, pp. 10-11, 14-17. As a member of the Education Committee, Chivington had apparently met with Evans prior to the annual conference. He, Professor George Loomis, and John Evans addressed the conference on the Oreapolis project. The conference passed the following resolution: "Resolved, That we will co-operate with the friends of Education in the establishment of said Seminary at Oreapolis, and that we will exercise control of said Institution provided for in its Charter in the appointment of Trustees." In the Minutes for 1860, a report was given on the status of the Oreapolis project (pp. 13-14). By then Chivington had left for Colorado, and William E. Goode replaced him as "Agent of Oreapolis University." Minutes of Annual Conferences, VIII, 87. In the copy of this volume in the Methodist Archives at Drew University, a list of appointments for the Kansas-Nebraska Conference is taped in, including this information.

39. John Evans to Margaret Evans, June 12, 1859, Evans Collection.

40. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 108-109.

41. An Act to Incorporate the "People's Pacific Railroad Company" of the State of Maine, Thirty-Ninth Legislature, March 20, 1860, at http://cprr.org/Museum/Pacific_RR_Act_Maine_1860.html.

42. David Haward Bain, Empire Express: Building the First Transcontinental Railroad (New York: Penguin Books, 1999), p. 76. Curtis would become a critical player in John Evans's life story. He would resign his seat in Congress to resume a military career as a brigadier general, commanding the eleven thousand troops of the Army of the Southwest in operations in the Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Indian Territory quadrangle. See William L. Shea and Earl J. Hess, Pea Ridge: Civil War Campaign in the West (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1992), pp. 5-7. Curtis was a capable commander, but too proper to learn the art of self-promotion. He would later command the Department of Kansas, which included Colorado Territory. Chivington would be one of his district commanders.

43. Bain, Empire Express, pp. 90, 101.

44. Alexander Saxton, The Rise and Fall of the White Republic: Class Politics and Mass Culture in Nineteenth Century America (New York: Verso, 1990), p. 274.

45. Salter, "Sand Creek, Simpson, and Patronage," pp. 210-211; Kelsey, Evans, p. 106; Crooks, Simpson, p. 359.

46. Crooks, Simpson, p. 359.
47. Matthew Simpson, A Hundred Years of Methodism (New York: Nelson & Phillips, 1877) is a brief history and commentary on the Methodist Episcopal Church, its history, its doctrines, and its institutions. As such, it provides considerable insight into his conception of the Church and its mission. It does not have the fire or the eloquence of his sermons.
48. James Edmund Kirby, Jr., "The Ecclesiastical and Social Thought of Matthew Simpson." Unpublished Ph.D. dissertation (Madison, NJ: Drew University, 1963). Salter, "Sand Creek, Simpson, and Patronage," pp. 209-212, calls Simpson "the most influential patronage lobbyist among clergymen in all of America." See also Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 243-244. Even the most cursory review of the Matthew Simpson Papers at the Library of Congress in Washington, DC, confirms the claim.
49. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 109-110.
50. Kirby, "Thought of Simpson," p. 245.
51. Salter, "Sand Creek, Simpson, and Patronage," pp. 211-212; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 110-111.
52. Salter, "Sand Creek, Simpson, and Patronage," p. 211.
53. Victor B. Howard, Religion and the Radical Republican Movement, 1860-1870 (Lexington: University of Kentucky Press, 2014), p. 19. See the Evans-Scates letters in the Chicago Journal, November 8, 15, 29, 1861. See also McMechen, Governor Evans, pp. 81-83.
54. Ibid., p. 212.
55. Williams, Religion and Violence, pp. 144-155; Hyde, Empires, Nations, and Families, pp. 419-421; Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 331-345; Daniel Walker Howe, What God Hath Wrought: The Transformation of America, 1815-1848 (New York: Oxford University Press, 2007), pp. 525-612, 837-855; Richard D. Brown, Modernization: The Transformation of American Life, 1600-1865 (Prospect Heights, IL, Waveland Press, Inc., 1976), pp. 122-158.
56. Williams, Religion and Violence, p. 112.
57. Ibid., p. 142. An especially insightful treatment of Methodists and politics within a broad context is found in William E. Gienapp, The Origins of the Republican Party, 1852-1856 (New York: Oxford University Press, 1987).
58. Northwestern Evans Report, p. 13.
59. Richard Carwardine, "Methodists, Politics, and the Coming of the American Civil War," Church History, 69 (2000): 582.
60. Ibid., pp. 608-609.
61. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 242-245.
62. Several noteworthy books have been published on the impact of the Civil War on religion in America, including Harry S. Stout, Upon the Altar of the Nation: A Moral History of the Civil War (New York: Viking, 2006); Mark A. Noll, The Civil War as a Theological Crisis (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2006); George C. Rable, God's Almost Chosen Peoples: A Religious History of the American Civil War (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2010). All consider the Methodist role in the conflict.
63. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, p. 243.
64. Quoted in Hempton, Methodism, p. 151.
65. Saxton, Rise and Fall of the White Republic, p. 274.
66. Denver Daily Rocky Mountain News, May 17, 1862.
67. Bain, Empire Express, p. 116.
68. WRMN, June 27, 1862.
69. Ibid., July 25, 1862.
70. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 126; Samuel D. Mock, "Colorado and the Surveys for a Pacific Railroad," Colorado Magazine, XVII (1940): 54-63.

Chapter VII

Colorado's "Indian Problem"

In the 1840s, the mounted warriors of the Cheyennes and Arapahos had few memories of earthen lodges or the constraints and benefits they provided. All but the oldest of them were free from even the memory of such things. What they possessed was a vision of life that muted history and even the warnings of Maheo and Sweet Medicine. What they knew and what they claimed seemed to be what had always been. What was in their present was the only view that mattered. Tradition itself was reshaped yet thought ancient by all save the keepers of wisdom. It could hardly have been otherwise. The grass stretched south in great waves for hundreds of miles. The rivers and creeks were lush with timber. Ponds and seeps were abundant in the grasslands. Bison herds stretched in tens of thousands. Mule deer, elk, antelopes, and bears shared the heart of their world. To the south, the great need to make this life work—horses—beckoned to them. William Bent's Fort on the Arkansas River offered trade goods, and the Cheyennes and their Arapaho allies were masters of trade to the north. The few soldiers who traveled the overland routes posed no threat.

At that moment the warnings of Sweet Medicine from that long ago time at Bear Butte were all but forgotten. "Think before you decide," he had told them. "Everything will be changed forever." When the young Lewis Garrard visited the Cheyennes, he understood the lure of their way despite his ingrained prejudices:

I thought, with envy, of the free and happy life they were leading on the untamed plains, with fat buffalo for food, with fine horses to ride, living and dying in a state of blissful ignorance. To them, with no other joys than those of the untaught savage, such a life must be the acme of happiness; for what more invigorating, enlivening pleasure is there than traversing the grand prairies, admiring the beauties of unkempt, wild, and lovely nature, and chasing the fleet-footed buffalo—to send the death-abiding arrows, with the musical twang of the bowstring—then partaking of the choice parts, cooked by themselves, by their own fires; and afterward, lying down to enjoy such sweet sleep as is within the comprehension of those only who have traveled and hunted on the lordly parks of the Far West.¹

But by the time of the Colorado gold rush, all of that was disappearing. The buffalo and other wild game were growing scarcer, the horse herds were dwindling, the grass was disappearing, the trees along the rivers and creeks were mostly gone, the seeps and ponds were drying up, and trade was more difficult.² The settlers came to stay in the mountains for the first time, without invitation, and without regard for Cheyenne and Arapaho ways. They built their towns in the wintering grounds of the tribes.³ Left Hand and Little Raven, the Arapaho chiefs, tried to coexist with them at the camps near Denver. Horace Greeley, the editor of the New York Tribune, interviewed Left Hand there and came away impressed only by his "savagery," although even his interview revealed Left Hand to be the wiser man. Even after miners plundered one of the Arapaho villages, raped women and girls, and stole horses, Left Hand controlled his people and prevented trouble. But when William Bent met with the chiefs in the fall of 1859, he warned the Office of Indian Affairs in Washington, "A desperate war of starvation and extinction is . . . imminent and inevitable, unless prompt measures shall prevent [it]."⁴

In fact, Kiowas and Comanches attacked emigrants on the Arkansas route, and some Cheyennes and Arapahos joined them. The result was an initiative originated by William Bent, Left Hand, and Little Raven to negotiate an agreement between the Southern Arapahos and Cheyennes and the U.S. government to protect tribal interests. This led to the misguided and imperfect Treaty of Fort Wise in 1861, signed by a handful of chiefs, including Cheyenne chiefs Black Kettle, White Antelope, Lean Bear, Old Little Wolf, Tall Bear, and Lone Bear, and Arapaho chiefs Little Raven, Storm, Shave Head, and Big Mouth, by which they accepted a small reserve extending north from the Arkansas River to Sand Creek and west to a point just east of Booneville.

The rub was that only three Cheyenne manhao participated in the negotiations, and they insisted that the treaty's provisions would be binding on them alone because they had no authority to speak for the rest of the tribe. Similarly, the important voices of Left Hand and Friday were missing from the agreement. The language of the treaty made it clear that it applied only to "the Arapahos and Cheyennes of the Upper Arkansas." It also plainly stated that the treaty did not include any cession of lands north of the South Platte. That meant that Cheyenne and Arapaho land rights north of the South Platte—where most of the settlements were located—were still intact. As written, the treaty was bound to cause trouble.⁵

Almost certainly, John Evans had given the matter of Indian affairs little thought when he arrived in Denver in May 1862. Even though his job involved ex officio responsibilities as Superintendent of Indian Affairs for Colorado, policy was set in Washington and agents were responsible for carrying it out. His role would be supervisory and hardly a matter of great concern. He carried with him thoughtless images and assumptions about “Indians.” The ideas he held were about a vague “them.” He gave little thought to Cheyennes or Arapahos or Utes as people or as major factors in his mission as governor. He assumed, as a matter of course, that the “higher purposes” of settlement and development would control outcomes. That meant practically that he saw his role as managing the dispossession of the tribes in order to open lands for settlement.

Evans’s essential paternalism was evident in his first contacts with the Cheyennes and Arapahos. Two days after his arrival in Colorado, he witnessed a victory dance of a party of Arapahos, Cheyennes, and a few Sioux returning from an attack on the Utes with six scalps. What he saw confirmed his belief in their essential barbarism, and he lectured them like children on the senselessness of their ongoing conflict with the Utes. The Arapahos and Cheyennes interpreted his words as support for the Utes in a conflict that had nothing to do with whites. The day after, he received a delegation of Utes and parleyed with them. A fight was narrowly averted between the tribes, and the Utes told Evans that “the best thing that could be done with an Arapaho or a Cheyenne was to kill him.”⁶

Even then, Evans was more dismissive than concerned. He had a railroad to build, a metropolis to construct at Denver, economic growth to promote, a state to create, and political and personal ambitions to realize. John Evans’s attentions were simply directed at other matters he deemed more important during his first year in office as governor. For one thing, he was disappointed in both Colorado’s economy and its laws. He spent some of his time traveling to see the territory, and he had hoped to postpone the legislature’s meeting until February 23, 1863. He was not allowed to do this, but when the legislature convened in July 1862, Evans had handed them a busy agenda, consolidating counties, redrawing legislative districts, revising mining laws, revising the territory’s militia law, offering a new law that could secure a claim on every newly discovered lode for the use of schools, seeking passage of a corporation act, appointing a committee to draft a “full code of Statute Law,” and proposing measures relating to taxation, probate law, a territorial prison, with federal subsidy, and new treaties with the Utes, Apaches, Kiowas, and Comanches within the territory. At that point, he still assumed that matters with the Cheyennes and Arapahos had been settled. The legislature responded enthusiastically.⁷

During the session, Evans received word that his daughter, Margaret Gray Evans, only five years old, had died of scarlet fever in Evanston.⁸ He made plans to return to Chicago in August. He busied himself in the meantime exploring the route for the transcontinental railroad. On August 18, 1862, he departed to make his case for a Colorado route in Chicago and to prepare to move his family to Denver. In October, 1862, Evans went to Washington to ask for more troops in the wake of the Minnesota Uprising. He visited with Commissioner Dole and talked with him at length about the troubles between the Utes and the Cheyennes and Arapahos. In November, he left with his family for Denver. Initially, they moved into the Tremont House until he could build a home. In April 1863, the family moved into their new home at the corner of Fourteenth and Arapahoe Streets. In June, his wife gave birth to another child. During this time, he was already exploring investment opportunities, and, in fact, brought several individuals to Colorado, including Bishop Matthew Simpson, to discuss investments.⁹

Evans also continued his strong support of the Methodist Church. He found Colorado’s churches still receiving support from the national Missionary Society, and he immediately set to work improving the situation. He was instrumental in bringing the Reverend Oliver A. Willard to Denver to preach. Willard was another product of Evanston, Illinois, and the brother of Frances E. Willard, the founder of the Women’s Christian Temperance Union. Chivington described him as a young man “of very frail physique, but of giant intellect and most remarkable gifts.” He said, “Willard could preach equal to any young man I ever heard.”¹⁰ Mrs. John Evans shared this assessment. Willard and his young wife, whose father was a minister and professor at Garrett Biblical Institute, traveled with the Evans family to Denver in the fall of 1862.¹¹

On July 10, 1863, the Rocky Mountain Conference was formed. On July 21, Bishop Edward R. Ames, who presided over the organization of the conference, urged that a new brick church be constructed in Denver. John Evans contributed $1,000 to the project that day. On July 22, 1863, Willard’s church (still meeting in its temporary quarters) was incorporated as the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Denver. The papers were drawn up in the governor’s office, and Evans was one of the incorporators. Evans was already planning to build a university as well.

The first planning sessions were held in the fall of 1862. Evans donated the land for the university across the street from his home, and a contract for its construction was let in June 1863.

The one thing that was incompatible with his goals, as he understood them, was his responsibility to manage and protect the interests of the Indians. At first, he appeared to believe that reconciling the two would pose no large problem, but Indian affairs not only proved to be more complicated than he suspected, but also they directly threatened his economic and political plans. Rumors of Indian raids along the Platte created unease in the settlements, so much so, that in July 1862, the Denver Daily Rocky Mountain News proclaimed that “it is time the red skins learned to behave themselves, they are paving the way for extermination faster than nature requires, and need another General Harney to regulate them.”¹²

Evans does not appear to have shared the sense of danger that the settlers did at that point. Instead he made proposals for extinguishing the land claims of the Utes, Comanches, Kiowas, and Apaches, and prepared a plan for settling the Cheyennes and Arapahos on the Sand Creek reserve. He proposed (a) holding a few chiefs responsible for the actions of all, (b) allotting land to Indian families, (c) encouraging farming and stock raising, and (d) educating children. He explained to Commissioner William Palmer Dole in August 1862, that civilization could come only “by suspending the wild influences of their aboriginal state and condition in their children.”¹³

As he explained years later, he believed the Indians had to be taught the “proper doctrine” that “they had a right to hunt on the land, but that right must be subject to the higher occupation of the land for a larger population and for civilization.”¹⁴ Still, in October 1862, after he returned from his trip to his meeting of the board of directors of the Union Pacific Railroad, and another to Washington, he wrote Commissioner of Indian Affairs Dole that “we have but little danger to apprehend from Indian hostilities. . . .”¹⁵ Two developments changed his mind.

The first was the Minnesota Massacre, which made national news in August 1862, only weeks after the passage of the Pacific Railway Act, when the Santee Sioux commenced a war in Minnesota. Evans later claimed that Colorado’s Indian troubles were “the legitimate consequence of the teaching of Little Crow, the head of the Siouxs [sic] in Minnesota, and not from any local contest that we had with the Indians, because the settlers generally treated them pretty nicely, and did the best with them that they could.”¹⁶ Settler casualties in Minnesota were high. Five were killed on August 17, and by the end of the following day, four hundred settlers had been slain. The war ended quickly in Minnesota, with General Henry H. Sibley driving a divided resistance west. More than 2,000 Sioux were captured. Of those, 308 were condemned to death by a military commission. Lincoln personally reviewed the trial records and reduced the number to 38, who were hanged on December 26, 1862, in the largest mass execution in American history.¹⁷

Sioux survivors, driven permanently from Minnesota, fled west into Dakota Territory. The conflict created a sensation among both western settlers and people living in the East. Yet, when Colorado’s troop strength was reduced further, Evans complained about its economic impact, but played down the prospect of Indian troubles. In this assessment, he was backed initially by the Rocky Mountain News. The News declared on January 15, 1863, “It is useless to think of retaining twelve hundred cavalry and still a greater number of infantry, lying here comparatively idle.” Still, continuing reports of murdered settlers in Minnesota underscored Colorado settlers’ sense of isolation and caused them to look at the Colorado tribes with greater apprehension.

On January 29, 1863, just two weeks later, the News reflected public concerns, writing, “Were the troops removed, we fear the Indians would take advantage of their absence to renew, in our midst, the horrors of the Minnesota massacre. And at any rate the fact that there were not troops here sufficient for our protection would greatly retard emigration and materially effect [sic] the prosperity of the Territory.” In 1863, Charles S. Bryant and Abel B. Murch published a book entitled A History of the Great Sioux Massacre by the Sioux Indians that demonstrated that old ideas were alive and well. “It is a conflict of knowledge with ignorance, of right with wrong,” they wrote. “The inferior race must recede before the superior, or sink into the common mass, and, like the rain-drop falling upon the bosom of the ocean, lose all traces of distinction.”

They returned to ancient arguments:

Again we come to the great law of right. The white race stood upon this undeveloped continent ready and willing to execute the Divine injunction, to replenish the earth and SUBDUE it. The savage races in possession of it either refused or imperfectly obeyed this first law of the Creator. On the one side stood the white race in the command of God, armed with his law. On the other, the savage, resisting the execution of that law. The result could not be evaded by any human device. God's law will ever triumph, even through the imperfect instrumentality of human agency. In the case before us, the Indian races were in the wrongful possession of a continent required by the superior right of the white man. This right, founded in the wisdom of God, eliminated by the ever-operative law of progress, will continue to assert its dominion, with varying success, contingent on the use of means employed, until all opposition is hushed in the perfect reign of the superior aggressive principle.¹⁸

Bryant and Murch built their account of what happened in Minnesota around this theme, wrapped in the idea that Christianity had the right to assert the principle by blood if necessary. Whether John Evans ever read the book, the ideas would be embraced by him. In the short term, however, the practical Evans proceeded with plans to move all of the Cheyennes and Arapahos onto the Sand Creek reserve. He expected them, he wrote Commissioner Dole, on February 26, 1863, to "quietly accept under the Treaty if the Department will aid in the matter."¹⁹ At that point he was more concerned about dealing with other tribes—Comanches, Kiowas, Plains Apaches, and Utes. When delegations were sent to Washington that spring, the Cheyennes and Arapahos who went were added at the last minute as an afterthought. Left Hand, who hurried to join the delegation, found that it had already left when he arrived at Fort Lyon. He was angry over the perceived insult.²⁰

The second development was a legal one—and the decisive one for Evans. In December 1862, Samuel Browne, the U.S. District Attorney for Colorado, complained to the Secretary of the Interior that the Treaty of Fort Wise failed to define the boundaries of ceded lands, which was creating problems in the courts. On February 22, 1863, Dole advised Browne that the lands ceded extended from the South Platte to the Arkansas. With this information in hand, Browne halted land surveys north of the South Platte and published the boundary limits in the territory's newspapers.²¹ On April 10, 1863, Evans challenged this interpretation, warning Dole that if the interpretation was not changed, "we are liable to have an Indian war on our hands." Now, for the first time, he reported depredations and claimed that the Cheyennes and Arapahos were planning to drive the whites "off of what they claim to be their lands." He begged Dole to change the interpretation "to give us authority to avert this threatened repetition of the Minnesota war. . . ." ²² Other officials joined the chorus, although there was little evidence to support the claims of Cheyenne or Arapaho hostility.²³ In May, Dole buckled under the pressure and instructed Evans "to adopt such a kind of policy as may be found expedient."²⁴

Browne challenged Dole's decision and predicted that if the commissioner did not secure a new treaty "we may have trouble with these bands."²⁵ The normal spring and summer movements of the tribes fed the rumor mill as did reports of General Sibley and General Alfred Sully leading expeditions into Dakota Territory to mop up Santee Sioux who had fled Minnesota and to overawe the Lakota.²⁶ Evans also became embroiled in a quarrel with a man named John W. Wright, who was sent to survey the Sand Creek reservation. Evans pressured the Indian agents to provide information concerning the mood of the Indians, and planned a conference with the Cheyennes and Arapahos for September 1, 1863.²⁷

As early as June 24, 1863, he told Dole that while he had "little fear" of the Arapahos, he was certain that the Cheyennes were "meditating war."²⁸ It was a rough summer, and the tribes suffered from lack of water and grass and from the spread of diphtheria and whooping cough. It was true that the Cheyennes, in particular, were sullen and uncooperative. They understood what Evans wanted and found it unacceptable. Rumors fed Evans's worst fears, especially with reports that the Lakota were sending pipe bearers to the Cheyennes and Arapahos following Sully's fight with Santees and Yanktonais at Whitestone Hill in August 1863.²⁹

Evans's planned conference never took place. He found only four lodges of Cheyenne at the conference site. Elbridge Gerry did find a large encampment on Beaver Creek. The Cheyennes expressed a willingness to meet with Evans, but said that sickness prevented them from moving. Even then, Black Kettle was too sick to leave his lodge. The chiefs were united in denouncing the Treaty of Fort Wise as a "swindle," and when Gerry told them that the governor wanted them to live like white men, Bull Bear of the Dog Soldiers told Gerry, "You tell white chief, Indian maybe not so low yet." They were also still upset over the death of Little Heart at Larned. The mood was so sullen in the camp that when Bull Bear agreed to talk to Evans, his fellow Dog Soldiers refused to allow him to go. Gerry reported to Evans his failure and his pessimism.³⁰

The governor's handling of the arrangements was clumsy and inept, and he paid little attention to the reasons the tribes provided for not attending. Evans, and others in authority, never understood the ordinary seasonal movements of the tribes—or seriously tried to learn. This meant that any activities that brought Cheyennes or Arapahos closer to settlers were interpreted as threatening. Large tribal gatherings were seen as preparations for war. Small groups were regarded as war parties. Ordinary trade, buffalo hunting, coming out of winter encampments in the spring or going into winter encampments in the fall all had sinister meanings to whites the Indians encountered. Evans saw anything out of the ordinary (from his point of view) as evidence that war was inevitable.

His planned conference in September was a clear case in point. It was scheduled at a time when the tribes were holding tribal ceremonies and preparing for the winter. More importantly, 1863 had been a difficult year with diphtheria and whooping cough. Most importantly, after Gerry's report, Evans simply seemed to give up. He was in a position to say that he had tried, at the least. What is not clear is what he intended for the future at that moment.³¹

On September 22, 1863, Evans wrote a half dozen letters expressing his fears. Yet, in a letter to Dole, on October 14, he noted "a period of quiet among the Indians, and a general feeling of security from danger in the public mind."³² He even suggested that the "wisest policy" was to encourage the tribes to be scattered into small groups. For those who understood tribal patterns the "period of quiet" was predictable. As late as November 2, 1863, Evans advised Agent Colley that he was "well satisfied that until we are ready for them on the Reservation they will do better to be out after game."³³

Governor Evans also placed a priority on negotiating a treaty with the Utes, and after his failed mission to the Cheyennes, he turned his attention to them. His impression of them seemed favorable from the beginning, and it did not escape notice that they were situated on lands more likely to have mineral resources and settlement potential than Cheyenne and Arapaho ranges. In fact, many of the Colorado settlements were on the lands held by the Tabogauche Utes. In their case, Evans's decision to send the Ute chiefs to Washington had paid off. Their chiefs, especially Ouray, returned to Colorado impressed by white power. Ouray was also paid a salary, earmarked for an interpreter. The treaty was important enough that John G. Nicolay, Lincoln's secretary was sent to observe the negotiations, and Simeon Whiteley, a Lincoln loyalist who was also a newspaper editor, was named as agent. Whiteley would serve not only as Ute agent, but also as an operative of the Republican Party, as political leadership looked to the possibility of a statehood movement in 1864. Michael Steck, the Superintendent of Indian Affairs in New Mexico, was also present.

At Conejos, on October 7, 1863, with great fanfare provided by the Utes themselves, the chiefs signed a treaty giving up their claims to New Mexico, the Front Range, and the San Luis Valley, in exchange for a reservation in the Gunnison Valley and $20,000 in trade goods and provisions for a period of ten years. Evans was elated, but some of the Utes who were not included, including those at the Middle Park Agency, were unhappy with the result and demonstrated their discontent dramatically enough that Agent Whiteley had abandoned his post well before the negotiations at Conejos. Lafayette Head was appointed as the new Ute agent. The governor had his prize, however, and, he hoped, security for most of the mountain towns and mining districts. Nicolay believed that Evans would be needed in Washington to complete the treaty. In a cryptic note to President Lincoln on October 12, Nicolay wrote, "Please delay any opinion as to Governor Evans until you hear from me."³⁴

On November 7, after reports of horses stolen by Arapahos near Denver, Evans requested that Chivington try to recover the horses, but told him "to proceed in such careful and prudent manner as to avoid any collision with the Indians or causes of ill feeling that is consistent with the performance of the duty required."³⁵ That same day, Evans received a report from Robert North, an eccentric white man who had lived among the Arapahos, of a secret plan among the tribes to commence a war in the spring. North provided what Evans wanted or feared.³⁶ From that time forward, Evans was convinced that war was certain, although other reports were not as convinced of imminent danger.

Evans had other reasons to believe the worst. On September 5, 1863, while Evans waited for Gerry's report, the Union Pacific, Eastern Division, began to lay track at Wyandotte, Kansas. This gave Evans an added sense of urgency about the "land question." While in the East that December, he attended a meeting of the "Managers of the Pacific Railroad" in New York. He returned to Denver, believing that a Colorado route for the railroad was still possible.³⁷ This meant that the Indian question needed to be resolved quickly. On December 14, he wrote Secretary of War Stanton outlining a plan for Colorado's defense and justified it on the basis of "extensive depredations recently committed" which forced him "to apprehend serious difficulties early in the coming spring."³⁸ Yet, on December 20, he wrote an interesting letter to Commissioner Dole, telling him that the Cheyennes and Arapahos "utterly refuse" to accept the Fort Wise treaty and asking permission to negotiate with the tribes for another reservation site. Unfortunately, he never pursued this idea.³⁹

While Evans grappled with territorial issues, Chivington wasted most of 1863 in petty quarrels with other military officers. Rumors had spread in 1862 from New Mexico that regular army officers Captain William H. Lewis and Captain Asa B. Carey were responsible for the seizure of the supply train at Johnson's Ranch during the Glorieta campaign. New Mexico sources claimed that Chivington wasted hours before deciding to make the attack, and that he was "strutting about in plumage stolen."⁴⁰ Other sources claimed that Captain Samuel Cook deserved the credit for the victory at Apache Canyon the day before. One thing that was certain was that Captain Cook was bitter over what had happened in New Mexico. Even the Santa Fe Gazette said flatly that "the charge made by Capt. Cook in Apache Canyon was as brilliant a feat as has been performed by any body of men of the same number since the war began, yet we see little or nothing said about it by our Denver neighbors."⁴¹ The Gazette also pointed out that while the burning of the wagons at Johnson's Ranch was important, it was not "a regularly devised military plan." Chivington stumbled onto the supply train, the paper said, and left the actual plan—and Slough at Pigeon's Ranch—in jeopardy. "But for this General Chivington has been manufactured into a hero."⁴² Before year's end there would be charges that Chivington and others had conspired against Colonel Slough and perhaps planned to kill him.

More troubling were Chivington's conflicts with other officers in his command, from Lieutenant Colonel Tappan down to Captain Cook and several junior officers. Initially, his most serious quarrel was with Colonel Jesse Leavenworth, the commander of the Second Colorado Cavalry, who was stationed at Fort Larned. Leavenworth deplored the inactivity of the troops in Colorado and suggested that most of the troops were there for the profits of speculators. He claimed that four companies could defend Colorado and the overland routes. The rest, he said, were there "to protect new town lots, and eat corn at $5.60 a bushel."⁴³

In the spring of 1863, Leavenworth saw a potential conflict building on the Arkansas between Fort Lyon and Fort Larned. Despite orders to cooperate, Chivington specifically ordered Tappan, who was commanding Fort Lyon, not to support Leavenworth. When Tappan defied his orders and marched to Leavenworth's aid, Chivington removed him from command at Fort Lyon and shipped him off to Fort Garland, a far less important post. During this quarrel, an incident occurred at Fort Larned, in which a sentry shot and killed Little Heart, a young Cheyenne, who tried to ride down the sentry. Leavenworth managed to prevent an incident, and the chiefs concluded that the shooting had been justified.⁴⁴ Leavenworth protested, ironically at a time in August 1863, when a group of officers in the First renewed efforts to secure Chivington's promotion. As a result, an officer was dispatched to inspect Colorado. He produced a devastating report on the state of Chivington's command. Military discipline had virtually collapsed. "The Commanding General is astonished, to learn that such a state of things exists and insists that the abuses be at once corrected."⁴⁵

In spite of this sorry report, Chivington was able to save himself and to have Leavenworth removed from command based on irregularities in the organization of his regiment. He also caused another ruckus by refusing to move to the assistance of General James B. Carleton in New Mexico when ordered to by headquarters, but his main target remained Lieutenant Colonel Tappan, who he banished to Fort Garland in central Colorado, away from the Arkansas route. He made life miserable for Tappan during the rest of 1863, primarily involving the conduct of troops involved in the pursuit of the Espinosas, a family that was murdering citizens in Tappan's area. At the end of the year, Chivington requested that Tappan be mustered out "for the benefit of the service."⁴⁶ But Tappan had connections, too, and Samuel Robbins, the Chief of Cavalry of Colorado, gave Tappan a favorable report. Robbins was threatened, but held his ground.

Tappan would continue to be hounded by charges and accusations from his District Commander even after the Department of Kansas was created. Of course this led to a division among the officers and even within the ranks. Many saw Chivington as a grasping, vindictive man and chafed under the ongoing inactivity of the regiment. In New Mexico, General Carleton was moving on the Navajos; in Utah, General Patrick Edward Connor was launching an expedition against the Shoshoni, but the only real fighting in Colorado was within the First Regiment itself. In fact, Hiram Pitt Bennet, Colorado's congressional delegate, suggested, on September 5, 1863, that a Colorado regiment could be spared to support Connor.⁴⁷ As late as February, 1864, the rumor was circulating as far away as Fort Laramie that Chivington was being ordered to Washington "to answer the charge of incapability of holding office." A soldier wrote his sister, "It has been reported that his men are undisciplined [sic] that he can do nothing with them at all, that he allows them to go about the City dressed in citizens clothes and 'many other things prejudicial to good order and military discipline.'"⁴⁸ Chivington added no laurels to his record in 1863.

With first movements in the spring of 1864, most of the Cheyennes and Arapahos were east of the mining camps near the headwaters of the Smoky Hill and Republican Rivers and moving farther east. Of course, spring forays were launched as always to locate buffalo, grass, horses, and other necessities. These parties were small, well-mounted, and determined to assert dominance over essential resources as the horse culture always had, and included forays against the Utes. They posed little direct threat to whites, but their very presence raised fears among the settlers. On April 7, General Curtis was advised that cattle had been stolen from a government contractor in Denver. Curtis ordered Chivington, commanding the District of Colorado, to pursue the thieves. Curtis also sent messages to General Robert Mitchell and Colonel William Collins. Both Mitchell and Collins were skeptical of the reports, but Chivington immediately blamed the Cheyennes and put a force into the field commanded by Lieutenant George Eayre. No evidence existed to prove that a theft had actually taken place, but Chivington advised Curtis that Cheyennes were responsible.⁴⁹

Troop movements prompted more rumors of more depredations. Major Jacob Downing, Chivington's bulldog district inspector with an intense hatred of Indians, struck a village and burned the camp when the inhabitants fled without a fight. Later, a group of Cheyenne Dog Soldiers, planning to join a raid against the Crows, picked up four stray mules. When the owner met them, the Dog Soldiers demanded a reward for returning them. As a result, the owner went to the military, and a force under Lieutenant Clark Dunn, another of Chivington's more aggressive officers, took the field. Near Fremont's Orchard, Dunn got into a running fight with the Dog Soldiers. In neither case was there any evidence of intent on the part of the Cheyennes to move against whites.⁵⁰

These episodes were enough to convince Evans that his predictions of a war "were too well founded to justify indifference."⁵¹ The cautious Curtis issued orders on April 18, 1864, that troops "try to prevent irritations of Indian difficulties."⁵² By then, Lieutenant Eayre, who had not been heard from, had skirmished with two separate camps and burned them when the Cheyennes fled. Eayre later reported to Chivington that the Cheyennes had stolen the contractor's cattle and "that they meditate hostilities against the whites."⁵³ Major Downing also advised Chivington, "Everything indicates the commencement of an Indian war."⁵⁴

On the other hand, several officers reported that the Cheyennes were frightened and anxious to maintain good relations with whites. Elbridge Gerry reported on April 14, 1864, that the tribes were unaware of any sorties against whites, and John Prowers, an Arkansas valley rancher married to the daughter of One Eye, told Colley on April 19, that the Cheyennes had no intention of joining a war.⁵⁵ Captain David Hardy recovered fifty head of cattle that had been found by the Cheyennes, and he reported the Indians "very frightened." Captain Samuel Cook wrote Chivington's adjutant on April 22 that "the Indians are very much alarmed and appeared to be very anxious to keep on good terms with whites."⁵⁶ Other commanders could find no trace of Indian hostility. The evidence was far from convincing that a war was planned by the Cheyennes and Arapahos.

Evans, however, picking and choosing his sources, believed he had the evidence to make his case. Then, Curtis advised his commanders that he needed troops urgently. Already supporting Union operations along the Red River against Confederate troops, he now expected William Clarke Quantrill's guerillas to move into Kansas and trouble from the Kiowas below Fort Larned. On April 28, 1864, Curtis ordered Chivington to move all the forces he could spare to the "extreme South East of your district" because of the Confederate movements in Texas and the Indian Territory.⁵⁷ Chivington reacted by requesting permission to call out the militia and asking that he be allowed to launch a raid into northwestern Texas.

He wrote, "If there should be further Indian troubles, which does not seem probable [italics added], the militia are armed and can take care of them." This came only days after Evans had requested more troops and after Chivington had learned of a Cheyenne raid on the Platte route west of Julesburg. Chivington played down the threat. He suggested calling out the militia, adding, "Don't think they will be needed but the possibility they may."⁵⁸ Even the Weekly Rocky Mountain News, said, on May 4, "this Indian war was 'a heap of talk for a little cider.' White men have undoubtably been the aggressors."⁵⁹ Evans, by contrast, continued to urge support against an imminent Indian war.

Major Downing, ever the aggressor, was anxious to pursue the matter of Indian hostility, as well. While Chivington prepared to move into southeastern Colorado as Curtis commanded, Downing took the field. On May 1, 1864, he captured and tortured a Cheyenne, who agreed to lead the troops to a village at Cedar Bluffs. On May 3, Downing attacked. He killed several before the survivors escaped into a draw and managed to hold him off. Downing was very pleased with himself, and wrote Chivington, "I believe now it is but the commencement of war with this tribe, which must result in their extermination."⁶⁰ Evans agreed. Chivington ordered troops to the Arkansas, leaving one company at Fremont's Orchard on the advice of General Curtis to keep them there "till we know Indians will remain quiet."⁶¹

Lieutenant Eayre was still in the field, and reports from Captain J. W. Parmetar at Fort Larned and General Robert Mitchell expressed doubts about Indian hostilities.⁶² Evans was now demanding that Colorado's troops be returned from Kansas to prevent the settlements from being wiped out.⁶³ At mid-May, Eayre materialized, reporting that he had been attacked by Cheyennes and had weathered a seven-and-a-half-hour battle.⁶⁴ What had happened was much more serious. On May 16, Eayre had killed two chiefs who rode out to parley with him, Lean Bear, one of the most prominent peace chiefs, and Star. Black Kettle eventually managed to stop the fight that followed, although Wolf Chief said that it was a long time "before the warriors would listen to him. We were all very mad."⁶⁵

The murder of Lean Bear and Star resulted in a series of raids between Fort Riley and Fort Larned the following day, but at a gathering shortly afterward, most of the Cheyennes opposed war.⁶⁶ More importantly, only one man was killed on May 17, Samuel D. Walker, at John J. Prater's trading post on the stage road at Cow Creek near Salina, Kansas. The Cheyennes' vengeance consisted primarily of running off stock. On June 4, the Junction City Smoky Hill and Republican Union reported that apart from the death of Walker, "it has turned out that no settlers were massacred, no houses burned, [and] no villages sacked."⁶⁷ The Cheyennes took horses, mules, and cattle, but hurt no one in the other attacks along the route in Kansas and destroyed no property. Even with these restrained strikes, the only attack by Indians in Colorado was the incident on the Platte route in April.

On May 27, 1864, the Black Hawk Daily Mining Journal reported that the Indian war had blown over for the moment. "Col. Chivington says the Platte route was never more free from Indian insolence, than at present." Chivington said that most of the Indians were moving in the direction of Fort Larned and that the Sioux were "very friendly or afraid, which amounts to the same thing." The First Regiment, Chivington claimed, was "concentrating at Ft. Lyon, for a raid into Texas." The Journal noted, "We rejoice that the boys are to be relieved from their long and killing inactivity, though we confess to little faith in raids in general, and raids into Texas in particular.—The Colonel is evidently seeing visions and dreaming dreams of Secesh [Confederate] stock and plunder including material for a regiment of disaffected Texans, and perhaps one of 'unbleached Americans.' In which case, it would be just to call these visions of the Colonel highly colored."

On June 7, 1864, Chivington finally left Denver for the Arkansas, more than a month after he was ordered south. When he arrived at Fort Lyon on June 11, he advised Curtis that while he believed that the Kiowas and Cheyennes intended to fight and "will have to be soundly thrashed before they will be quiet," he could keep the route between Larned and Lyon clear "of Indians and Robbers & if the Major General directs, I can make a campaign into Texas or after Indians on Smokey Hill & Republican."⁶⁸ Chivington obviously believed he had matters well in hand, this only days after Evans, on May 28, had begged Curtis not to leave Colorado defenseless. "Now we have but half the troops we then had and are at war with a powerful combination of Indian tribes who are pledged to sustain each other and to drive the white people from their country."⁶⁹ In June, a Cheyenne named Spotted Horse met with Evans to explain the Cheyenne side of the story, but Evans was still skeptical.⁷⁰ On June 10, the last company of the First Cavalry departed Camp Weld for the Arkansas.

At that point, then, the leaders were divided. Evans was promoting the idea of imminent danger, demanding "a severe chastisement," while assuring Dole that "All that can be done by prudence to keep others from joining in the fray should be done while the military bring the others to terms."⁷¹ Curtis and other officers in the Department of Kansas were still convinced that matters, while tense, were under control. Chivington had moved his troops into southeastern Colorado. When pressed by William Bent to move quickly to assure peace, Chivington replied that if war did come "the citizens would have to protect themselves."⁷²

The day after the last troops left Denver for the Arkansas, June 11, three riders charged into Denver to report Indian attacks near the city. The Hungate family—a man, his wife, and two small children—had been murdered at the ranch of Isaac P. Van Wormer. Evans was frantic. He wired Secretary Stanton that Indian hostilities had commenced. He reported "extensive Indian murders" had been "reliably reported" within twenty-five miles of Denver to Commissioner Dole. He demanded that Curtis return "the whole regiment" to defend the settlements.⁷³ Inexplicably, the mutilated bodies of the Hungates were displayed on the street in Denver, heightening the dread and anger. Denver already was on the verge of panic when on June 15 reports reached Denver of a large party of Indians moving on Denver.

Fear took command, with citizens rushing into the streets and taking refuge in the Denver Mint and the upper story of the Commissary building on Ferry Street. Men broke into the military warehouses and stole guns and ammunition. Through the night, chaos reigned.⁷⁴ It turned out that the Indian army was a herd of cattle being driven toward Denver by Mexican cowboys, but hysteria was the order of the day.⁷⁵ Evans was caught up in it himself. His dispatches to Stanton, Dole, and Curtis were frantic and exaggerated. Evans did pull himself together and produce in a matter of hours a plan of action. He demanded that the First Colorado be returned to Colorado. He proposed to organize the militia under federal authority. He introduced the idea of a one-hundred day regiment for service against the Indians. He proposed a major offensive against the tribes. He proposed that friendly Indians be gathered at “places of safety.” On June 15, he wrote Dole a lengthy report arguing that the Indians had been the aggressors in the spring raids, while acknowledging that some opposed the fighting.⁷⁶

His plan had a certain logic. If the peaceful Indians came in and were treated well, those inclined to resist might follow suit and the war end. The responses he received from Dole and Curtis were tepid at best. Curtis was also receiving correspondence from other commanders that conciliation was the best course. Dole was receiving similar reports from the Indian agents. The best course, T. S. McKenny, Curtis’s inspector general, advised was “to try and conciliate them, to guard our mails and trains well to prevent theft, and stop these scouting parties that are roaming over the country who do not know one tribe from another, and who will kill anything in the shape of an Indian. It will require but few murders on the part of our troops to unite all of these warlike tribes of the plains.”⁷⁷

Nathaniel Hill, a professor of chemistry from Brown University who would build a fortune in Colorado as the result of improved smelting techniques and serve one term as United States Senator from Colorado, had been in Colorado only a few days when he wrote, “Rumors are floating around every day of some Indian depredation; but when you resolve it all down to simple fact, it amounts to a few soldiers killed in April, one family murdered a few days ago . . . and numerous little thefts.” Of Evans, Hill wrote, “The Governor is a very fine man, but very timid, and he is unfortunately smitten with the belief that they are to have an Indian war.”⁷⁸ Curtis agreed with that assessment, which set Evans off. He demanded that Curtis show that he was wrong about the threat. Curtis shot back that “while prepared for the worst, we may not exert ourselves in pursuit of rumors. . . . [H]owever much we may have reason to apprehend a general Indian war we should not conclude them as such a thing in actual existence before doing all in our power to prevent such a disaster.”⁷⁹ On June 20, Major Henry Wallen expressed the view that war could still “be prevented by prompt management.”⁸⁰

Evans, for his part, was frantic, regularly adding telegrams and letters to the files of Curtis, Stanton, Dole, and even General James H. Carleton in New Mexico. The settlers, already suffering from the effects of spring floods, lived on a steady diet of rumors and believed the worst. The only question was who to blame, and Evans was increasingly blamed by many. Additional urgency was added when Congress passed an enabling act for Colorado statehood, and a constitutional convention had been called for July—a critical matter within itself, but doubly so in the context of the “Indian problem.” The Indian troubles also endangered his plans for a Colorado route of the transcontinental railroad. Colorado’s economy was in trouble. He had to do something.⁸¹

On June 26, 1864, General Carleton wrote Evans to advise him that he was in the field against Apaches, but he urged Evans to avoid war with any tribe “altogether” if possible. When a war “is commenced it should be commenced because they have been the aggressors and are clearly in the wrong.” He advised Evans on his views of fighting Indians, but he said, “I mention these matters to your excellency, so that all efforts for peace may be resorted to before war is resorted to.”⁸² On June 27, the next day and well before he had time to receive Carleton’s letter, Evans issued his proclamation “To the Friendly Indians of the Plains,” inviting Indians disposed to peace to come in to places of safety near military posts.⁸³ William Bent, when he learned of the proclamation, escorted a party of Cheyennes into Fort Larned to discuss the proclamation with Captain Parmetar, the dissolute commanding officer. At the least, they left optimistic about maintaining peace.⁸⁴

The proclamation was bound to fail, however. All of the problems were east, concentrated either on the Arkansas near Larned in Kansas or on the Platte. Moreover, General Curtis had issued orders restricting Indians from congregating at military bases. Evans was clearly nervous, but the ante was upped on July 2, 1864, when the Congress passed new legislation that raised the governor’s hopes for a Colorado route for the transcontinental railroad when it authorized the Union Pacific Eastern Division to meet the Central Pacific “provided it reached the hundredth meridian before the Union Pacific line out of Omaha did," according to Evans's biographer.⁸⁵ This increased the urgency of resolving the Indian troubles in order to clear the way. Evans saw himself in a race, and his future was the prize.

At the same time, Chivington, who had done virtually nothing that he had been asked to do by Curtis, had returned to Denver late in June, ostensibly to help restore order there although there were no troubles to quell. He was now talking fight. He wrote Curtis on July 5, 1864, "My judgment is that the only way to conquer a peace is to follow them to their settlements & then chastise them."⁸⁶ On the other hand, the Cheyennes and Arapahos were convinced that "the Big War Chief in Denver had told his soldiers to kill all their squaws & pappooses. . . ."⁸⁷ Special Agent H. T. Ketcham wrote Evans on July 1, that he had heard these charges, adding, "But the killing of defenceless women, and innocent helpless children for the crimes of their fathers, is so barbarous, so contrary to the practice of civilized warfare, so revolting and so shocking to humanity, that I cannot believe that Col. Chivington whose courage, benevolence, piety & patriotism are unquestioned, ever issued such an order."⁸⁸ What was clear, however, was that the bands would be reluctant to come in because they were convinced that the whites wanted war. Only the most tractable would even consider presenting themselves at military posts or agencies in Colorado.

Curtis believed that Chivington was still at Fort Lyon. On July 7, he ordered Chivington to proceed from Fort Lyon to Fort Larned to deal with a building crisis there. Several days later Major Edward W. Wynkoop received orders from headquarters by courier to move to Larned with four companies. Rather than obeying the order, Wynkoop forwarded the message to Denver for approval from Chivington, who had instructed him not to leave the District of Colorado without his permission. Unfortunately, Chivington had left Denver by then to return to Lyon. He did not arrive until July 15.⁸⁹ On July 16, Evans wrote Curtis, "It is very important that Col. Chivington operate with his command on these infernal Indians."⁹⁰ Chivington finally left Lyon for Larned on July 17, the very day that the situation at Larned erupted into violence.

Captain James W. Parmetar, the commanding officer at Fort Larned, was a "confirmed drunkard" and generally incompetent. Because of this the post was a tinder box. In July, Kiowas ran off the post's horses, and Satanta, one of the Kiowa chiefs, shot and wounded a sentinel. Left Hand and a party of Arapahos approached the fort on July 17 and sent a message by a soldier to Parmetar promising to fight the Kiowas and help recover the stock. Parmetar responded by firing a howitzer at the party of Arapahos. Infuriated, some of the young Arapahos joined the Kiowas. By the time Chivington arrived by stagecoach on July 20, open resistance on the part of the tribes, including the Cheyennes, was very real. Within three days, a combined force of Cheyennes, Arapahos, and Kiowas killed twelve men, wounded three more, and ran off six hundred head of stock.⁹¹

The same day, July 20, an infuriated Curtis, advised a Kansas commander that he would go to Larned himself, blaming the crisis there primarily on Chivington. On July 27, 1864, Curtis issued Field Order No. 1, which included the following instructions: "Indians at war with us will be the object of our pursuit and destruction, but women and children must be spared."⁹² Curtis marched from Fort Riley to Fort Larned with four hundred men. On July 29, he secured Fort Larned. Curtis was livid with Chivington, chastising him for disobeying orders and returning to Denver when he had been ordered to defend the Arkansas route. "I fear your attention is too much attracted by other matters than your command," he wrote on July 30.⁹³ Because the failure of policy had occurred on the Arkansas route between Larned and Lyon in Chivington's district, Curtis removed Fort Lyon from the District of Colorado and created a new district, the District of the Upper Arkansas, to be commanded by General James G. Blunt. The new district included the Arkansas route from Larned to Lyon.⁹⁴

Chivington protested, but to no avail.⁹⁵ To make matters worse, while troops from Nebraska and Kansas were in the field looking for the tribes, Chivington was spending a significant portion of his time campaigning for Congress in the event statehood passed—and for congressional delegate if it didn't. The only Colorado troops actively engaged were those stationed at Fort Lyon and Fort Larned in the new District of the Upper Arkansas, and a few troops on the South Platte. Chivington even diverted some forces to chase Confederate guerillas reported to be in the area. Evans, who was also campaigning for statehood and a seat in the U.S. Senate, continued to plead for assistance, by now viewed by nearly everyone in authority as an alarmist.⁹⁶

Significantly, between June 11 and July 17, there were no confirmed reports of Indian attacks within the Territory of Colorado. The incidents that did happen were the work of the Lakota on the Platte in Nebraska and the Kiowas on the Arkansas in Kansas. The reasons were simple enough. For the Cheyennes, all roads led to the Solomon Fork that summer. The Sacred Arrows had been bloodied when a Cheyenne named Winnebago killed another Cheyenne man, and the Arrows had to be renewed in holy ceremonies by Stone Forehead, the Arrow Keeper, before war could be considered seriously.

Moreover, it was time for an important gathering that occurred only once every ten years. It was time to renew the Council of Forty-Four, to choose again the chiefs who would lead Maheo's people. This gathering was the reason for the great camps that were reported in some accounts, not a war council, but the renewal of leadership for all of the Cheyennes, north and south. The chiefs were chosen in the ancient way, four chiefs for each manhao and the four Old Man Chiefs. Black Kettle was formally seated on the Council for the first time, and Little Wolf became the Sweet Medicine chief. Since such a gathering had not occurred since 1854, few whites on the central plains were even aware of such a thing or its meaning.⁹⁷

When the renewal was accomplished, and the great camp began to disperse, most of the northern manhao crossed the Platte and moved into the north country where they spent a peaceful summer. The southern manhao remained in the region of the Solomon, the Republican, and the Smoky Hill in western Kansas intending to hunt and keep away from whites. The Dog Soldiers and many young men, on the other hand, concluded that the whites who had killed Lean Bear had not left them alone and that it was time to exact a toll. They turned their ponies north toward the Platte. They struck first on July 17 (the same day that Captain Parmetar fired on the Arapahos at Fort Larned), at Fremont's Orchard, Junction Ranch, Junction Station, Murray's Station, Bijou Ranch, Beaver Creek Ranch, Godfrey's Ranch, and Washington's Ranch. The Lakota were also active between Deer Creek Station and Fort Laramie. General Robert B. Mitchell put troops into the field, mostly small parties that were extremely vulnerable, but they appeared to have the desired effect.⁹⁸ By July 29, 1864, the Omaha Nebraskian reported, "All quiet on the Platte. A dispatch from Julesburg this morning informs us that the aborigines have changed their base, and that the property taken by them from the emigrants and freighters has all been retaken." The report was premature.

Notes: Chapter VII

1. Lewis H. Garrard, Wah-to-yah and the Taos Trail, or Prairie Travel and Scalp Dances, with a Look at Los Rancheros from Muleback and the Rocky Mountain Campfire (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1955), pp. 33-34.

2. West, Way to the West, pp. 13-50.

3. West, Contested Plains, pp. 97-194.

4. Horace Greeley, An Overland Journey from New York to San Francisco in the Summer of 1859. Edited by Charles T. Duncan (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1964), pp. 119-123; William Bent to James W. Denver, October 5, 1859, in Leroy R. Hafen and Ann W. Hafen, editors, Relations with the Indians of the Plains, 1857-1861 (Glendale: Arthur H. Clark Company, 1959), pp. 186-187. See also Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 85-88, and Margaret Coel, Chief Left Hand, Southern Arapaho (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1981), pp. 82-109.

5. William E. Unrau, "Prelude to War," Colorado Magazine, XLI (1964), 299-313; Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 90-102.

6. Evans Interview, Bancroft MSS, Folio II, p. 11.

7. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 120-124.

8. Ibid., p. 124.

9. Ibid.

10. Chivington, "Footprints," Rocky Mountain Christian Advocate, November 6, 1889.

11. Ruth Bordin, Frances Willard: A Biography (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1986), pp. 94-95, 255n, offers a brief sketch of O. A. Willard's short life. Details of his life are also presented in Carolyn De Swarte Gifford, editor, Writing Out My Heart: Selections from the Journal of Frances E. Willard (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1995). On March 3, 1860, Frances celebrated Oliver's decision to become a minister (p. 61). It is plain there, however, that the family was concerned about him. On July 3, 1862, he recorded that Oliver and his new bride, Mary Bannister (also Frances's best friend) had departed for Denver (p. 185). The reference to Mrs. Evans's evaluation of his preaching comes from Frances Willard's journal entry for October 27, 1893 (p. 386). She noted, "when he was 27 Mrs Gov. Evans of Denver Col. Said that she had heard the best speakers in England & America & her pastor Oliver Willard was equal to any one of them."

12. DRMN, July 24, 1862.

13. Evans to Dole, August 6, 1862, LR, Office of Indian Affairs, Upper Arkansas, NARA, RG 75.

14. Evans Interview, Bancroft MSS P-L329, Folio II, p. 11.

15. Evans to Dole, October 30, 1862, Annual Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for 1862 (Washington, DC: Government Printing Office, 1863), p. 376.

16. Evans Interview, Bancroft MSS P-L329, Folio II, p. 11.

17. Doreen Chaky, Terrible Justice: Sioux Chiefs and U. S. Soldiers on the Upper Missouri, 1854-1868 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2012), pp. 131-142; Micheal Clodfelter, The Dakota War: The United States Army Versus the Sioux, 1862-1865 (Jefferson, NC: McFarland & Company, Inc., 1998), pp. 35-67; Gary Clayton Anderson, Little Crow: Spokesman for the Sioux (St. Paul: Minnesota Historical Society Press, 1986); Gary Clayton Anderson and Alan R. Woolworth, editors, Through Dakota Eyes: Narrative

- Accounts of the Minnesota Indian War of 1862* (St. Paul: Minnesota Historical Society Press, 1988); David A. Nichols, Lincoln and the Indians: Civil War Policy & Politics (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1978), pp. 65-118; Kenneth Carley, The Sioux Uprisings of 1862 (St. Paul: Minnesota Historical Society Press, 1976); Jerry Keenan, The Great Sioux Uprising: Rebellion on the Plains, August-September, 1862 (New York: DaCapo Press, 2003); Gustav Niebuhr, Lincoln's Bishop: A President, a Priest, and the Fate of 300 Dakota Sioux Warriors (New York: Harper One, 2014).
18. Charles S Bryant and Abel B. Murch, A History of the Great Massacre by the Sioux Indians in Minnesota (Cincinnati: 1863), pp. 46-49.
19. Evans to Dole, February 26, 1863, LR, OIA, Colorado Superintendency, NARA, RG 75.
20. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 145-149; Unrau, "Prelude," pp. 309-310; Harry Kelsey, "Abraham Lincoln and American Indian Policy," Lincoln Herald, 77 (1975): 139-148 Ned Blackhawk, Violence Over the Land: Indians and Empires in the Early American West (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2006), pp. 215-219, gives Evans a generally favorable review in his dealings with the Utes.
21. Browne to John Palmer Usher, December 9, 1862, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75; Browne to Dole, February 4, 1863, LR, OIA,UA, NARA, RG 75; Dole to Browne, February 27, 1863; Browne to the editor of the Rocky Mountain News, March 31, 1863, quoting letters from the Interior Department, May 9, 1861, and from J. M. Edmunds, Commissioner of the General Land Office, May 13, 1861.
22. Evans to Dole, April 10, 1863, LR, OIA, UA, NARA, RG 75.
23. Hiram Pitt Bennet to Usher, April 14, 1863, LR, OIA, UA, NARA, RG 75; Benjamin F. Hall to Dole, May 24, 1863, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75; Case to Edmunds, March 13, 1863, LS, Bureau of Land Management, NARA, Denver, CO, RG 49.
24. Dole to Evans, May 18, 1863, LS, OIA, NARA, RG 75; Unrau, "Prelude," pp. 310-312.
25. Browne to Dole, June 6, 1863, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75.
26. Paul N. Beck, Columns of Vengeance: Soldiers, Sioux, and the Punitive Expeditions, 1863-1864 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2008), pp. 50-152. A useful summary of the Sully and Sibley campaigns is found in Thom Hatch, The Blue, the Gray & the Red: Indian Campaigns of the Civil War (Mechanicsburg, PA: Stackpole Books, 2003), pp. 95-116. See also Utley, Frontiersmen in Blue, pp. 261-274.
27. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 163-166.
28. Evans to Dole, June 24, 1863, LR, OIA, UA, NARA, RG 75.
29. Beck, Columns of Vengeance, pp. 153-173; Clodfelter, Dakota War, pp. 118-154.
30. Evans to Dole, December 22, 1863, Indian Letter Book.
31. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 166-172.
32. Evans to Edwin M. Stanton, September 22, 1863; Evans to William H. Seward, September 22, 1863; Evans to Alexander W. Robb, September 22, 1863; Evans to Albert G. Boone and others, September 22, 1863; and Evans to Chivington, September 22, 1863, Indian Letter Book. See also Evans to Dole, October 14, 1863, AR, CIA, 1863, p. 240.
33. Evans to Colley, November 2, 1863, Indian Letter Book.
34. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 132-134; Blackhawk, Violence Over the Land, pp. 215-216; Evans Report, University of Denver, pp. 28-29; Michael Burlingame, With Lincoln in the White House: Letters, Memoranda, and Other Writings of John G. Nicolay, 1860-1865 (Carbondale: Southern Illinois University Press, 2006), p.119. Harry Kelsey, "Background to Sand Creek," Colorado Magazine XLV (1968): 294-298, provides the best summary of Whiteley in Colorado.
35. Evans to Chivington, November 9, 1863, LR OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75.
36. Evans to Dole, November 9, 11, 1863, Indian Letter Book; Statement of Robert North, November 10, 1863, AR, CIA, 1863, pp. 224-225. See Colin G. Calloway, "Arapaho Renegade: Robert North and the Plains Indians Wars," Essays and Monographs in Colorado History (Denver: Colorado Historical Society, 1985), pp. 1-20; "J. K." "Regretful Renegade: Robert North," Wild West Magazine, 24 (December 2011): 60.
37. Denver Daily Commonwealth, January 23, January 26, 1864. See also, Kelsey, John Evans, p.172-173. A fresh urgency was given to the railroad question in October 1863, when the Union Pacific launched a major effort to gain an advantage when it reorganized and set up operations in Omaha, Nebraska, with intentions to move up the Platte River valley to the West. There remained some issues, including a few that would require reforms in the Railway Act of 1862. See Maury Klein, Union Pacific: The Birth of a Railroad, 1862-1893 (Garden City, NY: Doubleday & Company, 1987), pp. 24-30, and Richardson and Farley, Usher, pp. 53-57. Secretary of the Interior John Palmer Usher and Commissioner of Indian Affairs William Palmer Dole, both had interests in the road.
38. Evans to Stanton, December 14, 1863, Indian Letter Book; also printed in AR, CIA, 1864, pp. 225-226.
39. Evans to Dole, December 20, 1863, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75.
40. Santa Fe Weekly Gazette, April 26, 1862; Rio Abajo Press, March 8, 1864. See John D. Miller to his father, April 3, 1862, "Fort Union, 1862," File 2, pp. 68-72, James West Arrott Collection, New Mexico Highlands University, Las Vegas, New Mexico. Miller gave the credit for the victory at Apache Canyon to Captain Samuel Cook of the First, who commanded one of the few mounted units in the fight. Colton, Civil War, pp. 77-78, reviews the contemporary criticism of Chivington's handling of the fight at Johnson's Ranch in favor of the leadership of Captain William H. Lewis and Captain Asa B. Carey, regulars who were attached to Chivington's command.
41. Santa Fe Gazette quoted in the WRMN, April 16, 1863.
42. Ibid.

43. Leavenworth to General E. V. Sumner, March 22, 1863, R. N. Scott, and others, editors, War of the Rebellion, A Compilation of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies. 128 Volumes (Washington, DC: Government Printing Office, 1880-1901): Series I, XII, Pt. 2, pp. 172-173. For a careful review of Leavenworth's war experiences, see William E. Unrau, "The Civil War Career of Jesse Henry Leavenworth, Montana, the Magazine of Western History, 12 (Spring 1962): 74-83.
44. Not all Cheyennes were as understanding. See John Smith to Colley, November 9, 1863, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75.
45. C. W. Marsh to Chivington, August 29, 1863, Register of Letters Received, Department of Missouri, p. 23, USAC, NARA RG 393. For a summary of related events, see Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 173-183.
46. Enochs, "Clash of Ambition," pp. 60-65; Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 181-187.
47. Henry W. Halleck to John Schofield, September 5, 1863, OR, Series I, XXII, Pt. 2, 521-523. Halleck told Schofield that the delegate from Colorado Territory [Bennet] had advised him that "a Colorado regiment can very well be spared to re-enforce General Connor in Utah." Halleck added, "If so, it should be sent immediately."
48. Hervey Johnson to his sister, Sibyl, February 23, 1864, in William E. Unrau, editor, Tending the Talking Wire: A Buck Soldier's View of Indian Country, 1863-1866 (Provo: University of Utah Press, 1979), p. 95. Johnson believed that Colonel William O. Collins, commander of the Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, would take command at Denver.
49. Curtis to Chivington, April 8, 1864; Mitchell to Colonel William O. Collins, April 7, 1864, Mitchell to Curtis, April 7, 1864, Chivington to AAG, Department of Kansas, April 9, 1864, Eayre to Chivington, April 18, 23, 1864, Chivington to Curtis, April 27, 1864, OR, Series I, Pt. 1, 880-882, Pt. 2, 85, 98, Pt. 3, 113, 218-219, 291. Curtis to Mitchell, April 7, 1864, Curtis Papers, IX, 188.
50. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 218-225; Berthrong, Southern Cheyennes, pp. 174-185; Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 257-263.
51. Evans to Curtis, April 11, 1864, AR, CIA, 1864, p. 370.
52. Curtis to Mitchell, April 18, 1864, Curtis Papers, 205.
53. Eayre to Chivington, April 23, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXVI, Pt. 1, 880-882.
54. Downing to Chivington, April 20, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 3, 242.
55. Gerry to Sanborn, April 14, 1864, Colley to Evans, April 19, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 3, 167-168, 234.
56. Cook to George H. Stilwell, April 22, 1864, OR, Series I, XXX-IV, Pt. 3, 262. See also Berthrong, Southern Cheyennes, pp. 181-182.
57. Curtis to Chivington, April 28, 1864, Curtis to Mitchell, April 28, 1864, Curtis Papers, IX, 222, 225.
58. Chivington to Mitchell (two letters), April 29, 1864, Curtis Papers, IX, 229.
59. WRMN, May 4, 1864.
60. Jacob Downing was an ambitious man who hated Indians and wanted Samuel Tappan's shoulder straps as lieutenant colonel. He was perhaps Chivington's most aggressive commander. Downing to Chivington, April 20, 21, 26, 27, May 2, 1864, OR, Series I, XXX-IV, Pt. 3, 242, 250-252, 304, 314, 407. Downing relished telling the story of his torture of the Cheyenne chief. See Denver Post, December 31, 1903, Denver Field and Farm, December 19, 1891, "Chronicles of Frontier Days," Inter-Ocean, 5 (April 29, 1882): 276-277.
61. Chivington to Curtis, April 25, 27, 29, May 4, 13, 1864, Curtis to Chivington, April 27, 28, May 2, 16, 30, June 10, 1864, Curtis Papers, IX, 215, 220, 223, 225, 229, 240, 247, 251, 274, 282, 292, 348.
62. Eayre to Chivington, May 1, 1864, Parmetar to Curtis, May 17, 1864, Mitchell to Curtis, May 26, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 101, 294, 334.
63. Evans to Curtis, May 28, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 3, 315.
64. Eayre to Chivington, May 19, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 1, 935.
65. Wolf Chief, quoted in Hyde, Life of Bent, p. 132. See also Bent to Hyde, March 26, April 12, 1906, George Bent-George Hyde Correspondence, Beinecke Library, Yale University, New Haven Connecticut; Bent to Hyde, George Bent Papers, Denver Public Library, Denver, Colorado; Alfred Gay and John W. Smith to George O'Brian, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 460-462; Halaas and Masich, Halfbreed, pp. 118-119.
66. Most accounts, including Roberts, "Sand Creek," p. 238, have suggested that the Cheyennes attacked in force along the road between Fort Riley and Fort Larned, destroying property, stealing stock, and killing settlers. This was the view heard in much of the contemporary correspondence and newspaper accounts. Cheyennes did descend on Walnut Creek Ranch and order the ranch keeper to leave at once. They told Rath, who was married to a Cheyenne woman, that they intended "to kill all the whites they could find." When the Cheyennes left, they took his wife with them. Documents from Rath's later depredation claim are published in Ida Ellen Rath, The Rath Trail (Wichita: McCormick Armstrong Company, 1961), pp. 22-25, 44-54.
67. Larry C. Skogen, Indian Depredation Claims, 1796-1920 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1996), pp. 156-178, offers a convincing analysis of both contemporary rumors and later depredation claims, and provides the quoted newspaper account cited here. For a list of contemporary reports, see Roberts, "Sand Creek," p. 798n. A more recent book that places more faith in the depredation claims is Jeff Broome, Cheyenne War: Indian Raids on the Roads to Denver, 1864-1869 (Sheridan, CO: Aberdeen Books, 2013).
68. Chivington to Curtis, June 11, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 318-319.
69. Evans to Curtis, May 28, 1864, Indian Letter Book.

70. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 242-243. By this time, Governor Evans was firing letters to Curtis and to Dole on an almost daily basis.
71. Evans to Dole, June 8, 1864, Indian Letter Book.
72. Testimony of William Bent, Senate Report No. 156, 39th Congress, 2nd Session, Report of the Joint Special Committee to Investigate the Condition of the Indian Tribes, With Appendix (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1867), p. 73.
73. Evans to Stanton, June 14, 1864, Evans to Dole, June 14, 1864, Evans to Curtis, June 14, 1864, Indian Letter Book; Evans to Curtis, June 11, 1864, Curtis Papers, IX, 367; Maynard to Captain Joseph C. Davidson, June 11, 1864; J. S. Brown and Thomas Darrah to Evans, June 11, 1864, Chivington to Davidson, June 12, 1864, Brown, Darrah, and D. C. Corbin to Maynard, June 13, 1864, Maynard to Charlot, June 13, 1864, Reynolds to Chivington, June 15, 1864, Davidson to Maynard, June 19, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 319-321, 330, 354-355, 462.
74. The extent of the panic the report caused is clear from both recollections and contemporary sources. See Mollie Dorsey Sanford, Mollie: The Journal of Mollie Dorsey Sanford in Nebraska and Colorado Territories. Edited by Donald F. Danker (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1959), pp. 187-188; Alice Polk Hill, Tales of the Colorado Pioneers (Denver: Pierson and Gardner, 1884), pp. 79-80. Hill wrote, "So great was the confusion incident to the fright, it is believed that one hundred Indians could have taken the town."
75. The Hungate Massacre remains a controversial topic in Colorado history, and it was certainly a rallying point for those who favored a major campaign against the Cheyennes and Arapahos. Although the killings were attributed to Arapahos by most—and as the result of a personal dispute with Isaac P. Van Wormer by some—the coroner's Inquest could only say that the Hungate family "came to their death by being feloniously killed by some person or persons unknown, but supposed to be Indians. . . ." See contemporary opinions in Denver Commonwealth, June 15, 22, 1864; Sarah Hively Journal, M356, Western History Collection, Denver Public Library; Henry Littleton Pitzer, Three Frontiers: Memories and a Portrait of Henry Littleton Pitzer as Recorded by His Son, Robert Claibourne Pitzer (Muscatine, IA: The Prairie Press, 1938), pp. 162-163; Ashley, "Reminiscences," pp. 74-75; Hill, "Letters," p. 246; Statement of Robert North, AR, CIA, 1864, p. 228; Statement of Neva at the Camp Weld Conference, September 28, 1864, Senate Report No. 26, 39th Congress, 2nd Session, Report of the Secretary of War, Communicating . . . a Copy of the Evidence Taken at Denver and Fort Lyon, Colorado Territory, by a Military Commission Ordered to Inquire into the Sand Creek Massacre, November, 1864 (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1867), 216.
76. Evans to Dole, June 15, 1864, Indian Letter Book.
77. McKenny to Charlot, June 15, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 402-404.
78. Hill to his wife, June 19, 1864, Hill, "Letters," p. 249.
79. Evans to Curtis, June 22, 1864, Indian Letter Book; Curtis to Evans, July 5, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 25.
80. Wallen to AG, Department of Missouri, June 20, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 476.
81. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 315-342, contains a detailed review of the statehood campaign and the parts played by Governor Evans and Colonel Chivington.
82. Carleton to Evans, June 26, 1864, Condition of Indian Tribes, Appendix, p. 186.
83. Proclamation to the Friendly Indians of the Plains, June 27, 1864, AR, CIA, 1864, p. 218; Colley to Evans, June 21, 1864, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75.
84. Testimony of William Bent, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 98.
85. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 140-171; Saxton, Rise and Fall of White Republic, pp. 275, 283-285.
86. Chivington to Curtis, July 5, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 14.
87. Ketcham to Evans, July 1, 1864, LR, OIA, CS, NARA, RG 75.
88. Ibid.
89. McKenny to Charlot, June 15, 1864, OR, Series I, XXXIV, Pt. 4, 402-404; Hardy to Wynkoop, June 29, 1864, Curtis to Chivington, July 7, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 62, 29.
90. Evans to Curtis, July 16, Indian Letter Book.
91. "Charges and Specifications against Capt. James W. Parmetar, 12th Regt. Kan. Vols.," James W. Parmetar, Compiled Military Service Record, Adjutant General's Office, NARA, RG 94; Hyde, Life of Bent, pp. 134. A Kiowa account is found in James Mooney, Calendar History of the Kiowa Indians, 17th Annual Report of the Bureau of American Ethnology (Washington: Smithsonian Institution, 1898), pp. 313-314. See Coel, Chief Left Hand, pp. 192-194, for the Arapaho perspective. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 265-269; 802-803n, provides a more detailed summary with documentation.
92. General Field Order No. 1, July 27, 1864, General Field Order No. 2, 1864, "Massacre of the Cheyenne Indians," Senate Report No. 142, 38th Congress, 2nd Session, Report of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War. Three Volumes (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1865): III, 75-76.
93. Curtis to Chivington, July 30, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 483.
94. Curtis to Charlot, July 23, 1864, Curtis to Chivington July 30, 1864, Curtis to Evans, July 30, 1864, Special Field Order No 3, Department of Kansas, July 31, 1864, General Order No. 1, Headquarters, District of the Upper Arkansas, James H. Ford to Curtis, July 31, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 379, 483-485, 491, 529.
95. Chivington to Curtis, August 8, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 613-614.
96. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 326-334.
97. Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 270-271.
98. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 271-274.

Chapter VIII

The Path to Sand Creek

On August 7, 1864, the Indian war exploded with full force along the Platte River and in western Kansas. Between August 7 and August 28, at least fifty whites were killed along the Platte route alone, and attacks increased along the Arkansas, mostly in Kansas. Curtis was inundated with requests for assistance from every district and territory in his command.¹ Chivington chimed in as well, noting that most of his troops were chasing Confederate guerillas and asking that the five companies of the First Colorado Cavalry at Fort Larned be returned to his district.² Evans added, "We are in a desperate condition on account of our communications being cut off by Indians."³ The mail was cut off, the shipment of goods held up, and communication lines in danger. Without any doubt, Colorado's commerce was threatened and its population afraid. George Bent said that the camps on the Solomon Fork in central Kansas were "full of plunder." He remembered, "War parties were setting out every day, and other parties coming in loaded with plunder and driving captured herds of horses and mules."⁴

On the day that the Indian assault began on the Little Blue in Nebraska, Colorado businessman Joseph Kenyon wrote to his New York associate, Samuel Barlow, "We are at present fearfull [sic] of trouble with the Indians on the Plains as they have already driven away and killed many of the Settlers on the Platte & they are still suffered to commit these depredations while our Officials are stumping the Territory for State Organization & their promotion to Congress[,] Governorships &c."⁵ Four days later, in another letter concerning the threat to Colorado, Kenyon wrote, "We are indebted to an imbicile [sic] Executive for this state of things as a little decision coupled with good sense would two months ago have avoided what must now cost many lives and I fear a general suspension of business for months to come."⁶

The statehood campaign had been launched in July, while Chivington was supposed to be on the Arkansas between Fort Lyon and Fort Larned. It was quickly linked to the "Denver crowd," a reference to "'Granny' Evans, Elder Chivington, and the rest of the 'Methodist ranters.'" On July 27, the Black Hawk Mining Journal reported, "Old John [Evans] works the lead, Gen. Teller on the near wheel, Col. Chivington on the off wheel, Byers is the horse 'to let,' and Rev. King the dog under the wagon."⁸ The timing was not good. Given the tensions and uncertainties concerning the Indians, the campaign for statehood gave the enemies of Evans and Chivington, and of statehood itself, an opportunity. Despite Ned Byers's efforts to make a case that Colorado would not have been ignored if it had been a state, the anti-state forces made their argument against Evans, Chivington, and their handling of affairs. The Mining Journal said, on August 13, "The Government does no injustice to us in throwing the work of defense into our hands, and if we attend to that work, we are competent to keep the route open between here and the States, and to protect our territorial settlements. But instead of attending to it, our military leaders are stumping the Territory for offices for themselves."

Even Chivington's soldiers were critical. On July 28, before the war began in August, the Journal published a letter from Fort Lyon which said, "This war is nothing but a political hobby, so plain a blind man can see it, and the instigators of it should suffer. Who but them ought to atone for the lives already lost by their infernal scheming." Another soldier was quoted on July 29, "we have as yet had no encounter with any foe but of the bedbug and mosquito tribes." Major Wynkoop was criticized for trying to obtain the proxies of the whole regiment and "cast them for Gov. Evans or Col. Chivington, just the reverse of what the boys wish."⁹ The day after the attacks began in Nebraska, the Journal said, "Col. Chivington can make five times the personal capital for Congress by protecting the Platte Route, than he can buy in stumping the territory with the Rev. Dr. King for state organization."¹⁰

Still, Evans suffered most. He was criticized for being an alarmist and damned for failure to take action to protect Colorado from the "Indian threat." Under pressure, he continued his letter writing campaign. Once fighting renewed on the Platte and returned to the Arkansas, he was desperate. On August 10, Evans appealed to the public through the Rocky Mountain News to defend themselves from the "merciless savages." He warned citizens not to kill "friendly Indians" as that would "only involve us in greater difficulty." He also wired Stanton, requesting permission to raise a cavalry regiment for one hundred days.¹¹ Byers added his opinion that "a few months of active extermination against the red devils will bring quiet and nothing else."¹²

The next day, August 11, Evans issued a second proclamation, this one authorizing citizens "to go in pursuit of all hostile Indians on the plains, scrupulously avoiding those who have responded to my call to rendezvous at the points indicated; also to kill and destroy as enemies of the country . . . all such hostile Indians. . . .”¹³ He also telegraphed Curtis again that day, begging that both Colorado regiments be returned to Colorado and that an additional five thousand men be deployed along the Platte and Arkansas routes. He wrote Curtis that the Indian alliance “is not undoubted,” and asked, “Would it not be well to defend the Overland Stage route at all hazards? This will give us the best protection for travel. . . .” George K. Otis, the superintendent of the Overland Stage Company, endorsed Evans’s letter.¹⁴ An exasperated Curtis responded to Evans, “I wish you would give me facts, so I may know of your disasters.”¹⁵ That generated more pleas from Evans, until Curtis lamented to his adjutant, on August 20, “Everything from Colorado is sensational [sic].”¹⁶

Curtis could only suggest that Evans use militia. But Evans’s pleas for permission to raise a one-hundred-day regiment, paid off. He received authority from Washington to raise the Third Colorado Cavalry for one-hundred-days service, and, on August 23, he issued his call for volunteers.¹⁷ When the rumor reached Denver that a force of Cheyennes, Arapahos, Kiowas, Comanches, and Apaches were gathering to attack the settlements, Evans wired Washington of “unlimited information of contemplated attack by a large body of Indians in a few days along the entire line of our settlements.”¹⁸ In response to increasing criticism, the Rocky Mountain News mounted a full-scale defense of Governor Evans’s actions, and on August 24, asked, “Shall we not go after them, their lodges, squaws, and all?”¹⁹ On September 1, President Lincoln reported to Curtis that he had met with Otis concerning the security of the Platte route and urged the general to have a “full conference with him on the subject.”²⁰

At that point, Denver businessmen demanded that Chivington declare martial law in the city, suspending civil authority, including the court system, as well as closing all businesses except for two hours a day. All men were ordered to enlist in some form of military service. Denver became an armed camp. The provost guard roamed the streets, and literally forced men to enlist in the new Third Regiment. Militia, as well as Thirdsters, drilled in the streets. Parties of men from outlying areas came and went as part of the enlistment process. The political opposition claimed that forced enlistment was used to influence the coming election and that the real reason for declaring martial law was to deliver statehood on the votes of the enlistees.²¹

Chivington reveled in his newfound power. Sam Tappan later recorded in his diary two incidents involving Chivington’s behavior during his “reign.” In the first, he said that Surveyor Case went to Chivington to request permission to leave town. Chivington told him to sit down, then tossed his pen on the desk and leaning back in his chair, said, “I believe I could run an empire.” The second incident occurred when Mr. Gove, a local locksmith asked permission to repair a lock for a customer who had come in from outside the city, assuring the commander that it would take only a few minutes. Chivington told him, “No, if you do a stitch of work I will put you in irons and stand you on the corner of the street as an example to this people.”²²

During this “craze,” Reverend John L. Dyer, Colorado’s “Snow-Shoe Itinerant,” arrived with mail from the camps to find citizens constructing a fort on the edge of town. He remembered, “I laughed at Colonel Chivington, and said to him that a few old squaws would upset the fort. He replied: ‘If you were not in the mail service, and made light of and discouraged our movements, you might find yourself in a calaboose.’”²³ Dyer passed the incident off as a joke, but the colonel’s response was consistent with other stories of his high-handed manner.

Chivington also seized five members of the Reynolds gang (Confederate guerillas) being held by U.S. Marshal A. C. Hunt, and put them into military confinement. They were supposed to be transferred to Fort Lyon for trial before a military commission. Escorted by troops from the new Third Colorado Cavalry, four days out of Denver, the prisoners were shot “while attempting to escape.” Chivington was accused of ordering the executions. He reportedly told bystanders later, “I told the guard when they left that if they did not kill those fellows, I would play thunder with them.”²⁴

These extreme measures shocked many. FitzJohn Porter, a Democrat and another business associate of Samuel Barlow, complained on August 27 to his friend, “We have been afflicted with imbecility in the management of civil affairs to such an extent that a tyro in military affairs, Col Chivington (the preacher and pretended soldier) aided by a few aspirants to political preference struck and suspended the functions of the Governor (Candidate for the Senatorial chair under the State organization) and of all civil process and law in Arrapaho [sic] county and threatened the same up here [Central City] if we, the people, did not furnish sufficient men for the one hundred day regiment in the U.S. Service in order to ensure his retention in service after the expiration of his enlisted term.” Porter said that rumors were common that “Chivington and his friends kept up their reports of indians to throw the governor into contempt and become candidate for the Senate himself, if we became a state.” He also said, “During all this time though Chivington had U.S. troops under him[,] he did not go himself or send a soldier to learn the truth of the reports. Most of the murdered and scalped have come into Denver surprised to hear that they and all in their vicinity had been wiped out.”

Nor did Evans escape Porter’s wrath. Porter said that during the excitement about the Indian assault on Denver, Evans was so frightened, he “took to a well and sent up in a bucket such official dispatches as ‘Maj. General Teller, Central City, The Indians have combined and are upon us. Our city is threatened with destruction and we with massacre. For God’s sake hurry down the noble mountain boys. We will defend our homes to the last drop of our blood. Hurry, hurry, we go to the intrenchments [sic].’ It is also said he got afflicted with too much water that night, and was confined to his bed or room as long as an indian [sic] was reported about.”²⁵ Porter was plainly an enemy of both Chivington and Evans and did report these things as rumors, but they are interesting to the extent that they suggest that Chivington and Evans were not acting in concert as most accounts have supposed.

Near the end of the campaign for statehood, Chivington told a crowd at Denver that his policy toward the Indians was to “kill and scalp all, little and big; that nits made lice.”²⁶ In an effort to defend himself against his enemies who accused him of doing too little, Evans began to publish his correspondence—months of it—in the Rocky Mountain News to prove that he had tried to get help for Colorado.²⁷ The declaration of martial law was an embarrassment for Governor Evans, and prospects were so grim for statehood that on September 2, Evans withdrew from the senatorial race, hoping that his withdrawal would save the measure. It did not. On September 13, 1864, statehood was soundly defeated, and Alan Bradford beat Chivington in the race for congressional delegate.²⁸ Both Chivington and Evans felt the sting. Chivington realized at that point that his positions as colonel and district commander were about to end, leaving him without any official position. Evans called the defeat “the greatest mortification of my life.”²⁹ The only consolation prize for either was that on September 19, Evans was able to announce that the Third Regiment was filled.

Even that was bittersweet because a dead calm had settled on the plains. Throughout the Department of Kansas, officers reported quiet. The Indians were gone from the overland routes. The last reported incident in Colorado occurred near Fort Lupton, on August 25, when a white herder was shot near Hall’s Ranch near Fort Lupton.³⁰ More importantly, the day before the Third was reported filled, Evans received a telegram from Major Wynkoop at Fort Lyon informing him that the Cheyennes and Arapahos had made an overture of peace. He told the governor that he had conferred with the tribes on the Smoky Hill, secured the release of four prisoners, and was escorting the chiefs to Denver to meet with him.³¹ Evans was mortified.

The next day, September 19, Chivington received a message from Wynkoop: “I start for Denver tomorrow with chiefs of Arapaho & Cheyenne Nations as well as four prisoners.”³² This was not good news for Chivington either. His term of enlistment was due to expire on September 23, although he would not leave command until he was officially relieved. His total troop strength had been reduced well below six hundred men, excepting the new one-hundred-day regiment, a frail reed to rely on for success. If he did not accomplish something in the uncertain time he had left, he would be left with nothing but the memory of Glorieta, poor comfort to an ambitious and egocentric man like Chivington.

His response to Wynkoop’s news was noteworthy. He immediately telegraphed Curtis, asking that ordnance bound for New Mexico be diverted to him for a campaign against “Indian warriors congregated eighty miles from Fort Lyon, 3,000 strong.”³³ Chivington used Wynkoop’s letter for its intelligence on the location of the main camps. He then wrote Curtis, “Winter approaches. Third Regiment is full, and they know they will be chastised for their outrages and now want peace. I hope the major-general will direct that they make full restitution and then go on their reserve and stay there.”³⁴ Ned Byers played the matter down in his paper, saying, “If the Arapahoes and Cheyennes do not want to participate in the war, all they have to do is to withdraw to their reservation where they will be protected and not molested.”³⁵

On September 27, Wynkoop arrived in Denver ahead of his command and went directly to Evans as Superintendent of Indian Affairs. Evans waffled. He told Wynkoop matters were out of his hand, and that the Indians needed to be punished more to insure peace. More than once he asked, “What will I do with the Third Regiment if I make peace?” He told Wynkoop, “The Third Regiment was raised to kill Indians, and kill Indians it must.”³⁶ But he could not refuse to meet the chiefs. The following day the News reported that Byers had met with Wynkoop as well, concluding, "we believe it is the part of prudence to compromise with the tribes named upon the terms which they propose. They have unquestionably had great provocation for hostilities, and were not the first to violate friendly relations."³⁷ The Weld Conference was held that afternoon.

As the Black Hawk Mining Journal reported, "The INDIAN COUNCIL amounted to this. Governor Evans shifted the responsibility onto Col. Chivington, and he shifted it onto Major Wynkoop."³⁸ The News was much more upbeat. Byers wrote, ". . . the council broke up with the belief that these chiefs will use their utmost power to induce their tribes to lay down their arms, a consummation devoutly to be hoped for." He also reminded readers that there were still enough Kiowas, Comanches, and Sioux at war "to satisfy the most ambitious."³⁹ Evans advised Colley, "this arrangement relieves the Indian bureau of their care until peace is declared with them. . . ." ⁴⁰ Yet, he had told the chiefs at Camp Weld that the first proclamation was still open to them. And, in his annual report to Dole, on October 15, he expressed his belief that the chiefs "were in earnest in their desire for peace, and offered to lay down their arms or to join the whites in the war against the other tribes of the plains." He added, though, "A peace before conquest, in this case, would be the most cruel kindness and the most barbarous humanity."⁴¹

General Curtis, without really knowing any of the details of Wynkoop's expedition, advised Chivington on September 28, 1864, the day of the conference, "I want no peace till the Indians suffer more. . . . No peace must be made without my instructions."⁴² Chivington showed this message to Wynkoop before the major departed for Lyon with the chiefs and his escort. Chivington saw it as the "waffle room" he needed; Wynkoop was more optimistic. When Wynkoop reached Lyon on October 8, he found two hundred Indians camped "fifteen miles from here."⁴³ Captain Silas Soule wrote Chivington with this happy report on October 10, and Wynkoop wrote a lengthy report to Curtis asking for his instructions the day that he returned. "I think that if some terms are made with these Indians that I can arrange matters so, by bringing their villages under my direct control that I can answer for their fidelity."⁴⁴ He sent the message to Curtis by special dispatch with a carefully briefed officer. Curtis, still focused on other matters, did not respond favorably. For one thing, he was angry that Wynkoop left his post in the District of the Upper Arkansas and carried the chiefs to meet with Evans and Chivington in the District of Colorado. For another, his knowledge was still limited, and he was convinced that Wynkoop misjudged his control of the situation.

He based this on an incident that occurred on September 23. After the chiefs left the Smoky Hill villages, three bands, including the people of Black Kettle, War Bonnet, and White Antelope moved southeast toward Fort Larned hoping to winter near Pawnee Forks, separating themselves from the Smoky Hill villages to wait on the outcome of the conference. Unfortunately, en route they ran into an expedition commanded by General Blunt. An advance unit, commanded by Major Scott Anthony, skirmished with a few warriors. Anthony charged a small camp and chased a few Cheyennes for several miles, when other Cheyennes from the villages showed up and encircled Anthony's troops. He took refuge on a knoll near Ash Creek, besieged by several hundred warriors. In the meantime, a party of Cheyennes and Arapahos en route to Fort Larned met Blunt's main force. Standing-in-the-Water rode right up to General Blunt and shook his hand. This party and Blunt's troops rode along together until they stumbled onto Anthony under siege. The Cheyennes and Arapahos broke away at a gallop, and Blunt charged to Anthony's aid. Blunt then pursued the warriors in the direction of the villages. They held Blunt back long enough for the villages to be evacuated and fought a holding action while the women and children escaped over the back trail toward the Smoky Hill.⁴⁵

The incident was unfortunate. Blunt was puzzled by the Indians' behavior even though he was unaware of Wynkoop's expedition. When he returned to headquarters, he found an order from Curtis waiting for him. "Pap" Price had crossed the Arkansas into Kansas. Blunt was ordered to meet this new challenge, as Curtis wheeled his army about to face the Confederates. This meant that Curtis had little time to think about Wynkoop's effort when he first learned of it, while Blunt's report convinced him that the Indians Blunt had confronted were the very bands Wynkoop claimed to control (which was true). The result was that Curtis told the frontier districts they would have to fend for themselves and decided that the Indians were asking for peace solely because winter was approaching. On the other hand, when the people who had fought Anthony and Blunt returned to the Smoky Hill encampment, the reports convinced many of the Cheyennes and Arapahos that the whites were not serious about wanting peace.⁴⁶

Another troubling result was that the Price campaign gave Chivington another chance. He would not be replaced as commander of the District of Colorado, and Curtis would not be looking over his shoulder. On October 10, the Third Colorado took first blood near Valley Station on the South Platte. The troops found a small encampment led by Big Wolf, a Cheyenne chief. Private Morse Coffin placed the dead at ten: four men, four women, and two babies. Sergeant Henry Blake said in his diary that they captured all ten—five men, three women, and two children—and then shot them all. Coffin wrote, “I strong denounced this part of the work, using cuss words.”⁴⁷ Chivington, however, was elated. He talked about moving against the Republican River camps, even requesting weapons from Wynkoop at Lyon on October 16.

The situation continued to erode the prospects for peace. The Price campaign led Curtis to replace General Blunt with Major B. S. Henning as commander of the District of the Upper Arkansas. Three days after Henning took command, he ordered Scott J. Anthony to assume command at Fort Lyon and send Wynkoop forward to Larned. Henning, anxious to prove himself, took a hard line against Wynkoop’s conduct and reported a variety of infractions at Lyon. While Wynkoop proceeded to defend himself with letters in his possession from officers at Fort Lyon and ranchers in the area, Anthony moved to set the house in order. Yet Henning continued to refer to the “Arapaho Indian prisoners” at Lyon, in his reports.⁴⁸

When troubles flared on the Overland Trail in July and August of 1864, both Chivington and Evans were criticized by newspapers in Nebraska and Utah for not doing more on the Platte route in Colorado. In Utah, the Union Vedette, a newspaper edited by Captain Charles Hempstead, who served on General Patrick Edward Connor’s staff, needled Chivington consistently through August. He suggested that if he could not keep the Platte route, General Connor, who had led the attack on the Shoshonis at Bear River the previous year, could. Hempstead was especially critical of the Camp Weld meeting, arguing that the overture of the Cheyennes and Arapahos should have been rejected out of hand. Despite the fact that he knew few details about the situation, he argued that the overture was a familiar game of suing for peace in the fall with plans to reopen hostilities in the spring.⁴⁹

One of the individuals who were hit particularly hard by the summer war on the Platte was Ben Holladay. He had eventually closed the Overland Stage Company. On October 3, 1864, the Alta California reported that over 70,000 letters and 180 sacks of newspapers from the eastern United States had been sent east, shipped south to the Isthmus of Panama and transported across to the Pacific side and shipped north to San Francisco. In mid-October, Holladay wired Secretary of War Stanton to urge a winter campaign under the command of General Connor, who had crushed the Shoshoni at Bear River in January 1863.⁵⁰ This resulted in a truly remarkable order from General Henry Halleck to Connor, ordering him to protect the overland route from Salt Lake City to Fort Kearney “without regard to departmental lines.” Halleck told Connor that his order did not alter command structure and that in joint operations, the senior officer would command.⁵¹ This led to a wire to Chivington on October 22, asking, “Can we get a fight out of the Indians this winter?” Connor also pointedly asked if Chivington would support the campaign, providing both troops and grain for his horses.⁵²

Chivington immediately wired Curtis on October 26 to ask if departmental lines had been changed and if he was to allow Connor to give directions in his district.⁵³ At the time, Curtis was fighting Price’s Confederates, so he made no immediate response. Chivington also began to move his troops further south, after Colonel Shoup reported that his scouts had found no sign in the direction of the Republican.⁵⁴ The Thirdsters were grumbling because of bad weather and inaction. On November 3, word reached Camp Elbert at Bijou Basin to prepare for active duty. Bad weather slowed the process, but on November 14, five of the six companies at Camp Elbert crossed the divide and headed for the Arkansas.⁵⁵

Chivington was already maneuvering. Connor had left for Denver with two companies of cavalry and Ben Holladay, immediately after wiring Chivington on October 22. On October 24, John Evans wired Connor, “[G]lad you are coming. . . . Bring all the force you can, then pursue, kill, and destroy them.”⁵⁶ Evans could see the earlier support of Otis paying off. The Rocky Mountain News was practically drooling over the prospect of Connor taking charge. Denver prepared for Connor’s arrival like he was a savior. However, heavy snows forced him to leave his escort at Fort Bridger and proceed to Denver by stagecoach with Holladay.

Connor arrived in Denver on November 14, the same day that the Third Regiment troops at Camp Elbert moved south toward the Arkansas. He was greeted enthusiastically. The First Colorado Regiment’s band serenaded him at the Planter’s House with Chivington and “a large assemblage” of citizens in attendance. The following day, the News observed, “Colorado will appreciate [Connor’s] mission. He comes here to take a look at the field and ascertain the feasibility of punishing the Indians on the Overland mail route.” He was described as “a fighter and a gentleman and a soldier to boot.” He was “a man who suits the genius of this West.” It concluded, “We congratulate Colorado on the accession of so superior an officer to our section of the prairie west.”⁵⁷

Evans met with Connor on November 15. It was a cordial meeting, and the governor certainly encouraged a campaign. Connor's business, however, was with Chivington. Evans had requested permission to visit Washington on October 18, but when he did not receive a response from Secretary of State William H. Seward, he decided to make the trip anyway. The particulars of any campaign he left to the military. On November 16, Governor Evans departed by stage for the East. He wrote later, "I had no intimation of the direction in which the campaign against the hostile Indians was to move, or against what bands it was to be made, when I left the Territory last fall. . . ." ⁵⁸

As late as November 19, the News said, "Should a winter campaign be deemed at all feasible, the General will organize an expedition to that end and at the proper time return to Denver and command in person." This was what Chivington feared. Unlike Evans, he was brusque and uncooperative with the "hero" of Bear River. He told Connor that he had plans of his own and refused to commit to the campaign Connor was planning. The day after Evans left, November 17, Chivington turned down the general's request for support. On November 20, he and his staff left Denver with a battalion of the First Colorado Cavalry to join the Thirdsters already gathering on the Arkansas under their regimental commander, Colonel George L. Shoup. ⁵⁹

An angry Connor reported to Halleck from Denver on November 21, complaining of district commanders [he had only met one] who "appear to be of the opinion that they can spare no troops for a Winter Campaign. . . ." He said that he could not attempt an expedition without greater authority, adding, "Any expedition which would not probably result in their signal chastisement would be productive of harm rather than good." He expressed hope that "an effective blow can be struck in time to prevent the renewed outrages which may be anticipated during the coming summer." ⁶⁰

Connor was skeptical of Chivington's expedition, and his analysis of the situation in Colorado was perceptive. Captain Hempstead explained in the Union Vedette:

In Denver there are no troops stationed, save a detachment for Provost Guard duty. The 1st Colorado is considerably scattered, but is being gathered in to be mustered out of service, the term of enlistment of most having expired. The 2nd Colorado is doing duty in Missouri & the 3^d (the hundred day men) are camped in Bijou Basin and about to start on an Indian hunt. As their term of service will expire on the 20th of December, they have but little time to win glory or do much in the way of finishing the savages. Col. Chivington, the Dist. Commander started a day or two since to command the expedition. ⁶¹

On November 23, Governor Evans wired General Curtis from Atchison, Kansas, asking if he could meet with him in Leavenworth. Curtis responded "at any hour." On November 24, they conferred and produced a remarkable body of paperwork. First, Curtis wrote a letter that urged Evans—in light of conditions and the possibility of "a winter campaign [Connor's] against the trespassers"—to press Washington for 2,000 cavalry (1,000 for the Platte and 1,000 for the Arkansas) with equipment and winter gear. He also urged Evans to make the argument that the overland routes were the "proper base lines" for operations. Both men were optimistic about success because of Lincoln's letter to Curtis. Then, Evans wired Secretary of War Stanton about the importance of a winter campaign. Curtis also pressed Stanton to support "the vision expressed by Gov. Evans." These messages were endorsed, the first by William Palmer Dole, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the second by John Palmer Usher, the secretary of the interior. Plainly, Evans and Curtis had designed a winter campaign of their own which could be coordinated with Connor's expected expedition. ⁶²

Chivington, by this time, was out of the loop. On November 24, he advised Curtis that "Indians attacked two trains below Fort Lyons. Killed 4 men, drove off 200 head of stock, will clear them out if possible in a few days." ⁶³ No one else ever mentioned this incident, which suggests that it was a ploy to justify his location. Everyone else was talking winter campaigns against the tribes. Chivington was pursuing a rogue course of his own and justifying his decision to leave his own district using reports of attacks on the Arkansas. At this point, even Evans had given up on Chivington. He had expected Chivington to cooperate with Connor and support a major expedition. Anything less would not serve Evans's purposes. The plan that Evans and Curtis were proposing would take weeks, if not months, to mount. A major campaign utilizing troops from Kansas, Nebraska, and Colorado, in coordination with Connor's drive from the west, was a grand design to open the overland routes and clear them of Indian resistance. Neither Evans nor Curtis was aware of Chivington's plan, already put in motion. Evans never wavered in his hard line in support of a major campaign.

Notably, Evans advised Stanton that "a portion of the tribes of the Arapahoes & Cheyenne Indians want peace and have gone to Fort Lyon under an armistice or some ar-agement of the kind with Maj Wynkoop.”⁶⁴ Later, after leaving Leavenworth, Evans confided in the editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate in Chicago that all of the Indians in Colorado were hostile except for about six hundred near Fort Lyon.⁶⁵

The situation at Fort Lyon had changed less than might have been expected with the change of command there. Expedience directed Major Anthony’s course. On November 16, well after Anthony told the chiefs to move to Sand Creek, he advised Curtis, “I am satisfied that all of the Arapahoes and Cheyennes who have visited this post desire peace.” He said that he told them he could not make peace until authorized by Curtis. He added, “My intention is to let matters remain dormant until troops can be sent out to take the field against all the tribes.”⁶⁶ On November 25, he told Major Henning that the Arapahos and Cheyennes were regularly inquiring about word from headquarters. He offered his opinion. “Yet if I had 1000 men here for the field I would after providing for a few Indians who have all the time been friendly . . . go out against the main band of Cheyennes & Sioux and try and recover the stolen stock and punish them for what they have done.”⁶⁷ Nevertheless, officials, both military and civilian, from top to bottom consistently referred to the people at Sand Creek as prisoners. Even Evans, in his annual report of October 15, reported to Dole that the Arapahos had “surrendered.”⁶⁸

Anthony received little help. Henning waited for Curtis, but on November 20, he told Anthony, “The way you have arranged with the Arapahoes . . . calling them prisoners will undoubtedly answer for them, but I would not have any more such prisoners and you must keep them all away from the Post.” Henning said that he expected that no permanent peace would be made until the tribes were subdued, but said that he did “not see that you could have done differently with them [the Arapahos].”⁶⁹ On December 2, after Sand Creek, but before he knew of it, Curtis finally told Henning that he was “entirely undecided and uncertain as to what can be done with such nominal Indian prisoners.”⁷⁰

On November 28, the day before Sand Creek, Curtis advised General Carleton of the situation, “They insist on peace or absolute sacrifice as I choose. Of course they will have to be received, but there remains some of these tribes and all of the Kiowas to attend to, and I have proposed a winter campaign for their benefit.”⁷¹ On December 5, 1864, Curtis even suggested that the Indians at Lyon “be located at some more convenient point for feeding them.”⁷² What is clear from all of this correspondence is that from the moment their chiefs left Denver, the Cheyennes and Arapahos at Fort Lyon, and later Sand Creek, were considered to be prisoners.

Chivington arrived at Boone’s Ranch on November 23, 1864, and prepared to move east along the Arkansas toward Fort Lyon. Only a “Bear River” style victory could save his future now. He pinned his hopes on the Third Colorado Regiment whose one hundred days of service were rapidly being used up, and on the Cheyenne and Arapaho bands that he knew were in the vicinity of Fort Lyon in response to promises he had made to them at Camp Weld.

When Chivington took command at Boonesville, an officer reported that it gave “pretty general dissatisfaction.”⁷³ Chivington proceeded east with the utmost secrecy in the direction of Fort Lyon, stopping all east-bound traffic that might warn the Cheyennes and Arapahos or Fort Lyon. On November 27, he dispatched detachments of troopers to the ranches of John Prowers and William Bent, both of whom had Cheyenne relatives, to prevent them from warning the Cheyennes.⁷⁴ At Spring Bottom that evening, a civilian overheard Chivington’s officers discussing scalps, and he swore later that Chivington said to them, “Well, I long to be wading in gore.”⁷⁵ The next day, Chivington’s troops encountered a patrol from Fort Lyon commanded by Captain Soule. Soule’s initial surprise at seeing his commander soon turned into trepidation as Chivington made inquiries about Indians in the vicinity. The temper of the conversation and the care Chivington took to keep Soule’s patrol with his command convinced Soule that the Indians encamped at Sand Creek were his target.⁷⁶

What surprised Chivington most was the resistance he found to the idea among the officers at Fort Lyon. Soule expressed his fears to other officers so forcefully that he was ordered to stay away from Chivington. However, several other officers protested so vehemently that he threatened them with arrest, screaming, “Damn any man in sympathy with Indians!”⁷⁷ Also present at Fort Lyon were Samuel Colley, the Indian agent, who added his protests, and Lieutenant Colonel Tappan, Chivington’s arch-enemy in the First Colorado Regiment, who was returning from a trip to Washington. He observed closely but kept silent.⁷⁸

Nevertheless, when Chivington’s column moved out on the evening of November 28, 1864, the Lyon Battalion was part of it.⁷⁹ Anthony told his officers that Chivington intended to strike at the heart of native resistance on the Smoky Hill. He told them that the object of moving against Sand Creek was to surround the camp, spare Black Kettle and the other “friendlies,” recover stolen stock, and kill any “raiders” that might be found there.⁸⁰ Of course, that was not what happened. It was never the real plan.

Chivington’s column of 675 men marched due north from Fort Lyon then, turning northeast, continued through the cold, clear night until, near dawn, they struck the Great South Bend of Sand Creek. A supply train of 115 wagons pursued a different course, marching northeast from Fort Lyon to the junction of Rush Creek and Sand Creek well below the South Bend. It was a bone-cold night, starlit and clear. At first light, the troops were ordered forward at a gallop, causing some of them to yell at each other that this was a hell of a way to surprise an Indian camp. For nearly two miles they rode, closing up the ranks, then reined up sharply on command.⁸¹

Ahead of them, Colonel Chivington, unmistakable by his size, with his staff and scouts, scanned the flats beyond from a point where the bluffs slipped down to the level of the creek bed. In the distance, the lodges of the Cheyennes and Arapahos hugged the north bank of Sand Creek, white like splotches of snow in the half-light of dawn. The column strung out, still unable to see the camps because of the bluffs to the west. From their position, the advance troops could see that the camp was already awake. Smoke curled up from the first cooking fires.⁸²

Women, their morning chores interrupted by the noise of the moving column and initially uncertain whether it was a buffalo herd or white soldiers, raised the alarm, and men, women, and children stumbled out of their lodges in confusion. There were no sentries. Horse herds above and below the camps had not been kept close to the village as they would have been had the people expected an attack. Kingfisher, a young Cheyenne up early to check on the horses, saw soldiers first driving off horses on the bluffs south of the camp. He encountered Little Bear, who was on the bluffs to drive his own horses closer to the village. Kingfisher told him what he had seen, and Little Bear could see the long line of troops positioned southeast of the village and sprinted back toward the camp to raise the warning.⁸³ Other young people scrambled to reach the horses at the first alarm, while the majority of the people were still in a state of confusion about what was happening. Standing-in-the-Water, White Antelope, War Bonnet, and Lone Bear moved toward the east end of the village and strained to see what was happening.

Black Kettle, the Cheyenne peacemaker, tried to calm his people. Still the believer, he called out to them not to be afraid, that the soldiers would not harm them. Many listened to him, gathering around him as the troops approached, watching as he raised an American flag over his lodge with a white flag beneath it hoping he was right. A few of the few men who were there were shouting to one another, gathering their weapons, and urging the women and children to move up the creek away from the soldiers’ advance. But mostly, confused by the circumstances, the Cheyennes and Arapahos lingered too long in their uncertainty, held in place by promises plainly broken, until the soldiers opened fire.

After Chivington had given his initial instructions to battalion commanders about the attack, he addressed the troops, “I shall not tell you who to kill today, but remember our murdered women and children whose blood saturates the sands of the Platte!”⁸⁴ Now, it was clear to the officers of the Lyon battalion that Chivington had never intended to spare anyone. Then the two battalions of the First Regiment moved toward the village three-quarters of a mile away while elements of the Third advanced along the bluffs south of the creek to cut off the horse herds. As the First moved into the valley, Captain Luther Wilson’s battalion crossed in front of Anthony’s Lyon battalion and drove northwest at a gallop to cut off the village from yet more horses north of the village. Anthony’s battalion cantered in good order toward the camps, disciplined and eerily quiet, even its commander, the dour Major Anthony swearing that he would not “open the ball.”⁸⁵

As the young ones clambered up the bluffs to reach the horses, they saw soldiers there too, a company of the Third Regiment racing along the bluffs to separate the horses from the village. As they turned back toward the village, the young people could see Wilson’s troops slashing between the camp and the horses on the north side then swinging abruptly toward the lodges.⁸⁶ They were the first to open fire. Behind Major Anthony, the bulk of the Third regiment pressed forward, fearful of being left out of the fight. The companies of Soule and Cramer were soon under fire from the rear, and they bolted to the left and moved up the south bank between the creek and the bluffs to get out of the way of the Third. By then, the Thirdsters on the bluffs were turning toward the camp and creating a cross fire in the village.⁸⁷

Chivington and his staff followed with the artillery batteries close behind Anthony’s troops. Now the mountain howitzers of the First Colorado’s battery fired shells that exploded high above the lodges (likely by design), followed by a second barrage that screamed into the lower end of the village. Fragments of hot iron tore through the lodge skins, and the people began to run. Black Kettle stared in disbelief, then turned to follow his fleeing people through the village toward the creek bed. Beside him, his wife fell from a soldier's bullet. Thinking her dead, he hurried on, shouting directions and encouraging the people. In the soft sand of the creek bed, it was hard to run.⁸⁸

Old White Antelope, betrayed once too often, refused to flee even then. He ran toward the troops waving his hands and crying out in English, "Stop! Stop!" As rifle balls kicked up the dirt around him, he stopped and began to sing:

Nothing lives long.
Only the earth and mountains . . .

A rifle ball struck him as he stood there. And then another. He pitched backward into the dry creek bottom, dead.⁸⁹ Also killed in the early moments of the attack were Standing-in-the-Water and War Bonnet, who with Lean Bear had gone to Washington the year before, dead at the hands of the soldiers they thought would protect them. Lone Bear (One Eye) fell trying to stop the fighting. Three white men in the village trading—a trader, the agency interpreter, and a soldier from Fort Lyon—tried to stop the attack, but they were driven back under fire to War Bonnet's lodge.⁹⁰

A day of slaughter had begun.

Although a few Cheyenne and Arapaho warriors fought fiercely, it was not a battle. The number of men of fighting age in the village was limited, and, cut off from their horses, were in no position to put up a substantial resistance. Twenty to thirty men led by Big Head offered the only real organized resistance of the day, attempting first to reach the horse herds and then resisting deployment of troops on the left flank. Most of them were killed because of overwhelming numbers. Another small group of mounted warriors that included Howling Wolf skirmished with Thirdsters northwest of the camp, then withdrew to provide protection for the fleeing people. For the most part, the fighting men struggled on foot to protect fleeing women, children, and the old as they hastily dug sand pits or tried to defend others on the open prairie beyond.⁹¹ The heaviest fighting took place in the pits. The killing spread over miles before the day was over, but, except for the two battalions of the First Colorado Cavalry, most of the troops—the inexperienced Third Regiment—were more a mob than a military command. They had, one of them said, "burst on the camp like so many wild fellows."⁹²

Little Bear recalled, "The people were all running up the creek; the soldiers sat on their horses, lined up on both banks and firing into the camps, but they soon saw that the lodges were now nearly empty, so they began to advance up the creek, firing on the fleeing people."⁹³ It was then that the people began to hide in the creek bed, digging in and creating pits. The killing was heavy, but the defense was strong enough that the Thirdsters did not make a concentrated attack. Later, the Third's howitzers were brought up and fired into the pits until they ran out of shells, and the troops assumed that the slaughter was complete. In fact, a surprising number of people survived the shelling.⁹⁴ By then, the majority of the Third Regiment was scattered, Irving Howbert recalling, "after that we fought in little groups wherever it seemed the most effective work could be done."⁹⁵

Some of the women tried to surrender. As Robert Bent testified later, "I saw five squaws under a bank for shelter. When the troops came up to them they ran out and showed their persons to let the soldiers know they were squaws and begged for mercy, but the soldiers shot them all."⁹⁶ On another part of the field, a child barely old enough to walk toddled across the sand. Major Anthony said, "I saw one man get off his horse . . . and draw up his rifle and fire—he missed the child. Another man came up and said, 'Let me try the son of a bitch; I can hit him.' He got down off his horse, kneeled down and fired at the little child, but he missed him. A third man came up and made a similar remark, and fired, and the little fellow dropped."⁹⁷

The killing continued into the afternoon. "I never saw more bravery displayed by any set of people on the face of the earth than by these Indians," one officer reported. "They charged on the whole company singly, determined to kill someone before being killed themselves. . . . We, of course, took no prisoners."⁹⁸ Eventually most of the soldiers lost interest or ran out of ammunition and turned their attention to robbing and mutilating the dead. When two members of the Third Regiment brought in a woman and a child, their commander told them, "Take no prisoners." The woman turned her back to the soldiers and she and the child were killed.⁹⁹ Another officer "shot and killed three women and five children, afterwards scalping the women."¹⁰⁰

Scalping and more extensive mutilation of the dead continued. Soldiers cut off ears and fingers and the genitals of both men and women. One pregnant woman was slashed open and her unborn child cut from the womb. The body of White Antelope was extensively mutilated. He was scalped several times, his ears were taken, and his scrotum cut off to make a tobacco pouch. Men and women who feigned death or lay wounded tried to defend themselves when the scalpers came, but they could not. When night fell, some of the Cheyennes and Arapahos who had hidden in the sand or in other places slipped out and began to make their way north toward the Smoky Hill.¹⁰¹

The most remarkable thing of the day was that so many of the Cheyennes and Arapahos escaped; nearly two-thirds of the encampment managed to survive despite the assault and the flight into freezing weather, half-clothed and virtually unarmed.¹⁰² A disciplined force could have taken a much heavier toll. Several soldiers were killed by friendly fire. Others were caught separated from their fellows and killed. That evening, however, Colonel Chivington wrote his first report claiming to have bested “from nine hundred to one thousand warriors.”¹⁰³

The next day, the atrocities continued. One officer, collecting trophies, found a baby still alive and blew out its brains.¹⁰⁴ Some of the worst atrocities occurred that next day. In the afternoon, the half-Cheyenne son of John Smith, the interpreter, was murdered by soldiers, who later dragged his body around on the killing ground.¹⁰⁵ Charles Bent’s life had been spared only because Captain Silas Soule took him with him when he was sent to the wagon train south of the command for more supplies.¹⁰⁶ The troops slept on the field again that night, and when the troops pulled out the following morning, a small group of women and children were left behind and killed by the rear guard.¹⁰⁷

It was by then a seriously divided command. The companies of Silas Soule and Joseph Cramer had refused to participate in the fight. One of the men of the First Colorado’s battery under Lieutenant Baldwin said later that his group was so angry that they were ready to take on the Thirdsters because of what happened. He even said that he was surprised Chivington survived the fight because of the animus against him.¹⁰⁸ Even some members of the Third were shocked by what had happened, one man, at least, simply refusing to participate further.¹⁰⁹ The only prisoners were the wives of white traders John Smith and Charlie Windsor at Fort Lyon, two young Cheyenne girls, and an Arapaho boy, who were later displayed as trophies in Denver. A few other children may have survived; later reminiscences said that small groups or individuals had taken children prisoner and refused to kill them. They were spirited away and not taken to Denver.¹¹⁰

Colonel Chivington had promised an extended campaign, but after Sand Creek, he turned southeast, away from the concentration of Cheyennes and Arapahos, ostensibly in pursuit of Little Raven’s Arapahos down the Arkansas. This too angered the troops of the Lyon Battalion, including Major Anthony. Five days later without ever seeing an Arapaho, Chivington called an end to his expedition. Notably, Chivington hurried ahead of the column, as he had done in New Mexico, paused briefly at Fort Lyon where he boastfully compared himself to Harney and Connor and quickly departed by stage for Denver, leaving Colonel George Shoup to bring up the Third Regiment. The Third, weighed down with booty, followed.¹¹¹

At Fort Lyon, the officers of the First were still infuriated over what had happened. And in the villages of the Cheyennes and Arapahos on the Smoky Hill the anger swelled as the survivors told their stories of what had happened at Sand Creek. They had lost about 230 people there, but between two-thirds and three-fourths of them were women and children. Thirteen council chiefs and four soldier chiefs of the Cheyennes were also among the dead. Left Hand, the great voice for peace among the Arapahos, was mortally wounded, and died later on the Smoky Hill. Bosse and Heap of Buffalos, who had attended the Camp Weld meeting, were killed. Close to two hundred men, women, and children were wounded.¹¹² Although a majority of the villagers escaped, it was a devastating blow. The camp was a chiefs’ camp, a test case of the white man’s intent. Now the tribes had their answer.

Notes: Chapter VIII

1. Ronald Becher, Massacre Along the Medicine Road: A Social History of the Indian War of 1864 in Nebraska Territory (Caldwell, ID: Caxton Press, 1999) is a detailed accounting of the August war in Nebraska. See also Leroy W. Hagerty, “Indian Raids Along the Platte and Little Blue Rivers, 1864-1865,” Nebraska History, XX-VIII (1947): 176-186, 239-260.

2. Chivington to Curtis, August 8, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 128.

3. Evans to Curtis, August 8, 1864, Indian Letter Book.

4. Bent, Life of Bent, p. 140. Halaas and Masich, Halfbreed, pp. 126-127, underscore Bent’s conviction that the conflict had entered a new phase with the August assaults on the Platte. For the first time, Cheyennes had joined their allies, the Lakota and Arapahos in an “indiscriminate war against whites,” rather than retaliatory attacks for past wrongs or for plunder.

5. Joseph Kenyon to Samuel L. Barlow, August 8, 1864, Samuel Barlow Collection, Huntington Library, San Marino, California.

6. Kenyon to Barlow, August 12, 1864, Barlow Collection.

7. Black Hawk Mining Journal, August 15, 1864.

8. The Reverend Charles King was a charter member of the conference. He would later be removed because of rumors “which seriously affect his moral & ministerial standing & character.” In 1870,

- the conference accepted his withdrawal from the church. Graveley, "The Early Colorado Conference," p. 62.
9. Ibid., July 29, 1864, quoting a letter from Fort Lyon, dated July 19, 1864.
10. Ibid., August 8, 1864.
11. Evans to Stanton, August 10, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 644.
12. DRMN, August 10, 1864.
13. AR, CIA, 1864, pp. 230-231.
14. Evans to Curtis, August 11, 1864, with endorsement of George K. Otis, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 661.
15. Curtis to Evans, August 11, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 139.
16. Curtis to Charlot, August 20, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 165.
17. Raymond G. Carey, "The 'Bloodless Third' Regiment, Colorado Volunteer Cavalry," Colorado Magazine, XLI (1964): 279-298; Lonnie J. White, "From Bloodless to Bloody: The Third Colorado Cavalry and the Sand Creek Massacre," Journal of the West, VI (1967): 535-581.
18. Evans to Stanton, August 22, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 809.
19. On August 23, 1864, the Rocky Mountain News launched its defense of Evans. It also indicated the extent of local fears when it observed, "We believe the Utes are friendly disposed just now. So were the Arapahoes and Cheyennes a little while ago. None of them are to be trusted."
20. Lincoln to Curtis, September 1, 1864, Roy P. Basler, editor, The Collected Works of Abraham Lincoln. Nine Volumes (New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 1953): VII, 530.
21. DRMN, August 23, 24, 1864; Fitzjohn Porter to Barlow, August 27, 1864, Barlow Papers.
22. Tappan Diary, pp. 61, 68.
23. Dyer, Snow-Shoe Itinerant, p. 182.
24. Special Order No. 71, August 22, 1864, Special Order No. 76, August 29, 1864, District of Colorado, United States Army Commands, NARA, RG 393; Chivington to Curtis, August 23, 1864, Curtis Papers, X, 185; Curtis to Chivington August 24, 1864, Browne to Curtis, October 3, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 843, Pt. 3, 596-597. On August 25, Curtis informed Chivington that in such cases "the final determination should be according to law which requires a review by [the] Department Commander, Curtis Papers, X, 198. See also Kenneth E. Englert, "Raids by Reynolds," 1956 Brand Book of the Denver Westerners. Edited by Charles S. Ryland (Boulder, CO: Johnson Publishing Company, 1957), pp. 151-168; Hoig, Sand Creek, pp. 70-72; Shaw, True History, pp. 39-47; Frank Hall, History of the State of Colorado. Four Volumes (Chicago: Blakeley Printing Company, 1889-1895): I, 313-316; Journal of John L. Dailey, 1864, September 5, 1864, p. 9, Western History Collection, Denver Public Library, Denver, Colorado; testimony of Joseph A. Cramer and T. G. Cree, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 51, 191.
25. Porter to Barlow, August 27, 1864, Barlow Papers.
26. Testimony of Samuel E. Browne, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 71.
27. DRMN, August 25, 26, 1864.
28. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 158-159.
29. Evans to John Palmer Usher, September 23, 1864, Abraham Lincoln Papers, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress, Washington, DC, Microfilm Reel No. 82.
30. DWMN, August 31, 1864; Janet LeCompte, "The Indian War in Colorado—1864," Unpublished list in the papers of Gary L. Roberts.
31. Wynkoop to Evans, September 18, 1864, AR, CIA, 1864, pp. 233-235. Wynkoop's mission was a bold effort, perhaps even foolhardy and questionable by military standards. His own account, written in 1876, is vital. See Edward W. Wynkoop, The Tall Chief: The Autobiography of Edward W. Wynkoop. Edited by Christopher B. Gerboth (Denver: Colorado Historical Society, 1993), pp. 86-100. His account of his conference with the chiefs on the Smoky Hill is especially important for its insights.
32. Wynkoop to Chivington, September 19, 1864, LR, DK, USAC, NARA, RG 393. At the time of the Weld Conference Wynkoop was regarded as one of Chivington's favorites; after Sand Creek Wynkoop would become one of his harshest critics.
33. Chivington to Curtis, September 19, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 3, 261.
34. Chivington to Curtis, September 26, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 3, 399.
35. DRMN, September 28, 1864.
36. Testimony of Wynkoop, Condition of the Indian Tribes, p. 77.
37. DRMN, September 28, 1864.
38. Black Hawk Mining Journal, October 1, 1864.
39. DRMN, September 29, 1864.
40. Evans to Colley, September 29, 1864, AR, CIA, 1864, pp. 220-221.
41. Report of Evans, in ibid., p. 222.
42. Curtis to Chivington, September 28, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 2, 462.
43. Wynkoop to Curtis, October 8, 1864, LR, DK, AGO, NARA, RG 94.
44. Ibid.; Soule to Chivington, October 10, 1864, LR, DC, USAC, NARA, RG 393.
45. Bent to Hyde, September 26, 1905, April 2, 1906 (quoting Wolf Robe), January 29, 1913, Bent-Hyde Correspondence, Yale; Bent to Hyde, October 15, 1904, Bent Letters, HC; Hyde, Life of Bent,

- pp. 143-144; Blunt to Charlot, September 29, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 1, 818.
46. Evans to Curtis, September 29, 1864, Curtis to Evans, September 29, 1864, Curtis to O'Brian, September 29, 1864, Curtis to Mitchell, October 2, 1864, Curtis to Chivington, October 2, 1864, Curtis to Livingston, October 2, 1864, Curtis to Chivington, October 3, 1864, Curtis Papers, XI, 73, 74, 75, 79, 87, 89, 90. Volume XIII of the Curtis Papers is devoted entirely to the Price Campaign. See also Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 288-289.
47. Morse H. Coffin, The Battle of Sand Creek. Edited by Alan W. Farley (Waco, TX: W. M. Morrison, Publisher, 1965), pp. 5-9; Entry for October 10, 1864, Diary of Sergeant Henry Blake, 1864, A. A. Paddock Collection, Boulder, Colorado. See also, a photocopy of Blake's diary in the Raymond G. Carey Collection, University of Denver, Denver, Colorado. Blake's diary was also published in the Boulder Daily Camera, August 2, 1941. Nichols to Shoup, October 10, 1864, DRMN, October 10, 1864; Nichols to Chivington, October 11, 1864, Chivington to Nichols, October 14, 1864, Chivington to Curtis, October 15, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 3, 798-799, 876, 883.
48. Testimony of Wynkoop, Cramer, et al to Wynkoop, November 25, 1864, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 91-92, 95; testimony of Wynkoop, Condition of Indian Tribes, pp. 75-77; Henny to Anthony, October 17, 1864, SO No. 4, DUA, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 4, 62; Anthony to AAG, DUA, November 6, 1864, "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," pp. 70-71; J. E. Anthony, AAG, to Anthony, Henning to Anthony, November 4, 6, 20, 1864, Tappan to Anthony, November 22, 1864, FF2, No. 1, No. 2, No. 3, No. 4, No. 5, Scott J. Anthony Papers, History Colorado, Denver, Colorado. Anthony to AAG, DUA, November 25, 1864; RLR, DUA, DM, Vol. 359, pp. 62-63, USAC, NARA, RG, 393.
49. Camp Douglas (Utah) Daily Union Vedette, August 31, September 27, 1864. Captain Charles Hempstead of Connor's staff was the editor. Raymond G. Carey, "Colonel Chivington, Brigadier General Connor, and Sand Creek," 1960 Brand Book of the Denver Westerners. Edited by Guy M. Herstrom (Boulder: The Johnson Publishing Company, 1961), pp. 105-136, deserves credit for recognizing the importance of the Chivington-Connor connection.
50. Holladay to Stanton, October 15, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 3, 768.
51. Halleck to Connor, October 15, 1864, Connor to Halleck, October 17, 1864, Halleck to Connor, October 18, 1864, OR, L, Pt. 2, 1013-1015.
52. Connor to Chivington, October 22, 1864, OR, XLI, Pt. 3, 259.
53. Chivington to Curtis, October 26, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 4, 259.
54. Shoup to Chivington, October 24, 1864, LR, DK, USAC, NARA, RG 393.
55. Carey, "Bloodless Third," pp. 295-297.
56. Evans to Connor, October 24, 1864, OR, Series I, L, Pt. 2, 1036.
57. DRMN, November 16, 1864; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 151-152, 303n.
58. John Evans, Reply of John Evans of the Territory of Colorado to that Part Referring to Him, of the Report of "the Committee on the Conduct of the War," Headed "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians" (Denver: n. p. 1865). The Reply was published in the Denver Daily Rocky Mountain News, September 12, 1865, Black Hawk Mining Journal, September 11, 1865, Central City Miners' Register, September 12, 1865. It was also published in Condition of the Indian Tribes, from which the quote is taken at p. 83. Evans made the same point at least three times in his Reply. He was anxious to distance himself from Chivington and Sand Creek.
59. Carey, "Chivington, Connor, and Sand Creek," pp. 125-132; Carey, "Bloodless Third," pp. 295-297. Chivington would later claim in "The Pet Lambs," May 18, 1890, that Connor pressed him about the location of the Indians he was after, but that he refused to tell him. "But I won't tell anybody," Connor supposedly protested, to which Chivington replied, "I will bet you don't."
60. Connor to Halleck, November 21, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 1, 908-910.
61. Daily Union Vedette, November 21, 1864. The Rocky Mountain News, November 19, 1864, expressed the view that if a winter campaign was found to be feasible, Connor would organize an expedition and "at the proper time" return to command it himself.
62. Evans to Curtis, November 23, 1864, Curtis to Evans, November 23, 1864, Curtis to Evans, November 24, 1864, Curtis Papers, XII, 242, 253, 258; Evans to Stanton, November 24, Curtis to Evans, November 24, 1864, LR, DM, 1865, C115 (Box 17), USAC, NARA, RG 393; Report of Evans, AR, CIA, 1864, p. 220; Lincoln to Curtis, September 1, 1864, Collected Works, Lincoln, VII, 530.
63. Chivington to Curtis, November 23, 1864, Curtis Papers, XII, 238.
64. Evans to Stanton, November 24, 1864, RLR, DUA, DM, Vol. 359 (October 1864-September 1865), pp. 62-63, USAC, NARA, RG 393.
65. Northwestern Christian Advocate, December 7, 1864.
66. Anthony to Curtis, November 16, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 1, 914.
67. Anthony to AAG, DUA, November 25, 1864, RLR, DUA, DM, Vol. 359, pp. 62-63, USAC, NARA, RG 393.
68. Report of Evans, AR, CIA, 1864, p. 220.
69. Henning to Anthony, November 20, 1864, Scott J. Anthony Papers, FF-2, No. 3, History Colorado.
70. Curtis to Henning, December 2, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 4, 751.
71. Curtis to Carleton, November 28, 1864, ibid., p. 709.
72. Curtis to Evans, December 5, 1864, ibid., pp. 771-772.

73. Lynn L. Perrigo, editor, "Major Hal Sayr's Diary of the Sand Creek Campaign," Colorado Magazine, XV (1938): 54. David H. Nichols interview, Box 2, Bancroft Collection, Historical Collections, University of Colorado, Boulder. Nichols said that Chivington was "justly unpopular with the soldiers."
74. A good summary of the march of the Third Colorado Regiment from Bijou Basin to Sand Creek is found in the letters of "W," published in the Central City Miners' Register, November 23, 26, 28, 1864. See also the testimony of John Prowers, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 107; Amy (Amache) Prowers interview, July 19, 1886, MSS P-L 198, Bancroft Collection; and Coffin, Battle of Sand Creek, pp. 15-17.
75. Testimony of J. M. Combs, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 115.
76. Testimony of Soule, ibid., p. 10.
77. Testimony of Soule, Cramer, Anthony, Lt. James D. Cannon, Lt. C. M. Cossitt, Lt. W. P. Minton, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 13, 21, 46-48, 110, 147-153.
78. Samuel F. Tappan, unpublished autobiography. Kansas State Historical Society. Topeka, Kansas, p. 14.
79. Portions of five battalions were involved; none of them were at full strength.
80. Testimony of Cramer, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 41. Anthony would confirm that he was misled by Chivington.
81. Coffin, Battle of Sand Creek, pp. 18-19; "W" to editor, Central City Miners' Register, January 4, 1864.
82. Bent to Hyde, March 9, March 15, 1905, April 2, 14, 25, 30, 1906, August 2, 1913, October 23, November 7, 1914, January 20, 1915, Bent-Hyde Correspondence, Yale.
83. Statement of Little Bear, Hyde, Life of Bent, pp. 153-154.
84. Testimony of Lt. James Cannon, James Beckwourth, A. J. Gill, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 68, 112, 179; testimony of Robert Bent, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 96; DRMN, December 25, 1864; Coffin, Battle of Sand Creek, p. 19
85. Testimony of Cramer, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 48.
86. Testimony of Luther Wilson, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 67.
87. Testimony of Soule and Cramer, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 13-14, 48-49.
88. Hyde, Life of Bent, p. 152.
89. Testimony of Beckwourth and David Louderback, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 70, 137, 140.
90. Testimony of Louderback, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 135; Watt Clark, Denver Times, April 7, 1916.
91. Hyde, Life of Bent, pp. 152-154.
92. Andrew J. Templeton, "Life and Reminiscences of Andrew J. Templeton," unpublished manuscript, Pioneers Museum, Colorado Springs, Colorado.
93. Hyde, Life of Bent, pp. 152-153.
94. Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 301-305.
95. Howbert, Memories of a Lifetime, p. 125.
96. Testimony of Robert Bent, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 96.
97. Testimony of Anthony, "Massacre of the Cheyenne Indians," p. 26.
98. Scott Anthony to Webb Anthony, December 1, 1864, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 92.
99. Coffin, Battle of Sand Creek, p. 29.
100. Affidavit of Lt. Joseph Olney, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 61; Private George M. Roan, Sergeant Lucian Palmer, and Corporal James J. Adams, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 143, 145, 150, 151.
101. Hyde, Life of Bent, pp. 156-158.
102. Ibid., pp. 157-159.
103. Chivington to Curtis, November 29, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 1, 948-950.
104. Testimony of Roan, Palmer, Adams, and James, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 142-146, 150-152; testimony of Miksch, Condition of Indian Tribes, pp. 74-75; Perrigo, "Sayr's Diary," p. 55.
105. Testimony of Smith and Anthony, "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," pp. 10, 22-23; testimony of Beckwourth and Louderback, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 71, 136; Coffin, Battle of Sand Creek, p. 28.
106. Testimony of Soule, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 28.
107. James E. DuBois in ibid., pp. 37-38.
108. Isaac Clarke, "Life of Isaac Clarke," pp. 40-43, Special Collections, Colorado College, Colorado Springs.
109. Chet and Kim Brackett, Chet's Reflections: Into the Sagebrush Sea (Privately Printed, 2014), 19-20.
110. Anthony to Lt. A. Hallowell, AAAG, District of Upper Arkansas, December 2, 1864, Curtis Papers, XII, 282; Dailey Diary, pp. 71-72.
111. Dailey Diary, pp. 72-74; Shoup to Maynard, December 6, 1864, Shoup to Chivington, December 7, 1864, "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," pp. 50-51; Anthony to his brother, December 28, 1864, Anthony Papers, FF-2, No 6, HC.
112. These figures are based upon an analysis in progress, taking into account, the reports of George Bent, Edmond Guerrier, the records of killed and wounded from military sources, and Cheyenne and Arapaho genealogies from multiple sources.

Chapter IX

Protest and Recrimination

“Among the feats of arms in Indian warfare, the recent campaign of our Colorado Volunteers will stand in history with few rivals, and none to exceed it in final results,” proclaimed the Denver Rocky Mountain News when the first reports of the Sand Creek campaign reached Denver early in December 1864.¹ The Central City Miners’ Register added, “The good work is begun, and we hope no respite will be given to the savage till at least four thousand of them have been killed. The true policy is to give them no quarter, but to kill male and female, old and young, that none may be left to tell the tale.”² And even the Black Hawk Mining Journal, which had been critical of both Chivington and Evans, declared, “It is impossible to exaggerate the value of this occurrence to Colorado. It is the dawn of a new era, indeed, the rising of a new sun for the Territory.”³

This was the theme reflected in the reports of the expedition’s commander, Colonel John Milton Chivington, and his subalterns, who plainly saw themselves as heroes. Chivington called the Sand Creek affair, “the most bloody and hardfought Indian battle that has ever occurred on these plains.”⁴ In the spirit of the moment, Captain Theodore G. Cree, an officer of the Third Colorado Regiment, exulted that the men of the Third Colorado Volunteer Cavalry had “won for themselves a name that will be remembered for ages to come.”⁵ He could not have imagined the irony of his statement at the time. At the moment, he celebrated, and the citizens of Colorado—most of them—celebrated too.

Chivington had achieved his purpose, and now he meant to make the most of it. But his design was already in trouble. The first dispatches about Sand Creek reached Denver on December 7, the same day that Chivington ended his “expedition.” Two days later, Stephen Selwyn Harding, the chief justice of Colorado, penned a letter to John W. Wright, a former agent of the Indian Office and friend of John Palmer Usher, the Secretary of the Interior, declaring that he had received evidence that would prove that the Sand Creek attack “on the defenseless savages was one of the most monstrous in history.”⁶ Clearly the official dispatches were not the only reports to reach Denver quickly.

Judge Harding had enjoyed a decent reputation in Colorado until August 1864, when the courts, forced to settle jurisdictional disputes in criminal cases, had reopened the question of Indian land title, by declaring all lands north and west of the South Platte to be legally Indian lands. The court’s decisions made him a target of the statehood movement, which claimed that the decisions were politically motivated. The courts’ rulings were even blamed for causing the summer war with the Indians.

The person who contacted Harding about Sand Creek was never identified, but the chain of correspondence suggests that it may have been one of the interested civilians at Fort Lyon. Harding knew Samuel Colley, the Indian agent for the Cheyennes and Arapahos, and Dexter Colley, the agent’s son, who was in business with John Smith as traders at Fort Lyon. All of them had made it clear that they would do their best to bring Chivington down for what he had done.

Colley was close to the commissioner of Indian affairs, William Palmer Dole, and took steps to inform him about Sand Creek at once. He also wrote letters to John Palmer Usher, the secretary of the interior, and to Senator James Rood Doolittle, the chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee. Harding’s task was to reinforce these efforts where he had the most influence. John W. Wright was the conduit for this effort.

Wright had close ties to Usher, as well as reasons to be interested in the controversy. Wright had been the government contractor who had surveyed the Sand Creek reserve in 1863. He had become a bitter critic of Governor Evans’s management of Indian affairs and was closely aligned with the Colleys at Fort Lyon. By December 1864, Wright was in Washington pursuing other opportunities and well-placed to act as an agent against Chivington. Harding was the logical man to make the contact because both he and Wright were from Indiana and had moved in the same political circles. Moreover, Harding’s son had accompanied Wright to Lyon when the surveys were made in 1863.⁷

Chivington reached Denver on December 13, 1864. Two days later, he requested permission to visit department headquarters to discuss Indian matters. On December 16, he wrote yet another report of the Sand Creek fight for General Curtis, in which he lobbied for another campaign. Mysteriously, though, just four days later, on December 20, he requested that Curtis relieve him of command.⁸

On December 16, the same day that Chivington wrote his detailed report, an unidentified officer wrote a letter about Sand Creek from Denver to General John P. Slough, Chivington's old enemy, who was then the military governor at Alexandria, Virginia, hoping "to counteract any good impression that may have been made in Washington by the report of Chiv's pretended fight with the Indians. . . ." He advised Slough that Chivington had "butchered about 200. 40 warriors the balance Squaws and papooses."⁹

The officer in question could not have been an officer of the Lyon Battalion. The officers at Fort Lyon were busy, however. On December 10, 1864, Lieutenant Colonel Tappan had expressed concern for the safety of William Bent and the Indians at his ranch. Accordingly, Major Anthony ordered Lieutenant Cramer to proceed to Bent's Ranch to protect the people there. When Cramer arrived, he relieved Captain Theodore Cree of the Third Regiment and told him in no uncertain terms that Chivington was looking for "a brigadier general's commission" and that Sand Creek was a massacre.¹⁰

On December 14, 1864, Captain Henry Booth, inspector of the District of the Upper Arkansas, reported that Indian hostilities had suddenly increased between Larned and Lyon. He noted further that "the Indians will no doubt be exasperated by the late action at Fort Lyon and we have reason to suppose will harass the travel on the Road more than ever. . . ." He advised headquarters that he would proceed to Fort Lyon to learn more.¹¹

On that same day, Silas Soule wrote a detailed account of the Sand Creek affair to Edward W. Wynkoop, his former commander, who, like Soule, was thought to be one of Chivington's "pets." It was a graphic and sickening account. In the letter, Soule indicated that Lieutenant Cramer was also writing him and expressed hope that Chivington "will be dismissed when the facts are known in Washington."¹² Tappan was still at Lyon at that time, recovering from an injury. He recorded in his diary that when Chivington stopped at Lyon on his way to Denver, he had boasted that Sand Creek would give him "command of a brigade." Tappan wrote Slough and others, not the least of whom was Colonel Orville Babcock, General Grant's adjutant, who he had met while briefly attached to Grant's headquarters during his recent visit to Washington. His sentiments were clear: ". . . the affair at Sand Creek is a proclamation to the Indians that we are determined not to keep our word with them, but to wage a war of extermination against them, to butcher and scalp their women and children, to assassinate all who fall into our hands as prisoners, to show no mercy, but excel them in savage cruelty."¹³ These would be only the first letters Tappan sent to both military and civilian authorities. He departed for Denver on December 15.

On December 19, Lieutenant Cramer penned his own report to Major Wynkoop. He expressed his mortification over the affair and his hope that Chivington would be cashiered as a result. "If you are in Washington," he wrote, "for God's sake, Major, keep Chivington from being a Bri-g. Genl, which he expects." He also told Wynkoop that he was preparing a report for General Slough, assuring Wynkoop that he would "write him nothing but what can be proven."¹⁴

The Third Regiment reached Denver on December 22 and marched through the streets to the cheers of the crowds. But the references to scalps and other trophies that were gleefully described in the press and openly displayed in bars and theaters also motivated enemies of Chivington and Evans to question what had happened. They had no trouble finding Thirdsters who described the affair as "very murderous" and who "made no boast of it at all."¹⁵ The celebration was about to come to an end.

On December 26, 1864, Harding's letter to Wright appeared anonymously in the New York Herald. It was picked up the next day by the Washington Star, and on December 31, the story broke in Denver, unleashing speculation about the identity of the "gentleman in high position." By then the Auburn (New York) Advertiser had identified Harding as the offending official. It would be a few weeks before these reports reached Denver, and in the interim, Sam Tappan's life was threatened as a possible suspect and both Harding and U.S. Attorney Browne had been accused of spreading "infamous lies" about Sand Creek. The man who revealed Harding's identity to the Advertiser was his predecessor as chief justice of Colorado, Benjamin F. Hall, who was close to William H. Seward and no friend of Chivington. Hall had learned about the situation directly from Harding, and he too was applying pressure where he could.¹⁶

Before Christmas 1864, the first reports of Chivington, Anthony, and others had reached General Curtis and Major Henning, commanding the District of the Upper Arkansas. When Major Wynkoop first saw the reports at Fort Riley, he went "wild with rage."¹⁷ Shortly thereafter, he received Cramer's letter and hastily copied it and sent it, along with a letter of his own, to Hiram Pitt Bennet, Colorado's congressional delegate. By then, Bennet was en route to Washington with George K. Otis, Ben Holladay's superintendent of the Overland Stage Company, to press for a winter campaign against hostile Indians commanded by General Connor, as the result of an increase in raids already attributed to Sand Creek by military authorities.¹⁸

On December 31, Wynkoop was ordered back to Fort Lyon to reclaim command of the post and to investigate Sand Creek. That same day, General Slough forwarded the letter he had received from the unnamed officer to Secretary of War Stanton. On New Year's Day, escorted by Soule, Captain Booth, the district inspector, visited the site of the massacre, counting sixty-nine dead bodies on the field, three fourths of them women and children. Shortly thereafter, Tappan received a letter from Colonel Babcock advising him that Grant and General John Rawlins concurred "in damning Sand Creek as infamous" and on January 12, General Curtis made it plain to Governor Evans that "I abominate the extermination of women and children."

Delegate Bennet had also received a frantic letter from Jerome B. Chaffee, a representative of Colorado's mining interests, that Chivington's attack had seriously inflamed the situation in Colorado at precisely the moment when the terms of service of the Third Regiment and most of the First were ending, leaving the territory unprotected. Bennet transmitted the letter to General James A. Hardie who forwarded it to General Henry Halleck, and on January 11, 1865, Halleck ordered General Curtis to investigate.¹⁹

Bennet visited Stanton who referred him to General Grant at City Point, as General of the Army. There Bennet proposed a winter campaign commanded by General Connor. When he had finished his presentation, Grant told him, "I have heard of Sand Creek, and I can but regard that as a massacre." He hesitated to order a winter campaign, however, and told Bennet he would consider the matter and respond through Stanton. Ironically, for the moment at least, the Sand Creek affair had already made Washington officials more cautious about authorizing major campaigns against tribes so obviously betrayed.²⁰

Bennet returned to Washington, and on January 30, he wrote to Slough that he had learned by a copy of a letter to Major Wynkoop from Lieutenant Cramer, that Cramer had written a full report of Sand Creek for the general. He requested a copy of the report, declaring, "I propose to show Chivington in his true Colors to the country and place the great responsibility of that Massacre on him, and so far as I can relieve the common soldier and the citizen of the Territory of all blame in the transaction."²¹ Jerome B. Chaffee, who was in Washington when the news broke, wrote his friend Dr. L. B. McLain on January 8. He expressed his concerns about Indian policy and the potential threat to Colorado if something were not done. "I hope Chivington will be sustained," he wrote, "unless he has done something that is worse than I anticipate. If his crime consists only in killing Indians, then his crime is our profit and every Coloradan ought to stand by him. In these times I care nothing for men only as they subserve the interests of the country."²²

In the meantime, the pressure was mounting on Congress. On January 9, 1865, Senator Doolittle requested that the matter of Sand Creek be referred to the Indian Affairs Committee for further study.²³ On January 10, Godlove Orth, the congressman from Judge Harding's home district in Indiana, introduced a resolution that the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War investigate the incident.²⁴ Charles Sumner called Sand Creek "an exceptional crime; one of the most atrocious in the history of our country."²⁵ Three days later, after a lengthy debate, Senate S. R. No. 93 passed, withholding the pay of the officers and men of the Third Colorado Regiment until the facts were determined about the affair.²⁶ Bennet hoped to present his evidence on the subject when the resolution was brought up in the House, but it was tabled without debate.²⁷

Governor Evans was in Washington when the news broke in December. The timing could not have been worse. Lincoln was under strong pressure to reorganize his cabinet. John Palmer Usher, the secretary of the interior, was a cabinet member who was the target of several groups, at least in part because of his independence. Even a group from his home state was after his job. In fact Usher had discussed with William Palmer Dole, his commissioner of Indian affairs, the possibility of submitting resignations even before the November elections, although he hoped he would be retained. In December, Evans, along with other prominent Methodists, endorsed Senator Harlan to replace Usher.²⁸ Evans remained in the city hoping to secure the removal of Colorado appointees who had opposed statehood, and was blindsided by the reports of the Sand Creek Massacre. Caught off guard by what had happened, he initially did not know how to react beyond defending the territory and his management of Indian affairs. He complained strenuously that the reports threatened his efforts to secure arms for the Colorado militia. On January 13, during the debate on the joint resolution, Evans found himself under attack for complicity in the affair.

Senator James Harlan of Iowa and Senator Samuel C. Pomeroy of Kansas both defended Evans as a man of integrity, although they were on different sides on the issue of withholding the pay of the Third Regiment. In making a case against the measure, Senator Pomeroy defended Chivington as a man of character and a Methodist minister. When Harlan, who supported the measure, questioned Chivington's Methodist credentials, Pomeroy drew Evans into the equation: "Governor Evans, a man distinguished for his philanthropy and kindness and religion, not only strongly recommended Colonel Chivington, but has indorsed his act since it has been reported to have been committed; and I notice that the papers in that Territory speak in the highest terms of Colonel Chivington." Harlan, thinking that he was helping Evans, stated that the Indians were near Fort Lyon at the invitation of the governor when they were attacked: "Here the Governor of the Territory invites the peaceable Indians to separate themselves from the hostile Indians in order that they may be protected; and when they are fairly settled down in their camps in pursuance of this invitation the armed white men fall on them and massacre them."²⁹

This exchange forced Evans to make a statement, and on January 18, Evans published a letter in the Washington Chronicle defending himself while declining "to express either approval or disapproval [of Sand Creek], until the facts shall be ascertained." This discussion prompted John W. Wright to write Senator Pomeroy. He challenged the senator's view of Evans in blistering terms and published his letter as a pamphlet before the end of the month. Evans was culpable, Wright declared, both for not allowing the Cheyennes and Arapahos time to respond to his first proclamation and for issuing the second proclamation, which became a permit for Chivington to do what he did. Wright said flatly, that "An Indian war is on the country. Every effort has been made for two years to produce it, and the Indian has suffered outrage and wrong by the hand of the white man. . . ."³⁰

Evans, who could not return to Colorado because of the winter war on the Platte, lingered in Washington to build his defense, engaging supporters like Harlan, Doolittle, Bishop Simpson, and James M. Ashley. He had to neutralize a significant opposition from Colorado, including Delegate Bennet, Allen A. Bradford (Bennet's replacement), Jerome Chaffee, who found the "something worse" than he had anticipated in Chivington's act, George Otis, and more. On March 6, 1865, Evans wrote seven letters to Lincoln concerning Colorado appointments, and on March 14, he wrote six letters to Ashley calling for the removal of Colorado officials and submitting names for replacements. Then, Evans and Ashley presented the governor's case to President Lincoln, arguing that the attacks on Evans were being made by "disloyal" federal appointees. Evans appeared to make his case, and Ashley followed up the meeting with a strong letter of support for Evans and a condemnation of other appointees in Colorado as "Copperheads."³¹

Also early in March, Secretary of the Interior Usher met with Lincoln, and on March 9, Usher sent Commissioner Dole to the White House with his resignation along with an understanding that he would remain in office until May 15, to give the Senate time to confirm the appointment of his successor. Lincoln had already decided on Harlan for the post, which was good news for Evans and Simpson; but Usher was surprised that Lincoln submitted Harlan's appointment on the same day he gave Lincoln his resignation. And Harlan was enraged that Usher would remain in office for two more months. He was anxious to begin his reforms in the Office of Indian Affairs at once.³² Nevertheless, the appointment of Harlan gave Evans hope that Lincoln would sustain him as well.

However, Evans was not free of blame yet. On March 13, 1865, the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War began its investigation of Sand Creek.³³ On March 15, Evans appeared before the committee. Again, he refused to defend Chivington's attack outright, but the questioning was tough:

Question: With all the knowledge you have in relation to . . . depredations by the Indians, do you think they afford any justification for the attack made by Colonel Chivington on these friendly Indians. . . .?

Answer: As a matter of course, no one could justify an attack on Indians while under the protection of the flag. . . . I have heard, however . . . that these Indians had assumed a hostile attitude before he attacked them. . . . I suppose they were being treated as prisoners of war in some way or other.

Question: But . . . do you deem that Colonel Chivington had any justifications for that attack?

Answer: I would rather not give an opinion . . . until I have heard the other side of the question. . . .

Question: I do not ask for an opinion. Do you know of any circumstance which would justify that attack?

Answer: I do not know of any circumstances connected with it subsequent to the time those Indians left me. . . .³⁴

On May 4, 1865, the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War recommended the removal of Governor Evans and the arrest and trial of Chivington and Anthony. Of Evans, the committee said, "His testimony . . . was characterized by such prevarication and shuffling as has been shown by no witness they have examined during the four years they have been engaged in their investigations. . . ."35 Of Chivington, the committee wrote, "your committee can hardly find fitting terms to describe his conduct. Wearing the uniform of the United States which should be the emblem of justice and humanity . . . he deliberately planned and executed a foul and dastardly massacre which would have disgraced the veriest savages among those who were the victims of his cruelty."36

Practically, with Chivington and Anthony already out of the army and beyond its reach for court martial, the only real target was John Evans. John Palmer Usher, on the last day of his tenure as secretary of the interior, advised President Johnson, "The conclusion of the Committee is evidently just, and I join in asking that their recommendations be carried out."37 Congressman Ashley immediately sprang to Evans's defense with a strongly worded appeal to Secretary of State William H. Seward, denouncing the report of the committee and recounting Evans's meeting with Lincoln in March. He advised Seward that "this whole matter was talked over and satisfactorily [sic], at least to Mr. Lincoln. . . ."38

Allen Bradford, Colorado's new representative, wrote a blistering letter about Evans on the same day, May 22, concluding, "In his management of the Indian affairs in the Territory, he has pursued a policy that has intensified the hostility of the Indians and provoked their attacks upon the citizens of the Territory and the routes of travel, thus preventing emigration and disturbing business and trade. He has given countenance and encouragement to the massacre of peaceable Indians and destroyed their faith and confidence in the sincerity and obligation of Government Treaties."39 Bradford, Bennet, Chaffee, John Slough, and others kept up the pressure. By mid-June rumors reached Denver that Evans would be replaced by Slough, and Evans even wrote Slough requesting that the transition take place as quickly as possible.⁴⁰

While these battles were being fought in Washington, Sand Creek was under scrutiny in Colorado as well. On January 14, 1865, Wynkoop arrived at Fort Lyon to resume command. He spent the next two days inquiring into Sand Creek. Both Soule and Cramer were gone, en route to Denver to muster out their companies. But there were other voices. Wynkoop dutifully recorded affidavits, and on January 16, wrote an emotional and damning report, describing Chivington as an "inhuman monster." It was hardly a dispassionate analysis, but it would appear in all of the official investigations of Sand Creek that followed.⁴¹ A few days later, Major Anthony resigned his commission "on account of my connexion [sic] with the 'Sand Creek affair' which really disgraced every officer connected with it, unless he was compelled to go under orders."⁴²

Colonel Thomas Moonlight, who succeeded Chivington as commander of the District of Colorado had found an effective force of only two hundred men in the entire district when he arrived on January 4, and only forty troopers to patrol the line between Denver and Julesburg where the greatest concentration of renewed resistance was reported. Curtis returned Fort Lyon to the District of Colorado, and, on February 1, 1865, Moonlight ordered the establishment of a military commission to investigate Sand Creek. Ironically, as the senior officer in Colorado not present at the Sand Creek Massacre, Lieutenant Colonel Tappan was appointed to conduct the investigation.⁴³ On February 18, the new Methodist Church in Denver was dedicated, and Colonel Chivington presented a gold watch to Reverend Willard on behalf of himself and others.⁴⁴ The colonel was publicly calling the investigation a forum for his vindication.

The testimony of Silas S. Soule and Joseph A. Cramer provided the bedrock of the case against Sand Creek before the military commission, although in the weeks that followed a substantial body of evidence reinforced it. Soule was a rakish sort, reform minded and carefree, who had taken up causes before in his life and who might have been dismissed as an idealist without hard evidence of his actions, but Cramer was steady and practical, a plain, bluntly honest man who had risen through the ranks and was promoted to lieutenant based on his service. Together, they made a powerful and persuasive team.⁴⁵ As early as February 24, 1865, the Black Hawk Mining Journal reported, ". . . we are informed that assassins have twice attempted the life of Capt. Soule within six weeks. Soule is a witness who expects to testify before the Court of Inquiry, and his testimony is evidently feared; hence he is shot at nights, in the suburbs of Denver."

In March, the military commission traveled to Fort Lyon to question witnesses there. On April 9, 1865, Wynkoop wrote his friend, Cramer, "I think that God Almighty will see that the guilty are punished eventually, and the virtuous receive their reward. Remember me kindly to Soule and all other friends."⁴⁶ On April 23, Soule, who was provost marshal of Denver, was murdered by an unsigned trooper, fulfilling Soule's prediction that he would be assassinated. Afterward, Chivington tried to blacken Soule's name before the commission, but managed only to convince many that he was responsible for Soule's death.⁴⁷ The commission did not complete its work until the end of May, after a spirited but unconvincing defense on Chivington's behalf.

Only days after the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War began deliberations, a Special Joint Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes was organized to investigate federal Indian policy on a broad scale, but one of its tasks was to report on Sand Creek. Eventually, Senator Doolittle, Senator F. S. Foster, and Congressman Lewis Ross, traveled west, escorted by General Alexander McDowell McCook, to Fort Riley, Fort Lyon, and Denver. On the way, the committee members visited the Sand Creek site where congressmen picked up "the skulls of infants whose milk teeth had not been shed—perforated with pistol and rifle shots. . . ."⁴⁸ Cramer wrote Henry C. Leach, a Denver businessman and politician, about the visit on June 14, 1865, and Leach responded, "I was delighted that at last the truth begins to prevail. Baby skulls will be very ornamental in the white house, or on the arches of [the] Capitol [sic]." He brought Cramer up to date on the political efforts of his group, and ended confidently: "We shall win this fight, and the devil will get his wandering child—old Chiv."⁴⁹

In June, Chivington published a "Synopsis" of the evidence presented before the military commission. Actually, it was a highly selective presentation of quotes from the defense testimony, interspersed with his own running commentary. In effect, he blamed the controversy on the Indian agent and traders who were profiting from the situation at Fort Lyon and on jealous army officers. He pandered to the settlers' fears and scolded everyone who doubted that he had saved the territory. His feelings came through loud and clear: "It is not surprising that the Indian believes himself to be the white man's superior. White men on the frontiers, do you desire to become the servile dogs of a brutal savage? If you do, this policy will suit you, though I thought differently and acted accordingly?"⁵⁰

Colorado Methodists rallied to the cause of Chivington and Evans. Oliver Willard testified to the Doolittle Committee that Chivington had told him that Evans did not know about the Sand Creek attack until after it was over. On April 5, six Colorado ministers, drafted a strongly worded letter of support for Chivington, describing him as "a model for large-hearted liberality and Christian energy." They then endorsed Sand Creek and declared, "We believe that our only hope for safety as a territory lies in the repetition of like battles with the same results. In the destruction of these Indians, the murdering and scalping of white men, women and children, was by such avenged. We are fully persuaded that the laws of war in this action were fully respected, and only fear that similar occurrences are likely to be too unfrequent [sic] for an immediate and complete subjugation of the treacherous, bloodthirsty red men."⁵¹

In June, Bishop Cyrus Kingsley arrived to preside over the Colorado Annual Conference. He was quickly won over by the Coloradans. He telegraphed Bishop Simpson to use his influence to prevent the removal of Governor Evans. In a letter to Simpson, he decried the "sentimentalism" that "too often precedes [sic] in the utter absence of all knowledge of the Indian character." He used Chivington as authority that Evans was not in Colorado at the time of Sand Creek, "and the Col informs me, that neither the Gov or any other person knew any thing [sic] of his plans until after the battle was fought and the Indians routed. But the affair offered a good pretext to the political opponents of the Gov and they have availed themselves of it with strong hopes of success in Washington." He said that he had not met a man in Colorado "who does not justify Col. C. for the course he took in whipping the Indians."

He was lavish in his praise of Evans. He lauded his "good moral and religious influence," his honest administration, his support of mining interests, and his influence for the admission of Colorado as a state and a "speedy completion of the Pacific Rail Road, which has become a military, commercial and religious necessity to the Territory."⁵² Kingsley's letter to Simpson was followed by a letter to the Northwestern Christian Advocate from Schuyler Colfax, which provided a similar assessment of the situation and specifically praised the Methodist Church for its fine new church and its seminary. He wrote, "I need scarcely tell you that your former fellow citizen, Gov. Evans, is foremost here in every good word and work"⁵³

June ended reasonably well for Evans. On June 21, his daughter, Josephine, was married to Samuel H. Elbert, Evans's secretary and confidant in Colorado, at the family home in Evanston. Bishop Simpson performed the wedding.⁵⁴ Harlan was finally in charge of the Department of the Interior and ready to go after the "pack of thieves" in the Indian Office, which Evans hoped would relieve the pressure to remove him.⁵⁵ Harlan had already made it clear to William P. Dole that he had to go, and on July 6, 1865, Dole resigned as commissioner of Indian affairs.⁵⁶

In July, the Northwestern Christian Advocate and the Christian Advocate and Journal of New York published articles from Bishop Kingsley, who was detained in Denver “by the depredations of the ‘noble red man.’” They consisted mainly of praise for the economic potential of the West, emphasizing that “the great want of this country is the speedy completion of the Pacific Railroad.”

Kingsley scarcely mentioned moral or spiritual concerns. In a lengthy discourse on the railroad, he called it a military necessity to speed the subjugation of the Indians. He wrote, “These Indians being yet in a state of childhood, so far as intellectual and educational development is concerned, need occasional chastising. Nothing else will do. To the questions, ‘What shall be done with the Africans and the Indians?’ I have short answers. Make men of them.” He added, “I have no fellowship with that sentimentalism which is ready to die of grief because the red man is not allowed to hold back civilization and Christianity just for the sake of being a savage. There is no reason why an ignorant savage should be allowed land enough for hunting ground to sustain a thousand civilized and Christianized persons living in accordance with the precepts of the Gospel.”⁵⁷

Evans could not be saved, however. The report of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War was published in mid-July, and on July 18, Secretary of State Seward formally requested Evans’s resignation.⁵⁸ Bishop Simpson and Secretary Harlan made one final effort to save Evans, without success. Secretary Seward told Harlan that he was “satisfied” with Evans as governor but that the committee’s report made it impossible to keep him as part of the administration. Simpson tried to see President Johnson, but was unable to meet with him. He then visited Seward at Cape May, New Jersey, for a final appeal.⁵⁹ It was a futile gesture. On August 1, 1865, Evans resigned under protest.⁶⁰

With a touch of irony, Evans requested that the transfer of power be delayed until he had concluded a treaty with the Utes. Unaware that Evans had been removed, General John Slough, in Colorado with Delegate Bradford, wrote President Johnson concerning Evans, “He is not only unpopular, but is a constant subject of ridicule. He is rarely spoken of as Governor but is called, ‘Granny,’ ‘Old Woman,’ &c.”⁶¹ As a gesture to Simpson and the Methodists, Seward and Johnson approved Bishop Simpson’s recommendation of Alexander W. Cummings, editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and another of Simpson’s rich Methodist friends, as Evans’s successor.⁶²

The publication of the Joint Committee’s report brought down a storm of criticism. The Chicago Tribune called Sand Creek “an act of hideous cruelty garnished with all the accessories of fraud, lying, treachery, bestiality” and proclaimed that Chivington should be tried by court martial “and shot like a wolf.”⁶³ The Nation declared, “Comment cannot magnify the horror.”⁶⁴ The Boston Daily Evening Traveler reported, “The testimony before the committee proved the most dreadful violation of honor, and the most wanton disregard of life on the part of Col. Chivington”⁶⁵ The Washington Chronicle denounced Sand Creek as a “bloody offense, which could hardly be surpassed in the warfare of the savage tribe with another.”⁶⁶

In September, Evans published his long awaited Reply to the report of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War. It was not a defense of Sand Creek. He was quite explicit on that point: “I do not propose to discuss the merits or demerits of the Sand Creek battle, but simply to meet the attempt to connect my name with it, and to throw discredit on my testimony.” He blamed his problems on his political enemies who “conspired to connect my name with the Sand Creek battle, although they knew that I was in no way connected with it.” He defended his management of Indian affairs. He denied having any part in sending the Cheyennes and Arapahos to Lyon after Camp Weld, although he had testified before the Joint Special Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes just weeks earlier that he had “suggested to Major Wynkoop through Colonel Shoop [sic] . . . that my judgment was that for the time being it was better to treat them as prisoners of war.”⁶⁷

The Chicago Tribune, which had said Chivington should be shot like a wolf just weeks before, now asserted that Evans “was in no manner responsible for what happened at Sand Creek.”⁶⁸ The Central Christian Advocate concluded that “his defense is triumphant,” and the Northwestern Christian Advocate declared “there has been no testimony which has involved Governor Evans in wrong.”⁶⁹ The Rocky Mountain News and Central City Miner’s Register added their endorsement as did other Western papers from Nebraska to Montana. On the other hand, the Atchison Freedom’s Champion said that while Evans might have been guilty of acts that were hasty and ill-advised prior to the expedition and “yet not be responsible for the actual atrocities and cold-blooded barbarities that followed.” It added:

But his connection with Chivington is too clearly established to be denied without the very best evidence, and unless this is given in his defense, the public will neither overlook nor pardon him. The infamy of the Sand Creek Massacre is established beyond a question; three different Committees have thoroughly investigated the affair, and all agree in pronouncing it the most diabolical and atrocious villainy known in recorded history. The evidence is voluminous and given by some of the best men in Colorado; even the friends of Chivington could say nothing to excuse or even palliate his crimes. If therefore, Gov. Evans does not succeed in establishing that he had no connection with this clerical monster, he is branded as Chivington is branded, with enduring calumny.⁷⁰

Evans's defense was surprisingly weak. One editor noted that Evans took "the utmost pains to show that he knew nothing of Chivington's movements and was not privy to his plans or intentions."⁷¹ Another observer said that "Gov. Evans is afraid to look Sand Creek in the face, and either justify or condemn it."⁷² Even the Rocky Mountain News expressed regrets that Evans had not covered the "whole ground," with a full scale defense of Sand Creek that would demonstrate that Sand Creek had been fought according to the "usages of warfare, with no more attendants of barbarity than usually occur in such cases."⁷³ The Black Hawk Mining Journal said that Evans had chosen personal vindication over vindication of Sand Creek.⁷⁴ The Atchison Weekly Champion and Press was "woefully disappointed." Evans's Reply was "only an evidence of his repentance and shame that he was connected, even remotely, with this fearful infamy, and not the established proof of his innocence as he had hoped. And so Sand Creek yet remains unjustified and unexplained, in all its revolting and sickening brutality."⁷⁵ The Denver Gazette raised so many questions about his failure to defend Sand Creek that Evans wrote a letter to the Rocky Mountain News assuring the voters that he wanted to see Colorado's soldiers vindicated and favored an aggressive Indian policy. Again, he stopped short of a public endorsement of Sand Creek.⁷⁶

The report of the Joint Special Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes was not published until 1867, but interviews with the members of Congress who visited Colorado and with General Alexander McD. McCook, their escort, made it clear that they were all outraged by Sand Creek. General McCook wrote a separate report that was never published that also condemned Sand Creek as a massacre.⁷⁷ It was difficult to dismiss the response to Senator Doolittle's speech in Denver, when he asked whether Indians should be placed on reservations and taught to support themselves or be exterminated. The response was jolting as the crowd shouted, "Exterminate them! Exterminate them!"⁷⁸

Judge Advocate General Joseph Holt wrote a particularly strong condemnation of Sand Creek as a "cowardly and coldblooded slaughter," after reviewing the record of the military commission, but it was not published. He condemned the "shocking and demoniac barbarities" of the action, but concluded that Chivington could not be tried because he was no longer in service. He did recommend that the army express its "utter abhorrence of the savage crimes thus committed in its name."⁷⁹

By the end of August 1865, Sand Creek had come to symbolize the worst instincts of humanity. "Under the rule of Christian nations," General McCook wrote, "I do not think this attack has ever been exceeded in barbarity."⁸⁰ Colorado leaders and the majority of its citizens were shocked by the characterization. The controversy did divide the territory further, and in due course its editors, who had so uniformly praised the Sand Creek action in the beginning, would splinter in their assessments in light of the evidence. The anti-Evans, anti-Chivington factions used the national condemnation to promote their local political agendas wrapped in moral outrage.

One Kansas editor described Chivington's actions as "disgusting." He predicted the truth would prevail, adding, "And when it is known, and all the enormity of this Sand Creek massacre is exposed, we are sure that nowhere will Chivington find a defender, or even an apologist."⁸¹ He was wrong. Many Coloradans were not ready to abandon the fighting parson yet. The Sand Creek controversy had virtually shattered the old Union Administration Party (Colorado Republicans), but there was now surprising unity among politicians in the territory on the question of statehood and, ironically, for action against the renewed threat of Indian attacks. In June, a referendum for statehood and a new constitution was approved by a mere 155 votes, suggesting that the people were still divided on the territory's capacity for taking care of itself without the federal presence.⁸²

Sand Creek, not statehood, was the central issue in the fall elections. News of a proposed peace council with the Cheyenne and Arapaho increased the fury. The effect was soon felt. The Union Administration Party was anxious to avoid controversy because they did not want to jeopardize statehood. A mixed slate of state officers was selected, including several critics of Sand Creek, but when the party platform was presented, a series of amendments endorsing Sand Creek and a policy of extermination against the Indians were introduced. These sweeping amendments sabotaged the new coalition, and Ned Byers of the Rocky Mountain News sought to make Sand Creek the test question in the upcoming election. He singled out Henry Leach and Amos Steck for particular abuse.⁸³

Inevitably, the Sand Creek men bolted the party and presented their own slate of officers for the “Sand Creek Vindication Party.” Of the Union Administration Party’s nominees, only four survived the scrutiny of the Sand Creekers. They did not nominate Chivington for any office, however. Once more, many of the supporters were disappointed that Governor Evans did not take a stronger position. He made another statement, without explicitly endorsing Sand Creek. Late in October, Chivington, “Old Sand Creek himself,” announced as an independent candidate for Congress, but he withdrew before the election.⁸⁴ On November 11, 1865, the Atchison Weekly Champion and Press, sarcastically compared Chivington to Captain Henry Wirz, the Confederate commandant at Andersonville. The paper said, “If Colorado wants to get into the Union wouldn’t it be better for Colorado people to keep quiet on affairs that shock the sentiment of the whole Nation?”

The latter thought had also occurred to some Coloradans who warned of the consequences of linking statehood and vindication of Sand Creek. On November 14, 1865, the Union Administration Party swept the election. Only George Shoup, former commander of the Third, was elected from the Vindication ticket. The new “state legislature” subsequently named John Evans and Jerome Chaffee as Colorado’s United States senators.⁸⁵

But the congressional response to the statehood proposal was lukewarm. To make matters worse, the new chairman of the Senate committee on the territories was Benjamin F. Wade, the former chairman of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War. While the debate focused on population and the failure of Colorado to include a plank for black suffrage, Sand Creek did produce a heated exchange on the Senate floor.⁸⁶

In April, the Rocky Mountain News reported that Henry Leach was in Washington lobbying against statehood. Eventually, the enabling act passed, but Andrew Johnson vetoed it. Many Coloradans believed that Leach and Sand Creek were responsible for the veto.⁸⁷ Colorado statehood would not be achieved for another decade, and Sand Creek played a part in the delay. Alexander A. Cummings, who succeeded Evans as governor, had urged the legislature in January 1866 to present any evidence that would throw new light on the subject.⁸⁸ In exasperation, he later wrote William Seward, “there is no peace for any United State official here unless he will endorse all the horrible atrocities of Sand Creek. . . .”⁸⁹ Sand Creek was Colorado’s albatross, but the territory wore it like a medal of honor, slowly sanitizing it more and more.

Notes: Chapter IX

1. DRMN, December 17, 1864.
2. CCMR, December 9, 1864.
3. Black Hawk Mining Journal [BHMJ], December 9, 1864.
4. DRMN, December 9, 1864.
5. Report of Captain Theodore Cree, December 6, 1864, OR, Series I, XLI, Pt. 1, 959.
6. Stephen S. Harding to John W. Wright, December 9, 1864, published anonymously in the New York Herald, December 26, 1864.
7. Roberts, “Sand Creek,” pp. 163-166, 334-338.
8. Chivington to Curtis, December 16, 1864, OR, Series I, SLI, Pt. 1, 948-950; Chivington to Curtis, December 20, 1864, Chivington, CMSR, VA, NARA, RG 15.
9. Extract of a private letter from an officer of the first Colorado Cavalry, dated December 16, 1864, with Slough to Stanton, December 31, LR, General File, AGO, 2694-S-1864, NARA, RG 94.
10. Tappan to Anthony, December 10, 1864, Anthony to Cramer, December 11, 1864, Letters Received of 1st Lieutenant Joseph Cramer, 1st Colorado Volunteer Cavalry, 1864-1866, Gordon S. Chappell Collection, Oakland, CA; testimony of Captain Theodore S. Cree, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 190-191.
11. Captain Henry Booth to J. E. Tappan, December 14, 1864, RLR, DUA, DM, USAC, Vol 359, p. 107, NARA, RG 393.
12. Soule to Wynkoop, December 14, 1864, presented in full in Gary L. Roberts and David Fridtjof Halaas, “Written in Blood: The Soule-Cramer Sand Creek Massacre Letters,” Colorado Heritage (Winter 2001), pp. 25-27.
13. Tappan Diary, pp. 16-18, 69.
14. Cramer to Wynkoop, December 19, 1864, Roberts and Halaas, “Written in Blood,” pp. 27-29.
15. DRMN, December 1, 12, 13, 22, 28, 29, 1864, January 4, 11, 1865.
16. Auburn (New York) Advertiser and Union, December 28, 29, 1864.
17. Edward Estill Wynkoop, “Edward Wanshear Wynkoop,” unpublished manuscript, p. 77, File nos. 2-3, Edward W. Wynkoop

- Collection, Fray Angelico Chavez History Library, Palace of the Governors, Santa Fe, NM. See also Kraft, Ned Wynkoop, pp. 136-138.
18. Testimony of Wynkoop, Sand Creek Massacre, p. 92; Hiram Pitt Bennet, Hiram Pitt Bennet: Pioneer, Frontier Lawyer, Politician. Edited by Liston E. Leyendecker (Denver: Colorado Historical Society, 1988), pp. 99-101.
19. Chaffee to Bennet, January 10, 1865, James A. Hardie to Halleck, December 11, 1865, Halleck to Curtis, January 11, 1865, "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," p. 74.
20. Bennet, Pioneer, Lawyer, Politician, pp. 101-102.
21. Bennet to Slough, January 30, 1865, Western Americana Collection, Yale University Library, New Haven, CN.
22. Chaffee to McLain, January 8, 1865, DRMN, March 29, 1865.
23. Congressional Globe, 38th Congress, 2nd Session, Pt. 1, 158.
24. Ibid., p. 173.
25. Ibid., pp. 250-256.
26. Ibid.
27. Bennet to Slough, January 30, 1865, Western Americana Collection, Yale; Congressional Globe, 38th Congress, 2nd Session, Pt. 1, 1336.
28. Richardson and Farley, Usher, pp. 74-79; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 162-163; Evans to Simpson, December 13, 1864, Simpson Papers, Library of Congress.
29. Congressional Globe, 38th Congress, 2nd Session, Pt. 1, 250-254.
30. J. W. Wright, Chivington Massacre of Cheyenne Indians (Washington: Gideon & Pearson, 1865), pp. 5-6.
31. The Evans letters to Lincoln, dated March 6, 1865, and to Ashley, dated March 14, 1865, are found in the Lincoln Papers, LC, Reel 93. See also Lincoln to Evans, March 16, 1865, Basler, Collected Works of Lincoln, VIII, 356.
32. Richardson and Farley, Usher, pp. 80-81.
33. The Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War was a powerful congressional committee chaired by Benjamin Franklin Wade. For a review of its activities see Bruce Tap, Over Lincoln's Shoulder: The Committee on the Conduct of the War (Lawrence: University Press of Kansas, 1998). Sand Creek receives short shrift in this book, less than a paragraph on p. 232. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 498-513, provides a more detailed look at the committee's investigation of Sand Creek and of the consequences of its conclusions.
34. Testimony of Evans, "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," pp. 42-43.
35. "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," pp. iii-iv.
36. Ibid.
37. Usher to Johnson, May 15, 1865, LS, OSI, ID, M-21, Roll 5, NARA, RG 48.
38. Ashley to Seward, May 22, 1865, Applications and Recommendations for Office, Department of State, NARA, RG 59.
39. Bradford to Andrew Johnson, May 22, 1865, in ibid.
40. DRMN, June 12, 13, 1865; Evans to Slough, June 14, 1865, William Gilpin Papers, Chicago Historical Society.
41. Wynkoop's report and supporting affidavits were published in "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," pp. 81-93; Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 122-132; and Condition of Indian Tribes, pp. 57-64.
42. Anthony to Moonlight, January 21, 1865, published in DRMN, February 1, 1865; Anthony to his brother December 30, 1864, Scott J. Anthony Papers (FF-2, No. 6), History Colorado.
43. Curtis to Moonlight, January 11, 1865, Moonlight to Curtis, January 12, 1865, Curtis Papers, XIV, 102, 107; Moonlight to General Grenville Mellon Dodge, February 13, 1865, "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians," p. 95; Moonlight to Tappan, February 12, 1865, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 3-4.
44. DRMN, February 19, 1865.
45. Tom Bensing, Silas Soule: A Short Eventful Life of Moral Courage (Indianapolis, IN: Dog Ear Publishing, 2012) is the most detailed accounting of Silas Soule's life and adds new information about the events of early 1865. He was placed in a very difficult position, with responsibilities to supervise martial law as declared by Colonel Moonlight, to locate and seize government properties in local businesses, and to investigate stock, buffalo robes, and other items taken at Sand Creek. Denver was full of disgruntled Third Regiment veterans whose pay had been suspended by Congress, and they frequently were troublesome. Cramer's story is less well known. See Roberts and Halaas, "Written in Blood," pp. 30-32, and Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 486-497.
46. Wynkoop to Cramer, April 9, 1865, Cramer Letters.
47. See, especially, the Deposition of Lipman Meyer, Sand Creek Massacre, pp. 184-187, which Chivington introduced into evidence after Soule's death. It accused Soule of cowardice, theft, and drunkenness. The maneuver was seen as a shoddy attempt to blacken the character of Captain Soule and did not help Chivington's case.
48. This committee had a broader commission than simply investigating Sand Creek. Its object was to review the condition of the Indian tribes and to make recommendations concerning policy changes. It not only visited Sand Creek and Denver, but it also traveled to other locations in the West and Southwest. The committee's travels are covered in Clarissa P. Fuller, editor, "Letter of Senator Doolittle to Mrs. L. F. S. Foster, March 7, 1881," New Mexico Historical Review, XXVI (1951): 148-158; Gary L. Roberts, editor, "Condition of the Tribes, 1865: The McCook Report—A Military View," Montana, The Magazine of Western History, XXIV (January 1974): 14-25; Lonnie J. White, editor, Chronicle of a Congressional Journal: The Doolittle Committee in the Southwest, 1865 (Boulder,

- CO: Pruett Publishing Company, 1975); and Donald Chaput, "Generals, Indian Agents, Politicians: The Doolittle Survey of 1865," Western Historical Quarterly, 3 (1972): 269-282.
49. Leach to Cramer, June 20, 1865, Cramer Letters.
50. John M. Chivington, To the People of Colorado: Synopsis of the Sand Creek Investigation (Denver: Byers and Dailey, 1865).
51. Testimony of Willard, Condition of Indian Tribes, p. 70; Atchison Daily Free Press, June 26, 1866. The "Statement of the Preachers of Colorado," April 7, 1865, was published in the Central Christian Advocate (St. Louis), July 26, 1865. It was erroneously reported as an official document of the Colorado Conference, which led the paper to "take great pleasure" in publishing a vindication of Chivington. The Northwestern Christian Advocate, September 27, 1865, challenged the statement as a product of the conference and described it as "a private paper signed by some members of the conference." The statement was also printed in the Atchison Daily Free Press, June 26, 1866, as part of a letter written to the paper by Chivington. The ministers signing the document included O. A. Willard, presiding elder of the Denver District, Colorado Conference; George Richardson, pastor, First M. E. Church, Denver; John Cree, agent of the American Bible Society, Colorado Territory; B. T. Vincent, pastor, St. Paul's M. E. Church, Central City; O. P. McMains, pastor, M. E. Church, Black Hawk; Charles H. Kirkbride, preacher in charge, Nevada Circuit, Colorado Conference. The Colorado Weekly Chieftain (Pueblo), June 11, 1868, was still saying that Chivington was "endorsed by the entire Methodist conference of Colorado."
52. Kingsley to Simpson, June 20, 1865, Simpson Papers, LC.
53. Northwestern Christian Advocate, June 2, 1865. Henry Leach wrote Joe Cramer that while the Congressional Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes was in Denver, "Colfax and Ashley while here were under the Control of Evans and that Clique & Collier came down from Central with medicated paper for Colfax & kept close to him all the time so as to be handy. [Simeon] Whiteley nominated Colfax for President & took the occasion to say 'that Sand Creek was a good thing,' & that perjury of the blackest Kind had been committed to forestate [sic] opinion in Washington. Leach to Cramer, June 20, 1865, Cramer Letters.
54. Colfax to the editor, June 2, 1865, Northwestern Christian Advocate, June 28, 1865.
55. Gary L. Roberts, "Dennis Nelson Cooley, 1865-66," Kvasnicka and Viola, Commissioners of Indian Affairs, p. 99. Cooley replaced Dole. He was a close friend and associate of Harlan's. Dr. Anson Henry had been promised the post by Lincoln, but Lincoln's death meant choosing Dole's successor passed to Johnson and Seward. See Elbert F. Floyd, "Insights into the Personal Friendship and Patronage of Abraham Lincoln and Anson Gordon Henry, M. D.," Journal of the Illinois Historical Society, 98 (Winter, 2005-2006): 218-253. As late as July 19, 1865, Henry was claiming that Johnson had approved Lincoln's appointment of Henry five days earlier, which was after Cooley assumed the office. He was furious with Harlan. Mrs. Lincoln called Harlan's actions "contemptible." He was appointed governor of Washington Territory, but died in a shipwreck on the way to assume his post.
56. Harlan to Dole, June 22, July 5, 1865, Harlan to Stanton, July 6, 1865, Letters Sent, Indian Division, Vol. 5, pp. 262-263, 275, 278, NARA, RG 48.
57. Central Christian Advocate, July 12, 19, 1865; Christian Advocate and Journal (New York), July 20, 1865; Northwestern Christian Advocate, July 12, 19, 1865.
58. Seward to Evans, July 18, 1865, Evans Collection, HC.
59. Evans to Johnson, August 1, 1865, Evans to Seward, August 1, 1865, Simpson to Evans, August 4, 1865, Harlan to Evans, August 4, 1865, Evans Collection, HC; Salter, "Simpson and Patronage," pp. 222-223.
60. Evans to Harlan, August 1, 1865, August 14, 1865, State Department Territorial Papers, Colorado, No. 67, Folio No. 125, No. 69, Folio No. 128, M-3, NARA, RG 59; Evans to Washburne, Elihu Washburne Papers, Library of Congress; Evans to Simpson, June 28, 1865, Simpson Papers, LC. See also Clark, Life of Simpson, pp. 249-250, Northwestern Evans Report, pp. 82-83; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 152-153; Kirby, "Thought of Simpson," pp. 243-248.
61. Slough to Andrew Johnson, August 7, 1865, Letters of Appointment and Recommendations of Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson, 1861-1868, M-650, Roll 55, NARA, RG 59.
62. Clark, Life of Simpson, p. 250.
63. Chicago Tribune, July 26, 1865
64. Quoted in Frederic Logan Paxson, The Last American Frontier (New York: Macmillan Company, 1924), 262.
65. Daily Evening Traveler, August 10, 1865.
66. Washington Chronicle, July 21, 1865.
67. John Evans, Reply of Governor Evans of the Territory of Colorado to That Part Referring to Him, of the Report of "the Committee on the Conduct of the War," Headed "Massacre of Cheyenne Indians" (Denver: n. p., 1865). The three leading newspapers in Colorado printed his reply, and it was also published in Condition of Indian Tribes, pp. 78-93.
68. Chicago Tribune, quoted in BHMJ, October 14, 1864.
69. Central Christian Advocate, quoted in ibid.; Northwestern Christian Advocate, December 27, 1865.
70. Atchison Freedom's Champion, August 24, 1865.
71. ibid., October 5, 1865.
72. BHMJ, September 19, 1865, quoted in Atchison Freedom's Champion, October 5, 1865.
73. WRMN, September 13, 20, 1865.
74. BHMJ, September 19, 1865.
75. Atchison Freedom's Champion, October 5, 1865.

76. Evans to Stephen Decatur, November 4, 1865, DRMN, November 5, 1865.
77. Roberts, "McCook Report," pp. 14-25. McCook also provided an interview for the Atchison Freedom's Champion, August 17, 1865.
78. Fuller, "Doolittle Letter," pp. 156-157.
79. Report of the Judge Advocate General in the Case of John M. Chivington, First Colorado Cavalry, Record Book, Vol. 17, pp. 424-434, JAG Office, NARA, RG 153.
80. Roberts, "McCook Report," p. 21.
81. Atchison Weekly Champion, August 17, 1865.
82. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 619-634; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 155-165.
83. Amos Steck was the first president of the Board of Trustees for the Colorado Seminary, created in March 1864. Henry C. Leach, a Baptist, was one of the first men to report the Sand Creek affair. He ran for the Territorial Council, Second District, on the Union Administration Ticket. Even the DRMN, September 9, 1865, wrote of him, "Henry C. Leach is a gentleman well known by our citizens and his sterling qualities as an honorable, upright man, induced the Convention to nominate him for the office of Councilman. All men are liable to err, but we do not think that Mr. Leach's errors will detract from his worthily filling the position for which he has been chosen." On October 31, the same paper listed him as one of the "defectors" from the regular Union Administration ticket. By November 14, 1865, he was grouped with Tappan, Wynkoop, Bennet, Bradford, General Slough, and others as "Indian lovers." In fact, as early as June, Leach was already working against Chivington and Evans. He was also in contact with Lieutenant Cramer. In the winter of 1866-1867, he was named the first president of the Young Men's Christian Association in Colorado.
84. Elmer Ellis, "Colorado's First Fight for Statehood, 1865-1868," Colorado Magazine, VIII (January 1931): 23-30; Leroy R. Hafen, "Steps to Statehood in Colorado," Colorado Magazine, III (1926): 97-110.
85. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 632-635.
86. Congressional Globe, 39th Congress, 1st Session, Pt. 3, 2135-2136.
87. DRMN, April 6, 1866. Leach eventually left Colorado. He died in Boston in 1906. At the time of his death, the Castle Rock Journal, April 20, 1906, reported that Leach had been president of the Colorado Territorial Council, "to whose efforts was largely due the vetoing by President Andrew Johnson of the first bill admitting Colorado as a state."
88. Governor's Message Delivered to the Territorial Legislature of Colorado in Joint Convention, Friday, Jan. 5th, 1866 (Denver: Byers & Dailey, 1866), pp. 6-7.
89. Cummings to Seward, quoted in Lamar, Far Southwest, p. 226. See also Eugene Berwanger, The Rise of the Centennial State: Colorado Territory, 1861-76 (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 2007), pp. 41-55.

Chapter X

Methodists, Sand Creek, and the “Indian Question”

Truthfully, the Sand Creek Massacre was more a distraction than a grand moral issue to the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1865. Compared to the great issues of the Union and slavery, an attack on Indians in the West was trivial to its members, especially in light of the great war still being fought in Georgia, Tennessee, and Virginia. William Tecumseh Sherman had taken Atlanta, and Abraham Lincoln had been reelected, but the Civil War was not over, and the future of freedmen and the South itself remained uncertain. Methodists were still debating their role in reconstruction and emancipation, the future of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and the role of their own church in the post-war Nation. Reports of Sand Creek were disturbing more because of its potential to taint the Church’s reputation because of the roles of John Chivington and John Evans in it.

Except for the voices of various editions of the Christian Advocate, some reserved, some more vocal, the Church did not confront the Sand Creek Massacre directly. Not even Bishop Simpson confronted it directly, even though he was involved in the efforts to preserve Governor Evans’s job. Methodists waited and watched and adapted their viewpoints according to the events that transpired over the years that followed. The Methodists emerged from the war as the largest and perhaps the most influential religious denomination in the country. Unfortunately, as Richard Carwardine has written, “There is a sad irony that Methodism, a major instrument in the process of American national integration in the early republic, became a principal channel of spiritual alienation during the middle years of the nineteenth century.”¹

For religious organizations such as the Methodist Church during the years immediately following the Civil War, attention was focused primarily on the South and its former slaves. The great challenge to churches was the completion of the promise of freedom to blacks. Missionary efforts accelerated among the former slaves, and Methodists initiated a strong effort to reclaim white churches that had joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South before the war. This took on the appearance of an extension of federal power over the churches to some and created a dispute within the church that would continue. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, naturally enough, fought to hold on to its identity and organization.² Methodists were a fractious, divided denomination on many fronts and with a variety of answers that would determine who they were and what their relationship to government and national growth would be. Indians seemed foreign to those primary concerns.

While the Church contemplated its future, giving little thought to Sand Creek or to Native Americans, the immediate response of the majority of Cheyennes and Arapahos to the Sand Creek Massacre was to move north of the Platte to join their Lakota allies. Not only did they now share the Lakota hatred of whites, but also the combination of tribes established a new zone of control on the northern plains, pushing back other tribes, east and west, to secure dominance of the region ranging from below the Platte to the Canadian line, and from the Missouri River to the front range of the Rockies. It was an aggressive Native response that pushed back rival tribes and held the American army at bay for three years and more. Hidatsa, Mandan, Arikara, Pawnee, Omaha, Shoshoni, Crow, Gros Ventre, and others ventured into the Powder River country and Black Hills only with great caution, and most of them found few options beyond alliance with the white Americans. The combination of the Minnesota Uprising and the Sand Creek Massacre had succeeded in building an alliance of five thousand fighting men.³

At first, neither the settlers nor the government took the challenge seriously. Much of the public discourse was shallow and overconfident. More importantly, only a few whites understood the reasons that Sand Creek was so important. It was, first of all, a massacre, but more than that, a slaughter that taught even the most peacefully inclined that whites could not be trusted. Few officials, if any, understood that Sand Creek was a chiefs’ village. It was an experiment that all of the Cheyennes and Arapahos were watching. Practically, it was a chance to prove the white man’s intent. It was an experiment with the potential to have brought peace to the central plains. Instead, Chivington’s attack eliminated virtually every voice for peace among the Cheyennes. Trust was broken. The white man had proven the value of his word.⁴

The numbers killed at Sand Creek were not great, but nearly one-fourth of the Council of Forty-Four was killed, devastating the political order and leading to a more militant leadership. A serious rift in the Cheyenne political order was a direct result, and 1864 became the last time that all of the Cheyennes gathered for the renewal of the council. The council was rendered impotent, and the soldier chiefs gained new power. Sand Creek pushed the Cheyennes and Arapahos toward a new system dominated by war, which replaced trade as the primary source of essential resources. The Southern Cheyennes, led by the Dog Soldiers, were more determined than ever to hold on to the Smoky Hill country, which guaranteed continued conflict in eastern Colorado and western Kansas.

Sand Creek precipitated a winter war, the one thing that conventional wisdom said could not happen. The Cheyennes, Arapahos, Brule Lakota, and Oglalas struck the Platte River route with fury, destroying ranches, stage stations, bridges, and telegraph lines. They attacked wagon trains and even towns. On January 7, 1865, they attacked and looted Julesburg on the Platte and besieged Camp Rankin. On January 28, the Cheyennes attacked American Ranch, ran off five hundred cattle, and burned a hundred tons of hay. They attacked other ranches, and on February 2, more than a thousand Cheyennes, Arapahos, and Lakotas again descended on Julesburg. This time they burned the town. They destroyed fifty miles of telegraph lines and burned the poles. They fought the soldiers at Mud Springs and Rush Creek. Afterward, most of the Cheyennes moved to join the northern bands in the Powder River country, while the Lakota moved farther east.

It was an unprecedented assault. "Indians have got hold of the Platte Route again killing & destroying in every direction," one Colorado businessman wrote. "NO coaches are running, no mails have left for some days. . . . These Indian troubles kil [sic] everything & paralyze all commerce." He favored a harsh policy, but he condemned both Sand Creek and Chivington. He added:

A Report is prevalent here that "Black Kettle" is in command of the Indians on the Plains. It is quite possible I should think. What is more natural than that they should retaliate in every way possible. I believe it is good policy to exterminate the whole race or at any rate put them beyond the power of doing harm. Can you imagine anything more puerile or idiotic to say the least to attack a body of Indians once & then immediately to disband?⁵

Others, including military officers from the region shared this view that, at the very least, Chivington had made a single attack then marched his troops back to Denver where they were disbanded and the entire territory left with scarcely more than two hundred soldiers. Now, Colorado could do little more than observe the renewed fighting until Colonel Thomas Moonlight, the new commander of the District of Colorado, could complete the reenlistment of a Veteran Battalion of the First Colorado

Cavalry. Chivington had stirred up the hornet's nest and left it to others to deal with the results.⁶ One after another, expeditions were launched by American officers—General Connor, General Pope, and more—and they failed miserably to overawe the tribes. American campaigns were predictable—large commands with supply trains moving across the plains, creating extended lines of supply, exhausted men, and worn-out horses.⁷ As Robert M. Utley writes, "only the most careless Indians failed to get out of the way."⁸

The combination of the knowledge that the Cheyennes and Arapahos had just cause, and the poor showing of the expeditions sent against them, persuaded the government that some offer of peace had to be made. At the negotiation on the Little Arkansas, again with the most tractable Cheyennes and Arapahos, it was plain that the commissioners had Sand Creek on their minds. Virtually every commissioner damned Sand Creek as an atrocity and agreed to the unheard-of provision of apologizing for Sand Creek and offering compensation to the families of those who had been present.⁹ But the Dog Soldiers and others on the Platte and above were still furious. They remained quiet, for the most part, and occupied lands in western Kansas and eastern Colorado during an uneasy peace.¹⁰ Ultimately, however, the Treaty of the Little Arkansas merely managed a truce. As Black Kettle himself warned at the negotiations, too few Cheyennes were parties to it, Congress fiddled with its provisions, and the proposed reservation was south of the Arkansas River on lands never a part of the Cheyenne and Arapaho domains. Its provisions were never implemented, and most of its promises were stillborn despite the good intentions of both the chiefs and the commissioners.

Other things changed after Sand Creek as well. The Sand Creek Massacre polarized debate on American Indian policy for at least twenty years. It became an issue in negotiations not only with the Cheyennes and Arapahos, but with other tribes as well. Sand Creek was emblematic of the untrustworthiness of white promises. "Why should we believe you?" Native leaders asked. "Remember Sand Creek?" Sand Creek affected direction. It bequeathed an image of the army as saber-wielding murderers, even though Sand Creek had been carried out by short-term volunteers, and with the end of the Civil War "Indian fighting" gradually returned to the regular army. Sand Creek also led to a debate on civilian versus military control, intensified by a growing movement for the reform of Indian policy. And turning history on its head, the ongoing conflict was used by Westerners to justify the "Chivington style."¹¹

The seriousness of the problem was the reason that the Joint Special Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes was established in 1865. Although it was created in the aftermath of Sand Creek (and because of it), the committee attempted a widespread review of conditions and options throughout the West. Three separate groups gathered evidence and traveled across the West considering a wide range of questions, the “deterioration” of the Indians, land tenure, schools and missions, annuities, and whether Indian affairs could best be handled by the Interior Department or the War Department. The report was not completed until January 26, 1867. It condemned the Sand Creek Massacre, but more importantly it also provided the framework for a new Indian policy.

It made five recommendations. First, it concluded that Indians, except for those in the Indian Territory, were dwindling in numbers because of disease, intemperance, war, and white emigration. Second, it blamed Indian wars largely on “lawless white men,” with Sand Creek as a prime example. Third, the Indians were rapidly losing their essential resources and land base, noting especially the effects of railroads on the buffalo. Fourth, it recommended that Indian affairs remain under civilian control rather than transferred to military control as many had hoped would happen. The problem, the committee concluded, was not so much policy as abuses of the system. Fifth, based on this assumption it recommended the creation of boards of inspection designed to reduce violence and fraud. Five districts would be created, each served by a three-man board, including representatives from the Office of Indian Affairs, the regular army, and a member chosen by the president based on recommendations from church-related groups. This report would become the fulcrum of debate, and lead, ultimately, to Grant’s “Peace Policy,” which proposed to turn the management of Indian affairs over to religious denominations as a means of depoliticizing Indian affairs and preserving the tribes.¹²

The report was timely. The discovery of gold in Montana led to plans to build the Bozeman Trail from Fort Laramie north along the eastern side of the Big Horn Mountains in modern-day Wyoming, then west to the mining camps like Bozeman and Virginia City. This carried a new wave of settlers into the heart of the Sioux country and prompted more resistance. It led to a string of new forts, and on December 21, 1866, the disastrous slaughter of eighty troopers from Fort Phil Kearny.¹³ The “Fetterman Massacre,” as it was called, produced more investigations and a fresh campaign by General Winfield Scott Hancock on the central plains stirred up the Cheyenne Dog Soldiers who had remained quiet for a time. When

Hancock approached one of the Cheyenne villages, the people fled, fearing another Sand Creek, while the general interpreted their action as a sign of hostility and burned the village. This opened “Hancock’s War” in 1867.¹⁴

One of the important commissions reported in July 1867 that the majority of Indians on the plains favored peace. On July 20, 1867, Congress authorized the creation of a Peace Commission. The new Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Nathaniel G. Taylor, formerly a Methodist minister, was named as chairman. It was a distinguished group. In addition to Taylor, the commission included General William T. Sherman, General William S. Harney, General Alfred E. Terry, General John B. Sanborn, Senator J. B. Henderson, and Colonel Samuel F. Tappan, Chivington’s old enemy and now a dedicated advocate of Indian reform.¹⁵

Not everyone was happy with the appointment of Taylor. He had little experience in Indian matters; his primary qualifications were a reputation for honesty and zeal for reform. But Orville Browning, Secretary of the Interior, lamented, “I now have a Methodist preacher at the head of the Bureau, and I will do the best I can with him.”¹⁶ Taylor faced a hard task. New treaties negotiated at Medicine Lodge and Fort Laramie by the commission had a familiar flaw. The traditional, less tractable groups either stayed away or expressed their dissatisfaction with the terms. It was Taylor’s design to create large reserves from which whites would be excluded while beginning programs of acculturation that hopefully would make the tribes self-supporting and even eligible for citizenship.¹⁷

At one point Taylor and Tappan advocated a separate Department of Indian Affairs. The debate over control by the War Department or the Interior Department was clearly flawed, they argued, by the fact that both departments had interests other than the welfare of Indians. The Interior Department also had responsibility for the distribution of land, and the War Department was the military instrument of national power. The commission grew increasingly divided, however; and when it met in Chicago in the fall of 1868, the majority agreed that the treaty system was obsolete and that tribes were wards of the government and should no longer be treated with as independent nations. The military was given the authority to police tribal hunts north of the Arkansas, and, over the dissent of Taylor and Tappan, the majority voted to return the management of Indian affairs to the War Department.¹⁸

Preoccupied with other matters, Congress did not consider ratification of the Medicine Lodge and Fort Laramie treaties for ten months. Browning gave little support to Taylor, and Tappan hurt more than helped with his combative style. General Sherman then complicated matters further by reorganizing the western departments, creating northern and southern districts that conformed roughly to the proposed northern and southern reservations. This meant that whatever status the Indian Bureau found itself in, the military presence would be there.¹⁹

During the warring times since Sand Creek, the division between Southern and Northern Cheyennes and Southern and Northern Arapahos had deepened. The Southerners struggled to hold on to their favored lands on the Smoky Hill and the Republican, but caught between the two main overland routes and pressed by settlement from the east and the west, they gradually gave ground. After Custer's attack against the Cheyenne village on the Washita River one day short of four years after the Sand Creek Massacre, and the Battle of Summit Springs in July 1869, Cheyenne and Arapaho occupation of the lands between the Platte and the Arkansas came to an end.²⁰

The attack at the Washita renewed conversations about Sand Creek and invigorated the Indian reform movement. Commissioner Taylor deplored the death of Black Kettle and said of the Cheyennes, "Can they ever forget the insignia of those who shot down, by military orders, their old men, women, and children under the white flag and under our own banner at Sand Creek?" On the other hand, a Kansas editor hoped openly that Kansas's governor would "put himself at the head of our western men, follow the Indians to their homes, and do his work, a la Chivington."²¹ Peter Cooper, Lydia Maria Child, John Beeson, Alfred H. Love, and more demanded that Taylor's plan to give responsibility for managing Indian affairs to private organizations, including the Christian churches and missionary societies, be given a chance. Taylor left office with some satisfaction based upon the prospect of President Grant's new "Peace Policy," which would embrace the goals of concentration, Christianity, education, and private property under the direction of religious denominations, all initiatives that Taylor favored.²²

Black Kettle died at the Washita still the advocate of peace, and the Dog Soldiers' power was broken at Summit Springs with the death of Tall Bull. The survivors of Summit Springs pushed north into Nebraska, and the rest of the Southerners eventually surrendered at Fort Supply. The fighting was clearly over in the south when Stone Forehead, the Keeper of the Sacred Arrows, came in.²³ Those who escaped north joined the continuing resistance as allies of the Oglala, Hunkpapa, and Minneconjou Lakota until the end of the wars in the north following the Battle of the Little Big Horn in 1876 and the campaign that followed.²⁴

Yet while it had taken 240 years to push Native peoples beyond the Mississippi River, the Trans-Mississippi West was taken in 40 years. Some scholars liken what happened to a Western Reconstruction that accompanied the Reconstruction of the South, one equally important. With the end of the Civil War, the push west accelerated, driven by railroads, mining, and industrialization. Politicians no longer talked about the Union but preached the new concept of the Nation. Ruthless, freewheeling, capitalistic Americans pressed forward at an astonishing rate in astonishing numbers. Organization, money, and transportation drove the economy and the political system. The Age of Exploitation also reinforced old ideas with new "scientific" justifications of racism taught in universities and explored by scholars, although "scientific racism" and "Social Darwinism" appear to have had little direct impact on policy. The treaty system would be abandoned, and the Cheyennes and Arapahos, along with other indigenous peoples, ultimately saw everything they had known subordinated to the great, hungry behemoth called America.²⁵

The extraordinary expansion was also seen as proof positive of the superiority of the white man's way. That linear line of progress "proved" the point and made leaders even less likely to listen to Native voices or respect Native ways. Therein lay the well-intentioned but misguided answer to the problems that indigenous people faced. All Indians had to do to be "saved" was to accept and embrace the inevitability of progress. Despite the occasional diatribes of Western newspaper editors or the inflated rhetoric of soldiers in the field, there was no longer any need for a policy of extermination. For whites, the solution was self-evident, and they marveled at the Natives' resistance to the "obvious" benefits of salvation through civilization.

Methodist Indian missions had been disrupted by the war, and it took time to reclaim the initiative lost. The steady William H. Goode made a serious effort to reengage with the Indian missions in Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska. The volumes of the Missionary Advocate regularly recorded the problems and occasional successes, but they were surprisingly free of any discussion of the debate over Indian policy or about extending missions to new groups. There was no groundswell of support for the programs of fellow Methodist, Commissioner Taylor. At least part of the problem was that the Methodist Church chose to rely upon the various conferences to support Indian missions. The “itinerant style of ministry” never adapted well to Indian missions because it lacked the long-term form needed for cross-cultural understanding. Without centralized organization and financial support most of the Indian missions dried up.

Perhaps most importantly, the marriage of Church and Union during the war—that reoccurring connection between God and country that Bishop Simpson and many others preached, that joining together of Christianity and civilization—was a unifying theme in the approach the Church took toward Native Americans. When Schuyler Colfax wrote the Northwestern Christian Advocate in the summer of 1865, he painted a bleak picture of the damage done by Indians along the overland routes. He wrote:

There has been a good deal of sympathy lost over the “massacre” of the Indians who committed these deeds, and who had, after months of outrage worse than death, sold a young maiden who they had captured, but whom at last their chiefs had tired of. But if presents such as the government has lavished on them, and annuities, will not keep them at peace, what can be done?

Without attempting to settle this grave problem of what should be done with the Indians, and then what can be done with them, I have become convinced that these Plains should be kept open as a peaceful uninterrupted highway to the States, no matter how many soldiers are required, or what may be the expense.

Every citizen of the United States, especially if he remains within its limits, and, even more, if he aids by his labor in developing the magnificent mineral resources of this country of the far West, has a right to demand the protection of his life and property, and it is the duty of the government to punish or overthrow all the enemies of its citizens and the contemnners [sic] of its power whether they are rebels South, or savages West.²⁶

Of course, Colfax was a politician, with interest in opening the West to settlement, but a more striking insight into the same sentiment was found in the letters of Bishop Cyrus Kingsley, who wrote to the Christian Advocate and Journal in June 1865, “Our government is now at war with the Indians. The latter have destroyed and stolen millions’ worth of property and taken many lives, and are still continuing their depredations in all parts of the West.” He added, “Even the most friendly tribes are stealing continually; and they have been left alone so long that they have become emboldened, believing that they can do as they have done with impunity.” He provided his solution:

To make men of the Indians, in my opinion, requires that they should be collected together and put in one place, large enough and fertile enough to enable them to make a good living, and to grow rich even, by following the pursuits of civilized life. . . . It now costs millions of money to disburse the annuities to the Indians, scattered as they are all over the territories. It is time they were collected together and governed, and taught that they must now earn a livelihood by honest industry, and not by hunting, war, and plunder. This course, in my judgment is most humane to the Indian himself, and the only one that will preserve the race from utter extinction, if even this will do it. But at present there is a war on hand, and the Indian must be caught before he can be reduced to civilization.²⁷

Kingsley concluded that the transcontinental railroad was the answer—a military necessity—and the key to the growth of a new order. Indeed, what is most striking about Kingsley’s letters is their primary focus on the railroad and its economic benefits. In effect, Kingsley reduced Native people to an obstacle. The real mission work to be done, in his view, was the economic development of the West for the nation. Social reform was of limited concern.²⁸

Sand Creek was dealt with gingerly by the Church, but a certain tone remained dominant. On July 26, 1865, the Central Christian Advocate noted that “Bishop Kingsley returned to New York, not having been able to go overland to California on account of ‘friendly Indians.’” The same journal reported on the same day that Chivington was in town, and that he was fully sustained by Colorado. It expressed “great pleasure” that the Colorado Conference had endorsed his actions, which was not true. Plainly, Methodists wanted the charges against Chivington to be false.

In August 1865, after the report of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War was released, the Northwestern Christian Advocate admitted that it was “perplexed” by the case of Colonel Chivington. The editor had known him personally and favorably, the paper said, “and have regarded him as a high-minded Christian gentleman, and a gallant soldier.” He pointed out that Lincoln had nominated him for a brigadier’s commission. So, the claim of a bloody massacre was inconsistent with what they knew of him. They reported contrary claims that the Cheyennes and Arapahos were hostile, and views of some that Chivington deserved promotion rather than censure, then added:

We take it for granted that those who say so do not believe that women and children were slain, and that

Colonel Chivington can show and will show that such was not the fact. For such an act there can be neither defence nor apology. We take it for granted that in endorsing his course the Colonel's friends are prepared to disprove these horrible reports.

The paper continued:

It is true that even mild, humane men residing on the lines of Indian atrocity defend a stern decisive treatment of red men in war. They claim that mercy is construed as cowardice, and that only the most decisive policy can prevent another outbreak—that the death of every Indian found in war is the most merciful policy, as it prevents other tribes from rising; in short, that death is the only argument the red man understands.

We hesitate to accept a theory so utterly at war with Christianity, and so repugnant to human instincts. We concede the ignorance, the brutality, the fiendishness of the Indian warfare, but Christians must not even in war, be brutal or fiendish.

The editor called upon Chivington and his friends to clear his name: "Give us the facts which will enable us to clear his record from charges of cruelty from either causing or permitting the slaughter of helpless women and children." He promised to be the instrument of "clearing away the evil reports" if Chivington's friends would supply the refutation.²⁹

On August 24, R. M. Hatfield wrote a strong rejoinder to this editorial, objecting to the paper becoming the advocate of Colonel Chivington:

Will you allow me to suggest a doubt whether, as things now stand, Col. Chivington's case can be materially improved by anything his friends may say through the public press. As I understand the matter, more than one committee has been appointed by the government to investigate the Sand Creek massacre. If Col. Chivington's course in that affair admits of justification or excuse, let him be vindicated before these committees. They are the legally appointed and proper tribunals for collecting all the facts in the case. Unless it can be shown that the gentlemen composing these committees are incompetent, or prejudiced, no ex parte vindication of Col. C. by his friends will have the weight of a feather with the country. Reports and resolutions in his favor passed by a conference of Methodist Preachers may leave an indelible stigma upon the Church, without doing him the least good.

The country will insist on knowing whether women and children were butchered by men wearing the uniform of the United States, and led by Col. Chivington. If this atrocious crime has been committed they will demand the punishment of the guilty parties. The case is not one that calls for precipitate action. Speaking as a Methodist, I venture to express the hope that we shall do nothing that can be tortured into the semblance of an attempt to apologize for the murder of unoffending women and innocent children.³⁰

Hatfield's warning was well placed. Subsequently, the letter of support from the Colorado ministers, written in April 1865, was released by Chivington as the pressure on him mounted. Several newspapers, including the Central Christian Advocate, claimed that the letter was officially endorsed by the Colorado Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. When the claim was published in the Chicago Tribune, the Northwestern Christian Advocate responded quickly, "We demand the proof," pointing out that the paper cited was "signed by some members of that conference" before the congressional report was published. "We aver furthermore that the members of the Colorado Conference have never approved of what is reported to have occurred at Sand Creek."³¹

The Northwestern editor backed away from Chivington, but when Evans wrote his Reply, it exulted:

Hon. John Evans, late Governor of Colorado, has proven himself an able, statesman like and patriotic administrator of the trust reposed in his hands. He has made a thorough reply to the allegations of certain Reports, has made an ample vindication of his administration from charges affecting his treatment of the Indians, and this day no man [more] fully enjoys the confidence of the people of Colorado.

That much of the opposition was purely political there is, there can be no doubt. Time proves all things, and even the much chronicled "Sand Creek Massacre" has another side than the one so studiously turned to the public eye.³²

Later, the paper announced that Evans and Chaffee had been chosen Senators-elect by the Colorado legislature, adding, "This election of Governor Evans is the answer of Colorado to the insinuations of the writing portion of a certain committee of examination. The Governor has published his own refutation, and its array of logic and facts was unanswerable. Now the State speaks for him." The editor proceeded with a laudatory biographical sketch of Evans, and concluded, "The NORTHWESTERN has never endorsed what is called 'The Sand Creek Massacre.' It has said there are two sides to all questions; and time may show some facts not stated in published reports. It has said, however, that there has been no testimony which has involved Governor Evans in wrong. On the contrary there is evidence that while his care saved the population of the territory from massacre, he was also the protector of the lives and rights of friendly Indian[s].”³³

The Central Christian Advocate took a different, yet consistent, view. “We profoundly regret that a shadow should rest for a moment on either name and hope that they will at the end be justified.” Of Chivington, it said, “If Chivington was the author or agent of cruelties and atrocities contrary to the laws of war, we will submit, though with pain, to his condemnation.” The Central found it harder to condemn Evans. “That he lied or equivocated is beyond credence by those who know him.”³⁴

Chivington’s extended exchange with the Atchison, Kansas papers, continued through the fall of 1865 and into 1866. When Chivington preached at the Atchison Methodist Church, the paper(s) added some additional barbs that provoked Chivington into writing a three-column response. In it he asked if he were the monster he had been portrayed as being. Chivington wrote, “. . . why do not the authorities of the M. E. Church cut me off? Or why do not the orders of Odd Fellows and Masons, of which I am a member, expel me?” In describing the circumstances of the Sand Creek affair, he wrote, “As to the charge that women and children were killed and their persons brutally mutilated, it is utterly false.” He claimed that he saw only one woman killed and said she was fighting with the men. “If any children were killed, I did not see them nor was any such occurrence reported to me by my officers or men.”³⁵

He attached to his letter, the statement of the six Colorado ministers, written in April 1865, and a lengthy set of resolutions from the Masonic Lodges and Chapters in Colorado in support of Chivington. Two days later, he added another lengthy letter promising to continue his fight with the editor, “I have one month set apart to be devoted to this especial business, when the time comes to perform it, and about election day he may ascertain the extent of ‘Church condolence,’ and ‘Lodge sympathy,’ for the person whom he ironically terms the ‘Hero of Sand Creek.’” The editor responded by saying that rather than defending himself with arguments to disprove the charges, Chivington has chosen to offer “groveling, dirty insinuations against us.”

The public at large was less interested in Chivington’s self-justification than in what to do about Indian affairs, more generally. What policy would correct the obvious evils and failures that had led to Sand Creek? In 1865, the New York Times had declared that conditions on the frontier were in crisis, but that “the history of the Chivington massacre is too fresh in the public mind, and will forever be too atrocious in history” to continue current policy.³⁶ Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper blamed the situation on the government.³⁷ That was hardly a startling argument. Lincoln had recognized the need and had promised Bishop Henry Benjamin Whipple, the Episcopalian cleric and defender of Indian rights, “If we get through this war, and I live, this Indian system shall be reformed.”³⁸ But, it was Secretary of War Stanton who offered Whipple the more telling advice, “the government never reforms an evil until the people demand it.”³⁹ That was the biggest problem in the short term. The country’s reform zeal was directed at completing the promise of freedom to former slaves and to reconstructing the South on a different economic model.

The problem was the conflict between a solution to the “Indian question” and the national mission. Lincoln’s plan for the development of the West had been simple. Pass a Homestead Act to encourage settlement. Develop the West’s mineral resources. And build a transcontinental railroad. This was the way of “progress.” This vision, in all three of its aspects, guaranteed continuing conflict with indigenous people. Lincoln’s views on what they must do were far from exceptional. They had to become farmers and live at peace. Senator Doolittle—the same Senator Doolittle who condemned Sand Creek so strongly—said that Indians were dying out as a race. He said the Indian’s fate was determined by “natural causes” linked to contact with a “superior race.”⁴⁰

Roger Nichols, a leading authority on Indian policy during the Civil War, wrote of the dilemma of policy makers:

Therefore, the reformers’ major proposals contained unresolvable contradictions. They sought to find him a place in the face of an advancing civilization that envisioned only continuous removal and eventual extinction. They wanted to advance the Indian to civilization while presuming a civilization that was in dynamic progress, symbolized by an accelerating locomotive that Indians could never catch.⁴¹

Nichols suggested, “The only solution would have been the acceptance of ideals or racial and cultural equality for which nineteenth-century white Americans were not prepared. Neither reformers nor non-reformers respected Indian culture. Indeed they did not even perceive the existence of a Native culture.”⁴² It was not hatred of Indians nor even racism in simple terms that stood in the way; it was a mind-set that could only comprehend civilization in terms of white understandings. Civilization was progress, Christian, agrarian, material, and set in their forms of government and economy. As a result, not even the best, most well-intentioned “friends of the Indians” could see any alternative except changing the Native ways of life. There was no sense of “multiculturalism” or concept of “ethnic cleansing.” There were simply the “gifts” of civilization, which would save the man, and Christianity, which would save the soul. The only real question was how best to bring about the intended result.

In 1865, Senator William Windom approached Bishop Whipple to ask for advice on policy solutions. Whipple had his own views, clearly well-intended, that went about as far as any representative of a major Christian denomination could go in his time, saying that “They are not idolators. They believe in a Great Spirit. They have home affections. They have strong national pride and love of country. They are generally chaste, truthful, honest, generous, and hospitable.” He preached respect for them and blamed the degradation and poverty many of them experienced on “a curse given to them by a Christian people.”⁴³

Whipple had condemned Sand Creek strongly when it occurred and offered advice to the Joint Special Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes. It released its report in January 1867. Methodists participated in the debate only in limited ways. In March of 1866, when one of the several Indian commissions began its work, the Northwestern Christian Advocate opined that the only real question was “what is the true policy of a Christian Nation to its unfortunate wards?” The editor suggested that “a wise and humane Indian policy” should involve “gathering of as many as possible of the civilized Indians into the Indian Territory, and thus securing their rights under the government.” The paper even suggested the possibility of territorial organization across tribal lines with the possibility of an Indian state down the road. The article concluded: “It is a cold, cruel, wicked policy, which abandons a whole people to death with no single effort for their rescue. It may be the descendants of the owners of this continent are to vanish like mist, but while they live we should not abandon them to rapacity and greed.”⁴⁴

In May of 1866, the same paper again claimed the vindication of Governor Evans in the form of a speech by Senator Lane of Indiana on Colorado statehood.⁴⁵ A strong Western point of view was offered in the fall by the Reverend Henry Bannister, of Evanston (and the father-in-law of Oliver Willard). He spoke of Colorado’s promise, but added this:

They are surrounded and infested by hostile Indians whose spirit of late years has been that of murder and plunder, and in respect to whom the feeling of the people there is that of insecurity and their attitude that of unfriendly defensiveness. They are, perhaps, not too acutely sensitive at what they deem unjust criticism in the East upon their feelings toward the Indians—incited as they think this criticism has been by insincere objections raised by disappointed, ambitious politicians from Colorado. Cut off by the Indians from the necessary supplies of life and business, bereft of their citizens by the tomahawk, or by a captivity more horrible to the women captured than a thousand deaths, relieved by no prospect of seeing these nomadic, untamable tribes, conciliated by presents and kind treatment and by ineffective government treaties—why should these Colorado people be a marvel to us if they do consider ours an impracticable sentimentalism that condemns them as barbarians and prescribes a withdrawal of sympathy from them?

He added that “Our ministry [sic] there have [sic] come in for a good share of the depressing influences of their criticism.” The church was dealing with “A whole population given over to intense worldliness with no heart for religious things. . . .”⁴⁶ Little had changed in attitude within the church at large. Bannister’s view of missions was support for the Western conferences. At the same time, he implied that, wrongfully, the Methodist Church in Colorado had suffered because of its connection to Sand Creek. Another blow fell on Colorado on January 28, when President Andrew Johnson vetoed the bill for the admission of Colorado to the Union. Sand Creek was not mentioned by Johnson, but Coloradans were convinced that it was the cause.

In 1867, while critical negotiations were developing on the plains, the Northwestern Christian Advocate revived an old issue, generated by some of the problems associated with the Gilded Age. In July 1867, the paper printed a lengthy editorial on “Barbarism.” The piece noted that “the men who gather upon the frontiers of civilization often grow rude and set up the empire of force. Removed from society they neglect comeliness of person, become forgetful of the amenities of culture, and tend toward lawlessness. Violence rules until organized violence arrests it.” Now, the editorial declared, this downward spiral had spread into the cities. It enumerated violent acts in New Orleans, Memphis, and New York. “Human life is cheap and held in little esteem,” the paper proclaimed. The United States was descending into barbarism, and the church had to take a stand.⁴⁷

The focus revealed a revival of classism in the post-war America set in motion by the breakdown of community that came with industrialization, growth, and immigration. Methodism was now clearly the voice of middle class virtue and increasingly distant from the freewheeling populism of earlier times. This was reflected in the social causes the Church championed. When the Northwestern did turn to Native people, its sentiments were not primarily concerned with winning souls. On July 27, 1867, it addressed Indian policy, proclaiming that “the most fearful atrocities are committed by the Indians—atrocities which are fiendish.” It called policy “a shameful reproach to our statesmen.” It advocated the transfer of policy to the War Department in order to “secure a wiser, more efficient and more humane administration.” It took a hard line:

At all events the present policy is weak, cruel, bloody, inefficient, arrests the growth of our western gold and silver-bearing plains, and costs thousands of lives. Let it be changed. It is imbecile and demoralizing.

The country demands security. The lives of our fellow-citizens must no longer be sacrificed to a system both brainless and heartless. The commerce of the country demands protection. The way to the mineral treasures of the country must be opened and kept open.

Give us an Indian policy which we can look upon with respect, and which will stay the horrid carnival of butchery.

Just four days later, the paper published a letter from Ft. Morgan, Colorado Territory, from the Reverend J. C. Hartzell. He was no reformer. He called for strong action. He said of the Indians’ methods of war:

But numbers are comparatively unimportant, owing to the Indian mode of warfare. A few hundred Indians may foil and exhaust an army of thousands moving in the pomp of civilized warfare. Divided up into parties of from five to twenty-five, well mounted and armed, they can play on all sides of the best organized army, cutting off stragglers and scouts, stealing stock, poisoning springs, and yet by their native shrewdness and acquaintance with the country, elude capture. They have no expenses to meet and care nothing for time. So that with their squaws and papposes hid away in some distant canon, and their animals growing fat on grass the same parties can carry on a continued fight for months. They never think of attacking only where they consider victory certain. What we consider our best means of warfare are for this reason of no use. It is the journeying “pilgrim,” the lone stage coach, the unguarded corral, the poorly garrisoned and protected fort, or the unarmed settler, that they delight to find and attack.

He added:

Savages can only be conquered but by meeting them in their own way. Every warrior killed thus far has cost the Government over a hundred thousand dollars. Let small bodies of troops well mounted and commanded sweep through the country, sparing nothing, and if need be, not even saving women and children. This plan may seem cruel and unchristian, but is it not more humane than to permit the murdering of citizens and destruction of property along our highway year after year? One season of such warfare would make them content to remain upon their ample reservations peaceably, and learn the use of the plow and hoe. . . . They have rights it is true, but those do not guarantee to them the privilege of scalping me and throwing my body to the wolves for amusement.⁴⁸

In October, 1867, during the work of the Peace Commission, a party of reporters visited Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory. Cheyenne was still a railroad camp on the new Union Pacific at the time. One of the reporters, identified simply as “B,” wrote the Northwestern Christian Advocate about the experience. At a dinner held in their honor, he said, events became tense when General Stevenson, their escort, “reflected on Col. Chivington of Sand Creek fame. This was at once resented not only in western but in true frontier style. Several present had a hand in the Sand Creek massacre, and loudly declared they gloried in it as the one grand deed of their lives.” The mayor cooled the temper of the gathering by offering a toast: “Here’s to the City of Cheyenne; may she ever prosper, and the tribe of Indians after whom she is named be completely exterminated.” The reporter said, “I am satisfied of one thing—our boasted civilization has not taken the savage out of us yet.”

The locals dismissed the Peace Commission as a humbug. One said, “Why don’t the government hand over the job to us.” When asked what he would do, he replied, “I’d give ‘em Chivington to the last red d---l, woman and child. We’ll have no peace while one of ‘em lives to curse the ground.” The reporter was shocked and closed his article with this observation: “No, Mr. Mayor, all the champagne in the world cannot wash down this sentiment with the writer. Such a sentiment for American citizens, drunk or sober, is a blot on our Christian civilization—it is atrocious—it is downright savage.”

Despite such vigorous proclamations, Methodist itineracy declined, and a higher, more middle class, educated ministry took charge of most conferences. The frontier point of view and the new educated ministerial approach combined to change the view of social activism if not evangelical zeal. The emphasis of missions became increasingly international. At home, Methodism was more community based and rooted in the new middle class system of the late nineteenth century. Enlightenment prevailed over enthusiasm. Supporting the causes of abolition and union opened the door for a wider range of social concerns within the church, including some that, like union, involved politics. The use of politics to promote temperance, prison reform, children’s issues, and even women’s suffrage reflected a combination of middle class values in response to social ills that accompanied urbanization and industrialization. Missing from the list was any significant initiative on behalf of American Indians.⁴⁹

As one scholar notes about the mood of Methodists toward Indians, “The context was not propitious. Broken treaties, commercial exploitation, white violence, land confiscations, rampant white-borne disease, and immense cultural chauvinism all made it difficult for Methodism to establish a strong presence among Native Americans.”⁵⁰ Worse, it blocked any meaningful dialogue among Methodists about what was right and wrong. The old “anti-Indian sublime” was as fundamental to Methodist thinking as grace or sanctification. The best that could be said of Methodist efforts among Indian people was that enough was done to make the annual reports of the Missionary Society respectable. But there was no aggressive or enthusiastic support for the effort beyond a few missionary spirits.⁵¹ There was no heart for Indian missions because the soul of Methodism was bound up in American exceptionalism.

Wade Crawford Barclay, the standard authority on Methodist missions, found it difficult to laud the efforts. “It cannot be fairly claimed that the Church had an Indian mission program,” he wrote. “Although the Missionary Society nominally sponsored the missions it exercised no real supervision over them.” He could claim, however, that Methodists contributed “to the moral and religious progress of the race.” He wrote, “Churches were founded, Christian leaders developed, hundreds of men and women brought into the Church as members, and the whole tone of Indian community life elevated. In addition to scores of Indian churches, many tribesmen who had achieved citizenship and learned the English language were welcomed without discrimination into membership in English language churches.”⁵² It was an overly generous assessment.

The weak support for missions among the western tribes was demonstrated at the General Conference in 1868, when the Missions Committee, chaired by the venerable William H. Goode, offered a set of resolutions, arguing that as a denomination Methodists could not “be indifferent to the policy of our Government in the management of the Indian tribes within the limits of the United [S]tates involving as it does, the fate of the entire remnant of the race.” The resolutions approved “the pacific policy inaugurated for the settlement of existing difficulties; and we do earnestly recommend that this policy be carried out so far as it can be consistently with the protection and safety of the frontier.” The report endorsed previous Methodist efforts and deemed them a “signal success.” The committee proposed a state organization, or at least a territorial organization, of the Indian Territory and promised to “direct increased effort to their civilization and moral improvement, and will cooperate with the strong arm of the Government, in saving from extermination and oblivion the remnant of this race now remaining upon our soil.”

The report was a testimonial to the work of William H. Goode over the years, but T. H. Pearne moved to amend the resolution to include the passage, “But in our judgment that policy can only be fully and permanently successful by our government, through its agents and officers, keeping strict faith with the Indians; by removing them from contact with corrupt and degraded white men; by teaching them the arts and industries of civilization, and by permitting and protecting unobstructed access to them of the influence of an active and earnest Christianity.” At that point, Reverend A. N. Fisher from Utah delivered an impassioned address presenting the more aggressive Western point of view and closed by asking to indefinitely postpone the first resolution. His motion failed. Goode then called for a vote on the report, and it passed by a vote of eighty-one to twenty-four. There were other maneuvers, but, in the end Reverend B. N. Spahr moved that the entire consideration of the report be indefinitely postponed. The vote was then reconsidered on the motion of B. I. Ives, and the resolution was “laid on the table.” The most courageous and forthright stance so far taken by the Church was squelched by an agreement to do nothing.⁵³

When Ulysses S. Grant became president in 1869, he announced in his inaugural address his plan to reform

Indian policy. During 1869 and 1870 he took steps to implement what became known as the "Peace Policy." It would be controversial from the beginning, both derided and praised, and often misinterpreted both then and since. It was, in fact a bold effort to eliminate the worst elements of the failed policies of the past, both in terms of corruption and of connections between mismanagement of Indian affairs and the Indian wars. He was wise enough to recognize that blaming the Indian wars on unscrupulous and corrupt Indian agents who exploited their charges for personal profit was a simplistic explanation of what had happened and to see that any effort to return the management of Indian affairs to the War Department would be opposed by reformers who viewed the army as the agents of extermination (using Sand Creek as their primary example).⁵⁴

He began by appointing Ely S. Parker as Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Parker was a Seneca educated at a Baptist mission school, trained as a lawyer but denied admission to the New York Bar Association on grounds of his race. He studied civil engineering and served with Grant from Vicksburg to Appomattox. Parker had ideas of his own about how best to smooth the transition from traditional ways to new ways of life for the tribes through the creation of protected enclaves within which the tribes could adapt at a pace that would give them more control over their own lives. He appears to have been chosen, however, because he represented the transition from the old ways to the new as a living example of what could be done.⁵⁵

Grant also created a Board of Indian Commissioners to consist of ten distinguished laymen representing various Christian denominations who would serve the cause of the Indians and advise the government at their own expense. Two of the original board—John V. Farwell, a Chicago businessman, and Henry S. Lane, former governor and U.S. Senator from Indiana—were Methodists. The president's plan also included greatly increased federal aid to Indian education and missions. The most radical part of his reform was to hand over the control of Indian agencies to religious organizations. He reasoned that this church-government partnership would eliminate corruption and be more humane. He did not concern himself with questions about constitutional issues that such a plan might raise. Given the mood of the times, questions about separation of church and state were unlikely to arise. The agencies would be divided among various Christian denominations. In practice, the churches would appoint agents subject to the approval of the president. The agents would then manage the reservations in order to "Christianize and civilize the Indian, and to train him in the arts of peace."⁵⁶

At the time the policy was initiated, Methodists had few Indian missions left, and three-fourths of them were controlled by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The first denominations chosen under the policy were Hicksite and Orthodox Friends (Quakers), who were already working with Indian agencies. They were assigned sixteen agencies. Surprisingly, Methodists were assigned fourteen agencies (all of them to the Northern Church). Presbyterians were assigned nine agencies, Episcopalians eight, Roman Catholics seven, the American Missionary Association six, Dutch Reformers four, Baptists three, and Unitarians two.⁵⁷

The majority of the agencies assigned to the Methodists were in the Pacific Northwest, Montana, and Michigan. This hardly reflected fresh enthusiasm for Native missions. In fact, as one authority put it, "The Peace Policy . . . allowed Methodists to undertake efforts they did not choose to finance themselves."⁵⁸ The government underwrote all of the Methodist mission efforts on their new agencies. Nevertheless, with 20 percent of the agencies in their hands, charges quickly arose that the Methodists were improperly favored. Critics pointed out that Grant had been raised a Methodist and associated with Methodists (although he never joined the church). They listed a string of Methodists that Grant had nominated for various government posts. The Nation claimed that Reverend John P. Newman, pastor of the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church in Washington had undue influence over Grant, and that former U.S. Senator and Secretary of the Interior James Harlan controlled "the Indian Ring." When he retired from the Board of Indian Commissioners in 1881, A. C. Barstow claimed that the board was nothing but a "Methodist Kitchen Cabinet."⁵⁹

Still active in all things related to Methodists and politics, Bishop Matthew Simpson was on hand as chief lobbyist. He delivered the invocation at the 1868 Republican Convention in Chicago. Grant also appointed him to the Santo Domingo Commission. By 1872, Methodists were overwhelming Simpson with requests for support of the Church and their requests for positions. Simpson tried, but Grant was not as cooperative with Simpson as Lincoln had been.⁶⁰

The Catholic Church claimed that Grant had been duped by Methodist propaganda. Almost at once, a battle arose between the Catholics and Methodists over the assignment of agencies. In fact, Catholics had been active on many of the agencies before the Peace Policy. Methodists did not acquit themselves well in the fight, resorting to slander, anti-Catholic propaganda, and even violence. In 1873, a government inspector, Edward Kemble, himself an Episcopalian, wrote of the Methodists, "The denomination having charge here, are not, in one instance, carrying on a religious work separate from the Govt. The Methodists are not able to carry on the Agencies they have grasped here." In 1875, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs said that the Methodist Church was using its authority "for the promotion of Church interests rather than for . . . Indians."⁶¹ Methodists invested more in the Yakima Agency than any other. James "Father" Wilbur was the agent there, and the Church lauded Yakima as the "Model Reservation." Wilbur was acclaimed for his promotion of white culture, although he used tyranny and even forced starvation to make the Indians work.⁶²

The Methodist record was miserable elsewhere. Methodists were regarded as the least engaged and least successful of all of the denominations. In 1880, even the Methodist Missionary Society proclaimed its efforts as part of the Peace Policy generally a failure.⁶³ As one scholar notes, "It did little to improve the service or the condition of the Indian. It did much to perpetuate sectarianism and intolerance and bigotry in America."⁶⁴ Barclay was kinder in his assessment, although he noted "a pervasive sense of despondency concerning the possibility of Indian evangelization and civilization had developed." What was missing, he said, was any enthusiasm for Indian ministry, which led to a pervasive pessimism.⁶⁵

And yet, the Methodist Episcopal Church was the last denomination to abandon the Peace Policy. In April 1882, one month before Congress relieved the Board of Indian Commissioners of all its duties and powers, Dr. John W. Reid, the secretary of the Methodist Missionary Society, complained to the secretary of the interior that he had not honored the Church's nominations for agents in Michigan and at Yakima. The secretary, Henry M. Teller, was himself a Methodist. He was also a former U.S. Senator from Colorado and an associate of John M. Chivington and John Evans in the early days. He took office as an admitted supporter of military control of Indian affairs and an opponent of allotment in severalty which was growing in popularity as the preferred solution to the "Indian question."

Teller told Reid that the Methodists no longer controlled federal appointments and that he did not know what was meant by a "peace policy." He added that church selection of agents had failed to improve the Indian Service, but worse "had resulted in some of the greatest frauds in American history." Reid responded that the loss of the agencies would not pose a problem because "upon a moment's reflection, you will perceive that the peace policy has no relation to the spiritual and religious interests of the Indians. The Government could not, in any way, be cognizant of religious matters."⁶⁶

William T. Sherman, the unrelenting advocate of harsh action against the Indians, wrote to Robert Clarke on February 29, 1880, with his assessment of the changes:

No government on earth has expended as much money, so much charity, so much forbearance in this great problem as has the Govt of the U.S. and if the Christian policy has failed it has not been for want of effort but because the problem is insoluble—unless the Indian will change his nature & habits, select his spot on earth, and become as a white man he is doomed. It is not because the white man is cruel, inhuman, and grasping but because it is the Law of Natural Change & development—the wrong began at Plymouth Rock and will end in the Rocky Mountains.⁶⁷

As one of his recent biographers notes, "Sherman had little compassion for the Indians and no guilt about the failure of the United States to live up to its treaty obligations."⁶⁸ That was by 1880 the most widely held view of white Americans.

The Peace Policy had not brought peace. Even before it was in place, on January 23, 1870, Colonel E. M. Baker attacked a camp of Piegans in Montana and killed 173 men, women and children.⁶⁹ The New York Times immediately condemned it as a "sickening slaughter" in "the Chivington style."⁷⁰ The Baker Massacre deepened the divide between reformers and the military.⁷¹ In 1871, the treaty system was formally abandoned, although previous obligations could not be ignored.⁷² There would be more wars across the West. The Southern Cheyennes and Arapahos would be involved in the Red River War of 1874, and the Northern Cheyennes would be a part of the Great Sioux War of 1876 in which George Custer would make his "Last Stand." Northern Cheyennes were sent south to the reservation in Oklahoma where they were very unhappy. In 1878, Dull Knife and Little Wolf left the reservation in a desperate effort to return to Montana. Dull Knife would surrender at Fort Robinson, Nebraska. Imprisoned in freezing weather, they broke out and paid in blood in their drive to reach Montana. Little Wolf's group reached Montana before the remnant of Dull Knife's. They had fought their way back and their fate was still uncertain when the Peace Policy was abandoned.

So, with the end of the Peace Policy, Methodist efforts among the Indians reverted to the traditional emphasis on missions and education, but in the absence of government funding support for Indian missions dropped dramatically. Thereafter, Methodists played a limited role in Indian missions or in moral and ethical discourse on the fate of indigenous peoples. No aggressive reform element emerged within the Church. It was plainly an establishment church. A Methodist presence remained in policy circles, however.

Hiram Price, who served as Commissioner of Indian Affairs between 1881 and 1885 was a devout Methodist. As an advocate of allotment in severalty, he had a hard-nosed point of view: "Let the laws that govern a white man, govern the Indian. The Indian must be made to understand that if he expects to live and prosper in this country, he must learn the English language and learn to work."⁷³ In December 1882, he was directed by Secretary Teller "to formulate certain rules . . . to abolish rites and customs so injurious to the Indians."⁷⁴ This led to a code of laws governing participation in certain ceremonies and dances, practices of medicine men, plural marriages, purchase of wives or concubines, opposition to the "civilization program," the destruction of property by mourners, and other traditional ways. A court composed of three Indians was formed to enforce the new code. In this manner, a Methodist Secretary of the Interior and a Methodist Commissioner of Indian Affairs instituted a program designed to eliminate traditional cultures as a means of promoting their view of civilization.

Curiously, though, Price and Teller differed on the basic policy issue of the 1880s. Price was a strong advocate of allotment in severalty, seeing it as the only way to end corruption and dependence on government annuities. On the other hand, Teller opposed allotment. In 1880, Teller, then a U.S. Senator from Colorado, told his colleagues in the Senate:

If I stand alone in the Senate, I want to put upon the record my prophecy in this matter [of allotment], that when thirty or forty years shall have passed and these Indians shall have parted with their title, they will curse the hand that was raised professedly in their defense to secure this kind of legislation, and if all of the people who are clamoring for it understood Indian character, and Indian laws, and Indian morals, and Indian religion, they would not be here clamoring for this at all.⁷⁵

The president of the Board of Indian Commissioners between 1881 and 1890 was Clinton B. Fisk, a Methodist, and Daniel Dorchester, a Methodist minister, was named Superintendent of Indian Education during the time that allotment of land began under the Dawes Act, passed in 1887. Methodists and their publications generally favored this policy. It would, as the New York Advocate suggested in 1886, allow the Indian to "take care of himself as a self-respecting individual."⁷⁶

The greatest success for Methodists came in mission areas where Native preachers were able to preach the gospel while showing respect for traditional ways and even incorporating tribal spiritualism and symbology into the services. The old Indian Mission Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, continued its work in the Indian Territory (Oklahoma after 1889) until it was absorbed into the Oklahoma Conference in 1906.⁷⁷ With this change, the Oklahoma Conference shed its missionary emphasis and became more concerned with issues of membership, money, and buildings, typical of other conferences. In the process, the new conference lost about half of its Indian members. In 1910, the Oklahoma Conference was split into the East Oklahoma Conference and the West Oklahoma Conference. In this process, the new white-dominated conferences segregated Indian work from other congregations.

This was an era of major exploitation of Indian people in Oklahoma, and the Church was a conscious partner in the process and dismissed Indian churches as "unsightly relics of the past." The justifications were the familiar themes of progress, and assimilation. Methodist evangelism rested squarely on the need for individual repentance and the need to forsake old ways as sinful and accept a new birth. That meant, practically, abandoning Native ways altogether.⁷⁸

Indian congregations dwindled, but their churches survived. Indian congregations, both those of long standing like the Cherokees and Creeks, and more recent ones such as John Jasper Methvin's Kiowa congregation in Anadarko, were able to maintain connections with their past and to accept what one scholar calls "selective adoption" of Christian beliefs and ways. In 1918, a new Indian Mission was created, which existed from 1918 until 1939, when the northern and southern branches of Methodism were merged. This new arrangement helped, but Native congregations continued to be marginalized. Nevertheless, with more autonomy, Indian congregations grew. With Christianity at the center, camp meetings, and quarterly singing conventions, church officials interfered less often. Even so, the Indian Mission continued to have issues. As part of the Native struggle, in 1972, The United Methodist Church established the Oklahoma Indian Missionary Conference.⁷⁹

J. J. Methvin, who was traditional in his belief that Christ was the sole way to salvation, recognized the good in Native society and engaged individuals in respectful conversation about their beliefs. He never loosened his own Methodist beliefs, but he succeeded more than others because he involved the Kiowa (and other) members in understanding the process of believing. As Smith concludes, a few missionaries, like Methvin, understood their mission differently than the majority:

For them, Indians could not only control Christianity among their communities, they were necessary for Christianity to take hold at all. Understanding how religious beliefs motivate groups, rather than judging these beliefs on more modern terms that stress their ethnocentric or adversarial overtones, reveals a broader picture of the missionization process and the ways in which individuals exploited religion and church structures for their own needs.⁸⁰

Bishop Whipple, the Episcopalian reformer, wrote of his service among the Ojibwes, “Nothing lingers longer in memory than the nights spent around the Indian campfire. There, in the heart of primeval nature, under the subtle influence of the ever-shining stars and the murmur of fragrant pines, we have been able to draw forth the legends and traditions of the Indians as we could have done no other way.”⁸¹ He was very close to understanding the missing link in missionary efforts—the need to know and understand the Native way of seeing. He was, after all, the man who had gone to Washington in 1862 to plead the cause of the Sioux in Minnesota and try to save the lives of those sentenced to death, when the white people of Minnesota were demanding extermination. Gustav Neibuhr has written of Whipple, “He recognized that moral authority, when kept sheathed like a sword in its scabbard, eventually loses its purpose.”⁸²

Yet, ultimately, Whipple saw no answer other than capitulation to civilization that ironically made him as much the instrument of conquest as the soldiers who hunted down the Minnesota Sioux he sought to understand and to protect. It was not a bad heart that made him so. He loved. But he could not get beyond the way of seeing that was his inheritance. He could not comprehend that the solution he saw would require Native people to give up the things dearest to them. Their disparate histories offered proof of their capacity to adapt, of their ability to change, but they also revealed the need, ever present, to adapt and to change within the context of their own culture and way of seeing. Given the velocity of change in the nineteenth century, time was too short for the transition that was needed, but it would have been helpful had the churches—which, after all, played such a great role in the shaping and implementation of policy—seen the need.

The Methodist Episcopal Church had no equivalent to Bishop Whipple as an advocate for Indian rights. William H. Goode had a “good heart” and a passion for mission work among the Indians, and there were others within the Church as ministers and laymen who expressed concern, but most of them found no calling to political activism on behalf of American Indians. They relied instead on the conviction that Christian faith itself was the only solution. The dilemma was inherent in Lincoln’s vision of the West as expressed in his annual message in 1864—“to render it secure for the advancing settler, and to provide for the welfare of the Indian.”⁸³ It was an inherently flawed conception given the shared view of both those who favored a harsh policy and those who wanted to “save” the Indians that Natives were “savages” who had to give way to the forces of “Civilization.” As David Nichols has pointed out, “Civilization, not culture, was White America’s key word-concept.” “Savage” was, by definition, “anti-Civilization.” It was not a view unique to Methodists, by any means; but by the Civil War, the Methodist Episcopal Church in the North saw itself as the agent of civilization and committed to its advance. The only option was “change or die,” whatever the solution to the “Indian question” was offered.⁸⁴

In his review of the Church from 1860 to 1875, Bishop Simpson, wrote of new missions to Italy, Japan, and Mexico but he did not mention any issues related to the United States’ Native tribes. So far, no discourse has been found written by Bishop Simpson on Sand Creek or post-war Indian policy. In his 1877 treatise, A Hundred Years of Methodism, he mentioned the Wyandot Mission and the beginnings of missions in Oregon. His only commentary was far too familiar: “There is something sad connected with the condition of the Indian population. Gradually they are melting away. They imitate the vices of the whites, without cultivating their virtues. Tribe after tribe is disappearing, and only a poor remnant remains.”⁸⁵ One recent study concludes that “as far as we know [Simpson] asked no questions about Sand Creek, and never mentioned the event throughout the rest of his public life, much less express any remorse.”⁸⁶

Dr. Charles Eastman, the Santee physician, told the story of a missionary who came to his people to preach.

He told them of the Creation and the fall of humankind by the eating of the forbidden fruit. The Indians listened quietly and respectfully, and when he had finished, one of them told him an ancient story about the origin of maize.

The missionary then said to them, "What I have told to you are sacred truths, but this that you tell me is pure fable and falsehood!"

"My brother," the Indian replied quietly, "it seems that you have not been well grounded in the rules of civility. You saw that we, who practice these rules, believed your stories; why then do you refuse to credit ours?"⁸⁷

Hoistah was a Cheyenne woman who lost her children and grandchildren at Sand Creek. As a member of Black Kettle's manhao, she was also present at the Washita as well. It was then that "her heart turned against the pale-faced people." Later, on the reservation in Oklahoma, she was encouraged to follow the missionaries' teachings and adopt white society's ways. Her response was plain: "When I die I hope that I shall be wrapped in a robe and hoisted on a scaffold. Perhaps whistling winds will soon blow me down to earth, and my bones will be rattled over the plains by wild beasts. But until my bones are separated one from the other I shall remain a Cheyenne and continue to despise the pale-faced people and all their ways."⁸⁸

James West, a Southern Cheyenne and an ordained minister in the American Baptist Church, speaks of a conversation he had once had with Mutsiiuiv, Sweet Medicine, who told him of the long-ago time at Bear Butte when he gave the people the knowledge they needed to know, including the idea that the Medicine Wheel could only be broken by the decisions of the people. After the conversation, West said that he did not want to leave, "But, He sent me into the world to share the truth of Maheo's love."

This concept of seeing in Native spirituality elements consistent with the Christian gospel was surprisingly absent from the missionary rhetoric of nineteenth-century Methodism or from the theological discourse of the times. Rather, Church doctrine emphasized that God gave Christians the destiny of conquering the rest of creation in his name. "This has not been an expression of an inevitable fate," West writes, "but rather a purpose or justification of historical events." West says that when Sweet Medicine gave Mahuts, the Sacred Arrows, to the Tsistsistas, he told the people, "Do not forget me. This is my body I am giving you. Always think of me."⁸⁹

Notes: Chapter X

1. Carwardine, "Methodist Politics and the Coming of the Civil War," p. 598. See also Gienapp, Origins of the Republican Party, passim, which traces the role of Methodists in the political maneuverings that led to the war. Methodists had become a divisive force in the impending crisis from the 1844 split over slavery.

2. Clark, Life of Simpson, pp. 248-258; Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 244-295.

3. John D. McDermott, Circle of Fire: The Indian War of 1865 (Mechanicsville, PA: Stackpole Books, 2003), pp. 1-14; Jeffrey Ostler, The Lakotas and the Black Hills: The Struggle for Sacred Ground (New York: Viking, 2010), 49-53; Bob Drury and Tom Clavin, The Heart of Everything That Is: The Untold Story of Red Cloud, An American Legend (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2013), 190-199; Doreen Chaky, Terrible Justice: Sioux Chiefs and U.S. Soldiers on the Upper Missouri, 1854-1868 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2012), 241-258; Utley, Frontiersmen in Blue, pp. 300-301.

4. Bent, Life of Bent, pp. 164-168; Halaas and Masich, Halfbreed, pp. 155-180; Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 311-322. An essential work for understanding the role of the Dog Soldiers is Jean Afton, David Fridtjof Halaas, and Andrew E. Masich, with Richard N. Ellis, Cheyenne Dog Soldiers: A Ledgerbook History of Coups and Combat (Niwt, CO: Colorado Historical Society and the University Press of Colorado, 1997).

5. Porter to Barlow, January 11, 1864 [Content indicates that this should be 1865], C. S. S. Maberley to Barlow, January 12, 1865, Barlow Collection.

6. Paul A. Malkoski, editor, This Soldier Life: The Diaries of Romine H. Ostrander, 1863 and 1865, in Colorado Territory (Denver: Colorado Historical Society, 2006), pp. 71, 76, 80, 82-83, 88. On January 19, 1865, Ostrander wrote of Moonlight that he was ferreting out individuals who had had "a good thing" for the past two or three years, "making money out of our dear old Uncle, when his back was turned." He wrote that Moonlight "has found out more . . . since he has been here than Chivington would have done for a year to come."

7. McDermott, Circle of Fire, pp. 158-169; David E. Wagner, Patrick Connor's War: The 1865 Powder River Indian Expedition (Norman, OK: Arthur H. Clark Company, 2010), pp. 261-268; Richard N. Ellis, General Pope and U.S. Indian Policy (Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 1970), pp. 87-115; Micheal Clodfelter, The Dakota War: The United States Army Versus the Sioux, 1862-1865 (Jefferson, NC: McFarland & Company, 1998), pp. 214-215.

8. Utley, The Indian Frontier, p. 95.

9. Samuel A. Kingman, "Diary of Samuel A. Kingman at Indian Treaty of 1865," Kansas Historical Quarterly, I (1932): 442-450; Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 396-403; Halaas and Masich, Halfbreed, pp. 204-213; Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 562-566.

10. Berthrong, Southern Cheyennes, pp. 245-265.

11. Critical sources for following the place of Sand Creek in the public policy debate include Mardock, Reformers; Prucha, Policy

- in Crisis; Robert H. Keller, Jr., American Protestantism and United States Indian Policy, 1869-82 (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1983); and C. Joseph Genetin-Pilawa, Crooked Paths to Allotment: The Fight over Federal Indian Policy after the Civil War (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2012); Linda K. Kerber, "The Abolitionist Perception of the Indian," Journal of American History, LXII (1975): 271-295. Important contemporary examples of various approaches by reformers and critics of reform include Henry Benjamin Whipple, Lights and Shadows of a Long Episcopate: Being Reminiscences and Recollections of the Right Reverend Henry Benjamin Whipple, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Minnesota (New York: Macmillan Company, 1899), pp. 535-538 (written originally as part of a report in 1868); Francis A. Walker, The Indian Question (Boston: James R. Osgood and Company, 1874); George W. Manypenny Our Indian Wards (Cincinnati: Robert Clark and Company, 1880); Helen Hunt Jackson, A Century of Dishonor (Boston: Roberts Brothers, 1886); Nelson Miles, Personal Recollections (Chicago: Werner Company, 1896); Lydia Maria Child, "The Indians," The Standard, I (May 1870): 1-6; Elliot Coues, "The Western Sphynx: An Analysis of Indian Traits and Tendencies," The Penn Monthly, 10 (March 1879): 180-193. There is also a substantial literature of recollections by Coloradans, both pro-Sand Creek and anti-Sand Creek.
12. Prucha, Great Father, I, 485-488; Chaput, "Doolittle Survey," pp. 269-282; Harry Kelsey, "The Doolittle Report of 1867: Its Preparations and Shortcomings, Arizona and the West, 17 (1975): pp. 107-120.
13. John H. Monnett, Where a Hundred Soldiers Were Killed: The Struggle for the Powder River Country in 1866 and the Making of the Fetterman Myth (Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 2008); Robert M. Utley, Frontier Regulars: The United States Army and the Indian, 1866-1890 (New York: Macmillan Company, 1963); pp. 93-110; J. W. Vaughn, Indian Fights: New Facts of Seven Encounters (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1966), pp. 14-90.
14. William Y. Chalfant, Hancock's War: Conflict on the Southern Plains (Norman: Arthur H. Clark Company, 2010).
15. Prucha, Great Father, I, 488-496; Douglas C. Jones, The Treaty of Medicine Lodge: The Story of the Great Treaty Council as Told by Eyewitnesses (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1966); Henry M. Stanley, "A British Journalist Reports the Medicine Lodge Peace Councils of 1867," Kansas Historical Quarterly, XXXIII (1967): 249-320; Chaky, Terrible Justice, pp. 341-359.
16. William E. Unrau, "Nathaniel Green Taylor, 1867-1869," Kvasnicka and Viola, Commissioners of Indian Affairs, pp. 116-117.
17. Ibid., pp. 117-120; Genetin-Pilawa, Crooked Paths, pp. 67-72.
18. Genetin-Pilawa, Crooked Paths, pp. 71-72.
19. Prucha, Great Father, pp. 494-496.
20. Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 507-619; Berthrong, Southern Cheyennes, pp. 318-371. See also Stan Hoig, The Battle of the Washita (Garden City, NY: Doubleday & Company, 1976), and Jerome A. Greene, Washita: The U.S. Army and the Southern Cheyennes, 1867-1860 (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2004).
21. AR, CIA, 1868, p. 12; Kansas State Record (Topeka), August 21, 1868.
22. See Cora Daniels Tappan and Wendell Phillips in National Anti-Slavery Standard, May 29, 1869, and June 12, 1869. See also Kerber, "Abolitionist Perception," pp. 288-295; Lydia Maria Childs, Appeal for the Indian (New York: William P. Tomlinson, 1868); and Mardock, Reformers, pp. 47-128. During this period General Sherman mounted a strong defense of the military and made every effort to distance the regular army from Sand Creek. He insisted, "We don't want to exterminate or even fight them. At best it is an inglorious war, not apt to add much to our fame or personal comfort. . . . To accuse us of inaugurating or wishing such a war, is to accuse us of a want of common sense. . . ." Quoted in Letter of the Secretary of War Communicating . . . Information in Relation to the Late Indian Battle on the Washita River. Senate Executive Document No. 18, 40th Congress, 3rd Session (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1869), pp. 4-5.
23. Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 532-619; Hyde, Life of Bent, pp. 328-340.
24. Utley, Frontier Regulars, pp. 236-295.
25. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 336-349; Osterhammel, Transformation of the World, pp. 331-346, 368-374, 826-836; Heather Cox Richardson, West from Appomattox: The Reconstruction of America after the Civil War (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2007), pp. 160-178; Bain, Empire Express, pp. 341-390; Saxton, Rise and Fall of the White Republic, pp. 284-288; Wineapple, Ecstatic Nation, pp. 506-593; White, Fatal Environment, pp. 209-532; Elliott West, "Conclusion," Robert K. Sutton and John A. Latschar, editors, American Indians and the Civil War: Official National Park Service Handbook (Washington, DC: National Park Service, 2014), pp. 180-193.
26. Northwestern Christian Advocate, June 21, 1865.
27. Christian Advocate and Journal, July 20, 1865.
28. Northwestern Christian Advocate, July 12, July 19, 1865.
29. Ibid., August 16, 1865.
30. Ibid., August 30, 1865.
31. Ibid., July 20, 1865.
32. Ibid., December 6, 1865.
33. Ibid., December 27, 1865.
34. Central Christian Advocate, July 26, 1865.
35. Atchison Weekly Freedom's Champion, June 26, 1866.
36. New York Times, July 29, 1865.
37. Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, February 1, 1868.
38. Whipple, Lights and Shadows, p.137. Lincoln also told John Beeson essentially the same thing. See Mardock, Reformers, p. 13.

39. Ibid., p. 144.
40. Congressional Globe, 38th Congress, 2nd Session, January 13, 1865, Pt 1, 254.
41. Nichols, Lincoln and Indians, p. 197.
42. Ibid., pp. 196-206. In light of these attitudes, Nichols asked the question, "What could have broken the chain?" He concluded, "This is where the historian must view the situation as a historic tragedy rather than circumstances in which personal blame can be assigned."
43. Whipple to the secretary of the interior, February 23, 1861, Whipple to Thomas Galbraith, April 15, 1861, Henry Benjamin Whipple Papers, Minnesota Historical Society, Box 40, Letterbook 3. Yet Whipple always conceded that Indians were "savages" in his efforts at reform.
44. Northwestern Christian Advocate, March 2, 1866.
45. Ibid., May 9, 1866.
46. Ibid., October 31, 1866.
47. Ibid., July 3, 1867.
48. Ibid., July 31, 1867.
49. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, pp. 287-390; Hempton, Methodism, pp. 178-201; Marty, Righteous Empire, pp. 137-196.
50. Hempton, Methodism, p. 155.
51. Robert H. Keller, Jr., American Protestantism and United States Indian Policy, 1869-82 (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1983), pp. 54-58.
52. Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 363-364.
53. Journal of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church Held in Chicago, Ill., 1868 (New York: Carlton & Lanhann, 1868), pp. 236-237; and Daily Christian Advocate, May 26, 27, 1868.
54. Prucha, Great Father, I, 501-527; Genetin-Pilawa, Crooked Paths, pp. 73-111; Keller, Protestantism and Indian Policy, pp. 17-45; Mardock, Reformers, pp. 47-66; Fritz, Assimilation, pp. 56-86.
55. Genetin-Pilawa, Crooked Paths, pp. 56-93, offers a fresh and challenging view of Parker's career as well as insights into Grant's reasons for choosing him as Commissioner of Indian Affairs in 1869. See also Henry G. Waltmann, "Ely Samuel Parker, 1869-1871," Kvasnicka and Viola, Commissioners of Indian Affairs, pp. 123-133.
56. Keller, Protestantism and Indian Policy, pp.32-35; Forbes, "Methodism and Policy," pp. 21-23.
57. Keller, Protestantism and Indian Policy, pp. 35-36. Forbes, "Methodism and Policy," p. 22, says that Keller "exaggerates" the inactivity of Methodist Episcopal activity in 1870, although "in comparative terms he is close to the truth." He says that Robert Lee Witner, in his "The Methodist Episcopal Church and Grant's Peace Policy: A Study of the Methodist Agencies, 1870-1882." unpublished Ph.D. dissertation (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota, 1959), p. 280, was more careful when he said, "During the period in which the peace policy was in effect, the Methodist Episcopal Church had long since lost the great interest it once had in Indian mission work, and it made little effort and spent little money to implement it or extend them."
58. Forbes, "Methodism and Policy," p. 22.
59. Keller, Protestantism and Indian Policy, pp. 36-38.
60. Ibid. p. 38.
61. Ibid., p. 55.
62. Ibid., pp. 55-56; Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 355-356.
63. Keller, Protestantism and Indian Policy, pp. 70-71.
64. Witner, "Methodist Episcopal Church and Peace Policy," p. 181, quoted in Forbes, "Methodism and Policy," p. 23.
65. Barclay, Methodist Missions, III, 364.
66. Keller, Protestantism and Indian Policy, p. 173.
67. Quoted in Marzsalek, Passion for Order, pp. 399-400.
68. Ibid., p. 391.
69. Roger J. Ege, Tell Baker to Strike Them Hard! Incident on the Marias, 23 Jan. 1870 (Bellevue, NB: Old Army Press, 1970).
70. New York Times, February 24, 1870.
71. An excellent summary of reform reaction to the incident is found in Mardock, Reformers, pp. 67-72. Lydia Maria Child, Samuel Tappan, and even William Lloyd Garrison joined reform newspapers in denouncing the incident, which, in turn, drew strong reactions from the military, which saw comparisons to Sand Creek misplaced. See Utley, Frontier Regulars, pp. 188-214.
72. Prucha, Great Father, I, 527-533.
73. Extract from the Report of Hiram Price, October 24, 1881, AR, CIA, 1881, in Prucha, Documents of United States Indian Policy, p. 155. See also Floyd A. O'Neil, "Hiram Price, 1881-85," Kvasnicka and Viola, Commissioners of Indian Affairs, pp. 173-178, and Prucha, Great Father, II, 721.
74. O'Neil, "Price," pp. 175-176; Prucha, Great Father, II, 246-252.
75. Quoted in Prucha, Great Father, II, 666.
76. Prucha, Policy in Crisis, pp. 222, 255-256, 305-309.
77. Tash Smith, Capture These Indians for the Lord: Indians, Methodists, and Oklahomans, 1844-1939 (Tucson: University of Arizona Press, 2014), pp. 131-133; Noley, First White Frost, p. 204.
78. Smith, Capture These Indians for the Lord, pp. 133-153, provides a cogent and disturbing view of the marginalization of Indian Methodists between 1906 and 1918.

79. Ibid., pp. 154-186; Noley, First White Frost, pp. 213-230.

80. Smith, Capture These Indians for the Lord, p.194. Smith's book is a model for future research on the history of Church relations with indigenous people.

81. Whipple, Lights and Shadows, p. 149.

82. Neibuhr, Lincoln's Bishop, p. xiv.

83. Quoted in Nichols, Lincoln and Indians, p. 199.

84. Ibid., pp. 199-201.

85. Simpson, Hundred Years of Methodism, p. 281.

86. Salter, "Simpson and Patronage," p. 223.

87. Eastman, Soul of the Indian, p. 31.

88. Stephen Melvil Barrett, Hoistah, An Indian Girl (New York: Duffield and Company 1913), pp. 116-117. Hoistah was apparently Masikota (the manhao largely wiped out by cholera in 1849). Afterward she lived with Black Kettle's people.

89. West, "Another Vision," pp. 30-37. See also John Stands in Timber and Margo Liberty, A Cheyenne Voice: The Complete John Stands In Timber Interviews (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2013), pp. 32-33, 158.

Chapter XI

Chivington and Evans: The Later Years

On August 19, 1865, after the report of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War was released, the Denver Gazette published an editorial on John Evans and John Chivington, labeling them “the Damon and Pythias of Colorado.” The Gazette gleefully declared that these “Siamese Twins of Indian notoriety have so inextricably got their feet into the jaws of the VIRGIN (which anglicized means mantrap) of Indian difficulties, that it is amusing to see them . . . wriggle and twist like impaled centipedes.” The paper pointed out that Evans had told the editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate that all of the Indians in Colorado were hostile except for one group of friendlies at Fort Lyon who were loyal to the government. “These facts were given to the public in the columns of the Advocate,” the paper gloated, “and before a copy of the paper reached Denver, his partner had massacred his friendly Indians.” The Gazette continued:

This accounts for the shuffling and prevarication; either Pythias must fall or Damon must prevaricate, ERGO Damon prevaricated—Pythias was temporarily saved. But ere long Damon finding he cannot save his friend without endangering his own life, must and will throw him over. It may save his life, but the Senate is lost for ever. If he wept when he signed his abdication of the Senate last fall, what will he do, when throne and scepter, good name and character is gone. We forget, he will have a character which the highest tribunal of his country has given him, that of “gross shuffling and prevarication.”

The paper recounted Chivington’s circumstances and the seemingly universal condemnation of his course. “Can it be possible, that such a universal verdict is unjust or untrue?” editor F. J. Stanton asked. “These are no copperhead charges, these are no Democratic libels, the best Republican papers in the East all sing the same song, play the same tune, but all agree in the meter and the key—for all agree in adopting the popular march of the ‘Blood-hound of Zion.’”

The Gazette was correct in pointing out the difficulty that Evans’s statement put Chivington in, and it furthered the idea that Chivington and Evans had been partners in the grand design that led to Sand Creek. But there is no evidence that the friendship between John Chivington and John Evans survived the Sand Creek Massacre. John Chivington always insisted that the Sand Creek Massacre was just. John Evans distanced himself from Sand Creek while justifying his policies toward the Cheyennes and Arapahos and blaming the tribes for what happened.

The argument can be made that they were never as close as the literature has suggested, even before Sand Creek. Their positions and their common connection to the Methodist Church forced them together, and for a time they doubtlessly saw their futures linked. But while Chivington appreciated Evans’s connections, Evans was not the kind of man a frontier-type like Chivington could respect. And by the summer of 1864, Evans had lost confidence in Chivington and begun to make his appeals directly to General Curtis and Secretary of War Stanton. By the time that Chivington declared martial law in Denver in August 1864, the governor’s enemies (who had been fond of linking Chivington and Evans) were claiming that “Chivington and his friends kept up their reports of indians [sic] to throw the governor into contempt and become candidate for the Senate himself.”¹

Evans was blindsided by the Sand Creek Massacre, and while he took the public position of not saying anything about it until he knew the facts, he and Chivington never stood together again. In the heat of controversy during 1865, both men were defending themselves, so that it was difficult to sort things out; but although he never said so publicly, Evans distanced himself from Chivington. He felt betrayed, but he could not afford to admit it because of the public mood in Colorado. He hid instead in his defense of Colorado’s soldiers and his own policies. The debacle of the 1865 election left both men reeling from the impact. Though defended in the press, they both felt the sting and imagined the consequences for their futures. Years later, Mrs. John Evans, in an interview made this cautious but telling remark: “Gov. Evans and Col. Chivington were in close sympathy, especially in the Methodist Church, and Gov. Evans got more credit than he liked for a good many of Chivington’s acts which he did not countenance or approve of.”²

The river-town prize fighter reemerged in Chivington. He was an angry man in 1865 and 1866, uncertain of his future and striking out at his perceived enemies. His journalistic feud with the Atchison, Kansas, newspaper editor was a case in point. He did not build a clear argument against his editorial critic but assailed his character in a storm of angry rhetoric. Sand Creek had been a desperate gambler's throw that Chivington hoped would rescue his career, make him a hero in the mold of Harney and Connor, and move him to high office. Instead, it made him a social pariah.

On December 13, 1864, the Rocky Mountain News had called the Sand Creek campaign "the most effective expedition against the Indians ever carried out," claiming that "the chastisement given to the savages is more severe than the celebrated threshing Harney gave the Sioux at Ash Hollow a few years since." It had gravely predicted that Sand Creek would strike terror "into all of the Indian tribes of the Plains" and have a similar effect as Harney's victory. Alexander Safely, who had testified for Chivington at the military commission, reported that General Harney, the hero of Ash Hollow and one of the treaty commissioners at the Little Arkansas, had said that if he had had his way, he would have given the Indians "a little more of Sand Creek" and proclaimed that "he liked Colonel Chivington's style of treating with Indians."³

General Harney reacted angrily. Harney said that he had never "felt or expressed any approval or any sentiment but loathing and abhorrence, respecting the Sand Creek Massacre and its author Col. Chivington." He admitted that he had used "exemplary severity" in his own dealings with the Indians, but he continued, "There are things which I have never allowed myself to do, or to consider permissible, and foremost among these is the violation of plighted faith. I never granted to any man or any band of men, terms of capitulation which I permitted to be afterwards broken. I never made a treaty to lull my enemies into security, in order that I might abuse their trust for their ruin; still less in order to gain an opportunity of destroying men who were friendly to me."⁴

Although Chivington was applauded by Coloradans and Westerners in other territories who favored "Chivington's style of warfare," he still faced the charge that Sand Creek was "an act of hideous cruelty, garnished with all the accessories of fraud, lying, treachery and beastially [sic]."⁵ More and more people distanced themselves from him, including soldiers from the Third Regiment as well as the First Regiment and an imposing list of line officers from Salt Lake City to Washington, D.C. General Connor distanced himself from Chivington and reminded others of his warning that any attack that did not crush Indian resistance would only make things worse.

Frank Hall, one of the editors of the Black Hawk Mining Journal in the 1860s and a man who served as Secretary of Colorado under four governors, reflected on Chivington's dilemma in his massive History of the State of Colorado:

No doubt the gigantic Colonel felt, as he surveyed the gory field strewn with dead savages, that he had won a brilliant victory which would cover his name with imperishable renown, and perhaps embellish his uniform with coveted stars of a Brigadier. He had in mind also, General Harney's famous achievement at Ash Hollow in September 1855, and felt that he had eclipsed the glory of that historic massacre, but forgot that Harney gave no orders to kill everything in sight, and hence saved himself the disgrace of an indiscriminate slaughter.⁶

Chivington never grasped the point. He rationalized and denied the charge, but he was still denounced as a "violinator of treaties and mutilator of the dead" and compared to Henry Wirz, "starver of Yankee prisoners and patron-saint of Andersonville" rather than to officers like Harney and Connor. Even many of the Sand Creek "vindicators" in 1865 understood that sending him to Washington would be disastrous for Colorado's interests and doom statehood. Once he withdrew from the Colorado Senate race in November 1865, he was without a rudder.

The Colorado Conference of the Methodist Church could not afford to readmit him to the ministry given the controversy (though some would have voted to do it), and he could expect no fresh appointment from the military that was distancing itself from him as far as possible and blaming him for the renewed violence in the overland routes. For the first time in more than thirty years, he had to make his own way, apart from the Methodist Church or the government. He traveled between Denver and Nebraska City, Omaha, and Atchison, Kansas. He found support for his handling of Indian affairs in Nebraska, and he preached some as well, but he was drawn more and more toward freighting for his livelihood.

His son, Thomas Chivington, and his son-in-law, Thomas Pollock, were both successful freighters during the Civil War, hauling civilian goods and contracting to move government supplies. Colonel Chivington may have worked with them in the short run, but he soon decided to create his own freighting operation. In March 1866, with the backing of the Reverend Oliver A. Willard, who borrowed $10,000 from an Omaha bank, and the advice of Pollock, he purchased 114 four-yoke ox teams and wagons from Henry M. Porter, a Denver businessman, by promising to haul a million dollars in goods from Atchison, Kansas, to Denver, at the rate of ten cents a pound to pay off his debt. But instead of meeting the terms of his contract, Chivington proceeded to Atchison where he loaded half the wagons with goods for Porter, and took the rest to Nebraska.⁷ Porter recalled that Chivington hoped, in this way, to make enough money to pay his men and expenses.⁸

Some of Porter's goods were shipped on other men's wagons, but when they arrived in Denver, Chivington had not paid those freighters, which forced Porter to clarify through a writ of replevin. Porter contacted Willard's banker and departed for North Platte, then for the end-of-track on the Union Pacific Railroad. He determined that Chivington had contracted to deliver government goods to military posts in the Dakota Territory for Wells, Fargo & Co.⁹

When Porter arrived, he learned that Chivington had "lit out" and sold the wagons and teams to his son-in-law without mentioning the mortgage to Porter or other debts. Furious, Porter headed to Omaha, where he sought an injunction to prevent the teams from moving until his contract with Chivington was fulfilled. Wells Fargo challenged the order, arguing that government freight had to move. Porter said, "Not in my wagons." Eventually, Wells Fargo arranged to buy the teams from Porter and his backers, and Pollock accepted a small sum for the train.

Reverend Willard lost his investment. The promising young preacher, who in 1863, at age 27, was the youngest presiding elder in the Church, had fallen on hard times. Drinking heavily and deeply depressed, on June 20 he requested of the Colorado Conference that he be located and left the ministry. By the time the Conference met, Willard was back in Evanston, Illinois, an alcoholic and a disappointment to those who had predicted his grand success as minister and orator. His sister, Frances, noted in her journal, "Our constant thought is Oliver—the noble, gifted boy who really is in great jeopardy, in many ways. That wild western country has wreaked its vengeance on him."¹⁰ And Chivington was still hauling freight with a mule train he had acquired from his son-in-law when he sold the Porter teams and wagons to him.¹¹

Chivington was still embroiled in controversy, however. He had wintered in the vicinity of Fort Laramie, where various contract manipulations angered General I. N. Palmer, the post commander. To make matters worse, Chivington was writing "abusive letters" about Fort Laramie and its officers to Denver and Omaha papers. The Omaha Weekly Herald refused to print them. It did publish an article that defended the officers at Fort Laramie, exposed Chivington as the author of the letters, and denounced him as a "rotten, clerical hypocrite."¹²

During all of this, Chivington was dividing his time between Denver and Nebraska City, where people still remembered him as a fire-and-brimstone preacher. He seemed to be accepted there, and although he was not readmitted to the Nebraska Conference, he preached on a regular basis. In June 1866, Thomas W. Chivington, his son, drowned in the North Platte River while trying to rescue passengers from a stagecoach that had overturned.¹³ In September 1866, John Chivington attended the Republican convention at Brownsville, Nebraska, where he gave a rousing speech against the Democrats. He said at one point, "If I am so fortunate as to go to Heaven, I will get a pair of copper-toed, square-toed boots, and standing on the battlements of paradise, will kick them to hell as fast as they appear; and if I go to hell, I will provide a red hot cauldron of boiling sulphur to chuck them in when they come there."¹⁴

The comments resulted in a flood of articles. The Richmond [Virginia] Whig called him "The Child Butcher" in its brief account, adding, "This from a minister and a colonel!"¹⁵ The Ebensville [Pennsylvania] Democrat and Sentinel, said of his speech, "This language would sound strangely from the mouth of a true Christian soldier; but coming from Chivington, whose sole military exploit was the cold-blooded massacre of the Sand Creek Indian women and children, it is just what might be looked for."¹⁶

In March 1867, Chivington showed up in Omaha, "to assume command of religious interests," one paper quipped. "If Rev. Colonel Chivington can succeed as well in saving souls, as he did in slaughtering innocent Indians, once upon a time we shall expect to see a grand revival of the grace of God among our people and a great good accomplished."¹⁷ Then, in May, personal tragedy struck again, when Chivington's two-year-old granddaughter accidentally fell from a riverboat on the Missouri and, like her father, Thomas, only the year before, drowned.¹⁸ Later the same month, the Des Moines Daily Iowa State Register reported that Chivington's wagon train was attacked by Indians thirty miles above Fort Laramie, capturing thirty horses, fifteen of which were recovered. Five days later near Fort Mitchell the train was attacked again, but the Indians were repulsed.¹⁹

In June, 1867, Chivington spoke to the Nebraska legislature on the "Indian question." The Rocky Mountain News reported the story gleefully, saying that his sentiments were endorsed by the legislature "very unanimously."

But the Nebraska papers were more divided. On June 14, the Omaha Daily Herald lambasted his comments “upon the congenial subject of Indian-murder as a pastime,” with the opinion that “viewing him as a representative mocker of humanity, we arraign and denounce his teaching as a slander upon the Christian name and a hideous insult and disgrace to human nature.”²⁰ In August 1867, while attending a camp meeting at Mount Pleasant in Cass County, Nebraska, Chivington’s wife died unexpectedly.²¹

By then he had managed to find some acceptance in Nebraska City. He was active in Republican politics, the Odd Fellows, the Masons, and the Methodist Church.²² With the creation of the Peace Commission and a revival of debate over the “Indian question,” his connection to Sand Creek was revived. In April 1867, under the title “The Child-Butcher,” the Petersburg [Pennsylvania] Index excoriated Chivington, lamenting that “to the great disgrace of this rotten republic, the reverend scoundrel was not hung.” The paper reviewed the story of Sand Creek and his commentary on Democrats the previous fall, concluding “This from a loyal minister and a colonel!”²³

In June 1867, O. S. Glenn of La Porte, Colorado, wrote J. L. Boardman in Ohio that Coloradans were offering to pay twenty dollars apiece for “Indian scalps with the ears on.” He said that “the Connor and Chivington policy is the one that suits the majority of the people here now, evidently not seeing that while the prosecution of a war with fiendish barbarism will be degrading to themselves, it will in no wise weaken the Indian or hasten a peace.”²⁴ On the other hand, a correspondent of the Montana Post in Virginia City, opined that “a few more Col. Chivingtons would be a good thing.”²⁵ Chivington was as controversial as ever.

On December 6, the New York Commercial Advertiser announced that Chivington “has repented and gone to preaching again.” The paper presented a confused account of his family and financial losses, followed by this commentary:

Considering all these afflictions as a visitation of Providence, he has asked and has been restored to the Church with which he was formerly connected, and has assumed clerical duties. Many who condemn the Sand Creek affair think Chivington was not so much to blame for the attack and atrocities committed there, having been urged on by the public sentiment of Denver—by the very men who afterward went back on him, when they saw that it was unpopular.

The Quincy [Illinois] Herald reported his return to the ministry as the result of his many afflictions as the consequence of Sand Creek. The editor closed with the remark, “Verily, ‘God judgeth in the earth.’”²⁶ It was a plausible hypothesis that Chivington’s troubles had led him to repentance and back to the ministry. And on April 3, 1868, he submitted his “certificate of location to the Nebraska Annual Conference and was “readmitted into the ‘traveling connection.’” He was listed as “Agent of the Nebraska Conference Church Extension Society and member of Nebraska quarterly Conference” and named the Corresponding Secretary of the Church Extension Society.²⁷

Chivington had returned to the Church, but controversy dogged him. At that point, his son’s estate had not been settled, and Chivington believed that he was entitled to part of the property as a partner with his son. On July 6, 1866, he had been appointed special administrator of his son’s estate. On April 6, 1867, he was named the regular administrator, but on September 10, he resigned and was replaced by J. J. Hochstetter, who was duly appointed on November 2, 1867.²⁸ All of this was by design. Following the death of his wife in August 1867, Chivington determined to claim his son’s estate by marrying his son’s widow. She had two children and was pregnant at the time of Thomas’s death.

On May 13, 1868, Chivington and his daughter-in-law, Sarah Lull Chivington, were married in Chicago by Bishop Ames. This news created a firestorm of reaction even among his supporters. Frontiersmen and Methodists, it seemed, were not squeamish about massacres of Indian women and children, but marrying his son’s wife was a moral outrage that repulsed them. Even the Rocky Mountain News declared, “What he will do next to outrage the moral sense and feeling of his day and generation, remains to be seen; but be sure it will be something, if there is anything left for him to do.”²⁹ Sarah Chivington’s parents called the marriage a vile outrage that they would have prevented had they known of it in advance—“even if violent measures were necessary.”³⁰ They disowned their daughter, and even on her deathbed, her mother refused to see Sarah.³¹ With the marriage, even the Nebraska press turned on Chivington.³² On June 13, the Nebraska City News reported that Chivington had left for Omaha and that he would join the editorial staff of the Omaha Republican. Ironically, the editor of the Republican was Dr. I. C. Taylor, who had been appointed the Cheyenne and Arapaho agent after the Treaty of the Little Arkansas. Quipped the Nebraska City editor: “The Colonel is a writer of much vigor and will, undoubtedly give a much better tone to the morals of the Republican than has characterized the efforts of ex-Indian Superintendent Taylor.” The News also reported the rumor that “the Rev. Col. marry-your-daughter Chivington had his wife’s life insured in his favor for five thousand dollars, before leaving this city.” The editor added, “We should be pained to record the death of Mrs. C.”³³

The Chivingtons stayed in Omaha for nine months. Sarah would later claim that Chivington went to work for an insurance company that year but lost his job “by some crooked work.”³⁴ In February, 1869, the couple moved back to Nebraska City.³⁵ They were living in a hotel when the home that she had shared with Thomas caught fire. It was not destroyed, but suffered serious damage. The Rocky Mountain News reported that the fire had been set. The insurance paid $175 to Sarah, and Chivington tried to make a claim for his uniform lost in the fire. It was denied, but his wife said that he took her $175.³⁶

Chivington’s conduct was already causing concern among his Methodist brethren. At the Nebraska Annual Conference on April 2 1869, “Brother Giddings moved that the case of J. M. Chivington, with the papers therewith, be referred to the Presiding Elder of the Nebraska City District for investigation according to the discipline and that passage of his character be dependent upon the decision of the committee.”³⁷ The conference records were vague, and the Daily Nebraska Press could only report on March 31, 1869, that “When the case of Rev. J. M. Chivington was called, Rev. Mr. Giddings said he had papers containing a statement bearing upon some business transactions of Mr. Chivington and that a committee of inquiry or investigation would probably have to be raised in the case.”³⁸ At the annual conference in 1870, “J. M. Chivington’s case was reported by the P. E., his character passed and he located at his own request.”³⁹

June 8, 1870, the Daily Nebraska Press reprinted a scathing article on Nebraska Methodism because of its involvement in politics. There was, according to the article, a movement to elevate the church to control the balance of power in Nebraska. It took to task several ministers but saved special remarks for John Chivington: “We know something of the incestuous Rev. Col. Gen. J. M. Chivington of Nebraska City, who no doubt will be a right bower in the deliberations of the coming convention or political caucus to be held in Plattsmouth. This pharisaical old snob wants the standard of his church elevated and politics purified too. He is the man who inaugurated this magnificent movement.” It added, “Chivington is one of the progressive and reformatory party and has evidenced his fealty to those principles by marrying his own son’s wife, she having three living children by that son.”

Chivington’s marriage to Sarah was not a happy union. Chivington managed to receive only $360 from his son’s estate. He did have himself appointed a special administrator of the estate and filed a claim against the government allegedly for property lost to Indians in 1864 when Thomas’s wagons were pressed into government service. In May of 1870, he and his wife went to Washington to pursue the claim. While there, he found out that Henry Porter had received $410,000 for losses in 1865. He realized that he had the same lawyer as Porter and demanded a portion of the settlement. The lawyer agreed to pay him half the settlement, if Chivington could provide an indemnifying bond. Chivington gave him a bond signed by himself, George O’Brian, and Senator G. W. Tipton, of Nebraska. But Tipton advised authorities that he had not signed the bond. He also discovered that the notary seal had been stolen, and the government moved to indict Chivington for forgery.⁴⁰ It also came to light that Chivington had been arrested and appeared in police court in Washington for having “grossly insulted a lady” named Mrs. M. A. Swetland.⁴¹

Chivington fled Washington on the run, abandoning Sarah. She managed to return to Nebraska City, leaving her bags behind at the National Hotel, which were confiscated because the hotel bill had not been paid. Chivington fled Washington and went to Canada. En route, he stopped in Troy, New York, where he preached at the First Baptist Church. This prompted a strong reaction from the Albany Evening Journal. The paper reviewed and denounced Sand Creek, and concluded, “if this preaching ‘Colonel Chivington’ is the same one who has gathered such a harvest of shameful notoriety, it seems to us that regard for the honor of the cause of religion, should make upright clergymen exceedingly careful about inviting him into their pulpits, unless he give ample evidence of ‘change of heart.’”⁴²

Back in Nebraska, Sarah secured a divorce on grounds of desertion and non-support. She spent the rest of her life in Nebraska City and assisted in several investigations into Chivington’s past conduct. Chivington admitted that he stayed in Canada for three weeks after leaving Washington and that he had gone from there to Mexico. There were even reports that he spent time in California.⁴³

By 1873, however, he had moved back to his home state of Ohio. He claimed that he returned to take care of his mother “in her declining years.”⁴⁴ He also married for a third time to Mrs. Isabella Arnzen of Cincinnati in November 1873. They settled in Warren County, but another mysterious fire left them without a home, and they moved to Blandchester in Clinton County. They had not been married long when Mrs. Chivington swore out a warrant against her husband for assault and battery. She alleged that he had forged her name on a note owed to her and secured payment for it. She then accused him of stealing her property, whereupon he struck her in the face "trying to make me promise to say nothing about it and take no legal action against him which I refused to do." She later dropped the charges. The grand jury did not indict, and the Chivingtons lived together for the rest of his life.⁴⁵

Chivington worked for a time as the editor of the Blandchester Press and began a comeback. He remained active in the G. A. R., the Masons, and the Odd Fellows. He was sufficiently rehabilitated by 1883 that the Republicans nominated him to run for the state legislature. The Lebanon Patriot revived the Sand Creek story, and the Republican committee persuaded him to step aside. The Patriot claimed that Chivington campaigned with "the gospels in one hand and a flaming Indian scalping sword in the other."⁴⁶ This led the Clinton County Democrat to a scathing indictment of Chivington:

Chivington is patronizing, oily-tongued, and understands to perfection the art of dissembling. Hypocrisy and deceit are distinguishing characteristics of his being. Virtue and honor are strangers to his moral character. Under the cloak of religion he seeks to hide the deformity of his moral nature. . . . While professing better things, and falsely claiming to be a laborer in the Master's vineyard, he has dishonored religion by committing deeds which, when brought under the searching influence of the moral horoscope, stand out, so conspicuously, as dark and damning blotches, that unfit him to represent a people celebrated for integrity, prosperity and honor.⁴⁷

Chivington blamed the situation on a Quaker influence and threatened to sue the Patriot, but nothing came of it. In a particularly strong article, the Cleveland Plain Dealer reviewed his career:

While pretending to be a preacher of the gospel this Chivington is a scamp deserving of the reformatory influence of the whipping post. He planned and executed what is known as the Chivington massacre, one of the bloodiest and most infamous deeds of cruelty recorded in modern history. He is also charged with marrying his son's widow, and after squandering his dead son's estate, leaving his wife to procure a divorce on the grounds of non-support. He married again and crowned his record of villainies by becoming a wife-beater. If one half of what Chivington is charged with be true, there is an institution located on the banks of the Scioto at Columbus that he is far more deserving of being an inmate of than in warming a seat in the State Capitol.⁴⁸

An item appeared in the Rocky Mountain News three days later, curious in its tone about the man it had championed. Reporting that Chivington had "gradually passed from public notice and for some years nothing was heard of him unless when his name was mentioned in connection with the deed of blood in which he took so prominent a part," the paper reported that only the men he led speculated about him. The News recalled his role as presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then mused, "The light air of Colorado appeared to imbue him with a desire to abandon the service of the meek and lowly peace-loving Saviour and to imbue his hands in gore. He accordingly ceased to be a clergyman and adopted the half civic, half military title of colonel as used in Colorado." After Sand Creek, "he was in bad odor with the authorities, if not the better class of citizens, and this was probably what prevented him from remaining and growing up with the place."⁴⁹

With his prospects shattered in Ohio, Chivington decided to accept an invitation to attend the first annual meeting of the Pioneer Society of Colorado.⁵⁰ On September 13, 1883, Chivington addressed the society on the subject of Sand Creek. He vigorously declared, "it is but justice to the pioneers of Colorado, as well as myself that I should give the true history of the Sand Creek fight." The crowd responded enthusiastically, and he concluded by declaring, "I say here, as I said in my home town in the Quaker county of Clinton, Ohio, in a speech one night last week: 'I stand by Sand Creek.'"⁵¹

As the crowd gathered around him that night, Chivington decided that he had come home. He quickly settled his affairs in Ohio and returned to Colorado. He was welcomed as a hero. He gave interviews. He wrote articles about the glory days of 1862 and the bitter times of 1864. He renewed his affiliations with the Masons, Odd Fellows, G. A. R., and the Methodist Church. He wrote articles on the early days of Methodism in Colorado. He joined the Lawrence Street Methodist Church (later Trinity). He preached, but he did not apply for admission to the Colorado Conference.⁵²

Still, even the Colorado years were not without controversy. In the spring of 1884, Chivington filed a lawsuit against the Colorado Springs Company, the Manitou Mineral Water Bath and Park Company, and Thomas C.

Green. Chivington argued that he was the original owner of most of the property on which the town of Manitou was located. Thomas Pollock, his son-in-law, had, in 1867, through power of attorney, transferred the property to the Colorado Springs Company. Chivington claimed that he never gave power of attorney to Pollock. He was not successful in making his case.⁵³

Nevertheless, in 1884, the Rocky Mountain News announced that “a ground swell is beginning to come in for Colonel Chivington. The Republican opinion is that if he wants any office in Colorado he should have it, as long as he wants it.”⁵⁴ The effort was stillborn. However, he did later become undersheriff of Arapahoe County. His reputation as a fighter was given as a reason for the appointment, and in 1887, he became something of a local hero when he flushed a hardcase named Newt Vorce from hiding with a simple threat to blow him to kingdom come if he did not surrender.⁵⁵ Later that year, he and Sheriff Fred Cramer were accused of perjury. Chivington was charged with lying when he submitted a bill for twenty-five days service as bailiff in the district court at the rate of $2.50 per day and for claiming mileage for 522 miles for the month of May. The county commissioners had investigated the charges, thinking that the records included “pretty good traveling” for a bailiff in one month. He was acquitted in a brief trial.⁵⁶

Later, Chivington held the position of coroner in Denver. In 1892, he was accused of taking eight hundred dollars from the body of one Francesco Gallo and keeping it for himself. Charges were filed, and when a judge ordered him to surrender the money he had taken or face prosecution, he turned the money in to the judge.⁵⁷ Still, later, Chivington’s house caught fire, and rumor was widespread that he set it in order to collect insurance.⁵⁸ On one memorable occasion, Chivington was introduced by a proper Denver lady to Amache Prowers, the wife of rancher John Prowers and the daughter of Lone Bear (One Eye) who was killed at Sand Creek. The socialite asked her if she knew Colonel Chivington. “Know him?” Amache responded. “He murdered my father.”⁵⁹

Chivington’s health was failing by then. In 1891, he had filed for a military pension. It was denied. Then he brazenly filed a claim against the Oglala Sioux for $32,850 for the loss of horses near Fort Laramie in 1867, a substantial indemnity for fifteen horses. In denying the claim, Assistant Attorney General L. W. Colby filed a countersuit that argued that the losses of the Indians at Sand Creek far exceeded in value Chivington’s losses. Colby hired a special investigator to review the case. In a supreme irony, the man he chose was Samuel Forster Tappan. Tappan went after Chivington with a vengeance, reviewing his entire life from the time he left Colorado in 1865 until his return there. At one point he wrote Colby, “We are driving from cover a monster. I thought I knew him, but was mistaken.”⁶⁰

Chivington did not live long enough to see his claim denied. His health deteriorated rapidly. He suffered from palsy. He exchanged a few letters with the Reverend Jacob Adriaance from the early days, but in time he could no longer write legibly. His wife said that he had “spells” in which he was out of his head, and he eventually reached the point that she had to help him dress. During his last months, he was visited often by the Reverend Isaac Beardsley. He died on October 4, 1894, attended by his wife and Beardsley, who had grown close to him.⁶¹

John Milton Chivington was buried on October 7, 1894, with full Masonic honors. More than six hundred Masons marched in the funeral procession to Trinity Church, followed by members of the Colorado Pioneer Society and the Grand Army of the Republic. In his eulogy, the Reverend Robert McIntyre lavished him with praise. “I never in my life knew a man who so represented the soldierly element in Christianity as did the man whom we are here to honor . . .” he intoned. “As a pioneer, as a spiritual warrior, as a pathfinder and a patriot, he combined the elements of a Christian and a man.” He opined, “When Colorado lifts aloft the scroll of honor, the name of Colonel John Chivington will be emblazoned near the top.” McIntyre’s only hint of the storm around the departed Colonel came with the remark, “The real battle ground of Chivington was the battle he fought with his own self.” Even Beardsley found these words telling, but he too could not avoid lionizing Chivington.⁶²

Charles Ferguson saw something insidious in the Church’s response to Chivington. He wrote, “Chivington’s warlike behavior was but an egregious instance of the collusion between conviction and violence that followed the standards of an age. . . . With only a small part of the populace involved in actual combat, violence then became vicarious and verbal, perhaps revealing all the more the ease with which the emotions of the day, at stark variance of the Christian idea, could be championed and promoted in a fervid religious order.”⁶³

Ambition, it is fair to say, consumed Chivington. He wore Sand Creek like a badge of honor, never seeming to comprehend why he had been condemned and determined to justify his actions. Reverend Beardsley opined that entering the army changed the “whole trend of his life.” He recalled that Chivington “often wondered what it would have been had this not occurred.” He admitted that “the colonel committed not a few mistakes” but insisted that he never lost interest in the Church and “got right with God” before he died.⁶⁴ That may all be true, but, tragically, John Chivington lost his way on the road to glory and squandered his gifts on the altar of ambition. Worse, Sand Creek loosed demons he was never able to control.

If not for his tenure as governor of Colorado Territory, John Evans would be remembered as a physician, entrepreneur, philanthropist, and builder of universities, hospitals, and railroads. But, he did become governor, and the decision to seek and to accept the job changed both the direction of his life and how he is remembered. In December, 1864, when he first learned of the Sand Creek Massacre, he was in a familiar place, Washington, D.C., working with congressmen, government officials, and lobbyists mostly on goals that had little to do with Cheyennes and Arapahos or Utes or any other Indians within Colorado. He was still celebrating Abraham Lincoln’s reelection and looking forward to his second inauguration. He was concerned with railroads and economic development, with building a stronger Republican base in Colorado, and with statehood. He spent his time in board rooms, committee rooms, hotel dining rooms, cabinet offices, and the White House, working to make his dream of Denver as the great new Western city a reality, straddling the transcontinental railroad, passing across the plains of Kansas, through the Smoky Hill country to the Rockies, Berthoud Pass, and beyond.

But now, he found himself accused of complicity in an atrocity and condemned on the floor of Congress and in the public press. He had never been in such a place before. He had had failures before, of course, but those he understood. They were miscalculations in business and relationships. He knew how to rebound from them. This was different—an attack on his character—and he found trouble grasping what was happening or how to deal with it. No man had ever challenged his intentions or conduct in such a way. He reacted to it as a political problem and approached it as he had other political situations. It was not that he was afraid of a fight. He was in Washington in the first place not merely to urge a winter war against the Plains tribes, but more fundamentally to secure the removal of the territorial judges, U.S. Marshal Alexander Cameron Hunt, and U.S. District Attorney Samuel E. Browne, who had opposed statehood, and he was already enlisted in the movement to replace Secretary of the Interior John Palmer Usher with his friend, Senator James Harlan.⁶⁵

Because he was in Washington in close proximity to many of his allies, friends, and mentors, few documents were created that provide insight to what he said to them or what they said to him. He had the advantage of allies who wanted to believe in him because he was one of them and important to their goals as well. Ashley served him well as a go-between with Lincoln and might have kept his position had Lincoln lived, but Evans aided in the removal of Usher while Usher was trying to save Evans’s job for him. But Sand Creek was not a matter that would be easily brushed aside. In the months that followed, Evans watched as his advantages slipped away. Lincoln’s assassination was a terrible blow to his hopes of surviving politically. Bishop Simpson had little leverage with Andrew Johnson, in fact had little but contempt for him. Simpson managed to rationalize support, especially after Harlan was quickly elevated to the post of secretary of the interior. Simpson tried to meet with Johnson three times on Evans’s behalf, without success, and Simpson concluded that Johnson “had no heart.” At the suggestion of Harlan, Simpson turned to Secretary of State Seward, but Simpson already knew the outcome by then. When he wrote Evans on June 28, 1865, he closed his letter with this terse remark, “I hope you will fully realize your highest expectations of financial success.”⁶⁶

The report of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War sealed his fate with its stinging indictment of his management of Indian affairs in Colorado. The Denver Gazette, on September 16, 1865, wrote of him:

With all due deference to Gov. Evans—who after all said and done, makes a pretty fine old woman, if he had come out here with scarce a cent as Governor of Colorado, he might have stood a much better chance for the Senate than now . . . He has been ruined by those that have pimped for him—fawned on him—puppy licked him—soft sawdered him—and in the dark—stabbed him. He was never made for politics or office hunting. We would advise him to go back to Chicago and Evanston, lay his politics on the shelf, endow a Methodist Church with his large fortune, and leave Sam (Elbert) his cast of clothing, and good name.⁶⁷

He saw himself as a victim of Sand Creek. But, worse, he miscalculated how to respond. If Chivington’s mantra was, “I stand by Sand Creek,” Evans’s was, “It wasn’t my fault.” From his first newspaper response to Sand Creek in Washington to his confused testimony before the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War to his Reply to the committee’s report to his letters to the Rocky Mountain News in 1865, he avoided the subject of Sand Creek almost entirely, saying at most that he supported the soldiers of Colorado and favored an aggressive Indian policy. The heart of his argument was self-justification. He avoided direct connections between his policies and the massacre. It was personal vindication that he sought. His approach found some traction, especially among those who had known him as businessman, politician, and layman, largely because they wanted to believe in him. Business associates and the hierarchy of the Church, mindful of his accomplishments, remained loyal to him, even if uncomfortably.

In 1865, when he was chosen to be a Senator for the new state of Colorado, he seemed justified. The Northwestern Christian Advocate claimed his vindication in May 1866, when Senator James H. Lane of Indiana, forcefully defended Evans against remarks made by Senator Charles Sumner on the floor of the Senate and against the charges that Evans had lied before the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War. He was prepared, Lane said, to show that the committee had done Evans an injustice by presenting “an abstract of all the documents bearing on the subject.” In November, the Northwestern noted, “We had the pleasure of greeting Ex-Gov., and now Senator, Evans who has just returned from Colorado.” On January 28, President Andrew Johnson vetoed the Colorado statehood bill, but Senators-Elect Evans and Chaffee remained in Washington until October 1868, before officially resigning to clear the way for another Colorado bid, “free of personal considerations.”⁶⁸

In August 1867, Evans was drawn back into the Sand Creek quarrel, as the result of harsh criticism from Samuel F. Tappan, who was serving on the Peace Commission at the time. Evans’s commentary on the “Origin of the Indian War,” which was published in the New York Tribune was perhaps his best-argued response. Therein, he said that the war did not start in Colorado, but in Minnesota. He reviewed his actions as governor, generously but selectively quoting from official documents. His response succeeded in countering some of Tappan’s hyperbole. He argued that the Indians practiced only “guerilla war” consisting of theft, arson, and murder. He defended the settlers as being “remarkably kind and forbearing toward friendly Indians.” He denied even the possibility that any whites had been in favor of Indian war on the Plains. In a private letter to the editor, Evans added, “This Indian war is an inevitable consequence of a rapid march of civilization in a region inhabited by wild and savage Indians.” Yet the Tribune was not wholly convinced by Evans’s defense: “Governor Evans may ignore the real causes of war and defend his own and the reputation of the people of the border; the country demands adequate forces for protection, and the response to that demand must come no longer in the shape of imbecility and child’s-play.”⁶⁹

Evans had little to say about Sand Creek after that until he was interviewed by H. H. Bancroft in 1884 and 1888, and even then he said surprisingly little. He admitted that the Indians had been mistreated at times, but he added, “At the same time when we come to be butchered by them, it is right to defend ourselves and there my Quaker sentiments desert me.” The closest he ever came to defending Sand Creek was in the Bancroft interviews, when he said, “So the benefit to Colorado, of that massacre, as they call it, was very great, for it ridded the plains of the Indians, for there was a sentiment that the Indians ought not to be left in the midst of the community. It relieved us very much of the roaming tribes of Indians.” Unfortunately, the statement was not true. Sand Creek did not rid the plains or Colorado of Indians. Cheyennes and Arapahos would continue to fight in Colorado from 1865 until 1869. As late as 1871 and 1872, Cheyenne and Arapaho parties continued to attack railroad construction crews and ranches.

Evans provided insight into his view of the “Indian question” reminiscent of Thomas Jefferson, John Quincy Adams, Bishop Kingsley, and more. The Cheyennes and Arapahos, he said, refused to deal with him, arguing that . . . they did not want anything more to do with the government, that the whites had no business in this country anyhow. This was their country, and by the way, let me remark that the idea that this country belonged to them in fee gets its most ridiculous aspect from the proposition that a country a thousand miles long and five hundred miles wide, one of the most fertile in the world, should belong to a few bands of roving Indians, nomadic tribes in fee as their own property. It was taught by William Penn when he landed in this country, and that doctrine has been the cause of most of our Indian wars since then. I never saw the ridiculous nature of it until I got to see the consequence of teaching people that the country belonged to them and then robbing them of it. You teach a man that this is his property and then take it away by force and it is highway robbery. . . . I never before realized the effect of such a mistake in teaching the Indians that the country belonged to him, but nearly all the Indian wars have resulted from the fact that the Indians took in that doctrine, which was acknowledged by the U.S. Government that the country belonged to the Indians and that we had to buy it of [sic] them by treaty or purchase, instead of teaching them what was the proper doctrine as the British government did, that they had a right to hunt on the land, but that that right must be subject to the higher occupation, for a larger population and for civilization. Their wildness should have been impressed upon them from the beginning.⁷⁰

After statehood failed in 1867, Evans did not run for public office again. Instead, he devoted himself to business enterprises, especially railroads. He still had the dream of a transcontinental railroad on a Western route. Union Pacific fortunes were still uncertain. Two separate lines were competing to reach the 100th meridian (roughly the middle of Nebraska). One was moving slowly from Omaha. The other, the Union Pacific, Eastern Division, was building through Kansas from Kansas City (formerly Wyandotte). This line had already had a stormy history. Two competing groups claimed control of it, and in 1865, the quarrel pitted two acquaintances of Evans in a brawl. John Palmer Usher was involved with one faction, hoping to be president of the company. James Harlan, Usher's successor as secretary of the interior, was anxious to bring down Usher as corrupt. He slowed the progress, but eventually the two factions worked out a compromise. Usher was named Solicitor General of the Union Pacific, Eastern Division; Harlan monitored things closely from Washington; and the race west continued.⁷¹

By 1866, the Union Pacific out of Omaha had won the race to become the main line. The UPED was driving west along the Smoky Hill River beyond Russell and Fort Hays in 1867 and nearing the Colorado line west of Fort Wallace by 1869. On March 31, 1869, Congress granted permission to the line, now renamed the Kansas Pacific, to move across Colorado and join the Union Pacific at Cheyenne. As early as June 1866, while Evans was still in Washington as Senator-elect, the Kansas Pacific had been authorized to join the Union Pacific no more than fifty miles west of Denver. From that point on, Evans was in the fight to link Denver to the Union Pacific. However, he had competition from W. A. H. Loveland and Henry M. Teller who had organized the Colorado Central and Pacific Railroad. Loveland announced his attention to link his road with Cheyenne.⁷²

Denver's fate was still far from certain. The Kansas Pacific was considering other options—following the Santa Fe Trail, moving along the Arkansas to the Huerfano, and into the Rio Grande Valley, then driving through the Royal Gorge to secure a position at the headwaters of the Arkansas and Colorado Rivers. This southerly route would miss Denver altogether.⁷³ On the other hand, Grenville M. Dodge, the chief engineer of the Union Pacific rejected the Berthoud Pass route as impractical. After the Berthoud Pass route was ruled out, Evans suggested another route through South Park, but Dodge was not interested in a Colorado line. He had already committed to a route across what is now Wyoming, with Julesburg the only point touched in Colorado.⁷⁴

Once this became clear, Evans and other investors committed themselves to connect Denver to the Union Pacific in Wyoming. Evans and Loveland fought for control of the new line. Evans secured the support of Dodge and Thomas C. Durant of the Union Pacific, and in November 1867, Evans secured a charter for the Denver Pacific Railroad, which would connect Denver directly to the Union Pacific at Cheyenne. Evans was on the original board of directors, and in March 1868, he became the president of the company. The competition with Loveland continued, and the Union Pacific found itself in a tangle of confusion.

The Denver Pacific was largely a paper company, seriously in need of support and real financing, while William Jackson Palmer of the Kansas Pacific Railroad building into Colorado on a more southerly route was still considering his options. Evans eventually worked out a deal with Thomas Durant, Sidney Dillon, and the Ames brothers, Oakes and Oliver, principal investors in the Union Pacific. In exchange for a majority of stock in the Denver Pacific and a lease to the Union Pacific, Evans had to extend the road to the mining camps in Colorado and secure a land grant. He struck a deal with the Kansas Pacific to accomplish these goals—or so it seemed. But the agreement with the Kansas Pacific caused the Union Pacific to back out. At that point Evans was given complete control of the Denver Pacific's assets, and he managed to salvage his plan by striking another bargain that effectively made the Denver line a subsidiary of the Kansas Pacific. In March 1869, Evans secured from Congress an act that allowed the Denver Pacific to build a line from Kansas City to Cheyenne. That meant that a railroad would finally run across Kansas and Colorado to Denver and link to the Union Pacific at Cheyenne. The Union Pacific was not happy with this arrangement, which left Evans at the center of more controversy. To complicate matters, in the summer of 1870, the Kansas Pacific was harassed by Cheyennes, but the road went through.⁷⁵ The Kansas Pacific reached Denver in June of 1870, and in August, the Denver Pacific completed the road from Cheyenne to Denver.

Evans could now look with some pride upon the result. He had not secured the main line of the Union Pacific for Colorado, as he had hoped, but Denver was linked by railroad service to the main lines of traffic east and west.

He had achieved one of the goals that had brought him to Colorado as governor eight years before. Evans was now more deeply involved in railroads than ever. In 1872, Evans sold his Kansas Pacific stock and created the Denver, South Park, and Pacific Railroad, which threw him into competition with his former partner William Jackson Palmer of the Kansas Pacific, who put together the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. The struggles between Evans and Palmer would continue for years.⁷⁶ In 1874, R. G. Dun and Company investigated Evans. The company's agents reported him to be a man "of exclnt [excellent] char [acter], habs [habits] and bus [isness] ability." He was reported to have had $200,000 worth of property in Chicago and to have an estimated worth of "3/4 to 1 million dollars."⁷⁷

In 1876, Evans saw a chance to make some progress with his road, but the Kansas Pacific, the Santa Fe, and the Rio Grande agreed to a pooling arrangement that blocked the South Park. Evans was forced to depend upon local resources that led to the creation of the Denver and San Juan Construction Company.⁷⁸ In 1878, Jay Gould became involved in the controversy, trying to buy a half interest in the South Park. When this effort failed, Gould, who was a master of such matters, tried other tactics. He tried to force the road into receivership and accused Evans of mismanagement. By virtue of controlling the Kansas Pacific and the Denver Pacific, Gould was able to offer an agreement between the Rio Grande and the South Park railroads to allow the completion of the South Park line to Buena Vista, along with the promise to assist in extending the line to Gunnison and Utah. For this, he wanted a quarter interest in the South Park. Evans's colleagues were not happy with this prospect, but agreed because Palmer saw value in the extension of the road to Leadville and feared that Gould would not support planned extension of the Rio Grande beyond Buena Vista and Alamosa.⁷⁹

During this time, W. A. H. Loveland, who had purchased the Rocky Mountain News, mounted a campaign against Evans for mismanagement of the South Park. Eventually, though, the News, for financial reasons, reversed its position, writing, "The South Park road is an institution which Denver and Colorado, not less than Gove. Evans and his associates in the management may feel proud of."⁸⁰ Evans would face more charges, however. The Denver Tribune attacked Evans personally, which resulted in a lawsuit. His skirmishes with Gould and Palmer continued until Gould managed to negotiate what was called the "Boston Treaty." Still, Palmer managed to best Evans by driving from Leadville past Gunnison and west to link up with the Union Pacific at Ogden, Utah. Eventually, facing more criticism, the Denver, South Park, and Pacific was sold at foreclosure.⁸¹

The foreclosure was little more than a paper transaction, and Evans emerged from it without losses. He then initiated plans to build a railroad between Denver and the Gulf of Mexico. He had had the idea for a long time, but in 1881, a group of Denver investors organized the Denver and New Orleans Railroad Company. Evans maneuvered through a series of challenges to formalize a contract between his line and the Fort Worth and Denver Railway Company that would also have connections with the Texas and Pacific, the Missouri Pacific, and the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas railroads. The major obstacle to the plan came from the Rio Grande, which owned controlling stock in the Denver Tribune and the Denver Republican, and used the papers as a platform to attack Evans and his railroad. In the fall of 1881, Evans filed a libel suit. More aggressively, he and other Republicans coalesced with prominent Democrats to support a common slate for city and county offices on a "People's Party" ticket. Evans won that round. His group was not successful in the 1882 Senatorial race.⁸²

Evans's business acumen showed in other ways. Evans had purchased substantial blocks of property in downtown Denver, some of it designed to thwart the plans of railroad competitors, and more than eleven hundred acres east of Colorado Springs at the coal deposit at Franceville. Despite some manipulations, the construction assets were transferred by the trustee, the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, to the Denver and New Orleans. Eventually, the Denver and New Orleans and the Fort Worth and Denver were consolidated in a deal negotiated with Grenville M. Dodge. The maneuvering and manipulating continued, involving virtually every railroad with interests in the Southwest, including the Central Pacific. Evans would eventually become president of a successor line to the Denver and New Orleans, the Denver, Texas, and Gulf Railroad. In the long run, over Evans's hopes, the system was taken over by the Union Pacific and created as the Union Pacific, Denver, and Gulf Railway Company, but he was financially successful nonetheless.⁸³

Evans never slowed down his railroad projects, including plans to build lines between Denver and El Paso, Denver and Duluth, Denver and the Black Hills, and Denver and Galveston. In 1887, the Denver Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade recognized his contribution, "his indefatigable energy and skill . . . which have made the city of his adoption the commercial metropolis of the Rocky Mountain Region."⁸⁴

In 1888, Evans began to retire from his railroad ventures. Beyond any doubt, he had contributed greatly to the Western railway system. In this more familiar field for his talents, he was capable, creative, and ruthless. Although he took the long way around, he achieved the goal he had first dreamed about before the Civil War of making Denver the center of railroad development in the West. He deserved a place among the railroad magnates. He knew their tactics, embraced them, and profited from them. Despite some difficult times, he became a wealthy man.

Evans also continued his investments in real estate and other properties, linked with a group of investors he had known since the 1850s. Bishop Simpson, James Harlan, Samuel Elbert, Samuel Pomeroy, and more sought his advice and shared schemes. Bishop Simpson had managed to help secure the appointment of Alexander Cummings to succeed Evans and Dennis Nelson Cooley to succeed William P. Dole, who was removed from office in the summer of 1865, another victim of Sand Creek. But he was soon involved in other matters.

On the other hand, Simpson did profit considerably from his association with John Evans. He had mining interests in Colorado, oil wells in Pennsylvania, a farm in Iowa, and other investments. In 1880, Evans sent him a direct monetary contribution. Simpson was also involved with James Harlan in a plan to purchase Native American lands at one-tenth their value. He was in the middle of a controversy in 1866, as a result of his association with Harlan and Senator Pomeroy of Kansas. The scheme was so egregious that the Leavenworth Daily Times wrote, "I cannot look upon this extraordinary affair in any other light than a most cold-blooded swindle, and a most flagrant violation of the obvious intention and spirit of a sacred trust."⁸⁵

This added one more charge that the Indian Office was corrupt and undermined Harlan's claim that he was cleaning up Usher's mess. Harlan was condemned as "a pious swindler, and the Indian office was described as the seat of an enormous corruption, the fruitful source of Indian wars, the scandal of the government." Even after the deal was voided by Harlan's successor, Simpson held on to his shares until the summer of 1868 when he was persuaded to allow his investment to ride in a railroad scheme in anticipation of doubling his investment.⁸⁶

His connections to Harlan and to Evans remained vital. Simpson continued to act as a character reference for Evans, and in October 1874, he wrote of the former governor, "He has acquired a handsome property, has been president of a Railroad Company. Thus a reputation [of] far more than ordinary skill. I would put the most implicit confidence in any statement he might make, in being his honest understanding and judgment in such cases." Evans returned the favor with generous gifts to the bishop and financial advice. Evans and Simpson remained close until Simpson's death in June 1884, following the meeting of the General Conference.⁸⁷

His family life was important to him, but John Evans's movements hindered his attention to family. He also suffered personal losses. His grandchild, John Evans Elbert, died in his first year, 1868, and before the year was over, the child's mother, Josephine, died in Evanston. Bishop Simpson preached her funeral and wrote a lengthy article about her for the Northwestern Christian Advocate.⁸⁸ Evans's wife appears not to have been happy in Denver. Beginning in 1870, she spent less time there. She left for England with the children. She shared much of her time in London with Mary Todd Lincoln. When John joined them later in the year, Mrs. Lincoln asked his advice about Tad's education. Margaret had another child in England in January 1871, and she spent the rest of 1871 there. She visited Europe more than once in the years that followed. She was a dutiful wife, but she resented what she considered the unfair treatment of her husband.⁸⁹

John Evans also remained loyal to the Methodist Church. Colorado Seminary, created in 1863, floundered, and in 1867 it closed. The property was kept by Evans, Samuel Elbert, and a few others, but was eventually consolidated into Evans's sole ownership. In 1874, a plan was floated to make it a Union Evangelical University, but again the plan failed. In 1879, Evans returned the property to the Colorado Conference of the Methodist Church, and began plans to develop Denver University. Evans was elected president of the board, and he continued to be associated with the University through the years as president and member of the board of trustees. The University struggled for a time, but sound management and effective public relations with both the Church and the community enabled it to become a successful and academically strong institution. Evans did become embroiled in a personality clash with Chancellor David Moore, which led to Moore's resignation in 1889.⁹⁰

Evans also attended annual conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church on a regular basis and advocated lay membership in its governance. In 1872, when laymen were added, he was elected and would be reelected every four years until 1892.⁹¹ In 1880, he supported efforts to have four bishops elected to live in the West, with Denver as one of the posts. Des Moines, Iowa, got the desired appointment at the last minute, but he continued to work for recognition of the Western conferences. In 1884, Bishop Henry Wright Warren moved to Denver. Evans helped a number of smaller churches, from both Methodist and other denominations.⁹² He also maintained his connection with Northwestern University.⁹³

Evans continued to be interested in the city of Denver. In 1887, he worked to enlarge City Park. In 1894, he became involved in a public controversy when he suggested that the city buy land for parks in all sections of Denver with boulevards leading to the parks. The Rocky Mountain News opposed his plan and argued the main beneficiary of the plan would be the Denver Tramway Company, in which John Evans and his son Will were major stockholders. The plan failed, but did not affect his financial situation.⁹⁴

John Evans was hit hard financially by the Panic of 1893. He faced foreclosure and increased mortgage liability. In 1895, his family concluded that he was no longer capable of managing his financial affairs. His sons Evan and Will found his records almost incomprehensible—incomplete, tangled, and confusing. His holdings were worth only a fraction of what they had been. As his sons worked to bring some order to his accounts, John Evans slowly retreated from reality. Dementia slowly robbed him of his former self until he was conscious of little around him. On November 18, 1896, Margaret Evans was appointed guardian of his estate.⁹⁵

On July 3, 1897, John Evans died. On July 6, his body lay in state at the Capitol until 1:30. It was then removed to the Union Lodge of the Masons for ceremonies there. After another brief service at the Evans home, he was laid to rest at Riverside Cemetery. Evans died intestate, but the “Inventory of the Real and Personal Estate of John Evans,” filed by Margaret Evans on August 15, 1897, estimated the estate at nearly a million dollars. Even that was heavily mortgaged and his holdings “hypothecated.” It would be several years before court proceedings determined clear title to the estate.⁹⁶

Measured by a list of his accomplishments, John Evans was a success, worthy of recognition by universities, cities, political parties, and churches. He even had a mountain named for him. But that was not the full story of John Evans’s life. In addition to his failed governorship, when H. H. Bancroft visited Denver in 1884 to interview Coloradans for one of his ambitious histories, he wrote in his notes about John Evans and Samuel Elbert, “About ex-Governor Evans and his son-in-law, Judge Elberts [sic] there is much humbug. They are cold-blooded mercenary men ready to praise themselves and each other profusely, but who have in reality little patriotism. I have never met a railroad man who was not the quintessence of meanness in more particulars than one.”⁹⁷

Evans made his fortune and his reputation as a businessman as part of the new industrial order that gained control of the economy and of politics in the late nineteenth century. He did share their hard values. He believed that business tactics could be ruthless and hard if matched by contributions. Coloradans judged him by his record of public service. He epitomized the business mind-set of the late nineteenth century and believed his means were justified by the results. Even reviewing his papers against the backdrop of his accomplishments and dreams, it is difficult to determine his ethics or moral perspective beyond a rigid, rule-bound subscription to Methodism. More importantly, despite his accomplishments, he never escaped the shadow of the Sand Creek Massacre or the fact that he was responsible for the policies that led to it.

Notes: Chapter XI

1. Porter to Barlow, August 27, 1864, Barlow Collection.
2. “Notes concerning Gov. John Evans, given by Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Dickinson,” Bancroft Collection, Western Historical Collection, University of Colorado Library, Boulder, Colorado.
3. DRMN, November 27, 1865.
4. Harney to Thomas Murphy, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Atchison, Kansas, December 5, 1865, Atchison Weekly Champion, December 14, 1865.
5. Chicago Tribune, July 26, 1865.
6. Frank Hall, History of the State of Colorado. Four Volumes (Chicago: Blakeley Printing Company, 1889-1895): I, 356.
7. DRMN, March 16, 20, April 18, August 4 1866, January 9, 1867; Nebraska City News, August 25, 1866.
8. Henry M. Porter, Autobiography of Henry M. Porter (Denver: World Publishing Company, 1932), pp. 34-35.
9. Chivington explained his version of events most completely in a deposition taken in 1892 in support of a depredation claim for the loss of livestock to the Sioux Indians in 1867. Other depositions were offered in support of his version. David Street, an agent for Wells Fargo, was deposed on May 17, 1892, and gave a very different view of what happened. See John M. Chivington v. The United States and the Sioux Tribe, Band, or Nation of Indians, Indian Depredation Case File No. 3473, United States Court of Claims, NARA, RG 123.

10. Annual Conference Minutes, XVI (1866): 121. Bordin, Frances Willard, p. 255n, reports a story that the Reverend Willard accidentally shot a man during a skeet shoot and was so emotionally overwhelmed by it that he began drinking heavily. See also Gifford, editor, Writing Out of the Heart, pp. 229-231.

11. This account is drawn from P. Heffley to (?), February 25, 1869, Affidavit of William Fulton, April 18, 1892, Tappan to L. W. Colby, Assistant Attorney General, May 14, 1892, Tappan to W. H. H. Miller, May 21, 22, 26, 28, 1892 (all relating to the testimony of Porter, Street, and others), James R. Porter to Miller, June 22, 1892, Mary B. Willard (widow of Reverend Willard) to Tappan, July 2, 1892, David Street to Tappan, July 7, 1892. Undated statements regarding the testimony of Street and Porter, memoranda regarding the testimony of John A. Martin, a Denver merchant who had dealings with Chivington and Willard, and an undated report that presents Chivington's case and points of contradiction with Porter and Street are also available. All are found in the case file of Chivington v. U.S., Court of Claims Section, Department of Justice, NARA, RG 205.

12. Palmer to Major H. G. Litchfield AAAG, DP (P110-1867), Department of the Platte, USAC, NARA, RG 393. Palmer called Chivington "the notorious Colonel Chivington of the Sand Creek massacre memory." See also Palmer to Miller, July 18, 1892 (two letters), Chivington v. U.S., USCC, NARA, RG 123, and the Omaha Daily Herald, April 5, 1867.

13. Nebraska City News, July 7, 1866.

14. Nebraska Statesman (Lincoln), September 8, 1866.

15. Richmond Whig, November 13, 1866.

16. Ebensburg (Pennsylvania) Democrat and Sentinel, November 8, 1866.

17. Omaha Daily Herald, March 29, 1867.

18. Nebraska Herald, May 8, 1867; DRMN, May 10, 1867. See also, Cox-Paul, "Chivington," pp. 135-136.

19. Des Moines Daily Iowa State Register, May 16, 1867; Omaha Republican, May 17, 1867.

20. DRMN, June 20, 1867; Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 135.

21. Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 136.

22. Ibid., p. 135.

23. Clearfield Republican (Pennsylvania), May 2, 1867.

24. Highland Weekly News, July 11, 1867.

25. Montana Post, July 13, 1867.

26. Harrisburg (Pennsylvania) Patriot, January 20, 1868.

27. Minutes of the Nebraska Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Eighth Session. Held in Peru, Neb., April 2d—4th 1868 (Nebraska City: Nebraska Press, 1868), pp. 5, 10.

28. Probate Record A, pp. 384-302, Otoe County, Nebraska City, Nebraska. See Chivington to Hochstetter, February 4, 1869, Tappan to Colby, April 14, 1892 (in which he quotes a conversation between P. A. Snyder and Chivington wherein Chivington cited the estate as his reason for marrying his son's widow. Tappan to Colby, April 18, 19 (two letters), 20, 1892, CCS, DJ, NARA, RG 205.

29. DRMN, June 10, 1868.

30. Nebraska City News, May 29, 1868. The news spread widely, with the statement of Sarah's parents published in several papers. See, as examples, Washington Evening Star, June 8, 1868, New York Times, June 11, 1868, Daily Eastern Argus (Portland, Maine), June 12, 1868, New Hampshire Patriot and State Gazette (Concord), Atchison Weekly Champion and Press, June 18, 1868 (which questioned why he should still be "permitted to defile a pulpit with his contaminating presence.").

31. Nebraska City Daily Tribune, November 12, 1903; Deposition of Almira Lull, September 20, 1895, Pension File, 31647, NARA, RG 15; Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 142.

32. Nebraska City News, May 28, 1868, Omaha Herald, quoted in the Nebraska City News, May 29, 1868.

33. Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 136.

34. Ibid., pp. 136-137.

35. Nebraska City Daily Nebraska Press, February 1, 1869.

36. Sarah Chivington to Sherman Williams, February 4, 1895, Widow's Pension File 41647, Department of Veterans Affairs, NARA, RG 15, Tappan to Colby, April 20, 1892, Case No. 3473, CCS, DJ, RG 205; Cox-Paul, "Chivington," pp. 136-137.

37. Minutes of the Ninth Session of the Nebraska Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church Held in the First M. E. Church, Nebraska City, Beginning March 31, 1869 (Nebraska City: Price, Miller & Co., 1869), p. 8. Each year clergy persons are examined to determine if they are "blameless in their life and official administration." This is called "passing of character."

38. Daily Nebraska Press, March 31, 1869.

39. Minutes of the Nebraska Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Tenth Session, Held at Fremont, March 31, to April 2, 1870 (Omaha: Republican Stream Printing House and Book Bindery, 1870), p. 4.

40. Tappan to Colby, April 2, 5, 6, 8, 1892, citing documents from the grand jury and from the case file in Thomas Chivington's claim. CCS, DJ, NARA, RG 205.

41. Tappan to Colby, April 20, 1892, quoting from a letter from Mrs. Swetland to Sarah Chivington, ibid.

42. Albany Evening Journal, June 8, 1870.

43. Two sworn statements by Sarah Chivington, April 18, 1892, and statement by J. B. Lull, Sarah's father, April 18, 1892, Chivington v. U.S., USCC, NARA, RG 123; Sarah Chivington to Colby, July 8, 1892, Chivington Collection, Denver Public Library; Sarah A. Chivington v. John M. Chivington, Case File, Records of the District Court, Otoe County, Nebraska; Dale, "Otoe County Pioneers," pp. 1561-1563; State of P. A. Snyder in Tappan to Colby, April 14, 1892, CCS, DJ, NARA, RG 205.

44. Statement of P. A. Snyder in Tappan to Colby, April 14, 1892, CSS, DJ, NARA, RG 205.

45. Deposition of William Clevenger, Justice of the Peace, April 14, 1892, quoting from the testimony of Isabella Chivington, Tappan to Colby, April 13 (two letters), 14, 16, 1892, ibid. See also the Clinton County Democrat, August 17, 1883, which reported that when Mrs. Chivington appeared in court, she had a black eye and bruised face. "For this brutal act, Chivington was arrested and bound over to court on charge of assault," the Democrat reported. "The forgiving nature of this woman he had so brutally wronged saved him from incarceration in prison, and before the sitting of a grand jury the case was dropped, on promise by him to pay what costs had accrued, but which costs to this day remain unpaid." Quoted in Cox-Paul, "Chivington," pp. 142-143.

46. Lebanon Patriot, August 24, 1883, quoted in Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 143.

47. Clinton County Democrat, August 17, 1883, quoted in ibid.

48. Cleveland Plain Dealer, August 24, 1883. Other details about the campaign are included in letters from Tappan to Colby, April 1, 13, 14, 16, 1892, ibid. One of the witnesses Tappan deposed said that Chivington approached him with the promise of helping a suitable candidate be nominated if he would put up the money. A candidate was found, and the informant provided the money. When the delegates gathered, however, they nominated Chivington. See also Denver Daily Times, October 6, 1883.

49. DRMN, August 27, 1883.

50. Chivington had been contacted by Thomas F. Dawson, the Secretary of the Colorado State Historical Society and editor of the Denver Times, in the spring. Dawson had sent him an article from the Times concerning Sand Creek. He had written Dawson on May 24, 1883. He reported himself in ill health, but promised to write an account of Sand Creek for Dawson at an early date. He mentioned his campaign, but also expressed an interest in attending the meeting of the G. A. R. and the reunion of Colorado soldiers at Denver, "if I can make arrangements to do so." He did not attend this gathering, which met in July.

51. Denver Daily Times, September 13, 1883.

52. Ibid., October 6, 8, 1883, August 25, 1886, January 27, 30, 1892, Fort Collins Courier, October 4, 1883, Denver Tribune, May 30, 1883, DRMN, August 20, June 30, 1884, January 1, October 7, 23, 1885. February 13, 1889, Denver Republican, September 14, 1883, October 5, 1894; John M. Chivington, "Battle of Sand Creek," MSS-28, History Colorado; Chivington, "The First Colorado Regiment," October 18, 1884, Bancroft Library; Chivington, "The Pet Lambs," Denver Republican, April 20-May 18, 1890; Chivington, "Footprints of Methodist Itinerants in Colorado," Rocky Mountain Christian Advocate, September 26, October 24, 31, November 7, 1889.

53. Denver Daily Times, January 22, March 17, 1884; Chivington v.

Colorado Springs, Co., IX Colorado Reports, 597 (1886); Tappan to Aldrich, April 21, 30, 1892, CCS, DJ, NARA, RG 205; DRMN, March 24, 1884, Salt Lake Herald, February 12, 1884.

54. DRMN, August 20, 1884.

55. DRMN, July 3, September 13, 15, 1887; Denver Republican, July 3, 1887.

56. Denver Republican, July 3, September 13, 1887; DRMN, July 3, September 13, 15, 1887.

57. Papers in the matter of the estate of Francesco Gallo, deceased, March 8, 1892, Tappan to Aldrich, April 27, 1892, filed with Chivington v. U.S., USCC, NARA, RG, 123.

58. Statement of E. L. Gallatin, January 8, 1900, Thomas F. Dawson Scrapbooks, History Colorado. The court papers from Arapahoe County are in Case No. 3473, CSS, DJ, NARA, RG 123.

59. Statement of Amy (Amache) Prowers, P-L 198, Bancroft Papers, Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, California; Agnes Wright Spring, "Cheyenne Girl and White Man's Way," Frontier Times, 44 (August-September, 1970): pp. 32-33, 46.

60. Tappan to Colby, April 14, 1892, CCS, DJ, NARA, RG 205.

61. John M. Chivington, Widow's Pension File, Pension File No. 41647, Veterans Administration, NARA, RG 15; Adriance Collection, Box 1, FF8, DPL; Beardsley, Echoes, pp. 252-253; Campbell, Chivington Record, p. 282. The attending physician gave as cause of death, diarrhea, injury to the rectum, and indigestion. Craig, Fighting Parson, pp. 236-237, said that he died of cancer.

62. DRMN, October 8, 1894; Beardsley, Echoes, pp. 252-253: "Death of Brother Chivington," pp. 214-217.

63. Ferguson, Organizing to Beat the Devil, p. 332. This analysis is consistent with the arguments of Williams in Religion and Violence, and Rein, "Our First Duty."

64. Beardsley, Echoes, pp. 252-253. Beardsley, who met Chivington after the colonel returned to Colorado, became close to him and wrote of him, "he had a noble heart, and was generous to a fault."

65. Evans to Usher, September 23, 1864, letters to Lincoln, March 6, 1865, Evans to Ashley, March 14, 1865, Abraham Lincoln Papers, Microfilm reels No. 82 and No. 93, Library of Congress; Evans to Seward, October 18, 1864, Indian Letter Book, Evans Collection; Evans to Seward, December 14, State Department, Territorial Papers, Colorado, CXVI, 61, NARA; Lincoln to Evans, March 16, 1865, Basler, Collected Works of Lincoln, VIII, 356; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 151-152; Richardson and Farley, John Palmer Usher, pp. 79-80.

66. Clark, Life of Simpson, pp. 242-250. He recorded in his diary on the evening of Lincoln's inauguration that Johnson was drunk at the ceremony. Salter, "Simpson and Patronage," pp. 222-223.

67. Quoted in Barbara Edwards Sternberg, Jennifer Boone, and Evelyn Waldron, Anne Evans—A Pioneer in Colorado's Cultural History: The Things That Last When Gold Is Gone (Denver: Buffalo Park Press, 2011), p. 79.

68. Northwestern Christian Advocate, November 21, 1866, October 7, 1868.
69. New York Tribune, September 5, 1867.
70. Evans interview, Bancroft Collection, MSS PL329, Folio V, pp. 35-36.
71. Richardson and Farley, Usher, pp. 86-96.
72. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 172-173.
73. Wallter R. Borneman, Rival Rails: The Race to Build America's Greatest Transcontinental Railroad (New York: Random House, 2010), pp. 52-55.
74. Ibid., pp. 76-77. Borneman notes that "the governor's railroad enthusiasm knew no bounds." See also Maury Klein, Union Pacific: The Birth of a Railroad, 1862-1893 (Garden City: Doubleday & Company, 1987), pp. 77-78; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 173-174; S. D. Mock, "Colorado and Surveys for a Pacific Railroad," Colorado Magazine, 17 (March 1940): 56-61; Evans to John Pierce, February 24, 1866, Pierce to Evans, February 25, 1866, Evans Collection, Box 7, FF-78, History Colorado.
75. Klein, Union Pacific, p. 344; Borneman, Rival Rails, pp. 77-90. See also Elmer O. Davis, The First Five Years of the Railroad Era in Colorado (Golden, CO: Sage Books, 1948), pp. 38, 72, 90-91.
76. Borneman, Rival Rails, p. 86.
77. Report quoted in Lyle W. Dorsett, The Queen City: A History of Denver (Boulder: Pruett Press, 1977), p. 67. R. G. Dun & Company, founded originally in 1841 as the Mercantile Agency by Lewis Tappan, was the first successful credit reporting company. In 1933, it merged with J. M. Bradstreet & Company, its chief competitor, to form Dun & Bradstreet Corporation.
78. Kelsey, John Evans, p. 183; Borneman, Rival Rails, p. 86.
79. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 184-197.
80. Quoted in ibid., p. 187.
81. Ibid., pp. 196-202.
82. Ibid.
83. Ibid., pp. 205-207.
84. Evans interview, Bancroft Collection, PL-329, Folder 1, Bancroft Library.
85. Quoted in Salter, "Simpson and Patronage," p. 227.
86. Ibid., pp. 226-228.
87. Clark, Life of Simpson, pp. 305-306; Crooks, Simpson, pp. 469-471.
88. Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 210; Sternberg, Boone, and Waldron, Things That Last, pp. 62-63; Northwestern Christian Advocate, December 12, 1868.
89. Sternberg, Boone, and Waldron, Things That Last, pp. 79-95; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 209-218; Notes concerning Gov. John Evans, given by Mrs. Evans and Mr. Dickinson, Bancroft Collection, University of Colorado, Boulder.
90. William B. Graveley, "The Early Colorado Conference," The Methodist, Evangelical, and United Brethren Churches in the Rockies, 1850-1976. Edited by J. Alton Templin, Allen D. Breck, and Martin Rist (Denver: Rocky Mountain Conference of The United Methodist Church, 1977), pp. 80-83; Kelsey, John Evans, pp. 219-225; Sternberg, Boone, and Waldron, Things That Last, pp. 385-395.
91. Northwestern Evans Study Report, p. 21.
92. J. Alton Templin, "Bishop Henry White Warren," Churches in the Rockies, pp. 90-95; Clark, Life of Simpson, p. 255.
93. Northwestern Evans Study Report, pp. 26-31.
94. Kelsey, John Evans, p. 226.
95. Ibid., pp. 227-228.
96. Ibid., pp. 228-229; Sternberg, Boone, and Waldron, Things That Last, pp. 161-163.
97. H. H. Bancroft, Colorado Notes (1884), Bancroft Collection, University of Colorado, Boulder. Charles Francis Adams, Charles Francis Adams, 1835-1915 (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin Co., 1916), p. 190, took a similar view of railroad entrepreneurs in general.

Chapter XII

The Balance Sheet

The Sand Creek Massacre challenges Americans' perceptions of themselves as a fair and just people. As a result, it has been either characterized as a great aberration or dismissed as a myth created by romantics and social activists. But damned or denied, it remains a persistent thorn in the national consciousness and conscience. It has to be confronted as more than an aberration, and it cannot be brushed aside as the creation of politics or jealousy. The proof of its horror is found not only in the charges of its critics but also in the freely made statements of its defenders. It was not unique in the history of Indian-white relations, but it was exceptional in its impact upon national discourse and development. For that reason its history and the issues it raises still have far-ranging implications.

Sand Creek as a historical event quickly turns all who dare to study it inward to questions of meaning and conscience. It cannot be denied whether people find within it a cause or a rationalization. It demands a moral reckoning so powerfully that being dispassionate about it challenges even the most objective observers. And yet, even its power to raise passions and to promote "taking sides" underscores the need for understanding rather than judgment. What is involved is more than who was right and who was wrong. What is at stake is the nature of humanity itself, the raw, exposed reality of human existence and the capacity to deal with the evil that is part of the human condition.

The so-called Indian War of 1864 and the Sand Creek Massacre were not fought merely over the particular issues between Colorado settlers and the Cheyennes and Arapahos, but over a generalized "otherness" between whites and the dehumanized image of "the Indian." The image was embedded in the white mind by more than a hundred years of conflict; the settlers who went to Colorado carried with them something like a dormant virus that gained new life with the fear and dread that was born with first contact between gold miners and merchants on the one hand and Cheyennes and Arapahos on the other. The dehumanization of the enemy by way of image is "total enmity for the image of evil that possesses our imagination."¹ The consequences in Colorado were self-fulfilled expectations.

This is why it is so difficult to come to grips with specific historical trauma, such as Sand Creek. Humans on both sides of such conflicts, both aggressors and victims, are left with seemingly irreconcilable dilemmas. Aggressors must justify their excesses and assuage their guilt. Victims must find explanations that provide understanding and some sense of meaning. Frequently, for both, this means idealizing the past in ways that sustain the resentments. In that way, for all of the talk and reflection aimed toward doing right, the "savage other" is preserved. Yet, oddly, as Antonio Machado, the Spanish poet, wrote, "The other does not exist: this is rational faith, the incurable belief of human reason. Identity = reality, as if, in the end, everything must necessarily and absolutely be one and the same. But the other refuses to disappear; it subsists, it persists; it is the hard bone on which reason breaks its teeth."²

The theme of the "other" has been a persistent one in this report. It is ancient in origin and widely explored in works of history, political science, psychology, gender studies, and philosophy down to the present as a means of emphasizing the weaknesses of marginalized groups by those in power.³ Its most obvious use in American history has been its consistent application to Native Americans as "savages." In turn, it has fostered the "victims" ideology of reformers and modern American Indian activists as an understandable reaction to the concept.⁴

The Cheyennes and Arapahos learned from the experience of Sand Creek that white men's words were meaningless and self-serving, even if there were some who meant to do right. Some of the people sought accommodation because they could see no other way to survive, but the majority embraced resistance as a just response to white perfidy and fought as hard as they could for as long as they could to sustain who they were as peoples. They were hardly naïve in their understanding of what the outcome would be, but they determined to live free even if it was at the point of a lance. One recent historian even argues that they bought time for themselves. "Late and limited conquest meant more cultural survival into the twentieth century," he writes. They were not so much "history's victims" as "riders of the whirlwind."⁵ Their resistance allowed them to preserve their dignity while enabling them to cope better with the ordeal of the reservation that followed.

Sometimes forgotten, especially in revisionist history, is the extent to which early settlers saw themselves as the victims—or why. The steady diet of rumors and provocations in 1864 created a growing distemper in Colorado. It created a sense of community among whites and a conviction that they had to stick together in defense of community. This is one of the leading causes of violence—the belief that the community is in imminent danger of attack. It does not matter whether the threat is real or imagined. It only matters that it is perceived. Reviewing the available contemporary sources, both pro-Evans and anti-Evans, it seems plain that white Coloradans, as a group, developed a siege mentality, even though the majority of them, safe in their mountain towns, were never in danger of Indian attack. Rightly or wrongly, they saw themselves as the victims. They blamed the Indians for their distress, and they fed off of the ancient images of Indian warfare that they brought with them to Colorado until they were suddenly made relevant by the Hungate killings.⁶ The response was consistent with the historical role of the “savage other” since the time of the ancient Greeks.

Fear is often the mother of violence in times of trouble, but in this case the fear and sense of impending disaster were reinforced by expectations driven home by more than a century of westward expansion and the deeply embedded image of the “savage Indian.” What they feared was what they believed an Indian to be—an Indian, not an Arapaho or a Cheyenne, not a Kiowa or a Ute, but an Indian. Real events were filtered through the image. The fear itself was real enough, but settlers enhanced their view of themselves as victims because of their belief that the white man had the right to take the land from “the Indian.”⁷

J. Glenn Gray, in his classic work, The Warriors: Reflections of Men in Battle, argued that in the “encompassing environment of threat and fear” that is created by war, men find “delight in destruction.”⁸ He wrote that men can kill and be killed in conflict more easily “if they possess an image of the enemy sufficiently evil to inspire hatred and repugnance.” He said:

In a sense hatred is always abstract to some degree, since as a passion it is unable to view anyone or anything in entirety. The hatred that arises for the enemy in wartime . . . is peculiarly one-sided, for it is a fear-filled image. The enemy is not an individual man or woman, but a hostile power intent upon destroying our people and our lives. Our unreflective response is normally total enmity for the image of evil that possesses our reflection.⁹

Gray also suggested that warfare becomes more deeply noxious when the image is of the enemy “as a creature who is not human at all.” He wrote:

This image of the enemy is fear-filled as no other is, since no one attributes calculable ways of behavior to the foe, but, on the contrary, expects any manner of enormity from him. Though he be animalic in being without human emotions and reason, he is thought to be capable of treachery, recklessness and bloodlust to superhuman extent. Based as it is on ignorance and primitive dread, this image prevents those who hold it from any reasonable calculation of the enemy’s actual strength or weakness. . . .¹⁰

He observed that “the ugliness of war against an enemy conceived to be subhuman can hardly be exaggerated. There is an unredeemed quality to battle experience under these conditions which blunts all senses and perceptions. Traditional appeals of war are corroded by the demands of a war of extermination, where conventional rules no longer apply.”¹¹ Gray was writing about the common experiences of “men in battle” throughout history, but his view has a peculiar relevance in the violent contact between whites and Indians. In this case, the image to be destroyed was not something unique to the conflict in Colorado in 1864; it was an image fixed in the pre-revolutionary past and sustained by westward expansion. By the time of the settlement of Colorado it was deeply embedded in the psyche of whites by generations of conflict, and it had the effect of determining the expectations and the response of settlers to the Cheyennes and Arapahos.

How long the Cheyennes, Arapahos, and Lakota could have resisted had circumstances remained the same as they were when the Treaty of the Little Arkansas was signed in 1865 can only be imagined. They had shown already a capacity to adapt to change. Before Sand Creek the Cheyennes and Arapahos were part of a plains culture that had coexisted with whites for a long time beginning even before they actually met the “hairy-faced men” that Sweet Medicine had warned them about. They were experienced “European-handlers” who held their own and managed to sustain their life ways as they adopted and rejected potential changes that came from the interaction.¹²

After the California Gold Rush and the pressures it brought to bear upon their domain, they coped, but the Civil War, more than the Colorado gold rush changed that. The War Department was engaged in a war to save the Union and turned military matters in the West over to settler-soldiers whose sympathies favored whites. The Department of the Interior was more interested in land policy than Indian policy, putting in place the means of rapid settlement—the Homestead Act and the Pacific Railway Act. The War also created a new kind of national consciousness that permeated even religious denominations and validated the mission of spreading the nation from sea to sea.

Even those tribal leaders who understood the advantages that whites had over them, could hardly have imagined what was about to happen once the Civil War ended. Within a decade a spider-web of railroads brought settlers and businesses and towns and farms and ranches throughout Cheyenne and Arapaho lands. Miners and mining companies extracted gold and silver and more treasures from the mountains. The buffalo were slaughtered. Industry intruded into the new country. The regular army was able to move faster and farther than ever before. The post-war army was different from the pre-war army. Before, the military had acted as a barrier between settlers and Indians as a means of maintaining peace; after, the army was the government's primary instrument for resolving the "Indian question."¹³

Given their technological disadvantages and the size of their population, the Plains tribes were surprisingly effective as fighters and tacticians, and many officers repeatedly underestimated them. But the tribes could not prevail. Without doubt the professional army directed by Sherman and Sheridan tried to distance itself from Sand Creek while at the same time pursuing a policy of conquest.¹⁴ In the 1880s, after the plains conflict had ended, a reporter for the Denver Times asked General Sherman about the future of the Indians. "I do not see what is to prevent them from gradually becoming an extinct race," he replied, "but in any event I don't think they will ever again become a factor in the general policy of this country; the railroads have settled that."¹⁵

In an 1878 report comparing the United States' Indian policy with Canada's, General Philip Sheridan blamed greater violence in the U.S. on illegal white encroachments (a theme that went all the way back to President Washington). General Nelson Miles suggested that the Canadians had less violence by not forcing new customs on tribes and by holding individuals responsible for their actions rather than entire tribes. The report also pointed out that the number of whites moving west in Canada was significantly smaller.¹⁶ This last point seems controlling. There was neither time nor space for the Canadian model. What subdued the tribes in the post-Civil War West was the sheer volume of settlers, the industrial growth of the country, the railroads, and the conviction of white Americans that taking the land was the right thing to do. These developments multiplied the power of the United States extravagantly. And when it was done, whites looked over what they had built and, like God at Creation, declared that it was good.

It is easy to condemn the racism and violence of earlier times in the service of modern causes. Racism, savagery, and the rhetoric of extermination are reprehensible and outrageous in retrospect, but they are mere symptoms of conditions that exist in the histories of all peoples. Understanding must take into account not merely the forces that feed the possibility of such inhumanity but also the power that enables it. To pass judgment from afar, whether spatially or over time, is to dismiss the human experience itself, to expect of humans in every time, place, and circumstance to have anticipated the same abstract conclusions of the present judge, who is removed from the visceral experiences judged and often is motivated by present feelings, attitudes, and understandings that are as emotional and irrational as the events judged.

That is why the best way to approach historical tragedies like the Sand Creek Massacre is to be taught by the past itself. It is critical to understand what motivated contemporaries to commit such crimes and to consider, contextually, the rationalizations and condemnations of those who were there. The more measured task of understanding what happened—as opposed to building a case for or against what happened—is far more revealing, not merely of what happened but also of the great principles for good and the great causes of evil that explain what happened. This approach not only creates a more balanced understanding but also a more powerful indictment of past wrongs.

The purpose of this study has been to determine the responsibility of John M. Chivington, John Evans, the Methodist Episcopal Church, and other leaders for a particular tragedy in the nineteenth century, the Sand Creek Massacre. In seeking answers, the report has become something more, an examination of the context of Sand Creek in order to be able to understand the actions and ideas that enable a meaningful explanation. The results suggest the following conclusions about the roles of John Evans, John M. Chivington, and the Methodist Church in the Sand Creek Massacre, the massacre's causes and effects, and the greater forces that help to explain how and why it happened.

Conclusion No. 1: John Evans, more than any other person, was responsible for the conditions that made the Sand Creek Massacre possible. He failed in his responsibilities, panicked when his plans failed, and lacked the moral conviction to take responsibility for his actions or condemn Sand Creek after the facts became known.

John Evans, as Governor and Superintendent of Indian Affairs, seriously mismanaged Indian Affairs in Colorado Territory. He came to the territory with a clear agenda to secure a route for the transcontinental railroad through Colorado, to make Denver the great metropolis of the West, to encourage settlement and economic development, to promote the Republican Party, and to secure statehood for Colorado. His plan had little place or concern for Colorado's Indian population. The Indian was an obstacle to everything he promoted. He justified his economic and political interests with rhetorical appeals to patriotism and civilization. There was no place for the Cheyennes, Arapahos, or other tribes that dared to stand in the way of his agenda.

Evans was opposed to the treaty system, and he found no problem with unilaterally changing the interpretation of the Treaty of Fort Wise once he realized that treaty did not cede lands north of the South Platte, where most of the settlements were located. He found the Cheyennes and Arapahos recalcitrant, but made only feeble gestures to understand why. The non-signatories said that the Treaty of Fort Wise did not apply to them. Evans's aggressive approach intensified through 1863 and into 1864, especially after the spring skirmishes with Downing, Dunn, and Eayre. Evans grew increasingly frantic in his demands for troops and expressions of fear of an impending crisis. He bombarded both military commanders and the Office of Indian Affairs with pleas for help. In June 1864, following the Hungate murders, while he continued to pressure Curtis and Stanton for more troops, he introduced another element into his policy.

On June 27, Evans issued a proclamation "to the friendly Indians of the plains." His purpose, he said, was to prevent friendly Indians from being killed while war continued with hostiles until they were "subdued." The proclamation was too little, too late. In mid-July the incident occurred at Fort Larned that precipitated raids in western Kansas. Then on August 7, full-fledged attacks began on the Little Blue in Nebraska. On August 9, Evans renewed a request he had made to Secretary of War Stanton for authorization of a regiment of one-hundred-day volunteers for the purpose of fighting Indians. Two days later, he released a second proclamation authorizing citizens to pursue all hostile Indians, "kill and destroy" them, and seize their property. Evans advised citizens to avoid killing "friendlies," although he never explained how citizens were to determine the difference. In effect, he declared open season on the Cheyennes and Arapahos.

Evans wanted to prove to Coloradans that he could act decisively against the Indians and to salvage the statehood movement in the bargain. Unfortunately, the Cheyenne-Arapaho peace initiative that led to the Camp Weld Conference took him by surprise. He responded by passing off the management of Indian affairs to the military, in effect placing Indian affairs in the hands of Colonel Chivington. He did this in the face of Commissioner Dole's explicit instructions to be prepared to welcome all overtures for peace from his charges. It was a serious abrogation of his authority as superintendent of Indian affairs. He appears to have decided simply to let someone else make the hard decisions.

At the Camp Weld Conference on September 28, Evans passed the matter off to the military. And yet, by the time Evans departed for Washington in mid-October, the officials in charge of both civil and military affairs clear up the line to Commissioner Dole and General Curtis regarded the Arapahos and Cheyennes who had come in to Fort Lyon as de facto prisoners of the army. Even Evans admitted as much to Dole, to Curtis, and in his interview with the Northwestern Christian Advocate.

When news broke about the Sand Creek Massacre, however, Evans was not prepared. He initially refused to comment on Sand Creek. He decided to defend himself rather than Sand Creek. This would be the tactic he followed for the rest of his life. Essentially, he pleaded not guilty to any part in the massacre, swore to defend the honor of Colorado soldiers, and affirmed his belief in an aggressive Indian policy. The closest he came to actually defending Sand Creek would be his statement to Bancroft that the benefit of Sand Creek was very great. Never once did he publicly defend Colonel Chivington.

What may be more revealing with respect to his character and style were his tactics behind the scene while he was in Washington. He had gone to Washington in the first place to recoup the damages of the failed statehood campaign and to deal with his political enemies in Colorado, as well as to promote the winter campaign he had concocted with General Curtis. But he soon found himself under attack because of his Indian policies, and he was removed from office.

The evidence is strong that Evans did not know what Chivington planned to do. Even if he knew that Chivington planned an expedition, he certainly could not have anticipated the wholesale slaughter or the massacre of women and children. But he knew what kind of a man John Chivington was. More importantly, he, himself, had contributed more than any single individual to the atmosphere of fear and hate that dominated Colorado. He had given Chivington the Third Colorado Regiment, without which Chivington would have lacked a force sufficient to do anything more than protect lines of travel. He left the territory at a critical juncture, when his presence could have made a difference. Recent comparisons between Evans and other Civil War territorial governments in the management of Indian policy make his culpability even more obvious.¹⁷

His policies and actions were marked by a calculated design to remove the Cheyennes and Arapahos from Colorado. To achieve it, he failed to negotiate in good faith. Using the example of the Minnesota Uprising of 1862, he claimed an imminent threat long before such a threat existed and helped to make the threat real by his own actions. Thus, he fed the fears of the white population to the point of creating public hysteria and then succumbed to it himself. He abrogated his responsibilities as ex officio Superintendent of Indian Affairs and eventually lost public confidence in his ability to lead. His response to the Sand Creek Massacre was self-serving and weak.

Even though he survived the scandal by turning his attention in new directions, he never confronted the moral or the political issues raised by the massacre. He had linked himself to Colorado, and he understood that denouncing the Sand Creek Massacre would cripple him politically and hamper his ability to attract investors for his railroad schemes. But despite his silence on the hard questions (or perhaps, in part, because of it), Evans emerged from the sorry story as a cold, manipulative capitalist, whose ineptitude and general attitudes toward Indians, provoked a war by his policies. He then fell prey to his own story, panicked, and passed off his responsibilities to the army. Afterward, he refused to face the reality of what had happened. He found consolation in business success and “doing good.” In the end, after all, the Sand Creek Massacre was swept away by railroads, settlers, development, and growth of the new nation. He was culpable, however, for what happened—grievously so.

Therein lies a terrible irony. Although John Evans was removed as governor because of Sand Creek and his political ambitions crushed as a result, one part of his original design in moving to Colorado in the first place was achieved. John Evans made a fortune on railroad and land deals involving Cheyenne, Arapaho, and Ute lands.

He was able to take advantage of the last struggles of the Plains tribes to amass personal wealth just as he had planned to do in 1862. Perhaps this explains why he never condemned the massacre, but, in fact, saw it as beneficial to the development of Colorado and the West. Thus, he directly profited from the Sand Creek Massacre. He was able to see in what happened proof of Manifest Destiny and the primacy of Anglo-American civilization. He was an unrepentant sinner because he saw no sin, only justification.

Conclusion No. 2: John Milton Chivington planned and carried out the Sand Creek Massacre to further his own ambitions. Afterward, he encouraged and defended the outrageous excesses that took place that day with no trace of regret.

The Sand Creek Massacre was Chivington’s folly. By September of 1864 Chivington was a desperate man. His hopes to become a congressman were dashed at the polls during the statehood election. His commission as an officer in the army was due to expire on September 24, although he understood that he would hold the command indefinitely given General Curtis’s preoccupation with the fight with Confederates in Kansas. His district had been stripped of veteran soldiers. The bulk of the First Colorado Cavalry was stationed in the District of the Upper Arkansas at Fort Lyon and Fort Larned and due to be mustered out. The rest were scattered from Fort Lupton on the Platte in the north to Fort Garland in the south. The only substantial force was the “rag, tag, and bobtail” Third Colorado Cavalry. With only one hundred days of service, he had too little time to mount a serious campaign against the center of Indian resistance, even had the Third been properly trained, armed, and mounted. He had no laurels to rest upon since the battle of Glorieta. His troops had fought no major engagements since New Mexico, not even against the Cheyennes and Arapahos. His was a failed command, torn apart by rivalries among officers (many of them of his own making) and with a general unrest among the troops. In October, circumstances grew worse with news that General Connor, a man who had won a reputation as an “Indian fighter” against the Shoshonis, was coming to Denver, with plans to launch a winter campaign against the Indians of the plains. Any such campaign would gain glory for Connor, not for him.

One problem was that Chivington had no record against the Indians. The few fights, or more properly, provocations of the spring of 1864, had all been the work of Chivington’s most pugnacious and belligerent officers,

Downing, Dunn, and Eayre. Other actions were directed by post commanders at Lupton, Lyon, and Larned. He had wasted too much time stumping for Congress. Following the panic and martial law in August, one of his critics wrote, "During all this time[,] though Chivington had U.S. troops under him[,] he did not go himself or send a soldier to learn the truth of the reports."¹⁸ Another wrote, on October 4, "You must already be aware of the fact that our late troubles are due chiefly to the perfidy & ambition of Gov Evans & Col Chivington[,] our military dictator urged on by the Washington Authorities. . . ."¹⁹

Chivington saw in General Connor both a threat to his own ambitions and an opportunity to rescue them. The Third Colorado Regiment provided the means. Even before Connor arrived in Denver, Chivington was moving troops south. He brusquely dismissed Connor's plans and chose a dangerous alternative to rescue his reputation and ambitions. He was on his own. Curtis was preoccupied with Price's Confederates. Evans was on his way to Washington. It would take weeks for Connor to muster an expedition. Chivington had time for one desperate gambler's throw before the Third's one hundred days were up. But it had to be a sure thing. He had no time to hunt for his target on the Smoky Hill or Republican. His only sure target was the Arapahos and Cheyennes at Fort Lyon, but he had to keep his movements secret to prevent them from fleeing. Once at Fort Lyon, he misrepresented his intent to Major Anthony by claiming that Sand Creek would be only the first encounter of an extended campaign against the center of Native resistance.

At Sand Creek he attacked a village promised protection by him. He incited his troops to kill men, women, and children, indiscriminately. He lost control of all but a few of his men. He misrepresented the casualties. Afterward, he made no move against the centers of resistance on the Smoky Hill and Republican. Instead, he made a half-hearted move after Little Raven's Arapahos down the Arkansas, before abruptly ending his campaign and hurrying back to Denver by stage to oversee news of his victory. At Fort Lyon, he strutted before other officers, comparing himself to Kit Carson, General Harney, and General Connor. He was on hand when his troops returned to Denver, their saddles festooned with scalps, body parts, and other grisly trophies of the "great victory."

In the short term, his plan worked. He rode a wave of renewed popularity among Coloradans anxious to believe that a blow had been struck rightly. They wanted to believe that the fighting parson had saved them from the Indians just as he had saved them from Sibley's Confederates.

As the news leaked out, even from Thirdsters, that Sand Creek was not the battle royal that initial reports claimed, Chivington defended himself in letters and speeches. But it did not take two congressional hearings and a military commission to prove that Sand Creek was an atrocity. The proof was right there in the newspapers and writings of the time, confirming what the investigations revealed—and from the lips of those who endorsed the attack as well as from his critics. One of Chivington's defenders, writing to a Kansas newspaper, exulted that ". . . scalps are at a discount; every Thirdster has his pocket full." Newspapers and private correspondence were both filled with descriptions of the trophies, noting that "scalps were as thick as toads in Egypt," reporting the three small children who were paraded on the stage of a local theater, or the Arapaho boy who was given to one of the Thirdsters and used as an attraction to a traveling circus.

Private Jesse Haire, who admired Chivington as a minister in 1860 but detested him after Sand Creek, reflected on the changes he saw in the man. Even he was shocked to find Chivington in a Denver saloon in 1865, drinking and cursing "as eazey [sic] as any old Sport or boat captain . . . but to See him holding that glass up before his eyes, his elboe [sic] on the counter and that reckless [sic] laugh and big othes [oaths] and ha haws; my god I thought to myself what a change." He recalled how the miners had stopped everything and stood listening to him for hours in 1860, but noted "maney [sic] of them besides myself was astonished at his actions Since then." He mused, "I thought to myself you had better of Stayed Sadsified [sic] as the [preacher] of Colorado."²⁰ Reverend Isaac Beardsley, who befriended Chivington late in his life, opined that entering the army changed the "whole trend of his life." He recalled that Chivington "often wondered what it would have been had this not occurred."²¹

Chivington was a man concerned about his reputation. Chivington was surprised when the praise changed to outrage. When Senator James Harlan, a Methodist layman, condemned him on the floor of the United States Senate, Chivington complained to Bishop Simpson less about Harlan's condemnation of Sand Creek than about his characterization of Chivington's "moral and religious character."²² He struggled throughout his life with contradictions. Reverend Haynes, who knew him in Nebraska, provided the key to his battle: "His suavity and ambition secured for him a great influence over men, both strangers and friends, and if his life had with constancy been that of an exemplary man, his usefulness might have been unlimited."²³ David Marquette, another Nebraska Methodist, wrote of him: “John Milton Chivington was one of those strong, forceful characters who find it difficult to either control themselves or to subject themselves to the requirements of a Church, or to the rules of war, but who are a law unto themselves. But for these defects, he would have been a power for good, as he was a strong preacher and possessed many of the elements which constitute successful leadership.”²⁴

David H. Nichols, an officer in the Third Colorado Cavalry and a defender of Sand Creek, said of his former commander: “Chivington was justly unpopular with the soldiers. . . . The great trouble with Chivington was that he was ambitious to be promoted.”²⁵ Thornton K. Tyson, another Thirdster, said of him, “Col. Chivington always impressed me as a man who was inclined to live beyond his means—who wanted to maintain the style of a Major General on the pay of a Colonel.”²⁶ As C. S. S. Maberly, a Colorado businessman, observed afterward, “The time of the 3rd Regiment having nearly expired, Col. Chivington, the commander wanted to get renown for political purposes, before being mustered out.”²⁷

Tragically, John Chivington lost his way on the road to glory and squandered his gifts on the altar of ambition, never really understanding why. He was an unbending personality who never acknowledged his faults or the contradictory personality traits that were the faces of his demons. That is why the Sand Creek Massacre was Chivington’s folly. He had watched his hopes unravel until they rested on an ill-trained, mixed-bag of Coloradans already derided as the “Bloodless Third.” They had enlisted to kill Indians, but so far only a few of them had seen any action at all. Chivington’s future was linked to theirs. If he could not get them into action quickly, he would take the blame with him into oblivion. Without that simple fact, the Sand Creek Massacre might not have happened at all.

Conclusion No. 3: The Methodist Episcopal Church embraced the prevailing mind-set of its time, avoided a strong stand against Sand Creek, defended both Chivington and Evans, and played a minimal role in the dialogue over Indian policy in the years that followed.

The Methodist Episcopal Church never confronted John M. Chivington’s role in the Sand Creek Massacre in any formal way. In spite of the overwhelming condemnation of Sand Creek in 1865 in the public press and official reports, the Church hierarchy never directly addressed Chivington’s actions or their impact upon the Church itself. Not only was he never “defrocked,” but also he was never asked to defend what he had done in any Methodist forum, a fact that he himself pointed out in 1866, when he asked the editor of the Atchison Daily Free Press, “Or why do not the authorities of the M. E. Church cut me off?”²⁸ Methodist newspapers avoided that question. Even those papers that expressed concern or outrage filled out their columns with equivocations and “ifs.”

In fact, he was accepted into the Nebraska Conference afterward. He was subsequently located by the conference for reasons not explained in the available records. Even then, when there were additional questions about his moral character, he served briefly as editor of the Western Christian Advocate at Cincinnati, wrote articles for the Rocky Mountain Christian Advocate, and continued to preach (without assignment) until he became too frail. He maintained his ministerial credentials (elder’s orders) throughout his life in spite of the Sand Creek Massacre and the series of scandals that marked his later years. The Church’s silence was truly remarkable in light of the charges made against Chivington.²⁹

The Church’s response to John Evans was more understandable. He was not a minister. He was not present at Sand Creek. Even though he was removed from office because of his role, Evans’s defense in 1865 provided a rationale that the Church hierarchy could embrace. And he never suffered any direct rebuff from the Church he continued to serve. This is noteworthy, however, because the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church provided clear procedures for transgressions and for punishment. The procedures were different for the clergy and for the laity, but they provided means for reprimanding or excluding either. James Finley, who had worked with the Wyandots, wrote in Sketches of Western Methodism, published in 1854, that Methodists with Christian charity . . . bore each other’s burdens, and with Christian zeal and fidelity, they watched over each other for good. Each one seemed to be the insurer of the other’s reputation, and felt himself as responsible for this upright character as though he was his special guardian; hence, every thing that indicated, in the slightest degree a departure from the path of holy rectitude, would at once awaken the liveliest apprehensions and interest on the part of the rest.³⁰

That there was never any forthright condemnation of the Sand Creek Massacre or its architects by the Church in the 1860s nor any apparent effect upon the Church’s response to issues related to Indian affairs more broadly speaking in the rest of the nineteenth century underscores the Church’s indifference to Indian affairs. There were individual voices against Sand Creek and the treatment of American Indians, but the Church itself never took a stance. This is the basis for asking what role the Methodist Episcopal Church played in the event that General Nelson A. Miles called “the most unjustifiable crime in American history.”³¹ The Church failed to condemn the act itself. It never demanded an accounting from either of the two primary actors in the tragedy—the Reverend John M. Chivington and Dr. John Evans. And it responded to the results of Sand Creek with rationalizations. The question that remains is why?

The Methodist Church in the nineteenth century reflected not just the theological perspectives of Wesley and Asbury. It also was part of the expanding Anglo world and inherited with other Europeans and Americans a set of values that defined “Christian civilization.” It shared with other Protestant denominations a commitment to evangelization or spreading the gospel to all that have not heard. Inherent in that commitment was an assumption that the Christian way was superior to other ways. It bought into the idea of the “Right of Conquest” and into beliefs that Christians were “the chosen people” and, for Anglo-Americans, that the “New World,” at least in North America was “the promised land.” At its mildest, it embraced a benign paternalism toward all who were not Christians. At its extreme, it promoted a militant contempt and even violence against them. The association of the mind-set of “them” and “us” was not initially focused on “race” but on “savagery.” When dealing with the “savage others,” the Church was divided among those who saw conversion as necessary before civilization and those who saw civilization as necessary for conversion. Perhaps that is why by the nineteenth century, the Methodist Church was largely a white church not only in membership but also in mission.

In its early years, American Methodism found its greatest successes among the yeoman classes in the colonies and states along the Eastern seaboard and among the settler colonists who pushed west into the interior. The latter, in particular, provided the points of contact and conflict with Native people. They were the very same people who developed the strongest antipathy toward American Indians. By the nineteenth century, there was a long and bloody history of “Indian wars,” as they were invariably called, and a deep-seated mythology about who the indigenous people were, especially in relationship to their modes of warfare. This meant that Methodist itinerants preached their revivals and camp meetings among people who saw Indians as a threat to their lives and to their hopes for land. Not surprisingly, Methodist ministers frequently shared the values and attitudes of their constituencies.

Methodism shared both a populist base and an elite leadership, a division between those settler Christians, on the one hand, of which John Chivington was one, and leaders, theologians, educators, and laymen who sought to build a different kind of church in the wake of settlement as the purveyors of civilization, as did John Evans. They shared both a theological base and a social perspective based upon general agreement respecting the Anglophilic principles the Methodist Church began with. Long before the Civil War, those beliefs embraced the “anti-Indian sublime” that placed Native people in an inferior position. While this was not unique to Methodists, Methodist missions to Native tribes were limited mostly to particular conferences and rested on the presumption that progress in the “civilized arts” was the measure of success.

The West, then, was dangerous not because of settlers, but because of “the Indian.” One had to be overcome by the other. But there was also an evangelical concern that the westward movement led to a regression of settlers into a state of barbarism. This amounted to an establishment fear that white settlers left untutored in the faith would descend into anarchy and savagery. It was essential, then that missions follow the patterns of settlement to minister to the fringe elements on the frontier in order that social order would be preserved. Moreover, this concern made it easy to connect love of country to the love of God.

The emblem of the cross with the flag beneath became standard during the Civil War. Bishop Simpson preached the link of one with the other with fervor until faith in the one demanded loyalty to the other. By the end of the war, Methodists were also measuring faith in terms of restraint, sobriety and self-control. A new middle class Methodism emerged that came to be linked with material success. The settler Methodism of open-air camp meetings and evangelization was displaced by more formal churches. These changes could not be set with precision upon a calendar but rather reflected trends over time.

What can be traced with certainty in Methodist publications and the recollections of ministers and circuit riders is a portrayal of American Indians consistent with those of the settlers they served. The churchmen saw Indians as a savage threat just as the settlers did. This remained true in accounts of the Sand Creek Massacre. “We saw these things in the light of self-defense,” the Reverend J. L. Dyer wrote. “While our Eastern friends would say 'Poor Indian!' my own observations have been that many of the whites were killed, while the red man went free. . . . It is impossible to have a sinner converted unless he is first convicted; and it is just as impossible to tame and educate an Indian until he is subdued. My prayer is that all wars may cease, and that the red men of the forest may be civilized and Christianized."³²

More specifically, politics in Colorado was dominated by Methodists. Not only were John Evans and John Chivington Methodists. So too, were Samuel H. Elbert, Henry M. Teller, Jerome B. Chaffee, W. A. H. Loveland, David H. Moffat, Amos Steck, Major Jacob Downing, A. J. Gill, Hiram Burton, Richard Sopris, and others in the political and business leadership of the territory. William N. Byers, the editor of the Rocky Mountain News, who, while not officially a Methodist, was a member of the board of the Colorado Seminary. In November 1864, he wrote an editorial declaring that reports of a "Methodist Clique" were "baseless, groundless, unjust, ungenerous, and undeserved" rumors spread by "busybodies" [sic] motivated by "bigotry, jealousy, prejudice, or malice." At the very least, it can be said that Methodists played a significant role in the territory's politics because of Methodist support for the Union and the Republican Party as well as its preeminence as the largest religious denomination.

In the wake of the first reports of Sand Creek, Methodist newspapers were reluctant to believe that Chivington or Evans could be responsible for such actions as those reported. Both received the benefit of the doubt. This was perhaps understandable, even laudable, especially when the reports were about men who had standing within the Church. Bishop Simpson, the editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, and others came to Evans's support because they were friends and wanted to believe the best. Simpson worked to help him keep his position, but there is no letter or other evidence in which he directly defends Evans from the charges.

The statement of the six Colorado ministers in April 1865 was a strong endorsement of Colonel Chivington and of Sand Creek, and Bishop Kingsley's letters to Bishop Simpson and to the Advocates affirmed the support of Coloradans for Chivington and his action at Sand Creek. A review of Methodist papers during the remainder of the 1860s reveals a mixture of positions relating to Sand Creek and differences of opinion concerning Indian policy. What is missing is any Church resolution supporting or condemning Sand Creek, Chivington, or Evans. The closest thing to a stand taken by the Church was the resolution passed at the General Conference in 1868, supported by William H. Goode, which was tabled.

These facts are telling. The Methodist Episcopal Church became a reflection of society instead of a mirror for society. In the years after the Civil War, the Methodist Church was not only a white man's church (with limited gestures toward missions, mostly foreign missions), but also it was a church that reflected upper middle class values, including the essential goodness of making money. Methodism had become an establishment church, which, as suggested by the Northwestern University study of Evans, took hard work and doing good through charitable giving to be evidence of spiritual development and God's grace. This goes far in explaining the nineteenth-century Church's choices in the social issues it supported, and its substitution of Victorian morality for Christian principles. This is not meant to imply that most Methodists were not devout, but rather to underscore the influence of American exceptionalism and destiny as tenets of Church policy and ministry.

During the 1860s, the primary positions on Indian policy related to military control or civilian control. Lesser known were those reformers who advocated a slower process, in which Native groups were allowed to assimilate on their own terms. They sought larger, protected reserves that would insure tribal ownership and sovereignty and change according to their own timelines. Hardline assimilationists predominated once it was determined that civilian authority would remain in control. Methodist participation in President Grant's Peace Policy was regarded as the worst by any denomination.

Assimilation, designed to bring "progress" and to get ahead of the rapid settlement of western lands, was believed to be the most humane approach in the long run. The object was to save the Indians, not to destroy them. Survival depended, the reformers believed, upon the willingness of Native peoples to change, and to change at the rate and under conditions dictated by whites. Only a few ever realized that their salvation for American Indians shared common assumptions with the exterminators. Its violence was not the overt act of massacre, but the slower destruction of the spirit through the systematic undermining of nature, culture, religion, and personality. Methodist attitudes in these matters followed broader patterns of white response. What stands out most strikingly in the Methodist response to Sand Creek and the events that followed, however, is indifference. Sand Creek was simply not important enough to the Church to matter.

Final Thoughts and Reflections

Robert F. Berkhofer, Jr., who wrote perhaps the most important history of Protestant missions and Native responses, warned that “only an analysis of the contact situation [the circumstances of contact between different groups within the context of the times] in terms of the participants’ beliefs will meet the canons of historical accuracy.”³³ That, within itself, is a difficult task. It means, practically, not imposing modern standards on past generations or blaming them for all of the changes that have taken place since their time and place. George E. Tinker has pointed out that we cannot ask the “forebears in the faith to have done the impossible—namely, to have demonstrated an awareness beyond what was culturally possible at the time.”³⁴ But he also warns that it is not enough to explain away what happened because of the “good intentions” of either individuals or of the Church. Past wrongs do have present consequences.

The question remains how best to approach them, especially when the terms of the present debate were unknown to those who were part of the events at the time. Concepts like “multiculturalism,” “cross-culturalism,” “cultural pluralism,” even “culture” itself in the sense it is used today were unknown. The self-serving use of presentism for whatever cause or point of view is not the answer, but understanding what happened and why, in terms of itself, permits both a more balanced understanding of past generations and how they responded to events like Sand Creek and a means of acknowledging past error while discovering lingering evidence of the same kinds of attitudes and wrongs in the present.

In 1850, E. G. Meek, writing for the Methodist Quarterly Review, predicted:

The fate of these great tribes may be easily foretold, the buffalo will rapidly decrease in numbers, being wantonly slaughtered both by the Indians and emigrants; hostile collisions of the tribes will become more frequent. . . . [A] conviction that the inroads of the whites are rapidly destroying the game on which they rely for support, will lead to heart burnings and bitterness, which will induce them to assume a permanently hostile attitude and render it incumbent on the government to establish among them military posts, in order to protect emigrating parties. After this, their progress toward extinction will be fearfully rapid; for, although the conclusion we have drawn is not inevitable, it has in its favor the greatest degree of probability.³⁵

The Reverend Meek was not a prophet or a seer. He said the outcome he predicted was not inevitable, but there was something bittersweet, angry, and frustrated in what he and other ministers, reformers, and even soldiers wrote about what was to come, something amounting to a kind of helplessness that they could find no alternative to General Sullivan’s Revolutionary War dictum, “Civilization or death to all American savages!” For those who cared, for those who were ashamed, for those who wanted to help, alternatives eluded them because they were trapped in the same way of seeing that made Meek’s outcome seem inevitable. Even now, when the issues seem clearer, solutions that would have been possible given the ways of seeing and the forces they unleashed hide from view and leave in question whether anything has truly changed beyond regrets about past wrongs.

The bloody ground at Sand Creek is a symbol of a terrible blindness in the American experiment that “fixed a stain” on the national honor, as Henry Knox predicted it would before the Constitution of the United States became the governing rule of law. It is a reminder that bigotry is not merely the illness of wicked and profligate people but a disease that can become an epidemic even among those who think of themselves as good and decent and God-fearing. It can hide itself within thickets of rationalizations and fields of good intentions. Sand Creek is also a reminder that humans should not be so quick to judge past generations while deluded into believing that they are inoculated against the effects of arrogance and prejudice themselves.

For those who may have lingering questions about the harsh judgment sometimes presented here—and perhaps for those who think the judgments not harsh enough—it is important to remember that Sand Creek was first condemned not by latter-day historians or modern activists. It was labeled an atrocity by contemporaries. This is evidenced by the outraged reaction of soldiers and settlers and officeholders who demanded an accounting for it, by the insistence of public officials that it be investigated, by vigorous debates on the floor of Congress that addressed the slaughter of women and children directly, by the reports of the Joint Committee on the Conduct of the War, the Joint Special Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes, and the Judge Advocate General who called it a “cowardly and coldblooded slaughter.”

It was that contemporary outrage that led to the removal of John Evans, William Palmer Dole, and John Palmer Usher from office. The government publicly acknowledged the crime of Sand Creek in the Treaty of the Little Arkansas. Sand Creek was cited by both civilian and military officials as the cause of Indian troubles and in support of Indian reform. Ulysses S. Grant, William T. Sherman, Kit Carson, William S. Harney, Nelson A. Miles, William Bent, Lydia Maria Childs, Bishop Henry B. Whipple, Wendell Phillips, and Helen Hunt Jackson were only a few who damned Sand Creek as a crime. Those who tried to defend Sand Creek could only deny what happened there or rationalize it, and even in the defenses there was an awareness that something wrong had been done.

The damnation of Sand Creek was, then, a contemporary judgment that has been confirmed by history. Even Frank Hall, the early Colorado editor, who tried to understand Sand Creek, even defend it, upon reflection about what happened that day, was forced to conclude that

Whether the battle of Sand Creek was right or wrong, these fiendish acts can never be palliated, nor can there ever be in this world or the next any pardon for men who were responsible for them. It was this more than any other stain attaching to this historic tragedy which brought the condemnation of mankind upon the leaders of that terrible day, and which, strive as we may to efface it, will remain as the deliberate judgment of history.³⁶

The greater problem was that the horror of the crime obscured its underlying causes. Sand Creek was treated as an aberration rather than as evidence of systemic flaws not only in federal Indian policy which, at the very least, was mindful of problems, but also in the fundamental mind-set of the times. It was the latter that made resolving policy issues nearly impossible. White Americans could be outraged by the violation of pledged faith, the slaughter of women and children, and the mutilation of the dead, without seeing that their “humane” alternatives were also destructive in their effects. Paternalism survived both guilt and reform.

The Sand Creek Massacre was exceptional in its impact. The Plains Indian wars, military policy, the Indian reform movement, and the policy changes that did come in the months and years that followed all occurred in the shadow of Sand Creek. No discussion of the fate of Native peoples or policy debate was free of the influence of Sand Creek. What Sand Creek did not do—could not do—was to break the white American mind-set, even among those who realized that a radical new perspective was needed. Instead, the nation barreled into the twentieth century and its new world order with surprisingly little control or even awareness of this crucial flaw.

On December 21, 1898, President William McKinley issued a proclamation concerning the policies to be pursued in the Philippine Islands. His remarks are instructive in what they reveal about what had been learned after more than a century of debate over federal Indian policy:

Finally, it should be the earnest and paramount aim of the military administration to win the confidence, respect, and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by assuring them in every possible way that full measure of individual rights and liberties which is the heritage of a free people, and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule.³⁷

“Benevolent assimilation.” Though perhaps well-intended, McKinley’s naïve use of this term revealed how little the mind-set had changed. Good intentions never guarantee justice and right at any point in history. Humans are swept along not so much by “Great Principles” as by the cultural values of their societies and their self-interest. The principles are surprisingly universal; values, by contrast, are often disparate and in contradiction to expressed principles. Reformers are often shackled like policy makers, and if they are fortunate enough to have their way, they often discover, as the history of Indian-white relations amply demonstrates, that their solutions are oppressive too.

Roger Nichols, in his Lincoln and the Indians, observed that the reformers were never able to break “the chain of ideas that bound the Indian and doomed him.” He wrote:

What could have broken the chain? This is where the historian must view the situation as a historic tragedy rather than circumstances in which personal blame can be assigned. The only solution would have been the acceptance of ideals of racial and cultural equality for which nineteenth-century white Americans were not prepared. Neither reformers nor nonreformers respected Indian culture. Indeed, they did not even perceive the existence of a Native culture. Their recitals of Indian characteristics (imagined or real) occasionally approximated descriptions of cultural patterns but were not conceptualized as such. To them, those traits and behavior patterns were, if anything, an anticulture. Civilization not culture, was their key word-concept. “Savage” characteristics were anti-civilization, something heathen and evil to be stamped out rather than praised. There was only one civilization in the world and it was theirs—white, Christian, materialistic, agrarian, and on the march.³⁸

Charles Alexander Eastman (Ohiyesa), the Santee Sioux medical doctor, who was for a time cited as proof of the value of forced assimilation, wrote in 1911 of the amazing inconsistency of Christianity's message to the Indian:

There was undoubtedly much in primitive Christianity to appeal to this man, and Jesus' hard sayings to the rich and about the rich would have been entirely comprehensible to him. Yet the religion that is preached in our churches and practiced by our congregations, with its elements of display and self-aggrandizement, its active proselytism, and its open contempt of all religions but its own, was for a long time extremely repellent. To his simple mind, the professionalism of the pulpit, the paid exhorter, the moneyed church, was an unspiritual and unedifying thing, and it was not until his spirit was broken and his moral and physical constitution undermined by trade, conquest, and strong drink, that Christian missionaries obtained any real hold upon him. Strange as it may seem, it is true that the proud pagan in his secret soul despised the good men who came to convert and enlighten him!

Eastman pointed out the inconsistencies in what was preached, the irreverence and sacrilege of whites who did not practice the faith that was being imposed upon Indian people, and the inconsistency of conduct even among those who professed to be Christians. Native people could understand the profligacy of white individuals, he said, but when church leaders came as treaty negotiators and pledged the national honor with prayer and mentioned God to gain support for treaties that were subsequently broken, the result was not only anger, but contempt as well. "It is my personal belief, after thirty-five years' experience of it, that there is no such thing as 'Christian civilization,'" he wrote. "I believe that Christianity and modern civilization are opposed and irreconcilable, and that the spirit of Christianity and of our ancient religion is essentially the same."³⁹

Wooden Leg, a Northern Cheyenne who fought Custer at the Little Big Horn, had a similar view, less angry perhaps, but nevertheless pointing out the same problem:

I think the white people pray to the same Great Medicine we do in our old Cheyenne way. I do not go often to the church, but I go sometimes. I think the white church people are good, but I do not believe all the stories they tell about what happened a long time ago. The way they tell us, all of the good people in the old times were white people. I am glad to have the white man churches among us, but I feel more satisfied when I make my prayers in the way I was taught to make them. My heart is much more contented when I sit alone with my medicine pipe and talk with the Great Medicine about whatever may be troubling me.⁴⁰

Similar themes of an essential inconsistency between what has been preached and lived by the emissaries of the Church among Native people and the essence of the gospel appear over and over again in the historical record and in the writings of contemporary American Indian critics, historians, and advocates, including Native Christians. John Beeson was one of those who recognized this failure. He wrote President Lincoln on November 18, 1862, "The truth is, the Indians as a Race have the common characteristics of humanity varied only by circumstances and surroundings. They have as few vices and as many virtues, and as much capacity and as great desire for improvement as is possessed by the average of mankind."⁴¹

Yet, even with this "radical" insight, he could not entirely escape the way of seeing that limited his vision. His solutions were determined by the same world view that produced John Evans and John Chivington. There was the rub. The failure was, as Nichols wrote, that the best-hearted, best-intentioned "could not break the chain of ideas that bound Native Americans." The reason they failed was not so much the consequence of conscious design but of a way of seeing that limited vision. It made the conflict "irrepressible" and generations of Indians victims.

Sand Creek had the impact that it did because it confronted white Americans with "the savage within" and reminded them that the tether that restrains the worst in human beings is fragile. At Sand Creek white men released "the worst passions that ever cursed the heart of man," as the Joint Committee on the Condition of the Indian Tribes put it. It put into question the very "civilization" that nineteenth-century white Americans claimed for themselves. In the years that followed, both those who rationalized Sand Creek away and those who remained haunted by its indictment of their values could not step clear of it, but their intellectual and emotional efforts to come to grips with it did not alter the outcome for the Cheyennes and Arapahos or for other Native tribes.⁴²

Octavio Paz, the renowned Mexican writer, has written:

What sets worlds in motion is the interplay of differences, their attractions and repulsions. Life is plurality, death is uniformity. By suppressing differences and peculiarities, by eliminating different civilizations and cultures, progress weakens life and favors death. The ideal of a single civilization for everyone, implicit in the cult of progress and technique, impoverishes and mutilates us. Every view of the world that becomes extinct, every culture that disappears, diminishes a possibility of life.⁴³

This is, of course, a conclusion based upon looking back on what happened and its effects. The past cannot be changed, but Paz points out the cost, hoping new generations may profit from understanding it. The need is still there, after all. Though institutions and groups and individuals may recognize the sins of the past, the linear way of seeing continues to dominate responses. The will is there to help, without realizing the implicit paternalism “help” contains. To “lift up” implies that the “helper” is in a superior position. It also allows those who help to take pride in their goodness as a primary reward. Native groups are not looking for help in this traditional “missionary” way; they seek involvement in the processes of change, recognition of their lifeways and spirituality as vital and life-sustaining.

Perhaps the greatest barrier to white Americans’ ability to accomplish this was indifference. Especially for those people who were distant from contact with tribal peoples, indifference was a more insidious response than hatred. Hatred is visible, hot, identifiable. Sometimes hatred burns out, or smolders into an inexplicable prejudice, but its effects remain plain. Indifference—the absence of caring, the absence of feeling—allows and encourages mistreatment not by design but by lack of awareness or concern. Indifference endures. It survives wars. It survives neglect. It forgets. It allows even the appearance of past wrongs to slip from meaningful memory. It replaces human beings with caricatures that are sometimes not intentionally pejorative but merely thoughtless. In a sense, then, American Indians as people “vanished,” if not in fact, then surely in consciousness.

Jacob Needleman has written that “conscience is the only sure guide to moral action,” but he cautions that it “is often heard only in a whisper and only for a moment.”⁴⁴ The flash-like moment of deep moral feeling can deviate “in quality and form, and even in aim, from the original impulse and does so without the actor’s awareness.” As a result, he argues, “While striving outwardly to eradicate injustice, it is imperative that humanity strive to feel the sorrow of its own capacity for evil.” The ultimate irony is that a country founded upon principles of freedom, equality, and justice can also have a history of brutality and oppression. The deviations from founding American principles always proclaimed, Needleman suggests, most often have not been conscious or calculated. He argues that to understand this process:

one needs to try to enter into the position not only of the victim, but of the oppressor. It is not hard to imagine, up to a certain point, of course, the suffering of the slave or the brutalized Indian. What is in its way much harder, but absolutely essential, is to let oneself feel what it was like to murder and brutalize wrapped in a sure sense of self-justification. And if we have worked to understand the greatness of the humanity we have destroyed and the greatness of the culture we have annihilated, and if we then can imagine ourselves as the agents of these actions, we may catch a glimpse of this deep-rooted phenomenon of moral autohypnosis, the sleep of conscience, the sorrowful capacity of fallen man to hide from our profound betrayal of the good in our actual and potential actions.

It is imperative that the seeker confront this aspect of oneself in the midst of everyday life as well as in one’s place as part of mankind’s actions in the sweep of history. We need myths, symbols, and stories that make us both raise our heads in the vision of authentic human dignity and lower our heads in the vision of authentic remorse—and that then prepare us to live our lives with eyes and head straight forward, stepping into the future of the new America we may discover in ourselves and of the old Earth, which is yearning for all of us to become genuine men and women of the soul.⁴⁵

The problem may be explored by reference to a story that has become vitally linked to the Sand Creek controversy in recent years. In 1893, the Reverend R. M. Barns presented a book to the Iliff School of Theology. The book, Johann Lorenz von Mosheim’s Institutionum Historiae Christianae Compendium, published in 1752, was bound in the skin of an American Indian reportedly killed in Virginia by General Daniel Morgan (actually by General David Morgan). A 1934 article from the Rocky Mountain News described the book as “one of the most treasured relics in the library of the Iliff School of Theology of Denver University.” The News added, “In spite of the age and wanderings of the book, it is remarkably well preserved. The skin is not broken or cracked; its smoothness and texture equal those of the finest parchments; its color has mellowed to deep ivory mottling into saffron, and by an ironic twist of fate, it endures as a priceless vestment for the teachings of brotherly love [italics added].”⁴⁶

According to the story that accompanied the book, the Indian whose skin covered the book was killed in 1779 by Morgan in retaliation for the murder of members of his family. The book was placed in a glass cabinet at the entrance of Iliff library where it remained on display until 1974. It was seen by literally hundreds of students and visitors during the near eighty years that it was on display.

In 1974, a graduate student named Mike Hickcox, who was also president of the Iliff League, brought the matter of the book to the attention of the student body organization. As a result of student efforts, Vincent Harvier, a member of the Denver group of the American Indian Movement, met with the student representatives to discuss a proper way to dispose of the book's cover. Both the librarian and assistant librarian admitted that the book was an embarrassment, but, as Hickcox wrote later, "felt constrained by the book's connection with an influential supporting family," to bring the school president into the conversation. Eventually the cover was removed from the book and turned over to Harvier's group for proper burial.⁴⁷

The story is relevant to this report for several reasons. That it was accepted in the first place indicates the insensitivity of Church leaders to the moral questions raised by the book. That it remained on display from 1893 to 1974 without being questioned is even more astonishing in light of changing social values. That students rather than faculty initiated the effort to have the item removed is also revealing. Perhaps most interesting, however, is the letter of Jameson Jones, then the president of Iliff, to Vincent Harvier. Jameson acknowledged that Harvier would "accept responsibility to see that the skin is handled with dignity and buried according to the religious beliefs of American Indians." He then added, "We understand that you will not give the matter any publicity, but will act with reverence according to your beliefs."⁴⁸

The matter had been brought before the board of trustees, and "the Board acted out of respect for the Indian brother whose body was tragically mutilated many decades ago, and with genuine respect for the religious beliefs of Native American people." Yet, the governing board's insistence that the matter not be publicized is revealing. Rather than acknowledging a mistake, Iliff chose to avoid its moral implications. This story reflects the ongoing insensitivity of the Methodist Church toward American Indians. It is a classic example of the phenomenon of deviation of which Needleman wrote and the dilemma explored by Nichols. The United Methodist Church may not have been culpable for the sins of its fathers in the Methodist Episcopal Church a century and a half ago, but it was responsible for the way it handled the past and for the ways in which it related to an object clearly inconsistent with the teachings of the Church.

Although it was not his intent to address faith or even the problems of Indian-white relations, D. H. Lawrence, English novelist and critic, made provocative and challenging remarks on the subject. "I doubt if there is possible any real reconciliation, in the flesh between the white and the red," he wrote. "There is no mystic conjunction between the spirit of the two races." He concluded, "That leaves us only expiation, and then reconciliation in the soul. Some strange atonement; expiation and oneing." Lawrence explained, "The white man's spirit can never become as the red man's spirit. It doesn't want to. But it can cease to be the opposite and the negative of the red man's spirit. It can open out a new great area of consciousness, in which there is room for the red spirit too."⁴⁹

Expiation involves a meaningful ritual of atonement, and atonement is essential for any true healing that will bring people together. This is what the Council of Bishops pledged itself to in 2012, not merely within the framework of The United Methodist Church itself but as an act of commitment to indigenous people more broadly. The great historical dilemma of the Church has been its efforts to dictate the terms of coming together by insisting that the Indian must be "elevated by means of a Christian civilization." John Pitezel, writing in 1883, presented a damning indictment of the ways that American Indians had been mistreated, but he added, "the only recompense we can make them is to give them the joy, the undying hope, imparted by the Gospel."⁵⁰

Needleman added that this "dark side" is "screened from our awareness, and under the banner of the very moral ideals from which it is deviating. Our capacity to avert our awareness from the moral and metaphysical contradictions of our own nature is a fact that cannot be seen and studied without a serious commitment to truth and without help from companions and from the teachings of wisdom that call to us through the ages."⁵¹

Little profit is found in damning past actions or declaring great visions to be fraudulent if such responses do not yield clearer understanding and a keener sense of the present generation's own sense of moral superiority, including its own deviations from moral vision. Sanctimonious judgment of the past serves little purpose if it does not elevate the present's commitment to underlying principles of freedom, justice, and equality. The past cannot be changed, but it can be confronted and better understood without trying to rationalize its injustices or blaming past generations for not anticipating everything that the present generation now believes and knows. The "phenomenon of deviation" poses as great a threat to the present as it did to the past. When “fault” is determined in the study of the past, the question remains why individuals or a society acted as they did. The capacity to distort remains surprisingly vital not so much because individuals and groups wish to distort as because they have agendas—often selfish and sinister, but sometimes unconscious and even well-meaning—that trump the moral imperatives.

The failure to recognize the contradiction between the principles believed and actions taken serves the psychological purpose of distinguishing between civilization and savagery and justifies the exploitation of Indians for a “higher purpose.” To break this rationalization of the past experience broadly conceived, and the historical trauma of Sand Creek in particular, the choice must involve, as Methodist historian, Frederick A. Norwood, has suggested, not merely the Indian’s acceptance or rejection of Christianity, but also his right “to retain what is meaningful to him in his own unique spiritual heritage. . . .”⁵² Acknowledging past error is but the first step. The harder part is demonstrating that the acknowledgment means something by using it to make a difference in the future.⁵³ Conscience must prevail. Ways of seeing or mind-sets should never be used as excuses for cruelty or evil. They are explanations, not justifications.

When Black Kettle spoke to the treaty commissioners at the Little Arkansas in October 1865, he brought his wife, Medicine Woman Later, into the council and showed them the nine scars on her body from bullets that struck her at Sand Creek, the ones that first toppled her into the sand and the ones that were fired into her body by soldiers after she fell. He let them touch the scars, so that they would understand what had happened to his people.⁵⁴ “My shame (mortification) is as big as the earth,” he confessed. “I thought that I was the only man that persevered to be the friend of the white man, but since they have come and cleaned out (robbed) our lodges, horses, and everything else, it is hard for me to believe white men any more.” He told the commissioners, “All my friends—the Indians that are holding back—they are afraid to come in; are afraid they will be betrayed as I have been.”⁵⁵

The commissioners understood. One of the secretaries at the negotiation was moved to prophesy, “Their fate . . . will be that they died of too large views.”⁵⁶ He was right. Although the treaty stated explicitly that

The United States being desirous to express its condemnation of, and, as far as may be, repudiate the gross and wanton outrages perpetrated against certain bands of Cheyenne and Arrrapahoe Indians, on the twenty-ninth day of November, A. D. 1864, at Sand Creek in Colorado Territory, while the said Indians were at peace with the United States, and under its flag, whose protection they had by lawful authority been promised and induced to seek, and the Government being desirous to make some suitable reparation for the injustices then done . . .

offered “suitable reparations” for its action, the treaty would fail and its promises of reparations would go unfulfilled.⁵⁷ Black Kettle and Medicine Woman Later both would be killed on November 28, 1868, on the Washita River, one day short of four years after Sand Creek.⁵⁸ The tribes would be divided by the warring times and forgotten when they were confined finally to three separate reservations in the Indian Territory, Montana, and Wyoming.

Following the completion of the Treaty of the Little Arkansas, William Bent and Kit Carson, two of the treaty commissioners and both men of long experience with the Cheyennes and Arapahos, wrote to General John Pope, “by dispossessing them of their country we assume their stewardship, and the manner in which this duty is performed will add a glorious record to American history, or a damning blot and reproach for all future time.”⁵⁹ They had touched the wounds of Medicine Woman Later and had seen the heart of Black Kettle, and they knew what needed to be done. It never was.

Notes: Chapter XII

1. J. Glenn Gray, The Warriors: Reflections of Men in Battle (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1998), p. 135.
2. Quoted in Octavio Paz, The Labyrinth of Solitude and Other Writings (New York: Grove Press, 1985), p. 5.
3. See Derek Gregory, The Colonial Present: Afghanistan, Palestine, Iraq (Wiley-Blackwell, 2004); Edward Said, Orientalism (New York: Vintage Books, 1979); and G. F. W. Hegel, The Phenomenology of Spirit (The Phenomenology of Mind) (New York: Oxford University Press, 1977). See also the works of Jacques Lacan, Emmanuel Levinus, Michael Foucault, Simone de Beauvoir, and Patrick Jimmer.
4. Three articles that address this approach from different angles are M. Annette Jaimes, “Sand Creek: The Morning After,” The State of Native America, pp. 1-12; Brendan Rensink, “The Sand Creek Phenomenon: The Complexity and Difficulty of Undertaking a Comparative Study of Genocide vis-à-vis the Northern American West,” Dissertations, Theses & Student Research, Department of History, Paper 26, University of Nebraska, <http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/historydiss/26>; and Joseph P. Gone, “Colonial Genocide and Historical Trauma in Native North America: Complicating Contemporary Attributions,” Colonial Genocide in Indigenous North America, Edited by Andrew Woolford, Jeff Benvenuto, and Alexander Laban Hinton (Durham, NC: Duke University Press, 2014), pp. 273-291.

5. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, pp. 554-556.
6. Roberts, "Violence and the Frontier Tradition," pp. 96-111; Roberts, Slough-Rynerson Quarrel, pp. xi-xii. Raymond G. Carey, "Another View of the Sand Creek Massacre," Denver Westerners Monthly Roundup, 16 (February, 1960): 7. Raymond G. Carey explained the settler viewpoint this way, "Fear and insecurity are seldom the parents of temperate judgment, and Denver citizens, who had been thrown into a state of mass hysteria earlier in the summer [of 1864] were not inclined to be temperate and reasonable and to recognize that the simple enlistment of a regiment would not work immediate miracles."
7. Raymond G. Carey, "The Puzzle of Sand Creek," Colorado Magazine, XLI (1964): 289.
8. Gray, Warriors, pp. 27, 51-552.
9. Ibid., p. 135.
10. Ibid., p. 148.
11. Ibid., p. 152.
12. Belich, Replenishing the Earth, p. 552.
13. Osterhammel, Transformation of the World, p. 344.
14. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 567-615, focuses on Sand Creek's impact on the military. In light of more recent scholarship, it is incomplete if not dated. It relies heavily on Utley, Frontier Regulars; Robert G. Athearn, William Tecumseh Sherman & the Settlement of the West (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1956); and Russell F. Weigley, The American Way of War: A History of United States Military Strategy and Policy (New York: Macmillan Company, 1973). These are still critical sources, but other works, such as Robert Wooster, The Military and United States Indian Policy, 1865-1903 (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1988); Neely, Limits of Destruction; Marsalek, Sherman; James M. McPherson, Drawn with the Sword: Reflections on the American Civil War (New York: Oxford University Press, 1996); and John Fabian Witt, Lincoln's Code: The Laws of War in American History (New York: Free Press, 2012) are but a few of the books that demand a reevaluation.
15. Quoted in Matthew Carr, Sherman's Ghosts: Soldiers, Civilians, and the American Way of War (New York: The New Press, 2015), p. 144. Osterhammel, Transformation of the World, p. 327, says that "the coming of the railroad—not only in the American West—destroyed the precarious balances already in existence."
16. Wooster, The Military and Indian Policy, p. 59.
17. DU Evans Study Committee Report, pp. 48-50.
18. Porter to Barlow, August 27, 1864, Barlow Collection.
19. Kenyon to Barlow, October 6, 1864, ibid.
20. Haire, "Diary,"
21. Beardsley, Echoes from Peak and Plain, p. 262.
22. Chivington to Simpson, March 9, 1865, Simpson Papers, LC.
23. Haynes, History of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Omaha, p. 44.
24. Marquette, Nebraska Methodism, pp. 57-58.
25. Dictation of Capt. D. H. Nichols, Bancroft Collection, University of Colorado, Boulder.
26. Reverend Thornton K. Tyson to Sarah M. Chivington, September 12, 1892, quoted in Cox-Paul, "Chivington," p. 134.
27. Maberley to Barlow, January 12, 1865, Barlow Collection.
28. Atchison Daily Free Press, June 26, 1866.
29. The Reverend Dr. Darius Salter, author of a forthcoming biography of Bishop Matthew Simpson, offered thoughtful advice on this evaluation.
30. Miyakawa, Protestants and Pioneers, pp. 52-58, contains an excellent summary of the procedures provided in the Discipline for both minor and major offenses. The weekly class meetings were the primary vehicle for discipline of laymen. James B. Finley, Sketches of Western Methodism: Biographical, Historical and Miscellaneous. Edited by W. P. Strickland (Cincinnati: Methodist Book Concern for the Author, 1854), p. 178.
31. Nelson A. Miles, Personal Recollections (Chicago: Werner Co., 1896), p. 139.
32. Dyer, Snow-Shoe Itinerant, pp. 182-183, 238.
33. Berkhofer, Salvation and the Savage, p. xviii.
34. Tinker, Missionary Conquest, pp 15-19.
35. Methodist Quarterly Review, 32 (1850): 49, quoted in Norwood, "Strangers in a Strange Land," p. 60.
36. Hall, History of Colorado, I, 350-351.
37. William McKinley, December 21, 1898, quoted in Stuart Creighton Miller, "Benevolent Assimilation:" The American Conquest of the Philippines 1899-1903 (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1982), p. ii.
38. Nichols, Lincoln and the Indians, pp. 199-200.
39. Eastman, Soul of the Indian, pp. 5-6.
40. Thomas B. Marquis, editor, Wooden Leg: A Warrior Who Fought Custer (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1957), pp. 364-365.
41. Quoted in Nichols, Lincoln and the Indians, p. 200.
42. Roberts, "Sand Creek," pp. 720-733; Nichols, Lincoln and the Indians, pp. 201-209; Tinker, Missionary Conquest, pp. 15-18.
43. Octavio Paz (1967) quoted in Anthony J. Marsella, "Cultural

- Aspects of Depressive Experience and Disorders,” Online Readings in Psychology and Culture, 10 (2). <http://dx.doi.org/10.9707/2307-0919.1081>.
44. Jacob Needleman, The American Soul: Rediscovering the Wisdom of the Founders (New York: Tarcher, Putnam, 2003), p. 352.
45. Ibid., pp. 353-354.
46. DRMN, February 12, 1934.
47. George E. Tinker, “Redskin, Tanned Hide: A Book of Christian History Bound in the Flayed Skin of an American Indian: The Colonial Romance, christian Denial, and and the cleansing of a christian School of Theology,” Journal of Race, Ethnicity, and Religion, 5 (October 2014): 1-43.
48. Jones to Harvier, July 1, 1974, Iliff Library Archives, Iliff School of Theology, Denver, CO. The letter is part of a complete file of correspondence among the various parties to the discussion of what to do with the book cover.
49. D. H. Lawrence, Studies in Classic American Literature (New York: Penguin Books, 1923), pp. 42-43.
50. Quoted in Norwood, “The Invisible American,” p. 17.
51. Needleman, American Soul, p. 353.
52. Norwood, “The Invisible American,” p. 24.
53. An interesting multi-disciplinary literature has emerged to explore ways to deal with historical trauma. A sample includes, Maria Yellow Horse Brave Heart, “The Return to the Sacred Path: Healing the Historical Trauma and Historical Unresolved Grief Response Among the Lakota Through a Psychoeducational Group Intervention,” Smith College Studies in Social Work, 68 (1998): 287-305; Maria Yellow Horse Brave Heart and Lemyra M. DeBruym, “The American Indian Holocaust: Healing Historical Unresolved Grief,” American Indian and Alaska Native Mental Health Research, 8 (1998): 56-78; Bridger Conley Zilkic and Samuel Totten: “Easier Said Than Done: The Challenges of Preventing and Responding to Genocide,” Century of Genocide: Critical Essays and Eyewitness Accounts. Edited by Samuel Totten and William S. Parsons. Third Edition (New York: Routledge, 2009), pp. 609-636; Eduardo Duran, Bonnie Duran, Maria Yellow Horse Brave Heart, and Susan Yellow Horse-Davis, “Healing the American Indian Soul Wound,” International Handbook of Multigenerational Legacies of Trauma. Edited by Yael Danieli (New York: Plenum, 1998), pp. 341-354; J. H. Elliott, “The Rediscovery of America,” New York Review of Books, June 24, 1993, pp. 36-41; Joseph P. Gone, “Redressing First Nations Historical Trauma: Theorizing Mechanisms for Indigenous Culture as Mental Health Treatment,” Transcultural Psychiatry, 50 (2013): 683-706; Joseph P. Gone, “Reconsidering American Indian Historical Trauma: Lessons from an Early Gros Ventre War Narrative,” Transcultural Psychiatry, 51 (2014): 387-406; Les B. Whitbeck, Gary W. Adams, Dan R. Hoyt, and Xiaojin Chen, “Conceptualizing and Measuring Historical Trauma Among American Indian People,” American Journal of Community Psychology, 33 (2004): 119-130; Richard White, “Morality and Mortality,” New Republic, January 18, 1993, pp. 33-36; Michalinos Zimbylas, “Reclaiming Nostalgia in Educational Politics and Practice: Counter-Memory, Aporetic Mourning, and Critical Pedagogy,” Discourse: Studies in the Cultural Politics of Education, 32 (2011), 641-655.
54. Hyde, Life of Bent, p. 248.
55. Annual Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, 1865, pp. 218-223. See also Hatch, Black Kettle, pp. 197-204, and Powell, People of the Sacred Mountain, I, 396-403.
56. Samuel A. Kingman, “Diary of Samuel A. Kingman at Indian Treaty of 1865,” Kansas Historical Quarterly, I (1932), 450.
57. Charles J. Kappler, Indian Affairs: Laws and Treaties. Two Volumes (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1904): II, 889-890.
58. See especially, Greene, Washita, pp. 166-167, concerning Black Kettle. Albert G. Boone, formerly the agent for the Cheyennes and Arapahos and long-time resident of the Arkansas Valley in Colorado Territory, wrote of Black Kettle’s death. He said simply that Black Kettle “was a good man; he was my friend; he was murdered.” General William S. Harney, one of the commissioners at the Little Arkansas, said of him, that he “was as good a friend of the United States as I am.” Greene, at pp. 186-187 presents a convincing case that Black Kettle was not involved in the conflict that preceded the attack on the Cheyenne peacemaker’s camp.
59. Carson and Bent to Pope, October 27, 1865, LR, DM, USAC, C-185 (Box 17), NARA, RG 393.

Photographs

A romanticized view of John Wesley preaching to the Indians of Georgia during his brief mission to the colony. Note that by the time this romanticized image was prepared, his supposed congregation had become the universal “Indian” in the mold of the Plains tribes. (General Commission on Archives and History of The United Methodist Church, Drew University, Madison, New Jersey)

John Evans. Physician, philanthropist, prominent Methodist layman who helped found Northwestern University and the University of Denver, railroad entrepreneur, Republican, and governor of Colorado, Evans was removed as governor for his part in the Sand Creek Massacre. (History Colorado, Denver, Colorado)

The Reverend John Milton Chivington. John Chivington was already an imposing figure in this 1850s image of him. (Mazzulla Collection, Amon G. Carter Museum of Western Art, Fort Worth, Texas)

Bishop Matthew Simpson. Prominent bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, outspoken Methodist lobbyist, and friend of Abraham Lincoln, Simpson helped to reshape the Church by a more prominent role in politics. Although he was a close friend of Governor John Evans and worked to prevent Evans’s removal as governor of Colorado in 1865, Simpson himself never publicly expressed himself on the subject of the Sand Creek Massacre. (General Commission on Archives and History of The United Methodist Church, Drew University, Madison, New Jersey)

Colonel John M. Chivington. This photograph, taken in 1862 or 1863, shows the “fighting parson” in full military dress. (History Colorado, Denver, Colorado)

Cheyenne Delegation to Washington, 1863. This photograph was made in Leavenworth, Kansas, en route to Washington. Left to Right: Samuel G. Colley, Agent of the Upper Arkansas Indian Agency; Lean Bear (the most prominent and most photographed chief of the Cheyennes on the visit); War Bonnet (Council Chief); and Standing-in-the-Water (Soldier Chief). The council chiefs are identified by a single eagle feather in their hair, pointing to the right, and by the pipes and pipe bags they carry. Lean Bear was killed in the spring of 1864 while approaching Colorado troops to parley. Both War Bonnet and Standing-in-the-Water were killed in the Sand Creek Massacre. (William Blackmore Collection, Pl XXXVIII, Ethnography Department of the British Museum, London, England)

Camp Weld Conference, 1864. This photo was taken at the Camp Weld Conference. The two men kneeling in front are Major Edward W. Wynkoop and Captain Silas S. Soule. The seated figures, left to right, are White Antelope, Bull Bear and Black Kettle (Cheyennes), Neva and Notanee (Arapahos). Standing, left to right, unidentified, unidentified, John Simpson Smith, Heaps of Buffalo and Bosse (Arapahos), Dexter Colley, unidentified. (History Colorado, Denver, Colorado)

Cheyenne Village Aug. 29th /64
 Maj. Colley.

His Ho. received a letter from Bent wishing us to make peace. We held a council in regard to it all came to the conclusion to make peace with you providing you make peace with the Kiowas, Comanches, Arapahoes, Apaches and Sioux.

We are going to send a messenger to the Kiowas and to the other nations at present going to make with you. We heard that you some prisoners in Denver. We have seven prisoners of you which we are willing to give you providing you give up yours. There are three war parties out and two of Arapahoes, they been out some time and expect now soon.

When we held this council they there were few Arapahoes and Sioux present. we want true news from you in return, that is a letter

Black Kettle
 other Chiefs

Brought to W. Lyns Church
 4/21/64 by One Eye -

Message from Black Kettle and other "chieves." This is one of two copies of the Cheyennes' written overture for peace in August, 1864. It was delivered to Fort Lyon by One Eye and Minimic on September 4, 1864, and led directly to the Camp Weld Conference. (The Colorado College Library Colorado Room, Colorado Springs, Colorado)

Colorado Conference, 1865. This photograph, misdated 1866, was taken at the end of the annual conference in Denver in 1865 at the suggestion of the Reverend John L. Dyer. Seated left to right are Oliver A. Willard, John L. Dyer, Bishop Calvin Kingsley (who presided over the 1865 Conference), and Charles King. Standing left to right are C. H. Kirkbride, George Richardson, William Ames, W. W. Baldwin, B. T. Vincent, John Gilliland, and O. P. McMains. (Archives of the Rocky Mountain Conference, The United Methodist Church, Iliff School of Theology, Denver, Colorado)

“Minnie Tappan.” One of three children taken to Denver after Sand Creek and publicly displayed as trophies of the fight. Two of the children were Cheyenne and sisters, one of whom apparently died. The third child was an Arapaho boy. The older girl, pictured here, was baptized “Minnie Haha” at St. Paul’s Episcopal Church in Central City, Colorado, on December 24, 1866. She was later taken east to Boston by Samuel F. Tappan, who had presided over the military commission that investigated the Sand Creek Massacre. Tappan was a member of the Peace Commission of 1867-68 and later a prominent Indian reformer and spiritualist. Minnie died of tuberculosis at the age of sixteen while a student at Howard University in Washington, D. C. (Tom Meier Collection)

Bishop Calvin Kingsley. Kingsley was unsympathetic to the Indians. He wrote about the West, but focused on its economic future and the importance of the railroads. (General Commission on Archives and History of The United Methodist Church, Drew University, Madison, New Jersey)

Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site. (National Park Service)

DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOLUME 2, SECTION 4
STANDING COMMITTEE ON CENTRAL CONFERENCE MATTERS
DRAFT OF A GLOBAL OR GENERAL BOOK OF DISCIPLINE
PART VI, CHAPTERS 1-4 AND 6

Contents

Draft of a General Book of Discipline , Part VI, Chapters 1-4 and 6	1413
Living into the Worldwide Nature of The United Methodist Church	1413
Part VI: Organization and Administration	1415
Chapter One: The Local Church	1415
Chapter Two: The Ministry of the Ordained	1425
Chapter Three: The Superintendency	1449
Chapter Four: The Conferences	1455
Chapter Six: Church Property	1467
Appendix: General Conference Regulations	1471

Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

Draft of a Global or General Book of Discipline, Part VI, Chapters 1-4 and 6

Living into the Worldwide Nature of The United Methodist Church

As United Methodists we stand together to live into our call as God's church in 2016 and into the future. Our focus on the missional commitment of the Church to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world is not merely aspirational. It is a vision into which we are already living. Today we find ourselves as a church serving on many continents, in many countries, speaking different languages, and shaped by different cultures. We receive this diversity as a precious gift from God who is committed to us in covenant. As Methodists we have responded to this covenant by committing ourselves to Christ and to each other. We want to be one church and consider it to be the will of the One who has brought us together. However, our current structure does not support where we have come to be and where God's vision is yet to guide us. We have moved through God's mission into connections in many places of the world on four continents with millions of new members who are steeped in the Wesleyan tradition. This growth is not one of our own making, but is a gift from God, drawing us into fellowship as at Pentecost. There the difference between Jew and Gentile, slave and free, male and female, was shown to be unimportant in following Jesus in God's eyes, and so today is the difference between Congolese and American, German and Filipino, Korean and Russian. None of our human-made categories, borders, or national labels should stand to separate us from the unity we share as United Methodists. Living into the promises of God demands us all to be forthright as we willingly and openly receive this gift, trusting in what God is doing with the body around the world called The United Methodist Church.

As United Methodists we have to consider this gift of God and respond in a way that does not quench the spirit but is helpful to the Church as a whole. Many parts of the present Book of Discipline (BOD) are not applicable to churches that serve in manifold ways in different nations, using different languages, under different state constitutions and legal systems. In many cases, central conferences have to adapt the BOD or take action that is outside the boundaries of the BOD in order to fulfill God's call. This has led to different local practices in organizing the work and ministry of the church.

Very often the reception process in different language groups and countries is much slower than the pace of change in General Conference. The reality is that many parts of the BOD apply only to the United States and are unnecessary to God's work in some parts of the world. In order to support the answer to God's call, it is essential that we remain mindful of the missional focus of making disciples wherever our brothers and sisters find themselves working to build the Kingdom.

As a church we need to respond to this reality and bring life to our tradition by concentrating on the essentials of our Covenant [BOD ¶ 125]. Therefore, we feel that we must contemplate what is crucial for our Covenant and structural unity. This shall be presented to the Church as the heart of our tradition and church, as together we follow the call of Jesus Christ.

Beyond this there are rules, articles, and legislation that may differ on the level of central, jurisdictional, and annual conferences. We call on General Conference and the whole Church to listen to these needs and to take appropriate action to allow the Church in different places to do effective and helpful ministry throughout the world in different forms, according to the local needs.

Proposed Draft

The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters ("Standing Committee") has concentrated its work on Part VI of the Book of Discipline, Chapters 1 (The Local Church), 2 (The Ministry of the Ordained), 3 (The Superintendency), 4 (The Conferences), and 6 (Church Property). These chapters are most directly related to organizing the ongoing ministry in central conferences. The result of this work is the proposed Draft of a General Book of Discipline, Part VI, Chapters 1-4 and 6. It is called hereafter a General Book of Discipline.

Explanations to the Proposed Draft

This draft proposes a much more concise Part VI on Organization and Administration, limited to essentials that are applicable worldwide. The aim has been to establish a much shorter, more easily understandable and translatable General Book of Discipline. Therefore, material may have been rearranged, reordered, and revised. In aiming at essentials for a worldwide church, some sections are still more detailed (e.g., in the chapter on the Ministry of the Ordained) while others are more concentrated on the necessary essentials.

If such a draft contains what is essential and applicable worldwide, it will not need many revisions every four years (including translation of the revisions into hundreds of languages used in annual conferences all over the world), nor will it need to have organizational details added to it every four years for fixing local or regional problems. Therefore this draft is presented with the hope that it enhances the mission of the Church in a long-term, sustainable way and that it empowers the different regions in the world to be better equipped for making disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world, all to the glory of God.

Important Elements in the Presentation of This Draft of Part VI, Chapters 1-4 and 6

- This draft is based on Part I. The Constitution and does not propose structural changes for The UMC in the US, nor is it accompanied by any constitutional amendments.
- This draft is based on Part V. Social Principles, and on provisions of the BOD 2012, Part VI, regarding standards for clergy related to human sexuality and unauthorized conduct, and leaves any decisions on these matters in the authority of General Conference.
- This draft is based on the mandate given to the Standing Committee in BOD 2012, ¶ 101, and presents what is “distinctively connectional” and not adaptable by central conferences as to Part VI, Chapters 1-4 and 6 of BOD 2012.
- Footnote references to Judicial Council decisions are not yet updated and need to be added at a later time.
- At the end of each paragraph, the new numbering is followed by “=” and a reference to the source in BOD 2012 for said paragraph and its sub-paragraphs. The sign “=” does not mean an exact quote and may include revisions, deletions, or additions to the indicated reference in the BOD 2012 in order to reflect its worldwide application, consistency, and a better flow of the text.
- This draft is presented as a cleaned-up text and not as a redline edition. As presented, it facilitates a more easily readable flow, a better understanding of the entirety of what is considered as distinctively connectional, and a more coherent evaluation of its usefulness for the worldwide diverse ministry settings.
- In addition to this draft, there are elements in the present Book of Discipline that are needed for the work of General Conference, are not adaptable by central conferences, but are very detailed provisions that may easily need to change every four years. At present, such elements are compiled in an appendix called General Conference Regulations (“GC-R”). The draft of a General Book of Discipline makes explicit reference to the appendix as “GC-R”, with identical paragraph numbers preceded by “GC-R”. As work will continue on BOD 2012, Part VI, Chapters 5 and 7, more material may be lodged in such a document of General Conference Regulations.

General Book of Discipline— Non-Disciplinary Petition to the 2016 General Conference

A Non-Disciplinary petition to the 2016 General Conference will ask for affirmation of the direction taken thus far by the Standing Committee and for a consultation in all annual conferences worldwide, with feedback from the annual conferences until the end of 2017 [petition # 60277, ADCA, p. 465].

Questions for the feedback will be:

1. What is essential for the worldwide connection of The UMC that is missing in this draft?
2. Where is this draft too detailed and in need of further prioritization of that which is truly essential?
3. What inconsistencies or inaccuracies are found in the draft and are thus in need of correction?

As we present this draft to the 2016 General Conference, we do so with thanks to the Committee on Faith and Order, the Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships, the General Council on Finance and Administration, and many others who worked in excellent collaboration with the Task Group of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters in coming so far on this journey as a worldwide connection.

May God’s Holy Spirit guide us all on our journey as a connectional people.

July 30, 2015

Bishop Patrick Streiff, chairperson of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters

Draft of a General Book of Discipline, based on The Book of Discipline, 2012

Part VI

Organization and Administration

Chapter One

The Local Church

Section I. The Church and Pastoral Charge

¶ 201. Definition of a Local Church—The local church is a community of true believers under the Lordship of Christ. It is the redemptive fellowship in which the Word of God is preached by persons divinely called and the sacraments are duly administered according to Christ's own appointment. Under the discipline of the Holy Spirit, the church exists for the maintenance of worship, the edification of believers, and the redemption of the world.

¶ 201 = 201

¶ 202. The Function of the Local Church—The church of Jesus Christ exists in and for the world. It is primarily at the level of the charge consisting of one or more local churches that the church encounters the world. The local church is a strategic base from which Christians move out to society. The function of the local church, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, is to help people to accept and confess Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior and to live their daily lives in light of their relationship with God. Therefore, the local church is to minister to persons in the community where the church is located, to provide appropriate training and nurture to all, to cooperate in ministry with other local churches, to defend God's creation and live as an ecologically responsible community, and to participate in the worldwide mission of the church.

¶ 202 = 202

¶ 203. Relation to the Wider Church—The local church is a connectional society of persons who have been baptized, have professed their faith in Christ, and have assumed the vows of membership in The United Methodist Church. They gather in fellowship to hear the Word of God, receive the sacraments, praise and worship the triune God, and carry forward the work that Christ has committed to his church. Such a society of believers, being within The United Methodist Church and subject to its Discipline, is also an inherent part of the church universal, which is composed of all who accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, and which in the Apostles' Creed we declare to be the holy catholic church.

¶ 203=203

¶ 204. Responsibility for Members—Each local church has a definite evangelistic, nurture, and witness responsibility for its members and the surrounding area and a missional outreach responsibility to the local and global community. It is responsible for ministering to all its members, wherever they live, and for persons who choose it as their church.

¶ 204=204

¶ 205. Definition of a Pastoral Charge—1. A pastoral charge shall consist of one or more churches that are organized under and subject to the Discipline of The United Methodist Church, with a charge conference, and to which an ordained or licensed clergy is or may be duly appointed or appointable as pastor in charge or co-pastor. Where co-pastors are appointed, the bishop may designate for administrative purposes one as pastor in charge.

2. A layperson assigned by the bishop has the same duties and responsibilities as a clergy member apart from sacramental ministry. The layperson assigned is also accountable to a district superintendent and to the policies and procedures of the annual conference where assigned.

¶ 205.1=205.1; 205.2=205.4

Section II. Church Membership

Section II = Section V

¶ 206. Eligibility—The United Methodist Church is a part of the holy catholic (universal) church, as we confess in the Apostles' Creed. All people may attend its worship services, participate in its programs, receive the sacraments and become members in any local church in the connection (¶ 4).

¶ 206=214

¶ 207. Definition of Membership—The membership of a local United Methodist church shall include all people who have been baptized and all people who have professed their faith.

1. The baptized membership of a local United Methodist church shall include all baptized people who have received Christian baptism in the local congregation or elsewhere, or whose membership has been transferred to the local United Methodist church subsequent to baptism in some other congregation.

2. The professing membership of a local United Methodist church shall include all baptized people who have come into membership by profession of faith through appropriate services of the baptismal covenant in the ritual or by transfer from other churches.

3. For statistical purposes, church membership is equated to the number of people listed on the roll of professing members.

4. All baptized or professing members of any local United Methodist church are members of the worldwide United Methodist connection and members of the church universal.

¶ 207.1-4=215.1-4

¶ 208. *Baptismal Covenant—1. Christ constitutes the church as his body by the power of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 12:13, 27). The church draws new people into itself as it seeks to remain faithful to its commission to proclaim and exemplify the gospel. Baptism is the sacrament of initiation and incorporation into the body of Christ. After baptism, the church provides the nurture that makes possible a comprehensive and lifelong process of growing in grace.

Becoming a professing member requires the answer of faith of the baptized person made visible in a service of profession of Christian faith and confirmation using the vows of the baptismal covenant. In the case of persons whose disabilities prevent them from reciting the vows, their legal guardian[s], themselves members in full covenant relationship with God and the Church, the community of faith, may recite the appropriate vows on their behalf.

a) Baptized infants and children are to be instructed and nurtured in the meaning of the faith, the rights and responsibilities of their baptism, and spiritual and moral formation. Using the services of the baptismal covenant, youth will profess their faith, commit themselves to a life of discipleship, and be confirmed. Confirmation is both a human act of commitment and the gracious action of the Holy Spirit strengthening and empowering discipleship.

b) Youth and adults who have not been baptized and who are seeking to be saved from their sins and profess Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior are proper candidates for baptism in The United Methodist Church. It is the duty of the congregation, led by the pastor, to instruct them in the meaning of baptism, in the meaning of the Christian faith, and in the history, organization, and teachings of The United Methodist Church. After the completion of the period of nurture and instruction, the sponsor(s) and pastor shall bring the candidates before the congregation and administer the services of Baptismal Covenant, in which people are baptized, confirmed, and received into the Church.

2. a) Formation in the baptismal covenant and in the call to ministry in daily life is a lifelong process and is carried on through all the activities that have educational value. The pastor gives specific leadership that prepares youth for their profession of faith and commitment to discipleship and for the Holy Spirit's action confirming them in their faith and empowering their discipleship. This preparation focuses attention upon the meaning of discipleship and the need for members to be in mission in all of life's relationships.

b) There are many occasions as people mature in the faith when the Holy Spirit's confirming action may be celebrated, such as in the reaffirmation of the baptismal covenant or other services related to life passages. Unlike baptism, which is a once-made covenant and can only be reaffirmed and not repeated, confirmation is a dynamic action of the Holy Spirit that can be repeated.

3. Preparation for the experience of profession of faith and confirmation shall be provided for all people, including adults.

¶ 208.1=216.1+214; 208.2-3=216.2-3

¶ 209. *Professing Membership Vows—When persons unite as professing members with a local United Methodist church, they profess their faith in God, the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth; in Jesus Christ his only Son; and in the Holy Spirit. Thus, they make known their desire to live their daily lives as disciples of Jesus Christ. They covenant together with God and with the members of the local church to keep the vows which are a part of the order of confirmation and reception into the Church:

1. To renounce the spiritual forces of wickedness, reject the evil powers of the world, and repent of their sin;

2. To accept the freedom and power God gives them to resist evil, injustice, and oppression;

3. To confess Jesus Christ as Savior, put their whole trust in his grace, and promise to serve him as their Lord;

4. To remain faithful members of Christ's holy church and serve as Christ's representatives in the world;

5. To be loyal to Christ through The United Methodist Church and do all in their power to strengthen its ministries;

6. To faithfully participate in its ministries by their prayers, their presence, their gifts, their service, and their witness;

7. To receive and profess the Christian faith as contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments.

¶ 209.1-7=217.1-7

¶ 210. Growth in Faithful Discipleship—Faithful membership in the local church is essential for personal growth and for developing a deeper commitment to the will and grace of God. As members involve themselves in private and public prayer, worship, the sacraments, study, Christian action, systematic giving, and holy discipline, they grow in their appreciation of Christ, understanding of God at work in history and the natural order, and an understanding of themselves.

¶ 210=218

¶ 211. Mutual Responsibility—Faithful discipleship includes the obligation to participate in the corporate life of the congregation with fellow members of the body of Christ. A member is bound in sacred covenant to shoulder the burdens, share the risks, and celebrate the joys of fellow members. A Christian is called to speak the truth in love, always ready to confront conflict in the spirit of forgiveness and reconciliation.

¶ 211=219

¶ 212. The Call to Ministry of All the Baptized—All members of Christ’s universal church are called to share in the ministry which is committed to the whole church of Jesus Christ. Therefore, each member of The United Methodist Church is to be a servant of Christ on mission in the local and worldwide community. This servanthood is performed in family life, daily work, recreation and social activities, responsible citizenship, the stewardship of property and accumulated resources, the issues of corporate life, and all attitudes toward other persons. Members are to engage in disciplined covenant, or class meetings to foster their missional involvement and to witness for Christ, serving as a living example in society while addressing injustice and suffering in the world and taking action which helps exemplify the hope and promise of Christ.

¶ 212=220

¶ 213. Accountability—1. All members are to be held accountable for faithfulness to their covenant of baptism.

2. If a baptized member neglects faithfulness and discipline in terms of the baptismal covenant, every means of encouraging that member to return and of nurturing him or her to assume the vows of professing membership should be made.

3. If a professing member should be accused of violating the covenant and failing to keep the confirmation vows, then it is the responsibility of the local church, working through its pastor and its units, to minister to that member in compliance with the provisions of ¶ 220 in an effort to enable the member to faithfully perform the vows and covenant of membership.

¶ 213.1-3=221.1-3

¶ 214. Transfer from Other Denominations—A member in good standing in any Christian denomination who has been baptized and who desires to unite with The United Methodist Church shall be received as either a baptized or a professing member. Such a person may be received as a baptized member by a proper certificate of transfer from that person’s former church or some certification of Christian baptism and as a professing member upon taking vows declaring the Christian faith through appropriate services of the baptismal covenant in our ritual. In baptism, water is administered in the name of the Triune God by an authorized person. The pastor will report to the sending church the date of reception of such a member. It is recommended that instruction in the faith, ministry, and polity of the Church be provided for all such persons. Persons received from churches that do not issue certificates of transfer or letters of recommendation shall be listed as “Received From Other Denominations.”

¶ 214=225

¶ 215. Affiliate and Associate Membership—1. A professing member of The United Methodist Church, of an affiliated autonomous Methodist or united church, or of a Methodist church that has a concordat agreement with The United Methodist Church, who resides for an extended period in a city or community at a distance from the member’s home church, may on request be enrolled as an affiliate member of a United Methodist church located in the vicinity of the temporary residence. The home pastor shall be notified of the affiliate membership. Such membership entitles the person to the fellowship of that church, to its pastoral care and oversight, and to participation in its activities, including the holding of office; except such as would allow one to vote in a United Methodist body other than the local church. However, that person is counted and reported as a professing member of the home church only.

2. A member of another denomination may become an associate member under the same conditions, but may not become a voting member of the church council.

3. Affiliate or associate relationship may be terminated at the discretion of the United Methodist church in which the affiliate or associate membership is held whenever the affiliate or associate member shall move from the vicinity of the United Methodist church in which the affiliate or associate membership is held.

¶ 215.1-3=227

¶ 216. Membership Records—Each local church shall accurately maintain:

1. Membership records for each baptized or professing member including:

- a) the person's name, date of birth, address, place of birth, date of baptism, officiating pastor, and sponsors;
- b) date of confirmation/profession of faith, officiating pastor, and sponsors;
- c) if transferred from another church, date of reception, sending church, and receiving pastor;
- d) if transferred to another church, date of transfer, receiving church, and address of receiving church;
- e) date of removal or withdrawal and reason;
- f) date of restoration of professing membership and officiating pastor;
- g) date of death, date and place of funeral/memorial, place of burial, and officiating pastor.

2. Constituency Roll, containing the names and addresses of such persons as are not members of the church concerned, including unbaptized children, youth, and adults whose names are not on the membership record, and other nonmembers for whom the local church has pastoral responsibility.

3. Affiliate Membership Roll.

4. Associate Membership Roll.

5. In the case of a union or federated church with another denomination, the governing body of such a church may report an equal share of the total membership to each judicatory, and such membership shall be published in the minutes of each church, with a note to the effect that the report is that of a union or federated church, and with an indication of the total actual membership.

¶ 216.1=230.1; 216.2-5=230.3-6

¶ 217. Annual Membership Report and Audit—The pastor shall report to the charge conference annually the names of persons received into the membership of the church or churches of the pastoral charge and the names of persons removed since the last charge conference, indicating how each was received or removed. The church council shall appoint a committee to audit the membership record, submitting the report annually to the charge conference. In central conferences, the membership records in each local church shall be according to a common format prepared by the General Council on Finance and Administration in cooperation with the central conferences.

¶ 217=231+233

Section III. Care of Members

Section III = new Section

¶ 218. Care of Children and Youth—1. Because the redeeming love of God revealed in Jesus Christ extends to all persons, and because Jesus explicitly included the children in his kingdom, it is the responsibility of the pastor of each charge to counsel Christian parents or guardians in the meaning of baptism for children and youth of all ages and of the significance of the vows for themselves and the congregation. This includes active participation in the life of faith in the congregation to prepare everyone for lifelong membership in Christ's Church. At least one parent or guardian shall be a member of a Christian church; or sponsor(s) or godparent(s) who are members renewing their own baptismal vows. All members of the congregation likewise will assist and encourage the nurture of each child or youth.

2. The pastor of the church shall, at the time of administering the sacrament of baptism, furnish the parent(s), guardian(s), sponsor(s), or godparent(s) of the child who is baptized with a certificate of baptism, which also clearly states that the child is now a baptized member in The United Methodist Church. Appropriate records of the sacrament of baptism shall be maintained and kept at the local church or another appropriate location.

3. The membership record shall be regularly reviewed to identify those who have not become professing members, for purposes of nurturing them toward profession of faith.

¶ 218.1=226.1; 218.2=226.2a+b; 218.3=226.3

¶ 219. Care of Members—1. The local church shall endeavor to enlist each member in activities for spiritual growth and in participation in the services and ministries of the Church and its organizations. It is the duty of the pastor and of the members of the church council by regular visitation, care, and spiritual oversight to provide necessary activities and opportunities for spiritual growth through individual and family worship and individual and group study to connect faith and daily living, and continually to aid the members to keep their vows to uphold the Church by attendance, prayers, gifts, service, and witness. The Church has a moral and spiritual obligation to nurture its nonparticipating and indifferent members and to lead them into an active church relationship.

2. The pastor in cooperation with the church council may arrange the membership in groups—with a leader for each group—designed to involve the membership of the Church in its ministry to the community. Such groups may be especially helpful in evangelistic outreach by contacting newcomers and unreached persons, by visitation, by mobilizing neighbors to meet social issues in the community, by responding to personal and family crises, by holding prayer meetings in the homes, by distributing Christian literature, and by other means.

¶ 219.1=228.1; 219.2=228.2a

¶ 220. Review in Case of Neglect—While primary responsibility and initiative rests with each professing member to faithfully perform the vows of the baptismal covenant that have been solemnly assumed, if the member should be neglectful of that responsibility, these procedures shall be followed:

1. Membership records are reviewed regarding the active participation of all professing members residing in the community. Inactive members are requested to do one of four things:

a) reaffirm the baptismal vows and return to living in the community of the baptismal covenant in the church where the member's name is recorded,

b) request transfer to another United Methodist church where the member will return to living in the community of the baptismal covenant,

c) arrange transfer to a particular church of another denomination, or

d) request withdrawal.

2. If a professing member whose address is known is residing outside the community and is not participating in the worship or activity of the church, the directives to encourage a transfer of the member shall be followed or that member may request in writing that the name be removed from the roll of professing members.

3. If the address of a professing member is no longer known to the pastor, every effort shall be made to locate the member. If the member can be located, the directives of either §1 or §2 above shall be followed.

4. If the directives of §1, §2, or §3 above have been followed over a period of two years without success, the member's name may be removed as a professing member by vote of the charge conference on recommendation of the pastor. On the membership record there shall be entered after the name: "Removed by Charge Conference Action"; and if the action is on the basis of §3 above, there shall be added: "Reason: Address Unknown." The record shall be retained in order that upon reaffirmation of the baptismal covenant the person may be restored as a member. Should a transfer of membership be requested, the pastor may, after consultation with the person, issue the certificate of transfer.

¶ 220.1-4=228.2b(1)-(4)

¶ 221. Transfer to Other United Methodist Churches—When a pastor receives a request for a transfer of membership from a member or from the pastor of another United Methodist church or a district superintendent, that pastor shall send the proper certificate directly to the pastor to which the member is transferring, or if there is no pastor, to the district superintendent. On receipt of such a certificate of transfer, the pastor or district superintendent shall enroll the name of the person so transferring after public reception in a regular service of worship, or if circumstances demand, public announcement in such a service. The pastor of the church issuing the certificate shall then be notified, whereupon said pastor shall remove the member from the roll.

¶ 221=239

¶ 222. Transfer to Other Denominations—A pastor, upon receiving a request from a member to transfer to a church of another denomination, or upon receiving such request from a pastor or duly authorized official of another denomination, shall (with the approval of the member) issue a certificate of transfer and, upon receiving confirmation of the member's reception into another congregation, shall properly record the transfer of such person on the membership record of the local church.

¶ 222=240

¶ 223. Withdrawal Without Notice—If a pastor is informed that a member has without notice united with a church of another denomination, the pastor shall make diligent inquiry and, if the report is confirmed, shall enter "Withdrawn" after the person's name on the membership roll and shall report the same to the next charge conference.

¶ 223=241

¶ 224. Restoration of Professing Membership—1. A person whose name has been removed from professing membership by withdrawal, or action by charge conference, or trial court, may ask to be restored to membership in the local church.

2. A person whose membership was recorded as having been withdrawn, for any voluntary reason, may be restored to professing membership by reaffirmation of the baptismal vows and become a professing member.

3. A person who withdrew under charges or was removed by trial court may ask to return to the church. Upon evidence of a renewed life, approval of the charge conference, and reaffirmation of the baptismal vows, the person may be restored to professing membership.

¶ 224.1+2=242.1+2; 224.3=242.5

Section IV. Organization of the Local Church

Section IV = Section VI (partly)

¶ 225. Primary Tasks—The local church is organized so that it can pursue its primary task and mission in the context of its own community—reaching out and receiving with joy all who will respond; encouraging people in their relationship with God and inviting them to commitment to God's love in Jesus Christ; providing opportunities for them to seek strengthening and growth in spiritual formation; and supporting them to live lovingly and justly in the power of the Holy Spirit as faithful disciples.

In carrying out its primary task, the local church shall be organized so that adequate provision is made for these basic responsibilities:

- a) planning and implementing a program of nurture, outreach, and witness for persons and families within and without the congregation;
 - b) providing for effective pastoral and lay leadership;
 - c) providing for financial support, physical facilities, and the legal obligations of the church;
 - d) utilizing the appropriate relationships and resources of the district and annual conference;
 - e) providing for the proper creation, maintenance, and disposition of documentary record material of the local church; and
 - f) seeking inclusiveness in all aspects of its life.
- ¶ 225=243

¶ 226. Organization—The basic organizational plan for the local church shall include provision for the following units: a charge conference, a church council, a committee on nominations and leadership development, a committee on pastor-parish relations, a committee on finance, a board of trustees, and such other elected leaders, commissions, councils, committees, and task forces as the charge conference may determine. Every local church shall develop a plan for organizing its administrative and programmatic responsibilities.

1. The church council and all other administrative and programmatic structures of the local church shall be amenable to the charge conference. The church council shall function as the executive entity of the charge conference.

2. When circumstances so require, the charge conference may, in consultation with and upon the approval of the district superintendent, modify the organizational plans herein set forth, provided that the provisions of ¶ 225 are observed.

3. Members of the church council or alternative structure shall be persons of genuine Christian character who love the church, are morally disciplined, are committed to the mandate of inclusiveness in the life of the church, are loyal to the ethical standards of The United Methodist Church set forth in the Social Principles, and are competent to administer its affairs. It shall include youth and young adult members chosen according to the same standards as adults. All persons with vote shall be members of the local church, except where central conference legislation provides otherwise. The pastor shall be the administrative officer and, as such, shall be an ex officio member of all conferences, boards, councils, commissions, committees, and task forces, unless otherwise restricted by the Discipline.

4. Central conferences may establish provisions for ministry groups, units, or institutional work on the level of the local church as it best serves the mission of the church, or delegate such authority to their respective annual conferences.

Such provisions may include the process for organizing a new church or a new charge, provided that the organizing of a new local church within a charge shall be subject at least to the agreement of the superintendent and of said charge conference, and that the organizing of a new charge shall be subject at least to the agreement of the cabinet of the annual conference.

¶ 226.Intro+1=244Intro+1; 226.2=247.2; 226.3=244.3; 226.4=255+259

Section V. The Charge Conference

Section V = Section VI (partly)

¶ 227. General Provisions—1. Within the pastoral charge the basic unit in the connectional system of The United Methodist Church is the charge conference. The charge conference shall therefore be organized from the church or churches in every pastoral charge as set forth in the Constitution (¶ 43). It shall meet at least annually.

2. The membership of the charge conference shall be all members of the church council or other appropriate body, together with retired ordained clergy who elect to hold their membership in said charge conference and any others as may be designated in the Discipline, and other persons as elected by the charge conference. If more than one church is on the pastoral charge, all members of each church council shall be members of the charge conference.

3. The district superintendent shall fix the time of meetings of the charge conference. The charge conference shall determine the place of meeting.

4. The district superintendent shall preside at the meetings of the charge conference or may designate an elder to preside.

5. The members present and voting at any duly announced meeting shall constitute a quorum.

6. Special sessions may be called by the district superintendent after consultation with the pastor of the charge. The purpose of such special session shall be stated in the call, and only such business shall be transacted as is in harmony with the purposes stated in the call. Any such special session of the charge conference may be convened as a church conference (§ 229).

7. Notice of time and place of a regular or special session of the charge conference shall be given at least ten days in advance.

8. A joint charge conference for two or more pastoral charges may be held at the same time and place, as the district superintendent may determine.

¶ 227.1+2=246.1+2; 227.3-7=246.4-8; 227.8=246.10

¶ 228. Powers and Duties—1. The charge conference shall be the connecting link between the local church and the general Church and shall have oversight of the church council(s).

2. The primary responsibilities of the charge conference in the annual meeting shall be to review and evaluate the total mission and ministry of the church (§§ 120-124), receive reports, and adopt objectives and goals recommended by the church council that are in keeping with the objectives of The United Methodist Church. The charge conference receives the report of the pastor in charge.

3. The charge conference recording secretary shall keep an accurate record of the proceedings, and with the presiding officer, shall sign the minutes. A copy of the minutes shall be provided for the district superintendent, and a permanent copy shall be retained for church files.

4. The charge conference shall examine and recommend to the Board of Ordained Ministry, faithfully adhering to the provisions of § 308.1, candidates for licensed or ordained ministry.

5. The charge conference shall examine and recommend, faithfully adhering to the provisions of § 310, renewal of candidates for the ordained ministry.

6. The charge conference shall inquire annually into the gifts, labors, and usefulness of persons in specific lay servant ministries (§ 236) and recommend persons who have met the standards set forth for such ministries.

7. The charge conference is responsible to fulfill the apportionment according to the rules set by the annual conference and the general Church. Payment of these apportionments by local churches is the first benevolent responsibility of the church.

8. The charge conference shall receive and act on the annual report from the pastor concerning the membership.

9. In those instances where there are two or more local churches on a pastoral charge, the charge conference may provide for a charge or local church council, a charge-wide or local church treasurer, and such other officers, commissions, committees, and task groups as necessary to carry on the work of the charge.

10. The charge conference shall promote awareness of and concurrence with policies relative to Socially Responsible Investments (§ 717), the Social Principles (§§ 160-166), and The Book of Resolutions of The United Methodist Church.

11. If any charge conference initiates, joins, monitors, or terminates a boycott, the guidelines in the Book of Resolutions should be followed. The General Conference is the only body that can initiate, empower, or join a boycott in the name of The United Methodist Church.

12. The charge conference shall have such other duties and responsibilities as the General Conference, central conference, or annual conference may duly commit to it.

¶ 228.1=247.1; 228.2-3=247.3-4; 228.4-5=247.8-9; 228.6=247.11; 228.7-8=247.14-15; 228.9=247.17; 228.10-11=247.20-21; 228.12=247.23

¶ 229. The Church Conference—To encourage broader participation by members of the church, the charge conference may be convened as a church conference, extending the vote to all professing members of the local church present at such meetings, subject to the authorization of the district superintendent.

¶ 229=248

¶ 230. Elections—The charge conference, or church conference authorized by the district superintendent, shall elect upon recommendation by the committee on nominations and leadership development, or by nomination from the floor, at least the following:

1. The church council and its chairperson (see § 233).

The church council chairperson shall be entitled to attend meetings of all boards and committees of the church unless specifically limited by the Book of Discipline.

2. The committee on nominations and leadership development, chaired by the pastor in charge. Among its members shall be the pastor, the lay leader, and a lay member of the annual conference, and representation of each local church.

Throughout the year, the committee shall identify, develop, deploy, evaluate, and monitor Christian leadership for the local congregation. It shall recommend to the charge conference the names of officers and leaders to be elected.

3. The committee on pastor-parish relations and its chairperson. It is composed of not fewer than five nor more than nine professing members of the local church, including the lay leader, a lay member of the annual conference, and representation of each local church.

It shall assist the pastor and staff of the local church in assessing their gifts, maintaining health holistically, setting priorities for leadership and service, and provide evaluation at least annually and where needed develop job descriptions. It shall discern persons for ordained ministry and bring recommendations to the charge conference for candidacy.

The pastor shall be present at each meeting of the committee except where he or she voluntarily excuses himself or herself. The committee may be called to meet without the pastor and/or staff under consideration only by and in presence of the district superintendent who shall notify the pastor and/or staff prior to the meeting and bring them into consultation immediately thereafter. The committee shall meet in closed session, and information shared in the committee shall be confidential. Its relationship to the district superintendent and the bishop is advisory only.

4. The committee on finance and its chairperson. Among its members shall be the pastor, the lay leader, and a lay member of the annual conference.

It shall give stewardship of financial resources, submit a budget to the church council, and make provisions for an annual audit.

5. The board of trustees as provided in Chapter 6 on Church Property, unless otherwise required by state law.

6. The lay leader of the charge who shall be a professing member of the local church. The lay leader shall function as the primary lay representative of the laity in that local church and shall have the following responsibilities:

- a) fostering awareness of the role of laity both within the congregation and through their ministries in the home, workplace, community, and world, and finding ways within the community of faith to recognize all these ministries;
- b) meeting regularly with the pastor to discuss the state of the church and the needs for ministry;
- c) the lay leader may also be elected as lay member of annual conference.

7. The lay member(s) of the annual conference and alternates who shall be professing members of the local church. The lay member(s) of the annual conference and alternates shall, along with the pastor, serve as interpreter(s) of the actions and programs of the annual conference and the general Church.

If the charge's lay member of the annual conference shall cease to be a member of the charge or shall for any reason fail to serve, an alternate member in the order of election shall serve in place.

8. To insure for appropriate financial accountability for offerings and other income funds, there shall be elected both a financial secretary and a treasurer, if not paid employees of the local church. The financial secretary records and deposits donated funds, as well as other financial assets of the congregation at the direction of the church council. The treasurer disburses funds to authorized expenditures, at the direction of the church council.

Thus no one person will oversee both income and expenditures of the local church accounts.

9. The recording secretary.

10. Additional members of the charge conference (see ¶ 227.2).

11. It is recommended that the charge conference elect a church historian in order to preserve the history of each local church.

12. All local church offices and all chairs of organizations within the local church may be shared between two persons, with the following exceptions: trustee, officers of the board of trustees, treasurer, lay member of annual conference, member and chairperson of the committee on pastor-parish relations. When two persons jointly hold a position that entails membership on the church council, both may be members of it.

13. The term of office is according to the provisions of the annual conference. It is recommended that no officer serve more than three consecutive terms in the same office.

¶ 230Intro+1=249Intro+1+251.3; 230.2=249.2+258.1; 230.3= 249.3+258.2; 230.4=249.4+258.4; 230.5=249.4+258.3; 230.6=251.1; 230.7=249.5+251.2; 230.8=249.4+258.4; 230.9=249.6; 230.10 (new); 230.11=247.5; 230.12=249.8; 230.13=247.7

¶ 231. Removal of Officers and Filling of Vacancies—If a leader or officer who has been elected by the charge conference is unable or unwilling to perform the duties reasonably expected of such a leader or officer, the district superintendent may call a special session of the charge conference. The purpose of such special session shall be stated as “Consideration for the removal of person(s) from office and the election of person(s) to fill vacancy(ies).”

¶ 231=250

¶ 232. The charge conference may organize ministries according to missional needs and potential. It may elect a coordinator or ministry group chairperson for any or all of its areas of ministry.

¶ 232=253+254

Section VI. The Church Council

Section VI = Section VI (partly)

¶ 233. 1. Purpose—The church council shall provide for planning and implementing a program of nurture, outreach, witness, and resources in the local church. It shall also provide for the administration of its organization and temporal life. It shall envision, plan, implement, and annually evaluate the mission and ministry of the church.

2. Mission and Ministry—Nurture, outreach, and witness ministries and their accompanying responsibilities include:

a) The nurturing ministries include: education, worship, Christian formation, membership care, small groups, and stewardship.

b) The outreach ministries include: local and larger community ministries of compassion, justice, and advocacy.

c) The witness ministries include: developing and strengthening evangelistic efforts of sharing of personal and congregational stories of Christian experience, faith, and service; and communications.

3. Meetings—The council shall meet at least quarterly. The chairperson or the pastor may call special meetings.

4. Responsibilities—It will be the responsibility of the church council to:

a) give adequate consideration to the missional purpose of the church; encourage, plan, and set the goals of the local church; determine activities and work; receive reports and evaluate the ministry;

b) review the membership of the local church;

c) fill interim vacancies occurring among the lay officers of the church between sessions of the annual charge conference;

d) establish the budget on recommendation of the committee on finance and ensure adequate provision for the financial needs of the church;

e) if the salary and other remuneration of the pastor(s) and staff members is not set by the annual conference, the church council recommends it to the charge conference after receiving recommendations from the committee on pastor-parish relations (staff-parish relations);

5. Membership—The charge conference will determine the size of the church council. The membership shall include but not be limited to the following:

a) the chairperson of the church council;

b) the lay leader;

c) a lay member to annual conference;

d) the pastor(s).

e) the secretary of the charge conference;

f) other members as appointed by the charge conference.

6. Quorum—the members present and voting at any duly announced meeting shall constitute a quorum.

7. The church council may appoint additional committees as it deems advisable.

¶ 233.1+2a-c=252.1+2a-c; 233.3=252.3a; 233.4a=247.3+251.3; 233.4b-e=252.4a-d; 233.5a-d=252.5a+b+g+l; 233.5e-f=247.4+new; 233.6=252.6; 233.7=258.5

Section VII. Organizing a New Local Church and Transfer of a Local Church

Section VII = Sections VII and VIII

¶ 234. Organizing a New Local Church—Each annual conference will specify the criteria, standards, and methods by which a new local church or missional congregation may be organized, taking into consideration the contextual situation of such congregation, and the historic as well as future projected missional needs of such context. All such newly organized churches shall be in accordance with local laws and other provisions of the Discipline.

¶ 234=259

¶ 235. Transfer of a Local Church—A local church may be transferred from one annual conference to another in which it is geographically located by a two-thirds vote of the professing members who are present and voting in each of the following: (1) the charge conference, (2) a congregational meeting of the local church affected, and (3) each of the two annual conferences involved. Upon announcement of the required majorities by the bishop or bishops involved, the transfer shall immediately be effective. The votes required may originate in the local church or either of the annual conferences involved and shall be effective regardless of the order in which taken.

¶ 235=260

Section VIII. Lay Servant Ministries

Section VIII = Section XI

¶ 236. Each central conference may create categories of servant ministries for laypersons that are appropriate and needed for the expanding and ongoing mission and ministry of that conference. Educational, spiritual, and psychological qualifications and provisions for appropriate certification may be defined by the central conference.

¶ 236=266

Chapter Two

The Ministry of the Ordained

Section I. The Meaning of Ordination and Conference Membership

¶ 301. 1. Ministry in the Christian church is derived from the ministry of Christ, who calls all persons to receive God's gift of salvation and follow in the way of love and service. The whole church receives and accepts this call, and all Christians participate in this continuing ministry (see ¶¶ 120-140).

2. Within the church community, there are persons whose gifts, evidence of God's grace, and promise of future usefulness are affirmed by the community, and who respond to God's call by offering themselves in leadership as set-apart ministers, ordained and licensed.

¶ 301.1+2=301.1+2

¶ 302. Ordination and Apostolic Ministry—The pattern for this response to the call is provided in the development of the early church. The apostles led in prayer, teaching and preaching, ordered the spiritual and temporal life of the community, established leadership for the ministry of service, and provided for the proclamation of the gospel to new persons and in new places. The early church, through the laying on of hands, set apart persons with responsibility to preach, to teach, to administer the sacraments, to nurture, to heal, to gather the community in worship, and to send them forth in witness. The church also set apart other persons to care for the physical needs of others, reflecting the concerns for the people of the world. In the New Testament (Acts 6), we see the apostles identifying and authorizing persons to a ministry of service. These functions, though set apart, were never separate from the ministry of the whole people of God. Paul states (Ephesians 4:1-12) that different gifts and ministries are given to all persons.

¶ 302=302

¶ 303. Purpose of Ordination—1. Ordination to ministry is a gift from God to the church. In ordination, the church affirms and continues the apostolic ministry through persons empowered by the Holy Spirit. As such, those who are ordained make a commitment to conscious living of the whole gospel and to the proclamation of that gospel to the end that the world may be saved.

2. Ordination is fulfilled in leadership of the people of God through ministries of Service, Word, Sacrament, Order, Compassion, and Justice. The Church's ministry of service is a primary representation of God's love. Those who respond to God's call to lead in service, word, compassion, and justice and equip others for this ministry through teaching, proclamation, and worship and who assist elders in the administration of the sacraments are ordained as deacons. Those whose leadership in service includes preaching and teaching the Word of God, administration of the sacraments, ordering the Church for its mission and service, and administration of the discipline of the Church are ordained as elders.

3. Ordained persons exercise their ministry in covenant with all Christians, especially with those whom they lead and serve in ministry. They also live in covenant of mutual care and accountability with all those who share their ordination, especially in The United Methodist Church, with the ordained who are members of the same annual conference and part of the same Order. The covenant of ordained ministry is a lifetime commitment, and those who enter into it dedicate their whole lives to the personal and spiritual disciplines it requires.

4. The effectiveness of the Church in mission depends on these covenantal commitments to the ministry of all Christians and the ordained ministry of the Church. Through ordination and through other offices of pastoral leadership, the Church provides for the continuation of Christ's ministry, which has been committed to the church as a whole. Without creative use of the diverse gifts of the entire body of Christ, the ministry of the church is less effective. Without responsible leadership, the focus, direction, and continuity of that ministry is diminished.

5. In keeping with ancient Christian teaching and our Wesleyan tradition, we affirm that ordination for the same, or equivalent order, is not repeatable.

¶ 303.1-5=303.1-5

¶ 304. Qualifications for Ordination—1. Those whom the Church ordains shall be conscious of God's call to ordained ministry, and their call shall be acknowledged and authenticated by the Church. God's call has many manifestations, and the Church cannot structure a single test of authenticity. Nevertheless, the experience of the Church and the needs of its ministry require certain qualities of faith, life, and practice from those who seek ordination as deacons and elders. In order that The United Methodist Church may be assured that those persons who present themselves as candidates for ordained ministry are truly called of God, the Church expects persons seeking ordination to:

a) Have a personal faith in Christ and be committed to Christ as Savior and Lord.

b) Nurture and cultivate spiritual disciplines and patterns of holiness.

c) Teach and model generous Christian giving with a focus on tithing as God's standard of giving.

d) Acknowledge a call by God to give themselves completely to ordained ministry following Jesus' pattern of love and service.

e) Communicate persuasively the Christian faith in both oral and written form.

f) Make a commitment to lead the whole Church in loving service to humankind.

g) Give evidence of God's gifts for ordained ministry, evidence of God's grace in their lives, and promise of future usefulness in the mission of the Church.

h) Be persons in whom the community can place trust and confidence.

i) Accept that Scripture contains all things necessary for salvation through faith in God through Jesus Christ; be competent in the disciplines of Scripture, theology, church history, and Church polity; possess the skills essential to the practice of ordained ministry; and lead in making disciples for Jesus Christ.

j) Be accountable to The United Methodist Church, accept its Doctrinal Standards and Discipline and authority, accept the supervision of those appointed to this ministry, and be prepared to live in the covenant of its ordained ministers.

2. For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel, and in consideration of the influence of an ordained clergy on the lives of other persons both within and outside the Church, the Church expects those who seek ordination to make a complete dedication of themselves to the highest ideals of the Christian life. To this end, they agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationships, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and in the knowledge and love of God.

3. While persons set apart by the Church for ordained ministry are subject to all the frailties of the human condition and the pressures of society, they are required to maintain the highest standards of holy living in the world. The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching. Therefore self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be certified as candidates, ordained as ministers, or appointed to serve in The United Methodist Church.

4. The United Methodist Church entrusts those persons who are in the ordained ministry with primary responsibility for maintaining standards of education and preparation for ordination. Having been originally recommended by a charge conference and approved by the clergy session of the annual conference, persons are elected to membership in the annual conference and ordained by the bishop.

5. In all cases where the Board of Ordained Ministry, or ordained members in full connection in clergy session vote on granting any status regarding license, ordination, or conference membership, it is understood that the requirements set forth herein are minimum requirements only. Each person voting is expected to vote prayerfully based on personal judgment of the applicant's gifts, evidence of God's grace, and promise of future usefulness for the mission of the Church.

6. The annual conference, upon recommendation of its Board of Ordained Ministry, may create an executive committee of the board, district committees on ordained ministry, or other appropriate structure, as it serves the need to carry out the work of the Board of Ordained Ministry, and assign and delegate to such structures the appropriate tasks and responsibilities it chooses.

¶ 304.1-5=304.1-5; 304.6=new

Section II. Clergy Orders in The United Methodist Church

¶ 305. Orders in Relation to the Ministry of All Christians—Baptism is God's gift of unmerited grace through the Holy Spirit. It is an incorporation into Christ which marks the entrance of each person into the church and its ministry (Romans 6:3, 4, 18).

The New Testament witness to Jesus Christ makes clear that the primary form of his ministry in God's name is that of service, diakonia, in the world. Very early in its history, the church came to understand that all of its members were commissioned in baptism to ministries of love, justice, and service within local congregations and the larger communities in which they lived; all who follow Jesus have a share in the ministry of Jesus, who came not to be served, but to serve. There is thus a general ministry of all baptized Christians (see ¶¶ 126-137).

Within the people of God, some persons are called to the ministry of deacon. The words deacon, deaconess, and diaconate all spring from a common Greek root—diakonos, or "servant," and diakonia, or "service." Very early in its history the church, as an act of worship and praise of God, instituted an order of ordained ministers to personify or focus the servanthood to which all Christians are called. These people were named deacons. This ministry exemplifies and leads the Church in the servanthood every Christian is called to live both in the church and the world. The deacon embodies the interrelationship between worship in the gathered community and service to God in the world.

Within the people of God, other persons are called to the ministry of elder. The elders carry on the historic work of the presbyters in the life of the Church. Beginning in some of the very early Christian communities, the presbyters assisted the bishop in leading the gathered community in the celebration of sacraments and the guidance and care of its communal life. The ministry of elder exemplifies and leads the Church in service to God in the world, in remembering and celebrating the gifts of God and living faithfully in response to God's grace.

¶ 305=305

¶ 306. Order of Deacons and Order of Elders—All persons ordained as clergy upon election to full membership in the annual conference shall be members of and participate in an order appropriate to their election. An order is a covenant community within the church to mutually support, care for, and hold accountable its members for the sake of the life and mission of the church. These orders, separately or together, seek to respond to the spiritual hunger among clergy for a fulfilling sense of vocation, for support among peers and for a deepening relationship with God.

¶ 306=306

¶ 307. Changing Orders—1. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry and vote of the clergy members in full connection in an annual conference, elders may be received as deacons in full connection, and deacons in full connection may be received as elders, provided they are in good standing and have:

- a) informed the bishop and district superintendent of their intention,
- b) applied in writing to the Board of Ordained Ministry, and
- c) articulated to the Board of Ordained Ministry their call to the ministry of the deacon or the elder.

2. Such persons shall retain their credentials and full membership in the annual conference through the transition period from one order to the other. When ordained to the order to which they are transitioning, they shall surrender to the conference secretary the credentials of the order from which they are leaving.

¶ 307.1+2=309.2+3

Section III. Candidacy for Licensed and Ordained Ministry

¶ 308. Candidacy and Certification for Licensed and Ordained Ministry—The licensed or ordained ministry is recognized by The United Methodist Church as a called-out and set-apart ministry. Therefore, it is appropriate that those persons who present themselves as candidates for licensed or ordained ministry be examined regarding the authenticity of their call by God to set-apart ministry.

God's call to ordained ministry and the response of a person to this call is a vital element of a shared life of faith in community. Every local church should intentionally nurture and support candidates for ordained ministry. Persons, upon hearing and heeding the call to servant leadership through licensed or ordained ministry, shall contact a clergy person in their local church, or district superintendent to inquire about the process of candidacy, as the annual conference may direct with its provisions.

1. Those beginning candidacy for licensed or ordained ministry:

- a) shall have been a baptized participant in a United Methodist ministry setting for at least one year and be a professing member.
- b) shall write to the district superintendent requesting admission to the candidacy process, including a statement of call.

c) shall request a meeting of the pastor-parish relations committee to consider the statement of call and to be evaluated in light of Wesley's historic questions;

(1) Do they know God as pardoning God? Have they the love of God abiding in them? Do they desire nothing but God? Are they holy in all manner of conversation?

(2) Have they gifts, as well as evidence of God's grace, for the work? Have they a clear, sound understanding; a right judgment in the things of God; a just conception of salvation by faith? Do they speak justly, readily, clearly?

(3) Have they fruit? Have any been truly convinced of sin and converted to God, and are believers edified by their service?

As long as these marks occur in them, we believe they are called of God to serve. These we receive as sufficient proof that they are moved by the Holy Spirit.

e) Upon recommendation of the candidate by the pastor-parish relations committee the charge conference shall meet to recommend the candidate in written ballot by two thirds majority to the Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. Candidates recommended by the charge conference and seeking to become certified for licensed or ordained ministry shall meet with the Board of Ordained Ministry. The Board of Ordained Ministry can require the candidate to provide written material and reports according to its guidelines. These shall include, but are not limited to, written answers to questions about call, experience of faith and ministry, and understanding of the Christian faith; psychological reports, criminal background check, a notarized statement detailing any convictions for felony or misdemeanor or written accusations of sexual misconduct or child abuse.

¶ 308.1=310.1; 308.2=310.2a+b

¶ 309. Continuation of Certified Candidates—The progress of certified candidates shall be reviewed annually by the Board of Ordained Ministry which may continue the candidacy when the following conditions have been met satisfactorily, but for no more than twelve years following certification:

1. The certified candidate has received the annual recommendation of his or her charge conference.

2. The certified candidate is making satisfactory progress in his or her studies.

3. The certified candidate continues to evidence gifts, fruits and God's grace for the work of ministry.

¶ 309.1-3=313.1-3

¶ 310. Discontinuance and Reinstatement of Certified Candidates—Certified candidates may be discontinued on their own request, upon severing their relationship with The United Methodist Church, or upon action by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall keep a permanent record of the circumstances relating to discontinuance.

Certified candidates whose status has been discontinued by the Board of Ordained Ministry shall only be reinstated by the same board.

¶ 310=314.1-2

¶ 311. Appointment of Certified Candidates—A certified candidate is eligible for appointment as a local pastor upon completion of License for Pastoral Ministry. Those appointed as local pastors are clergy members of the annual conference and are no longer listed as certified candidates.

¶ 311=311

Section IV. License for Pastoral Ministry

¶ 312. License for Pastoral Ministry—All persons not ordained as elders who are appointed to preach and conduct divine worship and perform the duties of a pastor shall have a license for pastoral ministry.

The Board of Ordained Ministry may recommend to the clergy session of the annual conference the licensing of those persons who have provided the reports and statements required by the board, and who are in one of the following categories:

1. Provisional elders to be commissioned by the annual conference,

2. Local pastors who have completed the conditions for candidacy certification, and the studies for the license as a local pastor.

3. Associate members of the annual conference;

4. Deacons in full connection, seeking to qualify for ordination as an elder;

5. Licensed or ordained clergy from other denominations who have training equivalent to the studies for license as a local pastor.

¶ 312.1-5=315.1-5

¶ 313. Responsibilities and Duties of Those Licensed for Pastoral Ministry—1. Provisional elders approved annually by the Board of Ordained Ministry and local pastors approved annually by the Board of Ordained Ministry may be licensed by the bishop to perform all the duties of a pastor (¶ 336), including the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion as well as the service of marriage (where state laws allow), burial, confirmation, and membership reception, within and while appointed to a particular charge or extension ministry, serving people within or related to the community or ministry setting being served.

2. Between sessions of the annual conference, persons who have completed the conditions for licensing may be granted interim license as a local pastor by the Board of Ordained Ministry, upon recommendation of the cabinet.

3. Authorization granted by license may be renewed annually by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

4. The license shall remain valid only so long as the appointment continues and shall be recertified by the bishop when assignments change between sessions of the annual conference.

5. Licensed clergy shall be under the supervision of a district superintendent.

6. Licensed clergy shall be amenable to the clergy session of the annual conference in the performance of their pastoral duties and shall attend the sessions of the annual conference.

7. The membership of licensed clergy under full-time and part-time appointment is in the annual conference where they shall have the right to vote on all matters except constitutional amendments, election of delegates to General, central, or jurisdictional conference, and matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy.

Licensed clergy who fulfill the requirements of ¶ 35 may vote to elect clergy delegates to General and jurisdictional or central conferences.

8. All licensed clergy shall receive written communication about decisions made regarding their relationship with the annual conference.

¶ 313.1=316.1; 313.2=317; 313.3-8=316.2-7

¶ 314. Categories of Local Pastor—Each central conference shall establish what categories of local pastor will be recognized, as well as educational or other requirements necessary for each category.

¶ 314=318Intro

¶ 315. Continuance as a Local Pastor—1. Upon successful continuance or completion of required studies, and other qualifications, a local pastor may be recommended for continuance by the Board of Ordained Ministry to the clergy session of the annual conference for annual approval.

2. None of the provisions in this legislation shall be interpreted to change or limit authorizations to local pastors ordained as deacon prior to 1996.

¶ 315.1-2=319.2+5

¶ 316. Exiting, Reinstatement, and Retirement of Local Pastors—1. Discontinuance of Local Pastors—Whenever a local pastor retires or is no longer approved for appointment by the annual conference, whenever any local pastor severs relationship with The United Methodist Church, whenever the appointment of a local pastor is discontinued by the bishop, or whenever the Board of Ordained Ministry does not recommend continuation of license, license shall be surrendered to the district superintendent for deposit with the secretary of the conference.

After consultation with the district superintendent and the pastor, the former local pastor shall designate the local church in which membership shall be held. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall file with the resident bishop a permanent record of the circumstances relating to the discontinuance of local pastor status.

2. Withdrawal Under Complaints and Charges—When a local pastor is accused of a chargeable offense under ¶ 2702 and desires to withdraw from the Church, the procedures described in Judicial Administration shall apply.

3. Trial of Local Pastor—When a local pastor is accused of a chargeable offense under ¶ 2702, the procedures described in Judicial Administration shall apply.

4. Reinstatement of Local Pastor Status—Local pastors who have been discontinued from an annual conference of The United Methodist Church may be reinstated only by the annual conference that previously approved them, or its legal successor, only upon recommendation by the respective Board of Ordained Ministry, and the cabinet. Persons seeking reinstatement shall provide evidence that they have been members of a local United Methodist church for at least one year prior to their request for reinstatement and have been recommended by its charge conference. When approved by the clergy session of the annual conference, their license and credentials shall be restored, and they shall be eligible for appointment.

5. Retirement of Local Pastor—Upon retirement, a local pastor who has made satisfactory progress in the Course of Study may be recognized as a retired local pastor. Retired local pastors may attend annual conference sessions with voice but not vote. A retired local pastor may be appointed by the bishop to a charge.

¶ 316.1-5=320.1-5

Section V. Associate Membership

¶ 317. Eligibility and Rights of Associate Members—Associate members of an annual conference are in the itinerant ministry of the Church (see ¶ 334) and are available on a continuing basis for appointment by the bishop. They shall be amenable to the annual conference in the performance of their ministry.

1. Associate members shall have a right to vote in the annual conference on all matters except the following: (a) constitutional amendments; (b) all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy.

2. Associate members may serve on any board, commission, or committee of an annual conference. They shall not be eligible for election as delegates to the General or jurisdictional or central conferences.

3. Associate members shall be subject to the provisions for ordained elders governing sabbatical leave, leave of absence, location, retirement, minimum salary, and pension.

¶ 317.1-3=321.1-3

¶ 318. Requirements for Election as Associate Members—Local pastors may be elected to associate membership by a three-fourths majority vote of the clergy session of the annual conference, upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, when they have met the following conditions:

They shall have: (1) served four years as full-time local pastors; (2) completed the educational requirements for the Course of Study and the Advanced Course of Study; (3) have reached the age requirements; and (4) fulfilled the requirements stated in ¶ 320.4-7, applicable to associate membership. Each central conference shall establish provisions for such requirements or delegate it to its annual conferences.

¶ 318=322.1

¶ 319. Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members—Each annual conference may organize a Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members.

¶ 319=323Intro

Section VI. Provisional Membership

¶ 320. Qualifications for Election to Provisional Membership—A certified candidate shall be eligible for election to provisional membership in the annual conference and commissioning by vote of the clergy session upon recommendation with a two-thirds majority of its Board of Ordained Ministry after meeting the following qualifications.

1. Service Requirement: Candidates shall have demonstrated their gifts for ministries of service and leadership to the satisfaction of the Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. Educational Requirement: Candidates shall have completed theological studies in the Christian faith. These studies have to include United Methodist doctrine, polity, and history. Each central conference shall establish provisions for its requirements.

3. Local pastors may fulfill the requirements for provisional membership when they have reached the age requirement and have completed the Course of Study and the Advanced Course of Study. Each central conference shall establish provisions for its requirements.

4. Each candidate shall respond to a doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The examination shall cover the following:

a) Describe your personal experience of God and the understanding of God you derive from biblical, theological, and historical sources.

b) What is your understanding of evil as it exists in the world?

c) What is your understanding of humanity, and the human need for divine grace?

d) How do you interpret the statement Jesus Christ is Lord?

e) What is your conception of the activity of the Holy Spirit in personal faith, in the community of believers, and in responsible living in the world?

f) What is your understanding of the kingdom of God; the Resurrection; eternal life?

g) How do you intend to affirm, teach, and apply Part III of the Discipline (Doctrinal Standards and Our Theological Task) in your work in the ministry to which you have been called?

h) The United Methodist Church holds that the living core of the Christian faith was revealed in Scripture, illumined by tradition, vivified in personal experience, and confirmed by reason. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church?

i) Describe the nature and mission of the Church. What are its primary tasks today?

j) Discuss your understanding of the primary characteristics of United Methodist polity.

k) How do you perceive yourself, your gifts, your motives, your role, and your commitment as a provisional member and commissioned clergy in The United Methodist Church?

l) Describe your understanding of diakonia, the servant ministry of the church, and the servant ministry of the provisional member.

m) What is the meaning of ordination in the context of the general ministry of the Church?

n) Describe your understanding of an inclusive church and ministry.

o) You have agreed as a candidate for the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness of the gospel, and in consideration of the influence as a clergy, to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life, and to this end agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to bodily health, mental and emotional maturity, integrity in all personal relationships, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God. What is your understanding of this agreement?

p) Explain the role and significance of the sacraments in the ministry to which you have been called.

5. Each candidate shall have a personal interview with the Board of Ordained Ministry to complete his or her candidacy.

6. Each candidate shall submit documentation that shall include but is not limited to psychological reports, criminal background, a notarized statement detailing any convictions for felony or misdemeanor or written accusations of sexual misconduct or child abuse.

7. Each candidate shall file with the board a written, concise, autobiographical statement regarding age, health, family status, Christian experience, call to ministry, educational record, formative Christian experiences, and plans for service in the Church.

¶ 320Intro=324Intro+14; 320.1=324.2; 320.2=324.3+4; 320.3=324.6; 320.4=324.9; 320.5-7=324.11-13

¶ 321. Commissioning—Commissioning is the act of the church that publicly acknowledges God's call and the response, talents, gifts and training of the candidate. The church invokes the Holy Spirit as the candidate is commissioned to be a faithful servant leader among the people, to lead the church in service, to proclaim the Word of God and to equip others for ministry. Commissioning of provisional members for ministry as elders by a bishop implies the authority of a license for pastoral ministry for the time of provisional membership.

Through commissioning, the church sends persons in leadership and service in the name of Jesus Christ and marks their entrance into a time of provisional membership as they prepare for ordination. The bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide credentials as a provisional member and a commissioned clergy in the annual conference.

The period of commissioned ministry is concluded when the provisional members are received as full members of the annual conference and ordained as either deacon or elder, or a decision is made not to proceed toward ordination and provisional membership is ended.

¶ 321=325

¶ 322. *Service of Provisional Members—1. All persons who are provisional members shall be appointed by a bishop and serve as a provisional member of the annual conference for a minimum of two years following the completion of education requirements for full connection.

2. The supervision of provisional members is to be personally assumed or delegated by the district superintendent, and assumed by a mentor assigned by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Their service shall be evaluated by the Board of Ordained Ministry as effective according to written guidelines developed by the Board and adopted by the clergy members in full connection.

3. Provisional members seeking to change their ordination track shall:

a) Write to the Board of Ordained Ministry and inform the district superintendent and bishop of their intention.

b) Interview with the Board of Ordained Ministry to articulate and clarify their call.

c) Fulfill educational and service requirements.

¶ 322.1-3=326.1+2+4

¶ 323. *Eligibility and Rights of Provisional Membership—Provisional members are on probation as to character, servant leadership, and effectiveness in ministry in preparation for membership in full connection in the annual conference as deacons or elders. They are accountable to the annual conference, through the clergy session. Annually, the Board of Ordained Ministry shall review and evaluate their relationship and make recommendation to the clergy members in full connection regarding their continuance. No member shall be continued on provisional membership beyond the eighth regular session following their admission to provisional membership.

1. Provisional members shall have the right to vote in the annual conference on all matters except the following:

a) constitutional amendments;

b) election of delegates to the General and jurisdictional or central conferences; provisional members who have completed all of their educational requirements may vote to elect clergy delegates to General and jurisdictional or central conferences.

c) all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy.

2. Provisional members may serve on any board, commission, or committee of the annual conference except the Board of Ordained Ministry.

3. Provisional members shall be supervised by the district superintendent under whom they are appointed or if appointed beyond the local church shall be supervised by the superintendent in the area where their work is done.

4. Discontinuance from Provisional Membership—Provisional members may request discontinuance of this relationship or may be discontinued by the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry. After consultation with the district superintendent and the pastor, the former provisional member shall designate the local church in which membership shall be held.

When provisional members in good standing withdraw to unite with another denomination or to terminate their membership in The United Methodist Church, their action shall be considered a request for discontinuance of their relationship and their credentials shall be surrendered to a district superintendent. Each central conference shall approve a process to follow in the case of discontinuance without consent.

The Board of Ordained Ministry shall file with the resident bishop and the secretary of the conference a permanent record of the circumstances relating to discontinuance as a provisional member. After discontinuance, provisional members may be classified and approved as local pastors.

5. Provisional members may not be retired under the provisions of ¶ 353. Provisional members who have reached the mandatory retirement age shall be automatically discontinued. Provisional elders may be classified as retired local pastors under the provisions of ¶ 316.5.

¶ 323Intro=327Intro; 323.1-3=327.2-4; 323.4-5=327.6-7

Section VII. The Ordained Deacon in Full Connection

¶ 324. *The Ministry of a Deacon—From among the baptized, deacons are called by God to a lifetime of servant leadership, authorized by the Church, and ordained by a bishop. Deacons give leadership in the Church's life: in teaching and proclaiming the Word; in contributing to worship, and in assisting the elders in administering the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper; in forming and nurturing disciples; in conducting marriages and burying the dead; in embodying the church's mission to the world; and in leading congregations in interpreting the needs, concerns, and hopes of the world. This ministry grows out of the Wesleyan passion for social holiness and ministry among the poor.

Deacons are accountable to the annual conference and the bishop for the fulfillment of their call to servant leadership.

¶ 324=328

¶ 325. Authority and Responsibilities of Deacons in Full Connection—1. The deacon in full connection shall have the rights of voice and vote in the annual conference where membership is held; shall be eligible to serve as clergy on boards, commissions, or committees of the annual conference and hold office on the same; and shall be eligible for election as a clergy delegate to the General, central, or jurisdictional conference. The deacon in full connection shall attend all the sessions of the annual conference and share with elders in full connection responsibility for all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy (¶ 330.1).

2. As members of the Order of Deacons, all deacons in full connection are in covenant with all other such deacons in the annual conference and shall participate in the life of their order.

¶ 325.1+2=329.2+3

¶ 326. Requirements for Ordination as Deacon and Admission to Full Connection—Provisional members who are applying for admission into full connection and who have been provisional members for at least two years following the completion of the educational requirements for ordination as a deacon may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference by two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon recommendation by two-thirds vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have qualified as follows:

1. They shall have met the educational requirements. Each central conference shall establish its provisions.

2. They shall have responded to a doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Each central conference shall develop the specific requirements for completing the doctrinal examination for full membership and ordination.

3. The following questions are guidelines for the preparation of the examination:

a) Theology

(1) Give examples of how the practice of ministry has affected your experience and understanding of:

(a) God

(b) Humanity

(c) The need for divine grace

(d) The Lordship of Jesus Christ

(e) The work of the Holy Spirit

(f) The meaning and significance of the Sacraments

(g) The kingdom of God

(h) Resurrection and eternal life

(2) How do you understand the following traditional evangelical doctrines: (a) repentance; (b) justification; (c) regeneration; (d) sanctification? What are the marks of the Christian life?

(3) How has the practice of ministry informed your understanding of the nature and mission of the Church? What are its primary challenges today?

(4) The United Methodist Church holds that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are sources and norms for belief and practice, but that the Bible is primary among them. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church, and how has your practice of ministry been affected by this understanding?

(5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?

b) Vocation

(1) How has the experience of ministry shaped your understanding of your vocation as an ordained deacon?

c) The Practice of Ministry

(1) Do you offer yourself to be appointed by the bishop to a service ministry?

(2) Describe and evaluate your personal gifts for ministry and how they have resulted in fruitful ministry. What would be your areas of strength and areas in which you need to be strengthened in order to be more fruitful in ministry?

(3) For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel, and in consideration of your influence as an ordained clergy, are you willing to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life; and to this end will you agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to physical health, intentional intellectual development, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, integrity in all personal relationships, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge of the love of God?

(4) Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry to all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

(5) Will you regard all pastoral conversations of a confessional nature as a trust between the person concerned and God?

(6) Provide evidence of experience in peace and justice ministries.

d) Historic Examination for Admission into Full Connection and Ordination as Deacon—The bishop as chief pastor shall engage those seeking to be admitted in serious self-searching and prayer to prepare them for their examination before the conference. At the time of the examination, the bishop shall also explain to the conference the historic nature of the following questions and seek to interpret their spirit and intent. The questions are these and any others which may be thought necessary:

- (1) Have you faith in Christ?
- (2) Are you going on to perfection?
- (3) Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?
- (4) Are you earnestly striving after perfection in love?
- (5) Are you resolved to devote yourself wholly to God and God's work?
- (6) Do you know the General Rules of our Church?
- (7) Will you keep the General Rules of our Church?
- (8) Have you studied the doctrines of The United Methodist Church?
- (9) After full examination do you believe that our doctrines are in harmony with the Holy Scriptures?
- (10) Have you studied our form of Church discipline and polity?
- (11) Do you approve our Church government and polity?
- (12) Will you support and maintain them?
- (13) Will you exercise the ministry of compassion?
- (14) Will you diligently instruct the children in every place?
- (15) Will you visit from house to house?
- (16) Will you recommend fasting or abstinence, both by precept and example?
- (17) Are you determined to employ all your time in the work of God?
- (18) Are you in debt so as to embarrass you in your work?
- (19) Will you observe the following directions?
 - (a) Be diligent. Never be unemployed. Never be triflingly employed. Never trifle away time; neither spend any more time at any one place than is strictly necessary.
 - (b) Be punctual. Do everything exactly at the time. And do not mend our rules, but keep them; not for wrath, but for conscience' sake.

4. A provisional member of the annual conference who has completed the requirements for deacon's orders and admission into full membership shall be eligible for election to full membership and ordination as deacon by a bishop. Following election, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of full membership in the annual conference, and following ordination, a certificate of ordination.

5. A deacon shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Deacons. The bishops shall be assisted by other deacons and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. Judicatory leaders from full communion partners may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating deacons and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

6. The central conference may establish more detailed requirements for full membership and ordination.

¶ 326Intro=330Intro; 326.1-5=330.3-7; 326.6 (new)

Section VIII. Appointments of Deacons and Provisional Deacons to Various Ministries

¶ 327. Appointment of Deacons and Provisional Deacons to Various Ministries—1. Deacons and provisional deacons may be appointed to serve in the following settings:

a) Agencies and settings beyond the local church, including ecumenical agencies, that extend the witness and service of Christ's love and justice in the world and connect the church with the most needy, neglected, and marginalized;

b) United Methodist Church-related agencies, schools, colleges, theological schools, and other ministry settings within the connectional structures of The United Methodist Church;

c) A local congregation, charge, or cooperative parish, leading in the congregation's mission to the world and equipping all Christians to fulfill their own calls to Christian service.

2. Deacons and provisional deacons may be appointed to attend school.

3. Deacons and provisional deacons shall be appointed to settings that allow fulfillment of their call and where supervision is provided with goals, evaluation, and accountability acceptable to the bishop, the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry.

4. Deacons and Provisional Deacons Appointed Beyond the Local Church.

a) Deacons and provisional deacons may be appointed to settings not connected to either The United Methodist Church or ecumenical agencies when the appointment is approved by the bishop and the Board of Ordained Ministry as a ministry beyond the local church that is a witness and service of Christ's love and justice in the world.

b) Deacons and provisional deacons are amenable to the annual conference of which they are members and insofar as possible should maintain close working relationship with and effective participation in the work of their annual conference. When deacons or provisional deacons are appointed to a setting beyond the local church outside of the conference where they hold membership, the appointment shall be made by the bishop of the conference where membership is held in consultation with the bishop of the area in which the appointment is located.

c) Deacons and provisional deacons appointed to settings beyond the local church shall submit annually to the bishop, the district superintendent, and the Board of Ordained Ministry, a written report.

5. When deacons and provisional deacons serve in an agency or setting beyond the local church, the bishop, after consultation with the deacon or provisional deacon and the pastor in charge, shall appoint the deacon or provisional deacon to a local congregation where they will take missional responsibility for leading other Christians into ministries of service. In this ministry the deacons and provisional deacons shall be accountable to the pastor in charge, the charge conference, and other bodies that coordinate the ministry of the local church. In those instances where the appointment is in another episcopal area, the appointment to a local church shall be made in consultation with the bishop of that area.

6. The appointment of deacons and provisional deacons shall be made by the bishop.

a) It may be initiated by the bishop or the district superintendent, the individual deacon or provisional deacon, or the agency requesting the service of the deacon or provisional deacon.

b) It shall be clarified by a written statement of intentionality of servant leadership in order to establish a clear distinction between the work to which all Christians are called and the work for which deacons and provisional deacons are appropriately prepared and authorized.

c) If the bishop and cabinet consider an appointment not to be in the best interest of the Church, the bishop may choose not to make the appointment. In such event, the bishop shall consult with the deacon or provisional deacon and the Board of Ordained Ministry.

d) Deacons and provisional deacons at their own request or with their consent may be appointed to a non salaried position. Such missional appointments will serve to express the Church's concern for social holiness, for ministry among the poor, and for advancing emerging needs of the future.

7. At the request of the deacon or provisional deacon and with the consent of the bishop and cabinet where conference membership is held, the deacon or provisional deacon may receive a less than full-time appointment.

8. Deacons and provisional deacons, with the approval of their bishop and the judicatory authorities of the other denomination may receive an appointment to another denomination while retaining their home conference membership.

9. Charge Conference Membership of Deacons and Provisional Deacons.

a) Deacons and provisional deacons who are appointed to a local congregation, charge, or cooperative parish, shall be members of that charge conference.

b) Deacons and provisional deacons who are appointed to settings beyond the local church shall, after consultation with the pastor in charge, and the district superintendent designate a charge conference in which they shall hold membership and to which they shall submit an annual report.

10. Each central conference shall determine the process for deacons' appointments, equitable compensation, pension and health benefits, and the procedures when a deacon is not appointed.

¶ 327.1-9=331.1-9; 327.10 (new)

Section IX. The Ordained Elder in Full Connection

¶ 328. Ministry of an Elder—Elders are ordained ministers who, by God's grace, have been found by the Church to be of sound learning, of Christian character, possessing the necessary gifts and evidence of God's grace, and whose call by God to ordination has been confirmed by the Church. Elders are ordained to a lifetime ministry of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service. By the authority given in their ordination, they are authorized to preach and teach the Word of God, to provide pastoral care and counsel, to administer the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion, and to order the life of the Church for service in mission and ministry. The servant leadership of the elder, in both local church and extension ministries, is expressed by leading the people of God in worship and prayer, by leading persons to faith in Jesus Christ, by exercising pastoral supervision, and by ordering the Church in mission in the world.

¶ 328=332

¶ 329. Elders in Full Connection—1. Elders in full connection with an annual conference by virtue of their election and ordination are bound in special covenant with all the ordained elders of the annual conference. In the keeping of this covenant they perform the ministerial duties and maintain the ministerial standards established by those in the covenant. They offer themselves without reserve to be appointed and to serve, after consultation, as the appointive authority may determine. They live with all other ordained ministers in mutual trust and concern and seek with them the sanctification of the fellowship. By entering into the covenant, they accept and subject themselves to the process of clergy discipline, including serving on committees on investigation, trial courts, or appellate committees. Only those shall be elected to full membership who are of unquestionable moral character and genuine piety, sound in the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, and faithful in the discharge of their duties.

2. A provisional member of the annual conference who has completed the requirements for Elder's Orders and admission into full membership shall be eligible for election to full membership and ordination as elder by a bishop. Following election, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of full membership in the annual conference, and following ordination, a certificate of ordination.

3. An elder shall be ordained by a bishop by the laying on of hands, employing the Order of Service for the Ordination of Elders. The bishop shall be assisted by other elders and may include laity designated by the bishop representing the Church community. Judicatory leaders from full communion partners may join the ordaining bishop in laying hands on the head of the candidate, while participating elders and laity may lay hands on the back or shoulders of the candidate.

¶ 329.1-3=333.1-3

¶ 330. Ministry, Authority, and Responsibilities of an Elder in Full Connection—An elder in full connection is authorized to give spiritual and temporal servant leadership in the Church in the following manner:

1. Elders in full connection shall have the right to vote on all matters in the annual conference except in the election of lay delegates to the General and jurisdictional or central conferences and shall share with deacons in full connection responsibility for all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy. This responsibility shall not be limited by the recommendation or lack of recommendation by the Board of Ordained Ministry, notwithstanding provisions which grant to the Board of Ordained Ministry the right of recommendation. They shall be eligible to hold office in the annual conference and to be elected delegates to the General and jurisdictional or central conferences under the provision of the Constitution (¶ 35). Every effective elder in full connection who is in good standing shall be continued under appointment by the bishop.

2. There are professional responsibilities (¶ 336) that elders are expected to fulfill and that represent a fundamental part of their accountability and a primary basis of their continued eligibility for annual appointment. Each central conference shall establish the evaluation process for fulfilling these professional responsibilities.

3. When an elder's effectiveness is in question, the bishop shall complete the procedures in place. Each central conference may establish its provisions.

4. If an elder fails to demonstrate vocational competence or effectiveness (¶ 336) as defined by the annual conference through the Board of Ordained Ministry and cabinet, then the bishop may begin the administrative location process as outlined in ¶ 355.

5. Clergy who are retired, on medical leave, or on sabbatical leave may at their own initiative apply to the Board of Ordained Ministry for affiliate membership in the annual conference where they reside. By a two-thirds vote of the clergy session of the annual conference, such clergy may be received with rights and privileges, including service on conference boards, agencies, task forces, and committees, with voice but without vote. Voting membership shall be retained in the clergy member's home annual conference for the duration of affiliate member relationship. Such persons may serve on the board, agency, task force or committee of only one annual conference at any one time.

¶ 330.1-5=334.1-5

¶ 331. Requirements for Admission to Full Connection and Ordination as Elder—Provisional members who are candidates for full connection and ordination as elders and have been provisional members for at least two years may be admitted into membership in full connection in an annual conference and approved for elder's ordination by two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference, upon recommendation by two-thirds vote of the Board of Ordained Ministry, after they have met the educational requirements. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, an annual conference may equate less than full-time to the requirement of full-time service.

As part of the requirements, they have responded to a doctrinal examination administered by the Board of Ordained Ministry. The candidate should demonstrate the ability to communicate clearly in both oral and written form. The candidate's reflections should be informed by the insights and guidelines of Part III of the Discipline. The following questions are guidelines for the preparation of the examination:

a) Theology.

(1) Give examples of how the practice of ministry has affected your experience and understanding of:

(a) God

(b) Humanity

(c) The need for divine grace

(d) The Lordship of Jesus Christ

- (e) The work of the Holy Spirit
- (f) The meaning and significance of the sacraments
- (g) The kingdom of God
- (h) Resurrection and eternal life

(2) How do you understand the following traditional evangelical doctrines: (a) repentance; (b) justification; (c) regeneration; (d) sanctification? What are the marks of the Christian life?

(3) How has the practice of ministry informed your understanding of the nature and mission of the Church? What are its primary challenges today?

(4) The United Methodist Church holds that Scripture, tradition, experience, and reason are sources and norms for belief and practice, but that the Bible is primary among them. What is your understanding of this theological position of the Church, and how has your practice of ministry been affected by this understanding?

(5) How has the practice of ministry enriched your understanding of the meaning and significance of the sacraments?

b) Vocation

(1) How has the experience of ministry shaped your understanding of your vocation as an ordained elder?

c) The Practice of Ministry

(1) How has the practice of ministry affected your understanding of the expectations and obligations of the itinerant system? Do you offer yourself without reserve to be appointed and to serve as the appointive authority may determine?

(2) Describe and evaluate your personal gifts for ministry and how they have resulted in fruitful ministry. What would be your areas of strength and areas in which you need to be strengthened in order to be more fruitful in ministry?

(3) For the sake of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world and the most effective witness to the Christian gospel and in consideration of your influence as an ordained clergy, are you willing to make a complete dedication of yourself to the highest ideals of the Christian life; and to this end will you agree to exercise responsible self-control by personal habits conducive to physical health, intentional intellectual development, fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness, integrity in all personal relationships, social responsibility, and growth in grace and the knowledge and love of God?

(4) Provide evidence of your willingness to relate yourself in ministry to all persons without regard to race, color, ethnicity, national origin, social status, gender, sexual orientation, age, economic condition, or disability.

(5) Will you regard all pastoral conversations of a confessional nature as a trust between the person concerned and God?

(6) Provide evidence of experience in peace and justice ministries.

¶ 331=335

¶ 332. *Historic Examination for Admission into Full Connection—The bishop as chief pastor shall engage those seeking to be admitted into full connection in serious self-searching and prayer to prepare them for their examination before the conference. At the time of the examination the bishop shall also explain to the conference the historic nature of the following questions and seek to interpret their spirit and intent. The questions are these and any others that may be thought necessary:

1. Have you faith in Christ?
2. Are you going on to perfection?
3. Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?
4. Are you earnestly striving after it?
5. Are you resolved to devote yourself wholly to God and his work?
6. Do you know the General Rules of our Church?
7. Will you keep them?
8. Have you studied the doctrines of The United Methodist Church?
9. After full examination, do you believe that our doctrines are in harmony with the Holy Scriptures?
10. Will you preach and maintain them?
11. Have you studied our form of Church discipline and polity?
12. Do you approve our Church government and polity?
13. Will you support and maintain them?
14. Will you diligently instruct the children in every place?
15. Will you visit from house to house?
16. Will you recommend fasting or abstinence, both by precept and example?
17. Are you determined to employ all your time in the work of God?
18. Are you in debt so as to embarrass you in your work?
19. Will you observe the following directions?
 - a) Be diligent. Never be unemployed. Never be triflingly employed. Never trifle away time; neither spend any more time at any one place than is strictly necessary.
 - b) Be punctual. Do everything exactly at the time. And do not mend our rules, but keep them; not for wrath, but for conscience' sake.

¶ 332=336

Section X. Appointments to Various Ministries

¶ 333. *General Provisions—1. All elders in full connection who are in good standing in an annual conference shall be continued under appointment by the bishop unless they are granted a leave, retirement, or have failed to meet the requirements for continued eligibility (§ 330).

2. In addition to ordained elders, persons who have been granted a license for pastoral ministry may be appointed to local churches as pastors in charge. All clergy members and licensed local pastors to be appointed shall assume a lifestyle consistent with Christian teaching as set forth in the Social Principles.

3. Elders and deacons, associate members, provisional members, and persons licensed for pastoral ministry may be appointed to extension ministries.

¶ 333.1-3=337.1-3

¶ 334. The Itinerant System—The itinerant system is the accepted method of The United Methodist Church by which ordained elders, provisional elders, and associate members are appointed by the bishop to fields of labor. All ordained elders, provisional elders, and associate members shall accept and abide by these appointments. Bishops and cabinets shall commit to and support open itineracy and the protection of the prophetic pulpit and diversity. The nature of the appointment process is specified in § 406.

1. When an ordained elder, provisional elder, or associate member is appointed to full-time service, that person's entire vocational time, as defined by the district superintendent in consultation with the pastor and the committee on pastor-parish relations, is devoted to the work of ministry in the field of labor to which one is appointed by the bishop.

2. At the initiative of the bishop and cabinet, at his or her request, or when he or she has declared in writing that itineracy is limited, an elder, provisional elder, or associate member may be appointed to a less than full-time appointment.

3. Interim appointments may be made to charges that have special transitional needs.

4. Associate members, provisional members, or full members may be appointed to attend any school listed by the University Senate or approved by the central conference.

5. Elders and associate members in appointments extending the ministry of the local United Methodist church are full participants in the itinerant system. Therefore, a conference member in an appointment beyond the local United Methodist church must be willing upon consultation to receive an appointment in a pastoral charge.

¶ 334.1-4=338.1-4; 334.5=344Intro

¶ 335. Definition of a Pastor—A pastor is an ordained elder, provisional deacon (according to 1992 Book of Discipline), or licensed person approved by vote of the clergy members in full connection and may be appointed by the bishop to be in charge of a local church or extension ministry.

¶335=339

¶ 336. Responsibilities and Duties of Elders and Licensed Pastors—1. The responsibilities of elders are derived from the authority given in ordination. Elders have a fourfold ministry of Word, Sacrament, Order, and Service and thus serve in the local church and in extension ministries in witness and service of Christ's love and justice. Elders are authorized to preach and teach the Word, to provide pastoral care and counsel, to administer the sacraments, and to order the life of the church for service in mission and ministry as pastors, superintendents, and bishops.

Licensed pastors share with the elders the responsibilities and duties of a pastor for this fourfold ministry, within the context of their appointment.

2. The responsibilities and duties of elders and licensed pastors are:

a) Word and ecclesial acts:

(1) To preach the Word of God, lead in worship, read and teach the Scriptures, and engage the people in study and witness.

(a) To ensure faithful transmission of the Christian faith.

(b) To lead people in discipleship and evangelistic outreach that others might come to know Christ and to follow him.

(2) To counsel persons with personal, ethical, or spiritual struggles.

(3) To perform the ecclesial acts of marriage and burial.

(a) To perform the marriage ceremony after due counsel with the parties involved and in accordance with the laws of the state and the rules of The United Methodist Church. The decision to perform the ceremony shall be the right and responsibility of the pastor.

(b) To conduct funeral and memorial services and provide care and grief counseling.

(4) To visit in the homes of the church and the community, especially among the sick, aged, imprisoned, and others in need.

(5) To maintain all confidences inviolate, including confessional confidences except in the cases of suspected child abuse or neglect, or in cases where mandatory reporting is required by civil law.

b) Sacrament:

(1) To administer the sacraments of baptism and the Supper of the Lord according to Christ's ordinance.

(a) To prepare the parents and sponsors before baptizing infants or children, and instruct them concerning the significance of baptism and their responsibilities for the Christian training of the baptized child.

(b) To encourage reaffirmation of the baptismal covenant and renewal of baptismal vows at different stages of life.

(c) To encourage people baptized in infancy or early childhood to make their profession of faith, after instruction, so that they might become professing members of the church.

(d) To explain the meaning of the Lord's Supper and to encourage regular participation as a means of grace to grow in faith and holiness.

(e) To select and train deacons and lay members to serve the consecrated communion elements.

(2) To encourage the private and congregational use of the other means of grace.

c) Order:

(1) To be the administrative officer of the local church and to assure that the organizational concerns of the congregation are adequately provided for.

(a) To give pastoral support, guidance, and training to the lay leadership, equipping them to fulfill the ministry to which they are called.

(b) To give oversight to the educational program of the church and encourage the use of United Methodist literature and media.

(c) To be responsible for organizational faithfulness, goal setting, planning and evaluation.

(d) To search out and counsel men and women for the ministry of deacons, elders, local pastors and other church related ministries.

(2) To administer the temporal affairs of the church in their appointment, the annual conference, and the general Church.

(a) To administer the provisions of the Discipline.

(b) To give an account of their pastoral ministries to the charge and annual conference. Central conferences may establish provisions for this.

(c) To provide leadership for the funding ministry of the congregation.

(d) To model and promote faithful financial stewardship and to encourage giving as a spiritual discipline by teaching the biblical principles of giving.

(e) To lead the congregation in the fulfillment of its mission through full and faithful payment of all apportioned ministerial support, administrative, and benevolent funds.

(f) To care for all church records and local church financial obligations, and certify the accuracy of all financial, membership, and any other reports submitted by the local church to the annual conference for use in apportioning costs back to the church.

(3) To participate in denominational and conference programs and training opportunities.

(a) To seek out opportunities for cooperative ministries with other United Methodist pastors and churches.

(b) To be willing to assume supervisory responsibilities within the connection.

(4) To lead the congregation in racial and ethnic inclusiveness.

d) Service:

(1) To embody the teachings of Jesus in servant ministries and servant leadership.

(2) To give diligent pastoral leadership in ordering the life of the congregation for discipleship in the world.

(3) To build the body of Christ as a caring and giving community, extending the ministry of Christ to the world.

(4) To participate in community, ecumenical and interreligious concerns and to encourage the people to become so involved and to pray and labor for the unity of the Christian community.

¶ 336.1-2=340.1-2

¶ 337. *Unauthorized Conduct—1. Pastors shall first obtain the written consent of the district superintendent before engaging for an evangelist any person who is not a general evangelist in the connection, a clergy member of an annual conference, a local pastor, or a certified lay servant in good standing in The United Methodist Church.

2. No pastor shall discontinue services in a local church between sessions of the annual conference without the consent of the charge conference and the district superintendent.

3. No pastor shall arbitrarily organize a pastoral charge.

4. No pastor shall hold a religious service within the bounds of a pastoral charge other than the one to which appointed without the consent of the pastor of the charge, or the district superintendent.

5. All clergy of The United Methodist Church are charged to maintain all confidences inviolate, including confessional confidences, except in the cases of suspected child abuse or neglect or in cases where mandatory reporting is required by civil law.

6. Ceremonies that celebrate homosexual unions shall not be conducted by our ministers and shall not be conducted in our churches.

7. No pastor shall re-baptize. The practice of re-baptism does not conform with God's action in baptism and is not consistent with Wesleyan tradition and the historic teaching of the church. Therefore, the pastor should counsel any person seeking re-baptism to participate in a rite of re-affirmation of baptismal vows.

¶ 337.1-7=341.1-7

¶ 338. Support for Elders in Full Connection Appointed to Pastoral Charges—To strengthen the effectiveness of the connectional system, assumption of the obligations of the itinerant ministry required upon admission to the traveling connection places upon the Church a counter obligation to provide adequate support for the entire ministry of the Church.

Each elder in full connection of an annual conference who is in good standing and who is appointed to full-time service shall have a right to receive not less than base compensation established by the annual conference for persons in full-time service, and if appointed to less than full-time service shall receive such part of base compensation as regulated by the annual conference.

No pastor shall be entitled to any claim for unpaid base compensation against any church or charge served after pastoral connection with the church or charge has ceased.

¶ 338=342.1-4

Section XI. Appointments to Extension Ministries

¶ 339. Appointments Extending the Ministry of The United Methodist Church—1. Elders in effective relationship, deacons, associate members, provisional members, and persons licensed for pastoral ministry may be appointed to serve in ministry settings beyond the local United Methodist church.

2. Clergy desiring such appointment shall consult with their bishop and/or district superintendent prior to any interviews relative to such an appointment.

¶ 339.1-2=343.1+3

¶ 340. Provisions for Appointment to Extension Ministries—1. Categories of Appointments:

a) Appointments within the connectional structures of United Methodism, including service under the General Board of Global Ministries.

b) beyond the connectional structures of The United Methodist Church when considered by the bishop and recognized by the Board of Ordained Ministry, including ecumenical ministries and appointments to pastoral ministry in other Christian denominations at the request of appropriate judicatory officers of that denomination.

2. Consultation among the institution, the elder, and the bishop shall occur as a part of the appointment process.

3. Clergy appointed to extension ministries shall:

a) be appointed to a setting that provides an appropriate support, evaluation and accountability structure;

b) continue to be accountable to the annual conference for the practice of their ministry;

c) provide individually an annual report to the bishop, the district superintendent and the Board of Ordained Ministry and meet annually, individually or collectively, with representatives of the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry;

d) establish membership in a charge conference in consultation with the pastor in charge and with approval of the district superintendent. District superintendents, because of their ministry of superintendency are not required to have a charge conference affiliation.

4. Affiliate Relation to Annual Conference—Ordained clergy appointed to extension ministries or appointments beyond the local church outside the boundary of their annual conference may at their own initiative apply to the Board of Ordained Ministry for affiliate membership in the annual conference in which their appointment is located or in which they reside. By a two-thirds vote of the clergy session, such clergy may be received with rights and privileges, including service on conference boards, agencies, task forces, and committees, with voice and vote but with voice and without vote in the annual conference session. Full membership shall be retained in the appointee's home annual conference, including attendance at home annual conference sessions. Such persons may serve on the board, agency, task force, or committee of only one annual conference at any one time.

¶ 340.1a+b=344.1a+b+345; 340.2=343.2; 340.3(1)=344.5a; 340.3(2)=344.2a; 340.3(3)=344.2ab+337.3c; 340.3(4)=344.3; 340.4=344.4

Section XII. Clergy from Other Annual Conferences, Other Methodist and Christian Denominations

¶ 341. Provisions for Clergy from Outside the Annual Conference—Ordained clergy or provisional members from other annual conferences and Christian denominations may receive an appointment in the annual conference in the following manner:

1. Ordained Clergy or Provisional Members from Other Annual Conferences and Other Methodist Denominations—With approval and consent of the bishops or other judicatory authorities involved, ordained clergy or provisional members from other annual conferences or other Methodist churches may receive appointments while retaining their home conference membership or denominational affiliation. Following the requirements of ¶ 340.4 they may be granted affiliate membership with the annual conference.

2. Elders or Ordained Clergy from Other Denominations—On recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the clergy session of the annual conference may approve annually clergy in good standing from other Christian denominations to receive appointments within the bounds of the annual conference while retaining their denominational affiliation, provided they meet all requirements for certified candidates, except church membership, present suitable credentials, have given evidence of their agreement with and willingness to support and maintain United Methodist doctrine, discipline, and polity, and have been recommended by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

When the Board of Ordained Ministry certifies that their credentials are at least equal to those of United Methodist elders, the clergy session of the annual conference may grant them the same rights in the annual conference as provisional members. While under appointment, they are subject to the provisions of the Discipline, but are not part of the itinerant system.

¶ 341.1-2=346.1-2

¶ 342. Transfers—1. From Other Annual Conferences—Ordained clergy or provisional members from other annual conferences of The United Methodist Church may be received by transfer into provisional or full membership with the consent of the bishops involved. Consultation with the Board of Ordained Ministry shall be held prior to the transfer.

Transfers are conditioned on the passing of their character by the conference to which they are amenable. Members on transfer shall not vote twice on the same constitutional amendment, nor be counted twice, nor vote twice for delegates to the same General, jurisdictional, or central conference. Whenever clergy members are transferred to another annual conference, either in connection with a transfer of the pastoral charge to which they are appointed or by reason of the dissolution or merger of the annual conference, they shall have the same rights and obligations as the other members of the conference to which they are transferred.

2. From Other Methodist Denominations—Ordained elders or ordained clergy from other Methodist churches may be received by transfer into provisional or full conference membership or as local pastors, with the consent of the bishops or other authorities involved, without going through the process required for ministers from other denominations. Prior consultation with the Board of Ordained Ministry shall be held in order to determine that the clergy meets the educational requirements and standards for conference membership established by the Discipline and the annual conference.

3. From Other Denominations—a) On recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the clergy members in full connection may recognize the orders of ordained clergy from other denominations and receive them as provisional members or local pastors. They shall present their credentials for examination by the bishop and Board of Ordained Ministry. They shall give assurance of their Christian faith and experience, and their willingness to support and maintain United Methodist doctrine, discipline, and polity. They shall meet the educational requirements and standards for conference membership.

b) Ordained elders or ordained clergy from other Christian denominations shall serve as provisional members for at least two years and complete all the requirements, including courses in United Methodist history, doctrine, and polity, before being admitted into full conference membership.

c) Following the provisional member's election to full conference membership as a deacon or elder, the bishop and secretary of the conference shall provide a certificate of full membership in the annual conference.

4. The Board of Ordained Ministry of an annual conference is required to ascertain from an ordained clergy person seeking admission into its membership on credentials from another denomination whether or not membership in the effective relation was previously held in an annual conference of The United Methodist Church or one of its legal predecessors, and if so, when and under what circumstances the ordained clergy's connection with such annual conference was severed.

5. Ordained clergy seeking admission into an annual conference on credentials from another denomination who have previously withdrawn from membership in the effective relation in an annual conference of The United Methodist Church or one of its legal predecessors shall not be admitted or readmitted without the consent of the annual conference from which they withdrew or its legal successor, such consent to be granted upon recommendation of its Board of Ordained Ministry.

¶ 342.1=347.1+604.7; 342.2=347.2a;
342.3-5=347.3-5

¶ 343. Recognition of Orders of Clergy from Other Denominations—1. Clergy from other denominations may have their orders recognized by the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference after examination of their credentials by the bishop and Board of Ordained Ministry. Prior to admission to membership in the annual conference, such recognition of orders may be given upon recommendation of the bishop and Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. When the orders of an ordained clergy of another church shall have been duly recognized, the certificates of ordination by said church shall be returned to the clergy with the following inscription written plainly on the back:

These orders are recognized by the _____ Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church, this _____ day of _____, _____ [year].
_____, President
_____, Secretary

¶ 343.1-2=348.1-2

Section XIII. Mentoring and Mentors

¶ 344. Mentors—1. Mentoring occurs within a relationship where the mentor takes responsibility for creating a safe place for reflection and growth. An effective mentor has a mature faith, models effective ministry, and possesses the necessary skill to help individuals discern their call in ministry. Mentoring is a part of the preparation and growth for inquirers and candidates for ordained ministry, local pastors and provisional members of an annual conference. Mentoring is distinct from the evaluative and supervisory process that is a part of preparation for ministry.

2. Mentors shall be recommended by the cabinet, selected, trained and held accountable by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Each central conference shall establish a mentoring program for candidates and provisional members and local pastors who have not completed educational requirements.

¶ 344.1+2=349.2+1Intro

Section XIV. Evaluation for Continuing Formation for Full Members and Local Pastors

¶ 345. Evaluation—Evaluation is a continuous process for formation in servant ministry and servant leadership that must take place in a spirit of understanding and acceptance. Evaluation serves as a process for pastors to assess their effectiveness in ministry and to discern God's call to continue in ordained ministry.

1. The district superintendent, in consultation with the pastor-parish relations committee, will evaluate the pastor's effectiveness for ministry, using criteria, processes, and training developed by the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. Clergy serving in appointments to extension ministries will undergo annual evaluation by their immediate supervisors.

¶ 345=350

¶ 346. Continuing Education and Spiritual Growth—

1. Throughout their careers, clergy shall engage in continuing education for ministry, professional development, and spiritual formation and growth in order to lead the church in fulfilling the mission of making disciples for Jesus Christ.

2. A clergy member's continuing education and spiritual growth program should include at least one week each year and at least one month during one year of every quadrennium. Such continuing education shall not be considered as part of the ministers' vacations and shall be planned in consultation with their charges or other agencies to which they are appointed as well as the bishop, district superintendent, and annual conference continuing education committee.

3. A clergy member may request a formational and spiritual growth leave of up to six months while continuing to hold an appointment in the local church. Such leaves are available to clergy members who have held full-time appointments for at least six years. Such a leave shall be according to the provisions of the annual conference.

4. Clergy shall report to the charge conference on their programs of continuing education, formation, and spiritual growth for the past year and plans for the year to come.

5. Clergy in extension ministries shall give evidence of their continuing formation and spiritual growth program and future plans in their annual reports.

¶ 346.1-5=351.1-3+5-6

¶ 347. Sabbatical Leave—A sabbatical leave should be allowed for a program of study or travel approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry. Clergy members in full connection, or in associate membership, who have been serving in a full-time appointment for six consecutive years or in a less than full-time appointment equivalent to six consecutive full-time years, from the time of their reception into full or associate membership, may be granted a sabbatical leave for up to one year. The appointment to sabbatical leave is to be made by the bishop holding the conference, upon the vote of the annual conference after recommendation by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

¶ 347=352

Section XV. Changes of Conference Relationship

¶ 348. Provisions for Change in Conference Relationship—When a change in conference relationship is deemed necessary or desirable by a provisional member, clergy in full connection, or in associate membership, whether for a short or long term, the person requesting the change shall make written request to the Board of Ordained Ministry stating the reasons for the requested change of relationship. In addition, the Board of Ordained Ministry may request an interview with the clergy requesting a change. Clergy appointed to a general agency of The United Methodist Church shall be covered by the policies of the agency in relation to family leave, maternity or paternity leave, and medical leave.

¶ 348=353

¶ 349. Voluntary Leave of Absence—

1. Provisional or members in full connection, or in associate membership, of the annual conference who for sufficient reason choose to temporarily take leave from their ministerial appointment may request in writing with a copy to the bishop and their district superintendent a voluntary leave through the Board of Ordained Ministry. The leave is granted or renewed annually by vote of the clergy members in full connection upon recommendation by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. A voluntary leave of absence may be taken for personal or family reasons or as a transitional leave between appointments.

3. A written request for a voluntary leave of absence, with the exception of transitional leave, should be made at least ninety days prior to the annual conference session giving specific reasons for the request. The Board of Ordained Ministry may interview the clergy member to determine sufficient cause. Personal or family leave shall not be granted for more than five years in succession, except by a two-thirds vote of the clergy members in full connection. The leave shall be counted as a part of the eight-year limit for provisional members.

4. Between sessions of the annual conference, voluntary leave of absence may be granted or terminated, with the approval of the bishop and district superintendents, by the Board of Ordained Ministry. This interim action shall be subject to the approval of the clergy session of the annual conference at its next session.

5. Should there be active complaints or charges, a request for voluntary leave of absence shall not be permitted until those complaints or charges have been resolved.

6. Clergy on voluntary leave of absence shall have no claim on the conference funds, unless otherwise regulated by the annual conference.

7. Clergypersons on voluntary leave shall be eligible for membership on annual conference committees, commissions, or boards. They may vote for other clergy delegates to General or jurisdictional conferences and may be elected to serve as delegates themselves.

8. After consultation and with the consent of the pastor in charge, and with the approval of the district superintendent and the staff-parish relations committee of a local church, clergy members on voluntary leave shall designate a charge conference within the bounds of the annual conference to which they shall relate and submit an annual report. The exercise of their ministry shall be limited to the charge conference in which their membership is held and with the written permission of the pastor in charge unless special permission is granted by the bishop of the conference where membership is held. With the permission of the bishop of the conference where membership is held, under the supervision of the district superintendent, the clergy member may preach, teach, perform marriages, and, if holding sacramental privileges, administer the sacraments outside of the charge where membership is held.

9. Those on voluntary leave of absence shall be held amenable to the annual conference for their conduct and the performance of their ministry. In case of failure to report to the Board of Ordained Ministry, the complaint procedures may be invoked (§ 358).

10. An end to voluntary leave of absence, except for transitional leave, shall be requested in writing at least six months prior to the session of annual conference. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall review the circumstances surrounding the granting of the leave for the purpose of determining whether those circumstances have been alleviated or resolved. When the board has determined that the circumstances of the voluntary leave have not been alleviated or resolved and the request is denied, the board will inform the person of the remaining options, which include:

- a) remaining on voluntary leave of absence;
- b) taking honorable location;
- c) being recommended to the bishop and district superintendents to be placed on involuntary leave, administrative location, or involuntary retirement, using the fair process of § 357; or
- d) such other action as deemed appropriate.

11. When clergy members on voluntary leave of absence do not request an annual extension of the leave of absence during the five-year period or do not indicate willingness to receive an appointment at the end of the five-year period, following documented efforts to make contact with the clergyperson, the provisions of location (§ 354) or the complaint procedures of § 358 may be invoked.

§ 349.1-9=354.1-9; 349.10-11=354.11-12

§ 350. Involuntary Leave of Absence—1. The bishop and the district superintendents may request an involuntary leave of absence without the consent of the provisional, associate, or full member. The request shall be referred to the Board of Ordained Ministry, and shall give to the clergy member and the Board of Ordained Ministry in writing specific reasons for the request. The fair process for administrative hearings as set forth in § 357.2 shall be followed in any involuntary leave of absence procedure.

2. Involuntary leave of absence shall be approved by two-thirds vote of the clergy session of the annual conference, renewable annually for a maximum of three years.

3. Between sessions of the annual conference, an involuntary leave of absence may be granted or terminated, with the approval of the bishop and cabinet, and the Board of Ordained Ministry. This interim action shall be subject to the approval of the clergy session of the annual conference at its next session.

4. Clergy on involuntary leave shall have no claim on the annual conference funds. The annual conference assumes no financial responsibility for salary, pension, or other benefits for clergy on involuntary leave of absence.

5. Clergy placed on involuntary leave shall designate a charge conference within the bounds of the annual conference. Ministerial service shall be limited to that charge and shall only be provided with the written consent of the pastor in charge and with the approval of the district superintendent, bishop, and pastor/staff parish relations committee.

6. Clergy on involuntary leave shall not participate in the boards and agencies of the annual conference, be delegates to General and jurisdictional conferences, or vote on other clergy delegates.

7. When an end to the involuntary leave of absence is requested by the bishop and district superintendents, it shall be by written request at least six months prior to the session of annual conference. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall review the circumstances surrounding the granting of the relationship. If the board determines that the conditions of the involuntary leave have not been resolved, it may continue involuntary leave of absence for up to the three-year limit or it shall pursue administrative location.

8. If the district superintendents and bishop do not intend to appoint a person after three years on involuntary leave, they shall notify both the Board of Ordained Ministry and the clergyperson at least six months prior to the session of the annual conference and pursue administrative location or initiate the complaint process, if it has not already been initiated.

¶ 350.1=355.1; 350.2-8=355.3-9

¶ 351. *Maternity or Paternity Leave—Maternity or paternity leave, in compliance with local and national civil laws, will be available and shall be granted by the bishop and the cabinet, and the Board of Ordained Ministry to any local pastor, provisional member, associate member, or clergy member in full connection who so requests it at the birth or arrival of a child into the home for purposes of adoption.

1. Persons desiring maternity or paternity leave should file their request with the committee on pastor-parish relations after consulting with the district superintendent at least ninety days prior to its beginning to allow adequate pastoral care for the churches involved to be developed.

2. During the leave, the clergy member's annual conference relations will remain unchanged, and the health and welfare benefit plans will remain in force.

3. Compensation will be maintained for no less than the first eight weeks of leave.

4. During the leave time, pastoral responsibility for the church or churches involved will be handled through consultation with the committee on pastor-parish relations of the local church(es) and the district superintendent.

¶ 351.1-2=356.1-2; 351.3-4=356.4-5

¶ 352. *Medical Leave Due to Medical and Disabling Conditions that Prevent Performance of Ministerial Duties—1. When clergy who are members of an annual conference (¶ 360) are unable to perform their ministerial duties because of medical and disabling conditions, upon recommendations of the Board of Ordained Ministry and the appropriate board of pensions, and by a majority vote of clergy session of the annual conference who are present and voting, they may be granted annual medical leave without losing their relationship to the annual conference; provided, however, that such leave may be granted or renewed upon reasonable and appropriate investigation of the case by the Board of Ordained Ministry.

2. When clergy who are members of an annual conference are unable to perform their ministerial duties between sessions of the annual conference on account of medical conditions, with the approval of a majority of the district superintendents, after consultation with the Board of Ordained Ministry a medical leave may be granted by the bishop for the remainder of the conference year; provided, however, that such leave may be granted upon reasonable and appropriate investigation of the case.

3. The policies for termination of medical leave shall follow procedures appropriate to the laws where the conference is located.

4. Any person eligible to receive an appointment from a bishop and able to perform ministerial duties may not be placed on involuntary medical leave solely because of a medical condition. All reasonable accommodations should be made to enable qualified clergy with disabilities to serve in ministry settings compatible with their gifts and graces.

¶ 352.1-2=357.1-2; 352.3=357.3+new; 352.4=357.5

¶ 353. *Retirement—Retired clergy members are those who have been placed in the retired relation either at their own request or by action of the clergy session upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry. Requests for retirement shall be stated in writing to the bishop, cabinet, and Board of Ordained Ministry at least one hundred twenty days prior to the date on which retirement is to be effective unless waived by the bishop and cabinet. The Board of Ordained Ministry shall provide guidance and counsel to the retiring member and family as they begin a new relationship in the local church.

1. Mandatory Retirement—Every clergy member of an annual conference who will have attained age seventy-two on or before the end of the month in which the conference session is concluded shall automatically be retired.

2. Voluntary Retirement—With Twenty Years of Service—Any clergy members of the annual conference who have completed twenty years or more of service under appointment as ordained clergy or as local pastors may request the annual conference to place them in the retired relation. Each central conference may establish further provisions for when and how voluntary retirement can take place.

3. Involuntary Retirement—By a two-thirds vote of those present and voting, the clergy members in full connection may place any clergy members in the retired relation with or without their consent and irrespective of their age if such relation is recommended by the Board of Ordained Ministry and the cabinet. The procedures for fair process shall be followed in any involuntary retirement procedure. Written notice of the intended action shall be given to such member by the Board of Ordained Ministry at least 180 days prior to annual conference.

4. Charge Conference Membership—All retired clergy members in full or associate membership who are not appointed as pastors of a charge, after consultation with the pastor and the district superintendent, shall have a seat in the charge conference and all the privileges of membership in the church where they elect to hold such membership except as set forth in the Discipline. They shall report to the charge conference and to the pastor all marriages performed, baptisms administered, and other pastoral functions. If they reside outside the bounds of the annual conference where membership is held, they shall forward annually to the charge conference where membership is held a report of their Christian and ministerial conduct, signed by the district superintendent or the pastor of the affiliate charge conference where they reside.

5. Appointment of Retired Ordained Ministers—All retired clergy members in full or associate membership shall be eligible to receive an appointment when requested by the bishop and cabinet.

6. Return to Effective Relationship—A clergy member in full or associate membership who has retired under the provisions of § 2 may at his or her own request be made an effective member upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the bishop and cabinet, and by majority vote of the clergy members in full connection of the annual conference and thereby be eligible for appointment so long as he or she remains in the effective relation or until § 1 applies. Each clergy member requesting return to effective relationship after voluntary retirement must meet the following conditions: (1) presentation of their certificate of retirement; (2) a satisfactory certificate of good health.

¶ 353Intro+1=358Intro+1; 353.2=358.2a; 353.3=358.3; 353.4-6=358.5-7

¶ 354. Honorable Location—1. An annual conference may grant clergy members in full or associate membership certificates of honorable location at their own request, provided that the Board of Ordained Ministry shall have first examined their character and found them in good standing, and provided that the clergy session shall also pass on their character after the request is made, and provided further, that this relation shall be granted only to one who intends to discontinue service in the itinerant ministry. Upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, an annual conference may offer transition assistance.

2. Associate members or clergy members in full connection located according to the provisions of this paragraph shall not continue to hold membership in the annual conference, and they shall surrender their certification of conference membership for deposit with the conference secretary. After consultation and with the written consent of the pastor in charge, and with the approval of the district superintendent, located clergy members shall designate the local church in which they shall hold membership.

They shall be permitted to exercise ministerial functions only with the written permission of the pastor in charge. They shall have all the privileges of membership in the church where they elect to hold charge conference membership, except as set forth in the Book of Discipline. When approved by the Board of Ordained Ministry, a person on honorable location may be appointed ad interim by the bishop as a local pastor.

They shall report to the charge conference and the pastor all marriages performed, baptisms administered, and funerals conducted and shall be held amenable for their conduct and the continuation of their ordination rights to the annual conference that granted them honorable location. A copy of the annual report to the charge conference shall be forwarded to the Board of Ordained Ministry in order for location to be continued. Failure to submit the report for two consecutive years may result in termination of orders upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry and vote of the clergy session.

3. Ordained ministers on honorable location may request the annual conference to grant them the status of honorable location-retired.

¶ 354.1-3=359.1-3

¶ 355. Administrative Location—1. When the effectiveness of a clergy in associate or full membership is in question, the bishop shall complete the following procedure:

- a) Identify the concerns on failed professional responsibilities or vocational ineffectiveness.
- b) Hold supervisory conversations with the clergy-person that identifies the concerns and designs collaboratively with the clergy-person a corrective plan of action.
- c) Evaluate whether the plan of action has produced fruit that gives a realistic expectation of future effectiveness.

2. If the process defined above (§1) has been completed and has failed to produce sufficient improvement, the bishop and the district superintendents may request that an associate or full member be placed on administrative location without the consent of the clergy member. They shall provide to the clergy member and the Board of Ordained Ministry, in writing, specific reasons for the request. The conference relations committee of the Board of Ordained Ministry shall conduct a fair process hearing as set forth in ¶ 357.2 in any administrative location procedure. The committee shall report the result of the hearing to the full Board of Ordained Ministry for its action. Any recommendation to administrative location shall be presented from the Board of Ordained Ministry at the next following meeting of the clergy session for final action.

Between sessions of the annual conference, an associate or full member may be placed on administrative location by the Board of Ordained Ministry. This interim action shall be subject to the approval of the clergy session of the annual conference at its next session.

3. Administratively located clergy shall not continue to hold membership in the annual conference, and they shall surrender their certification of conference membership for deposit with the conference secretary. After consultation and with the written consent of the pastor in charge, and with the approval of the district superintendent and the staff-parish relations committee of a local church, clergy placed on administrative location shall designate a charge conference within the bounds of the annual conference that placed them on administrative location. Ministerial service shall be limited to that charge and shall be provided only with the written consent of the pastor in charge and the district superintendent. An annual report shall be made to the charge conference that includes all marriages performed, baptisms administered, and funerals conducted. They shall be held amenable by the annual conference within which the charge conference membership is held for their conduct and the continuation of their ordination rights. Failure to submit the report to the Board of Ordained Ministry for two consecutive years may result in termination of orders upon recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry and vote of the clergy session.

4. Ordained ministers on administrative location may request the annual conference to grant them the status of administrative location-retired.

¶ 355.1-4=360.1-4

¶ 356. Withdrawal—1. Withdrawal to Unite with Another Denomination—When ordained members in good standing withdraw to unite with another denomination or to terminate their membership in the denomination, their certification of conference membership, and their written request to withdraw shall be deposited with the conference secretary.

2. Withdrawal from the Ordained Ministerial Office—Ordained members of an annual conference in good standing who desire to leave their ministerial office and withdraw from the conference may be allowed to do so by the annual conference at its session. The ordained clergy's certifications of ordination and conference membership, and their written request to withdraw, shall be given to the district superintendent for deposit with the secretary of the conference, and his or her membership may be transferred to a church which he or she designates, after consultation with the pastor, as the local church in which he or she will hold membership.

3. Withdrawal Under Complaints or Charges—When clergy members are named as respondents to a complaint under ¶ 358.1 and desire to withdraw from the membership of the annual conference, it may permit them to withdraw under the provisions of ¶ 2719. The clergy member's certifications of ordination and conference membership shall be surrendered to the district superintendent for deposit with the secretary of the conference, and their membership may be transferred to a local church that they designate, after consultation with the pastor.

Withdrawn under complaint or withdrawn under charges shall be written on the face of the credentials.

4. Withdrawal Between Conferences—In the event that withdrawal by surrender of the ministerial office, to unite with another denomination, or under complaints or charges, should occur in the interval between sessions of an annual conference, the clergy member's credentials, under the provisions of §1 and §3, shall be surrendered to the bishop or district superintendent along with a letter of withdrawal from the ordained ministry, for deposit with the secretary of the conference. This action shall be reported by the Board of Ordained Ministry to the annual conference at its next session. The effective date of withdrawal shall be the date of the letter of withdrawal.

¶ 356.1-4=361.1-4

Section XVI. Administrative Fair Process

¶ 357. Involuntary Status Change—1. When there is a request for an involuntary status change, the bishop and cabinet, and Board of Ordained Ministry shall take action in a timely manner.

2. Fair Process—As a part of the holy covenant that exists within the membership and organization of The United Methodist Church, each central conference shall develop a method for the disposition of requests for involuntary status changes, excluding complaints, for the protection of the rights of individuals and for the protection of the Church. These procedures shall be written and applied consistently to all requests for involuntary status change, and shall include but not be limited to the following:

a) In any administrative proceeding the bishop or the bishop's designee and the respondent (the person against whom involuntary action is directed) shall have a right to be heard before any final action is taken.

b) The respondent shall have a right to be accompanied to any hearing by a clergyperson who is a member in full connection of the respondent's annual conference, in accordance with the appropriate Disciplinary provisions. The clergyperson accompanying the respondent shall have the right to voice.

c) In any administrative hearing, under no circumstances shall one party, in the absence of the other party, discuss substantive issues with members of the pending hearing body. Questions of procedure may be raised with the presiding officer of the hearing body.

d) In the event that a clergyperson fails to appear for supervisory interviews, refuses mail, refuses to communicate personally with the bishop or district superintendent, or otherwise fails to respond to supervisory requests or requests from official administrative committees, such actions or inactions shall not be used as an excuse to avoid or delay any Church processes, and such processes may continue without the participation of such individual.

3. Immunity from Prosecution—In order to preserve the integrity of the Church's administrative process and ensure full participation in it at all times, the bishop, cabinet, Board of Ordained Ministry, witnesses, advocates, administrative review committee, clergy in full connection voting in executive session, and all others who participate in the Church's administrative process shall have immunity from prosecution of complaints brought against them related to their role in a particular administrative process, unless they have committed a chargeable offense in conscious and knowing bad faith. The complainant/plaintiff in any proceeding against any such person related to their role in a particular judicial process shall have the burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence, that such person's actions constituted a chargeable offense committed knowingly in bad faith. The immunity set forth in this provision shall extend to civil court proceedings, to the fullest extent permissible by the civil laws.

¶ 357.1=364; 357.2a-d=362.2Intro+a+c+d+f; 357.3=362.3

¶ 358. Complaint Procedures—1. Review—Ordination and membership in an annual conference in The United Methodist Church is a sacred trust. The qualifications and duties of local pastors, associate members, provisional members, and full members are set forth in The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, and we believe they flow from the gospel as taught by Jesus the Christ and proclaimed by his apostles. Whenever a person in any of the above categories, including those on leaves of all types, honorable or administrative location, or retirement, is accused of violating this trust, the membership of his or her ministerial office shall be subject to review.

This review shall have as its primary purpose a just resolution of any violations of this sacred trust, in the hope that God's work of justice, reconciliation and healing may be realized in the body of Christ.

A just resolution is one that focuses on repairing any harm to people and communities, achieving real accountability by making things right in so far as possible and bringing healing to all the parties. In appropriate situations, processes seeking a just resolution may be pursued. Special attention should be given to ensuring that cultural, racial, ethnic and gender contexts are valued throughout the process in terms of their understandings of fairness, justice and restoration.

A complaint is a written and signed statement claiming misconduct as defined in ¶ 2702. When a complaint is received by the bishop, both the person making the complaint and the person against whom the complaint is made will be informed in writing of the process to be followed at that stage. When and if the stage changes, those persons will continue to be informed in writing of the new process in a timely fashion.

2. Supervision—In the course of the ordinary fulfillment of the superintending role, the bishop or district superintendent may receive or initiate complaints about the performance or character of a clergyperson. The person filing the complaint and the clergyperson shall be informed by the district superintendent or bishop of the process for filing the complaint and its purpose.

3. Supervisory Response—The supervisory response of the bishop shall begin upon receipt of a formal complaint. The response is pastoral and administrative and shall be directed toward a just resolution among all parties. It is not part of any judicial process. Each central conference shall develop a method for the disposition of judicial complaints. These procedures shall be written and applied consistently to all judicial complaints. The person against whom the complaint was made may choose another person to accompany him or her with the right to voice; the person making the complaint shall have the right to choose a person to accompany him or her with the right to voice.

The supervisory response shall be carried out by the bishop or the bishop's designee in a timely manner, with attention to communication to all parties regarding the complaint and the process. When the supervisory response is initiated, the bishop shall notify the chairperson of the Board of Ordained Ministry that a complaint has been filed, of the clergy person named, of the general nature of the complaint, and, when concluded, of the disposition of the complaint.

4. Suspension—When deemed appropriate, the bishop, with the recommendation of the Board of Ordained Ministry, may suspend the respondent from all clergy responsibilities, but not from an appointment, for a period not to exceed ninety days. With the agreement of the Board of Ordained Ministry, the bishop may extend the suspension for one additional period of thirty days.

¶ 358.1=363.1Intro; 358.2=363.1a; 358.3=363.1b; 358.4=363.1d

Section XVII. Readmission to Conference Relationship

¶ 359. Each central conference shall establish procedures for readmission to conference relationship for each of the following categories: termination of provisional membership, honorable or administrative location, leaving the ministerial office, termination by action of the annual conference, and involuntary retirement. All readmission procedures shall require readmission in the conference in which clergy membership was previously held or, in the case of readmission for transfer to a new conference, consultation with the bishops and Boards of Ordained Ministry for each conference involved in the readmission procedure.

¶ 359=365

Section XVIII. General Provisions

¶ 360. 1. The annual conference is the basic body of The United Methodist Church. The clergy membership of an annual conference shall consist of deacons and elders in full connection (¶¶ 325, 329), provisional members (¶ 323), associate members (¶ 317), affiliate members (¶ 340.4), and local pastors under full-time and part-time appointment to a pastoral charge (¶ 313). All clergy are amenable to the annual conference in the performance of their duties in the positions to which they are appointed.

2. Both men and women are included in all provisions of the Discipline that refer to the ordained ministry.

3. Persons appointed to multiple-staff ministries, either in a single parish or in a cluster or larger parish, and under any clergy status, shall have personal and professional access to the bishop and cabinet, the committee on pastor-parish relations, as well as to the pastor in charge.

4. All clergy members mentioned in §1 shall receive written communication about decisions made regarding their relationship with the annual conference.

5. There shall be an annual meeting of this covenant body, called "clergy session," in executive session of all clergy members of the annual conference, with voting rights as specified by the Discipline, at the site of the regular session of the annual conference, or at an alternative time and location determined by the bishop after consultation with the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry, to consider questions relating to matters of ordination, character, and conference relations.

6. A special session of the annual conference may be held at such time and at such place as the bishop shall determine, after consultation with the cabinet and the Board of Ordained Ministry. A special clergy session shall have only such powers as stated in the call.

¶ 360.1-2, 4-6=370.1-2, 4-6; 360.3=New

Chapter Three

The Superintendency

Section I. The Nature of Superintendency

¶ 401. Nature—From apostolic times, persons have been entrusted with particular tasks of oversight within the body of Christ. In The United Methodist Church, this oversight, or superintendency, resides in the office of bishop for the purpose of equipping the Church in its disciple-making ministry. Bishops possess distinct and collegial responsibilities, working together to order the life of the Church, enable the gathered Church to worship and evangelize faithfully, and to facilitate the initiation of structures and strategies to equip Christian people for service in the Church and in the world in the name of Jesus Christ and to help extend the service in mission.

The office of bishop is a particular ministry, not a separate order. Bishops are elected from the group of elders in full connection who are ordained to the ministry of Service, Word, Sacrament, and Order. They participate in the servant ministry of Christ shared by all of his followers, and join with their fellow ordained clergy in continuing a royal priesthood that has apostolic roots (1 Peter 2:9; John 21:15-17; Acts 20:28; 1 Peter 5:2-3; 1 Timothy 3:1-7).

¶ 401=401+402

Section II. The Council of Bishops and the Role of a Bishop

¶ 402. The Council of Bishops—1. By virtue of their election and consecration, bishops are members of the Council of Bishops and are bound in special covenant with all other bishops. In keeping with this covenant, bishops fulfill their servant leadership and express their mutual accountability. The Council of Bishops is a faith community of mutual trust and concern responsible for the faith development and continuing well-being of its members.

2. The Council of Bishops is thus the collegial expression of episcopal leadership in the Church and through the Church into the world. The Church expects the Council of Bishops to speak to the Church and from the Church to the world and to give leadership in the quest for Christian unity and interreligious relationships.

3. In order to exercise meaningful leadership, the Council of Bishops is to meet at stated intervals. The Council of Bishops is charged with the oversight of the spiritual and temporal affairs of the whole Church, to be executed in regularized consultation and cooperation with other councils and service agencies of the Church.

4. The Council of Bishops may assign one of its members to visit another episcopal area or Methodist-related church. When so assigned, the bishop shall be recognized as the accredited representative of the Council of Bishops, and when requested by the resident bishop or president in that area or Church, may exercise therein the functions of episcopacy.

¶ 402.1-4=422.1-4

¶ 403. Role of a Bishop—Bishops undertake a ministry of servant leadership, general oversight and supervision. They are authorized to guard the faith, order, liturgy, doctrine, and discipline of the Church. Additionally, the role of bishop includes the following:

1. To faithfully practice, model and lead the spiritual disciplines of our faith and to call and inspire the clergy and laity within the Church to practice the Christian disciplines in their individual lives through the Wesleyan tradition of personal holiness. The bishop is to lead in public worship, in the celebration of the sacraments and in the commendation of our faith.

2. To continue to learn and to teach how to make disciples and lead faithful and fruitful congregations using scripture, spiritual disciplines, our Wesleyan heritage, and the history and doctrines of the Church.

3. To work in partnership with the Council of Bishops, the cabinet and lay and clergy leadership of the annual conference, and the professing members of the church, to urge the whole church to move toward the vision of sharing Christ with the world in fulfillment of our mission, faithful discipleship and “an even better way” of being Christ’s people in the world.

4. To be a prophetic voice for justice in a suffering and conflicted world through the Wesleyan tradition of social holiness, encouraging and modeling the mission of witness and service in the world through proclamation of the gospel and alleviation of human suffering.

5. To have a passion for the unity of the church in being the shepherd of the whole flock and thereby providing leadership toward the goal of understanding, reconciliation and unity within the Church—The United Methodist Church and the church universal.

6. To uphold the discipline and order of the Church by consecrating, ordaining, commissioning, supervising and appointing persons in ministry to the Church and the world. As the presiding officer of the annual conference, the resident bishop provides order and leads in new opportunities for ministry within the annual conference. The bishop shares with other bishops the oversight of the whole church through the Council of Bishops and is held accountable through the Council of Bishops in collaboration with committees on episcopacy.

¶ 403Intro=403.1; 403.1-6=403.1a-1f

Section III. The Responsibilities of a Bishop

¶ 404. Leadership Responsibilities—1. To lead and oversee the spiritual and temporal affairs of The United Methodist Church in a manner that acknowledges the ways and the insights of the world critically and with understanding, while remaining cognizant of and faithful to the mandate of the Church.

2. To guard, transmit, teach, and proclaim, corporately and individually, the apostolic faith as it is expressed in Scripture and tradition, and, as they are led and endowed by the Spirit, to interpret that faith evangelically and prophetically.

3. To teach and uphold the theological traditions of The United Methodist Church.

4. To travel through the connection at large as the Council of Bishops to implement strategy for the concerns of the Church.

5. To promote and support the evangelistic witness of the whole Church.

6. To provide liaison and leadership in the quest for Christian unity in ministry, mission, and structure and in the search for strengthened relationships with other living faith communities.

7. To strengthen the local church, giving spiritual leadership to both laity and clergy; and to build relationships with people of local congregations of the area.

8. To convene the Order of Deacons and the Order of Elders and work with the elected chairperson of each order.

9. To promote, support, and model generous Christian giving, with special attention to teaching the biblical principles of giving.

10. To discharge such other duties as the Book of Discipline may direct.

¶ 404.1=414.1; 404.2=414.3; 404.3=414.5; 404.4=414.4; 404.5=414.8; 404.6=414.6; 404.7=414.2; 404.8=414.10; 404.9=414.11; 404.10=414.9

¶ 405. Presidential Responsibilities—1. To preside in the General, jurisdictional, central, and annual conferences.

2. To provide general oversight for the fiscal and program operations of the annual conference(s). This may include special inquiry into the work of agencies to ensure that the annual conference and general Church policies and procedures are followed.

3. To ensure fair process for clergy and laity as set forth in ¶ 2701 in all involuntary administrative and judicial proceedings through monitoring the performance of annual conference officials, boards, and committees charged with implementing such procedures.

4. To form the districts after consultation with the district superintendents and after the number of the same has been determined by vote of the annual conference.

5. To consecrate bishops, to ordain elders and deacons, to consecrate diaconal ministers, to commission deaconesses, home missionaries and missionaries, and to see that the names of the persons commissioned and consecrated are entered in the journals of the conference and that proper credentials are furnished to these persons. As these services are acts of the whole Church, the official text and rubrics shall be used.

¶ 405.1-4=415.1-4; 405.5=415.6

¶ 406. Appointment-making Responsibilities—1. Through appointment-making, the connectional nature of the United Methodist system is made visible. The bishop is empowered to make and fix all appointments of clergy in the episcopal area.

The United Methodist Church promotes and holds in high esteem the opportunity of an inclusive church (¶ 4) with the formation of open itineracy. Open itineracy means appointments are made without regard to race, ethnic or tribal origin, gender, being differently abled, marital status, or age, except for the provisions of mandatory retirement.

Appointments are to be made with consideration of the gifts and evidence of God's grace of those appointed, to the needs, characteristics, and opportunities of congregations and institutions, and with faithfulness to the commitment to an open itineracy.

2. Cross-racial and cross-cultural appointments are appointments to a congregation in which the majority of its constituency is different from the clergyperson's own racial/ethnic and cultural background. They are made as a creative response to increasing racial and ethnic diversity. When such appointments are made, cabinets and boards of ordained ministry shall provide specific training for the clergypersons so appointed and for their congregations.

3. As part of the appointment-making process, the bishop is responsible for:

a) Dividing or uniting a circuit(s), station(s), or mission(s) as judged necessary for missional strategy and then to make appropriate appointments.

b) Appointing the district superintendents annually.

c) Fixing the charge conference membership of all ordained ministers appointed to ministries other than the local church in keeping with ¶ 340.

d) Fixing the appointments of deaconesses, home missionaries, and missionaries.

e) Transferring, upon the request of the receiving bishop, clergy member(s) of one annual conference to another, provided said member(s) agrees to said transfer.

¶ 406.1=425.1+3; 406.2=425.4; 406.3a=416.2; 406.3b=415.5; 406.3c=416.4; 406.3d=416.3; 406.3e=416.5

Section IV. Election, Assignment, and Termination of Bishops

¶ 407. Provisions for Episcopal Areas—The number of bishops shall be determined by the General Conference on recommendation of the proper committees, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters or jurisdictional conferences, according to provisions in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 407).

¶ 407=404

¶ 408. Election and Consecration of Bishops—Each jurisdictional or central conference in cooperation with the Committee on Episcopacy may fix a procedure for the election of their bishops according to their own context. Central conferences may fix the tenure and term of office.

¶ 408=405

¶ 409. Termination of Office—An elder who is serving as a bishop up to the time of retirement shall have the status of a retired bishop.

1. A retired bishop is a bishop of the Church in every respect and continues to function as a member of the Council of Bishops in accordance with the Constitution and other provisions of the Discipline.

2. A retired bishop may be considered a member of an annual conference, without vote, for purposes of appointment to a local charge within the said conference.

¶ 409Intro=408Intro; 409.1=409Intro; 409.2=409.2

¶ 410. Expiration of Terms in Central Conferences—In a central conference where term episcopacy prevails, bishops whose term of office expires prior to the time of their retirement and who are not reelected by the central conference shall be returned to membership as traveling elders in the annual conference (or its successor) of which they ceased to be a member when elected bishop. Outgoing bishops are entitled to participate as a bishop in the consecration of their successor.

The credentials of office as bishop shall be submitted to the secretary of the central conference, who shall make thereon the notation that the bishop has honorably completed the term of service for which elected and has ceased to be a bishop of The United Methodist Church.

¶ 410=411

¶ 411. Complaints Against Bishops—1. Episcopal leadership in The United Methodist Church shares with all other ordained persons the sacred trust of their ordination. Whenever a bishop violates this trust or is unable to fulfill appropriate responsibilities, continuation in the episcopal office shall be subject to review. This review shall have as its primary purpose a just resolution of any violations of this sacred trust, in the hope that God's work of justice, reconciliation, and healing may be realized.

2. Any complaint concerning the effectiveness, competence, or one or more of the offenses listed in ¶ 2702 shall be submitted in a written statement to the president of the College of Bishops in that jurisdictional or central conference. If the complaint concerns the president, it shall be submitted to the secretary of the College of Bishops or, if non-existing, to the chair of the central conference committee on episcopacy. The bishop to whom the complaint has been submitted shall inform the chair of the jurisdictional or central conference committee on episcopacy within ten days.

3. Each central conference shall make provisions for complaint procedures, including suspension, supervisory response, just resolution, administrative complaint, and reporting, as well as a protocol for the caring of the affected episcopal area. Such provisions shall follow, as appropriate, the complaint procedures for ordained clergy (¶ 358) and shall define the role of the central conference committee on episcopacy in complaints against a bishop.

¶ 411.1-2=413.1-2; 411.3=413.3-5

Section V. Cabinet and District Superintendency

¶ 412. The Cabinet—Oversight, or superintendency, resides in the office of bishop and extends to the district superintendency for the purpose of equipping the Church in its disciple-making ministry. Like bishops, district superintendents possess distinct and collegial responsibilities, working together with bishops to order the life of the Church, to enable the gathered Church to worship and evangelize faithfully, and to facilitate the initiation of structures and strategies to equip Christian people for service in the Church and in the world in the name of Jesus Christ and to help extend the service in mission.

Like the office of bishop, the district superintendency is a particular ministry, not a separate order. Bishops appoint superintendents from the group of elders in full connection who are ordained to the ministry of Service, Word, Sacrament, and Order.

Under the leadership of the bishop, the cabinet is the expression of superintending leadership in and through the annual conference. It is expected to speak to the conference and for the conference to the spiritual and temporal issues that exist within the region encompassed by the conference.

As all ordained ministers are first elected into membership of an annual conference and subsequently appointed to pastoral charges, so district superintendents become through their selection members first of a cabinet before they are subsequently assigned by the bishop to service in districts. District superintendents appointed and assigned to districts are also to be given conference-wide responsibilities as members of the cabinet. The cabinet is thus also the body in which the individual district superintendents are held accountable for their work, both for conference and district responsibilities.

In order to exercise meaningful leadership, the cabinet is to meet at stated intervals. The cabinet is charged with the oversight of the spiritual and temporal affairs of a conference, to be executed in regularized consultation and cooperation with other councils and service agencies of the conference. Jurisdictional and central conferences may determine how best to implement the ministry of the cabinet according to their regional contexts.

¶ 412=401+402+424.2+424.1+3+424.4

¶ 413. Selection and Assignment—District superintendents are elders in full connection appointed by the bishop to the cabinet as an extension of the superintending role of the bishop within the annual conference. District superintendents serve under the supervision of the resident bishop and are appointed in consultation with the cabinet.

¶ 413=417

¶ 414. Duties—1. The district superintendent shall oversee the total ministry of the clergy (including clergy in extension ministry and ministry beyond the local church) and of the churches in the communities of the district in their missions of witness and service in the world. This oversight requires the superintendent to use his or her gifts and skills related to spiritual and pastoral leadership, personnel leadership, administration, and program.

2. Superintendents are the chief missional strategists of their respective districts. They shall be committed to living out the values of the Church, including a mandate of inclusiveness, modeling, teaching, and promoting generous Christian giving, cooperating to develop Christian unity, and ecumenical, multicultural, multiracial, and cooperative ministries. Superintendents work with persons across the Church, including clergy in settings beyond the local church, to develop programs of ministry and mission that extend the witness of Christ into and across the world.

3. The task of the district superintendent shall be further defined by their regional contexts.

¶ 414.1=419Intro; 414.2=419.1; 414.3=new

¶ 415. Terms of Service—The term for district superintendents shall be a maximum tenure determined by their central conference.

¶ 415=418+new

Section VI. Ecumenical Relationships

¶ 416. Council of Bishops, Ecumenical Officer, and Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships—1. The Council of Bishops shall be the primary liaison in formal relations with other churches and/or ecclesial bodies.

2. In pursuit of its ecumenical and interreligious responsibilities, the Council of Bishops shall elect an ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops, who shall be responsible for these relationships.

3. The Council of Bishops shall maintain an Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (OCUIR) whose responsibilities and powers shall be assigned by the Council. The purpose of the OCUIR will be to support the Council of Bishops, to deepen and expand the ecumenical and interreligious ministries of The United Methodist Church, and to address the funding and financial needs of ecumenical agencies and the advisability of supporting these organizations. Members of the OCUIR shall be elected by the Council of Bishops.

OCUIR shall be organized according to provisions in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 416).

¶416=437+438Intro

¶ 417. Ecumenical Agreements and Full Communion—1. The Council of Bishops shall have the authority to enter into ecumenical agreements with other Christian bodies. However, all proposed denominational-level agreements of “full communion” relationships need to be approved and ratified by General Conference, before they go into effect.

2. A “full communion” relationship is one that exists between two or more Christian churches that:

a) recognize each other as members of the one, holy, catholic and apostolic church, the body of Christ, as described in the Holy Scriptures and confessed in the church’s historic creeds;

b) recognize the authenticity of each other’s sacraments and welcome one another to partake in the Eucharist;

c) affirm the authenticity of each church’s Christian ministry;

d) recognize the validity of each other’s offices of ministry.

3. A “full communion” relationship commits the churches to working together as partners in mission toward fuller visible unity. The Council of Bishops is charged to implement this relationship.

4. A “full communion” relationship does not mean there are no differences or distinctions between churches; but does mean that these differences are not church dividing.

¶ 417.1=431.1a; 417.2-4=431.1b

¶ 418. *Methodist Unity—1. World Methodist Council—a) The United Methodist Church is a member of the World Methodist Council, its predecessor Methodist and Evangelical United Brethren churches having been charter members of such body. The council is a significant channel for United Methodist relationships with other Methodist churches and with autonomous Methodist churches, affiliated autonomous Methodist churches, affiliated united churches formerly part of The United Methodist Church or its predecessor denominations, and other churches with a Wesleyan heritage.

b) Each affiliated autonomous Methodist church and each affiliated united church that is a member of the World Methodist Council may choose to send delegates either to the General Conference or to the World Methodist Council (receiving from the General Administration Fund the expense of travel and per diem allowances thereto for one of the two events in a quadrennium).

2. Pan-Methodist Commission—Given the relationship and shared history of the denominations of the Wesleyan tradition in the United States, there shall be a Pan-Methodist Commission established jointly among The African Methodist Episcopal Church, The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, The African Union Methodist Protestant Church, The Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, The Union American Methodist Episcopal Church, and The United Methodist Church.

The commission shall work to define, determine, plan, and, in cooperation with established agencies of the several denominations, execute activities to foster meaningful cooperation among the six Methodist denominations, and to explore possible union and related issues.

At least once in a quadrennium, the commission shall plan and convene a Consultation of Methodist Bishops, including from territories outside the United States where more than one church is present.

3. Striving Toward Union—As a result of our heritage as a part of a people called Methodist, The United Methodist Church commits itself to strive toward closer relationship with other Methodist or Wesleyan churches wherever they may be found (¶ 6).

¶ 418.1=433.1; 418.2=433.2Intro+2b; 418.3=433.3

¶ 419. *Relationships with Churches of the Wesleyan

Tradition and United Churches—The United Methodist Church has developed relationships of the following forms with churches of the Wesleyan tradition and with United churches:

1. Autonomous Methodist Church—A self-governing church of the Wesleyan tradition which may or may not have entered into the Act of Covenanting with The United Methodist Church.

2. Affiliated Autonomous Methodist Church—A self-governing Methodist church which The United Methodist Church or one of its predecessor churches has assisted in establishing and which has entered into an Act of Covenanting with The United Methodist Church. Each affiliated autonomous Methodist church shall be entitled to send two delegates, one clergy and one layperson to the General Conference of The United Methodist Church. They shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of delegates, including membership on committees, except the right to vote.

3. Affiliated United Church—A self-governing church which was formed by the uniting of two or more denominations, at least one of which was related to The United Methodist Church or one of its predecessor churches. Each affiliated united church shall be entitled to send two delegates, one clergy and one layperson, to the General Conference of The United Methodist Church. They shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of delegates, including membership on committees, except the right to vote.

4. Covenanting Church—An autonomous Methodist church, an affiliated autonomous Methodist church, an affiliated united church, or another Christian church which has entered into a covenanting relationship with The United Methodist Church through an Act of Covenanting.

5. Methodist Church with Concordat Agreements—A Methodist church that has Methodist heritage in common with The United Methodist Church or one of its predecessor churches and that has entered into concordat agreements with the purpose of manifesting the common Methodist heritage, affirming the equal status of the two churches and expressing mutual acceptance and respect, and creating opportunities for closer fellowship between the two churches, especially on the leadership level. Such concordat churches, with the exception of The Methodist Church of Great Britain (see ¶ 13.3), shall each elect two delegates, one clergy and one lay, to be seated in each other’s General Conference or equivalent bodies with all rights and privileges.

¶ 419Intro=570New; 419.1-5=570.1-5

¶ 420. *Ecumenical Relationships—The United Methodist Church strives toward greater Christian unity through its participation in councils of churches and/or covenantal relationships. Permanent membership in ecumenical organizations shall be approved and ratified by the respective conference, worldwide by General Conference, regional by central conferences, and where within the boundaries of one single annual conference by the respective annual conference.

1. The World Council of Churches—The United Methodist Church is a member of the World Council of Churches, its predecessor Methodist and Evangelical United Brethren churches having been charter members of such body.

2. Other Worldwide Ecumenical Organizations—The Council of Bishops shall lead the church in sending observers or preparing membership in other worldwide ecumenical organizations.

3. The Council of Bishops shall be in dialogue with United Methodists in whatever countries they may reside, and shall coordinate, explore, and advocate United Methodist participation in regional ecumenical and interreligious organizations.

¶ 420Intro=434Intro+434.2b; 420.1=434.3a; 420.2=434.3b+c; 420.3=434.2b

Introductory comment on Chapter Four: Each section (except section II) is structured and numbered as follows:

- 5X1. Purpose
- 5X2. Powers and Duties
(General Conference only “powers”)
- 5X3. Membership
- 5X4. Conference Session
- 5X5. Records & Archives
- 5X6. Conference Agencies
- 5X7. Property

Chapter Four

The Conferences

The United Methodist Church is a connectional structure maintained through its chain of conferences.

Section I. The General Conference

¶ 501. Purpose—The General Conference serves God’s mission for the Church on its worldwide, connectional level. It gathers the delegates, as representatives of the church, for worship, prayer, fellowship, and legislative action in a spirit of Christian conferencing.

¶ 501=new

¶ 502. Powers—The General Conference has full legislative power over all matters distinctively connectional (¶ 16). It has no executive or administrative power.

1. No person, no paper, no organization, has the authority to speak officially for The United Methodist Church, this right having been reserved exclusively to the General Conference under the Constitution. Any written public policy statement issued by a general Church agency shall clearly identify either at the beginning or at the end that the statement represents the position of that general agency and not necessarily the position of The United Methodist Church.

2. Any individual member called to testify before a legislative body to represent The United Methodist Church shall be allowed to do so only by reading, without elaboration, the resolutions and positions adopted by the General Conference of The United Methodist Church.

¶ 502Intro=501; 502.1+2=509.1+2

¶ 503. Membership—1. The voting membership of the General Conference shall consist of:

a) An equal number of clergy and lay delegates elected by the annual conferences as provided in the Discipline. The missionary conferences and provisional annual conferences shall be considered as annual conferences for the purposes of this paragraph. Annual conferences are urged to seek inclusiveness in the election of delegates.

b) Delegates from The Methodist Church in Great Britain and other autonomous Methodist churches with which concordat agreements have been established providing for mutual election and seating of delegates in each other’s highest legislative conferences (¶ 419.5).

2. The number of delegates to which an annual conference is entitled shall be computed on a two-factor basis: the number of clergy members of the annual conference, and the number of members of local churches in the annual conference.

3. Delegates to the General Conference shall be elected at the session of the annual conference held not more than two annual conference sessions before the calendar year preceding the session of the General Conference.

Procedures shall be according to provisions in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 503).

¶ 503.1-3=502.1-3

¶ 504. Conference Session—The Plan of Organization and Rules of Order of the General Conference shall be as approved by the preceding General Conference until they have been modified by the action of the General Conference.

1. Commission on the General Conference—There shall be a Commission on the General Conference, hereinafter called the commission.

a) It shall select the site and set the dates of the General Conference up to four quadrennia in advance.

b) It shall plan the General Conference program, including the opening day, special events, and orders of the day.

c) It shall, in cooperation with The United Methodist Publishing House, make all necessary arrangements for the publication of the Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate.

d) It shall organize a Committee on the Plan of Organization and Rules of Order from within its membership. The committee shall study any proposed amendments to the Plan of Organization and Rules of Order to be presented to the commission for approval and submission to the General Conference.

e) The voting members of the commission shall be elected by the General Conference from the elected delegates to the General Conference for a term of eight years. They shall consist of twenty-five members as follows: one person from each US jurisdiction, one person from each central conference, one young adult, one youth, the chairperson of the host committee, and ten additional members. The additional members shall be allocated to reflect the proportionate membership based upon combined clergy and lay membership of the Church.

2. Presiding Officers—The bishops shall be the presiding officers at the General Conference.

3. Secretary-Designate—The General Conference elects a secretary-designate.

4. Petitions to General Conference—Any organization, clergy member, or lay member of The United Methodist Church may petition the General Conference according to the prescribed format.

5. The General Conference session shall be organized according to provisions in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 504).

¶ 504Intro=505; 504.1Intro=511Intro; 504.1a=511.4a; 504.1b=511.4b; 504.1c=511.4c; 504.1d=511.3b; 504.1e=511.1a; 504.2=503; 504.3=504.1; 504.4=507Intro; 504.5=new ¶ 505. Records and Archives—1. The secretary of the General Conference shall be responsible for the permanent record of the General Conference, according to provisions in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 505).

2. All original documents of a General Conference shall be filed with the General Commission on Archives and History.

¶ 505.1=510Intro; 505.2=510.4

¶ 506. Conference Agencies—Chapter 5 Administrative Order makes provisions for General Conference agencies.

¶ 506=new

¶ 507. Property—Chapter 6 Property makes provisions for Church property in The United Methodist Church.

¶ 507=new

Section II. Jurisdictional Conferences

¶ 508. Within the boundaries of the United States, there may be jurisdictional conferences and interjurisdictional committees according to legislation enacted by General Conference.

¶ 508=new

¶ 509. Missionary Conferences—Within the boundaries of the United States, there may be missionary conferences, according to legislation enacted by General Conference.

¶ 509=new

Section III. Central Conferences

¶ 511. Purpose—1. The purpose of the central conference is to connect regionally annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, and missions, for common mission and ministry, to establish episcopal supervision as an expression of the general superintendency, and to facilitate worldwide connections.

2. General Conference, by a two-thirds vote, may organize annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, and missions into central conferences, subject to the provisions of the Constitution.

Thus, The United Methodist Church shall have central conferences with territorial boundaries as listed in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 511).

3. A provisional central conference may become a central conference upon the fulfillment of the necessary requirements and upon the authorization of the General Conference to elect bishops.

¶ 511.1=new; 511.2=540.1; 511.3=540.4

¶ 512. Powers and Duties—Central conferences are organized with such duties, privileges, and powers as hereinafter set forth by a two-thirds vote of the General Conference.

1. To a central conference shall be committed for supervision and promotion the missionary, educational, evangelistic, industrial, publishing, medical, and other connectional interests within its boundaries. It shall provide suitable organizations for such work and elect the necessary officers for the same.

2. A central conference shall fix the boundaries of the annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, and missions within its bounds, proposals for changes first having been submitted to the annual conferences concerned.

No annual conference shall be organized with fewer than thirty-five clergy members except as provided by an enabling act for the quadrennium, which shall not reduce the number below twenty-five. Nor shall an annual conference be continued with fewer than twenty-five clergy members except as provided by an enabling act for the quadrennium.

3. A central conference may elect bishops from among the ordained elders in full connection of The United Methodist Church, according to the number of bishops determined by the General Conference. It shall have power to fix the tenure of bishops elected by the said central conference.

4. A central conference shall have authority to engage in dialogue with other Christian bodies within its boundaries, to enter into interim ecumenical agreements with them, and to negotiate unions, provided that all proposed ecumenical agreements are submitted to the Council of Bishops for approval and all proposals for church union are submitted to the General Conference for approval before consummation.

5. Upholding the General Book of Discipline, a central conference shall have authority to establish and publish legislation and provisions pertaining to the annual, district, and charge conferences within its boundaries, including educational requirements of clergy and specialized lay ministries. In establishing such legislation and provisions, it is authorized to make such changes and adaptations of the Book of Discipline as the special conditions and the mission of the church in the area require, provided that no action shall be taken that is contrary to the General Book of Discipline. Subject to this restriction, a central conference may delegate to an annual conference within its boundaries the power to make one or the other of the changes and adaptations referred to in this paragraph, upon request of such annual conference.

The central conference is authorized to interpret Article XXIII of the Articles of Religion so as to recognize the governments of the country or countries within its boundaries.

In a central conference using a language other than English, changes in the General Book of Discipline passed by General Conference shall not take effect until twenty-four months after the close of that General Conference in order to afford the necessary time for translation.

6. A central conference is authorized to edit a simplified, revised, and translated Ritual as it may deem necessary.

It is authorized to conform the detailed rules, rites, and ceremonies for the solemnization of marriage to the statute laws of the country or countries within its boundaries.

7. A central conference shall have authority to adopt rules of procedure governing the investigation and trial of its clergy, including bishops, and lay members of the Church and to provide the necessary means and methods of implementing the said rules; provided, however, that the ordained ministers shall not be deprived of the right of trial by a clergy committee, and lay members of the Church of the right of trial by a duly constituted committee of lay members; and provided also, that the rights of appeal shall be adequately safeguarded.

8. A central conference is authorized to establish a judicial court, which in addition to other duties that the central conference may assign to it shall hear and determine the legality of any action, and of any decision of law by the presiding bishop, pertaining to legislation and provisions as mentioned in §5.

¶512Into=540.1;512.1=543.1+6;512.2=543.7;512.3=543.2+3+5; 512.4=543.21; 512.5=543.16+10+15+18+17; 512.6=543.13+14; 512.7=543.12; 512.8=547.3

¶ 513. Membership—1. The voting membership of a central conference shall consist of an equal number of clergy and lay delegates elected by the annual conferences and provisional annual conferences. The clergy members shall be elected by the clergy members of the annual conferences and the lay members by the lay members thereof. Their qualifications and the manner of election shall be determined by the central conference itself, subject only to constitutional requirements.

Each annual conference and provisional annual conference shall be entitled to at least two clergy and two lay delegates, and no other selection of delegates shall be authorized that would provide for more than one clergy delegate for every six clergy members of an annual conference; except that a majority of the number fixed by a central conference as the ratio of representation shall entitle an annual conference to an additional clergy delegate and to an additional lay delegate.

2. Each mission is authorized to elect and send one lay and one clergy to the central conference concerned as its representative, with voice but not vote.

3. No central conference shall be established with less than thirty clergy and thirty lay delegates on the basis of representation as set forth in this section, except as provided by an enabling act for the quadrennium.

4. Delegates to the central conferences shall be elected at the session of the annual conference held not more than two annual conference sessions before the calendar year preceding the session of the General Conference. The secretary of the central conference shall notify the bishop and the secretary of each annual conference of the number of delegates to be elected by that annual conference.

¶ 513.1+2=541.1; 513.3=540.2; 513.4=new;

¶ 514. Conference Session—1. a) Each central conference shall meet within the year succeeding the session of the General Conference at such time and place as the central conference itself or its bishops may determine, with the right to hold such adjourned sessions as it may determine.

b) The bishops of a central conference, with the concurrence of the executive committee, shall have the authority to call an extra session of the central conference to be held at the time and place designated by them.

2. The Council of Bishops may assign one or more of its number to visit a central conference. When so assigned, the bishop shall be an accredited representative of the general Church, and when requested by a majority of the bishops resident in that conference may exercise therein the functions of the episcopacy.

3. The bishop acting as presiding officer of the central conference shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the central conference, and shall decide questions of law, subject to an appeal to the Judicial Council, or the Judicial Court of the central conference.

4. The General Council on Finance and Administration shall determine the apportionment amounts for the annual conferences of the central conferences for the succeeding quadrennium based on calculation methodology approved by the General Conference upon recommendation by the Council. This determination shall be informed by consultation with the Council of Bishops.

5. Each central conference within the bounds of which the General Board of Global Ministries has work shall maintain a cooperative and consultative relationship with the said general board; but the legal distinction between the General Board of Global Ministries and the organized church on the field shall always be kept clear.

¶ 514.1-3=542.2-4; 514.4=543.4; 514.5=542.6

¶ 515. Records and Archives—1. The central conference shall keep an exact record of its proceedings. If there are no archives of the central conference, the secretary shall keep the bound copy or copies to be handed on to the succeeding secretary.

2. Each central conference shall send without charge to the General Commission on Archives and History a copy of its journal, of every translation of the General Book of Discipline, and of its legislation and provisions in use, in printed or electronic format. Other general agencies may request such material as needed at their expense.

3. The secretary of a central conference in which one or more bishops have been elected shall report to the secretary of the General Conference the names of the bishop(s) and the residences to which they have been assigned by the central conference.

¶ 515.1-3=545.1-3

¶ 516. Conference Agencies—1. Each central conference may create agencies, structures or committees with such duties and mandates as the central conference may determine to carry out their mission.

2. Each central conference shall establish a Committee on Episcopacy. The committee shall consist of at least one clergy and one lay delegate to the central conference from each annual conference. The committee shall:

a) review and evaluate annually the work of the bishops, pass on their character and ministry, and report such evaluations and other findings to the central conference for such action as the conference may deem appropriate within its constitutional warrant of power; such review and evaluation may be organized by episcopal areas, in which case the central conference decides on the enlargement of membership of sub-committees in episcopal areas;

b) recommend boundaries of the episcopal areas and the assignments of the bishops;

c) receive and act upon requests for possible voluntary or involuntary retirement of bishops.

3. Each central conference shall establish a board of pensions or make provisions for the creation of boards of pensions on the level of the annual conferences, episcopal areas, or countries within its boundaries. These boards of pensions are responsible for the long-term sustainability of their plans.

¶ 516.1=547new ; 516.2+3=new;

¶ 517. Property—1. A central conference, through a duly incorporated property-holding body or bodies, shall have authority to purchase, own, hold, or transfer property for and on behalf of all the unincorporated organizations of The United Methodist Church within the boundaries of that central conference or on behalf of other organizations of The United Methodist Church that have entrusted their property to that central conference.

2. A central conference shall have authority to make the necessary rules and provisions for the holding and management of such properties; provided, however, that

a) all procedure shall be subject to the laws of the country or countries concerned; and

b) no action shall be taken transferring or alienating property or proceeds of property without due consideration of its trusteeship for local churches, annual conferences, the General Board of Global Ministries, and other organizations, local or general, of the Church.

3. A central conference or any of its incorporated organizations shall not involve a general agency of the Church in any financial obligation without the official approval of said board or organization. All invested funds, fiduciary trusts, or property belonging to an annual conference, a provisional annual conference, or a mission, or any of its institutions, acquired by bequest, donation, or otherwise and designated for a specific use, shall be applied to the purpose for which they were designated. They shall not be diverted to any other purpose, except by the consent of the conference or mission involved and with the approval of the central conference concerned and civil court action when necessary. The same rule shall apply to similar funds or properties acquired by a central conference for specific objects. In cases involving the diversion of trust funds and properties within the boundaries of a central conference, the central conference concerned shall determine the disposition of the interests involved, subject to an appeal to the judicial court of the central conference.

¶ 517.1=546.1; 517.2=546.2+3; 517.3=546.4

Section IV. Provisional Central Conferences

¶ 521. Purpose—Annual conferences, provisional annual conferences, and missions outside the United States that are not included in central conferences and that, because of geographical, language, political, or other considerations, have common interests that can best be served thereby, may be organized into provisional central conferences by a two-thirds vote of the General Conference.

Thus, The United Methodist Church may have provisional central conferences with territorial boundaries as listed in the General Conference Regulations (see GC-R 521).

¶ 521=560

¶ 522. Powers and Duties—The General Conference may grant to a provisional central conference any of the powers of a central conference except that of electing bishops.

¶ 522=562

¶ 523. Episcopal Supervision—The General Conference shall make provision for the episcopal supervision of work in a provisional central conference.

¶ 523=566

¶ 524. Conference Session and Agencies—1. The organization of a provisional central conference shall conform to the provisions prescribed for central conferences insofar as they are considered applicable by the bishop in charge.

2. The first organizational meeting of a new provisional central conference shall take place within the quadrennium after General Conference action.

¶ 524.1=561; 524.2=new

Section V. Annual Conferences

Section V = Section IX

¶ 531. Purpose—The purpose of the annual conference is to make disciples of Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world by equipping its local churches for ministry and by providing a connection for ministry beyond the local church; all to the glory of God.

¶ 531=601

¶ 532. Powers and Duties—1. The annual conference, for its own government, may adopt rules and regulations not in conflict with the Discipline of The United Methodist Church.

2. An annual conference cannot financially obligate any organizational unit of The United Methodist Church except the annual conference itself.

3. The clergy session of the annual conference shall have power to make inquiry into the moral and official conduct of its clergy members. Subject only to the provisions on Judicial Administration, the clergy session of the annual conference shall have power to hear complaints against its clergy members and may try, reprove, suspend, deprive of clergy office and credentials, expel, or acquit any against whom charges may have been preferred. The annual conference shall have power to locate a clergy member for failure to perform effectively and competently the duties of itinerant ministry. The actions of the clergy session shall be for and on behalf of the annual conference.

All clergy members of the annual conference and the lay members of the Board of Ordained Ministry may attend and shall have voice in the clergy session. Only the ordained clergy in full connection and the members of the Board of Ordained Ministry may vote. Others may be admitted by express action of the clergy session, but shall not have vote, nor, unless specifically granted by the clergy session, shall have voice.

4. The annual conference shall have power to make inquiry into the financial status of the local churches, and shall provide counsel to help a local church overcome a deficit position.

5. The annual conference shall have the power to make inquiry into the membership status of the local churches, particularly if no members have been received on confession of faith during the year.

6. The annual conference shall give recognition to any new churches that have been organized during the year.

7. If any annual conference initiates, joins, monitors, or terminates a boycott, the guidelines in the Book of Resolutions should be followed. The General Conference is the only body that can initiate, empower, or join a boycott in the name of The United Methodist Church.

8. The annual conference may choose to adopt a conference-wide plan for compensation of pastors. Such a plan shall provide the method for setting and funding the salaries, and/or other compensation elements as specified in the plan, of the pastors appointed to the charges of the annual conference.

¶ 532.1-2=604.1-2; 532.3=604.4+605.7; 532.4-6=604.8-10; 532.7-8=604.12-13

¶ 533. Membership (See ¶ 32.)—1. The clergy membership of an annual conference shall consist of deacons and elders in full connection, provisional members, associate members, affiliate members, and local pastors under full-time and part-time appointment, each with their respective voting rights. The term clergy members shall refer to both active and retired members of the annual conference.

2. The lay membership of the annual conference shall consist of a professing member elected by each charge, diaconal ministers, deaconesses, home missionaries, the conference president of United Methodist Women, the conference president of United Methodist Men, the conference lay leader, district lay leaders, the president or equivalent officer of the conference young adult organization, the president of the conference youth organization, one youth and one young adult from each district to be selected in such a manner as may be determined by the annual conference according to the age provisions of the central conference or outside central conference boundaries by other legislation enacted by General Conference. If the lay membership should number less than the clergy members of the annual conference, the annual conference shall, by its own formula, provide for the election of additional lay members to equalize lay and clergy membership of the annual conference.

Each charge served by more than one clergy member under appointment (including deacons in full connection for whom this is their primary appointment) shall be entitled to as many lay members as there are clergy members under appointment.

The lay members shall have been members of The United Methodist Church for the two years preceding their election and shall have been active participants in The United Methodist Church for at least four years preceding their election. The four-year participation and the two-year membership requirements may be waived for young persons under thirty years of age. Such persons must be members of The United Methodist Church and active participants at the time of election.

3. The lay member or alternate, whoever was last seated in the annual conference, shall be seated in a special session of the annual conference when convened, provided that no local charge shall be deprived of its lay member.

4. The lay members of the annual conference shall participate in all deliberations and vote upon all measures except on the granting or validation of license, ordination, reception into full conference membership, or any question concerning the character and official conduct of ordained ministers, except those who are lay members of the Board of Ordained Ministry and committee on investigation. Lay members shall serve on all committees except those on ministerial relations.

5. It is the duty of every member to attend the sessions of the annual conference.

6. Officers who are not members of the annual conference and such additional persons as the annual conference may decide shall have voice but not vote.

¶ 533.1=602.1+502.2; 533.2=602.4; 533.3-4=602.5-6; 533.5=602.8; 533.6=602.9+10

¶ 534. Conference Session—1. The bishop shall appoint the times for holding the annual conference.

2. The annual conference or a committee thereof shall select the place for holding the conference session. Each central conference may provide for minimum standards for places and sites in which to hold annual conference sessions.

3. The agenda of the session shall be prepared by the bishop, the district superintendents, the conference lay leader, and such others as the conference may name and shall be submitted to the conference.

4. A special session of the annual conference may be held at such time and in such place as shall have been determined by the annual conference after consultation with the bishop, or by the bishop with the concurrence of three-fourths of the district superintendents. A special session of the annual conference shall have only such powers as are stated in the call.

5. The bishop assigned shall preside over the annual conference or, in case of inability, shall arrange for another bishop to preside. In the absence of a bishop, the conference shall by ballot, without nomination or debate, elect a president pro tempore from among the ordained elders. The president thus elected shall discharge all the duties of a bishop except ordination.

6. At the conclusion of the examination of the standing of the clergy members or at such later times as the bishop may designate, the presiding bishop may call to the bar of the conference the class to be admitted into full connection and receive them into conference membership after asking the questions of the historic examination.

7. The annual conference shall adopt a comprehensive policy for handling sexual and gender harassment of clergy when laypersons are the perpetrators. This policy shall guide the local church in how to handle the report, how to care for the accuser and the accused, the victim and the perpetrator, the findings and settlement. It shall make provision for support of the pastor and for care of church members.

8. The annual conference shall make provision for legal counsel applicable to its legal context.

9. Members for committees, boards, and commissions of the annual conference shall be selected in such manner as the General Book of Discipline may specifically require or as the annual conference may determine. Attention shall be given to inclusiveness.

10. The annual conference at the first session following the General Conference or central conference shall elect a secretary, a conference lay leader, a statistician, and treasurer / director of administrative services to serve for the succeeding quadrennium. In the case of a vacancy in either office, the bishop, after consultation with the district superintendents, shall appoint a person to act until the next session of the annual conference. Quadrennial elections for conference agencies shall take place the same year as the election of officers.

a) The conference lay leader shall be a professing member of a local church in the annual conference, shall be the chairperson of the conference board of laity, or its equivalent structure, and shall participate in annual conference sessions as a partner in ministry with the bishop.

The conference lay leader is the elected leader of conference laity and has responsibility for fostering awareness of the role of the laity both within the congregation and through their ministries in the home, workplace, community, and world in achieving the mission of the Church and enabling and supporting lay participation in the planning and decision-making processes of the annual conference in cooperation with the bishop and district superintendents.

b) The treasurer / director of administrative services is directly amenable to the conference council on finance and administration, and may sit with the council and its committees at all sessions and have the privilege of voice but not vote. The treasurer / director may serve as treasurer for any or all agencies served by a conference central treasury and report of all receipts, disbursements, and balances of all funds under his or her direction. The treasurer / director shall perform such other staff services as the council on finance and administration may require in the fulfillment of its functions and responsibilities.

¶ 534.1=603.2; 534.2=603.3+4; 534.3=605.2; 534.4-5=603.5-6; 534.6-7=605.8+9; 534.8=604.8; 534.9=605.3; 534.10=603.7+619; 534.10a=607.1+603.9a; 534.10b=619Intro+1b+1c(2)+1f

¶ 535. Records and Archives—1. The annual conference shall keep an exact record of its proceedings according to the forms provided by the General, jurisdictional, and central conferences. If there are no archives of the annual conference, the secretary shall keep the bound copy or copies to be handed on to the succeeding secretary.

2. Each annual conference shall send without charge to the General Commission on Archives and History, a copy of its annual journal, in printed or electronic format. Other general agencies may request such material as needed at their expense.

3. The annual conference journal shall include at least the following divisions:

a) Officers of annual conference,

b) Boards, commissions, committees; rolls of conference members,

c) Daily proceedings,

d) Business of the annual conference report (formerly known as the Disciplinary questions),

e) Appointments,

f) Reports as ordered by the annual conference,

g) Clergy record,

h) Roll of deceased clergy members,

i) Memoirs,

j) Statistics,

k) Miscellaneous,

l) Index.

4. The secretary, or other administrative officer named by the annual conference, shall keep a complete service record of ordained and diaconal ministry personnel in the annual conference. Service records shall include but not be limited to biographical information supplied by the individual, a list of appointments, a record of annual conference actions with regard to conference relationships, and in addition descriptions of circumstances related to changes in conference relationships, credentials surrendered to the bishop or district superintendent, and confidential trial records.

5. The local church report to the annual conference shall be submitted as per the requirements of the annual conference.

6. In central conferences, official records of secretaries, statisticians, and treasurers shall be kept according to basic forms prepared by the General Council on Finance and Administration in cooperation with the central conferences so that elementary statistical data can be collected from all annual conferences. The General Council on Finance and Administration may recommend the use of more developed forms where applicable.

7. All records of candidates and ordained and diaconal ministry personnel maintained by the conference secretary, or other administrative officer named by the annual conference, Board of Ordained Ministry, and board of pensions, are to be kept on behalf of the annual conference in conformity with guidelines provided by the General

Council on Finance and Administration, in consultation with the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry and the General Board of Pension and Health Benefits, and the following principles:

a) The annual conference is the owner of its personnel records and files;

b) Individuals in whose name a record is kept shall have access to the information contained in a record or file, with the exception of surrendered credentials and information for which a right-of-access waiver has been signed;

c) Access to unpublished records by persons other than the bishop, district superintendent, conference secretary, treasurer, or other administrative officer or the Board of Ordained Ministry, through its chair, board of pensions, through its chair, counsel for the Church, and committee on investigation, through its chair, shall require written consent of the person in whose name a record is kept; access to trial records shall be governed by the provisions of the chapter on Judicial Administration.

¶ 535.1-3=606.1-3; 535.4-7=606.6-9

¶ 536. Conference Agencies—The annual conference is responsible for structuring its ministries and administrative procedures in order to accomplish its purpose. In so doing it shall provide for the connectional relationship from the annual conference to the district and the local church, as well as to the central, jurisdictional, and General conferences and their respective agencies.

1. Annual conferences are given flexibility to design conference and district structures in ways that best support the mission of making disciples of Jesus Christ in an increasingly diverse community, except for the mandated entities. In doing so, an annual conference shall provide for such functions of and connections with the agencies of central, jurisdictional, or General conferences as help develop its mission.

Conferences are permitted to create contextually appropriate structures that encourage collaboration and partnerships among all program, administrative, and financial entities. Annual conferences may fund their ministries in ways that reflect conference priorities and structures, as approved by the annual conference in the budgeting process.

It is recommended that each annual conference have a director of connectional ministries or designated person to focus and guide the mission and ministry of The United Methodist Church within the annual conference. The director may be lay or clergy and shall serve as an officer of the annual conference and shall sit with the cabinet when the cabinet considers matters relating to coordination, implementation, or administration of the vision and program of the annual conference. Whether appointed or elected to this position, the director shall be amenable to the bishop, in consultation with the appropriate annual conference personnel body.

2. The mandated entities for each annual conference shall be the Council on Finance and Administration (¶ 538) and the Board of Ordained Ministry (¶ 539).

3. Provisions for membership of mandated entities shall be made by each central conference, or in territories outside central conference boundaries by other legislation enacted by General Conference, provided that:

a) among the members in all mandated entities shall be at least one member of the cabinet as expression of its ministry of general oversight and superintendency;

b) members in the Board of Ordained Ministry shall be nominated by the presiding bishop after consultation with the chairperson of the board, and among its membership shall be the chairpersons of the Orders and of the Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members.

¶ 536Intro=610Intro; 536.1=610.1+608.after§6; 536.2=new; 536.3=635.1a

¶ 537. Property—1. Annual conferences, or sub-units authorized by them, may become several bodies corporate under the law of the countries, states, and territories within whose bounds they are located.

2. The annual conferences, or sub-unit authorized by it, may create boards of trustees, and incorporate property-holding bodies, under the law of the countries, states, and territories within whose bounds they are located, to hold and administer real and personal property, receive and administer church extension and mission funds, and exercise such other powers and duties as may be set forth in its charter or articles of incorporation as authorized by the annual conference, subject to the provisions of Chapter 6 on Church Property.

¶ 537.1=603.1; 537.2=cf. 659.4

¶ 538. Council on Finance and Administration—In each annual conference there shall be a conference council on finance and administration, hereinafter called the council, or other structure to provide for the functions of this ministry and maintain the connectional relationships. The council shall be amenable and report directly to the annual conference.

1. Purpose—The purpose of the council shall be to develop, maintain, and administer a comprehensive and coordinated plan of fiscal and administrative policies, procedures, and management services for the annual conference.

2. Responsibilities—The council shall have authority and responsibility to perform the following functions, to which others may be added by the annual conference:

a) To recommend to the annual conference for its action and determination budgets of anticipated income and proposed expenditures for all funds that provide for annual conference clergy support, annual conference administrative expenses, and annual conference benevolence and program causes.

b) To receive, consider, report, and make recommendations to the annual conference regarding the following, prior to final decision by the annual conference: (1) any proposal to raise capital funds for any purpose; (2) funding considerations related to any proposal that may come before the conference; (3) any requests to conduct a special conference-wide financial appeal.

c) To recommend to the annual conference for its action and decision the methods or formulas by which apportionments to churches, charges, or districts for duly authorized funds shall be determined.

d) To develop policies and practices in the employment and compensation of personnel, in accordance with the Social Principles.

e) To develop policies governing the construction, renovation, and managing of church property.

f) To develop policies governing the investment of conference funds (except for pension funds managed by the applicable board of pensions), in a manner consistent with the preservation of capital, the Policies Relative to Socially Responsible Investments, and the Social Principles of the Church.

g) To develop policies governing the auditing of the financial records of the conference, its agencies and entities within its boundaries.

¶ 538Intro=611+612.6; 538.1=612.1; 538.2=613.1-3+13+7+5+617

¶ 539. Board of Ordained Ministry—In each annual conference there shall be a Board of Ordained Ministry. The annual conference, upon recommendation of its Board of Ordained Ministry, may create an executive committee of the board, district committees on ordained ministry, or other appropriate structure, as it serves the need to carry out the work of the Board of Ordained Ministry, and assign and delegate to such structures the appropriate tasks and responsibilities it chooses. The board shall be amenable and report directly to the annual conference.

1. Purpose—The purpose of the Board of Ordained Ministry shall be to develop, oversee, and administer a comprehensive and coordinated approach to all matters related to the ordained ministry. Concerning all matters of ordination, character, and conference relations of clergy it brings recommendations directly to the clergy session of the annual conference.

2. Responsibilities—The Board of Ordained Ministry shall have authority and responsibility to perform the following functions, to which others may be added by the annual conference:

a) To assume the primary responsibility for the enlistment and recruitment of licensed and ordained clergy. It shall, with the assistance of the local church committee on pastor-parish relations and every ordained minister of the conference, enlist women and men of all races and ethnic origins for the ordained ministry and guide those persons in the process of education, training, licensing, and ordination;

b) To examine and make full inquiry as to the fitness of candidates for: (1) annual election as local pastor; (2) election to associate membership; (3) election to provisional membership; and (4) election to full conference membership.

c) To relate to and develop cooperation with theological institutions and programs approved for the training of United Methodist clergy;

d) To evaluate and make recommendations concerning character and effectiveness of clergy, and to equip, train, and elect mentors;

e) To evaluate and make recommendations for all elections to, renewal of, and changes concerning certified candidates and conference relationship of clergy;

f) To keep records of all changes of conference relationship and place a copy in the permanent records of the annual conference, and to ensure confidentiality in relation to the interview and reporting process. There are occasions when the Board of Ordained Ministry would not report privileged information, which in the judgment of the board, if revealed in the clergy session of the annual conference, would be an undue invasion of privacy without adding measurably to the conference's information about the person's qualifications for ordained ministry. However, it is the right of the clergy session of the annual conference to receive all pertinent information, confidential or otherwise, related to the qualifications and/or character of any candidate or clergy member of the conference.

g) To be in consultation with the bishop through the chairperson or the executive committee regarding transfers. This consultation is to be at the bishop's initiative.

h) To provide support services for the ordained clergy, including counseling, continuing education, continuing spiritual growth in Christ, evaluating the effectiveness, and assistance in preparation for retirement.

i) To work with and support the Order of Deacon and the Order of Elder, and the Fellowship of Local Pastors and Associate Members.

¶ 539Intro=635.1+635.1b+reference to draft304.6 (new); 539.1=new; 539.2a=635.2a; 539.2b=635.2h; 539.2c=new, 539.2d=635.2s+f; 539.2e-i=635.2l-p

Section VI. Provisional Annual Conferences

¶ 541. Purpose—A provisional annual conference shares the same purpose with an annual conference, but because of its limited membership, does not qualify for annual conference status. The creation of a provisional annual conference is part of a missional development that should lead to an annual conference within twelve years.

¶ 541=580

¶ 542. Powers and Duties—1. Any mission established under the provisions of the Discipline, and any geographical part of an annual conference may be constituted as a provisional annual conference by the General Conference, upon recommendation by the central conference or provisional central conference, within which it is located, and in consultation with the General Board of Global Ministries and the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, provided that:

a) No provisional annual conference shall be organized with fewer than ten elders in provisional or full connection, or be continued, after completion of the initial quadrennium, with fewer than six elders in full connection.

b) Membership, worship attendance, leadership development, and financial contributions have shown a reasonable progress during the previous quadrennium and give evidence for continued growth toward becoming an annual conference.

2. A provisional annual conference shall be organized in the same manner and have the same powers and functions as an annual conference, subject to the approval of the bishop in charge.

3. If a provisional annual conference, after three quadrennia, does not show progress toward becoming an annual conference, the following session of the central conference shall review said conference, consult with the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters, and recommend to the following General Conference on continuation or discontinuation as a provisional annual conference. The provisional annual conference shall only be continued with sufficient missional, geographical, and contextual reasons.

¶ 542.1+a+b=581Intro+1+3; 542.2=582Intro; 542.3=new ¶ 543. Membership—A provisional annual conference shall be organized with the same provisions for membership as an annual conference.

¶ 543=new

¶ 544. Conference Session—A provisional annual conference shall be organized with the same provisions for a conference session as an annual conference insofar as they are considered applicable by the bishop in charge.

1. The bishop in charge may appoint a superintendent to whom may be committed specific responsibility as liaison to the General Board of Global Ministries.

2. In a provisional annual conference receiving major funding from the General Board of Global Ministries, the assigned staff of the board shall provide consultation and guidance in setting up the annual budget and Advance projects within the conference, aiming to increase self-support.

3. A provisional annual conference shall elect one clergy and one layperson as delegates to the General Conference. Delegates to central conferences shall be elected in accordance with ¶ 513.1.

¶ 544Intro=new; 544.1=582.1; 544.2=582.3; 544.3=582.4

Section VII. District Conferences

Section VII = Section IX

¶ 551. Each central conference shall establish provisions for organizing within annual conferences district conferences, district administrative structures, and district agencies, or delegate such power to the annual conferences within its boundaries.

¶ 551=658+659.1

Section VIII. Missions

¶ 561. Purpose—The purpose of a mission is to provide and develop ministry with a particular group or region whose potential and need cannot be met within the existing structures and resources of annual or district conferences. A mission may also be the initial stage in moving toward the formation of a provisional annual conference.

In accordance with the Wesleyan ecumenical spirit, in all phases of mission development, the initiating United Methodist entities will consult with, and where possible create cooperative relationships with, Wesleyan communions and other denominations serving in the area as well as with appropriate interdenominational, ecumenical and interfaith agencies and organizations.

¶ 561=590+591.2

¶ 562. Powers and Duties—1. A mission is an organizational body for a field of work inside, outside, or across the structures of annual conferences or provisional annual conferences.

2. A mission may be established by the General Board of Global Ministries, or by a central or annual conference in cooperation with the General Board of Global Ministries.

3. The boundaries for a mission established by a central or annual conference(s) in cooperation with the General Board of Global Ministries are determined by the central or annual conference(s) and the General Board of Global Ministries. If a mission is established by the General Board of Global Ministries outside territories of a central or provisional central conference, the General Board of Global Ministries will establish the boundaries.

4. If the mission crosses boundaries of episcopal areas, the College(s) of Bishops shall assign a bishop as presiding officer. If the mission lies entirely outside the boundaries of an established episcopal area, the Council of Bishops shall assign a bishop as presiding officer.

5. The entity or entities establishing a mission, in collaboration with the assigned bishop will seek a cooperative agreement with an annual conference which will serve as the correspondent annual conference to the mission for the purposes of ordination and conference membership as well as for local pastor licensing.

6. The annual meeting of the mission shall have the power to certify candidates for the ordained ministry, to receive and to examine mission pastors and local elders in mission, and to recommend to an annual conference proper persons for provisional or full membership and ordination.

7. The entity or entities establishing a mission shall be responsible for initiating, administering, and developing a mission. Neither the mission nor its officers shall assume financial obligations or make financial commitments on behalf of the General Board of Global Ministries without the board's written authorization.

8. Recommendations for a change of status of a mission shall be made by the entity or entities that established the mission.

¶ 562.1-2=590; 562.3=591.1+4; 562.4=591.4a-c; 562.5=591.4c; 562.6=591.6; 562.7=591.8; 562.8=591.9

¶ 563. Membership—1. A mission shall be made up of all regularly appointed missionaries, both lay and clergy, local elders in mission, mission pastors, and other lay members. The mission shall determine the number of lay members and the method of their selection. In so doing, it shall ensure that all aspects of the mission's work are represented.

2. In territories outside the boundaries of central or annual conferences, the bishop assigned to the mission and the General Board of Global Ministries shall recommend the educational requirements for local elders in mission and mission pastors. Such recommendations and requirements shall be approved by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry.

a) Local elders in mission are ordained members of the mission without being members of an annual conference. Local elders are limited in their itineration and sacramental authority to the bounds of the mission and as such are not eligible to transfer their credentials to an annual conference.

b) Mission pastors are members of the mission without being members of an annual conference. The mission shall determine the requirements for a mission pastor in order to most effectively utilize the indigenous leadership. Mission pastors are limited in their itineration to the bounds of the mission.

¶ 563.1=591.3; 563.2=591.6b+a;

¶ 564. Annual Meeting—1. A mission shall meet annually at the time and place designated by the bishop in charge, who shall preside. In the absence of the bishop, a superintendent of the mission shall preside. The presiding officer shall bring forward the regular business of the meeting and arrange the work.

2. The assigned bishop, in consultation with the entity or entities establishing a mission, may appoint one or more superintendents of the mission.

3. At the annual meeting, the bishop shall assign the missionaries, local elders in mission, and mission pastors to the several charges for the ensuing year; provided that transfer of missionaries related to the General Board of Global Ministries shall be completed only after consultation with the board.

4. A mission related to a central conference is authorized to elect and send one lay and one clergy to the central conference as its representative, with voice but not vote.

¶ 564.1=591.5; 564.2=591.4d; 564.3=591.7; 564.4=new(=draft 513.2)

Section IX. Joining The United Methodist Church

Section IX = new

¶ 571. Joining The United Methodist Church—A church outside the United States may join The United Methodist Church when all of the following requirements are fulfilled:

1. Said church shall accept and approve the Constitution, Articles of Faith, Discipline, and polity of The United Methodist Church.

2. Said church, if it is within the boundaries of a central or provisional central conference, shall apply for membership in that conference. Such application shall be reviewed and recommended by the central or provisional central conference. In the event that said church is not within the boundaries of an existing central or provisional central conference, then its membership application shall be reviewed and recommended by the Council of Bishops.

3. Said church shall declare that, upon consummation of becoming an integral part of The United Methodist Church its former constitution and church order becomes null and void.

4. The Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters shall advise and assist said church in the process of joining The United Methodist Church and prepare the necessary enabling act for approval by the General Conference, including necessary adjustments in the organization of the central or provisional central conferences, determine when all requirements are met, and report to the General Conference for approval.

¶ 571.1-3=575.1-3; 571.4=575.4-6

Chapter Six

Church Property

Section I. All Titles—In Trust

¶ 2501. Requirement of the Trust Clause for All Property—1. All properties of United Methodist local churches and other United Methodist agencies and institutions are held, in trust, for the benefit of the entire denomination, and ownership and usage of church property is subject to the Discipline, and is to be in compliance with applicable local laws. This trust requirement is an essential element of the historic polity of The United Methodist Church or its predecessor denominations or communions and has been a part of the Discipline since 1797. It reflects the connectional structure of the Church by ensuring that the property will be used solely for purposes consonant with the mission of the entire denomination as set forth in the Discipline. The trust requirement is thus a fundamental expression of United Methodism whereby local churches and other agencies and institutions within the denomination are both held accountable to and benefit from their connection with the entire worldwide Church.

In consonance with the legal definition and self-understanding of The United Methodist Church (see ¶ 141), and with particular reference to its lack of capacity to hold title to property, The United Methodist Church is organized as a connectional structure, and titles to all real and personal, tangible and intangible property held at central conference, jurisdictional, annual, or district conference levels, or by a local church or charge, or by an agency or institution of the Church, shall be held in trust for The United Methodist Church and subject to the provisions of its Discipline. Titles are not held by The United Methodist Church (see ¶ 807.1) or by the General Conference of The United Methodist Church, but instead by the incorporated conferences, agencies, or organizations of the denomination, or in the case of unincorporated bodies of the denomination, by boards of trustees established for the purpose of holding and administering real and personal, tangible and intangible property.

2. The trust is and always has been irrevocable, except as provided in the Discipline. Property can be released from the trust, transferred free of trust or subordinated to the interests of creditors and other third parties only to the extent authority is given by the Discipline.

3. Local churches and other United Methodist agencies and institutions may acquire, hold, maintain, improve, and sell property for purposes consistent with the mission of the Church, unless restricted or prevented by the Discipline.

¶ 2501.1-3=2501.1-3

¶ 2502. Registration of the Name United Methodist—

The words United Methodist are not to be used as, or as a part of, a trade name or trademark or as a part of the name of any business firm or organization, except by corporations or other business units created for the administration of work undertaken directly by The United Methodist Church. The General Council on Finance and Administration is charged with supervision and registration of “United Methodist” and the denomination’s insignia (¶ 807.10 and ¶ 807.11).

¶ 2502=2502

¶ 2503. Trust Clauses in Deeds—1. Except in conveyances that require that the real property so conveyed shall revert to the grantor if and when its use as a place of divine worship has been terminated, all written instruments of conveyance by which premises are held or hereafter acquired for use as a place of divine worship or other activities for members of The United Methodist Church shall ensure that said premises shall be used, kept, and maintained as a place of divine worship of the United Methodist ministry and members of The United Methodist Church; subject to the Discipline, usage, and ministerial appointments of said church as from time to time authorized and declared by the General Conference and by the annual conference within whose bounds the said premises are situated. This provision is solely for the benefit of the grantee, and the grantor reserves no right or interest in said premises.

2. All written instruments by which premises are held or hereafter acquired as a parsonage for the use and occupancy of the licensed and/or ordained ministers of The United Methodist Church shall ensure that said premises shall be held, kept, and maintained as a place of residence for the use and occupancy of the ordained ministers of The United Methodist Church who may from time to time be entitled to occupy the same by appointment; subject to the Discipline and usage of said parsonage as from time to time authorized and declared by the General Conference and by the annual conference within whose bounds the said premises are situated. This provision is solely for the benefit of the grantee, and the grantor reserves no right or interest in said premises.

3. In case the property so acquired is to be used for both a house of worship and a parsonage, the provisions of both trust mandates specified in §1 and §2 above shall be included in the conveyance.

4. In case the property so acquired is not to be used exclusively for a place of worship, or a parsonage, or both, all written instruments by which such premises are held or hereafter acquired shall ensure that said premises shall be kept, maintained, and disposed of for the benefit of The United Methodist Church and subject to the usages and the Discipline of The United Methodist Church. This provision is solely for the benefit of the grantee, and the grantor reserves no right or interest in said premises.

5. When property is acquired from another United Methodist entity or organization, whether it is to be used as a place of divine worship, parsonage, or for other use, all written instruments by which such premises are held or hereafter acquired shall ensure that said premises shall be held, kept, maintained, and disposed of for the benefit of The United Methodist Church and subject to the usages and the Discipline of The United Methodist Church.

6. The absence of a trust clause in conformity with §§ 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 above in deeds and conveyances executed previously or in the future shall in no way exclude a local church or church agency, or the board of trustees of either, from or relieve it of its connectional responsibilities to The United Methodist Church. Nor shall it absolve a local church or church agency or the board of trustees of either, of its responsibility and accountability to The United Methodist Church, including the responsibility to hold all of its property in trust for The United Methodist Church; provided that the intent of the founders and/or a later local church or church agency, or the board of trustees of either, is shown by any or all of the following:

a) the conveyance of the property to a local church or church agency (or the board of trustees of either) of The United Methodist Church or any predecessor to The United Methodist Church;

b) the use of the name, customs, and polity of The United Methodist Church or any predecessor to The United Methodist Church in such a way as to be thus known to the community as a part of such denomination; or appointed by a bishop or employed by the superintendent of the district or annual conference of The United Methodist Church or any predecessor to The United Methodist Church.

7. It shall be the responsibility of each central conference, to apply the provisions in this paragraph above to meet the legal requirements and ministry needs of the various legal central conference structures and annual conferences within its boundaries. These revisions and applications shall be reported to the General Council on Finance and Administration by the secretary of the central conference within 60 days after the close of its regular quadrennial session.

¶ 2503.1-6=2503.1-6; 2503.7=new

¶ 2504. Effect of Union—Nothing in the Plan of Union at any time after the union is to be construed so as to require any existing local church of any predecessor denomination to The United Methodist Church to alienate or in any way to change the title to property contained in its deed or deeds at the time of union, and lapse of time or usage shall not affect said title or control. Title to all property of a local church, or charge, or agency of the Church shall be held subject to the provisions of the Discipline, whether title to the same is taken in the name of the local church trustees, or charge trustees, or in the name of a corporation organized for the purpose, or otherwise.

¶ 2504=2504

¶ 2505. Oil, Gas, and Mineral Leases—Subject to and in accordance with the laws of the state, province, or country, the governing body of any church unit or agency owning land in trust for The United Methodist Church as provided in this Discipline may lease said land for the production of oil, gas, coal, and other minerals, upon such terms as it may deem best; provided, however, that such production shall not interfere with the purpose for which said land is held. The moneys received from such leases as rentals, royalties, or otherwise shall be used so far as practicable for the benefit of the church unit and for the promotion of the interests of The United Methodist Church. The lessee shall have no control over or responsibility for the payments made under such lease.

¶ 2505=2505

Section II. Compliance with Law

¶ 2506. Conformity with Local Law—Church Corporations—1. All provisions of the Discipline relating to property, both real and personal, and relating to the formation and operation of any corporation, and relating to mergers are conditioned upon their being in conformity with the local laws, and in the event of conflict therewith the local laws shall prevail; provided, however, that this requirement shall not be construed to give the consent of The United Methodist Church to deprivation of its property without due process of law or to the regulation of its affairs by state statute where such regulation violates the constitutional guarantee of freedom of religion and separation of church and state or violates the right of the Church to maintain its connectional structure. Local laws shall be construed to mean the laws of the country, state, or other like political unit within the geographical bounds of which the church property is located.

2. Any corporation which is or has been formed or is controlled by a church agency (¶ 701), acting alone or with another church agency, shall include in its Articles of Incorporation (or Charter) and its Bylaws (“corporate documents”) the following:

a) identification of the sponsoring church agency or agencies (“sponsor(s)”) to which it relates and the relationship of the corporation to its sponsor(s),

b) recognition that its corporate powers are subject to the Discipline to the same extent as its sponsor(s), and

c) recognition that the corporation’s powers cannot exceed those given by the Discipline to its sponsor(s).

3. The corporate documents shall contain language consistent with the appropriate taxation authority to protect its tax-exempt status, where applicable. Also, the corporate documents shall name the corporation’s sponsor(s) as the recipient(s) of corporate property in the event the corporation is abandoned, discontinued, or ceases to exist as a legal entity. The corporate documents shall also include a reference to the provisions of ¶ 2501.

4. The corporate documents shall contain provisions prohibiting the corporation’s trustees, directors, or officers from changing the corporation’s connective relationship to its sponsor(s) without the sponsor(s)’ consent, or otherwise acting in a manner contrary to the purpose of its sponsor(s) or the Discipline.

¶ 2506=2506

¶ 2507. The Terms Trustee, Trustees, and Board of Trustees—Trustee, trustees, and board of trustees, as used herein or elsewhere in the Discipline, may be construed to be synonymous with director, directors, and board of directors applied to corporations.

¶ 2507=2507

¶ 2508. Conformity of Deeds and/or other Ownership Documents, Conveyances with Local Law—In order to secure the right of property, with the appurtenances thereof, of the churches and parsonages of The United Methodist Church, care shall be taken that all conveyances and deeds be drawn and executed in due conformity to the laws of the respective states, provinces, and countries in which the property is situated and also in due conformity to the laws of The United Methodist Church. Deeds shall be registered or recorded directly upon their execution.

¶ 2508=2508

¶ 2509. Instituting and Defending Civil Action—Because of the nature of The United Methodist Church (¶ 141), no individual or affiliated church body or unit, nor any official thereof, may commence or participate in any suit or proceeding in the name of or on behalf of The United Methodist Church, excepting, however, the following:

1. The General Council on Finance and Administration or any person or church unit served with legal process in the name of The United Methodist Church may appear for the purpose of presenting to the court the nonjural nature of The United Methodist Church and to raise issues of lack of jurisdiction of the court, lack of capacity of such individual or unit to be served with process, and related constitutional issues in defense of denominational interests.

2. Any denominational unit authorized to hold title to property and to enforce trusts for the benefit of the denomination may bring suit in its own name to protect denominational interests.

¶ 2509.1-2=2509.1-2

¶ 2510. Limitation of Financial Obligations—No conference, council, board, agency, local church, or other unit can financially obligate the denomination or, without prior specific consent, any other organizational unit thereof.

¶ 2510=2510

Section III. Audits and Bonding of Church Officers

¶ 2511. All persons holding trust funds, securities, or moneys of any kind belonging to the General, central, jurisdictional, annual, or provisional annual conferences or to organizations under the control of the General, central, jurisdictional, annual, or provisional annual conferences shall be bonded by a reliable company in such good and sufficient sum as the conference may direct. The accounts of such persons shall be audited at least annually by a recognized public or certified public accountant. A report to an annual conference containing a financial statement that the Discipline requires to be audited shall not be approved until the audit is made and the financial statement is shown to be correct. Other parts of the report may be approved pending such audit.

¶ 2511=2511

Section IV. Annual Conference, District, Local Church Property

¶ 2512. Each central conference shall have authority to organize the structures and provisions necessary for the annual conferences, districts, location churches, and other United Methodist-related entities within its boundaries to receive, collect, and hold in trust for the benefit of those entities any and all donations, bequests, and devises of any kind or character, real or personal, that may be given, devised, bequeathed, or conveyed for any benevolent, charitable, or religious purpose, and shall administer the same and the income therefrom in accordance with the directions of the donor, trustor, or testator and in the interest of the church, society, institution, or agency contemplated by such donor, trustor, or testator, provided that any provisions established conform to the provisions of §§ 2501-2510 above.

§ 2512=new

Section V. Requirements—Trustees of Church Institutions

Section V = old section VII

§ 2513. Standards and Requirements—Trustees of schools, colleges, universities, hospitals, homes, orphanages, institutes, and other institutions owned or controlled by any annual, jurisdictional, or central conference or any agency of The United Methodist Church shall be at least the legal majority of age in that national context. At all times, not less than three-fifths of them shall be members of a local church and/or members of an annual conference or the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church, and all must be nominated, confirmed, or elected by such conference or agency of the Church or by some body or officer thereof to which or to whom this power has been delegated by such conference or agency; provided that the number of trustees of any such institution owned or controlled by any annual conference or conferences required to be members of a local church and/or annual conference or the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church may be reduced to not less than the majority by a three-fourths vote of such annual conference or conferences; and provided further, that when an institution is owned and operated jointly with some other religious organization, said requirement that three-fifths of the trustees shall be members of a local church and/or annual conference or the Council of Bishops of The United Methodist Church shall apply only to the portion of the trustees selected by the United Methodist agency or annual, jurisdictional, or central conference. It is recognized that there are numerous educational, health-care, and charitable organizations that traditionally have been affiliated with The United Methodist Church and its predecessor denominations, which are neither owned nor controlled by any unit of the denomination.

§ 2513=2552

APPENDIX

General Conference Regulations

Section I. The Superintendency

GC-R 407. Provisions for Episcopal Areas—1. In Central Conferences—In central conferences, the number of bishops shall be determined on the basis of missional potential, as approved by the General Conference on recommendation of the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters. Before recommending changes in the number of episcopal areas, the Standing Committee on Central Conference Matters shall:

a) consider these criteria in the following order of priority:

(1) the number of charge conferences and the number of active clergy in episcopal areas;

(2) the geographic size of episcopal areas, measured by the square miles / square km, and the numbers of time zones and nations;

(3) the structure of episcopal areas, measured by the number of annual conferences, and the overall church membership in all annual, provisional annual, missionary conferences, and missions in episcopal areas.

b) conduct a further analysis of the context and missional potential of changes in episcopal areas.

2. In Jurisdictions—In the jurisdictions, the number of bishops shall be determined on the following basis:

a) Each jurisdiction having 300,000 church members or fewer shall be entitled to five bishops and each jurisdiction having more than 300,000 church members shall be entitled to one additional bishop for each additional 300,000 church members or major fraction thereof.

b) If the number of church members in a jurisdiction shall have decreased by at least 10 percent below the number of church members that had previously entitled the jurisdiction to its number of bishops, then the number of bishops to which it shall be entitled shall be determined on the basis of missional needs, as approved by the General Conference on the recommendation of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy, provided however that said jurisdiction shall be entitled to no less than the number of bishops to which it would be entitled under subparagraph a) above. It shall be the responsibility of the affected jurisdiction, through its Committee on Episcopacy, to request consideration of its missional need for an exception, and in the absence of such a request, there shall be no obligation on the part of the Interjurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy to consider such an exception nor to make any report on such an exception to General Conference. In no case shall there be any constraint on General Conference's power to act in the absence of such a recommendation or to reject any recommendation that might be received.

c) If a jurisdiction, as a result of the provisions of this paragraph, shall have the number of bishops to which it had previously been entitled reduced, then the reduction in the number of bishops to which it is entitled shall be effective as of September 1 of the calendar year in which said reduction has been determined by the General Conference.

GC-R 407.1-2=404.1-2

GC-R 416. Office of Christian Unity and Interreligious Relationships (OCUIR)—1. Membership—The OCUIR shall be composed of one episcopal member from a jurisdictional conference and one episcopal member from a central conference, one of whom shall be the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops, and of one person from each jurisdiction and one person from each of the following regions: Africa, Europe, and the Philippines. The bishop who is not the ecumenical officer shall be counted as one of these eight persons. In aiming at inclusiveness, each jurisdictional or central conference will nominate two candidates and the Council of Bishops will elect seven members from this pool of nominees. Two additional members with voice and vote will be from churches in Full Communion, nominated by them.

2. Staff—a) There shall be an ecumenical staff officer of The United Methodist Church to be selected by the Council of Bishops. The work of the OCUIR shall be facilitated by the ecumenical staff officer who shall be in charge of the day-to-day work of the OCUIR. The ecumenical staff officer shall be the OCUIR's principal administrative and executive officer and report to the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops. b) Additional staff shall be selected in number and responsibility as determined by the Council of Bishops and serve at the pleasure of the ecumenical staff officer. c) The staff of the OCUIR shall be positioned in locations to be determined by the Council of Bishops.

3. Funding—Funding for the ecumenical and interreligious ministries of the Church shall be provided by the Council of Bishops in one or more clearly identified line items in the Episcopal Fund budget request to General Conference.

4. Interdenominational Cooperation Fund—The OCUIR shall consult with the Council of Bishops in establishing the guidelines for the administration of the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund. Financial support of ecumenical organizations, ecumenical dialogues, and multilateral conversations, approved by the Council of Bishops, shall be remitted from this fund in accordance with ¶ 814.

GC-R 416.1=438; GC-R 416.2=439; GC-R 416.3=440; GC-R 416.4=431.3+432

GC-R 420. Ecumenical Relationships—The United Methodist representatives to ecumenical organizations shall be selected by the Council of Bishops and reflect consideration of balances required both by The United Methodist Church and the respective ecumenical organization.

When proxies are needed to substitute for United Methodist representatives to a specific ecumenical organization, the ecumenical officer of the Council of Bishops is authorized to name such proxies and shall report their names at the next meeting of the Council of Bishops.

GC-R 420=431.4

Section II. The General Conference

GC-R 503. Membership—1. At least thirty days prior to the beginning of the earliest possible calendar year for election of delegates, the secretary of the General Conference shall notify the bishop and the secretary of each annual conference of the number of delegates to be elected by that annual conference.

2. The secretary of each annual conference, using the certificate of election form supplied, shall report to the secretary of the General Conference the names, addresses, and such other information as may be required for delegates and reserves elected by the annual conference.

3. The secretary of the General Conference shall prepare and send to each annual conference secretary credentials to be signed and distributed to the delegates and reserves elected by the annual conference.

4. The secretary, in cooperation with the Commission on the General Conference, shall initiate procedures to prepare delegates from central conferences for full participation in the General Conference by providing information concerning both the operation of the General Conference and materials it will consider. As far as possible, the materials should be provided in the languages of the delegates.

5. After consultation with the Council of Bishops, the secretary of the General Conference shall issue invitations to ecumenical representatives.

GC-R 503.1-3=502.3-5; GC-R 503.4-5=504.3

GC-R 504. Conference Session—1. Commission on the General Conference—a) Membership—(1) Members shall be nominated from the elected delegates to the General Conference by the Council of Bishops prior to General Conference and elected by the General Conference for a term of eight years. Additional persons who meet the qualifications may be nominated from the floor of General Conference. The commission shall reflect a balance of clergymen and clergywomen, laywomen and laymen, and the diverse character of The United Methodist Church. Approximately half of the commission shall be elected by the General Conference each quadrennium.

(2) If vacancies occur, the Council of Bishops shall elect geographically appropriate successors to serve through the next session of the General Conference and then nominate for election by the General Conference persons to serve any remainder term.

(3) The secretary of the General Conference, the treasurer of the General Council on Finance and Administration, the business manager of the General Conference, and a bishop named by the Council of Bishops shall have the right to the floor without the privilege of voting. The business manager of the General Conference shall be the chief administrative officer of the commission.

b) Officers—The officers of the commission shall be a chairperson, a vice-chairperson, and a secretary, all of whom shall be elected by the commission at the quadrennial organizational meeting. They shall serve until the adjournment of the next succeeding quadrennial session of the General Conference after their election and until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

c) Committees—(1) Executive Committee—There shall be an executive committee of the commission, consisting of the officers of the commission, the chairperson of the host committee, the bishop serving on the commission, the secretary of the General Conference, the business manager of the General Conference, and the chairperson and secretary of the Committee on the Plan of Organization and Rules of Order.

(2) Committee on the Plan of Organization and Rules of Order—The commission shall organize a Committee on the Plan of Organization and Rules of Order from within its membership. The composition of the committee shall be determined by the commission. The committee shall be organized at the initial meeting of the commission following General Conference. It shall elect its own chairperson and secretary, who will serve on the commission's executive committee. The committee shall study and consider any proposed amendments to the Plan of Organization and Rules of Order and make needed changes and adaptations to be presented to the entire Commission on the General Conference for approval and submission to the General Conference. Any other matters relating to parliamentary order or procedure in the business of the General Conference may be referred to this committee.

d) Responsibilities—(1) The commission shall select the site and set the dates of the General Conference up to four quadrennia in advance and shall send an official notice to all elected delegates announcing specifically the opening day and hour of the General Conference and anticipated time of adjournment.

(2) The commission shall plan the schedule for the opening day of the conference and shall further advise the delegates in advance of all such special events and orders of the day, the dates and times of which have been determined prior to the opening of the General Conference, in order that the delegates may have an overview of the General Conference program.

(3) The commission, in cooperation with The United Methodist Publishing House, shall make all necessary arrangements for the publication of the Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate and quadrennial reports of the Connectional Table and the general agencies of the church in English, French, Portuguese, and Kiswahili, and for all delegates to have timely (90-day period) and convenient access to the most linguistically appropriate translation of these documents. This paragraph shall not apply to daily publication of the Daily Christian Advocate at General Conference.

(4) The commission shall take necessary measures to assure full participation of all General Conference delegates including but not limited to providing accommodation for languages and physical challenges of the delegates, and access to approved licensed childcare during the session at or near the site of the General Conference for children of General Conference delegates.

(5) The commission shall recommend to the General Conference the per diem allowance to be paid to the elected delegates for housing and meals.

(6) The commission shall set the number of legislative committees and the assignment of legislative materials to those committees in consultation with the secretary of the General Conference and the business manager of the General Conference.

e) The secretary of the General Conference shall calculate the number of delegates to be elected by each annual conference, based on the factors specified in ¶ 503.2, as follows:

(1) One clergy delegate for the first 375 clergy members of the annual conference and one clergy delegate for each additional 375 clergy members or major fraction thereof, and

(2) One clergy delegate for the first 26,000 members of local churches of the annual conference and one clergy delegate for each additional 26,000 local church members or major fraction thereof, and

(3) A number of lay delegates equal to the total number of clergy delegates authorized as above.

(4) Every annual conference shall be entitled to at least one clergy and one lay delegate.

(5) This formula is designated to comply with the Constitution, Division Two, Section II, Article I (¶ 13), which defines the minimum and maximum number of delegates to a General Conference. Should the computations provided in the paragraph result in a figure below the prescribed minimum or above the prescribed maximum for delegates, the Commission on the General Conference shall be authorized to remedy the situation by adjusting up or down the numbers of clergy members and members of local churches of the annual conference necessary to entitle an annual conference to elect delegates, any such adjustment to be proportionally the same for the two factors.

2. Quorum—When the General Conference is in session, it shall require the presence of a majority of the whole number of delegates to the General Conference to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but a smaller number may take a recess or adjourn from day to day in order to secure a quorum, and at the final session may approve the journal, order the record of the roll call, and adjourn sine die.

3. Secretary-Designate—a) The Council of Bishops shall present a nomination from the ordained ministry or lay membership of The United Methodist Church for secretary-designate. Other nominations shall be permitted from the floor. The election, if there be two or more nominees, shall be by ballot.

b) Assumption of Office—The secretary-designate shall assume the responsibilities of the office of secretary as soon after the adjournment of the General Conference as all work in connection with the session has been completed, including the corrections to the Daily Christian Advocate, which serves as the official journal of the General Conference. Upon publication, all translations of the Daily Christian Advocate shall be made available as a daily downloadable file, free of charge, on the denominational website. The exact date of the transfer of responsibility to the secretary-designate shall be determined by the Commission on the General Conference, but shall not be later than December 31, following the adjournment of the General Conference.

4. Petitions to General Conference—A petition to the General Conference shall be submitted in the following manner:

a) It must be sent in writing according to the format officially approved by the secretary of the General Conference.

b) Each petition must address only one issue if the Discipline is not affected; if the Discipline is affected, each petition must address only one paragraph of the Discipline, except that, if two or more paragraphs in the Discipline are so closely related that a change in one affects the others, the petition may call for the amendment of those paragraphs also to make them consistent with one another. Petitions dealing with more than one paragraph in the Discipline that do not meet these criteria are invalid. Petitions that meet these criteria (composite petitions) shall not be separated into pieces.

c) Each petition must be signed by the person submitting it, accompanied by appropriate identification and return address, according to the prescribed format.

d) All petitions submitted to the General Conference, except those submitted by individual members of The United Methodist Church and local church groups, which call for the establishment of new programs or the expansion of existing programs will be invalid unless accompanied by supporting data that address the issue of anticipated financial requirements of the program.

e) Petitions must be postmarked by a national postal service no later than 210 days prior to the opening session of the General Conference. If petitions are transmitted by a means other than a national postal service, they must be in the hands of the petitions secretary no later than 210 days prior to the opening session of the General Conference.

Exceptions to the time limitations shall be granted for petitions originating from an annual conference session held between 210 and 45 days prior to the opening session of the General Conference, and for other petitions at the discretion of the Committee on Reference.

f) Petitions adopted and properly submitted by annual conferences, jurisdictional and central conferences, the Division on Ministries with Young People, or general agencies or councils of the Church, and petitions properly submitted by individual members (either clergy or lay) of The United Methodist Church and local church groups, provided that they have been received by the petitions secretary or secretary of the General Conference no later than 210 days before the opening of General Conference, shall be printed in the Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate.

g) Petitions and/or resolutions not printed in the Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate shall be printed or copied and provided to all delegates. Where the content of petitions is essentially the same, the petition will be printed once, with the first author named and the number of additional copies received printed. Upon publication, all translations of the Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate shall be made available as a downloadable file, free of charge, on the denominational website

h) The secretary of the General Conference shall arrange for electronic access to all petitions, including General Conference action and the resulting impact on The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church, throughout the General Conference session. This access shall be available until the publication of the new edition of The Book of Discipline of The United Methodist Church. Following General Conference 2020, the new General Book of Discipline shall be published in all languages used in the publication of the Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate.

Implementation shall be according to guidelines established by the Committee on Plan of Organization and Rules of Order.

5. Legislation Effective Date—All legislation of the General Conference of The United Methodist Church shall become effective January 1 following the session of the General Conference at which it is enacted, unless otherwise specified for central conferences.

GC-R 504.1=511; GC-R 504.2=506; GC-R 504.3=504.1-2; GC-R 504.4=507; GC-R 504.5=508

GC-R 505. Records and Archives—The permanent record of the General Conference shall include:

1. Corrections to the Daily Christian Advocate. The editor will file with the Commission on Archives and History two bound copies of the Daily Christian Advocate and corrections as the official record of General Conference. Bound copies shall also be made available at cost by The United Methodist Publishing House.

2. A Book of Resolutions to be edited by The United Methodist Publishing House. The book shall contain all valid resolutions of the General Conference. The preface of the Book of Resolutions shall include the guidelines for writing resolutions.

a) All valid resolutions of the General Conference of The United Methodist Church shall be published in each edition of the Book of Resolutions. There shall be a complete subject index and index of Scripture passages to all valid resolutions of the General Conference of The United Methodist Church in each edition of the Book of Resolutions. Resolutions are official expressions of The United Methodist Church for eight years following their adoption, after which time they shall be deemed to have expired unless readopted. Those that have expired shall not be printed in subsequent editions of the Book of Resolutions. The Book of Resolutions shall be made available on the official website of The United Methodist Church.

b) The program boards and agencies shall review all valid resolutions and recommend to the General Conference the removal of time-dated material.

c) Resolutions to be an official part of the Book of Resolutions will require a 60 percent affirmative vote at General Conference.

3. The Advance Edition of the Daily Christian Advocate and the Daily Christian Advocate.

GC-R 505.1-3=510.1-3

Section III. Central Conferences

GC-R 511. Purpose—General Conference, by a two-thirds vote, has organized the following central conferences and has authorized, by majority vote, the election of the following number of bishops according to the provisions of GC-R 407.1:

1. Africa Central Conference: Angola, Botswana, Burundi, Ethiopia, Kenya, Malawi, Mozambique, Namibia, Rwanda, Swaziland, South Africa, South Sudan, Uganda, Zambia, Zimbabwe; with the authority to elect five bishops.

2. Central and Southern Europe Central Conference: Albania, Algeria, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Croatia, Czech Republic, France, Hungary, Republic of Macedonia, Poland, Romania, Serbia, Slovak Republic, Switzerland, Tunisia; with the authority to elect one bishop.

3. Congo Central Conference: Central African Republic, Democratic Republic of Congo, Republic of Congo, Tanzania, Zambia; with the authority to elect four bishops.

4. Germany Central Conference: Germany; with the authority to elect one bishop.

5. Northern Europe and Eurasia Central Conference: Belarus, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Tajikistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan; with the authority to elect two bishops.

6. Philippines Central Conference: Philippines; with the authority to elect three bishops.

7. West Africa Central Conference: Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Cote d'Ivoire, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Mali, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone; with the authority to elect four bishops.

GC-R 511.1-7=540.3

Section IV. Provisional Central Conferences

GC-R 521. Purpose—General Conference, by a two-thirds vote, has organized the following Provisional Central Conferences:

None.

GC-R 521=new

 Caring for the whole church, inside and out.

From steeples to stoles, bulletins to Bibles,
candles to Communion,
Cokesbury's got you covered.

Contact us today!

Visit our 10,000 square-foot display at General Conference, find us online at Cokesbury.com, or call 800.672.1789.

VBS 2016 WILL BE HERE BEFORE YOU KNOW IT, BUT HANG LOOSE—WITH COKEsbury, YOUR VBS WILL POP UP LIKE A BOSS!

Surf Shack VBS has everything you need to keep your Surfers in the pocket so they'll hit the impact zone with a deeper understanding of God's awesome power.

Transform your church into an ocean of excitement as Surfers and Lifeguards glide through surfer-themed music, crafts, science projects, recreation, Bible stories, and more! Watch as they get stoked about God's mission in their lives.

Order your Super Starter Kit
today!

$159⁹⁹

9781501804199

Visit CokesburyVBS.com for more details!

Prices subject to change.

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

ADCAV

Arrive at the WHOLE TRUTH

...by side-stepping common Christian clichés

True or false:

1. Everything happens for a reason.
2. God helps those who help themselves.
3. God won't give you more than you can handle.
4. God said it, I believe it, that settles it.
5. Love the sinner, hate the sin.

All true? Not so fast.

We've heard these phrases all of our lives, but in Adam Hamilton's new book and 5-week churchwide study, Half Truths, you'll learn that although they capture some element of truth, when compared to the wisdom found in Scripture, they're really just common Christian clichés.

The newest study from Adam Hamilton

Half Truths

God Helps Those Who Help Themselves and Other Things the Bible Doesn't Say
Adam Hamilton

9781501813870. Hardcover Participant Book.

~~$19.99~~; Cokesbury Price $13.39

9781501813894. Large Print Participant Book (Paper).

~~$19.99~~; Cokesbury Price $13.39

9781501813900. Leader Guide.

~~$42.99~~; Cokesbury Price $8.70

9781501813924. DVD. [CC] 8–10 mins. each.

~~$39.99~~; Cokesbury Price $31.99

9781501813986. Youth Study Book.

~~$9.99~~; Cokesbury Price $6.69

9781501814006. Youth Leader Guide.

~~$44.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.04

9781501817540. Leader Kit. Contains one each: Participant Book, LeaderGuide, DVD, Youth Study Book, and Youth Leader Guide.

~~$97.95~~; Cokesbury Price $67.99

Published by Abingdon Press

ADCA 21

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

If every church did these locally, every church would connect globally.

In 2008, the United Methodist Church lifted up “Four Areas of Focus” for ministry. At Ginghamburg Church, in the rust-belt of Ohio, they have been doing ministry in these four areas for 35 years:

- Engaging in Ministry with the Poor
- Improving Global Health
- Developing Principled Christian Leaders
- Creating New and Renewed Congregations

The work has led to a host of creative ministries and organic growth...because they were meeting the needs of their community and their world as the hands and feet of Christ.

The Passionate Church: Ignite Your Church and Change the World tells stories of churches from around the globe who minister in the Four Areas of Focus every day.

This book comes with built-in facilitator guide to encourage pastor peer groups and other leadership groups interested in deepening the discussion.

NEW!

9781501815034. Paperback. $16.99

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

 Abingdon Press
Growing in Life, Serving in Faith

ADCA23

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

30 Years Young!

Disciple

Becoming Disciples Through Bible Study
Second Edition

FOR THIRTY YEARS NOW, the aim of the Disciple program has been to develop strong Christian leaders. It's been the number one choice for some of the most vibrant congregations in the world—transforming the lives of over 2 million participants with its personal daily reading and independent study activities, dynamic weekly small-group meetings, and video presentations.

The first study in the program is Disciple: Becoming Disciples through Bible Study. It serves as the basis for all other studies in the Disciple family that follow. For 34 weeks it covers the entire Bible (Old and New Testaments), following the biblical story from Creation to the New Jerusalem.

9780687783496. Study Guide. $39.99

9780687330829. Planning Kit. $299.99

Contains everything a leader needs.

- Study Manual
- Teacher Helps
- DVD (34 sessions, approx. 10 min. each)
- Training DVD with online resources
- Black and white canvas logo carry bag

Coming June 2016—Disciple Fast Track!

Learn more and preorder at Cokesbury.com

Published by
 Abingdon Press

Prices subject to change.

ADCA16

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

There's a COMMON ENGLISH BIBLE for ANY AGE

Twenty-two faith traditions and 120 scholars came together to develop the Common English Bible—a solid, yet easy-to-read translation.

But we didn't stop there. We offer CEB Bibles for any age group and any usage, whether you're looking for a study Bible, a kids' Bible, a student Bible, large-print editions, gift/award Bibles...these great editions encourage all generations to read, study, and engage with the Scriptures, the Lord, and with each other.

So if you or someone you know owns a dusty Bible, it's probably time to get a new one. And there is a CEB Bible that will fit your needs. Here are just a few...

CEB Deep Blue Kids School of Fish Bible. Kids dive deeper into God's Word and grow stronger in faith with this unique Bible.

9781609261917. Soft-Touch Hardcover.
$36.99; Cokesbury Price $24.78

The CEB Study Bible with Apocrypha. Explore the Bible for more understanding with the Award-winning CEB Study Bible.

9781609260293. Hardcover.
$59.99; Cokesbury Price $40.19

The CEB Student Bible. Helps young people make connections between the world of the Bible and their own.

9781609261795.
$29.99; Cokesbury Price $20.09

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

FIND YOUR CEB MATCH AT COKESBURY.COM!

ADCA9

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

Join hundreds of thousands

...each week in Bible study and have a transformative encounter with God!

Based on the Uniform Series, this quarterly study presents stimulating, Christ-focused lessons that explore the biblical message and how to apply it to daily life. It helps adults move from a focus on the Word to reflection on personal, family, church, and community concerns.

Learn more at adultbiblestudies.com

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

ADCA14

NEW TITLES FEATURING THE Timeless Wisdom of John Wesley

NEW! An Exact Likeness:
The Portraits of John Wesley
Richard P. Heitzenrater
A unique pictorial glimpse at Wesley's legacy. Coming in April.
9781501816604. Hardcover. ~~$39.99~~;
Cokesbury Price $26.79

NEW! Top 10 United Methodist Beliefs
Don Adams
Follow John Wesley's scriptural pathway to spiritual formation.
9781501804229. ~~$14.99~~;
Cokesbury Price $10.04

NEW! Meet the Goodpeople:
Wesley's 7 Ways to Share Faith
Roger Ross
A retooling of John Wesley's own strategies for reaching non-churched people.
9781630885724. ~~$14.99~~;
Cokesbury Price $10.04

Published by
 Abingdon Press

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

ADCA 29

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

➤ Great selection, great price, great fit.

Did you know Cokesbury will have clergy apparel available on-site at General Conference, ready to purchase off-the-rack? Or, take advantage of our professional measurement services (free!) and customize your order!

Choose your own:

- style/pattern number
- fabric color
- panel fabric or style/pattern number
- panel color

Ask about our additional features, including:

- embroidery symbols to panels
- doctoral bars/sleeve cross
- piping/cording to outside edge of panels or pleats

So if you've been considering a new robe, collar, stole, or shirt, Cokesbury's a great fit! Visit our 10,000 square-foot display at General Conference for more information.

Lent & Easter Studies from Abingdon Press

HE WAS THE DISCIPLE “whom Jesus loved”
 ...AND SO WILL YOU.

Join Adam Hamilton in this churchwide exploration of the message of hope found in the Gospel of John

NEW! John

The Gospel of Light and Life
 Adam Hamilton

In this 6-week, churchwide, DVD-based study, adults, youth, and children alike can follow the life, ministry, death, and resurrection of Jesus through the Gospel of John and understand the context of some of the best-known verses in the New Testament. Includes:

- 9781501805332. Hardcover. ~~$18.99~~; Cokesbury Price $12.72
- 9781501805363. Leader Guide. ~~$12.99~~; Cokesbury Price $8.70
- 9781501805417. DVD. ~~$39.99~~; Cokesbury Price $31.99
- 9781501805486. Youth Study Book. ~~$9.99~~; Cokesbury Price $6.69
- 9781501805509. Children's Ldr. Guide. ~~$18.99~~; Cokesbury Price $12.72
- 9781501817519. Leader Kit. 1 each of above resources. ~~$400.95~~; Cokesbury Price $69.99
- 9781501805356. Large Print, Paper. ~~$19.99~~; Cokesbury Price $13.39

NEW! Near the Cross: A Lenten Journey of Prayer, by Kenneth H. Carter, Jr. 9781501800917. Book. ~~$9.99~~; Cokesbury Price $6.69 9781501804175. Large Print. ~~$10.99~~; Cokesbury Price $7.36

NEW! The Gift of New Creation: A Lenten Study Based on the Revised Common Lectionary, by Thomas Ehrich 9781501801990. Book. ~~$9.99~~; Cokesbury Price $6.69 9781501804168. Large Print. ~~$10.99~~; Cokesbury Price $7.36

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

Renegade Gospel: The Rebel Jesus, by Mike Slaughter 9781426792793. Book. ~~$14.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.04 9781501802799. Large Print. ~~$15.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.71 9781426792816. Leader Guide. ~~$11.99~~; Cokesbury Price $8.03 9781426792823. DVD. ~~$39.99~~; Cokesbury Price $31.99 Plus components for Youth & Children.

Published by
 Abingdon Press

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
 Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

Abingdon Press

Abingdon Press
2016 VBS

JOY in Jesus

Everywhere! All the Time!

Once you've made room for Jesus, there's no room that can contain or confine the joy—it can be found anywhere and everywhere, in all circumstances!

We live in a time when many in our community are experiencing societal anguish in response to events that de-value lives and lack compassion. As people of all ages bear witness to this, they wonder, What is there to be happy about?

Each Joy in Jesus lesson speaks to the different “rooms in life” and shows how to find joy in all circumstances.
Jesus' joy is boundless and there is great healing and freedom in this truth!

Order your Starter Kit today!

$79.99

9781501812019

Visit AbingdonPressVBS.com for more details!

“The joy from the LORD is your strength!”

NEHEMIAH 8:10, CEB

Prices subject to change.

ADCA8

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

Helping you online so you can succeed offline.

Ministry Matters™ offers practical and immediate inspiration for preachers, teachers, and worship leaders.

Thorough resources like the academically rigorous and respected New Interpreter's Bible and the Abingdon New and Old Testament Commentaries are excellent research and teaching tools. Tens of thousands of pages of full-text research and reference materials are available in our library, plus useful helps like devotions, prayers, and sermon starters.

Diverse offerings from theology to history to homiletics offer access to a wide range of resources.

A dedicated space to create and store personal and shared resource collections for streamlined research and preparation, and the ability to connect with other ministry leaders with whom you share common responsibilities, concerns, and vision.

Ministry Matters is a collaborative online community for church leaders.
Subscribe today to gain access to a new world of resources.

For more information, visit MinistryMatters.com and click the SUBSCRIBE NOW button!

A breath of FRESH AIR to REJUVENATE our churches

Move beyond discord to a hope-filled future. When we come together around what matters most, the gospel of Jesus Christ becomes a vibrant part of our lives and witness. Fights, feuds, and uncertainties can distract us, leaving us ineffective and mired in mediocrity and decline, but focusing on what matters most causes our ministries to flourish and the church to become a relevant and vital presence in the community and world. A six-session study.

Coming in April.

9781501815058	Book	$14.99 ; $10.04
9781501815072	Leader Guide	$12.99 ; $8.70
9781501815119	DVD [CC] 10–15 mins. each	$39.99 ; $31.99
9781501815096	Coming Together Around What Matters Most, Devotional	$9.99 ; $6.69
9781501815133	Pastor Resources Download	$29.99 ; $23.99
9781501817533	Leader Kit (Contains Book, Leader Guide, DVD, and Devotional)	$77.96 ; $54.99

Published by
 Abingdon Press™

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

ADCA25

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

Pause in self-reflection and emerge in faithful unity

The Causes, Evils, and Cures of Heart and Church Divisions compiled by Francis Asbury.

In 1792, Francis Asbury compiled a small book of short entries based on two earlier works: Richard Burroughs's Heart Divisions, the Evil of Our Times and Richard Baxter's The Cure of Church Divisions. The result was The Causes, Evils, and Cures of Heart and Church Divisions, addressing faithfulness in the midst of internal and external struggles. Asbury intended the book to be used by "all ministers of the gospel, and professing Christians of every denomination . . . that they may cultivate a spirit of unity and brotherly love."

When a copy of its 1849 re-release was discovered recently, we knew it was time to re-introduce its wisdom. A Cokesbury Exclusive.

9781501820786. Hardcover. ~~$12.99~~; $8.70

Published by
Abingdon Press

Prices subject to change. Cokesbury prices reflect discount off regular prices.

ADCA31

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury

Give permission and see what happens

JUST SAY YES!: Unleashing People for Ministry Robert Schnase

Do you say "no" too often? Yes. Pastors, laity, staff...we're all guilty of squelching and constraining creative people who want to use the gifts God has given them to serve and lead even if we don't mean to.

Bishop Robert Schnase helps pastors and other leaders examine the systems, attitudes, and dynamics that restrain, control, and diminish ministry, providing insights and practical help for those who want to be more open to innovation and experimentation for the purposes of Christ. Just Say Yes! and see what happens.
Abingdon Press.

9781426776137. ~~$15.99~~; Cokesbury Price $10.71

800-672-1789 | Cokesbury.com
Call your local Community Resource Consultant

Cokesbury